R: Who says you don't know everything? You say that? I don't say that. You are the one who makes that claim. Why do you say that? That's not true. As far as I'm concerned you are me. We are the same there is no difference. (SS: If you know something we are same?) We are same. (SS: How can I don't know anything?) Why? (SS: That's what I'm asking you?) I say you know everything. I say you are everything. But you're the one who says you're not. Find out why? (SS: You know philosophically I am everything but I don't know everything.) You know everything because you are everything. Whatever you need to know you already know. Ask yourself why you think you don't know everything. Inquire within yourself, "Who says I don't know everything? Who says I'm human? Who says I'm limited?" It is your ego who asks this question, not you. You are pure and bright and shining. You are Brahman. You are the absolute reality that is how I see you. That is you. But if you refuse to see yourself that way what can I do? (SS: If I don't born and if I don't die then who born take a rebirth and everything, according to karma theory.) Noone. There is noone to do this. Noone who is alive that can do anything like this. This is all an illusion, it's maya. Like the snake in the rope. Like the water in the desert in a mirage. It's an optical illusion, it's a belief. It's mesmerism. You've been hypnotized. (SS: By whom?) By yourself. You've hypnotized yourself into believing this. So you have to dehypnotize yourself by inquiring, "Who is hypnotized? Who feels limited? Who am I?" And through this inquiry you will come up with the answers and you will become free.

SR: Do you know of any spiritual shock treatment method to break up these patterns of belief that are screwing us up? (SG: Come to satsang.) (laughter)

R: How many more shocks do you want? I shock you every time you come here. If you can't feel the shock I can't help it. Just by being here that is a shock treatment. (SH: True.) Or you can put your finger in the socket and see what happens.

SV: I did that once. (SH: You did Fred?) Yeah. (SH: What happened?) Well I wanted to experience things and one day I just wanted to know what it was like to feel electricity, so I put my finger in it. (R: That's why he is like he is.) You can see the way I talk nowadays that's from that. (SH: Now I understand you better.) (R: He never used to have an accent.) (students laugh)

Okay Mary read the Jnani.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. SM: Thank you Robert.

R: Now this is all you've been waiting for. I know why you come here, to eat. Whole cashews, roasted and salted. Just for you...

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 196

THE TRUE TEACHER IS WITHIN

1st November, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to be with you again.

Let me remind you that I do not give lectures. I do not preach sermons. I do not teach philosophical courses, nor do I teach science. I do absolutely nothing. The nothing that I speak may be useful to you or may not be useful to you. It is up to you, but expect nothing.

Nothing is what exists. Everywhere you look you see nothing. Yet some of you believe you see something. The something that you think you see is called maya, delusion, mesmerism's, hypnosis. You think you see a world, for you think you are your body. As long as you believe this, you will be part of this world and you will have many, many experiences, good and bad, off and on. When you finally lose the idea that you are a body, you will be totally free, liberated, living in the absolute reality, becoming pure awareness.

I received an interesting phone call this morning from a gentleman in Santa Cruz. He told me, "Robert, you don't know me but I'm enlightened. There is a question I want to ask you. Do enlightened people vote? Should I vote? If so, for whom shall I vote?" I had to remove the phone from my mouth to keep from laughing. I answered, I told him, "As long as you ask the question, vote. As long as you have to ask should I or shouldn't I, then do it. For whom should you vote? If you are the Self of all as you say, you vote for your Self! Presumably an enlightened person like you is all-pervading. There is only one and you're that one. Therefore, for whom are you going to vote but your Self." I don't think he liked my answer. He hung up on me.

As a matter of fact, I received about 5 or 6 phone calls the last few days about people asking me for whom they should vote for or should they vote. What have I got to do with these things?

S: You should run.

S: ...away.

S: Robert for President. (laughter)

R: What is spirituality? True spirituality is realizing you are not the body nor the mind phenomena. That you are consciousness, you are the absolute reality. When one realizes this, what is there left to do? Is there anything one has to do in this world, when one understands their true nature? There's total happiness and bliss at all times, always, unending. I believe this is what we are all looking for, happiness, harmony, peace, bliss.

Stop looking, you found it! If only you would learn to keep still mentally, it's been there all the time. All the joy you're looking for, the happiness, the peace of mind, the harmony is you. This is your real nature. This is what you are. You do not have to go search for it. You do not have to practice sadhanas, spiritual practices, meditation, deep breathing, yoga. What has this got to do with reality? These are practices that you do for better health, to improve your body.

But as the years pass, the body gets older anyway. It doesn't care how long you have been meditating or what you have been doing. The body becomes older and older and older and you get disappointed and discouraged because nothing has happened.

It is not more practices that you need, it is an awakening that you need. To totally, completely wake up! Wake up to the Self! That's all you have to do. When you awaken to your Self, there is nothing else to do forever.

That is why I say, "You are nothing!" You have always been nothing, no-thing! This is a compliment when I tell you this, not an insult. Whenever you hear anybody tell you, "You are good for nothing," say, thank you. Be grateful they told you this.

How can you prove this to yourself? By living in the moment. In the moment, there is absolutely nothing happening. In the moment everything is peaceful, serene and harmonious, but as soon as you begin to think, you spoil the whole thing. As soon as you allow your mind to take off and splurge with all the thoughts and ideas and conceptual thinking, then you're human again. Therefore, the practice that you learn is to keep still. To make the mind quiescent by not causing any conflict.

It is interesting the way the mind works. When the mind is in conflict, it becomes very strong, very powerful. When there is no conflict, the mind disappears. What do I mean by the mind being in conflict? I mean reacting to the world, reacting to person, place or thing. Whenever you react to any condition or situation, you are in conflict with your mind. When you are in conflict with your mind, your mind grows stronger and stronger and stronger and stronger and the conflict increases tenfold, until you get totally depressed, disillusioned, discouraged and you start looking around the world for a teacher or a guru or somebody who could show you the way.

Know that the true teacher is within yourself. You are the teacher. What am I? I am your Self, what else? There is only one Self. When you look in the mirror, you see the one Self. When you look at the world, you see the one Self. You are always seeing your Self no matter where you look. What you see shows you where you're at!

Therefore, when you see troubles, when you see problems, when you see man's inhumanity to man, when you see the chaos and confusion in this world, cataclysms, know that you're seeing your self. Where else would they come from? There's really no separation. There is not you and the conflict or you and the world or you and the experience that you are going through, there is only you as the condition. There is only you and your self, nobody else. You are the one!

Everything you are looking for is within you. Everything that you have been searching for all of your life is within you. No one can really give you anything. You've got it all yourself, but you've got to dive deep inside to find it. How do you dive inside? By quieting the mind! By keeping still! By not reacting!

To the extent you can do this, to this extent will you find that the mind will become quieter and quieter and quieter. As the mind becomes quieter and quieter and quieter, your happiness begins to expand and expand and expand. Your peace of mind expands and expands and expands. When the mind totally disappears, this is what people call self-realized.

There is really no such thing as self-realization. These are just words we use to make you understand there is a state that is totally and completely different from where you are right now. A state of supreme happiness which is your real nature, what you really are. Only you have covered it up with what we call delusion. That is the experiences of this world, perhaps the experiences of past lives and you are a product of those experiences.

This is why everybody appears different. For everybody is a product of the experiences they have been through. They are habit patterns that have made you what you are today. You are a product of your environment, the schools you attended, the churches you attended, your parents and they brainwashed you with thinking certain ways and here you are sitting here looking at me.

You must wake up sometime, why not do it now!

Some of us are waking up from sleep. When you wake up from sleep you are in a new world. The old world is dead and you're alive. What you do with the world is up to you.

What is going on in your mind right now? What kind of thoughts are you allowing to come through you? Notice that most of you cannot sit still for even a minute without thoughts going through your mind. True? (silence) You see what I'm talking about? There are thoughts that are constantly going through your mind. These thoughts never leave you. They are there all the time. As long as you have these thoughts, you can never have peace or happiness. It makes no difference if they are good thoughts or bad thoughts. It doesn't make any difference whatsoever. They're all thoughts. They come from the same source and all thoughts are part of delusion, part of the maya, part of the experience.

If you can only remember this: To find true happiness, real peace, you simply have to get rid of your thoughts. Stop the thoughts from coming to you. You cannot stop the thoughts, by being in conflict with them, remember this also. No conflict.

Again by conflict I mean, do not try to work on your thoughts to stop them forcibly. As an example, by changing your mind by trying to think good thoughts. By trying to think good thoughts to replace bad thoughts you are in conflict with your mind. But when you observe your thoughts, when you watch your thoughts, without reacting to them, then you are on the right track. When you become angry, do not fall into the trap of identifyng with anger. Do not identify with the anger but watch yourself becoming angry. Take a step backwards if you can and observe yourself becoming angry. Watch yourself, always watch yourself. Observe yourself constantly. That's the way to work with yourself.

Inquire within, you are your own laboratory. All of the experiments are going on within yourself. Inquire within, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who's thinking these thoughts? Who gave them birth? Where did they come from?"

Keep asking yourself these questions over and over again wherever you are, whether you're driving your car, washing your dishes, going to a movie. Never forget to inquire within yourself, "Who am I?" You're asking who is the I that has these thoughts? Who is the I who thinks? Where did this "I" come from? Who gave it birth? Ask yourself. Yet, never answer this question. For by answering this question you are using your mind and the mind does not want to go, it wants to stay and make you miserable. It wants to play with you and tell you all kinds of things that are going on in this world for you to be angry about. You have to realize the nature of the mind first, in order to get rid of it.

So why do we want to get rid of the mind? If there is no mind, there is total peace, harmony, love, happiness, joy. When there's a mind, you have misery, anger and the rest of those things. This is why you want to transcend the mind totally, completely, absolutely.

The next step is that you realize every time you use the word I you're speaking of your body and your thoughts and the world and everything in it. Whenever you say the word, I, I is a thought, it is not an entity, it has no reality. It is a thought. When you say I feel bad today, I feel depressed, I feel confused, what are you really saying? Are you saying you feel depressed, you feel confused? No, you're saying I does! I feels this way, not you but I does. See what you're doing now, you're separating yourself from the I. You are not this I that has all these emotions, conflicts, disharmonies, this I is not you!

When you are able to see this, you awaken! You just have to see this. From now on whenever you say the word I, stop and think about it. Who is the I? I feel happy, I feel sick, I feel this way, I feel that way. It is the I that feels this way, not you! Consequently, you have to follow the I to the I center where it came from.

If you would catch yourself in the morning when you wake up, you will notice that the I starts from the heart, which is on the right side of your chest and goes up through the spinal cord into the brain. When the I does this, you are what we call humanly awakened, where you are able to cognizance the world, your body, others. You say, "I see this, I this, I feel this," but if you will catch yourself doing this and start to begin to realize the I is not you, you're not this I at all, it will begin to leave you alone, just by being able to see the I is not you.

When you are able to do this, you will follow the I back to its source, which is the heart center, which is the absolute reality which is the pure awareness which is really you! The object is to make the I go back to where it came from, to its source. When the I does this, you become immediately, so-called enlightened, you're all-pervading. You become the whole universe and you have total freedom and happiness. What else do you have to do with your life, then to find out who the I is?

Take a look at yourself, the things that you think about all day long the nonsense, the fears, the attachments, all the things that you worry about, that you concern yourself with...

S: (students arrives) Robert.

R: Hi Glen.

...It's up to you. You are free to do whatever you want. No one should ever tell you what to do. I never asked you to come here but here you are. There must be a reason why you're here. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place. By you coming here and sharing with me, it means you are ready for the higher path.

Most of you are tired of playing around in this world. You've been through all kinds of experiences, you've had all types of conditioning and you're tired of it all. This is the first requisite. You have to be tired of the world and its nonsense to find something else. As long as you're still satisfied with this world and the world has a good hold over you, it is only when you become tired of this world and the games people play that you will get down to true spirituality. As long as you are still playing games in this world, trying to get things outside of yourself, obtain things, looking at the world as if it had something to offer you, you can never become self-realized.

It's impossible, for the world has a hold on you. The world is your teacher, it shows you all kinds of things that you respond to and you think you're having a good time. You think you are enjoying yourself, you're having fun. Then the time comes when you should change. Change comes along which it always does and you start to experience the other side. You become miserable, you become upset, you become depressed and you go back and forth like this. Most people do this all their lives until they drop dead and then they have to repeat it again and again.

Why not begin to do something about this world now? Why not begin understanding who you are, your true nature and what you have to do to remove the idea of body-mind. By coming to satsang alone, wondrous things ensue in your life. By practicing self-inquiry at home or the office you are enhancing the satsang. By not reacting to person, place or thing the mind becomes quieter and quieter and quieter until it is totally transcended. It's up to you! It is always up to you! There is really no one in this world who can actually do anything for you until you allow it to happen.

Why not surrender all of your habits, all of your preconceived ideas, all of your concepts, all of your dogmas? Why not surrender all of these things to the Self? The Self is ready to gobble it all up and set you free, but it can't do this if you are still playing games. By believing something outside of you has the power to hurt you or to cause you unhappiness of any kind, cause you misery, this has to be changed. Only you can change it!

In the world things come and go very fast. Everyone is excited about a presidential election. It will be over in a couple of days. Everything will be back to status quo and life goes on. What are you going to do with your life? Are you going to continue to struggle in order to survive, have two jobs, have three jobs, work like a dog. Where did this expression come from, "Work like a dog?" (laughter) I've never seen a dog work. (laughter) Work like a human being. Who wants to work like a human being? The dog is better off than most people.

There is a power in the universe that will take care of you totally and completely you know, if you will surrender to it. All this power asks is for you to surrender to it totally by developing humility and compassion and you will be carried on a stream of blessedness for your highest good. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. Stop being selfish and everything being I, I, I, what do I need? What's in it for me? Forget about yourself. Throw yourself away.

Try doing this starting tomorrow. Forget about yourself, but you have to catch yourself to do this. You have to catch the I saying, I feel this and I feel that and I feel this and I want to go to this place and I want to accomplish this and I want to see this person and I want to do that. That's selfishness, for you're always thinking of what's good for you. I know some of you are saying, "If I don't think about myself, who will think about me? I have to take care of myself" This is not true! You didn't ask to be born but here you are. The same power that guided you back into a body, knows how to guide you in this existence as long as you live in a body and takes care of you totally and completely and absolutely, if you would surrender to this power.

Let's do this right now. Make yourself comfortable, close your eyes. Think of all the stuff that's going on inside of you, observe it, watch it. Think of all of your fears, your disappointments, your entire life. Think, "Who am I? Am I the person who experienced all of these things since I was a child, growing up? Am I this person?" Observe your thoughts, watch the thoughts.

(long silence)

It is now time to play "Stump the Guru".

SZ: (A new comer asks) Stump the guru?

R: We have questions that you are supposed to write down when you come in. Whoever stumps the guru gets five days vacation in the absolute reality! (laughter)

SZ: Well give me a piece of paper. (laughter)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert, Before I came to you I was not seeking a teacher, in fact I was quietly meditating at home each day and satisfied. I really did not want to meet a special teacher. Someone suggested I meet you. I came and immediately I knew I had to come again and again. I knew this felt right. What happened? How did I come? What drew me? What role did your awareness play? Did you attract me?

A: What happened is you found your Self to an extent. Something inside of you has been yearning for years and years to become totally free, totally liberated. That something within has obviously been doing things. You've been going to different places, looking for different teachers, reading different books and now you have found your Self, to an extent. This is merely an extension of your Self. That's all it is.

In other words, whatever you are ready for comes upon you. If you are ready for something like this, you will be drawn here, but remember, there is only one Self and you are that! You're simply meeting your Self. That's all you are doing. Very simple. Now what you have to do is go deeper within, and you will find what you are looking for, but to be together in Satsang is very good. You have been looking for this for many, many years, for many centuries, many eons and now that you have found it, what are you going to do about it? You have returned home. You have returned to your Self. You see all this is taking place within, it has absolutely nothing to do with you as a body, as a person, as an entity. It has to do with your Self, your real Self. You have come home to your Self. Be happy. Be your self!

Q: What is the role of the divine in a guru-devotee relationship?

A: The Divine is always present. There is never a time when the divine is not here. There is no difference between the divine and your Self. When you are ready, when you are prepared a teacher is attracted to you or sometimes it is a book or a mountain or a tree and you recognize this as being your Self again. Wherever you look you see your Self. The divine is always at play, it's always present. There is nowhere where it is not. What you call the divine is the Self, the pure awareness. You are That! Everything is taking place in consciousness. There is only one consciousness and you are that one and that one is omnipresence, all-pervading and all is well! Next case.

Q: How is a devotee able to surrender? Can you give suggestions or hints?

A: You simply surrender when you get tired of this world and its manifestations. You say to yourself, "I'm tired of playing this game. I'm tired of all this running around. I'm completely tired of all these things I have to do each day, trying to make ends meet, trying to form new relationships, going to work, fighting for survival, not knowing whether I am going to get mugged or get killed tomorrow or die of a heart attack." Therefore, you say, "I surrender all of this. I give it all up." You surrender the whole thing to your Self. All of this stuff that you have been carrying for so many years is totally surrendered to the God within you. Give it all away. Give it all up. Do not hold on to anything. You can say it verbally. You can say, "Okay, God I give you everything, all the burdens I've been carrying, all the karma, all the false ideas, everything that exists in my life I give to you, take it, I am free of it." That's all, surrender!

Q: Dear Robert, is reincarnations only goal to let us learn to let go of I (little I), death and desires and rather live by faith and trust in the Self so that we will be pure enough to live in Self, always, in any dimension? Is the Self demanding more purity and dedication trust before allowing us to hang out with the Self?

A: Who is this Self you are referring to? The one you are referring to is already here! You're already that! Inquire to whom does reincarnation come from or come to. Who reincarnates? Who goes through these experiences? The Self is always available, is always here. There never was a time when the Self was not. Do not make it complicated for yourself. Simply return to what you were by letting go of everything else. By not reacting to the world. By diving deep within, into the heart center where the true reality awaits you. You are a divine being, a spiritual being. You are not the body or the mind. Know yourself, be yourself! Awaken to the Self! Forget about reincarnation. Reincarnation is not for you. It is for the deluded ones. You are free of all karma, free of all samskaras, free of playing games. Feel your freedom. All is well.

That takes care of the questions.

SZ: I want to get my bid in for the week of the absolute! (R: Okay ready, we still have an opening.) Is there any significant difference essentially or in terms of practice between no self and one Self? Why seek the Absolute as or with a who?

R: For whom is no self? For whom is one self? There is only the Self. The no self never existed. Even the Self we are talking about doesn't exist. Nothing exists that can be explained. By trying to explain the self you have to use words and words spoil it. For what you really are is beyond the self, which is called parabrahman and this thought is only a name that the intelligent mind tries to make something out of. We have to develop humility, total humility, total compassion. No Self, the Self, where do these words come from, books something we read, something somebody said.

To have a spiritual experience of what they call the Self everything has to go all concepts, all ideas of what the Self is has to go. The idea of a no self that has to go. It's the idea of self that has to go because it limits you. When you think consciously of the self in your mind, you can think only of an idea, an idea of what a self must be and it's impossible for the finite mind to ever understand. It's beyond all ideas, all concepts, beyond all words, beyond all thoughts. So just take a deep breathe and relax and forget about the whole thing. What's the other question?

Q: Why seek the absolute as, or, with a who?

A: True, why seek it? Who's seeking it? Don't seek it at all! The idea is not to seek anything, the idea is to give up what you've got. To empty the garbage pail so-to-speak. Our minds have been bombarded with all kinds of teachings, with all kinds of books, all kinds of experiences. You simply have to empty this out, become totally empty. When you are empty there is nothing to seek. The person who seeks is a person who is filled with garbage, filled with ideas, habits, concepts, dogmas and they decide to seek in order to hang on to it and this could never be. You have to become like nothing, total nothing, empty everything out, get rid of it and you will be free.

SZ: What's the significance of calling that state of total freedom, Self?

R: The significance is that Self makes you understand that there is only one. It means oneness, it means that there is only one entity called the Self, that's all-pervading, omnipresence and you are that! It's a name we give it to make sure we understand where it's at. That we're something, that we are an entity of some kind, that we are a Self, but the Self really doesn't exist. Just another word, like all the rest of the words everything is a bunch of words, but we speak these words to make us understand there is something higher than where we are, something so beautiful, so grand, we can't even imagine what it is. It is beyond imagination, then anything we can grasp or explain, that's what you are that is you, you are That. When you try to define it you spoil it. Just be! Do not be this or that, just be!

SZ: If intelligence fills our trash can with garbage, is intelligence a help or a hindrance?

R: Human intelligence is a hindrance. Look at this world today, look at the chaos and confusion in this world, politics, whatever, this is human intelligence. Human intelligence is not where it's at. Supreme intelligence is where it's at and supreme intelligence is silence. (somebody coughs or sneezes everybody laughs)

R: Fred woke up. (laughter)

SF: If something in the mind contains an element of time, it has already strayed from the truth, cause time is a creation of the mind so...in other words it would be something different then it is now and that puts it out of the game.

R: Of course, you're right. Time is part of the human game. (SF: And space too?) Space and time is all part of the human game. It's all on the relative plane. (SF: The relative plane?) When you're working with the relative plane you've got problems. (SF: Astral plane, causal plane?) Astral plane, causal plane are all part of the mind, all maya, all a dream. (SF: Confusing) So why think about it? (SF: I'm trying not to.)

SH: If you try not to you will. (SF: Yeah.) It's like trying not to think of a white horse.

R: Do we have announcements? Tell them about the transcripts.

SM: Oh yeah we do have transcripts of Robert's talks and they're on the table they're free of charge. Two boxes filled with them too. So please feel free to help yourself.

R: We want to get rid of them. (laughter)

It is time for prashad. It's about time. Thursday nights is when we have good prashad but this will do for now. (unwraps prashad) Fig newtons. Enjoy it.

SY: What do they have on Thursday Robert?

R: Nice jelly doughnuts, whipped cream cakes.

Thank you for coming remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, for God dwells in you as you, peace.

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 197

WHY SHOULD WE DO ANYTHING?

5th November, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, Om, peace. Good evening. Greetings. It is good to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart.

Last Sunday we were discussing the telephone calls I received in reference to voting. People call me with strange questions. Do Jnanis vote? Should I vote if I'm a Jnani? And my answer is usually the same to everybody, which was, as long as you ask the question, you should vote. As long as you inquire if you should or you shouldn't, then you're part of the system then you should.

After the election I continued to receive phone calls. One person asked me an interesting question. He called from Dusseldorf, Germany. Is there such a place as Dusseldorf? I asked him where he got my phone number. He said, "Ramana Ashram." I didn't realize they had my phone number. But anyway he asked me a pretty intelligent question, to an extent. He said, "Robert, if everything is a dream, why should we vote, or do anything, if it's all a dream?" We'll discuss this today.

We say that life is a dream, everything is a dream. The world is unreal. Why should you do anything? The reason of course is you are involved in the dream. You are part of the dream. As long as you are part of the dream, you have to do what has to be done in this world of the dream, for you believe you are the body, the mind. Therefore you cannot fool yourself and imagine that you're somewhere else, when you're not. You come under the law of cause and effect. You come under the laws of karma. As long as you believe in this world, there is karma for you, there is cause and effect. You cannot say in one breath that there is no karma and no cause and effect, and then react to the world. You know whether or not you believe the world is real, by the way you react to it, consistently, constantly, how the world makes you feel. This shows you whether you believe the world is real or not.

When you think of your body all the time, when you respond to the world all the time, then you must do the things of this world. Remember the cliché, "Do unto Caesar that which is Caesar's," and "Do unto God, that which is God's." Where do you belong? In the world or in heaven? You can tell by the way you react to life, by the way the world makes you feel, by the way you respond to your body. Yet it's all a dream, but you're caught up in the dream.

As an example, when you go to sleep and you're having a dream, you dream that thieves break into your home and shoot all of your family. Then you wake up. When you wake up, do you go looking for the people who shot your family? It was a dream and you laugh. But you forget you're living in another dream, which is this world, which is the mortal dream.

Do not connect both worlds. They're both two different states of consciousness. They're two different dreams. Yet when you're in your dream world, dreaming, when you go to sleep at night, you're doing all sorts of things in that dream, aren't you? You're acting and reacting, doing all kinds of things in that dream. Do you ever in a dream say, "This is a dream, and I'm not going to react to this world?" You don't. You continue doing things in your dream. That's how it is in this world also.

Most of us are stuck in a dream world. We're stuck in a dream world because it presses down on us. It appears so real. Things are happening every day. Yet, one day you will awaken. It's the same as awakening from your dream at night. There is no difference. When you awaken to the dream at night, do you have any interest in the dream? You may for a while. If you're into dreams, you may try to decipher what the dream means, for a little bit. But after a while you forget all about the dream. So it is with this world. When a person awakens, or a person becomes liberated, they are able to see the dream, but they know they are not part of it. They also observe everything, but they are not part of the dream. The world no longer has any power over them, over the awakened person, the liberated person. The world has no power whatsoever over you once you're liberated.

This is the way you should think of it. Just as a dream that you were dreaming at night, you awaken and forget all about it, so when you awaken here, you forget all about this world also. Yet you're in a body, so it appears. As long as you're in a body, you'll see other bodies. You will see the world as everybody else sees the world. But you're a 100% sure that this is not a world of reality. You know this. You continue functioning in this world, but yet you are not doing anything.

To the Jnani there is no action being taken whatsoever. To the ajnani there is action being taken. And the ajnani sees the Jnani taking action also. But yet, to the Jnani, nothing is happening, nothing is going on, there's no world, there's no dream, there's no karma, there's no cause and effect.

When I tell you that cause and effect and karma does not exist, you have to be real careful with yourself. Do not take this as a license to do anything you like. Remember again, and I'll remind you again, and again, and again, as long as you are involved in this world and you believe the world to be real, then karma is also real. It's as real as the world, as real as your body. As you sow, so shall you reap. You have to deal with this. What you do to others, you are doing to yourself. You hurt someone, you hurt yourself. You love someone, you love yourself.

It's nice for me to come here and tell you that everything is absolute reality, everything is nirvana, sat-chit-ananda, pure awareness, pure intelligence. This is the ultimate truth. But how many of us are living from this standpoint? We have to work from where we are. The worst thing you can do is to fool yourself, and make believe you can get away with something. In this world you can't get away with anything. The lord of karma is always watching. You always get back what you put out, nothing more, nothing less. This is what I mean when I tell you everything is in the right place, unfolding the way it should, all is well, there's absolutely nothing to be concerned about. But if you go around making a fool of yourself, by causing problems to other people, having all kinds of attitudes, anger, jealousy, fear, whatever, these are emotions that you're putting out in the karmic world, and the karmic world has to return to you what you put out.

So this is a dream world. Yes, this is all a dream. You are the dreamer, but you haven't discovered this for yourself. This is a very important point to remember. You have to awaken, become free. You cannot imagine that you're free, because you hear Advaita Vedanta lectures. You cannot imagine that you're free, if you feel yourself suffering somehow. If you feel hurt, or frustrated, disillusioned, or depressed, how can you possibly be free?

When you are free, you have unalloyed happiness all the time. Eternal happiness and eternal joy is always with you, regardless of conditions. For you are no longer conditioned. You are no longer looking for anything. Does it make sense for an enlightened person to look for a healthy body, or for a prosperous body, or for this or for that? Of course not. This is the fact that nobody's left to look for these things. The ego who does this has been totally transcended.

Look at the world like bubbles on the ocean, bubbles and waves on the ocean. Look at people that way too. They keep disappearing. They keep coming back. The bubbles, the eddies, the waves come and go continuously, constantly. Yet the ocean understands that the bubbles, the eddies, the waves, are part of the ocean. They're not separate from the ocean. Yet the bubbles come and go. The waves come and go. So it is with us. Bodies come and go continuously, constantly. You make such a fuss out of life, out of a body that's so important. They come and go like bubbles in the ocean. New bodies appear every day, old ones fade away, yet the source, beyond everything, is consciousness. The substratum of all existence is consciousness. Consciousness is like the ocean, and all the forms on this earth, in the universe, are superimpositions on consciousness. In other words, all the forms are like bubbles and waves on the ocean.

When you discover who you are, you're no longer a bubble or a wave. You no longer come and go. You become the ocean. The average person in this world believes they are a bubble or a wave. They identify only with their little self. They're always thinking about themselves. I need, I want, I hurt, I this, I that, I everything. It's always I, I, I. This is how the bubble thinks, that it's separate from the ocean. But the ocean knows it's not separate.

And so the infinite lies waiting in sweet repose for you to understand who you are. In other words, the ocean, consciousness, is not going to do anything to make you understand who you are, for consciousness is already your Self. But somehow you've been hypnotized, mesmerized, deluded, into believing that you are a separate entity, a separate body, and you have to fetch for yourself, care for yourself. While the bubble persists, it is well taken care of by the ocean. While the wave persists, the ocean looks after it. That's why waves become big sometimes, they become tidal waves. They're still part of the ocean.

As you persist in believing that you're human, believing that you are a body, that you are separate, you are still looked after and protected. You may still suffer and go through experiences, because you think you're the body or the mind, but nevertheless you are always protected and looked after.

In any case you don't have to worry. In any case you don't have to fear. Why? Because you live in eternity. You live in bliss. You live in total joy and happiness. You are immersed in consciousness, like space. Space is immersed in consciousness. And all the forms, like planets, galaxies, universes, are superimpositions in space. And what holds space together? Consciousness.

You do not have to do anything to understand this. You simply have to recognize it. You do not have to pray, or meditate, or do mantras or japa. There is nothing you have to do to recognize your reality, that you're the ocean, you're consciousness. You simply have to see it, and recognize it, and awaken. That's all you have to do.

Why is it so hard for most people? Because you've been attached totally, solidly, to maya, to ignorance, to the belief in two powers, belief in separation. You feel in your ego that you're separate from the Self, you're separate from your source. This is the only reason that you suffer. If you knew who you were, it would be virtually impossible for you to suffer in any way. But this is where it becomes paradoxical. For again you may appear to be going through some experiences, yet the enlightened one knows they're not going through anything. This is why when the disciples saw Jesus hanging on the cross, they thought he was suffering. But Jesus, the Christ, never suffered. Yet Jesus, the man, appeared to be suffering, by all of his disciples, by the Roman guards.

We're seeing two different worlds. We're seeing the world of the Jnani, or the world of the Sage, or the world of the enlightened one, that is pure bliss, absolute reality, pure awareness, pure intelligence, I am that I am, ultimate reality. This is the world the Sage lives in all the time, and nothing has ever happened to the Sage. Nothing can ever happen to the Sage, due to the fact that the Sage has become eternity. The Sage is omnipresence, all-pervading. Yet when the average person looks at Ramakrishna or Ramana Maharshi, and others that seem to have died a horrible death from cancer or what ever, they say and they cry, "Why does this person have to suffer so much? They were so good. They were so kind. I can't understand this. If there's any universal justice, why does this person have to suffer?"

Who sees the suffering? Only the deluded one, the one who is deluded, the ignorant one. They see through the senses. They see through the eyes, hear through the ears, speak through the mouth, taste the agony, smell the blood, whatever is going on. The senses are getting to you as a human being. Because you believe you're human you have senses to make you human. But we know now you can transcend those senses, totally and completely, and be in another world completely and totally. You can transcend the senses and be totally free of them, totally, absolutely, and be in a completely different world. And so there is a body that appears to be going through experiences, but only to the person who sees through the senses.

So to get back to the dream world, in the dream world, when you go to sleep at night, you go through many, many experiences, do many things, you may appear to be killed, you may appear to become a king or a queen, you may appear to have many children, a beautiful home. Or you may appear to be unemployed, a homeless person. Yet when you awaken from that dream, you'll laugh to yourself and say, "Well thank God it was only a dream," and you forget about it.

This mortal dream world that you're in right now, you must also forget about, and not identify with it. This is the way you become free. This is the way you awaken. This doesn't mean that you will do nothing. It means you will do whatever you're supposed to do, but in your mind you will be doing absolutely nothing.

You have to ask yourself the question, "Do I really want to become free and liberated in this life?" Think how many more years you've got left. You never know, you may be called away tomorrow, this very minute, in a year, in a month, ten years, a week. Who knows? Therefore you should continuously be thinking of these things we're talking about tonight. They should be first in your life. What you give your energy to, you become. What you believe in, you become. What you think about most of the time, you become.

That's the important one, what you think about most of the time. Most of us are continuously thinking somebody is trying to hurt us, somebody doesn't like us, somebody is mean to us, something is wrong someplace. As long as you think this way, you are telling the lord of karma, this is what I really want. In other words you're inadvertently bringing doom and gloom upon yourself, for if you think doom and gloom all day long, you'll attract more of the same continuously, constantly. You therefore should understand this and begin to let go of all your emotions.

One of the best ways to let go of your emotions is by practicing self-inquiry. I know some of you have got tired of practicing this. Some of you believe nothing is happening, but all the same make it a habit. Think of the many habits you have now, destructive habits. Habits that do not help you whatsoever in your unfoldment to the Self. But yet you do these things without thinking, the destructive habits. Develop a good habit, like practicing self-inquiry. Do not look for results. Do not look for anything to happen. Just do it.

Ask yourself, "Who feels depressed? Who feels human? Who feels there's something wrong someplace? Who feels this illusion? To whom do these feelings come?" And of course you answer, "I do. I am feeling all these things." As soon as you say this to yourself, realize that the I is separate from you. The I who feels all this is not you. For if the I were you, you wouldn't use it all the time like you do. You wouldn't say, "I am this," and,

"I am that." This shows you there's an I and there's you. You say, "I am this, I am that, I feel sick, I feel discouraged, I feel depressed."

If you were really talking about your real Self, you wouldn't say that. But if you are talking about your body, you wouldn't even say that. For if you were talking about your body, you would say, "Sick, depressed, unhappy," you wouldn't say, I. This shows you that you are not referring to your body when you say, I. What appears to be your body is just an inanimate piece of flesh. You're a piece of meat. So you are. Yet when consciousness goes through it, it becomes animated, it begins to dance, it begins to jump, it begins to do all kinds of things. But of itself it can do nothing.

What I'm getting at is this: How can the body that is really a piece of flesh by itself, become sick or depressed or discouraged, or have any problem? It cannot. You give life to these things by saying, "I feel this." When you add I to the body, or to the piece of flesh, then it becomes alive also, in a negative way. But when you begin to understand that I is not you, I has never been you, this is the beginning of wisdom. When you just understand this continuously, keep carrying it through day, after day, after day, keep reminding yourself constantly, "I is not me." Of course don't let anybody hear you saying that. They'll call the men with the white coats and take you away, to the happy farm.

Realize to yourself, "I is not me." I is something by itself, and it doesn't exist, some form of hypnosis, some delusion, called an optical illusion, that makes me believe I am I. When you get that far, you can further inquire, "Then where did this I come from? If the I is not me, why do I keep saying I, I, referring to myself? Where did this I come from? What is the source of the I?" Everything has a source.

Just by thinking this way, you're thinking about God. People always ask me, "How shall I think about God? You always tell us Robert, to concentrate on God and forget about the world. How shall I think about God? Say anything about God?" By realizing the source is not I. Who am I? If I is not the source, then what is the source of I? That's all you have to say. Don't go any further.

This is when you become still and allow the power that knows the way to work, through you. As you become still, the mind will begin to think again. And you go through the same procedure again, and again and again. "To whom do these feelings and thoughts come? They come to me. I feel these things. I feel funny. I feel depressed. I feel bad. Well, what is the source of this I? Where does it come from?" And again you keep still.

This is the simple practice of self-inquiry. It will become a habit if you keep doing it. So don't think that nothing is happening. Something is happening to you when you do this, even for the first time, but it's very subtle.

Forget about time. Forget about yourself. Become universal. Realize that your body is the body of the universe.

All things emanate out of your mind. The whole universe emanates out of your mind. Think of these things every day. Be aware of these thing every day. Catch yourself, day after day, after day, catch yourself, and think along the lines we've discussed tonight.

When you can do this, something will happen to you, something wonderful. I can assure you of this. A benevolent power will take over and bring you to your true home, which is absolute reality and total happiness. Peace.

Feel free to ask any questions.

SF: I have a question. You said that, "I am the dreamer." Would it not be equally true to say I am the dreamed?

R: Say it any way you like. It doesn't matter what you say but what you feel it is. What you think it is. As long as you know that you're being dreamed by a dreamer. (SF: The dreamer and the dreamed are one.) The dream and the dreamer are one. The dream is coming out of you. Where else would it come from? You are creating the whole dream. In your waking state you're creating the whole universe.

SF: Yet as you say, "Everything in duality is a creation of my mind," and the mind itself is unreal. That makes everything unreal. (R: Exactly.) However to try to live on that plane while I'm in the body is to court disaster. For instance Tota Farees tried to, he thought he was living on that plane of non-duality while in the body and what happened to him is disaster.

R: It's what I was referring to. We mustn't kid ourselves. We mustn't fool ourselves. We must continuously work on ourselves, at the same time act as if karma exists, the world exists because we're here in the world. We're a part of this world. (SF: Even for the Jnani?) For the Jnani there is no world, there is no existence. (SF: Well would you say Tota Faree was not a Jnani?) I don't know whether Tota Faree was a Jnani or not? (SF: Thank you.)

SY: I have a question. Sometimes when I keep silent I have background noise in my head. Like things that have happened throughout the day and just a bunch of different noises. That I have absolutely no control over. Is there any way you could explain any of that to me?

R: Well apparently you've been picking up all that stuff that you've been doing all day long. And it's resting in your mind and you're hearing all the noises from this. What you have to do is to inquire, "To whom does this come?" Inquire, "Who feels this? Where does it come from? What is its source?" (SY: But I find that that is what I have like after I've taken control of my mind. It's just the stuff that's like scattering around.) Because you haven't taken control of your mind. If you really took control of your mind you wouldn't have that. The mind is a very powerful instrument, it appears, to some people. And it will do anything to save itself from being annihilated, destroyed. (SY: But everything else is quiet in the mind even the song that I heard throughout the day it just continuously just keeps going and going and going.) Of course. This is what the mind does. That is why we have a mind. To remember things, to pick up things. This is true of everybody not only you. Therefore you must entirely, totally keep asking yourself, "To whom does this come? Who hears this?" Then you say, "I do," and inquire, "what is the source of the I?"

If you keep doing this regularly you will find that the noises vanish. You'll become still and quiet. In other words you just observe the sounds. You watch, there is the sounds, you watch the mind at work. But do not react to it. Just observe it and watch it. Have no reaction whatsoever then you will find it will stop.

SY: It seems really tricky because it's like, it seems in a sense like it's faded but actually it's acting like it's okay, but that little part is still like noisy because I can't react to it because it's so minute, it's like you can barely hear it but it's still scattered everywhere.

R: It's still the mind playing with you. So it makes no difference whether it's loud or faint. The method is always the same. "To whom does this come? Who is feeling this? Who is hearing this? Who is being annoyed by this? I am. Well who is this I? Where did the I come from?" And trace the I back to the source, in the heart and you will find it stops. And again, observe the mind, watch the mind. Watch those sounds. Do nothing at all to stop them. Just watch them. Just by watching them they will become weaker and weaker and weaker. Until it disappears in its entirety. Just do not accept them. Use one of these methods and it has to stop.

(silence)

R: Would you read the Jnani Mary? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of the book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. Do we have any announcements?

SM: No we don't I'm afraid.

R: We're going to have a couple of bandararas, parties, feasts. One at thanksgiving if it's okay with Henry. Which is the 29th, Sunday. Thanksgivings on Thursday. So it will be three days after. And also on December 27th, December 30th is Ramana Maharshi's birthday so we'll have a combination celebration of Christmas and Ramana Maharshi's birthday. So if someone would like to be in charge of it, let me know, let Mary know, let Lee know, let somebody know. (laughter) (pause) We'll have music, festivities. Everybody bring a dish. Any comments?

SM: Sounds pretty good.

R: Anybody have anything to say?

SM: Do you want a paper saying who is going to bring what so everybody, so everybody doesn't bring the same thing? (R: Yes.) We could do that.

SH: We need a coordinator.

SM: No, not that, we could leave the paper on the table and people could just sign in what they would like to bring and other people can see what they're bringing and they won't bring the same thing then.

R: We need somebody to take charge. (SH: Mary you take charge.) Think about it.

(students continue to discuss bhandara coordinator)

R: So keep that date open. You can bring a friend, your wife, somebody else's wife, your husband.

Oh well it's time for prashad. We have heaven sent cookies.

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

EVERYTHING IS IN A STATE OF FLUX

8th November, 1992

Robert: Om, Namah Shivaya. Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace.

Hello. It's good to be with you again, to see your lovely smiling faces. Happy face. Put on a happy face.

The whole universe is in a state of flux. Nothing is solid. Nothing is permanent, nothing exists, the way it appears. Your body is a miniature universe. Your body is a replica of the entire universe. Your body is a microcosm of the macrocosm. This being so, then there's nothing permanent inside of you. You're not a permanent being. You're not meant to be a permanent being. You're also in a state of flux. When you begin to realize this about yourself, you leave things alone. You stop fighting life. You stop fighting yourself, for you realize change will come along soon anyway, and take you away from here and put you somewhere else. You'll drop your body. You'll become something else completely, something different. So while you're here, why fight? Why be upset? Why have problems? Only the person who believes he is going to live for ever tries to mould the world into his way of thinking, or her way of thinking.

When you look at the tiniest thing in life, a little insect, a little insect has its life span, maybe a couple of hours, maybe a couple of days. A little insect does not want to live for ever. It can't even think like that. It goes along with the flow of life. It knows nothing about birth and death. When the time comes, it drops itself, and it is finished. When you look at a higher animal, a dog or a cat, they live approximately 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 years, and then they just let go, and they go on with it, to bigger and better things. They're not thinking, "I've got to take care of my body so it will live forever. I've got to eat the right food. I've got to eat vitamin pills. I've got to do certain exercises all the time, so I'll last forever."

The person of wisdom realizes that no matter what they do to themselves, they're going to go, just the same as everybody else, sooner or later. They may prolong their life a couple of years. Big deal. You didn't come into this world to hold on to your life. The truth is you didn't come to this world. You're not even here. But you think you are so we have to talk about these things. You think you're somebody. You think you're something. You think you're an important person. You think you matter. You believe the world can't do without you. Vanity, vanity, all is vanity. Our ego's are so big, we're trying to make a mark for ourselves. We say, "When I leave this planet, I want people to remember me." They'll forget you, don't worry. They may remember you a couple of days, a couple of hours. Then they go on with their life and you're all forgotten.

Everything must change, everything. When we look into the lives of planets, galaxies, they too keep changing, changing, changing. Nothing is forever. A tree may live a 100 years, 200 years, but it has to go. A mountain seems to be here forever, because of our thinking of time, what time means to us. We therefore think a mountain is there forever. But in universal terms it's there for a while, 1000 years, 500 years, whatever. And it crumbles. Changes into something else. The galaxies keep being born, keep being destroyed. Everything comes and goes. And soon the whole universe is dissolved. Maybe it will be 250 million years. The whole universe comes to an end. It's all finished. Then there is only boundless space. There's nothing but boundless space. Yet, does boundless space sit in the lap of consciousness. The first manifestation of consciousness is boundless space. When we come to consciousness, we have nothing to say about that, for our finite minds cannot grasp it. It is something so rare, so extreme, so mind-boggling, we can never understand what consciousness is. Yet it is the substratum of all existence. We can never think what it is with our minds.

We can never understand what it is. It's impossible. This is why, when you get to terms like consciousness, you keep silent. There is nothing to say after that. But then somebody like me comes along and tells you that you are consciousness. You are the consciousness that we cannot understand. You are the consciousness that is the substratum of all existence. You are that consciousness which is so profound, so far out, so so, that you can't even discuss it. There are no words to discuss it with. You cannot describe it. You can't feel it. You can't taste it. You can't smell it. You can't hear it. But there's something out there called consciousness. Now man is the only type of instrument that can express the consciousness. In other words, we can discover this consciousness, become this consciousness, and be this consciousness for ever. Our true nature is this consciousness. This is what we really are. This is what we've always been. And this is what we'll always be.

So, we get back to us. Our mission is really to transcend the world and become consciousness, our true Self. This is the only thing we have to do on this planet. There's nothing else we came here for, nothing else. This is it.

When you get involved in your projects, in your work, in your life, it's really a waste of time, it really is, for you do not come here for that. You came here to know yourself. Only discover yourself and realize that you never even came here. There's no place to come from. Where would you come from? To be here you have to come from someplace. These are all words, words, words, words. There are so many words. Yet let me just say this. If you ever taste just a glimpse of consciousness, you'd be so happy, so blissful, so at peace with yourself and life, you could never understand what you would become. If you could only taste a glimpse of this consciousness, you'd never think of hurting anyone. You'd never think of going to war. You'd never think this is mine, this is mine, this belongs to me. There would never be a you and a me. There would only be one. And that one is everything and everybody, and that's just a glimpse of consciousness.

It's so beautiful. So wonderful. So grand. This is why people in a class like this, in a teaching like this, should really be interested in nothing but this understanding, and unfold, and become totally free. This should be the only thing we should be interested in, nothing else. Yet, as we're interested in becoming totally free, we will be led and guided to our right place, and do the things we have to do on this earth. Something will take care of us. While we're trying to find ourselves, while we're trying to find consciousness, which always exists, was never lost, we will do our thing, whatever we came here to do. It's sort of difficult to understand how you can be searching for consciousness on one hand and continuing your life or your humanhood on another hand. Yet this is exactly what happens. But your life becomes beautiful. When I say your life becomes beautiful, I don't mean that problems will not come to you, but you will not see them as problems any longer. There'll be no problem that you see, for you will be seeing yourself.

Always remember that your life is like a mirror. A mirror cannot see itself, but reflects everything it sees. So what you really are, in your life, you're reflecting all over the place. If you feel hurtable, then things will happen to you to hurt you. Whatever you feel, you attract more and more of the same. You're always seeing your own image. This is why it is so foolish to me when people get excited, when there's man's inhumanity to man going on, there's conflict, chaos, confusion. These people only see themselves. Where in truth there's only one Self. That Self is consciousness. It's all the same. There's not yourself and myself. There is only the Self. And you're absolutely free. You're free to choose.

I know some of you are saying, "Well, Robert always tells us that life is preordained, so how can it be free?" It is preordained to that person who keeps responding to the world, the person who responds to the world, to the effects of this world. As a person goes onward, and onward and onward, takes on more bodies, keeps taking on more bodies, keeps becoming more human and never becomes enlightened.

It is only when you realize that you've got the freedom to let go. This freedom you have, the freedom to let go, that's not being hurtable. The freedom to choose consciousness over the world and things of this world. That's the freedom we all have. We have this freedom. But if we forget about it and we become worldly, we have no freedom. In that case everything is preordained, predestined. So whether you want your life to be predestined or totally free, it's up to you. It's your choice. An animal doesn't have this choice. An insect doesn't have this choice. A tree doesn't have this choice. A mountain doesn't have this choice. You have this choice. What are you doing with it?

As long as you have feelings, of pain, disharmony, you feel distraught, you feel something is wrong some place, you're making a choice, right then and there. You're saying, "I'm going to feel hurt. I'm going to feel sorry for myself. I'm going to believe somebody is trying to do something to me, that life is bad, that it's everyone for themselves. We have to step on someone before they step on us." This will be our thinking. This will be our way of living. And if we live this way, if we think this way, if we act this way, then life is preordained for us, predestined. And as you sow, so shall you reap. What goes around comes around.

Yet you have to realize you're the cause of everything. You are the cause of everything that happens to you. There's no one to blame but you. If you have certain people in your life you can't get along with, your family, your relatives, whatever, you have purposely attracted these people before you came to this earth, and these people attracted you, for this is their karma and your karma, and you have to work it out. If you keep reacting the same way you always do, you will not work it out, and will get deeper enmeshed into it, and you will come back again, and again, and again, in different bodies, until you get it right. We can really say that the universe is a university to educate the soul.

Now why am I telling you all these things? Because there is nothing else to do. You know there's no soul, there's no universe, there's no body, there's no mind, there's no karma, there's no reincarnation, there's no liberation, there's no delusion, and yet we discuss all of these topics we're talking about. I guess by discussing it you'll realize it doesn't exist. If we didn't discuss it, you wouldn't know what doesn't exist. After all, you have to know what doesn't exist, so you won't feel good, you won't feel right about it. It would make troubles, it would make problems in the world. To find out what doesn't exist.

Try acting like a God, instead of a human being. In other words when you come into a predicament in your life, before you get involved in it, say to yourself, "Now what would God do in a case like this?" And since God doesn't exist, there's nothing to do. So why are we discussing the subject? Because you want to hear me talk.

Everything is beautiful. Everyone is a God. Everyone doesn't exist. And yet here we are, looking at each other. What do you see when you look at each other? Most of us see another person. But is there really another person? You know when you go to sleep, you dream at night, the dream becomes like a big bubble, and the bubbles contain the whole universe. Just like this, people, place and things. Situations ensue. People are born. People die. People get old. People get young. It all happens in a dream, in the bubble. But where did the bubble come from, the dream bubble? Where else, it came out of yourself. You're having the dream.

But listen to this. This is a miracle, if you think about it. You are creating the whole dream world which you dream about. You create everything. As far as you're concerned, if you are in that dream, you're going to stick up for your rights, and you'll not believe it's a dream. If I come into your dream and I tell you, "Don't concern yourself with this thing. Don't worry about this. It's not important. Stop feeling hurt. Stop feeling confused. Stop feeling something is wrong." You will look at me and you'll say, "Well Robert, if you were experiencing this, you'd be hurt too. You don't know what I'm going through, the hell I'm going through." And then I tell you, "But it's only a dream. Can't you see this. It's a dream." And you throw rocks at me, and chase me away. "What do you mean it's a dream. I'm going through it. Can't you see I'm bleeding. This is not a dream. This is real." Then you wake up. What happened to everything? Where did everything go? It's gone. It never existed.

But then you exist, the dreamer. The dreamer exists, or does he? Who is this dreamer? Where does this dreamer come from? You have awakened into this world and know yourself as a body. Remember, in the dream world you were also a body, weren't you? Just like this. There was no difference. You were a moving, fighting body, in the dream. And no one will be able to tell you that you are dreaming. No one will ever be able to convince you of this, while you're dreaming. But you exist in this dream.

Now you awaken and you also exist. And I tell you this is all a dream, and you won't believe me. I tell you you're dreaming right now. You're dreaming the mortal dream. But you refuse to accept what I say. You refuse to believe me. You may tell me in one breath, "I believe you Robert, I know it's a dream," but as soon as you go outside, the first person that bumps into you, you become angry. So how can this be a dream? You're feeling the world. As long as you're feeling the world, you believe this is not a dream. You believe the world is real.

So you have this choice again. To realize the world is a dream, to leave everything alone, to be at peace with yourself, and to be at peace with others, and just observe the world without reacting to it. Or you can get completely and fully involved in this world, totally involved in the world, trying to make things happen, trying to make yourself popular, make yourself good, bad, go through all kinds of experiences, and always fighting for survival. This is the choice you've got. This is the choice you have. This is the choice that you have to work with. What will you do with it?

And so Sages have appeared in our lives, when we're ready, who have told us what to do. They have told us, "Leave the world alone." Stop fighting it. Go deep within yourself. Focus on yourself. Find out who you really are, either by listening to the discourse and awakening to the words, which can happen sometimes, or going deep within and leaving the world alone, not thinking of this world, but seeing yourself as the world, or practicing self-inquiry, which becomes beautiful when you know what you're doing. It becomes boring if you do it mechanical. By simply asking yourself, "What am I? What the hell am I? What am I doing here?" as Ross Perot's vice-president says. He got up there and said, "Who am I? What am I doing here?" Perhaps he knows something we don't know.

You only have to ask yourself those questions. "What am I doing here? What am I? Am I this person? I can't be this person, for I'm not the same person I was ten years ago, fifteen years ago. When I was first conceived I was no bigger than a little pinhead, and now I've grown into a lovely lady, a lovely man. Soon I'll get older. I'll turn into an old lady, an old man. So how can this be me? How can this person, so-to-speak, who keeps changing, changing, changing constantly be really me?" Ask yourself.

Ask yourself, "How did I get here? Who made me? What am I?" You keep asking yourself these questions over and over again, and something will give. For one day you will awaken to the fact that you're asking, "Who am I?" You're not asking "Who is me?"

You're asking, "Who am I?" In other words, you're wondering who the I is. See what you do, the discovery you come to? Who am I? Who is this I that goes through experience after experience after experience? Who is this I? You stop identifying with the small I, which is the I-thought. This is a big step in your evolution when you can do this. Most people do it the wrong way. They keep saying, "Who am I?" and they're thinking that they are I. But you're not I. You're not this I-thought that I am referring to. You're not the small I. You are not that.

Yet you have been living on this I all of your life. When you discover who this I is, you will discover freedom. But the first step is realizing that you are not I, and realizing that it is I who has all the problems, not you. In other words, you've got to come to the conclusion, I feels hurt, I feels upset, I feels uncomfortable, I feels unwanted, unloved. Not me, but I. Not me, but the I. And now you have a whole new ball game. You're beginning to see that the I is not you. The secret is to discover where the I came from. If this I is not me, where did it come from? Who gave it birth? Then you sneakily follow it. You start to follow the I where it came from. You will soon realize something very interesting, that the I is very spontaneous. It comes in a flash, all of a sudden. Yet you can see it. You can feel it. You can watch it.

As an example, early in the morning when you first get up, the first few seconds when you get up, you are at peace with yourself and the world. There's no world that exist for you. In between the waking and the sleeping state, when you first open your eyes, those few seconds, there's no I, and you're in perfect peace. You don't know a thing about your problems. You have no idea about the world. Yet you open your eyes and you look at the world. For those first few seconds, there's absolutely nothing disturbing you. If you have cancer, it's not there. No matter what the problem is, it's not there in those first few seconds.

But all of a sudden the I becomes active. And now you say, "I feel my bones aching. I feel I'm hungry. I want breakfast I have to get up to go to work. I have to do this. I have to do that." The I has taken over your life. This little I, this insignificant little nothing has taken over your entire life and existence, and you're going along with it, how foolish. You believe in what it says and what it's doing, because you agree with it. The I says, "I have a headache." Instead of saying to the I, "You have a headache but I don't," you believe that this I is you, and your head begins to hurt. You have made this I your God. In this way you suffer like you do. That's the only reason. There is no other reason. So you're going to get really into this. You say to yourself, "I'm going to find out what's going on in my life. I'm going to follow that I. I'm going to trace that I to its source." So next morning comes. You're ready for it. You're alerted. You know you're going to get up, there'll be no I, then the I will come in all of a sudden. So you watch. You get up in the morning, you're prepared and you feel the I coming from your heart, up the spine into your brain. So you have discovered where the I comes from.

Everything I am sharing with you can be discovered and practiced. You can practice this. You will see that I'm saying the truth. It may not take you one day, or two days or a week. It may take you some time to do this. But if you keep watching in the morning when you get up, you will discover that the I comes from the heart, the spiritual heart in the right side of the chest, goes through the spine, up into the brain, and then you become a slave of the I. The I takes you through the day and through life. But now that you discover where it comes from, you begin to see that when I go to sleep, it reverses itself. It goes the other way. For when you go to sleep, just before you fall asleep, those few seconds before you fall asleep, you're in the same consciousness you were when you woke up in the morning, before you awakened, and became fully aware of the I. You are in the same place, the same position. But this time it's reversing, going the other way. The I is going from the brain, down the spine, back into the heart.

This is called tracing the I. Following the I-thought. Now you've got something to work with. Now you've got something to do, keep you busy, keep you out of mischief. You begin to follow that I. When you are able to follow that I into the heart, in other words, when you are consciously in your waking state able to follow the I back into the heart, you will become free and liberated. This is your homework. This is what you have to do. All of you have to start doing this, have to practice this. Discovering the I, where it came from, tracing it back into the heart center. When it goes back into the heart center, and you're conscious, you're liberated, for there's no more I. It is the I that has been keeping you in bondage, the I. Follow this I. Do it, and become free. Peace.

I'm going to start playing some different kinds of music. If you like this music, let me know and I will play more of it. If you don't like it see Lee and punch him out.

(Robert plays music)

SV: I was laughing and laughing and then when I opened my eyes I saw two and a half people smiling too. (laughter) It takes some time to get used to it too because most of the people are used to the...?

R: Anybody want to punch Lee out? (laughter) (SH: Yeah you got it.) It is now time to play stump the guru. When you come here on Sunday, if you don't remember write a question down. You all attack me and throw me out the window. (SH: Let's do it.)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: First one is, can you describe a devotee.

A: Humility, total humility. A devotee is a being who has come through many lifetimes with a Master. He or she is totally different than a disciple or a seeker. A devotee doesn't want to think about anything else anymore. But the truth, the teaching, that is all they care about. They have finished running around the world. Finished going into this teaching, that teaching. Going and seeing Baba-Loo on Sunday and Baba-Hari on Wednesday and Baba on Thursday... (laughter) (SH: And Robert Adams on...) (laughter) A devotee is one of those who has found what they want and that is all they want. I always give the example of Ramana Maharshi and the person pulling the fan. One of his devotees was Jo, he was pulling the fan for thirty-five years. He sat there and pulled the fan of Ramana. He wanted nothing, cared for nothing. In the West it sounded like a stupid person. But it's far from being stupid. One day he was pulling the fan, he was about 80 years old and he dropped dead. And Ramana looked and he said, he will not come back again, he's totally realized. So the West has not had a good understanding of a devotee.

Remember there are many teachers, teachers all over the place. But where can you find a good devotee. So I would say a quality of devotee is total humility, total love, unbounded love, total joy in what they're doing. They are not stupid people. In the Western mind they might appear to be sort of stupid. For they care about nothing but serving the Master, taking care of the teacher, that is all they care about. Maybe they know something we don't. Something to think about. So a quality is humility, total humility. Nothing like I want this or I want that or I want to become this or I want to become that. They have totally surrendered to the Self in the form of the guru. There is a lot to this. Next question.

Q: Why does the higher Self rush at us when we stand up for it? And what is happening to us when we stand up for it?

A: You can sit down for it, you don't have to stand up. The higher Self is your real nature. That is what you really are. So naturally when you become still long enough, when you stop shouting and making things happen and wanting things and doing things, when you have become totally still long enough and leave whatever happens, happen, then you become the real Self. That seems to rush at you because it is unfolding as you and when you are quiet, you become that. Simple. All your job is to become quiet. Become still. Nothing to prove, nothing to do, nothing to fight. You leave the world alone. Everything will take care of itself. You don't worry any longer. And the Self will rush into your arms and you will embrace and live happily ever after.

(break in tape, as a question continues)

Q: ...is that because my belief system attracts a punishment? Or because karma is trying to clean my slate quickly so I can be balanced with the universe, God again quickly?

A: There is no punishment you're not a sinner, you have never been a sinner, you have divine essence. It appears sometimes that when you get into this teaching things become progressively worse. And this is very good. Because it means you have so much stuff inside of you, so many ideas, so many beliefs, so many concepts, so much dogma, opinions. As these things are destroyed you don't feel good about it because it has taken you away from where you've been all your life. It's pulling the rug from under you. It's taken away all of your toys, all of your objects that you've loved so much. The things that you were holding onto. This only happens when you're really sincere. When you're really sincere you have so much faith and so much strength from your sincerity, that you will look at everything happening to you and smile and laugh. It will not matter to you one iota. For you will know that everything is happening for a divine purpose. There is nobody to hurt you. There is no power in this universe that can hurt. There is nothing that can ever hurt you, nothing. For there is only God which is I consciousness, sat-chit-ananda, the reality is the only thing that exists, Brahman. Which is beyond concepts, beyond knowledge, beyond anything we've ever known. It permeates the whole universe. It is in everything and everybody. When you become still you become closer to Brahman. You become free and liberated as you let go. So the true disciple that comes into Advaita Vedanta will not react to things any longer, no matter what happens. For they will have no fear, all fear has left them.

They will not believe that something bad has happened to them and they've got to straighten it out and make it good. All fear will be gone. You will do what has to be done, without fear. As you're able to do this then the next time the same thing happens or something similar they will laugh in its face and it will disappear and they will never have to go through it again. But if you react to it with fear, animosity, hate, vengeance, you may appear to win sometimes but you'll have to go through it again and again and again and again and again and again and again. So you stop being vengeful, you stop being hateful then everything will stop and you will be yourself. Next question.

Q: After coming to your satsang for the past three months, I feel better and my life runs nicely. But I didn't come here to feel better or more successful, I came to realize the Self, help, help. I don't want to be trapped in feeling good and successful but without self-realization.

A: Who tells you to feel this way? What comes to you is part of your training. Is part of the experiencers you've been wanting to be free, totally unhindered. So feeling good, enjoy it, feel good, don't think it's bad. Feel wonderful but go further. As you keep going beyond feeling good, beyond experiences, you'll go higher and higher and higher. You will raise yourself to a high level of consciousness and when you are here feeling good will disappear. The idea what is good, what is bad will all disappear out of your system. You'll be ready for the final step into liberation.

So you don't say you didn't come here to feel good. Feeling the way you're describing is part of the process. As you go onward with it you will feel better and better until your ego explodes and blows up and disappears out of your system totally and completely. So this is a good sign that you're feeling good and things are better for you in your life. Enjoy it while you can.

Q: Dear Robert, what are you constantly aware of?

A: Nothing. What is there to be aware of? There is absolutely nothing to be aware of. If I were aware of something there would have to be an entity to be aware of it. There has to be an ego or a mind or something that is aware of something but there is nothing to be aware of. For I've got plenty of nothing and nothings plenty for me. (laughter) (SB: You mean you know it all?) Nothing. (SB: You are a know it all.) Nothing. Next question.

Q: Who (dash) what (underlined twice) am I? (a little tiny i)

A: Who dash what am I? You are the little tiny "i" scribbled on the paper, it's you. You are the little eady, beady tiny little I. (students laugh) That is what you are. You put it down yourself so that is what you must be. You should have left the dash where it says I, you know what I mean. What you have to do is get rid of the who, get rid of the am, get rid of the I then there is nothing and then you'll be free. Get rid of the whole thing. Hold onto nothing. Next case.

Q: What is it like for you when you meet another self-realized guru or person?

A: We slap each other on the face. (students burst out laughing) What is there to do, there is nothing to do. I do nothing. If the other person's realized they'll do nothing either. So they'll look at each other, say nothing to each other and go their own way. So there is nothing to do, nothing to say. Next case.

Q: After a satsang where the spirit has been for me very strong, I found myself unable to visit with satsangees and converse unless they speak from their high self. Mundane talk or joking around feels irreligious to me or insulting the presence I feel within. Yet I see you joking and talking mundanely, am I some kind of a phony? Do I have holiness and mundaneness all confused? I actually feel prevented after a strong satsang... (unclear to read) ...from a body, it is not a mental decision. I would be happy to socialize at a special level without body awareness.

A: Okay you're not a phony but you've got a big ego. Because it's your ego that makes you think all these things and say all these things. When your ego is gone it makes no difference who you associate with. You don't see the things you're seeing now. You don't see this person is like this, this person is mundane and I'm high. I know something this person doesn't so I won't have anything to do with this person. On the contrary, the whole world becomes your family. You are not looking for special things in people. Because you're seeing yourself you're seeing them as special. In other words you're seeing yourself as an enlightened being then you'll see everybody else the same way. So there are no special people. We don't associate with special people, saying, "This person is this way and that person is that way. I can't talk to these people because I feel elated, I feel high." That is all ego. When you get rid of your ego you'll be one like everybody else. Because doesn't all of these people come out of you? These people come out of you, where would they come from? They're your creation. The whole universe is your creation.

So if you're looking down at somebody, you're looking down at yourself. When you have evolved to the place where there are no others you will always be happy. For there is only one, that one is Brahman, that one is you, your Self, you are that one. Do not think of high and low, good and bad. Those are terms for the human being with ego. If you are working on your ego to get rid of it, you'll feel comfortable with everybody. It doesn't mean you have to live with certain people forever. And then you'll have a good word to say to everybody, you'll be happy with everybody. You will always feel wonderful inside and nothing will disturb you. So forget about class, high class, low class, in-between class, no class, (laughter) just be yourself. That's it Robert.

Do we have any announcements?

SE: I have three transcripts that if you want to make copies of. I'll let you have them now and you can bring back five or ten copies. Anybody interested making some copies?

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 199

REMOVE THE WALL!

12th November, 1992

Robert: Om, Shanti, Shanti, Shanti, Om, Peace. Greetings! Good Evening! It's good to see your smiling faces. And I said smiling faces.

Why do we come to Satsang? Who knows? We actually had no say in the matter. Some other power pushes us here. You can call this power shakti, consciousness. Whatever you call this power doesn't matter. But it is something within you that has brought you here for this is the place you have to be tonight. Why? There's no reason. Do not try to figure anything out. That's the worst thing you can ever do.

To try to look for a reason as to why things happen why you're here why you're not here, why certain things happen to you in your life or home. Never try to figure this out. If you learn to be centered and live spontaneously in the moment then you will find everything takes care of itself and you'll be happy all the time. But when you try to figure things out, why this has happened why that has happened, you find you get completely confused and you don't know what to do with yourself.

Leave things alone. The universe knows what it's doing. It doesn't need any help from you. Leave everything alone and watch what happens. When you try to interfere with the process, you cause pain for yourself, misery for yourself. But as you leave things alone, the true Self, the I Am, comes into play and takes over your so called life, your humanhood, whatever that is and you will find joy in the right place, doing the right things and everything is unfolding as it should.

As we become deeply involved in Advaita, non-duality, we find that all the teachings of Advaita from the beginning of time tell us all that we have to do is make the mind quiescent, to make the mind calm, peaceful, relaxed, to quiet the mind and then you'll be self-realized.

In Buddhism they say to kill the mind. In Hinduism they say to control the mind. In all the great religions of the world they always go back to the mind because they realize that's where all the problems come from where all the errors come from this is where the misconceptions come from, the mind.

In other words, the mind has got to go!

But trying to kill the mind is really a metaphor. All the ways of getting rid of the mind are a metaphor. You don't really want to get rid of the mind because just by thinking of this the mind becomes stronger and stronger and stronger. You know yourself, anytime you try to quiet the mind it becomes louder and louder. Whenever you try to remove thoughts from the mind, the thoughts become stronger and stronger.

So what is a way to do this? Look at it like this. There's a wall, an imaginary wall between consciousness and the mind and the thoughts. The thoughts and the mind are synonymous. As you try to get rid of the thoughts, you come up against a wall, you come to a dead end. Therefore, the real way to lose the mind is to get rid of the wall, not the thoughts. The so called invisible wall that separates consciousness from the thoughts. And you do this by not trying to remove any thoughts or change any thoughts or kill any thoughts. You merely "remove the wall" and the thoughts will take care of themselves or move past the wall to consciousness. And then consciousness will prevail, which is your real Self.

You do this by becoming very calm, very peaceful, very relaxed and allow the thoughts to do what they will. Don't interfere with them, just let them do what they will. If they wish to be angry with you, let them be angry. If your thoughts wish to tell you things about people, let them tell you things about people. Do not try to change your thoughts. Merely, do not react to them! That's what you've got to do. Do not react to your thoughts. Never react to the thoughts!

Never mind if they're good thoughts or bad thoughts or in between. Thoughts are thoughts. They are all illusions and they cause you pain and problems. For you've identified with the mind somehow, somewhere. Our mind never existed, yet you identify with it. If I ask you to show me your mind, you cannot do this. You cannot show me the mind where would you find it?

Yet we talk about our mind as if it were an entity, as if it were a power that could do something to us. When in truth the mind could not do a thing to us because it doesn't exist. So you "remove the wall" that appears to be between the reality and the thoughts, the mind. When the wall is removed, the thoughts will fall by themselves into the consciousness and you will awaken! It's as simple as that!

There are no mantras you have to do. There are no forms of meditation you have to do. There are no pranayamas that you have to do. There are no yoga exercises you have to do. There is absolutely nothing that you have to do. Just get rid of the wall and you will be home free!

Yet it is not as easy as it sounds, due to the fact that some of us have really made a mess of ourselves and the mind has become very powerful. So it appears! The mind has become very strong. It controls you totally and completely. Isn't this true? Look at your life just for today. Think how your mind has controlled you. Think of some incident that happened to you today. Where you have reacted to the mind because the mind told you something. It makes no difference if it were true or not.

As long as you react to the mind, the thoughts, you're making a grave mistake. And as you keep thinking about what I am saying as you keep reflecting on the wall, that you have to get rid of the wall, between the mind and consciousness, you will stop fighting and reacting to life. Just by thinking about this you will not react to person or place or thing any longer, for you will realize that all incidences come from the mind.

Everything comes out of the mind!

All of your conditioning comes out of the mind, all of your belief systems. Everything that has ever existed and that exists right now is a product of the mind. Where else would it come from. The world as it appears. The planets the universe all the things you do at home, all the work that you do, your belief system, it all comes out of the mind, like a dream. You're dreaming the mortal dream. And this world appears to be very real to you. When you believe it to be actually a mirage when you begin to feel it doesn't exist at all by allowing it to go into the consciousness by removing the wall something happens to you, something wonderful, something grand. It's like the light has shone in your heart your heart opens up swallows your body, your past, your karmas, samskaras.

Everything is totally annihilated. Everything totally disappears and you are left as the Self with pure awareness, unbounded space, boundless space.

You have to become boundless space.

When the mind has gone into consciousness you're no longer the body. Remember the body's part of the mind. This body that you speak of every day is part of this mind I'm talking about, part of the imagination, the mind. So when the mind is gone there is no body left. There is only consciousness which is all-pervading omnipresence, pure awareness. Then you feel yourself as being the trees, the mountains, the sky, the planets, others. You begin to feel your oneness with all of life.

This is when you develop a reverence for all of life. You will understand that everything in this universe is You, Everything. It comes from you, it returns to you. You are the one. There is no body else. There is nothing else but the one and you are that!

Think about this, yet you ask, "I still appear as a body" This is what you say in your present state of ignorance. This is what you see where you are coming from now. That you appear as a body. But when you receive a glimpse of awakening, you will know beyond a shadow of a doubt that there is no body. You don't have a body at all. Yet you appear to be doing things. You appear to be the doer. This appears to others.

The enlightened one is never the doer, has no body, does nothing, nothing's ever being done. But paradoxically it appears to others that the enlightened one is doing things just like yourself. This is the reason you have to experience this for yourself, to understand this paradox. Only when you experience this for yourself, will you understand the gist of what I'm talking about. For right now it is just words just a bunch of words. Yet, I can promise you that unalloyed happiness is your very nature. Bliss is your very Self right now! Right now you are this bliss, this unalloyed happiness, this joy, this divine love, you are that right now!

Only you're experiencing something else because you're deeply involved in the mortal dream. It hangs heavy on you. You got to lighten up! Stop taking the world so seriously. Do not take conditions so seriously. Do not take people so seriously. Do not react to person, place or thing. Since where it all begins is in your reaction. You have to learn to catch yourself every moment of the day. Every time you make a mistake and react to something, catch yourself. See yourself doing it and stop!

Think of the wall between consciousness and the mind. You can imagine in your mind the wall breaking down, like the Berlin wall, coming apart in pieces. It's being totally shattered and there is no longer two of you there is no longer the mind and consciousness. The mind and thoughts have gone into the mind of consciousness and you're free. And as you keep practicing this every day things will begin to change for you. You will notice the change very simply happening to you day after day after day.

This is the most important job that you have to do. No thing is more important than this. Make this the number one priority in your life.

What could be more important? What could possibly be more important than finding your Self, knowing your Self, being your Self? What could possibly be more important than this? Yet, most of you become so concerned with the days activities, with what's going on in your personal lives that you forget totally what I'm talking about and you keep turning towards the things of the world, whether it's your health, or lack or limitation of some kind or loneliness, whatever. Those things are all false images. They are not reality whatsoever. And they are only here for a while and they will go. Every thing must change. Even if you look at it in a material way, in the relative way. We know by now that every relative thing in this world must change. The whole world and the universe is never the same.

What this means to you is that your situation will change sooner or later regardless of conditioning. It must change. So what you call suffering comes for a day. What you call human happiness comes for a day. All of your imaginings are only here for a short time and then they go. Even if you do absolutely nothing about it they will change anyway. Everything changes.

So you ask, "Why should I do anything at all? Why should I practice anything?" Due to the fact, if things will change they will change from the relative to the relative, you will keep on experiencing the relative world forever and ever and ever. You will experience good. You will experience bad. You will experience all kinds of things in this relative world. It will change okay but you will have to keep experiencing the changes forever. And when you drop the body, you will appear to be going into another body into the same conditioning, the same situations again and again and again. There will be no end to it! Like dreaming, having one dream after the other, one dream after the other it never ends, unless, you wake up!

And so it is with this. When you awaken there is no longer duality. There's no longer good and bad, sick and healthy, rich and poor, happy and sad. It has all been transcended, totally transcended, completely. You will become one of these rare Sages that was never born, can never die, does not prevail. You will become nothing! Which is the pure Self. This is the reason not too many people are attracted to Advaita Vedanta to non-duality because this is so difficult for most people to comprehend.

Most people are stuck in a spot in time where they go through many relative phenomenon's, good and bad, off and on, and always trying to change bad for good, always trying to remove the bad and hang on to the good. But they are both impostors. You should never try to do this, you're wasting your energy. You should be using your energy to become totally free and liberated, not try to make yourself a millionaire or to heal yourself of every disease known to man, or make yourself famous somehow. All these things will pass. These things come and go. You experience one then the other. You want to become totally free.

Totally, absolutely free and liberated. You want to know that you're all-pervading. There is nothing but the Self which is you, nothing else exists. The Self is absolute reality, self-contained, absolute reality. The Self is bliss, nirvana, I-am. This is what you are right now. This is your true nature, right now! This is reality right now!

Do not give your energy to this world. For the whole world is a cosmic joke, remember. And it will suck your energy out, make you weak, make you start searching for remedies, solutions to your problems. You will go through life after life doing these things. The time is now, there is no other time but now. Now is the time to become totally free and liberated. Awaken, for you were never asleep! Awaken from the mortal dream. Let not another day go by where you react to people, places or things. Quit it! Stop it! Do not react to your own body, your own feelings. Quit it! Stop it! Understand who you really are. Stick with it!

Do not look for a time. Do not consider how long it takes, for most of you know by now there is no time. Time is a relative concept, it has no basis, no foundation. Look at yourself without time. Feel yourself without time. This means there never was a time when you were a human. There never was a time when you were a sinner. There never was a time when you had a past. There never will be a time when there is a future. You are all there is right now! All there ever was, all there will ever be is right where you are right this minute. You are that? It is you!

What do you see? And what do you feel? You must stop feeling sorry for yourself. Do not compare yourself to anyone. Leave the world alone. Leave everybody alone. Leave things alone. Nothing could ever hurt you if you do not resist. If you do not resist the conditions, the conditions cannot hurt you. The condition can only hurt you when you resist it. You are through playing games. You are through trying to become something, trying to get enlightened. Forget about that. It's just another game.

You are imperishable consciousness, right now, the immutable Self. This is your real nature. This is you, rejoice! For you are free!

(short silence)

Feel free to ask questions

SP: It seems like work is something that must be attended to. I have to find a job. I have to chase leads down that could produce work. I get the feeling sometimes when I listen, as I listen to you talk that I would be homeless, that I would be without work, without means.

R: Have the attitude that it is not you that's doing anything. That you are not the doer. If you have to go get a job, your body will get a job and will know what to do by itself. Do not get involved with the actions of the body. Everything will be taken care of by itself. The power that maintains and sustains this universe knows what it is to make you happy and to give you goodness and happiness and love. Therefore when you stand in the heart, when you surrender to the heart, when you meditate on the heart, everything will take care of itself. You will go get the job that you have to get but you'll not be the doer. You'll no longer say I have to get a job because the I would have been transcended, there will be no I left. Yet, your body will get a job and work and you'll have an income. Everything will be done in a beautiful way, much better than you could ever do it yourself.

So don't worry about these things. Simply go into yourself and know who you are, find yourself. Do not believe that you are the I that has to look for a job but focus on your heart. Realize you are consciousness, all-pervading and who ever has to get a job will get a job. Whatever has to be done will be done. Everything will always be taken care of.

SK: Robert, when you were talking about removing the wall, what I heard you saying is to allow thoughts to go back into consciousness. (R: Yes.) Is there anything more to that?

R: What else do you want? (laughter) If all your thoughts go into consciousness and disappear what else could you ask for. It's very simple, no thoughts and your free. When the wall is removed, the thoughts go into consciousness by themselves and you're free! (SK: And the wall is just thinking that there is a separation?) Exactly, the wall is the I. The wall is the I-thought. (SK: Thinking that there is somebody to do something to ???) Yes. (SK: ...thoughts and consciousness.)

SA: Robert, lately I started to do something and then all of a sudden my mind is blank, and I'm like standing there saying, "What was I just starting to do?" And I might stand there for a minute or two before my mind starts... "Oh yeah, this is what I was going to do."

R: You're losing your mind, Howard. (laughter) (SA: I take it that's good?) Do you think it's good? (SA: I'm asking you though?) Never mind what I say, what do you say? (SA: Well you say annihilate the mind so I guess it's good.) I want to know what you think not what I think. (SA: Well I'm trying not to think.) (laughter) That's good. That's all you have to do is not think and you're safe. (SA: I'll let you think for me, you see.) I don't think either. There is no one who thinks what are you going to do now? (laughter)

SF: I mentioned this before but if I spend time thinking a person, place or thing should be different than it is, I'm spinning my wheels. (R: True) Every person, every place and every thing has a role to play and it's not up to me to change it or even think it should be different than it is. (R: Exactly) And that goes for Mother Teresa or Dr. Schweitzer or Adolph Hitler or Charlie Manson. They're all part of the show. (R: You're right) Thank you.

R: So why get caught up in it? (SF: Well, I don't know. (students laugh) Well I had to say something.) If you leave something alone it will disappear. If you give it energy by thinking about it, by pondering it, it becomes stronger. Therefore, leave everything alone and you'll be free. Try to change things or to keep things the way they are, then you will suffer.

SP: Robert, are you advocating more witnessing the mind than inquiry alone?

R: Well we are not really talking about witnessing the mind and we're not talking about inquiry. These are both part of it too at different times. We're talking about removing the wall, which is the I-thought that has been there for centuries. The illusory wall that doesn't exist between consciousness and thoughts. When there is no longer a wall there, then the thoughts disappear by themselves by their own accord. But as long as there is a wall there, they will come up against the wall and bounce back again. And the mind will become stronger and stronger and stronger because it will keep bouncing back again every time it hits the wall. So you have to simply see the wall breaking up in your consciousness. If you want to practice self-inquiry you can. You can inquire "To whom does this wall come? Who sees this wall? Who has to get rid of it?" And you'll realize that the wall doesn't even exist. For you will say, "I see the wall. I have to get rid of this wall." When all the time the I is really the wall itself. So when you realize the I-thought doesn't exist. It's the same as getting rid of the wall. By inquiring "Who Am I?" you're really saying, "Who's responsible for the wall? Where did the wall come from?" You can go both ways. Play with it, see where you get, see what happens. But the wall, another name for the wall is the ego, the I-thought.

I know a lady who used to imagine that there is dynamite blowing up the wall. That she's lighting the fuse of the dynamite and the whole wall is blown to smithereens. Use your imagination to get rid of the wall.

(silence)

Mary do you want to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes, Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Do we have any announcements?

(students announce new transcripts and also a reminder for students of bhandara and that the normal classes on the Monday and Thursday have been moved to cater for this.)

R: Anything else anybody has to say? Or forever hold your peace.

It is therefore time for prashad, the reason you all came. (laughter) We've got some lovely figs that are high in calcium, high in potassium, high in consciousness... (laughter) We have more figs...

SH: They're fig Newtons. (R: Fig Newtons?) Yeah.

R: Made with whole wheat flour, honey and molasses.

(prashad continues) [TOC]

Transcript 200

WHO ARE YOU?

15th November, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to see you once again. Is everybody happy? Some of you don't look too happy. Let's see the smiling face. Some of you still look a little serious. Let's try Dr. Robert's two finger treatment. Take your right index finger, put it in this side of your mouth, and the left index finger in this side of your mouth, and pull.

If you ask the average person in the street, "Who are you?" they will tell you that my name is Fred, or my name is Mary, or my name is Henry, or my name is Joyce, but they have no idea who they really are. The name has been given to you at birth, you are not that person. Who were you before a name was given to you? Who were you before you were born? That's the question. Who are you really?

Well, who are you? Every answer would be wrong. There is no answer. There never was an answer. Yet, you are that power that accommodates life, all of life, people, places, things, hanging in sweet repose on consciousness.

We can say that consciousness is the substratum of all existence. What is consciousness? What is the substratum? It is absolute nothing. It is no thing that you can ever figure out in your brain, in your mind. There's no way to figure this out in your human perception. For your thoughts are always thinking of something. Therefore you can say consciousness has to be this or has to be that. How can consciousness be what your thoughts tell you, since your thoughts are part of the relative world, and thoughts have nothing for you except make you live as a human being?

You have to go way beyond thoughts, way beyond reasoning, way beyond anything and everything you have ever understood, to be consciousness, to understand consciousness. In order to do this, everything you believe must be dropped. Everything you've been led to understand must be transcended. Everything that you can think about has to go. Your ideas of right and wrong, good and bad, up and down, frontwards and sideways, all these things have to be totally transcended, totally removed from your thinking patterns.

After all, what is life, the way it appears? Life is but a bubble in the ocean. Bubbles come into existence, then they fade away, continuously, like waves, they come and they go. But the ocean always remains, and the bubble and the wave is part of the ocean. By themselves they come and go continuously, constantly. Millions and millions of bubbles and waves, come and go every few minutes. They return to the ocean and they come out again and become bubbles. But the ocean always remains the ocean.

So it is with human life. So it is with existence. You appear to be a human being. You appear to be person, place or thing, and you're not. You're only here for a short time, you disappear, come back again, disappear, come back again, disappear.

But what about the ocean? That always remains the same. In the ocean are all kinds of fish, all kinds of living creatures. In consciousness there are all kinds of living creatures, animals, insects, people. Yet these things are only here for a short time, and they go, disappear.

What do we care about all this? Why are we concerned with things like this? What difference does it make? Well, you will find one of these days that happiness, and joy, and love, and peace, are eternity to the part of your being. They're the living truth of yourself. You are not what you appear to be. You are not the person that you think you are. You are beyond this. Yet you appear to be a person. You appear to have experiences in life. You grow up in a certain country, a certain race, a certain religion, and you believe this is you. But this is not you at all. You are beyond that, way beyond that. And when you find out who you are, you will be extremely happy, extremely peaceful, and you'll be a blessing for others.

The only way you can ever help other people is by knowing yourself. The only way you can ever be of service to others, is by knowing yourself. The only way you can give anybody anything, is by knowing yourself. For when you know yourself, you know others. You will find the others, are yourself. There is only one Self. Everything is that Self, everything. Every leaf, every plant, every cloud, everything is the one Self. That one Self is you.

Yet most of you have not experienced this or tasted this. And you cannot accept on blind faith what you haven't experienced or tasted. Consequently, when you find out that something else exists, that is beyond the humanhood, beyond experience, you go searching for it. You go looking for it. But where do you go searching? Within yourself, not out in the world. When you go searching in the world, what do you find? More world, that's all. People go looking for answers in this world. They go looking for special teachers in this world. All they find is more world. The answer is within you, nowhere else. You are the one.

You have everything you need within yourself, to find all the answers of your life and your existence. You have it. It's you. But something stops us from doing this. That something is called the mind. The mind is not really our friend. The mind keeps you earthbound, keeps you attached to person, place or thing. It makes you believe your happiness is right around the corner. Your freedom is in New Jersey. Your liberation is in San Jose. And you go everywhere looking for this, and you're always disappointed.

You may find a couple of answers that seem nice to you. You may find a couple of people who tell you certain things that seem very right on. After a while it goes away, and you're right back where you started from.

You and I know many people who have been searching for many, many years, twenty years, thirty years, forty years, for the answers to life, for reality, yet they're still in the same place they started twenty years ago. They have gone through all kinds of things. They've been to certain places. They met certain people, but they're still the same.

For they've never really investigated themselves. They say they do. They say they've been working on themselves for years, nothing has happened. But have they really been working on themselves? What they've been doing is sort of just thinking about it a little bit, reading a couple of books. But they've never dived deep enough in the Self to find the answers. And this is exactly what you have to do.

You have to dive deep, deep, deep within yourself, deeper than you can ever imagine. And the only way you can do this is by giving up the external world, mentally, not physically. In other words, by not reacting to things. To observe things, watch the world go by, leave it alone. It's neither good nor bad. It has nothing to offer you. Yet at the same time you'll be doing what you have to do, what you came here to do. If you're supposed to work, you will work. If you're not supposed to work, you'll not work. If you're supposed to be married, you'll be married. If you're supposed not to be married, you'll not be married. Everything will happen by itself. Yet you will know within yourself, that this is not you. The situation is not you. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. You are beyond conditioning, beyond situations, beyond experience, beyond everything. Yet you are everything also.

As you become a little more serious about this work, you will stop taking things so seriously in this world. You will begin to know how to leave things alone. You'll be more interested in diving within yourself, to find yourself, to understand yourself, who you are, what you are. But then the mind comes to play again, and the mind grabs you, makes you give this up for a while, makes you start enjoying life, so called, makes you be a part of life again, hands you things, gives you things, you go through many experiences good and bad. Again you forget about the Self, who you are. And most people stay like this until they get old and die.

But there are a few people who will not take no for an answer. There are a few people on this earth, who are only after one thing, and that's liberation. This is foremost in their mind. This is the only thing they think about, day and night, to become free. And what you think about, thinks about you.

So first you use your mind to desire total liberation. When you have a strong desire for liberation, something will tell you the mind has to be destroyed, the mind has to go. What I mean when I say, "The mind has to be destroyed, the mind has to go," I'm referring to the mind has to be left alone, without interference, to observe the mind, to watch the mind, without watching, without observing.

This can be done. For when you say, I am observing the mind, I am watching the mind, the I that you're speaking of is the mind also. So what you're really saying is the mind watching the mind and you get nowhere. Yet there's a way to watch the thoughts and to not watch the thoughts at the same time, to observe the thoughts and not to observe the thoughts at the same time. Just be.

You will find out as you keep doing this, everything begins to change all around you. Yet everything is the same all around you. You see things that other people do not see. You become things that other people can never become. For instance, you become all-pervading. You begin to feel your presence, your essence in the leaves, in the trees, in the sky, in the animals, in the insects. You begin to see that all this is the Self, and I am that. This is when you have total reverence for all of life. Everything becomes God.

Everything becomes consciousness. You're no longer saying, "I, I, me, me, I need this, I want that, I feel this way, I feel that way." You have grown out of this. When you use the term I, only speak with the people. They do not understand what you are talking about, so you use the term I with them. But you yourself know that I does not exist. There is no longer an I to keep you in bondage. The I has given way to omnipresence.

The good thing about all this, is that anybody can become liberated, at any moment. But this is because you are already liberated. If you were not liberated, you would never be able to become liberated. But because you're already liberated, all you're really doing is taking off the stuff that makes you think you're not liberated, dark clouds, the layers and layers of nonsense, garbage, that you covered yourself with all of these years. The thought, "I am important, I am somebody." This is what keeps you in bondage.

The truth is you are nobody. You are nothing, yet you're everything. How can you be nobody and everything? As long as you think you're something or somebody, you're limiting yourself. You make yourself very limited when you think you're something or somebody. When you can be nobody, nothing, then you're everything. You're not one thing.

Notice when I stop talking, how quiet it becomes, in your mind. This is the state I'm referring to, that state in between thoughts, where there is nothing going on, in that second, in that moment, when the mind is total quiet, the thoughts are not moving any longer. This is your true Self, in that moment in between thoughts.

Stay in that moment. Learn to put yourself in that state, whether you are in the market place or you are in a temple, wherever you are, learn to be still. It makes no difference what is going on around you. It makes no difference what other people are doing. You be still. When you are still, then there's peace. When you are still, there's happiness. Can you ever imagine a person who is being happy all the time, for no reason whatsoever. Most of us have been taught that to be happy we have to receive something good. We have to have something nice happen to us to be happy, otherwise we are miserable. Yet the truth is, happiness is your very nature, unalloyed happiness, eternal happiness, forever happiness.

Right now you are that, for right now nothing is happening, and when nothing is happening you are in a state of happiness, a state of peace. But as soon as the mind waves begin to move again, I begins to function. You start to think again, "I need this, I feel this, I am this." Then the mind quiets down again, and the I is no longer active. You feel happy, you're at peace.

Now you realize it is the I that has to go, the I that has to be eliminated, the I that has to be transcended.

Isn't it wonderful to sit there without saying I, without thinking of I, "I am tired, I feel this way, I feel that way?"

Now you can know who you are. Now you can really find yourself. You can understand that you are Brahman now, that you're absolute reality, pure awareness. In the beginning you couldn't do this, for your mind was filled with the day's activities, filled with I, I, I. Now you are at peace. There's no I bothering you, no I telling you anything. You're experiencing your true nature as this time.

So, in your everyday experience, from the moment you get up in the morning, begin to understand this. Catch yourself, catch yourself thinking. It makes no difference what you're thinking about. Good or bad, it's all the same. Understand where the thoughts are coming from that make you think, "I am sick, I feel like I have a headache, I feel happy, I feel sad." You now know that the thoughts are not yours. They belong to I. Not your thoughts. You never had those thoughts. They belong to I. I is the root thought of all your problems. Therefore, to uproot the I will give you total freedom and liberation.

How do you uproot the I? By understanding what I'm talking about right now. Let the I come out of you totally. Allow it to leave you. You no longer need it.

It's the only problem you have. Think about some of the problems that you think you have. Think about some of the situations you're involved in. It is only because you say I. The body cannot say I. I just appears, as if from nowhere. Yet if it didn't come from the body, where did it come from? When I refer to I, I'm referring to the ego, the mind, it's all the same. It's all I, the mind, the ego and I are all one.

The I really didn't come from anywhere. The I is an optical illusion, it doesn't exist. The personal I never existed, and never will exist. You are not that, understand this. You have absolutely nothing to do with the I. Yet you're not your body also. You're not the body. You're not the I. What are you? Find out.

Try to spend much time by yourself. Do not read too much. Do not watch TV too much. Do not get involved with the world too much. Spend time by yourself, where you can jump within yourself, go deep, dive deep within yourself, and find all the answers you're looking for. They're all within you, they've always been there. There's nothing else you have to do. The right practice will come to you when you dive deep within yourself. Whatever practice you have to do, will come to you by itself. You are free now.

It's now time to play "Stump the guru." John would you pass the stumpers.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Often times after satsang I cannot talk so I withdraw and avoid socializing. I am speechless, I am within. Do you really think this is just too much ego?

A: No, why do you think it is ego at all? Accept what is happening with grace. Feel that a power of peace has swept over you that is destroying all of the ego, all of the thoughts that you've had inside you for so long and giving you peace. When something like this is happening be grateful. For you are being transcended and transmuted. Don't think it's ego. Think it's grace. And let it happen leave it alone. Do not fight it, do not interfere with it. Just allow it to unfold as the Self. And then you'll find your Self then you'll be free, happy and liberated. So leave it alone and let it happen. Next case.

Q: This morning during a silent sitting I felt the I on the right side of the chest. But I did not feel self-realized, what gives?

A: If everyone became realized by feeling something on the right side of their chest we'd have a world of enlightened people. Nothing gives. Everything just is. What is it that you're really feeling on the right side of the chest? You don't know. Leave everything alone. Do not come to any conclusion about anything. When your body gives itself up to the self, you will know it definitely. You will be aware of it. But if you have to ask the question, you're not there yet.

So don't fight it. Leave it alone and try to go deeper. Dive deeper within the Self. When you dive deeper within the Self the I goes away. The I transforms itself into the I-am. And then you'll be liberated. But it'll happen by itself. Your job is to just do the work, whatever has to be one. Be happy while you're doing it. Watch yourself going deeper, observe yourself, see what happens. You'll be well taken care of. Mary.

Q: Is every problem that comes to us just a ruse to encourage us to recognize the Self? Or to learn to give up and trust more to let the Self manifest?

A: There are no problems that come to you. What you call a problem is simply the wrong way of looking at things. There are no problems with this universe. What you really call problems is when the world is not going the way that you want it to. When things are not happening the way that you want it to happen it's called a problem. As an example: If you're dying of cancer. There appears to be a problem. But is it really? Since nobody dies, what kind of problem is this? For whom is the problem? It is for the person that believes this is bad. But if you're very healthy you believe it's good. Those are the feelings that have to go. Those are the thoughts that have to go.

Try to remember that your life is like a bubble on the ocean. It's here today and gone tomorrow. Life as it is is meaningless, totally meaningless. Your ego likes to tell you that something important is going on in your life that you're supposed to be somebody important, somebody good, somebody great. It's all a lie. It's all part of the ego. Trying to make you feel good. Accept everything with grace. Allow everything to express itself through you, as you. Do not fight to remove certain conditions from your life. Let them be leave them alone. And become happy, very happy.

People like Rama Krishna, Ramana Maharshi, Christ and others, they were so in tune with life that the sicknesses and disease that came upon them meant absolutely nothing to them. They didn't recognize it or give it any credence. They didn't give it any power, they left it alone.

You are not your body. You have absolutely nothing to do with your body whatsoever. Do not feel sorry for yourself. You are only on this earth for a very short time. While you're here find the truth. Realize your divine nature. Realize who you are. Become totally free. Then you will live forever as eternity, as pure awareness. You are no longer worried about bodies or reincarnation, karma or anything else. They will not be part of you at all. They'll be gone out of you. So learn to leave everything alone, be yourself and watch what happens.

Q: What are some ways the Self can be talked into manifesting into consciousness?

A: You want to talk yourself into it? (laughter) Who wants to talk themselves into it? Think of what you asked. You the ego wants to talk itself into becoming something else. How can you possibly do that? You're not using your voice to talk anybody into anything. You're trying to keep your voice quiet, keep yourself still, keep yourself at peace. There is absolutely nothing to talk anybody into anything. The Self will manifest in its own good time. For you are already that Self. You are already divine harmony, peace and love. This is your nature. What you should do is go out and help the homeless. Have loving kind thoughts for everybody. So that you can help others. Do something constructive with your life. You keep your mind in the clouds, so-to-speak. Give your mind to God and you do not think. Just do the work that you're supposed to do but do not think. Do what you have to do but don't think. Try not...

(break in tape)

Q: Dear Robert, Are there different interpretations of reality by different self-realized beings? If yes how do you perceive this as happening?

A: There is only one reality but there are different paths leading to it. A person may take a bhakti path, a Jnana path. There are many ways to get to the same reality. Reality is only one. Like climbing a mountain, the roads get to the summit. There is one summit. Everybody takes a different path. Therefore the path you're taking, if you're sincere about it, will lead you to the top, the one reality. The reality is only one, never two. There is ??? and there is reality. The reality is peace, reality is your Self. Be that Self.

Q: Robert you said that the mind is destroyed in the Jnani. How does the Jnani function then? Is not memory part of the mind?

A: The Jnani functions very well thank you. There is a pure awareness that is the Jnani. Just like the earth. The earth functions very well. Food grow, apples grow, bananas grow, leaves grow, wheat grows. Everything grows by itself it appears. Everything takes care of itself. There is a power which knows the way. That power functions in the Jnani, as the Jnani. So the mind has turned into something else.

The mind in the Jnani has turned into grace, into love, into wisdom, into joy. The mind in the Jnani always thinks like the average person does but is aware in the moment of the true reality all the time. So you can say, "Consciousness rules the Jnani! The Self rules the Jnani!" As long as the Jnani wears a body it will be taken care of by the Self if anybody has to be taken care of. Find this out for yourself. Go deeper within yourself than you've ever gone before. Discover your real nature and see who takes care of you.

Q: Robert, you spent some time with Nisargadatta Maharaj are his teachings different from Ramana teachings?

A: The only difference between both teachings is that Ramana was a bhakta and also a Jnani. He was a sweeter person. Nisargadatta Maharaj was a very enlightened person but he didn't have the sweetness of Ramana. Maharaj was a very gruff person, street person sort of, who became enlightened. So his rough traits stayed with him, to an extent.

He would scream at people. Smoked cigarettes one after the other. Light hundreds of incense sticks all over the place, in a little attic upstairs, can you imagine the smoke all over the place. If anybody didn't like it he would send them away and say, "Don't come back." And he died of lung cancer. This is all well and good. But he was a great being, great Master, great teacher. That's it.

Announcements?

SM: No I don't have any, except about thanksgiving. (R: Say anything.) Yes we have a bhandara the last Sunday in November and the last Sunday in December and everyones invited, it is vegetarian and we start at 1 o'clock and on that week we will have satsang on Wednesday instead of Thursday, remember that. Is there anything else, Robert? (R: Umm?) Anything else?

(general talk about the organization of the bhandara)

R: Anyone like to say anything else?

It is time for prashad.

We have millefoglie.

SH: Who? (SD: You know millefoglie?) I haven't met him yet. (laughs)

R: We have some figs.

(general prashad talk between students)

Thank you for coming. Remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself, for God dwells in you as you, peace, happiness, joy...

(tape ends) [TOC]

LEAVE THE WORLD ALONE

19th November, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om. Peace, peace. Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It is a pleasure to see you again. It is always good to be with you.

Every once in a while I ask you the question, "Why do you come to satsang?" What is the reason that you come here? What do you want to achieve? What are you looking for? Perhaps some of you ladies come here to meet interesting gentlemen. Some of you fellows come here to meet some ladies. That's okay, if that is what you're looking for. Some of you come here to judge the speaker, to compare him with other speakers, other teachers.

Most of you are aware that in the greater L. A. area, most spiritual people are burnt out, so-to-speak. They've been to so many movements, so many teachers, so many so called gurus. They don't know what to believe, what to accept. Always remember, the true teacher is in your heart. The real teacher is within you. A person who has gone within for many years, has become silent within, will be attracted to the same silence in the without. In other words, they will come to the place that agrees with the within. When you have attained a degree of spiritual knowledge, truth, realization from within, you will meet the Sage or the teacher without. It's the same difference. There's no difference whatsoever. But those of you who shop for teachers, who shop for gurus, who go shopping for spiritual life, will always be disappointed, for you will find some fault wherever you go. And again, the fault that you find, is also within yourself. Everything is within yourself. You've got all the answers. Don't look to me for answers. You've got all the answers yourself, they're within you. I'm only here to advise you that you are free and liberated. That's all I'm doing. I'm here to tell you don't need anything. Whatever you're looking for, you already are, you already have. You are that.

It's amusing and funny to me that so many of us are looking for enlightenment, looking for realization, looking for liberation, looking for peace, when we're already immersed in that. Consciousness is our very nature. We are that. And the interesting thing is, you cannot put down consciousness in any way. There's nothing you can do to it. You cannot taint it. You cannot dishevel it. You cannot burn it. You cannot kill it. It is all-pervading. If it is all-pervading, and you are that, how can you think there's something that's keeping you back from realization? How can you believe there's something somewhere else that's got hold of you, that's keeping you back from seeing yourself, knowing yourself and being yourself?

See there's no room for anything else. The Self pervades all space and time. There's nothing else. So how can you think there is such a thing as sickness, lack, limitation, depression, and these things that some of us go on with believing we have a fight on our hands, something to overcome, that's a joke, funny, ha-ha.

There is no thing that you have to overcome. There is no karma that you have to overcome. There are no samskaras. You're not a sinner. There's absolutely nothing wrong with you. You're perfect just the way you are. You are the Self, the immutable Self, self-contained absolute reality. You have always been this. You are this. And nothing can tarnish this.

Just by understanding what I'm saying will liberate you, totally. You are perfect right now, this moment, just the way you are. There is absolutely nothing you have to do, or become, or read, or seek. You are that now. All you have to do is accept this. Nothing can change this, no matter what you think, no matter what is going on in your mind, what you may think is wrong with your life, what you may think is right with your life. None of that matters. You are freedom, total freedom, total joy, total peace, total love.

Think of a block of ice. Picture a block of ice. You've all seen a block of ice. And you pour a few grains of sand on the ice. What happens? The ice cleans itself, doesn't it? It washes itself clean of the sand. So it is with consciousness. Consciousness always washes away those things that do not belong to it. The superimpositions, the images, the thoughts, the beliefs, are like grains of sand on the ice. Always washing itself free from anything that comes upon it. What I'm trying to say is you cannot affect consciousness. Nothing you can do can affect consciousness or change it in any way. It is your liberation. It is your freedom. It is you.

No matter what your mind tells you, no matter what your mind does to you, no matter how your body appears or what your body is doing, it's a lie. It is not the truth. There is only one truth, and that truth is the absolute reality, what we call God, sat-chit-ananda, pure awareness. That is the one truth, and you are that. It's you.

What have you been doing with your life? What are you thinking about? What are you feeling? There is nothing to let go of. There is nothing to change. For if you have to let go of something or you have to change something, you're saying that something existed in your life that has to be changed, that has to be removed, and that's impossible. Can't you see that it's impossible? There's no room for it. For wherever you look there's all-pervading consciousness. Everywhere. There's no room for anything else. This means you are totally free, totally liberated. Congratulations.

Do you feel liberated? Some of you don't feel liberated. I can look at you and see this. What do you feel? What is there to feel except liberation? What are you afraid of? What could possibly happen to you? You cannot die. You will never die because there is no such thing as death. You cannot suffer, for no one suffers. This may sound strange to some of you, but where would the suffering come from if we knew that a God, penetrating the universe, that is all pervasive and there's nothing else. How can you suffer? Just to see this, to understand this, frees you from suffering.

Even when I say who suffers, or we say the ego suffers, that's also for kindergarten people. There is no ego to suffer. This is something you must remember. Self-inquiry, that we practice, is simply a method to get us to the place where we see no one suffers, there's nothing going on. But some of us do not have to practice self-inquiry, we can go right beyond it, and see there's no suffering, there's no one to suffer, there's no one that's hurtable, and there are no problems. There's nothing to fix. Every time you try to remedy something, what you're saying to yourself is something is wrong, and you have to take some action to fix it up.

But I'm telling you there is no place in this universe, where there can be anything wrong, for consciousness is the only power. So how can there be anything wrong, to begin with, to fix. Things like karma, samskaras, samsara, all these things are just told to you, so we can write books. And you can read these books and drive yourself crazy with them, one after the other, read hundreds of books. They give you names for everything on this earth, that names your suffering, and how to get rid of it. There's no such thing. Why won't you believe me?

There's nothing going on that you have to remedy, or fix, or rectify. All you really have to do is turn within and realize that you are perfect, right now, just the way you are. Do not try to analyze this statement. Do not try to figure it out. Just accept it, and do it, and be it. If you'd only say to yourself, "I am perfect just the way I am, and all is well, and everything is unfolding as it should." That's all you have to do.

But nooooo... You refuse to do that. Instead you want to think about it, try to figure out what it means, how it applies to you, and compare it to the problems that you think you have, and all you do is to perpetuate your misery. You are all gods, not gods in the making. You're all gods right now. All there is of God, whatever was of God, is you, right this moment, this time, this second. You are that, right this moment.

Every time you look at yourself as a human being, you are committing blasphemy, for you are putting yourself down. Who told you you were human to begin with? Where did you ever learn that you are a human being, in school, in churches, your parents taught you? This is a lie that has been perpetuated since the beginning of time, that you're a human being. You're not human. You never were human. And no matter how human you think you are, the time will come when you will see that you're not human, and you will rejoice.

Why not let this happen now, here, tonight. Why not understand your divinity right now and accept it. It's not hard to do. Remember, there's nothing to let go of. You do not have to affirm yourself to death, saying things like, "I let go now of all of my fears, all my sorrows." There are no fears and no sorrows to let go of. There never were any like that. They do not exist. Try to remember there's absolutely nothing to let go of.

There's only to be. In other words, you do not have to redeem yourself. You do not have to pray to an anthropomorphic deity up in the sky somewhere. There's nothing you have to do, for you are already that.

You have always been that, and you're that right now, beautiful, happy, joyous, fulfilled, complete, absolute. It's wonderful.

Feel your freedom. Feel the total freedom that you've missed all these years. Feel it right now. There is no tomorrow, so don't wait until tomorrow to feel you're freedom, feel it right now. Do not wait until things get better in your life. There's no such time. This is it. There is nothing else.

If you cannot do this, or it's too hard for you, then try to keep your mind stayed on God. If your mind is stayed on God, then everything will work itself out in your life. That means if you have decisions to make, things to overcome, if you believe you have problems in your life, whatever you believe, turn from this belief. Do not consider this belief any longer, this situation or condition, and turn to consciousness, to God, the same thing. Allow your mind to rest on God.

The reason I'm bringing this up is because a fellow called me Tuesday night, a young boy. I had been doing some counseling with him. He comes from a foster home. He's been in jail a few times. And one of his counselors got a hold of our transcripts, and spoke to me, and asked me if I could talk to this boy, because he seemed to be spiritually inclined. So I've been seeing him a couple of nights a month, for about three or four months.

He called me Tuesday evening, and he told me he was in jail, if I could bail him out. So I asked him what happened. So he said, "I did what you told me to, I kept my mind on God. This is what happened." He said he went into Lucky's, and filled a cart up with goods, and walked out door with it, and a security guard caught him. So he asked me, "What happened? I kept my mind on God. Why did this happen to me?"

This is true with all of us. We think we can keep our mind on God, and this gives us license to do whatever we want. The truth of the matter is, if you kept your mind on God, and you were really in God, involved in God completely, what we call God, which is absolute reality, which is consciousness, you would never even feel like hurting anybody else. You can't hurt anybody else, it's impossible. It's virtually impossible to hurt another human being if your mind is stayed on God.

When your mind is stayed on God, it means you have surrendered completely, totally, absolutely, to that which is divine, sacred, which is your Self. You have turned within, and given it all up to God. Therefore your life becomes a blessing. If you can do it, truly do this, not make a statement and talk about it, but truly surrender yourself so completely that you have nothing to think about, nothing to say, you're giving yourself away to the universal intelligence, absolutely, then you will find things will work themselves out totally and completely. Every move that you make will be divinely inspired. Every step that you take will be divinely guided. Everything you do will be sacred.

So we're not making an affirmation. We are simply surrendering ourselves to that which is. We're just dropping ourselves completely, totally, to that which is, to that which always was, to the universal intelligence, to the infinite presence, which is and has always been, and will always be, that perfect something, that you are right now, this minute.

Ponder these things. Think of these things when you get up in the morning, before you go to sleep, during the day. Understand that you are not alone. Look at the boundless space all around you. Understand that you are that boundless space, this is you. The body is a false image. It doesn't really exist. It has no background. By no background I mean it never came from anywhere. The body is a bad dream. It therefore is up to you to stop thinking about your body, your affairs, your life, and surrender those thoughts to the Self, which is you, the infinite Self. It will take care of everything for you.

This has to be done by you. You can go through your life trying to overcome problems, trying to make things better for you, trying to hold on to the goodness that you've got already, but things will change as they must. So I say to you stop being human. Stop trying to work things out. Nothing really ever happened to you that you have to work things out.

If something really happened, you'd have a job on your hands trying to work things out. You'd really have a tough job, trying to straighten things out. It would never end. There would always be something for you to straighten out, something to fix. Turn from everything. Turn away to the one presence, to the one power, to one Self, the one which is unaffected by person, place or thing, yet which accommodates everything in itself.

I'm not saying to identify with anything. Do not look for identification with anything. Do not look for anything. Just be. See what I'm trying to say? Leave it alone. Do not try to change a thing. Leave everything alone. Just by leaving everything alone, you will become what you are. You will be aware of your own divinity, by leaving everything alone. The worst thing you could ever do is to try to change bad situations to good situations, for you're playing with the law of cause and effect. Which means sometimes you'll have good situations, sometimes you'll have bad situations. You'll go round and round this way.

Leave everything alone. Leave the world alone. You will find that when you do this, your so called body will take care of itself, it will know what to do, it will do the right thing at the right time, and it will be a blessing to everyone. Stop trying to make things happen for yourself. Stop comparing yourself to others. Live a simple life. The simpler your life can be, the better.

I know some of you think this is impossible, for you're involved in so many things. You are afraid that something will happen if you give up the things you're involved in. I'm not saying to give up anything. It all starts in your mind, not in your activities. Continue to do what you're doing, but in your mind give up the fear, the frustration, the anxiety, that's been motivating you, leading to all of these things, making you do all these things. This is what I'm asking you to give up, the mental state. Then your fears will follow. Your physical life will follow. Everything will take care of itself. When you become peaceful mentally, then the peace that is mental becomes physical, and your whole world will be a world of peace.

Always remember you are like a mirror. A mirror cannot see itself. It sees its reflection. What kind of a reflection are you seeing in your life? Everyone sees something else.

Be still. Stop struggling. Enter the holy shrine of your heart, and there find peace and joy. You have always been perfect and you will always be perfect. There's absolutely nothing you have to delete or add.

Remember why? If you have to delete something from your life, or add something to your life, what you're doing is you're saying, "There is something else going on in this universe besides perfection, so I have to add something to my life or delete something in my life." But I say to you there's only perfection. Only the absolute reality exists. Only sat-chit-ananda is. Pure awareness exists. You are that. You have always been that. You will always be that, no matter what you say, what you do, what you hear. You are totally perfect, totally pure, untainted. This is called the Self. You are the Self, right now, right this minute, right this second. Hearing me say this to you will awaken you, and set you totally free, right now. So be it. Peace.

(silence)

(break in tape. Student's question has been cut in different places)

SP: ...on his road to peace your awareness discovers old childhood sorrow that overwhelms you a little...peace finding...reconciled with your own childhood?

R: You simply watch it like you watch a movie. When you go to a movie you watch the scenes going on. There is a beginning, a middle and an end, then you go home, it's over. So if you're able to watch it without any emotion, it'll become weaker and weaker and weaker until it dissolves itself into nothing.

The problem is with most of us when we feel and see things like this in our mind we react to it. We react to it by feeling emotional, by feeling something. This increases the strength of that picture. But when you just smile and look at it like a passing show, let it all come let it show you whatever it wants to show you, just watch it, observe it, it will go and become weaker and never come back.

SP: This has been troubling me for a long time. I come from a background of doing primal therapy where the belief system is what's therapeutic is to become conscious of old sorrows that we haven't put down when we were children, the experiences that are within us. To feel that we are not experiencing so therefore we are not whole. To help to uncover these and to help feel the old pain and thus liberate them and become more able to get in touch with our inner self. That last sentence was my extension. To me if we could deny that old experience that is part of all of my body or whatever is to deny part of myself which is the opposite of what you're suggesting, all these. (R: I'm not saying to deny it. You're not saying to deny it.) What I'm saying is that I believe that it is needed to be felt, that is what I believe at this moment. And you're saying you don't have to feel what comes up from repression. I'm saying if you do not do that aren't you denying part of yourself?

R: See you're not denying part of yourself because it is not part of yourself. It's a false image. It's not the truth at all, it's false. It never existed to begin with. Because you believe in the body-mind phenomena as being real and being powerful you have to go through all these experiences that you're talking about to make yourself feel better. But then again it will never happen because when you get rid of this something else will pop up.

SP: Okay one more question about that. What about the reality, I can see the reality of, say for example, I'll just use me, my childhood, something negative happened, my mother hit me, my father hit me or whatever causing me intense pain that I didn't feel? Okay that was a reality, that was an experience that I didn't fully experience are you saying that isn't real also?

R: I am saying nothing is real. It is a dream. When you're dreaming at night and you dream you've been misused as a child, you've been harassed, hurt and you're having a dream like this. Your parents were abusing you. And I come into your dream and I tell you, "You're dreaming this is not the truth about you," and you look at me and you laugh and say, "what do you mean I'm dreaming, it's going on it's happening to me." And then you wake up, it never existed, what happened? This life is like that. This life is not reality. It appears to be real but it's not.

SP: Is that why every human being almost in the whole world acts totally contrary to this because of their childhood, if that is an illusion? I'm not being sarcastic. (R: No of course.) But humanity, if you look at humanity it's a horrid expression of what it should be. And it is my belief that it is because we have been brought up without love for the most part, that enables humanity to be and act without love. Are you saying all of that cause is also a dream?

R: You are totally involved in material being. You're totally involved in humanity. You are totally involved in consciousness, the consciousness of reality which you call life, this kind of life. But what I'm saying to you is totally different than what it appears to be. It is not the truth that you're speaking of. You're speaking of man being born, having problems, going through life with all kinds of things prevailing in his life and then dying. But I'm denying this whole thing. This whole picture doesn't exist. This whole picture is a false picture. It's a mirage so-to-speak. It's a false image. And once you transcend it, it gets rid of it. So we transcend the whole thing. Don't deny it transcend it. It never existed and never will exist. It's like hypnosis, you've been hypnotized, into believing this is true. It all appears to be true, it appears to be very real. So it takes a person who has been a long time in spiritual life to be able to see this whole thing as a mirage.

SP: Why does the mirage have to be such a negative mirage? (R: It doesn't.) But I mean, the reality that is the mirage is one of war and hatred and destruction and if it's all a mirage is there not a cause for it to be the negative mirage? Why couldn't it be a nice mirage?

R: There is a nice mirage also. There is nice, there is negative, there is all kinds of things going on in this world. But this whole world is a dream. Everything that is going on is not true. It is like the sky is blue. The sky is not really blue. It is like the water in the mirage in the desert, there is no water in a mirage. Like the snake in the rope. All these things appear real but when you investigate they're not real. So if you really investigate yourself and discover where all these things come from, you will see that they're not real whatsoever. You've imagined them in your mind. You have created them in your mind. I know if you've been listening to something like this for the first time, it's sort of difficult to understand and accept. I'm not asking you to accept anything but to investigate for yourself. It'd be better if you inquire, "To whom do these things come?" Inquire within yourself, "Who feels these things?"

SP: I've been following an Eastern spiritual path in addition to the therapy and my belief system and the work that I do. Trying to put the two together and seeing the obstacles to the path being what I perceive to be peoples blocks and peoples lack of ability to get quiet and stuff like that. There always seem to be that illusion of experience that is energizing it, that is troubling that.

R: This all belongs to the I-thought. (SP: The I-thought?) It all belongs to the I feel this, I feel that. The I-thought must be traced back to the source. And you will find nothing existed like this. It is the I-thought that feels this, isn't it. You always say, "I am this, I feel this." I always appears when I was a child. I was this and I was that, you're always talking about I. (SP: Sure.) Get rid of that I and see where you are then. Remove the I from your consciousness when you're thinking from your mind and see where you are then. All these things have happened to the I and not to you. You've never gone through anything the I has. For what you are doing right now is identifying with the I, that you're the I. I'm saying you're not the I. You never were the I. But as long as you believe in the other things they will keep you back and keep hounding you, it'll never end.

SP: I understand profoundly what you mean by the I and me. But when I was a child, children don't say I am hurting, they just get hurt. Before they're even old enough to have an idea of I. They're causally impacted on by negative treatment or whatever. That, are you saying that whole event is an illusion? Whether I address it as I or not? That doesn't somehow impact on their consciousness?

R: You have the wrong premise to begin with. You're believing that this world is real and all these things are actually happening. So you can talk about this all day long, you'll bring up incidences that happened in human life. I am saying get rid of the idea that life is human. Get rid of the idea that you are a human being to begin with. And all that will disappear. It's when you go to a movie you watch a movie on the screen. The screen is the reality, the images are false. But then, yet when the images are on the screen they seem so real they cover the entire screen and you don't see the screen you forget about the screen. All you see is the images. And the movie is about children suffering going through all kinds of experiences. And you feel this, you cry when you see it, identify with it. You have forgotten it's only because the screen is there that the images can be shown. If there were no screen there wouldn't be any images they would be all distorted.

So it is with human life. The screen of life is consciousness. The images are superimpositions on consciousness. When you discover that you're consciousness not the image, you will be in a different ball game completely. For you will find that you are spirit.

SP: Do you know that to affect peoples emotions when they succeed in doing that? That it helps the situation or whatever? That they actually remove the I and it makes a difference on their emotional life? (R: I speak from experience.)

SF: I picked up a thing, got a new motto. "If there is something to think about it, forget it." (laughter) (R: Good for you Fred.) Another thing, sometimes we're told to seek for something. Seek ye first the kingdom of God. But if we seek for something there is an assumption that it's lost? (R: Exactly.) To be found? In which case if noone was watching they're lost again. The real thing is to realize it isn't a matter of finding it, it's a matter of coming to realize that nothing has ever been lost. (R: True.) In other words our real nature is pure awareness. (R: True.) Another thing, recently you described action in such a way that I was reminded of the Indian concept of nish karma karma. Which is action taken without any real reason. Without expectation and really without any purpose. And the ultimate reality is that all action is nish-karma-karma and similarly there is nothing a part from satsang because satsang is sat-chit-ananda or Brahman or Shiva or whoever, otherwise any word we might put on it, is that assumption fairly accurate?

R: They're very accurate. We're always taking action. (SF: Sir?) We're always taking action. (SF: Yeah.) But who takes the action? (SF: Not the small "i"?) Action and non-action are the same. There is no difference. For action is really non-action and non-action is action. (SF: Thank you.)

SK: Robert, when you were talking about action, I mean non-action, passivity, it also comes to mind the idea of inertia. Which is not a very good state, spiritually as opposed to being just vacant. When you sit in the silence for you there maybe a sense of being whole. Whole-ness for us or for me there is a lot of vacancy where I don't feel anything.

R: This happens in the beginning stages. You begin to feel vacant. Then you should inquire to yourself, "Who feels vacant? To whom does this feeling come? Who is feeling this?" Then you will be still, you'll be quiet. And if it happens again you ask yourself again. As you keep doing this the day will come when it doesn't happen any longer. You'll inquire, "To whom does this feeling come? Who feels vacant? I do. Who am I?" And you keep still. To the extent that you keep still, to that extent does reality ensue. And that feeling will disappear, the vacant feeling will go away. (SK: What is the antitheses of the vacancy? What replaces the vacancy?) The vacancy never existed. (SK: Well the vacancy is a kind of inertia.) The vacancy that is felt by you, is part of the mind. But didn't exist by itself. You're giving it birth by thinking of vacancy. So when you keep still it will just dispose of itself because it never existed. (SK: So stillness is not the same as vacancy?) No. Who says you are feeling vacant? How do you know you're feeling vacant? (SK: Well I identify the feeling, that is the word that comes to mind.) There is no such thing as being vacant. Whatever state that you are in you're never vacant. You're never really vacant. You're in a state of emptiness where nothing is happening. That is the state prior to realization actually. (SK: Well is stillness a state where nothing is happening?) Stillness, when you're totally still there is no thing happening. (SK: But yet it's different from vacancy?) Very different. There is noone to feel vacant. There is no such thing as vacancy. Is there any vacancy in this universe? There is no vacancy, so why should there be vacancy in your head. A lot of people have vacant heads. (laughter) Remember you are a microcosm in the macrocosm. You are a replica of this entire universe. And this entire universe has power and energy. (SK: Well then vacancy there is no energy or power.) Exactly, so there is no vacancy. (SK: But when people feel vacant or they feel powerless or they feel isolated?) It's a state of mind. Inquire, "To whom does it come?" It belongs to the I-thought. It is not reality. It's a false image. Find out who you are and it will disappear.

SR: Robert, if everything is consciousness and everything is perfect... (R: I hear a voice over my shoulder.) (laughter) (SH: George?) (R: Is that George, I thought that God was speaking to me. (laughter) Go on George.)

SR: If everything is consciousness, how can there be a dream? How can there be unawareness if everything is awareness?

R: For whom is the dream? It's for the person who believes that there is consciousness in the dream and the dream in the consciousness. The person who feels the dream as the problem. So how can there be a dream? There is no dream. There never was a dream. (SR: If all is consciousness how can one see limitation?) One cannot see limitation. (SR: How can one be aware of limitation if all is perfectness?) The one who is aware of limitation doesn't exist. (SR: How can one that doesn't exist be aware of its existence?) It's not, it doesn't. The one that doesn't exist is not aware of anything except the self, the self exists as everything. The person you're speaking of is the mind. It is the mind that is aware of all these things that you are referring to. (SR: If everything is consciousness how can mind exist?) Mind doesn't exist. (SR: How can I be so creative, as to experience mind if it doesn't even exist?) You are not the creative person who is experiencing mind that doesn't exist.

SR: If mind doesn't exist aren't there a bunch of geniuses that are able to experience mind when it doesn't even exist?

R: There are a bunch of geniuses doing what they're supposed to be doing on this earth like everybody else is doing. There are people suffering, there are people creating, that is all part of maya, the grand illusion. We are to get beyond this. (SR: How can maya exist if all is consciousness?) Maya exists for words to be spoken to explain it. Otherwise there would be just plain silence. Maya never existed. It doesn't exist. The self which you speak of doesn't exist. Limitation doesn't exist. Liberation doesn't exist. Bondage doesn't exist. All these things are just words, words, words. (SR: If all is silence, how can there be words?) Because the silence makes the words seem like words. It's all a dream. The words are a dream, everything is a dream. How I talk like this is a dream, it appears to be real but it's not. (SR: How can there be appearances if all is reality?) There are no appearances. What you are seeking for an experience of an appearance, they have an appearance but I can assure you that the appearance doesn't exist. There never was an appearance. There is absolute void! Absolute reality and consciousness. Pure awareness. Which is absolutely nothing. So nothing exists and you are that. Everything else comes out of your mind that doesn't exist. When you realize that the mind doesn't exist all this will stop.

SY: Robert, do you mean when you say that the mind doesn't exist that it doesn't have any existence by itself. But it still comes out of consciousness. The consciousness is the only thing that exists. Is that right?

R: In a way. What you call consciousness is all-pervading, the only power that is. And everything that appears doesn't really come out of consciousness. Consciousness is self-contained, absolute reality. It knows itself as consciousness and nothing else. So everything else is like an illusion. Like hypnosis, like you've been hypnotized to believing its real. It's universal hypnosis. It looks real, it seems real, it appears real. But when you investigate it thoroughly you'll see it's all false. It never existed to begin with. Consciousness just is, it's a power by itself.

To explain it in a way to make people understand sometimes we say, "Everything comes out of consciousness." Because people expect it to come out of somewhere. But in the ultimate reality, there is nowhere for it to come out of. For it never existed to begin with. How can something come out of something that is all-pervading? In other words there is no room for it to come out of anywhere. If what we call consciousness is everywhere present, omnipresent, all-pervading, where would there be room for anything else to come out of. There is just no room for it. Consciousness can only exist as itself. And as we go further into it we find that there is no consciousness at all either.

SH: How does the hypnosis come about at all? It actually doesn't? (R: Exactly, you've got it.) (laughter) Thank you. I thank myself. (laughter)

R: See to some of us this appears sort of funny. Because we have to feel this in our finite minds. And the finite mind cannot go further than where it goes. It can never understand the infinite. When we get into the infinite realm of things there are no words to explain this properly. Because we're trying to reason with our finite minds. And again the finite mind is very very limited. This is why I can say this to you that nothing else exists but the Self, but the Self doesn't exist either. Yet with our finite mind we cannot comprehend this whatsoever. It sounds stupid, it sounds foolish, it sounds crazy. Yet this is the ultimate truth. Nothing exists. Yet the nothing is also bliss. Divine harmony.

As we unfold on this path we find goodness coming to us from all directions. We find peace of mind. And then we transcend the body and the affairs and world and everything else we're absolutely free. This is why when you think of Advaita Vedanta the path of non-duality, it is a path for mature souls, not for everybody in this world. You cannot take the average person in the street and bring him into a class like this and make him understand one iota of what is going on. It's impossible, they cannot understand it, they cannot comprehend it.

You have had to be in spiritual life for quite a few years, quite a few centuries, quite a few lifetimes perhaps to try to forward this kind of teaching, and become totally free and liberated from it. But I can assure you there are liberated beings who have become totally liberated and free and you are that yourself.

So don't bog yourself down with all kinds of thoughts and opinions and ideas that are worldly because these worldly things will never end. They go on and on and on, when you get rid of one thing something else pops up. Go to the source and become totally free.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of the book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. It is now time for prashad.

Oh, we have some announcements.

SM: Amelio has finished the book but it isn't, this isn't the original? (SA: Sample) It's a supplement, yes, there is a picture supposed to be on it and all. These are all the 1990 transcripts of Robert's put into book form and if you would like to order the book, I believe see Amelio. These will be out next Wednesday. And put the order in to Amelio and they are selling for twenty dollars. They are beautiful. There is everything, everything you need to know. (laughter and comments) There is only fifty copies being put out right now and quiet a few of those are already gone.

R: Tell them about the bhandara...

SM: Oh yes, I'm sorry, yes we're having a bhandara on Sunday. It's the last Sunday of the month and everyone is invited. And also we won't have satsang on Thursday we'll have it in Wednesday. But the bhandara of course is on that Sunday and it starts at 1 o'clock and it's vegetarian and please bring a dish if you will please. And we're also having a bhandara the last Sunday of December too.

Andy: If anybody plays music or knows any people that are musicians and they would like to perform at the bhandara, please talk to me. My name is Andy.

SM: And Sue has a slip of paper on the table there for you to sign up for what dishes you may bring so we don't get all salads or all pastas or... so you can see Sue about that later if you like. Were you saying something Howard?

ST: Well I just wanted to remind people if anybody that may be interested in living in an Ashram talk to me after the show.

R: Remember this class will be here again next Wednesday not Thursday. So don't come on Thursday it's Wednesday. Now it's time for prashad. The real reason why you came here. Tony Lightfoot brought this but he was very sick he had to leave so he couldn't get any. We have some ginger snaps. Have you ever been snapped by a ginger? (laughter) Wheat free cookies. Dark chocolate raspberry stick...

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

WE ARE HERE TO KNOW NOTHING

22nd November, 1992

Robert: Shanti, shanti, shanti, om peace. Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon) If you came here to listen to a lecture or a sermon you came to the wrong place. If you came here to listen to words of wisdom you came to the wrong place. If you came here to listen to total ignorance you came to the right place. For what I have to share with you is total ignorance, not wisdom.

Wisdom presupposes that there is something to learn, there is something to understand, there is something to attain. Ignorance is, you know nothing. We're here to know nothing. Not to know something. Anybody can know something.

We're all filled with somethings. We're filled with preconceived ideas, with dogmas. All kinds of garbage since we were children. We do not want to add anything onto this. It will just make us greater idiots. We want to unlearn. To empty the garbage pail so-to-speak of all our beliefs, all of our concepts. All these things that tell you are a human being and that you have a goal to achieve. All of these things must go. What will remain?

Pure consciousness, the Self, pure awareness, boundless space, the ultimate reality, which really has no name. Again these are just words.

Many of you have been listening to words since you were children. Words from politicians, from teachers, from priests, from rabbi's. What has it done for you? Where are you now? Perhaps it has built up you ego. Make you feel important, you have a good position in life. Fighting for your rights, fighting for survival. Trying to make it in this world. To what avail? Where will it all lead you? Before you know it you will be six feet under then who cares?

The whole idea of spiritual life is to awaken now to your own reality. Not wait until you die and go to heaven or to try to find some secret works that will make you feel better. Now is the only time, there is no other time. This moment. You're either there or you're not. If you're not you're nowhere and if you're there you're nowhere. You're always nowhere because there is nowhere to go. You're looking to go somewhere. This is what brings misery and unhappiness. When you're looking to become something to be somebody, to be somewhere. But if you're nobody, nowhere, then you are the eternal mystery itself.

As we begin to discover Advaita Vedanta, spiritual life, non-duality. We begin to learn that we have to identify with the source and disown the world. This is sort of a mistake, this is erroneous. This is not really true. Many people involved in non-duality principles, non-duality teachings believe they have to not react to the world, the world is maya, the world is an illusion and identify with the source, consciousness. Yet the reality is, who is identifying with the source? In truth we do not identify with anything. We do not identify or react to this world yet we do not identify with the source or with consciousness or with God or with anything else. For you're using the same mind to do both, don't you see?

The whole idea of a truth teaching like this is to transcend the mind, totally absolutely and completely. For when the mind is transcended real unalloyed happiness will be yours. Peace that you never dreamed of. Bliss and joy that you never knew existed. These are yours when there is no identification.

When you try to identify with the source of life, what you may call God or the absolute reality you're making a grave mistake. For again it is the mind that is doing all of this. The mind says I'm going to identify with God. I'm going to meditate, I'm going to do yoga, or I'm going to do pranayama. I'm going to do mantras. I'm going to do this, I'm going to do that. I'm going to practice kundalini.

Who does all this? Where does it come from? It's all from the mind.

So why not go for the gusto in the beginning. Why not get rid of the mind. Forget about everything else. All these practices are really to no avail. You and I know people who have been meditating for thirty, forty years, practicing tantric yoga, practicing kundalini, practicing all kinds of things and they're still all screwed up. They're searching and searching and searching, becoming efficient in their practices, to what avail? The whole idea is to remove all of these things from the mind. To cause the mind to become still and empty then everything takes care of itself.

So the teaching is to become still. Not to think. Not to think about God. What do you know about God? Only what people have told you. Have you had an experience of your own? If you had an experience of your own you would realize that there is no God. It's a concept. To whom do you pray? Those of you who pray. Where's this God that you're praying to? Up in the sky? Where does this God live? Rather what you should be doing is asking yourself, "Who am I. Where did I come from?" What you should really think is, "Where did 'I' come from?" You're not speaking of yourself you're speaking of "I." "Where did 'I' come from? The I-thought. Where did the I-thought come from?" That is what you should work with. This is what you should do.

Everything in this world is attached to the I-thought. I am something, I am nothing. I am good, I am bad. I am happy, I am sad. It is all the I-thought. If you remove the I-thought what will be left? Reality. So your job is to remove the I-thought. You do this by becoming still, absolutely still, quiet. You stop arguing. You stop trying to prove points. You stop trying to get anywhere. For there is nowhere to get, there is nothing to prove, there is nothing to achieve. You are already that, you've always been that.

You are nothing else but that, but when the I comes into play it makes you believe you're something else. It makes you believe you're important, you're somebody special. When in truth you're really dust in the wind, here today and gone tomorrow. We stick up for our rights doing all these silly things for what avail? Where does it lead us? Where does it get us?

True spiritual life begins with you, not with anything else outside of you, but with you. It's all within you. The only thing you know for sure is you exist. You know that you exist there is no doubt about this. Everything you're not sure about. So you start with yourself. You inquire within yourself, "Who am I?" Again you're asking, "Where did the I come from?" This is what, "Who am I?" means, what is the source of the I? "From where did it arrive." As you inquire this way a profound peace comes over you and you go deeper and deeper within the Self. Until reality appears. You become happy you become peaceful, you become still. Things no longer disturb you.

When thoughts come up you inquire, "To who do they come?" As I'm speaking to some of you thoughts are coming to your mind. You're thinking of certain things. This is the only problem you've got you're thinking. You're allowing your mind that has been conditioned for so many years to tell you what's right, what's wrong, what's good, what's bad. You're allowing your mind to think. Your mind is in control. Whether you like it or not your mind is in control. All of your beliefs shape your universe the way it appears to you today.

The universe in which you live has no existence of its own. It doesn't exist by itself. You give it existence. It is you that has created this whole universe. It has come out of your concepts, your beliefs, your ideas. And now you're living in a universe of your own creation. You have done this to yourself.

If you do not like what you see do not try to change things externally you cannot do this. If you try to change things externally you will only suffer in the end for the external world is a creation of you. The world is a replica of yourself. The world is always in a state of flux, always changing, changing, changing. It changes into your beliefs. The world keeps changing into what you think it is. You are a very creative individual. Look what you've accomplished. Man's inhumanity to man, wars, nonsense going on in this world and also beautiful things. Beautiful trees, mountains, rivers, lakes, oceans. But never forget you have created all this it comes out of you. Where else would it come from? Do you think there is some deity up in the sky that has created all this for you? Some sort of God that made all of this? Where does this God come from except your own mind. Awaken and be free!

This world is the same as a dream. It's no different. If you think it's impossible to be a dream you take your dreams for granted. But think what happening when you go to sleep and you dream at night. You live in this world while you're dreaming of some place else. And in that dream you're having all kinds of experiences, good and bad. You can have a dream that you're a little girl, you grow up and get married you have children, your parents die they get old. There is a war, there is a famine, there is a hurricane. All sorts of things happen in your dream. Yet if I came into your dream and told you, you were dreaming you would tell me I'm crazy, you wouldn't believe me. If I told you not to react to this world. Not to react to conditions, not to react to person, place or thing in the dream you would not listen to me. You would even pinch me and say, "See Robert you said ow I pinched you, so how can this be a dream?" Yet you don't realize it's a dream pinch. It's all coming out of this dream. No matter how horrible the dream is you'll wake up and it's gone and your at peace.

And so it is with this world. This world is your dream. It may appear real. Everything appears real, so does the dream when you're dreaming, doesn't that appear real? You never knew you were dreaming until you wake up. And so, as we practice self-inquiry, as we learn to be still one day we will awaken. And we will find that we are eternal bliss, eternal peace, eternal happiness. It's all been a dream. Yet you have to come to this conclusion yourself. Why should you believe what I'm saying? You shouldn't believe a word I'm saying. Why should you accept what I'm telling you? You shouldn't. You have to find out for yourself. You've got to prove it to yourself and you can only do this by awakening. Not tomorrow, not next week but right this moment to awaken. And you awaken by not identifying with anything, not with the world, not with a God, not with the Self. You awaken by becoming totally still and quiet in the mind. And as you become still the mind becomes weaker and weaker and weaker until it's totally transcended and then you are home free.

You should start practicing in the morning when you get out of bed. The morning is the best time to start as soon as you awaken. Become aware of yourself. Become aware of your environment. And question yourself, "Who sees this? Who feels this? I do." This is a clue. Remember every time you say, "I," you're not referring to yourself. I is separate from you. I is a trouble maker. It is I that makes you do the things that you do. Therefore when you say, "I do," don't believe that this I is you. Yet you do not know where the I came from so you inquire again, "Then who am I? Who is this I that thinks these thoughts? Sees this world as objects? Where did this I come from?" And you keep still. You never answer that question. Due to the fact if you answer the question it is the mind that's answering. The same mind that asks the question is the same mind answers the question. So it doesn't do you any good to answer the question. When the questions ??? you will be full of concepts. The answer will be full of concepts, preconceived ideas. You become still and wait.

Soon other thoughts will come to you. Thoughts that you're hungry, you have to get dressed, you have to hurry, you have to do this, you have to do that. Again you inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me." Again, "I think them." You're always getting back to that I. Then you realize that the I is not you and you then inquire, "Where did it come from? I say I all day long. Where did this I come from? What's its source?" Remember you're not identifying with the source of I. You're not identifying with anything. You're simply inquiring, "Where did the I come from?" and you begin to trace the I back to the heart, the spiritual heart on the right side of the chest about two to three digits to the center. You trace the I back to the heart center. As you do this you will find that you're becoming happier and happier again. More peaceful and more relaxed. You're taking control of your life. Everything becomes better and you feel wonderful. Just by practicing this type of teaching.

It's up to you. You can walk out of here this morning and say, "That was an interesting lesson, interesting teaching," or you can say, "that teaching is a bunch of crap, nonsense." Yet whatever you say you still have to live with yourself. You still have to confront yourself. You're not getting away from the fact that you're getting older and older. You don't know when you're going to drop your body, tomorrow, next week. You may have a heart attack anything may happen to you. So to pursue the material world is ignorance.

This doesn't mean that you should live in a cave. Give up your family or your friends and go to the jungle or some place in India, on the contrary. Everything I'm referring to is done mentally. It is all accomplished mentally.

What you call your body will take care of itself. It knows what to do and how to do it. As a matter of fact if you get yourself out of the way the body will achieve much more freedom, much more happiness than you can ever have while you're thinking. Do not concern yourself with the body. Leave the body alone. It's hard to understand how you can leave the body alone and it will take of itself. All these years you think you've been taking care of it. But look at nature. Look at the leaves on the tree, grass, the food that grows, there is a power that takes care of everything in this universe. The same power that takes care of everything takes care of what you call your body. It will lead you to the right path. It will guide you to the right place you're supposed to be. It takes care of you. But this only happens when you surrender your body, your ego, everything to the Self. The way you surrender is by not reacting to life. Not reacting to person, place or thing. When you stop reacting that is surrender. And the power that knows the way will take care of your body. But you are not your body. You have absolutely nothing to do with your body. You are that consciousness, that joy, that happiness, that peace, that bliss. This is your real nature. You are sat-chit-ananda, Brahman, the absolute reality, this is you.

You have never been a frail human being. Awaken to your true Self. Come on awaken to your true Self right now. Remove the concept that you've got problems and there is something wrong someplace. You live in a universe of joy, all-pervading joy and you are that. So all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. You are not a sinner. Know this truth. Awaken to this truth. Be your Self. Rejoice, you are free. Peace.

It is now time to play stump the guru. We have a basket of questions. Why don't we pass it around and we put some questions in there? Let me see what we can do to stump the guru.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: If consciousness is everywhere how can it enliven a human body now and how can a human body die and disintegrate because of no consciousness energy later, if consciousness is always everywhere?

A: You're getting confused with both parties. You're getting confused with consciousness and human beings. They're both different categories. The human body does not exist at all. It's an illusion, hallucination. There is no such thing as a human being. It's a mirage. It's hypnosis.

I know this sounds sort of strange to some of you but it's the ultimate truth. You do not exist the way you appear to be. You have never existed and you will never exist. You're just not here. As strange as it may sound, it's true. Yet you're hallucinating and you see bodies and you see worlds and you see all kinds of things. I can assure you they do not exist. What we call consciousness is the reality. It is self-contained absolute awareness that exists by itself without any needs, without any space or time it just is. When you're speaking of consciousness you are speaking of your true nature this is what you are. You are the absolute reality this is your real Self. But yet we're looking at ourselves as human beings, as people, places and things which we're not! You therefore will become very confused when you try to put them both together.

When you go to sleep at night, when you're in deep sleep, do you exist then? Who exists? As far as you're concerned there is no universe, there is no people because you're gone out of it, totally unconscious. But when you wake up the world appears again. It appears out of your own mind. But you don't exist as a person in reality. Just as the water in the mirage is an hallucination and again if you see a mirage you think it's water, when you grab it, you grab sand, it doesn't exist.

Just as the sky is blue. It appears blue but if you go into the atmosphere there is no sky, there is no blue. It's an hallucination, optical illusion. We think all these things are true, real. Yet they are all part of the false imagination. So we bypass the body by not thinking about it and not giving it any credit. We leave it alone. Instead we try to make the mind still. By not identifying with person, place or thing. We keep the mind steady, quiet. It becomes weaker and weaker it will disappear and when the body disappears your true Self will come into play. But don't confuse both worlds. Next question.

Q: Lately I am being meditated by an energy flowing in and through me. It feels right like maybe this is how life should be? How does it sound to you? Is this the way life should be?

A: Sounds great. (laughter) If it's helping you, it makes you feel better. It makes you more peaceful, more blissful by all means follow it through. Try to lose yourself totally and completely in consciousness. If your body is improving let it improve. But always realize that I-am not the body. I-am not the doer and let what happens, happen. But by all means if this is helping you continue doing it. Next.

Q: The other day one of your disciples talked to me about your limitations as he saw it. I listened, enjoyed hearing different ideas and opinions. The next day I noticed I, who had felt very close to you and this path, felt like quitting, not looking for another teacher just quitting. I was shocked at how easily doubt or thinking of dropping this devotee attitude and attendance at satsang could come to me. Can you explain why I so easily and quickly thought of quitting and giving up satsang attendance?

A: You should have doubt. You should investigate. You should never accept anything blindly at all. You shouldn't believe a word I say. Investigate yourself. The doubt is in you. It has nothing to do with me. You're doubting yourself, you're doubting your existence. As you see yourself as a divine being as you begin to see yourself as a higher spiritual being, being omnipresent and all-persuasive then you'll see me like that too.

Remember a mirror cannot see itself but sees its reflection wherever it looks. Therefore you're seeing yourself wherever you look. So if you see doubt, if you see apprehension, if you see something is wrong it's coming out of you. You are that. Whatever you see you have created. After all there is nothing else but yourself. I'm not any different than you. I am your very essence, your very Self. When you doubt, you doubt yourself. But do not look at me as something important. Look at me as your Self. For there is only one Self and that one Self is all-pervading. That's all that exists. There is not me and you. There is only the one. When you become happy in the one. When you can become peaceful in that one, you become joyful in the one then you'll see me as the one. For you are that.

Q: Since you're identified with Self what causes your body to hang on even in appearance?

A: Who sees this? Who asked the question? Forget about hanging on. Forget about appearances. Go deep within yourself and find out who you are then see who is hanging on. Forget about all these things. Investigate yourself it's always yourself. Everything comes out of yourself. As far as I'm concerned I'm not hanging on to anything. There is nothing happening here. But you see something happening. Who is the seer? Who sees this? Find out. Next.

Q: (starts abruptly) ...to God and their different gurus for many years. Both of their gurus have died for some years now. Because they want to spend time with me and I do value them, I invited each discreetly to meet and experience you separately. One has openly rejected meeting you and rejected me for meeting another guru. The other ignored my invitation and merely continues to invite me to his functions. Why do both who have lost their human form guru ignore or refuse to even experience or meet one who means so much to me? A friend they revere and have highly respected for years. I only gave the invitation to each of them, time and in a very respectful manner.

A: What a problem. Life's a bitch and then you die. What is all this about gurus and about meetings or... this is not a social event. Do not try to make your friends discern what you want to happen. All of the ideas that you're speaking of is in your mind they're your ideas. You think your friends have to meet me because you're coming here? Leave your friends do what they want to do. Bless them and let them go. You do what you're supposed to do and let them do what they're supposed to do. You don't hate or change anybody one iota. You're not here to try to convince anybody to do anything. As the old saying goes, "When the student is ready the teacher will appear." Everybody belongs wherever they belong. Stop pushing, stop fighting, stop trying to change things. Keep your life simple. Don't make a big issue of these things. Everybody has their place. All is well. There are no mistakes. Everything is all right. Leave it like that.

Q: Was Christ a Jnani or a yogi? Can a Jnani heal people like he did?

A: Never mind Christ. Who are you? Where did you come from? What are you all about? Leave Christ alone. Leave the healing alone. Understand who you are. Try to find yourself then you'll understand Christ. By understanding Christ but not understanding your Self will be folly. You'll never have the right answer. But by understanding your Self you will understand what Christ is all about. It always goes back to you. You are the one. Work within yourself. Ask yourself, "To whom do all these thoughts come? Where do all these mind boggling thoughts come, these opinions, these questions? To whom do they come? Who is thinking them? What is their source?" Go back within yourself. Inquire within yourself. Find out for your Self. It makes no difference what I say. It's all up to you. You are the one. Dive deep within yourself and everything will be revealed to you.

Q: Can you explain what happens when a non-Jnani helps a Jnani or does anything to serve the Jnani in some manner? How is the life of the non-Jnani affected?

A: You're speaking of the guru-disciple relationship, I guess. There are certain people perhaps from previous incarnations who were put here to be of service to spiritual teachers. And in that way they themselves become enlightened and become totally free. There are certain people who are here who are not supposed to do anything like this. Everybody is different. Every situation is different. There is a place and a time for everything.

Ask yourself, "What am I supposed to do in this life, in this incarnation. What is my duty? Where do I belong?" And you will find out and you will realize what you're supposed to do, where you're supposed to be. But leave everything alone until you're moved to do something. You will be moved by the power that knows the way then you'll do the right thing but do not force yourself to do things that you are not sure of. Do not be of service to a spiritual teacher because it says so in books that this is what you're supposed to do, on the contrary. Do what your heart tells you. Listen to your heart and you will never make a mistake. Be free within your Self. Know yourself. Worship your Self. Love your Self. Bow to your Self. For God dwells in you as you. You are the one. And if you do this then you will know what to do in every other situation.

Q: Can you tell me what is creativity in doing a certain project or in being very imaginative? Also what is talent to be able to do certain skills. Where does that talent come from? So I am asking you what is (and we have three things) Creativity, Imagination, talent and where do they come from? Thank you, wow. (laughter)

A: That is where they come from, wow! (students laugh) All of these things come out of the mind. All creativity, talent, everything comes out of the mind. Where would it come from? Out of your own mind. The mind creates all of these things for you. But are you the mind that is the question? Is the mind really you? All the creativity that happens to you will one day have to cease. You will be too old and feeble to work anymore to be creative. You'll have alzheimer's disease, you become senile. Fall apart at the seams. So what will happen to all your creativity then? It'll be gone.

Therefore the smart person tries to understand where all of this came from. "Who am I?" they ask themselves. "Who is this person that needs all this talent, this creativity?"

Where did I come from and where did those ideas come from?" As you begin to find yourself what you call creativity will take place by itself. It will all happen by itself. You see you came here for a certain purpose to this earth. Before you took on a body you already knew what you were supposed to do here. So you're here for a certain purpose, everything is preordained. Everything. You think you're creative and you think you're doing something new, it's all preordained.

For instance if you're a musician before you came into this body you already knew you were going to practice music and become a great musician. If you're an artist, the same thing, it's all been preordained, prejudged, preconditioned and you're here now playing the part. That is all you're doing you're playing a part. It's all a game. Your real job is to become free of the whole thing. You become totally free, totally liberated.

So find out the truth about yourself by inquiring, "Who am I? Where did I come from? What is my source?" and then you will see what happens. You will be pleasantly surprised how your creativity in here takes place by not thinking about these things. By diving in yourself and by finding out who you are. Do this and see.

Q: In his book, "The play of consciousness," the Swami Muktananda says, "if one has not received the gurus grace the true nature of the universe will not be revealed." Does this mean that shaktipat by a licensed guru is required for spiritual illumination?

R: By a licensed guru? (laughter) (SI: And if so can we see your license?) (laughter)

A: I have my certificate of enlightenment. (laughter) Shaktipat is kundalini energy that has become active in a person. And you go through all these kinds of strange positions and postures, it is nice to watch, but unnecessary. Do we really need this? One of our people who come here by the name of Jonas has shaktipat, all the time he sits down and listens to what is going on. He goes through all kinds of hatha yoga experiences and bangs his head against the floor and does all kinds of things, turns black and blue. To what avail? What does this really do for you? It's all mental. It all comes from the mind.

Remember kundalini, shaktipat, pranayama, mantras, japa all of these things are out of the mind. It is the mind that creates all these conditions and these things too. So if you go into the mind and control your mind and inquire, "To whom does the mind come? What is the source of the mind?" You will find that you transcend everything. You go beyond everything. It's up to you. If you want to play games with yourself or go right to the top then graduate by becoming free. Always remember that it is the mind that creates everything, every condition, every circumstance, everything is created by the mind. Your job is to transcend the mind and become totally free and liberated. It's so simple, it's not difficult. Even if you enjoy playing all of these games it's your privilege to do so. But it doesn't bring enlightenment. Enlightenment only comes when you have transcended everything in this world, in this universe. When the I has been sublimated. When the I is gone you are totally free. (pause) Mary.

Q: Robert, a Jnani has transcended the body-mind. You said that there is no mind but the body is still here. Any comment?

A: The body appears to be still here. As I mentioned before it's an optical illusion, it's an appearance, like the snake in the rope. In the twilight you see a rope that's coiled up and you think it's a snake and you become very fearful. Then you find out it's only a rope. So it is with this world. This world is like the snake. It appears real you become frightened. You do all sorts of things to protect yourself. Yet there never was a snake, there never was a world, there never was a body. Find out for yourself. Dive deep within yourself and become free.

Q: Robert when Ramana had his spontaneous awakening he felt an urge to go into seclusion at Arunachala for years. Did you experience something similar when you had your awakening?

A: Well the difference is my awakening was in the Bronx in New York, a little different than Arunachala. But I had nothing in common with my friends any longer. Had nothing in common with my family. Everything changed. So I left home at a very young age and travelled to India and left New York and never came back again. But it's the same thing. There's no difference. (pause) Mary.

Q: Robert last night while asleep in the middle of a dream it seemed like I had woke up but everything was brighter and more vivid and I felt more alive than in regular consciousness. My daughter walked into the room and she was eight years old. I said to myself, "This is a dream because in regular consciousness she is twenty-four years old." When I woke up in the morning I felt overwhelmed. Could you please comment?

A: It's a dream. Just like this world is a dream. There is nothing particular important in this dream. You are simply dreaming about your daughter being eight years old. There is no significance to this. It's just like in your life right now you have an experience and this is a dream after the experience. It's a worldly experience. Do not put too much importance on dreams for this life is a dream. When you dream it shows you that the dream seems real. That is all a dream is good for. To make you understand that life is like a dream. For when you dream you have nice dreams, you have nightmares you have all kinds of dreams, same with this life. In this life you have bad experiences, good experiences all kind of experiences. But it is your duty to go beyond the experience. Do not just accept the experience go beyond it. Go beyond everything. And then you will be totally free and liberated. But if you identify with the experience, try to change the experience, you work with the experience, you're wasting time doing this. For the experience always changes to other experiences and you have one experience after the other.

So inquire, "To whom this dream comes? To whom this experience comes?" Find out who the experiencer is who has this experience, who has this dream. Where does it all come from? What is the source of everything? The source of the dream, the source of the experience. Find that out and you'll be free. So again do not attach any particular significance to your dreams.

I know they've written voluminous books about dreams. Occult people dwell on dreams. They try to make every dream a big thing. What is a dream? Just some experience that you're having like you're having experiences right now. While you're living, going to work, being depressed, being happy, these things are like a dream. Accept nothing, transcend everything and be free.

Okay we're all finished. Why don't you read the Jnani Mary?

SM: Okay Robert.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Next Thursday is thanksgiving. So we are having our meeting on Wednesday, remember not Thursday. Don't show up next Thursday you'll have to eat thanksgiving dinner with Henry. (laughter) (SH: I won't be here.) (laughter) So it'll be on Wednesday noon. What else?

SM: Amelio has finished putting together the 1990 transcripts of Robert's early talks. The finished copy will have a picture on the front and the cost is twenty dollars. There have only been fifty copies made and quite a few of them have already been spoken for. So the book will be out next Wednesday and you see Amelio for ordering it and it is beautiful.

Oh and we're having a bhandara the last Sunday in November and the last Sunday in December. It's a vegetarian feast and it starts at 1 o'clock and you're welcome to come. Bring a dish if you can and bring your friends and family, it should be very nice.

R: We're going to have music. Jorge is going to do a dance for us.

SR: Not enough room.

SM: We'll make enough room. (laughter) There is a paper on the table so people can sign up and tell us what you're bringing so we don't have everybody bringing salads.

R: Anyone else have anything to say or forever hold your peace.

SH: Would you sing at the bhandara Mary please? (SM: No.) Okay then we'll call it off. (laughter) Pretty please. (SM: I've got a little story I'm going to read.) You can sing too. (SM: Don't worry. I'm too old.) Too old? (SM: Yeah.)

SD: Play one of your tapes. (SM: Okay I'll play a tape.)

R: It's now time for prashad. (students laugh)

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 203

WHAT IS A JNANI?

25th November, 1992

Robert: ...shanti, shanti, om, peace. Hello. (Students: Hello Robert.) Happy thanksgiving. (Students: Thank you and same to you.)

We're going to talk about something I don't usually talk about which is what is a Jnani? The reason I'm talking about it this evening is because many people ask me this question and I usually do not answer. If they call me on the phone and they ask me, "Robert are you a Jnani?" I usually keep silent when such a question is asked. But I've been keeping silent for a long time and people keep asking the question. So I'll try to explain what this is all about.

What I usually do now when people ask me the question, "Are you a Jnani?" I say, "First tell me, what do you mean by you and what do you mean by a Jnani?" and they usually say, "You Robert, I mean is Robert enlightened?" And I have to laugh at that because Robert cannot be enlightened. There is no such thing as Robert being enlightened. Robert is an idiot. (students laugh) Robert has absolutely nothing to do with enlightenment.

So if I say, "I am a Jnani." I'm referring to Robert and that is erroneous. Therefore be careful when people tell you that. When they tell you, "I'm enlightened. I'm a Jnani." Be very careful of people like that. Because I refers to the I-thought. The I-thought is an illusion, it's part of maya it's all a mirage. The I can never be enlightened. I can never be enlightened it's impossible. I can never be self-realized. But the Self which is your self, my self the one Self, which exists all by itself. Self contained absolute reality is enlightenment itself.

Now the question you may say...you may ask, "Is I-am enlightened?" I-am is enlightened when you speak of I-am. Not a you enlightened. Not a you self-realized. I-am, enlightened, those words are all synonymous. I-am enlightened is the same thing, but that is not a person place or thing.

In other words we're all the same. We're all one. There is really no difference between me and you. I guess that the only difference is when you look at me you see a person. You see a simple human being. When I look at you I see the Self. I see pure awareness. Why do I see this? I don't know? For when you look at me you see yourself what you think you are.

Consequently when you think you're a human being and have human attributes you're going to see the same in me. And you will ask me a silly question, "Am I enlightened?" If you want to know anything about enlightenment you have to become enlightened yourself. If you want to know anything about self-realization you have to become self-realized yourself. That is the only time you'll ever know this. Other wise words are a waste of time.

Think of all the words we speak continuously they're really all a waste of time, they get us nowhere. Think of all the words you've spoken since you were born, a lot of words. You had a lot to say. Where did it get you? And here you are sitting here looking for enlightenment, looking for something. Trying to become something and you believe words will do it. Words are really totally meaningless even when we speak words of spirituality. Such as absolute reality, Brahman, nirvana, ultimate reality those are just words. What do these words really do for you, nothing.

What you want to do is contemplate the truth. You have to ponder the truth in order to awaken. You have to ponder the truth for instance, that Brahman is and because Brahman is, I-am. When you can ponder this, think about this what this really means to you. What you're really saying when you say this you will see that something is happening inside of your heart. Your heart is opening up and when your heart opens up you will find out that you are the Self, consciousness which has always been. There never was a time when consciousness was not.

Consciousness accommodates you, accommodates the universe, accommodates the galaxies, accommodates God. In other words everything that you physically see rests in consciousness. But consciousness does not rest in anything. It so beyond words and thoughts that trying to explain it is like trying to explain fire.

So we get to the stage where we stop looking for answers, we stop looking for anything and we just remain the way we are. If you can only remain the way you are you will be the Self, for the Self knows no past, no future. The Self doesn't know anything because it's everything. It's self contained absolute reality. So there is nothing for it to know since it is all the things already.

You can only know something when you are not that at all.

To know something means you don't know so you have to know. But what we call consciousness is all-pervading. It is everything. So it's nothing. You can only be nothing when you're everything. When you think something is missing you have to search for something.

As an example most of us here are looking or self-realization looking for Buddhahood, we're looking to become one with the force. The looking will keep you back. For you are looking for something that already is. It always has been. Yet when you're looking for it you're saying it is not here. So you have to search, you have to look. It is the mind that causes all this nonsense. It is the mind that makes you search for yourself when you're already the Self. It is the mind that tells you all these stories that something is wrong someplace, that you're not happy, or that you're too happy.

When you hear that the mind does all this it is therefore your duty to transcend the mind, to stop the mind from doing these things, to stop the mind from leading you around from pillar to post, causing you happiness sometimes and causing you misery sometimes. It is the mind that has created this whole universe. Everything that you behold with your eyes, with your senses, you hear, you taste, you touch, you feel, it is really the mind. Nothing else but the mind and yet there is no mind. So what's going on around here. We thought the mind caused our problems then we hear there is no mind, well both are correct. As long as you believe you're a human being you've got a mind to contend with. As long as you believe you are a person, place or thing you'll have a mind to contend with.

When you begin to sit still and you look upon the mind, the thoughts, you witness the thoughts, you watch the thoughts the mind slows down. As you continue witnessing the thoughts, watching the thoughts the mind becomes weaker and weaker and weaker and you become happier and happier and happier. Bliss comes when the mind is at rest. Unalloyed happiness comes when the mind is inactive.

As long as the mind is active there will always be problems. For an active mind lives in a world of duality. Good and bad, right and wrong, up and down. Only when the mind is totally transcended will you find real peace. Yet you're already real peace. You're already pure awareness. You're already total joy and harmony. Yet you keep seeking, seeking, seeking, seeking, seeking for something that you already are.

Why do you do this?

Because you believe you're a human being. You believe you have to solve problems. Take action of some kind, unless you do it nobody else will do it. But I tell you nobody has to do anything. What has to be done will be done without you. You're not needed. Nobody wants you. Nobody needs you. Give up. This is a very important to understand. It is only when you feel this way when you give up that the truth comes out. As long as you feel you're somebody something, you're filled with good thoughts, bad thoughts, preconceived ideas, dogmas you can never surrender, you can never give up.

But when you begin to see yourself as nothing, when you begin to realize your thoughts do not matter, things that are happening in your life do not really matter because things will always work themselves out, for you live in a universe that loves you. You live in a universe of pure joy. You can only see this when you stop identifying with things. When you no longer take concern over what you should eat, what you should wear, where you should go then something strange happens.

The power that knows the way. That grows the mangoes on the mango trees, the papayas, apples, pears, grows wheat. The power that gives you sunshine. Enough sunshine to maintain and sustain this whole universe in order to be life here. When you surrender to this power it will take care of you. This is something you all have to understand. There is a power that loves us. You may call this God, divine intelligence, makes no difference what you call it but it's a power that loves you and will take care of you and will enlighten you and delight you.

But your job is to surrender to it totally, absolutely. To let go of your personal ambitions, to let go of trying to become something, to let go of all the earthly things so-to-speak. It is only then will this power that knows the way will come to your aid and lift you up in the stream of blessedness that you won't know what hit you. You'll be blissed out.

Every one of us sitting here has the right to awaken. It makes no difference what you did in the past for the past only exists when you think about it otherwise where is the past? You just have to believe that karma, samskaras, the world of samsarra all of these things have no power at all if you do not think about them and if your thoughts do not go backwards into time. If you stay centered then there is noone to experience karma. There is no karma for the one who is centered, living in the moment. Living in total bliss in the moment. That one is already free and liberated.

But the one who starts thinking about the future, starts lamenting about the past never gets anywhere. And karma is real for that particular person. For karma belongs to the past and the future not in the present moment.

Therefore ask yourself who are you, "Who am I?" Never forget to ask yourself that question. "Who am I? Where did I come from?" Remember you're saying, "Where did "I" come from?" You're separating the I from yourself. You're not saying, "Where did Jane come from? Where did Joan come from?" You're saying, "Where did I come from?" The "I." The I-thought that thinks all day long. Remember it is the I-thought that keeps you in bondage so-to-speak. For you're always referring yourself to I, it's a mistake. Inquire where your I came from? Who gave it birth? Who nourished it? Upon inquiry you will find the "I" never existed to begin with again there never was an I-thought. There never was anything. You are totally free, absolutely free.

This is why coming to satsang is so important. For you're out in the world of maya which seems to be so strong so powerful. It makes you believe all kinds of things. It shows you all kinds of pictures and you react to them, you respond to them. It causes you fear, frustration, unhappiness. Awaken from the mortal dream. There is no longer anything that can harm you in anyway. You are free. Feel this freedom in your heart. You no longer have a past or a future. It's all gone.

Yet what do you see? What do you feel? Feel the joy welling up inside of you. The happiness, the love that you really are, feel it. It makes no difference what experiences you've been through up to this point, your background makes no experience whatsoever. You are not your background or your experience this is all dead wood. Now is the time. Right now! Awaken to your reality right now, do it!

There are no hindrances, there are no interference. There is nothing that can ever interfere with you. Nothing can hinder you. There is nothing that can punish you. You are total freedom, yes you are.

Now that you know that you are consciousness. You have always been consciousness. The body is but an appearance, like the print in a page. When there is print on the white paper, you see the print but if it weren't for the paper there would be no print. The print only appears because there is paper and so it is with consciousness. Your image of a person appears only because there is consciousness. Consciousness is the only reality. Do not think about this, become it.

Do not believe you have to identify with the white paper or with consciousness. There is no one to identify with anything. When you realize you don't have to take sides. By taking sides I mean identifying with the good and negating the bad this is not what you're supposed to do. For this implies duality. There is really no good and no bad. There is only the one, the one Self and you are that. Why will you not believe me? There is only the one perfect Self. The one absolute reality and you are all that. That is what you are. You are perfect, blissful, joyous, happy. Except this for yourself.

Feel it now. Feel it stronger than ever, the presence, the power. Do not think about it. Do not speak words to yourself. Just be! Be that which you already are.

(silence)

Notice how your thoughts begin to slow down. As your thoughts slow down you're feeling peace that you never felt before. You're feeling a happiness a harmony that you never felt before, it's happening all by itself. And most of you are feeling this right now. It's beautiful. In this now you become all-pervading, you're omnipresent. You are the trees, the mountains, the rivers, the ocean, planets it is all taking place within you, feel it.

(Phone rings and is answered by Henry as he explains directions to the satsang to the caller. The conversation leads to Robert saying...)

He'll never get here tonight. (laughter) Good luck. People have been trying to find Henry's house for ten years.

SH: Yeah that's the third time he's called today he's having a hard time getting here but he's coming, he'll be here in a moment. (laughter)

R: So anyway, all is well. Things are like they should be, you are like you should be. Love yourself just the way you are. Be happy. Don't worry about a thing. Put yourself into the lap of consciousness. Melt into consciousness. Don't worry about anything. You are already free and all is well.

Feel free to ask some questions.

SF: There are no Jnanis there is only Jnana. (R: Yes exactly, true.)

SB: Robert tonight you said if we observe our mind it will slow down. But a few weeks you said to simply ignore the mind.

R: Same thing, when you observe it you ignore it. No difference. (SB: But you said when you observe it you're giving it some energy.) If you're thinking about it. If you just observe it you're ignoring it. (SB: Not getting involved with it at all?) Exactly. When you think about the mind, when you're thinking about the thoughts then you're giving it energy. When you just observe and just watch and leave it alone and do nothing where does the energy come from? There is no energy to give it. So you ignore the mind by observing it.

Then you will find out that there is no mind. You've been wasting your time for years observing something that doesn't exist. So why would you want to do that Bob?

All this talk about observing minds, watching minds. The truth is there is nothing to watch, there is nothing to observe. I'm just sitting here telling you these things because you want to hear me talk. But there is nothing to do. There is nothing to observe, there is nothing to watch. Who watches, who observes? The one who believes they are a body, a doer. When you get rid of the misconceptions you're a doer or a watcher you'll have nothing to watch and nothing to do.

But as long as you believe that you are the doer then you will think of all kinds of practices that you want to do. You'll practice yoga meditation, japa, mantra, pranayama. You do all of these things because you think you are the doer. But when the realization comes to you that you're not the doer then you do not have to do anything, there is nothing to do. So know the truth about yourself. I am not the doer therefore I have absolutely nothing to do. I'm at peace with myself and the whole universe and all is well.

You see my friends nothing really exists. You don't exist, I don't exist nothing really exists. Everything is an illusion. Everything is an appearance. It appears to exist but it doesn't exist. Everything that you see is hallucination. You've been hallucinating for years. It's time you stopped.

(Person who phoned arrived to satsang then Robert continues)

R: All is well. Feel free to ask some questions.

SP: You mentioned karma being of the past and being of the future but not being of the present. The question is how can anything be of the past, be of the future and not be of the present? Unless it may be in a different transform? (R: In a different what?) Unless it is perhaps in a different form, transformed existence in other words it's not like karma but it's something else. In the present that is.

R: There really is no past and there is no future. When you think of karma by...by thinking you're already thinking of the past and the future, just by thinking alone. So by thinking about the past... (break in tape) ...by not thinking then it's impossible to have any karma there at all. There is no place for it to come from. For there is only this moment happening. This moment is happening every moment. It comes from nowhere. It's not attached to anything. There is just this perfect moment which is right this now.

Therefore karma never existed in the now because there is no room for it. There has to be room in your mind for karma and everything else, for samsaras. Everything has to have room. When you think about the past and the future you're giving it room. But when you're centered in the moment, in the now, in the second, there is no room for anything. You just are now. You just are being, pure being right now this moment, this instant and there is nothing there, there is no room for it.

Again only when you extend the mind by thinking does the mind contrive all of these things, karma, reincarnation, it all comes from thinking of the past and the future. But if you stay centered in the moment, in the second where would the room be for it to come. There is no room for there is only this instant. Whatever happens is already happening this instant.

SF: In reality there is no present either?

R: True. In the true reality there is absolutely nothing. (SF: Zilch.) Everything is wiped out. But when I have to sit here and talk to you like this then I have to come up with all kinds of things. For you to ponder, to think about. Remember again that the nothing we speak of is not the void. It is beyond the void. This nothingness I'm speaking of is ineffable. It is beyond words and thoughts, it's nothing we can ever understand with our finite minds. (SF: The void is a mental concept.) Yes. Everything is a mental concept. Anything that you can think about, anything that you can come up with your mind is a mental concept. Whether it's God, whether it's the Self or whatever you're thinking about. Therefore to get to these places you have to stop thinking totally and completely. Use whatever method to stop the thoughts. Whatever method that you have. A method that you're used to. Use whatever method that you like to stop the thoughts. By ignoring them, by watching them, by asking, "To whom do they come? Who thinks?" But by all means do something to keep the thoughts from attacking you, from telling you what to do and how to live.

(silence)

Well what do you think? Is there any hope for us?

SH: None so whatever.

R: That's okay don't worry. We're all hell bound for heaven. (SH: What's that?) Something in your mind. (SH: Well maybe I should throw it away?) Get rid of it the best way you can. Don't you want to go to heaven Henry? (SH: You tell me what it is and I'll consider it.) It's a place where you sing beautiful songs. (SH: No not interested. (laughter) You can have all that angel crap.) (laughter)

SF: Heaven is pure awareness. (SH: Not according to him.) (laughter) They're all words, it don't mean anything.

R: Whatever you believe that is the way it is. (SF: It's all a product of mind.)

SH: What if you don't believe in anything? (R: Then you're nothing.)

SF: You're in good shape.

SH: Thank you. You hear the Toku. (Talks to his dog as dog snores) yeah.

SK: Robert could you comment on - there is this story old Indian story, I'd just like to hear your comment. There was a guru and he told his students, don't worry everything is Ram, everything is God. And so one of the students heard that and left the teachers place and on the way home there was a mad elephant raging through the town and somebody ran by and said, "Look out there is a mad elephant!" and the student said, "Well everything is Ram," and he kept on his way and the elephant came by and picked him up and threw him down and crushed him. And later on the guru came by and said, "Well how did this happen?" And the guy said, "Well you told me everything was God and there was a mad elephant come by and I started to see him as God and he picked me up and threw me down and crushed me." And he said, "Well how come you didn't see the person that warned you about the mad elephant that was going to come by? Why didn't you see him as God?" I mean how this connects to what you were saying if everything is nothing and we shouldn't worry about it, if that's so, steamrollers are nothing, trucks are nothing and pay your rent or get out notices are nothing, can you see what I'm trying to say?

R: Of course. That is a story we've told here many times ??? Always remember in the absolute sense there is nothing. But as long as there is a body, the body will be taken care of in the right way. You will listen to a person who is telling you something if you have to listen, you will make the right decisions, you will know what to do. This is what I was talking about earlier, there is a power that knows the way. There is a power that will take care of you. You came to this earth for a specific purpose as far as your body is concerned. In the ultimate reality there is no purpose but as long as you are referring to as you were talking about the story you came to this earth for a purpose and your purpose will be accomplished without any help from you if you will keep your mind on God so-to-speak, by contemplating the ultimate reality. By realizing that you're ultimate oneness, pure awareness and leave your body alone. Your body will know what to do and take care of itself, it will know where to go and it'll know what to eat. It will take care of itself perfectly without any help from you and it will do a better job than you can ever do to help it.

Therefore if you're going home tonight and something tells you the freeways broken, do not say, "I don't care," and then go on the freeway anyway... (SK: Right.) ...the wisdom in you will tell you what to do, you will know what to do. You will always be told what to do from within. The power within will tell you what to do. It will guide you and lead you and direct you in the right path. So that you can have peace, prosperity, happiness, joy, love. And it will unfold in the right way. It will all take care of itself. But if you identify with the situation then you may or may not benefit from it. But if you take care of the situation by not thinking about the condition, the situation by keeping your mind stayed on the infinite then your body will take care of itself. It will know what to do and you will be guided to the right place, to meet the right people, right beings, right everything. Right action will ensue and you'll find things are working out okay.

SF: That sounds as though we should end up with good physical health? And not suffer from these various pains and ills.

R: As you unfold, as you go higher in this path what seems to be some power to hurt you begins to dissipate. As an example, you may go on this path and develop cancer on the body. Yet you will not look at it that way it will not matter to you whatsoever. You will not be concerned with it, it will not mean one thing to you. Yet other people see you suffering from cancer. But to you it will be totally meaningless. Because you have discovered something that the average person has not discovered yet and you will be in glory, you will be in peace, you'll be in joy even though your body is being eaten away by cancer. (SF: Transcended the mind and the body?) Exactly. You are not the person who is having the cancer. It's an appearance it seems to be like you. But you're not that whatsoever in other words everything will take of itself in the most beautiful way. Because the nature... (SF: Perhaps the body and the mind should reach - well I'm sorry I didn't mean to - even intellectually.) The body in reality does not exist. The mind in reality does not exist. So nothing is really happening to the body and the mind. And as you work on yourself and as you go higher in consciousness you're able to see this, to feel this. This means the things that used to disturb you and bring you these problems will no longer be valid. It will all be gone.

SF: Did you say the body will know how to take care of itself? In my thought would be the body should enjoy what we consider physical health.

R: If you're speaking of physical health then you're in a category that has not been enlightened or nowhere near enlightenment. But as you go higher who is there who needs physical health? What exists? Who needs to be physically healthy? (SF: You take the body to be physically healthy.) There is no body. The body is not yours anymore. There is no longer a body who needs to be healthy. Only when you're a human being there is a body who needs to be healthy. As you advance spiritually there is no body left who needs to be healthy or sick. Those words are gone from your vocabulary. You no longer exist. For when you think of health it means that you're sick so you think of health. If there was no such thing as sickness would you be thinking of health? (SF: All of the opposites are non-existent.) Sure. You only think of health because you think of sickness. But as you transcend and you go higher there is nobody left to think that way. That thinking begins to dissipate totally disappear out of your system, out of your life. Yet others who see themselves, will see you as themselves. So they're steeped in maya, they will therefore see you suffering but you're not suffering. But as far as you're concerned there is no one left to suffer. The sufferer has been eliminated. You are in total joy, total bliss.

Thus the story of Jesus and the crucifixion, Ramana Maharshi, Krishna had cancer and many other Sages have suffered so-to-speak. Who sees them suffering? The body, the mind. But if ask them if they are suffering they would say, "no," for you see it, in reality it doesn't exist.

Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani. Refer to beginning of this book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Announcements?

SM: The book has finally arrived and those of you who have put in your order please see Amelio or Jane. And it's beautiful. We have an announcement about the bhandara. (Announcements about the bhandara)

R: It is now time for prashad. What you've been waiting for, for so long. I can see your mouth watering all over while I'm talking...

(Prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

EVERYONE IS LOOKING FOR HAPPINESS

29th November, 1992

Robert: Shanti, shanti, om, peace, peace. Welcome. I welcome you with all my heart. Good afternoon. It's good being with you once again on this fifth bhandara since we've been in Henry's house. A bhandara is usually for feeding the poor. And for about three years we've been trying to feed the poor. But we can't get the poor to come up the hill. The homeless won't walk up the hill. So we can't feed them too well.

But usually what a bhandara is when poor homeless people line up in two rows, they sit down, we give them plates and put food in their plates. So we will do what we did last year. I would like each one of you before christmas to take ten dollars and give it to a homeless person, without judgement. It makes no difference what you think of the homeless person whether you think they're right or wrong or whether you think they're homeless or not, whether you think they're lazy or whether you think they don't want to work, it's immaterial. Give ten dollars to the first homeless person you see. This will be our way of feeding the homeless.

SH: How do you know if they're homeless?

R: If they look homeless give them ten dollars. (laughter)

SH: That's good, are you homeless?

SE: If they have one of those signs - Homeless need food. (laughter)

Robert continues: Have you ever wondered why you do the things you do. For instance when you were a baby you would cry in your crib to get picked up. If you'd want your diapers changed you'd cry. As you grew older you'd want to play with certain toys, be with certain friends. You went to school, you joined certain activities, you played football perhaps or became a cheerleader. Then you finally got married, had children, got divorced.

You're always doing something but why are you doing these things? Why does a thief become a thief? Why does a person rob a bank? Why does a murderer kill?

The answer of course is everyone is looking for happiness. Everyone wants happiness and this is their way of showing they want happiness. A thief believes if he steals something from you this will make him happy because he'll have something he never had before. Everything you do in life is to achieve happiness. Ponder this.

In retrospect go over your life and see if I'm not saying the truth.

Whatever you're doing in life you're doing it because you want some happiness even though you think you're helping somebody else or you're helping somebody, deep down inside of yourself you really want to be happy. So whatever you're doing you're doing it for your own happiness.

But what if I told you that real happiness is within yourself. Unalloyed happiness is within you. Pure happiness, eternal happiness, forever happiness, is within yourself it is your true nature, it is your real nature. If you can just touch this happiness you will never depend on the world again for anything. For this happiness I'm referring to is sat-chit-ananda, the absolute reality, the pure awareness.

This happiness is so beautiful, so blissful that you will never react to person place or thing again for any reason whatsoever. For you will be fulfilled. Filled with joy, harmony, love. When a person discovers this, this person is very fortunate. To discover they have within themselves the storehouse of happiness. To discover there is eternal happiness within you. Even if you discover it intellectually at first by reading about it, listening to me talk about it. For when you know you have a mission a search to unfold this happiness within you and become free.

Now how do you do this?

The truth about this is you just discover that you are happiness you may hear my words or read a book or read it somewhere else and you'll awaken to it. You awaken to it by making the mind still and quiet. By not having any conflict with your mental thoughts. You then discover a great peace, a fountain of joy inside of you that you never really knew existed before. This is the beginning of wisdom. When you begin to feel and think, person, place and thing in this world can never bring me true happiness.

This world is a world of change it can never bring me real happiness. For it's a world of duality in which we live. For you may be happy one day and sad the next day depending on how things are going. But when you understand that the happiness which you're searching for is you and you already have it you give up all of your thoughts and emotions, your feelings and abide in this happiness. You do not have to do any mantras or any meditations, any prayers, any chanting, any japa, just become aware of yourself, as unalloyed total happiness, that's all you have to do. Feel it, become aware of it. It is you, you've got it. It has always been yours. If you ponder upon this you will see I am right.

At this time many of you are looking for happiness outside of yourselves. You may think when you go to a movie you're happy. When you meet the right person you're happy. When you have a lot of money you're happy. When you have what you want you're happy. But these things are limited. They're not permanent and they keep changing all the time.

The true happiness I'm speaking of is Brahman. The ultimate oneness. The one reality. If you can only imagine that you've got such happiness within you there is absolutely nothing in this world that it can show or give you that can equal it and you do not have to go anywhere or do anything to get it. It's within you, you have it already.

Can you imagine being eternally happy? Happy all the time for no reason whatsoever? Just being totally happy all of the time? Well, you can.

Again there are certain things you have to do and one of them is the practice of divine ignorance. By divine ignorance I'm referring to the fact that you don't know what anything is in this world. You have no idea what anything is, no idea whatsoever. You think you do.

Your ego tells you this is a glass, this is a radio, this is a dog, this is a cat, but what do you really know about these things? Do you really know what a dog is? You have no idea what a dog is. It just appeared when you appeared on this earth and we gave it a name, dog. We could have named it cat. We could have named it door knob. We could have called it the moon. We have given the animal the name of a dog. So we call this a dog. But if you answer like this you still have no idea what a dog is, do you? They're just here. The same with a cat, bird, it is we who give names to these people, these animals, these things.

Do you know who you were before you were born? Who are you? Where did you come from? All you know is that you were born and people gave you a name, your parents gave you a name, and you've been called that name ever since. What do you know about these things? Absolutely nothing.

You have no idea why a tree is a tree. Why a mountain is a mountain? You have no idea what anything is at all, do you? Be honest with yourself. This is called divine ignorance and this is the first step you have to take on the spiritual path to become free and liberated. In order to discover the divine happiness within you. You have to really realize that you don't know what anything is. You have no idea where anything came from, including yourself.

That is a great big step for most people. Because most people are so egotistical. They think they know what everything is, they think they know things, names of things. But we don't know anything.

When you admit this to yourself then you can go forward and you go forward by inquiring, "Who am I? What am I doing here? Where did I come from? What is the source of life?" As you begin to inquire about your life, as you begin to inquire, "Who am I? Where do I come from?" something begins to happen to you, something wonderful, you begin to feel a power and a presence. You begin to feel a peace, a harmony.

Every time you say to yourself, "Who am I?" you are moving a step ahead on the spiritual path. That is all you have to do. "Who am I?" and you will soon discover that the I is not you. The I that you are referring to is not you, it's not anything. It is merely a thought. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. When you think to yourself, "Who am I?" You keep saying I-I to yourself and the I begins to separate from your body. The I begins to become a different type of entity whatsoever, the I begins to disappear. And you keep thinking about the I, following the I. You follow the I to the heart. Once the I disappears you are totally free and liberated.

So it all begins with you. You are the one. You can either free yourself or put yourself in bondage depending on what you're doing with your life.

As you go through the vicissitudes of life we become aware that we've been spinning our wheels all these years. We've been wasting our energy trying to accumulate things. We make ourselves happy by accumulating all kinds of goodies, people, places. Yet we're not happy.

Only when you discover that you are the universal manifestation of consciousness can you be happy. Only when you understand that you're pure awareness you will be happy. When you begin to see you live in a world of maya which is like a dream. Why should you react to the dream? Would you react to the dream if you dreamt it last night? When you awaken in the morning will you react to this dream?

You realize it was only a dream. It has no power over me it cannot do anything. Even though in that dream I had cancer, I was wasting away, my family died in an automobile accident, it was all in a dream it's not true, it never happened. So it is with this life now. Things may appear so real to you. Everything may appear so valid. But if you ponder what we're talking about you will not react to things for it's like you're reacting to a dream.

One day you think you will awaken and this dream will be over just like the dream you had last night will be over and you will awaken in the morning. So one day you will awaken to this dream and you will find that you're absolutely free.

This is a great revelation when you begin to ponder this. When you begin to understand who you really are your true nature, which is eternal happiness you become a totally different person than you were before. You give of yourself freely. For you have the understanding that you are the other person. You are the universe. You are life itself. You begin to see that life itself is you.

Why not awaken from the dream right now. Why not wake up right now. All you have to do is to stop your thoughts. And you do not stop your thoughts by trying to stop them. You stop the thoughts by observing them and not paying any attention to them.

There is a wall between your thoughts and consciousness. In your mind break down the wall and let the thoughts flow into consciousness where they will be totally transcended and consciousness will be your reality. So do not fight your thoughts. Do not try to make things happen. Do not take life seriously. Do not react to person, place or thing. Be your Self! Be the wonderful Self that you are. That you've always been. Understand that you have no limitation. There is nothing holding you back, nothing. Only your own thoughts, your own belief system. Annihilate the belief system and you will be free.

So what I'm trying to tell you is that you've got all the power within you to do anything you want with your life. All the power is within you. There is nothing in this world that can compete with what you are. You are the power. All of the power. You are that. Feel it.

There is no thing any longer that can come into your way and hurt you or make you fear. There is nothing in the universe that can make you angry or upset. You have become total freedom, total joy, total harmony. Try living this way.

Remember begin by realizing that you are in divine ignorance. You have no idea what anything is, where anything came from, admit that to yourself first. Then begin to question yourself by asking yourself, "Who am I? Where is my source? Where did I come from?" Never answer the question, just ask it. Begin to disassociate yourself from emotions, fears, frustrations, by not reacting to person, place or thing. Just become the observer, watch, smile, but do not react to anybody.

As soon as you begin to practice this for yourself you will see results, very good results. You will start to feel this happiness that I was referring to in the beginning, you'll feel happier than you've ever felt in your life for no reason whatsoever, you will feel that everything is in its right place. That there are no mistakes anywhere. And as you continue this path you will find one day that you are totally liberated, totally free, that you are boundless space and everything in this universe is happening within you and emanating through your mind as the universe.

Let it happen to you now.

Peace.

(tape ends) [TOC]

SURRENDER TOTALLY AND BECOME FREE

3rd December, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace, peace, peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert) Greetings and salutations. It is good to be with you again this Thursday evening.

When you sit in the silence in satsang, you are not really sitting in the silence to be quiet. It is much more than that. You are sitting in eternity, in the absolute reality. When you speak words you spoil it. Words have meaning. They have different meanings to different people. Therefore words are very limited. The infinite reality can never be expressed through words. The infinite reality is beyond words and thoughts, beyond concepts, beyond dogma, beyond the body or the mind.

Your mind has been conditioned for thousands of years to be what you are today. In stead of realizing that you are the ultimate reality, that you are pure awareness you believe your self to be limited to a body. Limited to an environment. Limited to a world. Limited to a universe. In other words you have created your own jail, your own cell. Yet what are we to do? How do we free ourselves?

We free ourselves by not freeing ourselves. When you try to do something to be free you're merely adding on to what you know already. To be free you have to become silent, quiet, peaceful. You have to have compassion, loving kindness. To be free one must give up all of their doubts, their fears, their dogmas, everything. One has to surrender totally and completely, total surrender if you would be free.

Surrender to whom?

If you are a bhakta you would surrender to your guru, to a deity of your choice. If you were a christian you would surrender to jesus. If you were a buddhist you would surrender to Buddha. If you were of the jewish persuasion you would surrender to abraham or moses. If you were a hindu you would surrender to Krishna or Shiva or anyone of a thousand deities. Surrender purifies the mind, removes the impurities and ultimately sets you free.

Yet this cannot be done by the average person for the average person is very egotistical, very egocentric. You do not realize it's the conditioning that you had for many centuries is what has caused you to react the way you do toward life today. This conditioning you did not ask for. This conditioning appears to be very real to you, yet in truth it does not really exist, it doesn't exist at all. In truth there is no conditioning whatsoever. But when you speak of it in a relative way in a relative plane you are totally absolutely conditioned.

By surrendering your stuff to your deity of your choice you open your mind for higher knowledge. You begin to feel a peace, a happiness, a joy that you never felt before. It makes no difference what kind of problem you have in your life, what's going on in your life, how you feel limited. You are to turn away from all of this. You are to turn away from all of your problems, all the stuff that has held you back for centuries. You must turn completely away from it. Do not consider it at all. Do not try to heal it, change it, rectify it, do absolutely nothing to it.

Just turn your mind inwardly to the Self or to the guru or to the teacher or to the deity of your choice and become still! No words are exchanged. You're not praying to God or to a deity of your choice. You simply turn to your heart center where your deity resides — which by the way is none other than yourself. You are that deity. You are that God to whom you are turning for help. You are that. But yet you turn within and you let go of everything else.

This does not...does not mean that you become passive. Many people believe that spiritual people become very passive. They do absolutely nothing. This is not necessarily true. As you turn within you will come to realize that your whole life has been mapped out for you before you came on this earth. Everything is preordained, predestined. When you look at it in the right way, it's beautiful. For it means that you are not responsible for anything in your life at all. If your life has been mapped out what have you got to do? Whatever has to be done will be done by itself. Wherever you have to be you will be. With whom you will have to be you will be with that person. The work you have to do will be done. It's wonderful when you think about this.

That you have not come to this earth to struggle, to fight, to become anything, to hurt anyone, to be hurt, you are here merely to be. Not to be this or to be that just to be. You allow this beingness to function properly when you get yourself out the way, that is your thoughts, your preconceived ideas. When you keep the mind still, perfectly still and calm then you will always find that you are in the right place going through those experiences that are necessary for your unfoldment and your fulfillment.

Do not worry about the future or the past. Do not concern yourself with events in the present. Just be! Be the Self that you are. You will be satisfied. Everything will be okay. There is nothing that wants to hurt you, cause you pain or give you any problems. It is only because you keep thinking continuously, constantly that you have this belief that somebody wants to hurt you, cause you problems, upset you. There is only one. There are not two or three. There is only one Self and you are that.

So where would the problems come from? For where would the hurt come from? The Self is omnipresent, self contained absolute reality. And you are that!

There is no room for anything else. The Self is bliss, consciousness. This is your nature, this is your Self, this is what you are. But there is only one, all-pervading, ever-present, no beginning, no end, pure being. If you can understand what I'm saying what have you got to fear? What can trouble you? You are in good hands with all things.

You have more going for you than you can ever imagine. You are the entire universe so how can you be in need? How can you be worried or hurried? When you understand that you are the universe you rejoice, happiness comes by itself. Love comes by itself. Joy comes by itself. Not from others or from things, it's your unfoldment, it's the truth about you. You are a happy courageous individual filled with love and compassion and joy. This is who you really are. Leave the world alone, leave yourself alone, leave everything alone. You will know what to do, always. You will always do the right thing if you stop fighting life by trying to make things happen. Do not take yourself too seriously.

There is one who is looking out for you. There is one who is guiding you, directing you to your ultimate victory. That one is the Self. It is you. The body is not yourself. The mind is not yourself. They're only temporary conditionings. They're there for a while then they're gone. Like bubbles on the ocean. Bubbles come bubbles go every second. Yet the ocean always remains the same. And so it is with life on this planet. People come, people go, things come, things go everything changes, changes, changes but you are the ocean of bliss. You have absolutely nothing to do with these changes whatsoever.

Know yourself for who you are. Never put yourself down. Never compare yourself with anyone else. Never be judgmental. Learn to leave everything alone. Do not come to a conclusion about anything. There is no ultimate answer. Do not search for reality. Do not search for answers. You will be searching for eternity.

See how many people read books one after the other. Most of you here have read every book on earth till there is nothing left to read and you're still in the same place you've always been. Most of you have gone to many lectures, heard many speakers. Yet there is hardly any change in you. You have to awaken to the point one of these days in your life that you are the answer. The answer is you, the answer that you're looking for. What is the meaning of life? Who am I? You are the very answer to these questions.

Make your life very simple. Do not be too profound. Do not go looking to teachers and thinking they have a special answer for you. There is no special answer, there is no special teachings. Everything you're looking for is within yourself. Where else would it be?

What you are today is a result of all your thinking, throughout the years, through many lifetimes. Your belief system has created the body that you need right now for your next step in evolution. This is why I always say, "You are in your right place. There are no mistakes. You are exactly where you're supposed to be." If you don't like where you are, look within yourself. No one can really give you anything for you are the power. There is no power apart from you.

Be happy always. Feel the freedom. Feel the bliss.

Inquire who you are. The answer will come by itself. Inquire, "What am I doing here? Where did I come from? What am I?"

Do not be disturbed by events in this world. Do not take life so seriously. Be of service to humanity. When you see people suffering, help. Come to the aid of the homeless, the poor, the sick. When you realize there is only one who are you helping but yourself. To whom are you giving service but yourself, who is benefitting but yourself.

Be kind, be loving, everything else will take of itself. You are the one, the holy one, the mighty one, the true one, the loving one. Go within your heart right now. Dive deep within the heart centre and lose yourself entirely. The spiritual heart centre is on the right side of the chest. See a sphere of golden light in the heart center, a sphere of beautiful golden light, throbbing. See this globe of white light, golden light expanding, expanding throughout the whole universe. Where all of the planets, galaxies, everything are superimpositions on this golden globe of light. Everything is an image on this light. Like the image on the screen. This light is like boundless space. It accommodates the whole universe. Everything is in this light. Nothing is left out.

Understand that you are the light. The light is you, the Self. The imperishable Brahman. The ultimate reality, nirvana. The I-am that I-am, that is the nature of this golden light. See all the images disappearing and only the light remains. Feel this light as yourself. You are filled with joy, filled with bliss, with happiness. You are now the true Self and there are no others. Feel this deeply. Feel this bliss, this love, this joy, pulsating within, without you. All of your past has been wiped out. There never was any room for a past or a present or a future. There is just the one mighty Self, expressing itself as consciousness and you are that! Peace.

(silence)

...shanti, shanti, peace. Feel free to ask questions if you will.

SF: I have one. It seems clear to me that if there is one thing that will stop me dead in my tracks is spiritual pride. If I think I'm more spiritual than someone else, what it boils down to is I think I'm feeling superior to my own creation and that is going to cause confusion. (R: Of course.) Thank you.

R: And all the time I thought you were God. (SF: You thought I was...? (laughs) Well we're all God aren't we? That's what you're telling us. Of course what does the word God mean, that is another item to consider.) So you're not God? (SF: Are you asking me?) Umm. (SF: I don't feel like commenting at this point in time.)

SH: (laughs) Cop out!

R: Why is it a cop out? (SF: Sir?) Why is it a cop out? (SF: Yeah?) No you're right. (SF: Yeah I think that I was. (laughter) But for you to tell me that I'm not makes you feel good.) Whenever you think you're somebody there has to be a thinker, an object and a subject. As long as there is an object, a subject and a thinker, you've got a problem. They all have to be destroyed. And then there is nobody to think anything like this. So there will be no one left to think I am superior or inferior, I am great or small, I am happy or sad. Those things only come up when you believe you are a person. (SF: And a thinker.) And the thinker, of course the person always thinks. But when there is no thinker who is to say those things. There is noone left to be anything. Then you'll discover that you're nothing and you'll be home safe. (SF: Everything is nothing?) And nothing is everything.

R: Feel free to make a comment, statement, an address, speech. Say something.

SV: Baa baa black sheep. (laughter) (R: Good.)

SP: If everything is predestined. If there is so much suffering in this world why is all that predestined by the universe.

R: It's not predestined by the universe. It is predestined by the image of the self, the small self, the ego. It is the ego that suffers, noone else. But when you find yourself, you'll understand yourself and you see yourself the way you really are in truth, then you understand that you are the entire universe yourself. And this is all a play in consciousness. In other words it really doesn't exist. It appears to exist but it doesn't exist. (SP: You mean the suffering doesn't exist?) The suffering doesn't exist like the body doesn't exist so the good doesn't exist. Everything that you believe is real, is false. (SP: But if I stick a needle in my arm it hurts.) Yes of course it does. (SP: So that is not real?) It's your view because you're living in the dream. If you're having a dream and in that dream you stick a needle in your arm doesn't it hurt? (SP: If I'm in the dream and I stick and needle in my arm? Oh I haven't done that yet.) Yes. Well When I have a dream all kinds of things happen doesn't it? In the dream you're going through experiences, getting married, getting divorced, taking a trip around the world, breaking your leg...

SP: Well it seems to me that from now I can say to myself that they are not the body... (question cannot be heard clearly as others are talking over the recording. It starts again when able to hear clearer) ...if everything is predestined like why do I ...unclear...all predestined and everything is already all laid out I just need to sit back and let all be done. Who predestined it?

R: You don't have to sit back at all. You will never sit back. (SP: Huh?) The idea that you're going to sit back is erroneous. (SP: Oh okay.) You will always be doing something. See look at it this way. When you go to sleep tonight and you have a dream. In that dream we're talking like we are now in a class like this and you tell me everything that you told me just now and I say to you, "You're dreaming this," and you tell me, "no I'm not. I can stick a needle in your hand and you'll holler, you'll say ouch. I can break a leg, I can do this, I can do that," and yet it's all happening in the dream. But when you wake up the dream is gone. And so it is with this world. This world appears to be real. It appears to be something important, something going on. But yet sometime you will wake up. And when you awaken you will realize this is also a dream. So it's up to you to discover this, to realize this. You shouldn't really believe a word I'm saying. (SP: I should or shouldn't. Shouldn't. (student laughs) Why should you believe anything I say? (students laugh) Find out for yourself. I'm just sitting here talking to myself. Never accept anything anybody tells you. Just listen and check it out yourself, find out yourself, do what is necessary to find out for yourself, what is real and what is not.

Mary will you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. Do we have announcements?

SM: Yes. I have two announcements here. The first is satsang will be on Wednesday, December twenty-third instead of Thursday because of christmas. And of course you know at the end of December the last Sunday we will have another bhandara. But meanwhile that is the most important one, don't come on Thursday.

SR: Maybe you should say there is no satsang on Saturday.

SM: Oh yes thank you George, there will be no satsang on Saturday until further notice. And I have five new transcripts that's out. If you will make ten copies of these and return them please. And the latest number is ninety-four. And it's "Stop What You Are Doing And Be Still." (Handing out of transcripts)

R: Do you want to talk about the book?

SM: Oh thank you Robert, Amelio do you have any more books? (SA: Oh yes we still have some.) Alright, we do have Robert's talks from 1990 put into a volume, first volume and we have them here? (SA: Yes if you can come and talk to me?) Alright. The pricing of it is twenty dollars and its well worth every penny of it and Andy will take care of that. And they do make really nice christmas gifts. (R: That's it.) That's it. I want to thank everyone for contributing to the bhandara Sunday. The food was wonderful.

R: The turkey was delicious. (laughter)

It is now time for prashad, the real reason why you came here. We have oatmeal cookies. Here Henry do the honors. We have some more interesting cookies here don't know what they are. Enjoy, eat, be happy.

Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to bow to yourself, for God dwells in you as you. Peace. Have a good life. Go forth into the night...

(Prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

YOU JUST AIN'T THERE!

6th December, 1992

Robert: ...shanti shanti shanti om peace, peace. Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) It is good being with you holy people. One holy people whoever you may be. It's good to see your smiling faces. Happy face, let's see the happy face.

Those of us who have been studying Advaita Vedanta, the non-duality concepts have come across the one principle of Advaita and remember it intellectually. The one principle being, "Everything is Brahman. The whole universe is Brahman. Only Brahman exists and this world that appears to you is an hallucination." You're hallucinating by believing the world is real. Non-dualists understand this, they realize this.

And yet some people have a hard time in grasping the truth of this, what this really means. Brahman cannot be explained. It is beyond words and thoughts, there is no valid explanation for Brahman. You can only know Brahman when you leave your senses behind. When you go out of your mind. This is the only time when you will know Brahman. So when somebody tells you you're out of your mind say, "Thank you," (students laugh) it's a compliment. You want to be out of your mind. It's no fun being in your mind. For in your mind you relate to the world. You relate to person place and thing. So you want to be out of the mind, totally out of the mind.

Think of this.

There is only Brahman nothing else and we can't explain Brahman. We can say it's like boundless space. Boundless space is of the void that you hear about in buddhism. The difference between boundless space and Brahman is that Brahman is consciousness. What we call Brahman is consciousness. Which simply means that Brahman is a power that is conscious of itself. It is not conscious of anything else. It is not conscious of this world or your body or your mind or the phenomena of the world or the universe. This has completely nothing to do with consciousness. Remember the world is a hallucination, a mirage, a no thing to Brahman. If you don't know Brahman the world is real, very real with its phenomena, with its manifestations.

So we learn that we somehow have to identify with Brahman. This is a mistake. You can see this, if everything is Brahman then who has to identify with Brahman. There has to be a subject and an object. The subject wants to identify with something. So they look at Brahman as being out side of themselves and they try to identify with Brahman. This is the mistake that you make. And this is the reason it takes so long to become self-realized and become free. Because you're looking to do something and in truth there is absolutely nothing to do. There is nothing to do to become free and liberated. What is there to do?

If you say, "I have to try," you're saying the hallucination has to try. You're believing in the hallucination, the falsity, the mirage. Thinking that this is the truth and you have to identify with something to become higher. No, all you have to do is remain still, that's all. Remain quiet, still. Nothing to do. Nothing to become. If you try to become something you get caught in the world of cause and effect and you will have all kinds of problems. But if your mind...if you've made the mind still and quiet then there is no one to identify with anything and you become free. You don't become free you awaken to the freedom that you already are. Ponder this.

Another mistake that most of us make is that we understand that Brahman is the ultimate reality. The nature of Brahman is bliss, consciousness, peace, love, yet inadvertently we try to manipulate Brahman to give us what we want. This is another thing that holds you back from realization trying to manipulate Brahman. And we don't do it purposely we do it subconsciously, inadvertently. In other words some of us think of our problems so-called or some of our needs and wants, and we think if we pray to Brahman or identify with Brahman or think about Brahman our needs will be met.

Now let me give you a little secret: Brahman doesn't give a damn about you at all!

Because to Brahman you don't exist. You exist to your ego. Brahman doesn't know anything about you. Nothing at all. It's you that knows about yourself. It's what you appear to be right now that thinks it's a somebody or a something. And then you try to identify with something higher or become something higher and manipulate something higher. This is where suffering comes in. For as you try to do this your world falls apart. You cannot manipulate Brahman. You have to leave everything alone. Leave everything alone.

Some people suffering from lack or limitation or from some kind of disease or depression or they're having...want things a certain way believe if they sit down and think of Brahman, Brahman will heal them or will become something for them or do something for them. This again is a grave mistake that you make. For you are wasting your time by believing you're somebody that has to have something. By feeling that you have to be healed or you have to be cured and you need a new body or a new mind or a new mate or something. All this is foolishness.

Remember again that only Brahman exists and you don't. But you think you exist. You believe you exist.

Therefore all these spiritual practices that have been given to you, various sadhanas to lift you a little higher to that place where you become one-pointed. And one day you are able to see that all the sadhanas that you've been doing is a bunch of nonsense. Your spiritual practices have been non-sensical because there is a human being trying to become a higher human being and you don't exist. You just ain't there! Nobody's home!

No matter how many times I tell you this you will still feel your ego telling you things, leading you, guiding you, directing you. You become upset over this, you become upset over that. You will like this, you will love that. All of this is part of the phenomena. Part of the illusion. Part of the maya.

If you can only understand that Brahman is all there is, what is there for you to do. We're not saying Brahman is and then we have to play hide and seek and try to find Brahman. We're saying Brahman is. That's it! Brahman is not this and Brahman is not that. Brahman just is. That's all, that's it. There is absolutely nothing you have to do to find this out, to discover this besides to keep quiet. Do not try to find peace, find happiness, find love how can you do this when Brahman is. If Brahman were an entity then you would have to search for Brahman, try to be like Brahman, try to identify with Brahman. So Brahman is a non-entity. Therefore there is nothing to search for, there is nothing you have to become or to be. Nothing.

Can you feel nothing? It's so beautiful when nothing exists. When there is nothing you have to fix, nothing to straighten out, nothing for you to condemn. Nothing.

Remember you didn't come here to hear a lecture or a talk, you came here to be nothing and you can go home as nothing. Who can actually stop you from being nothing but yourself.

Remember the nothing you're talking about is Brahman, which is consciousness, which is bliss, the absolute reality, which is unalloyed happiness, total peace. This is Brahman, this is you right this moment. There is absolutely nothing to think about.

Do not try to analyze anything I say. Do nothing with what I say. Don't accept it, don't reject it. Don't like it, don't dislike it. Don't be happy about it, don't be sad about it. Do absolutely nothing about it since there is nothing to do, no one to do it to.

Once you understand this and the mind has become quiet, peaceful, the thinking has slowed down considerably, all of your karma, all your samskaras or samsaras are totally wiped out. Karmas, samsaras, samskaras only exists for a human being who believes they are a body. Not for a person who is totally free and peaceful in the mind. What I'm saying to you is the past does not matter. The past cannot hurt you unless you look at yourself as a human being as a body, as a mind. Then you have to concern about the past, the past lives and all sorts of things.

When you stop solving problems and stop trying to do things and manipulate things to become something then there is nothing for you to do.

The whole secret again is to make your mind quiescent by not trying to solve your problems, by not trying to come to conclusions, what's right, what's wrong, what's good, what's bad. If this is difficult for you the next best thing for you to do is self-inquiry.

If you practice self-inquiry you should do so continuously without stopping, night and day. By inquiring, "Who is this person going through this experience? Who is having these feelings? Who feels depressed? Who feels negation? Who feels that they have been dealt a bad hand in life? Who feels they're going to die soon? Who feels all these things?" Ask your self, inquire within yourself. The answer is within yourself. And the answer will come, "I feel this way. "I" feel this way. I feel troubled" Catch yourself saying this and scrutinize the I. "Where did the I come from? The I that feels these things. I've just admitted to myself that I feel this. But am I, I? I, I, I, I, I, I, I, I, I, I. Who is this I? Am I this I? I feels tired, I feels sick, I feels depression, I feels it's too good to be true, I feels all of these things," not you! Not you but "I!" Therefore the next question you ask yourself is, "Where does I come from? What is the source of this I? Where did it come from? How did it get here? Who am I?" When you get to that point you keep totally quiet and still.

For soon you will realize that the I does not exist whatsoever. The I-thought never existed, doesn't exist now, it will never exist. It is simply a thought, an erroneous thought. That's what the I is. Just thinking this way will set you free. What else do you have to think about? Remember there is absolutely nothing for you to think about. You say, "I have to think about my affairs, my life, my money, my job, my security." Who told you, you have to do this? This is the illusion, hallucination I'm talking about.

Brahman again is all in all, you are Brahman, nothing but Brahman, Brahman is consciousness, pure awareness. Consequently does Brahman have to become something or think about something or do something or worry about something? Your life is brahman's life. And when you let go and stop worrying about something, stop thinking about something, then Brahman starts to express itself, as harmony, as bliss, as peace and you will find yourself in your right place going through those experiences and those situations that you have to go through and all is well. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. It's none of your business what happens to you.

If you can only do this and try it and practice it, you will see what I am talking about is real and true. Give it a chance, practice it for one day only and watch what happens. Instead of watching television, reading a newspaper, being concerned about the world and man's inhumanity to man, for one day practice self-inquiry or just being still and watch what happens to you. Watch the direction that you take, you will be moved by the unmovable. You will be carried along by the stream of blessedness to your highest good, by the current that knows the way. What I'm trying to say is that everything will take care of itself. Everything will always take care of itself. And Brahman is the Self!

There is only the Self that is all there is. Brahman, the self, consciousness, these are all synonymous. So stop feeling sorry for yourself. Realize that there is nothing wrong anywhere that what you really are was never born, can never die, does not prevail and be happy, be totally happy. When I say be happy it doesn't mean you have to laugh hysterically all the time. When people continue laughing hysterically all the time, watch those people. (students laugh)

You've heard that song, "Crying on the inside, laughing on the outside?" Many people put on an exterior laugh all the time and laugh hysterically are hiding a lot of problems inside. So you don't want to become an entity of laughter. It's good to laugh, it's good to cry, it's good to be yourself, it's good to do nothing but do not put anything on that you don't feel. Surrender to the power that knows the way. Give up. To say give up does not seem too positive. But what I'm referring to is give up your belief in your humanity, that there are mistakes, that there is something wrong. This is how you help the world. This is how you bring peace into this world, by knowing your Self. For when you become acquainted with your Self you will see your Self wherever you look. And if you're experiencing the Self you're experiencing harmony, peace, bliss, joy, happiness, therefore wherever you look you will see these entities, you'll see these things.

Start today, do something for yourself. Be at peace with yourself. All is well. Peace.

It is now time to play stump the guru. If you stump the guru I disappear. (laughter)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert, tell me what you do not know? (laughter)

SH: That's stumped the guru. (laughter)

A: The answer is silence. There is no answer, it's silence. It's only silence. Next case.

Q: This could be a continuation, I don't know? Are you just a walking, breathing embodiment of the higher Self as far as your identification is concerned?

A: I'm not walking, I'm not being, I don't exist. What you see is your business. (students laugh and someone claps their hands) You can think anything you like. But I will not admit to it. (laughter) Next.

Q: Is not your experience as if you were just watching a continuous movie?

A: What movie? I saw a movie last week. (laughter) The movie plays again and again. There is no movie to watch. There is nothing to do. I'm not watching a movie. If I was watching movies that movie would exist. There is no movie to watch. There is nothing to do. The movie is over. (laughter) Great movie. Next case.

Q: Some people desire to leave the body and go to spirit, however you seem to desire nothing. Are you happy whether you stay with Robert or drop any connection with the body of Robert? Do you desire any change in dimension?

A: There is no one left to decide that. There is nobody home who makes decisions like this. There is nothing for me to decide what to want or to need. I just am and everything happens that is supposed to happen. I make no decisions, no judgments, I do nothing. Yet things happen the way they're supposed to. That is why I always say, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should." There is nothing to do. What has to be done? Nothing. Next.

Q: If you could change what is, what would you change? This world of matter, peoples beliefs, peoples actions, laws of physical or karmic world, how long it takes your disciple, devotees to self-realize.

A: You're speaking to an entity and the entity doesn't exist. Who am I to want to change anything? I'm not looking to change things or make things better or worse. I just am. I'm not this, I'm not that, I'm not trying to make anything happen to any place. Just me, the way I-am, nothing. No changes, nothing new, nothing old. Everything just is. That's the way it goes. (laughter)

SR: Maybe you should disappear?

R: I will soon. Mary? (SM: That's it Robert.) That's it Robert. Anyone like to say anything or something?

SF: Yeah there is something I've been wondering about. A while back we had some discussion about out of the body experiences. Where from what you said I got the impression that what happens is, an individual without losing his individual identity somehow gets transported to another plane. I think you used the term, the causal plane or the astral plane. My impression is that those planes are no more real and no less real than this plane which I sometimes understand is called the relative plane. And in any case they're all unreal. And I know when Maharshi was asked, "What is it like when an individual dies," he said, "why do you want to know what it's like after you die before you know what it's like to live?" And he also would say as always, "Who wants to know?" So I guess the whole idea is to forget the whole thing. (laughter)

R: Why say it at all. (laughter) Why say it at all. You're right. You're right. You're absolutely right. (SF: I thought I was but that's...) (laughter) Every plane, every phenomena comes out of the mind. Comes out of your mind. You create everything. Causal planes, astral planes, mental planes it's all your own creation. Out of the body experiences all come out of the mind. When the mind is gone it all stops and you become eternal bliss which you always have been. So there is nothing to become, nothing to be, nothing to change, nowhere to go, you're already home. Just where you are right now, that's it. That is all there is.

SY: For me you're giving new meaning to the expression, "thanks for nothing." (laughter)

R: (laughs) You're welcome. (laughter)

SJ: Think nothing of it. (laughter)

ST: Robert in your talk here it reminds me of this... in concerning what Ramana Maharshi wrote, I want to reiterate and that was that Brahman is real, only Brahman is real, the world is unreal, Brahman is the world. Now, if consciousness is totally unaware of it, totally unconcerned with the world, it would seem to me that a God-realized man who realizes the absolute which is in coincidence with realizing and experiencing the phenomenal world that he has put one foot in the absolute and one foot in the phenomenal world, one foot in being and one foot in becoming. He is actually in a superior position to the Godhead itself. If it is a compassionate God-realized being. (R: What's the question?) Well how can there be an absolute that is totally unconcerned with the world and how can that be squared with a God-realized Master who is fully conscious of the world and compassionate towards the world and at the same time is totally God-realized and fully aware of the absolute as the absolute.

R: Who asked this question? Who asks this kind of a question? That's what you see, from your viewpoint. That doesn't exist that way. In reality only Brahman exists as Brahman. The statement Brahman exists as the world means only Brahman exists. There is no world, there is nothing happening. Nothing is going on, the way you see it, the way you explain it. There is noone with a foot here and a foot there, a hand here and a hand there. That's your imagination, nothing exists like that whatsoever. The world does not exist whatsoever at all. There is noone who exists who does anything. Nothing has to be done. Everything has been done that has to be done. All is well.

ST: Another question. How does that account for our misidentification though with the body and the mind? And even our misidentification with getting to the point where we think that we're transcending the body and the mind because we're starting to get a sample of the self where that's still more like atman or atman and as I understand it, the realization is when the atman realizes its karma mind. How can there be this step where we are at right now and that realization? It's unreal to be done with?

R: You're just answered your own question. It's not real to begin with. There are no steps, who is taking the step? The one who thinks he is a human being, a person, place or thing takes a step. Go beyond that. There is noone to take any step there is noone to do anything. Nothing has to be done. There is nothing to do. You don't exist! Accept that you don't exist and be free. And all this stuff and everything else will disappear from your viewpoint. As long as you think you're real you're a body then what you're saying is true. There are steps to take, this to do, that to do, that's from your viewpoint. When you go higher than that you will see there is nothing to do, no steps to take, nobody to do anything because there's no world. The world is an hallucination. You're hallucinating. Go see a psychiatrist. (laughter)

ST: The next question would be, how do we know when we have transcended that hallucination?

R: A little birdie will tell... (break in tape) (laughter)

SR: There'll be no you to know. (R: Exactly.)

SY: Robert is it predetermined, when? (laughter) You know is there a when, when the hallucination leaves? Is it predetermined? Do you just relax and be, and then at some point it automatically - for every person?

R: It never came so how can there be an end to it? It was never there to begin with. You think something happened to you and now you're going to have to get rid of it. Nothing has happened. You never were and you never will be. There is nothing you have to do. Just be still and everything will take care of itself. There is no point when something happens. If something happens that means there was something wrong to begin with and then something has to happen to be right. (SY: But how does the veil happen?) It never happened. Nothing ever happened. You feel something happened but nothing ever happened. Nothing is happening, nothing will ever happen. It's like the water in the mirage. There appears to be water in the desert, you try to grab it, you grab sand. Like the sky is blue. Like the snake in the rope. These things are all hallucinations they don't exist. Life is like that, it appears to be real then upon investigation you will find life never existed. You'll be okay don't worry.

SL: When you say a stillness that we need with all this illusion is keeping the stillness as we go through because to be still in the being through the action as we, through work, through the jobs, through the things that we have to do, we don't have to do but yet there is things to tend to, whether we have family or things. But in the process of the illusion what I've got is the stillness. Going through this but the stillness I'm not really - but as we do.

R: True. But realize that you are not the doer. Everything that you're doing or what you're supposed to be doing has been preordained for you. (SL: Exactly.) So you're not the doer there is nothing that you're doing. (SL: It's just going - in the flight.) Everything is happening. (SL: Yeah.) So let it happen leave it alone. It will take care of itself. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. (SL: But keeping the stillness?) By trying to keep still in the situation of action you can't keep still. But when you realize there is no action, nobody is acting, nobody is doing anything then you'll keep still.

SY: Help other people believe in their hallucinations? (R: Say that again?) Helping other people believe in their hallucinations?

R: You're not doing anything like that. It's not up to you to do anything like that. (SY: Don't do anything.) Everything will happen by itself. (SY: Right.) You're not helping or not helping. (SY: Okay. Helping wasn't the right word.) You're not doing anything for anybody. (SY: Got you.)

SL: Then just be? (SY: Be, right.)

SI: Where is the doing come from?

R: From nowhere, doing appears to be real but there is nobody doing anything. It doesn't exist.

SI: I find that since I've been coming here I find myself wanting to withdraw more and more from my ordinary activities, like at night I like to go home and light a candle and read your notes. Look into what you've been saying. And since I've been coming, which is a really short period of time only a month or so. I feel a greater peace and a greater, much more expansiveness but this issue of the doer is the one that has got me confused because what I had decided to do with myself is just to bide my time between being still and being involved in the hallucination, do you know what I mean?

R: You're trying to be holy don't do that. Just be your Self. When the mind is quiet you'll do whatever you have to do. (SI: So it's okay to do it?) Sure. (laughter) (SI: Just what I needed to know.) Do not separate one thing from the other, it's all one.

(pause)

Prashad.

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

YOU WILL BE THE ENTIRE UNIVERSE

10th December, 1992

Robert: Shanti shanti shanti om peace, peace, peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert) It's wonderful being with you again. Good seeing you. I see we have a few new faces here, welcome.

I want you to ask yourself, "Why am I here at satsang tonight? What is my purpose? What is the real reason I'm here?" Ask yourself. Did you come to check out the speaker. To compare him to other speakers. Did you come to hear something profound, strange, unearthly, that's good because that is exactly what you are going to hear strange things, unearthly things, weird things.

SE: And murder too. (R: True.)

Robert continues: What do you believe that you are? What do you think of yourself? You believe that you were born, you go through experiences on this earth. You meet different people have different experiences with each person. Then you get old and die. None of this is true. You were never born, you do not get old, you do not prevail and you do not exist. What gave you the idea that you were a human being subject to birth, death and destruction? What gave you the idea that you exist to begin with?

Noone exists. Nothing exists. The universe does not exist and your thoughts, the thinker of these things does not exist. Just think if it weren't for your thoughts you wouldn't have any problems of existence and non-existence, of enlightenment and non-enlightenment. You only think about these things because you have a mind so-to-speak that doesn't exist either. But you believe you have a mind you have thoughts, you have ideas, concepts, beliefs.

Where do they all come from?

They didn't come from anywhere. They never came at all. Where did your belief come from to be able to think this? You're not really thinking anything nobody is doing a thing. There is only consciousness, the absolute reality which is the Self. And I'm not too sure about that either. (students laugh) You want something to exist. You want a better world, a peaceful world. You want enlightenment, you want liberation.

What are these things that you are looking for? Where did you hear about them?

You've read many books, voluminous books, thousands of books about Saints and gurus, about liberation, saving yourself they're all a bunch of lies.

You would have been better off if you never read anything at all, never believed anything, never did a thing. Just be. Just be yourself. That is all you have to do. There is nothing else you have to do. You don't have to practice sadhanas or meditations or japa or pranayama or anything.

Who are you that you have to do these things? What do you think you are that you have to practice all these things year after year after year? To what avail? To what purpose? To become enlightened and then what?

You believe if you are enlightened your life will be better. This is a great mistake because if you're enlightened you have no life to be better.

Where would the better come from? Your life exists because you think you're human. So if you didn't exist at all there would be no life to be better or worse. You have to come to the conclusion yourself. I do not exist, I never existed, I never will exist then, "Who am I? If I do not exist then who am I? What am I all about?"

You are not the "I" to begin with, you are not the "am" and you are not the "who." So "Who am I?" even becomes redundant. Somebody has to say, "Who am I?" and the somebody who says it does not exist. Therefore there is only "Who am I?" when there is a being around to say it. If you knew who you were you'd have nothing to say. Because you don't know who you are you have plenty to say.

What good are all these words you've been speaking all of your life? What have they done for you? All these frustrations you've been through. Trying to make your life a better life. Trying to heal yourself. Trying to make yourself happy. Who needs this? Who wants this? Who wants to be happy? Who wants to live a good life? Can't you see it's all an illusion? The good life that you're yearning for?

Where we have uninterrupted happiness and peace and joy, there is no such life. Where would it come from?

Yet the opposite does not exist either. In other words there is no evil in this world. Evil does not exist. There are no problems. Opposites do not exist. Nothing exists. I don't exist and you don't exist. So why are we having this dialogue, this conversation? Why am I talking? Who is talking? Who is the teacher and who is the student? Who is dead and who is alive? Who is happy and who is sad? Find out, inquire and then ask, "Who is inquiring?" If you go through this you will find that you don't exist whatsoever.

Yet the appearance is very strong with some people. The appearance of death, sickness, lack, limitation. The appearance of happiness, fortune, joy, peace. They're all part of duality. All part of the nonsense of this universe, the leela, the maya. And yet the leela and the maya do not exist either.

I'm trying to take everything away from you as you can see. Everything that you ever believed. Every concept you ever had. Every idea that you had of getting enlightened, becoming free, becoming liberated. Every idea and belief of thinking that you're not liberated. That you have to get liberated. All of these things I'm trying to remove from your thinking patterns and then you remove your thinking patterns. You have to leave yourself empty, totally empty. To be totally fulfilled you've got to be totally empty first.

You have to look at your past and say, "Forget it." The past is dead. Forget about all the mistakes you made, the rough times you had. The people who abused you, hurt you. The people who have loved, fed you, gave birth to you. This is all in the past. As far as you're concerned it never happened because you can't bring it back now. It's only a memory.

And what is the future? The future is part of your false imagination. You see into the future whatever you think you are. But for who is there a future? For who is there a past? For whom is there a present? There is nothing to hold onto. Never forget this. You have absolutely nothing to hold onto just empty space, boundless space.

Is there something beyond boundless space? Is there something else? What about all this bliss I hear about? The unalloyed happiness I hear about? The total joy that an enlightened person feels? How do you know what an enlightened person feels? You imagine all these things. There is no difference in you believing that an enlightened person feels unalloyed happiness, bliss and joy and the old fashion people who believe they are going to go to heaven and sing songs for the rest of their lives. There is no difference.

Stop mapping things out. Stop thinking the way things should be, what you'd like. Everything happens by itself. It doesn't need any help from you. Who do you think you are trying to help the infinite know itself. Things begin to happen when you drop everything. Things begin to you happen when you don't want anything. When you stop searching. When you stop planning. When you stop being afraid. When you have no desires. Then things begin to happen.

What happens?

What happens is beyond time and space. So how can I tell you. What happens is beyond words and thoughts. So how can I explain it to you? What happens is so vastly different from what you've imagined that if it came to you all of a sudden you wouldn't be able to contain it, you would blow up to pieces. You would leave your body totally, completely if you were able to grasp it right now. Suffice it to say what happens when you reach reality it's different than anything you could ever imagine. Just different. It's different than the stories you've read. It's different to what words tell you. It's different than anything you can ever imagine or be. There is no words to describe it.

Yet when this happens to you, it's already happened to you but you don't know it you will just be the entire universe. So you'll be all-pervading consciousness. You'll be the mountains, the sky, the plants, the animals, the people this would be you. It's difficult to fathom this in your present state. How can I be the animals and the people and the mountains and the sky? Yet you are already that now. That's what you already are, right now. Therefore develop a good disposition. Develop loving kindness. Develop peaceful attitudes. This is the way it begins.

Unfortunately many of us have not gone through the beginning stages. We want someone to touch us, to look at us, to illumine us and we go on everyday being the same old me, me, me we've always been.

You should imagine that you're already enlightened. How would you act then? How would you act towards people, towards places, towards things if you're already awakened? Intellectually you have an idea. The first thing you do is realize that everything is you. So how would you treat yourself? You know that the way you treat others is the way you treat yourself. How you react to people, places and things is the way you react to yourself. But there is only the one Self and you are that. Even knowing this intellectually is very good for it makes you a better person. You stop wanting and desiring trying to become something. Rather you give yourself away completely. You surrender completely.

There is one very important way in which to alleviate all problems, alleviate all error, alleviate all ignorance and find your true Self. And that way is to love yourself. To really love yourself. It sounds easy but try it it's not easy to totally and completely love yourself just the way you are. When you begin to love yourself this way you automatically rise to a higher state of consciousness. For you're loving the Self when you love yourself. You are really loving the one Self which is omnipresent and all-pervading. Therefore when you love yourself you love everything that exists. Nothing is left out of that love. Nothing. And this is what raises your consciousness. This is what transforms you. Forget about being enlightened, awakening. That will take care of itself.

But see how you react everyday. Look at the things that disturb you, make you angry, upset. If you realize that you are a God would you become upset over anything? Would you react to anything? Would you become depressed and disillusioned and feel strange about anything? Of course not. For being in God you're everywhere present, you're all-pervading. Everything is you. So if you're upset over anything you're upset over yourself. Be happy, allow yourself to be happy. For no reason whatsoever.

It is erroneous to believe that if you get something you like then you'll be happy. For you know by now how it works. When you wish to attain something. Say you want to buy a new car. You save your money to buy a new car. You're striving to save the money. Your mind is always on this new car that you want to buy. Then you finally have enough money to buy the car and you feel happy. But what is really happy? Is it the car that has made you happy? Of course not. It is the mind that achieved its goal. When the mind achieves its goal it rests in the heart, it goes back into the heart and the heart center is really pure happiness. So happiness ensues. Yet you are saying that it is the car that made you happy. It's not the car at all. It's the mind going back into the heart that the happiness came from.

Think about this. When the mind returns to the heart center then happiness ensues all by itself. So the person who intellectually knows what I'm talking about realize that if you can make the mind go back into the heart without any effort, without anythings whatsoever without any desires, without any wants then the same feeling will come if they had something they wanted to buy or needed and they achieved it. In other words you can fulfill yourself and be happy without anything whatsoever. By allowing the mind to go back into the heart where it belongs then the Self ensues and you're happy. Totally happy.

But most people think that people, places and things make them happy. But you can tell if you go back in retrospect this doesn't work that way. For when you've achieved your desire how long does it last before you become unhappy again and looking for something new again?

Take for instance the example of human love. You meet someone new you fall in love with the person and you've got to have that person. That is all you can think about, that person, day and night. The time comes when you get that person and you live together and get married whatever. The mind has gone back into the heart and you've achieved what you wanted. But as time passes it changes. You take the person for granted. It's not the same anymore. The mind has come way out again. It's come back out. The mind has become active again looking for something else. Wanting something new. And then you become miserable until you get something new.

So the average person goes through this day after day, week after week, month after month. Always believing they have to have this, they have to have that. If they have certain things they will be really happy if they don't they won't. What a waste of energy, what a waste of life.

Know for sure that happiness is your birth right, you already have it, you possess it, it's yours. Bliss is your birth right, you already have it, you possess it, it's yours. It has nothing to do with person, place and thing. Your real nature is Brahman which is consciousness all-pervading absolute reality. This is your real Self. This is what you are. Awaken to yourself. Now. Be yourself. Peace.

Feel free to ask questions, to make statements.

SF: I have something that I want to check on. It's kind of heavy so I wrote it down. (R: Okay Henry.) Sir? (R: That's good Frederick.) Because I get confused sometimes when I think of these things. Anyway this is what I put down. This psychosomatic apparatus known as Fred Barnell, has a role to play in this cosmic dance, this leela, and is no more real and no less real and in no way separate from the other players such as Billy Graham or Charlie Manson or Jesus or Judas or Dr Schwartz or Adolf Hitler? That's hope?

R: You are all of these people. They're all you and you are them. You're not any different than anybody. But why think about those things? Why not put... (SF: They are mental concepts that are valueless.) That Fred, Fred Barnell doesn't exist. Who is Fred Barnell? It's a person who has a name called Fred Barnell. But who are you for real? Who are you truly? Are you really Fred Barnell? (SF: Something other than that.) You're way way different from Fred Barnell. Do not think of yourself as Fred Barnell. Do not think of yourself as anybody or anything. Just do not think at all. And what you are will come out by itself and you will begin to shine. Fred will be gone to the garbage dump. And you really won't... (SH: Congratulations!) ...come back. (SF: Sir?) You really will be there. The real Self what you are really is already shining, is already there you are that now. Love yourself.

SR: Robert? (R: A voice in back of my head.) (laughter) Robert why do you say, "Love yourself," instead of saying, "love the Self?"

R: Because if I say, "Love the Self," you won't know what to love. If I say, "Love the Self," how can you love the Self when you believe you are a human being? That's virtually impossible. So when I say, "Love yourself," when you love yourself the way you are automatically you rise in consciousness and become the real Self. (SR: I see.) But it begins by loving yourself just the way you are. (SR: So you're saying to love the body-mind self and that in turn will lead you to the higher Self?) Yes, but when you love your body-mind self do not think about being your body-mind self or about your sins of omission or commission or your past or future, don't see yourself as a body at all but love yourself just the same. Love yourself without outlining. Love yourself without judgment. Love yourself the way you are in this moment. When you get up in the morning look in the mirror and say, "I love you Self. I love my Self." Do not think who your Self is. Or you'll come up with the human self. Do not go into your past or your future or the present. Just be there loving your self. And loving your self this way will take care of everything else.

But if you begin to say, "I love myself," and your mind brings up all kinds of episodes in your life then you'll hate yourself. That is not the way to do it. Love yourself without qualification and then your higher Self will come into play.

(silence)

Mary would you like to read the Jnani?

SM: Yes Robert I would.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Announcements?

SE: No satsang on Saturday.

SM: Right. No satsang on Saturdays any more for a while and there will be no satsang on Wednesday, oh no, on Thursday it'll be on Wednesday...

(Announcements continue)

R: Anything else we should talk about or forever hold your peace.

It is time for prashad. We have a shopping bag full of goodies. (laughter)

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 208

LOVE YOUR SELF

13th December, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, om, shanti, shanti, om. Peace, peace, peace.

Good afternoon. It's good being with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to see all these smiling faces once more. Happy face. Let's see the happy face.

Be happy, be happy right now. There is nothing in this world that will make you unhappy, nothing! What would make you unhappy? There is absolutely nothing that will make you unhappy, except your thoughts, your thinking, your belief, your habit patterns that you've carried around for years and years. Only this would make you unhappy. You're thinking about the past or you're thinking about the future. Instead of staying centered right now in the moment, you choose to think about the past and the future. In this moment nothing is going on. In this moment there is total peace, total love, total joy, total harmony. But when you start thinking about it, it changes, doesn't it?

The idea is to stay centered, stay centered in the moment, in total harmony, in total joy, in total peace. Stay totally centered without thinking at all, if you can, and you'll see that you'll always be happy, for there is a power and a presence that takes care of everything. It is the Self, which is always happy, pure, peaceful. This is you, if you stay centered.

Again most of you are waiting for me to give you a lecture, or a talk, or a sermon, or whatever you call it. But what if I told you that the talk you are waiting for me to give you, is already within you. Everything that I'm saying to you, you already know. It's within your Self. Everything I'm sharing with you is within your Self. You are that. You've always had it. There is nothing new I'm telling you. Everything you've got. You've got it all, within you, right now, right this minute. You brought it with you at birth. When you were born everything came with you, everything.

You have created me out of yourself. I am merely an image of yourself. If you weren't born, I would not exist. And it is because you were born that I exist for you. You gave me birth, as well as the entire universe. It is you who gave birth to God. It is you who gave birth to all the goddesses, all of the gods, all of the worlds, all of the universes. Before you were born, where were they? Did they exist? For whom did they exist?

You don't know if anything existed before you were born. You say that everything existed before you were born. But it's just a dream. When you were born everything came into play. When you took birth everything happened like it is now. You created everything. Think about this, ponder this. It is out of you that all things emanated. The gods that you pray to, the beings that you see, the world and the universe that you see, is all an expression of yourself, nothing else. Consequently see only the good, see only the happy, the joy, the peace. See only that which you wish to experience.

For everything you see becomes your experience. Why believe something is wrong someplace? Why believe something is not right, and blame someone, when you gave birth to it yourself. It is your creation. This is something you should always be aware of, always. I am sitting here talking to you, but I've come out of you, and the things that I say to you, you already know. They're within yourself. Feel this. You are the one. There is no one else but you. Yet there is not two of you or three of you, or four of you. There is only the one, only the one expressing as yourself.

On Thursday we were discussing the easiest and fastest way to solve a problem, to get out of your misery, that you may be in, get out of your depression, whatever, is to love yourself. Yet some people didn't get it too much. I received four or five phone calls regarding this. I didn't elaborate on it too much. We'll discuss it a little bit now.

People ask me, "Well, do you love the higher Self? Do you love the lower self? How do you love yourself?" It's true, if you love yourself there would be no problems for you at all, nothing. There would be total harmony and happiness all the time, if you learn to love yourself. And the self that I'm speaking about is not the higher self, or the lower self, for most of you don't understand what the higher Self is at all. You just read about it. You heard me speak about it. People told you about a higher Self, but you've not had a direct experience of it. So as far as you are concerned, no higher self exists for you. So how can you love it? It's an illusion.

As far as your lower self is concerned, that appears to be your physical material self. That's the self that is a sinner, that makes all kinds of mistakes, does all the wrong things perhaps, has to struggle to survive. That's the lower self. Surely you're not going to love that self? So what self do you love?

You love the self that appears in the moment. In the moment the self that appears has no problems, has nothing to do with higher selves or lower selves. It just is. As you begin to love the self, without thinking about it, things begin to happen. You're loving the self that is in the now, the self that is in the moment, the self that appears every moment, from moment, from moment. That is the self that you love. It has no past, no future. The self I'm referring to is born every moment, fresh and new. That is the self that you love, continuously. But when the mind starts playing tricks with you, bringing up the past, or the present, or the future, you can't love it then. Let go. You may look in the mirror, and feel the love for the self that you see in the moment, when there's no past, no background, no future.

The question again arises, how do I make love to this self? You imagine in your mind the most beautiful thing you can ever comprehend. Think of somebody or something that you have fantastic love for. It may be your dog, or your cat, or a person, or a place, or a thing. Something in your life that you love ultimately, with no strings attached.

It may be a deity. It may be the Buddha, or the Christ, or Krishna, or a teacher, or something that means something to you, that you have unconditioned love for. You have to have unconditioned love for this, whatever it is, and feel that love, and realize that love that you're feeling is for yourself. You are that yourself. You are the Krishna, you are the God, you are the Buddha, you are the Christ, you are the deity, you are the guru. It is you, yourself, and feel that love.

This requires practice. But I can assure you if you practice this, you'll see results very fast. Loving yourself is one of the oldest spiritual techniques in the world. Yet most people never understood it, because they think they have to love the self they are, that appears. Or they think that they have to love God. You can't love God, you don't know what God is. You can't love Brahman, or the absolute reality, or pure awareness, for you have not experienced these things. You have to love something that you've experienced, and it is yourself. And it expands, it becomes omnipresence, all-pervading. If you're doing this correctly you will then see that you can go out and love everything that you see, everyone, without qualification. You will not let anyone out of your love, and it will not be an effort for you to do this. It is then that beautiful things happen to you. It is then that you start to feel something that you never felt before, something so grand, so joyous, so wonderful, so beautiful, and it has always been yourself. That's the funny thing about it, it's always been you.

You are not what you think you are, no one is. You are not the body, nor the mind, nor the experiences, nor are you the doer. This is not you. You are not the person who has made all the mistakes in the past, that feels sorry for herself or himself. This is not you at all.

Just the way you appear right now, this is God appearing, this is Brahman appearing.

Remember there are not two selves. There's not a higher self and a lower self. There's only the Self, and you are that, just the way you are right now, this moment. There's nothing you have to do to make it happen, to make it appear. You do not have to beseech it, or petition it, or pray to it, or desire it, or want it. You have to be! Just be! Be that which you always were. Be that now, this moment, pure unconditioned Self, the Brahman.

Nothing else exists but you. You are the one. You have always existed. There never was a time when you were born, or that you die, or that you prevail in between. Who prevails? There's no one to prevail. There's no one to experience anything. There's no one to express anything. There's no one to be anything. Know yourself as boundless space, as pure awareness.

Feel it. Feel it in your heart. Feel how good it feels. There is only joy, only love.

Give up thinking. The only power your thoughts have is the power you give it yourself. When you laugh at your thoughts, they dissipate, they go away. But when you believe your thoughts, they become more powerful. They make up all kinds of things.

Know that you are already free. Know that you are already liberated. You do not have to take courses, find teachers, do meditation. You are totally, absolutely free right now. Total freedom. Free of everything that's happened to you in the past. Free of karma, free of samskaras, free from the illusion of samsara. You're not the person who has to experience karma. That person is dead, never existed. For whom is there karma, but for the one who believes they are a body? As you give up your body right now, you give up karma also. You give up everything, and you become totally free.

The world can never harm you when you know who you are. When you believe you're the ocean, you have everything. When you believe you're the bubble on the ocean, that comes and goes, then you have things for short amounts of time. The bubbles burst on the ocean, the waves come and go, but the ocean remains the same.

When you go to the movie, you look at the screen, you see images. Images changing, changing, changing. There's a beginning, a middle, and an end, the images. But the screen always remains the same. The screen never changes. Would you rather be the screen or the images? The screen is always at peace. Just stands there, unaffected by anything. Different movies are shown on the screen, continuously, day after day, week after week, year after year. The images come and go, but the screen remains the same.

Look at your life that way. If you become affected by the vicissitudes of life, then you're like the images, identifying with the images. And you can take a step backwards and just observe and watch the images, which are people, places, things, and nothing can harm you, for you're like the screen. So you make your choice. What do you want to be, like the ocean, the screen, or like the bubbles on the ocean, or the images on the screen?

Know who you are. You do not have to find yourself or look for yourself, because you were never lost. Your nature is consciousness. Your nature is pure awareness. Your nature is absolute reality.

This will never change, no matter what you do to yourself, no matter how you abuse yourself, it can't change your divine nature. You can never change that. No matter what appears to be going on in this world, what's happening in this world doesn't matter. What's happening in your life matters, the way you react to things, the way you judge things. This determines what happens to you.

So become like a person who does not react to things. Do not judge things. Leave things alone and become totally free. Why not do this now?

Those of you who have trouble with what I'm talking about and need a technique to work with. There is a technique we can practice together, that will help tremendously. We'll do this now.

Close your eyes. As you inhale say to yourself, "Who am I?" Before you exhale say to yourself, "I am Brahman," and as you exhale say to yourself, "I am not the body." You're inhaling you say, "Who am I?" In between inhaling and exhaling you say, "I am Brahman," and exhale and you say, "I am not the body."

If you don't like to use the word Brahman, you can change it to whatever you like. You can say I am the Christ, I am Buddha. Say whatever you want. But understand what you're doing. You are declaring the truth about yourself. "Who am I?" as you inhale, "I am Brahman," before you exhale, "I am not the body," with exhalation. Let's practice this for a while.

(silence)

(break in tape, starts abruptly)

R: ...Stump the guru. Stump the guru time. Henry is trying to burn us up. You turned the heater on. The first stumper.

SV: Maybe a stumpee you don't know? (R: Stumpee, could be?)

SH: I hope somebody stumps you one day, that'll be good. A great day. (laughter)

SV: It'll never happen.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Robert since your identification with Self is complete. (and there is a tiny little question mark) Why does your body not drop away?

A: Who says my body has not dropped away? If you see a body I can't help you. Who tells you to see a body. Where does this vision come from? Who has it? Who tells you that I am a body? This is what your limited vision shows you, this is what it tells you. I can assure you that I am not a body and neither are you. There are no bodies here at all. No body is home. You see all the bodies sitting here? You're seeing a mirage, an illusion. They do not exist. Always remember it is you who sees these things. And you should inquire, "To whom do these things come?" That is the best method of getting rid of this. By inquiring, "Who sees this? To whom does it come? Who feels it? I do, well, who am I?" Keep doing this until the body form disappears. I'm not saying that I do not see you as a body. If I didn't see you as a body I wouldn't be able to function with you. But I see you as a bubble on the ocean, as an image on the screen. But for some reason I'm able to go through it and see the ocean and see the screen when I keep my mind on the image. And since there is one screen or one ocean I always see myself, wherever I look. Therefore I see you as perfect and pure and happy and joyous.

Q: There is a follow up to that Robert. Can you tell me who or what was feeling warm and had to take the jacket off?

A: Whatever you feel it was. What do you think it was? Whatever you believe that is what it is. As I said, if I didn't sort of have an image of a body, I wouldn't be able to function, I wouldn't be here. But you see the body has to eat, has to drink, is warm or cold or whatever but it's not the body. But it appears to be the body. It appears to be a body. It's all an appearance. Like the sky appears blue. It's not blue. It just appears like that. As the clouds seem to rest on top of the mountain peak. But the clouds aren't resting on the mountain peak. As the water is in a mirage. But there is no water at all, it's only a mirage. So it is that the body appears to be real too. The body appears this way yet it doesn't exist.

If you investigate closely you will see it doesn't exist. If you truly investigate the nature of the body, you will see that there is no body that exists and never has existed. And yet it goes on as if it does exist. But it doesn't exist. Nothing exists.

What we call the Self exists as the Self and nothing else. It is Self contained absolute reality. And that is your nature, that is what you really are. As you contemplate your nature you become what you contemplate eventually. So do not contemplate yourself as a body going through experiences, having problems going through this and having to do that. Contemplate yourself as a Brahman, as the absolute awareness. Always catch yourself. Remember to see yourself in your true image. You may forget for a while but catch yourself more and more. And as you keep catching yourself the time will come when you don't have to think about it at all. You will no longer be a body or mind or an ego. You will be free and liberated. Next case.

Q: There is one word I can't make on this. Is sickness just a purification system just to get rid of extreme negativity off the planet. Is the goal of sickness just the self cleansing the body of a person and the earth planet?

A: If there is no body what needs cleansing? If a body doesn't exist, who are you cleansing? What are you cleansing? What is there to cleanse? Forget about cleansing. Try to see the world as it is, an illusion. See your body as part of the illusion. Do not think of yourself as having a healthy body or a sick body or any body at all.

Go higher than that, go beyond it. Go beyond everything. Do not limit yourself whatsoever in any way. Let come what may. Do not attach yourself to conditions. Attach yourself to absolute nothing, zero. Know the truth about yourself. That you are free and liberated right now. Everything will take care of itself. Everything will take care of itself if you don't worry about it. Do not concern yourself about it. Everything will work itself out, beautifully. In a way you know not of. But you must begin the motion by realizing this world and your body and the universe only exists because you believe you are real as a body. If you didn't feel yourself as a body nothing would be real to you. As long as you feel yourself as a body, everything appears real.

In other words it begins with you, where you are right now. Do not try to change outer conditions. Do not try to change the world. Change yourself. Know the truth about yourself. And then you'll see the world as yourself, perfect and pure.

Q: Would you rather that we not tell our friends about you unless it happens spontaneously? Or is it okay to let our mind think it would be nice to tell person X and then tell the person?

A: Well as most of you know, I'm not looking for name or fame or anything. I do not want to set myself up as a teacher or anything else. I'm just here with the people who seem to come here. I'm glad that we can hold about 50 people and no more. Unless we'll have to go away somewhere else. I'm not looking for anything. So why make a big fuss about this. If you do know of someone who is really sincere about spiritual life and you think they're are ready for something like this by all means bring them if you like. But do not go around broadcasting the meetings for we get so many seekers who come to look, to observe. And on some other day they go somewhere else to look and observe.

People run around the world all the time, seeking, trying to find the right thing, the right teacher, the right satsang and they do this for years and years and years and get nowhere. As you surrender to the Self, as you surrender to the satsang, as you let go of all your motivations, as you let go of all the feelings the thoughts, the ideas about satsang and you just come here with an open heart, you will start seeing things happen to you.

Many of you have told me how it is with you that you're beginning to see reality, you're beginning to see the truth. The world no longer affects or bothers you nor causes you pain, you're making good headway. Because you're being your Self.

You are not thinking about other people, pleasing them or not pleasing them, making them happy or unhappy. For you are beginning to know that you are the other people yourself, you are them. And therefore if you take care of yourself they will be helped tremendously. Because they are all part of the one Self.

This is how you bring peace into the world. By becoming peaceful. By becoming an embodiment of pure peace. Then wherever you see you'll see peace. It all begins with you. Leave everything alone, don't push. Just keep doing what you're doing and everything will take care of itself.

That's all Robert.

(tape ends) [TOC]

IT'S ALL COMING FROM YOU!

17th December, 1992

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om peace, peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) It is good to be with you again. It is wonderful to see ugly pusses once more. It's a pleasure being with you. I love you with all my heart, unconditionally, totally.

When I say, "I love you," I really mean I love you, totally unconditionally. It is not like the love that some of you give people when things are going your way. When most people love someone they love them because they're getting something from the person or like the way they do things. But I don't care what you do I love you anyway. What you want to do is up to you and that will not change the love I have for you. Simply because I love my Self, not Robert. Robert doesn't exist. But love exists all by itself and I am that. It is all-pervading consciousness. Consequently I can only love you because that is the only feeling I've got.

Makes no difference if you shoot me, stab me, cut me to pieces, I can only love you. That is all I can do. I can't do anything else. For there is only one and that one is I-am that I-am. There is only one consciousness, one reality, one truth, one love, they are all synonymous and there is nothing else, nothing else.

Therefore when you feel something else, when you feel doubt, apprehension, suspicion, fear, ask yourself who feels this? Where does this feeling come from? Why do I feel this? Of course you can only do this when you understand that there is only one power. There is no other feeling but the one power in all your emotion. Only one. That one is I-am. There is nothing else.

So when some of you have various feelings all day long. You feel happy, you feel sad, you feel frightened, you feel like you're going to succeed, you feel like a failure, you have all of these feelings all during the day. Inquire, "To whom do these feelings come? Who has all these feelings? Where did they come from?" You don't exist. For I have explained to you that only love exists, only the one. Where do the others come from? Where do they come from all these apprehensions, these fears? There is virtually no place where they can come from. For love again is the only power. It is all-pervading consciousness, it is self-contained and there is nothing else. That's it! This is the truth about you whether you like it or not! That's right, you are a wonderful being whether you accept this or not. You are a God. Accept this.

If you will watch yourself, some of you, you will notice that when things don't go your way, when certain things come into your life you begin to pray to God. But you should catch yourself when you do this. Remember you are an Advaitist, you are an Advaitist, a non-duality person. So to whom are you praying when you pray to God? To whom do you pray? Where does this God live that you pray to? Who is this God that you're praying to? I know some people can tell me, "Oh when I pray to God I feel much better." It's really the same as going to a psychiatrist. When you tell a psychiatrist all of your problems you feel much better. It has nothing to do with God. When you talk to someone and tell that person all your problems, when you're praying to God or some psychiatrist or somebody else you're letting go of all of these things and certainly you're going to feel much better.

But again you are an Advaitist, a believer in oneness. You should catch yourself and begin to laugh at yourself and ask yourself, "To whom am I praying? Where does this God live that I'm praying to?" You'll then realize that you're praying to yourself. God is yourself, where else could God be but in yourself. But the whole truth is when I use the word self I mean the big Self with a big "S." The big daddy, the Self. You don't even exist. So you're not praying to your little self.

Remember in non-duality there is only one. If there is only one there is no room for you. What are you doing here? Where did you come from? It's funny how some people say they are Advaitists and they believe in themselves as something else. That's duality, that's two, how can that be?

I will reiterate again. Advaita means non-duality and there is only one power and there is no power in effect. There is only one. That one is you. It is not your body or your mind or your affairs or the world or the universe. It is one reality, one consciousness, one truth. That one is divine grace. The ultimate reality. The bliss consciousness, the love. It is all in oneness and you are that. If you can only accept this you would be the happiest person in this universe. For you will realize that you have no responsibilities to mould your life in any direction, to shape your life or do anything with your life. For you have no life. Only the ultimate truth has a life, has its own life. It has nothing to do with you whatsoever.

It is beyond words and thoughts, beyond your feelings and emotions. Beyond what you think or don't think. Beyond what you believe or don't believe. Beyond your concepts. It is so beautiful that if you felt it right now you would probably blow up. You probably would be blown to pieces, it's so powerful. For it contains the entire universal expression. You are that! You are that God. You are that bliss. You are that nirvana, the Brahman, the absolute reality. That is all you are and there is nothing else. What else can there be after that?

But some of you are saying, "But Robert I feel this and I see this and I hear that." Do you? Why do you do this? Who told you to do this? You've been hypnotized, mesmerized, to the grand illusion, the maya. Awaken to yourself. Awaken to the truth that you are free and you're nothing but freedom. Total absolute freedom from every conceivable thing you can imagine. Like boundless space you are totally free. Free of all so-called karmas, samskaras, samsaras, past mistakes, everything. You no longer have to suffer. You no longer have to be afraid of anything.

How can God be afraid of anything? Does God have to pray to somebody? Does God have to meditate? Does God have to perform rituals, appease the gods and goddesses? Only so-called human beings do these things. But God is absolute freedom and you are that. You are the absolute freedom yourself. Why do you insist on believing something else? Even while I'm talking to you some of you are thinking about something else. Let go of the thoughts, let go of the mind, let go of everything. Let go! Drop it! Drop everything. Hold onto nothing.

It's virtually impossible for you to be hurt. What you see cannot hurt you. For what you see is an illusion. What you feel cannot hurt you for the feelings are illusory. So what can hurt you? Nothing. When did you first believe that you're hurtable? That something can hurt you, make you upset? Where do these feelings come from? They're not the truth. They're not the ultimate reality. But yet they appear so strong in most people. When these things happen to you and you feel upset, when you feel something is wrong think about the snake in the rope. When a rope looks like a snake and you become frightened but you see that it's a rope not a snake at all. Or the water in the mirage. When you see water in a desert and try to grab it, it's sand. It never was water.

So it is with everything that happens in your life, everything. You want to grab onto this, you want to hold onto that. You're afraid somebody is hurting you, somebody is doing something to you, somebody wants something from you. What can possibly happen to you? What? Nothing. Stop being afraid. Stand up tall, be counted, know who you are. When you know who you are the whole universe comes before you and bows to you. When you understand your true reality all the Gods and Goddesses will bow to you, pay homage to you. Awaken! Awaken! Awaken!

What else is there to say? This is the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Remind yourself of this everyday. There is only one power, one! Not two, one! This power is love. It is pure awareness. Nothing else exists, except in your false imagination. So be happy, rejoice!

Some of you don't look too happy. Some of you look like you're carrying the whole world on your shoulder. Drop the world. You were not asked to carry the world or carry anything. You're doing this of your own accord, of your own self. There is nothing you have to carry. You are free. Totally, absolutely free. Right now you are free, not tomorrow or the next day but right now. And you don't have to earn it.

Do not believe you have to be a good little boy or good little girl and appease God somehow and God will love you and send you a blessing. For in truth you were never a boy or a girl, you were God himself or herself or itself. You are that personality of God. You're not a human being. Just the way you are you're free. Just the way you are.

There are no good deeds you have to do or bad deeds or anything. There are no sacrifices you have to perform. You do not have to mortify the body or stand on hot coals or stand on one leg with your arms raised in the air for two years. There is nothing you have to do to be free, nothing. Can you accept this? There is nothing you have to do to be free. There is nothing required of you for you've always been free, always. There never was a time when you were not free. Happiness is your real nature. Love is your essence. Feel it. Accept it. Be it.

Do not try to analyze what I'm saying to you. Do not try to come to any conclusions. For you're using your mind to do this and it is the mind that has made you believe all of these things for all these years. Stop using your mind. Use your heart. Stop judging, condemning, coming to your own conclusions. For you are doing this in your own mind. Everything is alright just the way it is. Everything is perfect just the way it is. And now you know why? Because there is only one! One power! So everything has to be perfect. The one has no competition. There is not God and the devil. There is only God.

So when you begin to pray to God catch yourself. When you look at anything in this world externally from you catch yourself. Realize that it is all happening from you, it's all in you, it's all you, it's always you. There is nothing else but you. When you want to change something in the external world catch yourself. There is no external world. It's only you. It's always been you.

Remember the world only exists because you were born. If you were not born would there be a world? Would there be a God? Would there be anything? The only reason anything exists is because you were born. You are the creator of this whole universe it all came out of you. You are responsible for everything, everything you see. Therefore ask yourself, "What do I see?" I see Dale coming in late. Who sees? Who sees this and who sees that? Who experiences this and who experiences that? Who goes through this and who goes through that? It's all happening from you. Try to understand this thoroughly. Nothing external can ever happen to you because there is no external world. There is only you. Wow that is a load off my back. (laughter)

There is nothing happening, nothing is happening, but you're in charge of this. It's your ball game. Don't you understand you can see anything you like. You can become anything you want. But you're doing it out of yourself it's all coming from you. When you look at this world and you see good and you see bad it doesn't exist by itself. It has no existence of its own. It only exists because you exist. Therefore find out who exists. Who really exists? Rather than try changing things in the world or changing people or changing conditions. Find out who is experiencing these conditions. Where are all these changes taking place? Externally? No, internally. It is all taking place from you in you. You are the one.

It's a relief when you understand this. You feel so relieved. That you don't have to fix anything, change anybody, change your circumstances, change the people around you. For you realize now that they're all coming from you. It's all you, you you you you you. Therefore when you feel something you don't like, when you see something you don't like, do not react to it, close your eyes and take a deep breath and ask yourself, "Who sees these things? Who feels these things? How did these things arrive? Where did they come from?" I am the one therefore I have created them, but now you uncreate them. You see the reality, you see the truth, you see the love, you see the peace, you see the joy and then when you open your eyes you will see that kind of a world. You are what you see.

That's it. There is nothing else. Ask questions.

SF: Would you agree that what you're sharing with us is the same thing as Lord Krishna shared with Arjuna? (R: Yes of course.) He was a player in the show... (R: Umm.) ...he had no independent existence. (R: Exactly.) His role was that of a warrior he had no choice... (R: Umm.) ...it was possible to get to a ??? where he knew that the actions of that entity were not his own and he... (R: Yes.) ...needn't feel bad about it.

R: Of course. Arjuna had gone through with that he could have realized he was Krishna. (SF: Sir?) Arjuna could have realized he was Krishna. (SF: So he did?) He could've, no he didn't he took his place as a warrior but if he realized he was Krishna he wouldn't have to fight at all. He went one step that's all. (SF: Short of...?) If he went another step he would have been free totally. You know what I mean? (SF: Because his actions were not real.) He came to the realization because of Krishna that he was not the doer. That he was an actor on the stage, playing a part. This is a good place to be but if he went another step higher he would realize that he is nothing, he's Krishna the absolute reality. (SF: He and Krishna are one?) Of course. Then he wouldn't have to fight at all.

SK: But he was identifying with the warrior... (R: Yes.) ...rather than the true Self?

R: Exactly.

SF: In that lifetime he was born with chakriya... (R: Yes.) ...that was his dharma? (R: Exactly) Maybe in another lifetime ???

R: But there is no other lifetime. There was a lifetime for him because he believed that. But if he realized he is Krishna right now, there is only Krishna, only Krishna exists nothing else. The whole universe is Krishna. So there are no lifetimes. (SI: If one accepts their dharma ones karma whatever it is there is a release within.) Yes of course. When you accept your dharma it is very good it's a high step. But another step is when you understand there is no dharma. There is no one to experience any dharma.

SF: Everything is nothing? (R: The absolute reality, Brahman.)

SK: Deny it all? (R: Of course. And when there is nothing left you are that.)

SP: Robert how do you silence the mind?

R: By keeping still. By observing it, by watching it, by inquiring, "To whom does the mind come? Who has a mind? Where did it come from?" Ask yourself. "What is the mind? It's only a bunch of thoughts, so to whom do these thoughts come? To the I. I have these thoughts. Who am I then?" Use any one of those methods.

SF: If I use, "I am Brahman," as an affirmation. There is an implication that there are two, there is an I and Brahman there are two, so the real truth would be I-am. When Christ said that the father and I are one what he is saying is I am Brahman. Not as an object of thought but he was Brahman itself or the ultimate reality or the pure awareness or whatever else we may call it?

R: He was really saying, "I am is Brahman." (SF: Yeah same thing. Is that not so?) Yes of course. When some say it right but when some people say, "I am Brahman," they think their body is Brahman. (SF: They need to seek some help.) Their small self is Brahman and that is not so because the body doesn't exist. There is no small self. I-am is Brahman. Never think I-am God. That's very egotistical. What you think you are can never be God. What is God is beyond words, beyond thoughts, beyond the body, beyond anything you can ever imagine. (SF: So I-am is Brahman?) Exactly. Same thing. I-am is Brahman. I-am is God. I-am is Krishna. I-am is the Christ. It has nothing to do with you as a body. When you start to think about it this way you will notice, you ask yourself, "Then where did the body come from?" And when you ask a question like that the whole body will disappear totally and completely for it never existed to begin with.

SH: Then why does it seem to exist? Appear to exist?

R: For whom does it appear to exist? (SH: To you.) Not to me, don't blame me. (laughter) I'm not guilty. I didn't tell you to believe you are a body. Why does the sky seem blue? Same thing. You'll swear up and down the sky is blue. (SH: That's the way it appears?) That's the way it appears. But for whom does it appear that way? To the senses. Who has any sense.

SP: What do you have against the sky?

R: I think the sky is beautiful there is nothing. But go up into the sky and you'll see there is only empty space, its black. There is no blue, the blue is a mirage.

SF: In this life we're dealing with what's called the relative plane, that the relative plane exists, but at this point we don't have to bother with, and they're equally unreal as this plane like the astral plane, causal plane. (R: Exactly.) They're all no more or less real than this one.

R: They all come from the mind. (SF: And that is why we get the psychedelic drugs or delirium tremors.) Are you delirious? (SF: Sir?) Are you delirious? (SF: Yes. (laughter) It's the same as when you're in the hypnotic state on this plane.) So wake up! (SF: I'll try. (laughter) Still there is a will but whatever is involved in the flesh, when the play comes to an end.) There is no play to come to an end. There never was a play. (SF: Sir?) There never was a play. The play is going on in your mind. Get rid of your mind and there's no play. Again there is nothing to get rid of. Who gets rid of what? There is no who and there is no what. (SF: Who is what?) (laughter) There is no who, there is no what. (SF: No words really.)

SI: I think you mentioned a playfulness in leela.

R: Did I mention a playfulness? Yes, it is. The leela and the maya can be used for good. This is what I'm talking about. See only the good. Being only the good. Attract only the good. (SI: What about Brahman is without qualities. Why can there be this quality of playfulness?) In reality there isn't. There appears to be. When you awaken there is no playfulness, there is no maya, there is no leela. It's like stages. When you awaken partially you think there is a leela, there is a maya and you take sort of control of it but as you go higher and higher the leela and the maya all comes from you, part of your mind. You have created it. Does it exist when you sleep? When you're in deep sleep nothing exists. There is no leela no maya. It's only when you awake to this world that you say its maya or leela. But when you awaken from this world it's like awakening from sleep, there is no maya, there is no leela. It's all different levels. And when you finally awaken you will realize there have never been any levels. So all is well just the way it is. Be happy.

Listen to the pitter patter of the rain. Pitter patter, pitter patter.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani?

SM: Yes Robert.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book or text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Do we have announcements?

SM: Yes there will be satsang on Wednesday night not Thursday night next week. And those of you who have not got the book yet, please do so, it's beautiful. And it will make a nice, very nice gift, that last minute thought or idea this is it. Andy still has a few more isn't there Andy? (SA: Um-hm.) Or is there...did you get some more? (SA: Yes.) Oh good. See Andy about the book afterwards.

R: Also next Wednesday we're here also, Wednesday night.

SM: Oh yes also on new years but we have Wednesday night instead of on Thursday evening. Oh don't forget the pot luck, coming up the bhandara on the last Sunday of this month, Sue do you have something to say?

(Announcements continue)

R: Anyone else have anything to say or forever hold your peace.

It's prashad time. Wow look at this. Wonderful junk food. It looks delicious. I have nuts, all kinds of good things. We have some biscuits topped with orange marmalade and dark chocolate. Imagine that.

(Prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

JNANA MARGA IS NOT FOR EVERYONE

20th December, 1992

Robert: ...shanti shanti shanti om, peace. Good afternoon. It is good to be with you once again on this lovely sunday afternoon.

Jnana Marga is not for everyone. It is a teaching for those beings who perhaps in a previous existence or bhaktas that are involved in deep spiritual practice or for people in this life who have been bhaktas who are yearning for awakening. To those people Jnana Marga becomes meaningful. But to the average person it is an ego trip. To the average person Jnana Marga means absolutely nothing. It's an intellectual jargon that you hold onto using certain words, that I am consciousness, that I am freedom yet their mind is somewhere else. Their thoughts are on something else. After all how many people can really feel Jnana? Feel the teaching deep in their heart.

It's really ludicrous for me to sit here and tell you that the world does not exist, the body does not exist, the universe does not exist, God does not exist and you accept it. Why should you accept this? The thing that separates Jnana Marga from other teachings is that...(silence)...that's what I mean. There is silence. That is what Jnana Marga is all about. Total silence. The mind becomes quiet. It goes within, into the heart and disappears.

It is not really a teaching. For to have a teaching there has to be thought and a teacher, an object and a subject. Jnana Marga has no object, has no subject. It has no teaching. It is not like yoga. It totally transcends everything that you understand and know.

When the average person looks at the world they see all the dastardly things happening, man's inhumanity to man, everywhere in the world there are problems and I come along and tell you, "All is well." It's ludicrous, ridiculous to the average person. I tell you, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should. Everything is in its right place there are no mistakes," and yet you're feeling this world with all its problems.

You turn on the TV and you see people getting killed in different countries. In India, muslims are fighting with hindus. In Africa whites are fighting with blacks. People are fighting all over this world and if they're not fighting there are calamities that come along, cataclysms, earthquakes, hurricanes. Most people are involved in saving their lives taking care of themselves so they can live another day. Yet I come along and I tell you, "Forget about these things, turn within. Turn to the reality within you and then you will see the world completely different. You will see your Self when you look at the world and you'll see peace." In the midst of all this confusion there is peace. There is love. There is harmony and joy. Yet this doesn't make any sense. How could this be? You haven't felt it you haven't seen it. This is the reason that a teaching like this can only be taught by a person or a Sage who has the experience of this. Who has experienced all of this.

If a teacher begins to teach something like this and has not had the personal experience of its truth and reality they will lead everybody to chaos and destruction. Everybody will become very egotistical. This is why prior to getting into this kind of a teaching there has to be a tremendous humility, a humbleness, a loving kindness, a forgiveness, a joy. When you have developed these traits then you can step higher into Jnana Marga and it will be very clear to you and it will be very plain and it will be the absolute truth and you will have no problems with it whatsoever.

Jnana Marga does not consist of lectures or sermons or talks. It is not a question of becoming a teacher to teach this to people. A Jnani always runs away from this. The person who experiences this does not wish to be a teacher because there is nothing to teach.

Think about this. When a person has transcended the world, transcended the universe and realizes the nothingness of things what could they possibly teach? What can they say?

I do not prepare fancy sermons or lectures or profound teachings like I get in a book to share with you. I tell you the truth I am absolutely nothing and I share my nothingness with you, will you accept the nothingness? Will you accept that you are nothing and I am nothing and nothing exists and nothing ever existed? Yet it's difficult to share this with the ordinary people.

This is why this teaching can be a dangerous thing to some people. For the people cannot reconcile this teaching with the ways of this world. You can't bring the average person in the street in here and tell them about Jnana Marga. They'll say to you, "Look at the city. Look what's happening to people. People are killing each other there is man's inhumanity to man going on everywhere. Everywhere you look there are problems with man, fighting, killing, destroying and you come in here and tell us this doesn't exist? You're a liar," they'll tell me. "These are plain and clear look at them, everywhere. Riots in LA. Killings in India with muslims and hindus, in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia people are killing each other by the thousands." And so somebody like me comes along and says, "Hey this does not exist. All is well!" That sounds ridiculous doesn't it when you make a statement like that. How can I possibly make a statement, "All is well," when your senses tell you it's not?

This is why I say to you this teaching is not for the average person. The average person wants to argue, to fight, to debate to get their point across. But the person who has realized the truth has nothing to argue about, nothing to debate about. They have become a living embodiment of reality. And they understand that the world does not see the same thing. This is the reason you find most Jnanis do not give any teachings whatsoever and we know nothing of them.

You should never believe everything I say to you. You should never accept anything I tell you. But you should not argue about it either. What you should do is go within yourself and find out if I'm telling the truth. Find out if I'm sharing the truth with you or I am telling you a pack of lies. I tell you in the midst of all this confusion, in the midst of all this chaos there is beauty and joy and love and total happiness and what you see depends where you're coming from.

You are the one who has created your life and you've created your universe the world in which you see. It comes from you. Where else would it come from? It didn't appear by itself. Everything appears because you were born. Before you were born nothing existed like this. You were born, here is everything existing as place, person, thing. But in truth noone is ever born, noone subsists and noone dies. There is no universe as you see it. You're simply hallucinating. You've been hypnotized and you are living out of the hypnosis as if it were real.

In other words what you're doing is you're allowing your senses to tell you what is real and what is not. It is the job of your senses to carry you through this life in a body until you die. But there are people who have seen things a little differently. Human beings on this earth that they call Sages, Saints, way-showers who for some reason have been able to experience another world, another life, something completely different. These people have been very few and in between. You can find spiritual teachers by the dozens all over the place, teaching systems of yoga, teaching laws and rules and regulations, how you should conduct yourself, how you should live. This has been going on since the beginning of time. Have things improved? Things have gotten relatively worse, not better.

So there must be something else. There must be some other truth that we don't know about. And a person starts working on themselves removing their egos, looking at themselves really, truly, absolutely. See what is going on in their lives. It all begins with you not outside of you. Never try to change a person, change a thing or change an idea. It begins with you the way you are right now. You look at yourself and you see what you are. How you react to person, place or thing. What kind of personalty you've got. You have to be totally honest with yourself.

"What kind of a being am I?" you ask yourself. "Am I a terrible person always getting into fights with people, arguments, always confusion? Trying to straighten people out? Trying to straighten things out? What am I doing in this world? What's my real focus? Did I come here to change anything? To prove something? Show people how good I am? Why have I come into this world?" You have to ask yourself that question. "What am I really doing here? For what purpose have I come?"

The average person just cannot comprehend this. Because they believe what they see. That's all there is for them. What the eyes see, what the ears hear, what the mouth speaks, what the feelings feel. That is all they know. This is neither good nor bad but it has absolutely nothing to do with you.

There are those people who have experienced many lifetimes of spiritual work, spiritual practice and are prepared to go into the final round of spirituality and be totally free and liberated. Those people will be attracted to the correct teacher, the correct book, the correct mountain, the correct tree whatever it is they need at the time to break the shell and set them free. You can tell where you are by the feelings you have. If things are becoming totally meaningless to you and you do not become frightened over things. You do not become angry over things. You do not become judgmental over things. You begin to leave things alone and just observe everything. Then you know you're on the path of self-realization. Before you know it you will be absolutely free and liberated.

But if people bother you, people annoy you, people make you angry, upset, then you've got a long way to go. You and I know people who have followed spiritual paths for many years twenty years, thirty years, forty years, fifty years and what have they become? Dictionaries, encyclopedias, they can tell you everything that is going on in different movements, different teachings. But have found no peace. They have found no peace whatsoever. They keep running around to different movements, different teachers, different books, different categories. Trying to change people. Trying to make people believe what they believe, wanting people to do what they do. And getting older and older and older, pretty soon they become so old they become feeble and have no idea what life is all about and just drop dead and life goes on.

But those of you who are sincere to the extent you want to awaken totally and completely know what you have to do. It begins with you never anybody else. Never mind what anybody else is doing. The only way to bring peace into this world is to become self-realized. Not trying to bring externally you cannot do this. People have tried this since the beginning of time, trying to bring peace into this world. It cannot be done. Simply because this world is a world of maya. It's an illusory world. It has no substance behind it, no meaning. No beginning, no end. You therefore begin to observe yourself, to take a look at yourself. You inquire, "Who am I? Where did I come from?" You become still, quiet. You stop trying to win points.

Do not allow your body to tell you how you feel. Do not allow the mind to tell you how things are. Do not allow the world to tell you what is going on in the world. But look through all these things with your spiritual eye. Develop loving kindness, compassion, peace. Everything takes care of itself. It always begins with you. It begins with your existence. Who exists? Who exists? I exist. What is this I? Where did this I come from? What is the source of this I? There is absolutely nothing for you to worry about to be upset about if you realize that the I does not really exist. There is no I. If the I does not exist how can the body exist. How can the world exist? How can the universe exist? These things only seem to exist because the I exists.

If I tell you everything was beautiful can you agree with me? Can you believe this? Of course not. Most of you would be lying if you said you could. When you can't see beauty in yourself, how can you see it externally? If you only knew who you really were. You keep identifying with your humanity and that is the biggest mistake you can ever make. To identify with your humanity. This is why you have the problems you have. With people, places and things, with yourself because you're identifying with these things as if they were real. And if the world is real for you then you have a big fight on your hands trying to make things right. Trying to straighten things out. Therefore you must leave the world alone, leave people alone, leave God alone, leave yourself alone.

It's okay to admit that you don't know who you are, to say to yourself, "I have no idea who I am or what I am." At least you're telling the truth. When you develop that humility, the humbleness that you don't know who you are this is the beginning of wisdom. But when you think you know who you are then you're stuck in a place that you can't get out of.

When you hear about man's inhumanity to man, when you're watching television and you see the dastardly things going on in this world, do not imagine that it doesn't exist this is the worst thing you can do to imagine these things do not exist but also do not say they do exist. Have no opinion whatsoever, just watch. And if you have no opinion whatsoever you'll be led to the truth automatically. You will be led to reality to make you understand what life is all about what is really going on. For when you think something is real it means that you know this thing to be real and you become a part of it and you have emotions that go with it. You become upset, disillusioned.

So, here we are. We're nowhere yet we appear to be somewhere. We think we're somebody and we're nobody. Why not leave everything alone just do this for yourself. Do not try to change one person. Do not fear anybody or anything. Do not come to any conclusions of any kind. Do not allow your thoughts to run away to run-a-muck. As soon as the mind starts thinking catch it right away and stop it by becoming aware of it. That is how you stop it. When you become aware that your mind is thinking it slows down. It is only when you follow your thoughts, you believe you are your thoughts that the problems arise. For when you catch the mind worrying, you catch the mind fearing, catch the mind thinking about anything, by observing it, by watching it the mind has to slow down.

Try to be happy just the way you are. Do not think you have to better your life or make things happen that you don't have. Acquire things in your life that you don't have that you need. Do not consider these things. Learn to live in the moment, become centered, learn to love yourself, not the human self but the Self. Awaken and be free. Awaken right now and be free why don't you do this? Wake up from your sleep, the sleep of ignorance, the sleep of maya. Awaken and be totally free. You are free already and all is well.

(long silence)

It's now time to play... (Students call out together) Stump the guru!

R: Right. We'll see what kind of stumpers we have today. (SM: I have news for you. We have no stumpers.) No stumpers. (laughter) (SM: Not a single one.)

SH: We're already stumped out. (R: What a bunch!)

SV: That means you know all the answers.

R: Well well have to have some questions.)

SK: I've got a question. (R: Sure.) The Bhagavad-Gita talks about one in a thousand is interested and out of the people that are interested out of a thousand of those, one gets there and you were kind of talking about, you know this differences of people that are apparently devoted enough or interested enough than all the other types. And I read some lives of Saints from one of those encyclopedia people that talked about in twenty years and they seemed to be particularly in caves who are fasting, a lot of weeping, a lot of very intense devotion of the path, they see as straight and narrow. What about the rest of us that what you said, "the twenty year people," can you give us any advice. Can we achieve something in this lifetime as well or are we doomed to reincarnate or maybe get it when we die or why is it so tough and what is our chances, I mean we're are a gambler throwing our cards and saying I'm going to go play another game here because God's at stake. (laughter)

R: As long as you're thinking this way then you have a problem. (laughter) (SK: Yes.) The whole idea is you have to let go of all types of longings, wantings, desires. You have to become a true devotee. It means you don't care anymore. You're not interested in getting anywhere or trying to do anything. Simply get lost in the teaching itself. Without looking for answers, without trying to become enlightened. Without saying I have to do this, I have to do that. You just live every moment, by moment, by moment in devotion, in love, in joy, not thinking whether you're going to get enlightened or not get enlightened. Whether you'll make it in this life or not. The person who is like this is already enlightened, already free.

Get rid of all questions, all doubts, all fears, all apprehensions about spiritual life and live in the moment unafraid, full of total joy and happiness and peace. And you will see you have always been enlightened you already are enlightened everything is okay. But if you keep worrying about when it's going to happen aren't you really saying, "I don't have it yet, there is something really wrong? I am not that and I have to become that?" For in truth you are already that. For in reality you're already enlightened there is nothing you have to do and nowhere you have to go. Be yourself. Be the way you are, totally, completely. The way you are is not the body nor the mind nor the experience. The way you are is not the doer.

You have to be intelligent so you look at the whole situation, the whole picture and quiet the mind totally, absolutely. Stop worrying about anything, stop thinking about anything. Surrender completely to the Self and realize that you are the answer to all of your questions. When you have a problem look at yourself. The problem comes from you and can be eradicated by you. You are the solution to everything. Noone exists but you. You are totally absolutely free already. There is nothing you have to do.

So you come to satsang and leave it alone. Try to empty yourself. Be totally empty of ideas, of thoughts, of wants and desires and when that happens you will see that you're already self-realized. Already awakened, already liberated. Make it very simple. Always live in the moment. Never concern yourself about yesterday or tomorrow. Stay centered in the moment. In that moment all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. In that moment you're okay. But stay in the moment for you will be alright.

SX: I have a question for you. (R: Umm.) How can you keep a concept on, I am not the doer in this? You're not the doer so you can hurt someone?

R: That is the wrong attitude. That is what I was thinking of before, this teaching can make you become very self centered and very egotistical.

SX: But at the same time we can remove the reaction in other words thinking I'm not the doer so I watch this process happen I'm sort of taking responsibility for an action, in other words say like wars... (R: Yes.) ...say between two countries with nothing else to do with themselves are really relinquish their responsibilities on other people.

R: When you're really not the doer there is nobody to relinquish anything. When you are not the doer and then you are free you're not avoiding any responsibility. What you are will take care of everything the way it's supposed to. (SX: You mean the doer still will happen?) The happening will happen without you being the doer. Everything will take care of itself the way it's supposed to. You will not be concerned with it at all. So when you are not the doer it doesn't mean that you avoid responsibility, that you don't care. It doesn't mean I don't care about anything. It means that I am not the body. I am not the mind. I am not the person that has to do something or has come here to do certain things. I am the imperishable self, consciousness, pure awareness. This will take care of everything for you in the right way. And you will find that your body is doing things that it was supposed to do. Your body is doing things that it came here to do.

SX: That is an interesting thought because I find that happening to me a lot that there is especially when there is an everything will take care of itself. It seems like something was here to be done by someone or by the doer. And why is there so much of a concern about trying shape that?

R: Because you're living out of your mind. It is the mind that is concerned. For when you understand the teaching right the mind has nothing to do with it. You do not choose the mind to be a doer in the real sense. In the real sense the Self is the doer, the higher Self. It takes care of everything when you get yourself out of the way. It all begins and ends in your mind, in your thoughts. Watch your thoughts, examine your thoughts. That is the way to stop being the doer. Ask yourself, "Who does these things? Who is the doer?" question yourself. "Who is responsible for this?" and you will find out that you're not the doer at all. You never were the doer. Yet everything is being done in the right way to the good of all concerned. Do you see what I'm saying?

SX: I think so, I'm just questioning that process kind of. It'd make an interesting that you're describing. There is a fine line between allowing something happen around you and to know you have no control over it whether you should be involved or not involved to be in that process is really.

R: As long as you're thinking about it you'll come to that conclusion. You will always have choices to make as long as you keep thinking about these things. (SX: Do you keep thinking.) Do not keep thinking about anything. Go within yourself. Dive deep within yourself and surrender to the Self and then everything will take care of itself properly. But thinking about the decisions you have to make or choices you have to make and that is the mind thinking again. And sometimes you make the right choice and sometimes you won't. But as you dive within the Self and focus on the Self, on consciousness and reality, you forget about everything else then you will find yourself making the right decisions and do what you have to do, in that way.

Let's take an apple tree. An apple tree doesn't say I'm going to grow apples. It's very nature is to grow apples. This is what it came here for and this is what it's doing. But if an apple tree was able to think like us it would say, "I'm not getting enough sun. (laughter) I'm too close to the other apple trees. (laughter) People are picking my apples I think something is wrong." It'll have all kinds of excuses why it can't grow apples. And the apples won't grow. And because an apple tree cannot talk like us or think or make decisions it grows beautiful apples because that is its nature. Your nature is to be God. Your nature is the absolute reality. This is your nature. But when you start thinking about it you spoil it.

SX: I have a question. When you told me to watch the dream take place I guess it helps you to get to some kind of level of awareness. I'm never watching, I need to avoid separation.

R: For whom is there separation? (SX: Say that again?) For whom is there separation? (SX: Right that is an interesting question gets you back watching again.) Always question yourself about these things. Always inquire within yourself, "Who is experiencing this? Who is suffering? Who has this problem? Who is going through all this?" All the answers are within you. Inquire and you'll find out. It will all come out of you in a beautiful way.

SG: Robert I have a question. (R: Sure.) Trying to get some clarification on this. As I understand it the primary thing for us is attention. And that attention moves to any form as an object when we go astray and that - Maharshi talked about it's more of a feeling sense and if we focus on the feeling of being, itself shouldn't that be the proper perspective because as I understand it, it would be a more subtle form of attention would be ??? it is a thoughtless feeling of creativeness which could also be the opposite other side of the coin as feeling a separation but that if we focus on the feeling itself. The feeling of being itself that even that sense that we have, you know - we're kind of thoughtless but we have a feeling relatedness to everything. Wouldn't that be the way to transcend even that more subtle form of the I-thought?

R: Where does the feeling come from? When you try to focus on something. The feeling has to be transcended. The feeling that you're talking about has to go. There should be nobody left to feel anything. Just watch, just be, do not try to feel a thing.

SG: How do we know when we start to subtly move away from that? And how do we know that to be for sure? What I'm saying is when it starts to move away our attention starts to move away from that?

R: Who wants to know? The knower is not there anymore. There is nobody left to know. It'll happen by itself and you will just be that, you become that. You become emptier and emptier and emptier. There is no more thoughts left, there is nothing left to decide. (SG: Can we focus mainly on the feeling of emptiness?) There are many other feelings of emptiness. Just be aware that you're that feeling. Be aware that you're that by being quiet. As the mind becomes quiescent everything else disappears and then you become that all by itself. But don't try to do it. Just be it. There is quite a difference between trying and being. Be that which you already are. Do not try to do anything to yourself. Because when you try you're using the mind. And the mind will always fool you it'll take you else where. Rather just be. Just watch, just observe. Let whatever happens, happen and you will be on the right track. Be your Self, just the way you are.

Do we have any announcements Mary?

SM: Except that the thing will be on Wednesday night instead of Thursday and of course the following week, same thing. (repeats announcements for a student)

SE: What time is the bhandara on Sunday?

S: The bhandara is at 1 o'clock. And Sue isn't here but we have a list on the table for things that people should bring. Vegetarian dishes please. And if you want to sign up so that we don't get too much of one thing, but we usually don't.

(announcements continue for a short time)

R: Anyone else have anything to say?

(There is talk about decorations)

R: We have no prashad today. We ate on Thursday. Enough to choke a horse. So we have to suck on our fingers. (students laugh and joke with each other)

So until we meet again bless you, be happy, remember to love yourself, to bow to yourself, to worship yourself for God dwells in you as you, peace...

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 211

HEAR YE!!

23rd December, 1992

Robert: Hear ye: Nothing exists. (laughter)

(silence)

The only reason the world exist is because you think you are the body.

(silence)

You have created God in your own image and you worship that God. The truth is that God should worship you.

(silence)

The universe is a big lie. And if you believe in the universe then you're a bigger liar.

(silence)

You are all waiting for something to happen. The truth is what is already is happening has already happened. There is nothing else to happen, so let it happen.

(silence)

There is absolutely nothing for you to do to become self-realized, except shut up!

(silence)

There is noone who can do anything for you and you can do nothing for yourself. It is better therefore to keep quiet and do nothing.

(silence)

There is no teacher that can set you free and there is no teacher that can set you free. Just knowing this, you will already be free.

(silence)

Expect nothing, do nothing, be nothing and you will discover that you are everything.

(silence)

Noone can save and you cannot save yourself. Knowing this, be still!

(silence)

If you only knew who you were then all the Gods and Goddesses that you have been praying to would fall at your feet.

(silence)

Forget about affirming,, "I am not the body," for if you were not the body why would you affirm you were not the body?

(silence)

Consciousness, pure awareness are only words, go beyond that.

(silence)

To know the ultimate truth, you first must know nothing.

(silence)

The whole universe is a manifestation of your mind. To remove the manifestation examine your mind carefully, diligently by inquiring, "To whom does this come?"

(silence)

It is virtually impossible for you to have a problem. How can you have a problem if you don't even exist?

(silence)

Do not complicate your life by reading voluminous books. Rather empty yourself up of all the book language you've ever had.

(silence)

Reading a book makes you feel good for a while. But diving within yourself removes all samskaras and samsaras and sets you free.

(silence)

To love yourself is better than reading books and going to lectures or hearing sermons or doing anything.

(silence)

You are that which has always been. Discover what that is. By turning within.

(silence)

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum. (students laugh)

(silence)

Merry Christmas to all and to all a goodnight!

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: I have something to ask. Last Thursday I ventured an observation that when Christ said, "The Father and I are one," there's a marry to it and it's the same as saying, "I am Brahman," that when he said it was not an affirmation. He was stating a fact. He was no longer an individual. And he was one with the universal consciousness, so he was the universal consciousness. And to Christmas I'm going to quote Bhagwan Sri Ramana our friend on the mantle as to what he said about Christ. He said, "Jesus the man was utterly unconscious of being a separate personality when he worked his miracles and spoke his wonderful words. It was white light, the light. Which is the cause and effect acting in perfect concert, the Father and I are one." And that's what Master up there had to say about him.

R: That is wonderful Fred but what do you say? (SF: I say the same thing.) Good. Live it. Become it. It all goes back to you. Do not think of people external from yourself.

You are Bhagvan. You are the Christ. You are the one. Only you and noone else. See yourself that way.

SF: Something else that I was thinking. When I was up in Montana I knew a guy that was a real bad drinker and he ended up drinking himself to death. (R: Sounds like a fun guy.) Oh he had a great time. He experienced alot of delirium tremors and one time he had snakes coming in under the door into his room. (R: Right.) White snakes. (R: Good for him.) And rather than being terrorized the way most people are with D.T. it didn't frighten him. He got up and sticked them up and opened the door and tossed them outside. And my thought was, I gather from what you're saying those snakes are no less real or more real than those dogs that are wandering around the slum tonight.

R: Exactly, this is very true. What is real and what is not real? (SF: Nothing is real or everything real, look at it either way.) Real or not real, they are both impostors. (SF: Words.) Forget about what is real and not real. Go beyond that. Awaken to yourself. Which is neither real or not real. Know who you are, be free!

R: Noone wishes to ask any questions about Santa Claus or Rudolph. (SV: Why don't you come to my house.) Already been there. (SV: No but what can I do with it?) Put a piece of charcoal in your sock.

SY: May I ask a question. Alot of times I find it almost impossible to keep still. As if I feel I would go out of my mind if I had to keep still for that long.

R: That is good you want to go out of your mind. That's just the point. When you feel that way observe it, watch it, look at it. Don't try and change it. Do not try to make yourself sit still. Go along with what is happening. But realize what is going on, be aware of your restfulness...restlessness rather. Be aware of how restless you are. Watch yourself, observe yourself. And go along with what is happening. And go along with what is happening. Dance, sing, jump up and down, but do not force yourself to be still. That is the worst thing you can do. Do not force yourself to do anything or to be anything. Just see what is happening and be aware of what is happening and go along with what is going on. (SY: How do I discipline myself to help me to keep still?) You don't want to discipline yourself. When you discipline yourself it's a cosmic joke because you're thinking there is somebody to discipline the self. And you'll become more restless. Rather than thinking of disciplining yourself you inquire, "To whom does this come? Who thinks they're not disciplined? Who needs to discipline themselves? Who is going through all this?"

And don't push yourself or force yourself. But when you observe what you're doing, what is going on that is the discipline you're talking about. BY watching and looking and not changing anything. No matter whether you're sitting down trying to be still and you can't be still, do not do anything to try to make yourself be still at all. You go along with the momentum with what's happening now. By looking and realizing what is going on, this makes you still. Do you follow that? (SY: Yeah.) Not by trying to become still but by looking and watching. The commotion the upheaval what is going on. By observing it with your mind. By looking at it, will make your mind weaker and weaker till your mind disappears. But by forcing it to change it will become worse and disturb you even worse. Never force your mind to change because your mind is stronger than you.

It's by looking at the mind that makes it weak. By observing it's actions makes it weak. Do not pay attention to it. We're not trying to discipline it at all. It becomes weak and disappears. To observe yourself, watch yourself, go along with what is happening and you'll be free. (silence) (dog snores) That's good. Sleeping dog.

SH: I know the feeling.

R: Well, Santa Claus is coming to town. What are you going to do about that? That's important. It's just as important as the life we are living. Santa Claus is like the world it makes all kinds of promises and gives you nothing. (laughter) If you meet Santa Claus on the way home shoot him! (laughter)

SK: Is that the same as, if you meet the Buddha on the road, shoot him?

R: Exactly. Santa Claus is a Buddha. It's time we got rid of everybody. (SK: Well what happens if we meet Robert on the road?) Shoot him too. (laughter) (SK: What happens if we don't want to?) Shoot yourself. (laughter) They're all impostors.

(silence)

You might think I'm trying to take the fun out of life. (students laugh) I am. For after all what is your life? A bunch of memories from the past, fears about the future, that is Santa Claus. That is the Buddha, that is Robert. It's all the same. Go beyond all of that. Go deep beyond everything and you'll meet yourself.

(silence)

The real bliss lies deep, deep, within yourself. Like a hidden treasure. This is why we talk like this. Get rid of Santa Claus, get rid of the Buddha, get rid of Robert get rid of everybody. For as long as you see an image you are evading your bliss. You keep evading the bliss that you are and you keep identifying with images. All of the images must go. Especially the images of yourself that you are a walking breathing person. If that goes everything else will go also. Remember also all the so-called happy things of this world only exist for a short time before they change into something else. Therefore you want to find your bliss. Which is total absolute reality. Once you can discover this bliss, what can ever make you sad again, nothing. For this bliss is not like human happiness. Human happiness is kindergarten compared to this bliss. This bliss is your birth right, this is what you are. Unconditioned bliss.

S: Sri Ramana said, the original sin is that we're thinking we're human beings. (R: Certainly.) Or the original sin is thinking first. (R: That is right.) "Thinking is not mans real nature," to quote him again.

R: Fred you're full of quotes this evening. (SF: I think it came from him?) That's okay. (SF: I don't think I'm quoting any scripture.) It's okay you can quote. (SF: I'll stop at this point.) What about you? Who is Fred? (SF: As long as I think I'm an individual I'm stuck with thinking things are individual as well.) Very true. So stop thinking you're individual.

SP: I think Robert, (R: Hello.) Your truly amazing. I say you're truly amazing.

R: I'm amazing? Why should I be amazing? (SP: Your compassion and your love for us and the patience that you have for us is so special.) I bet you say that to all the girls. (laughter) (SP: You've blown my cover. I was looking for brownie points and I...) You're alright Howard. All is well.

R: Tony's putting on his shoes. That means he is taking off. (ST: No my feet are cold.) Oh. (laughter) I'll have to give you a foot massage. I'll be happy to massage your feet. No charge. (SP: I don't have any feet.) Then how do you walk. There is a man with out feet here. Which means we have a person who has no feet. If he didn't have a head that would be much better. (SP: I'm working on it.)

(silence)

R: Anyone like to sing "White Christmas?" (SH: How about "Rudolph the red nose Reindeer?") Sure Henry you can sing that. (SH: No, I suggested that Mary could sing it?) (laughter) Hey Mary.)

SM: No I'll run away. (laughs)

R: Well here we are prior to Christmas Eve and we've got nothing to do.

(silence)

(dog snores)

SH: Did yo think it was me? (laughter) Thanks, thanks alot.

R: Mary why don't you read the Jnani? (SM: Alright.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary. It is now time for prashad.

SM: Can I say one thing first? (R: We have announcements.)

SM: Just one thing. I've just got to say, remember next week our satsang is also on Wednesday night not Thursday because of New Years. And of course this coming Sunday is the Bhandara which will be at 1 o clock.

SS: Just take a look at the sign up sheet there is all kinds of things we still need. We still need juice. We're learning to from some of the mistakes from the other bhandara so it's going to be ever especially nice this Sunday.

(continuing more general announcements and prashad as tape ends)

[TOC]

THREE DIRECT METHODS
(CHRISTMAS BHANDARA)

27th December, 1992

Robert: (Tape starts abruptly) ...shanti, om, peace. Good afternoon. Happy holidays to you. It is a pleasure to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you. No matter what you are, what you've been, what you're going to be. My love is unconditional. It makes no difference what you do, what you say. Love can never be removed, for love is a cosmic reality. Love is the essence of spiritual life. Love is beauty and joy and the absolute reality.

I want to thank those people who participated in the children's fund and brought toys for the orphan children. They really enjoyed the toys. You were blessed for that. I thank you for the gifts that you shared with me.

It's really interesting, for forty years I roamed this world prior to coming to L.A. when people gave me gifts I usually blessed them and gave it back to them or gave them to some poor person. But now I'm stuck in L.A. I have become a householder so-to-speak. People dress me up like a peacock, (students laugh) and here I am. The result of the gifts you give me. (students laugh)

The bhandara today is in celebration of three different occasions, Christmas, Hanukkah and the birthday of Bhagvan Sri Ramana Maharshi, which is on the 30th. Of the former two we know very little. We know very little about Christ, very little about Hanukkah, the burning of the candles. Just stories that have been handed down to us. We don't know whether they are true or not but it makes no difference. What we do know is the extraordinary life of Ramana Maharshi. This we know very well.

When Ramana was sixteen years old, he was living with his uncle. All of a sudden he felt sort of light...light headed, he went into his uncles room and he thought he was going to die but he wasn't afraid. He welcomed death, so-to-speak. He lay down on the floor and crossed his arms on his chest, his blood pressure went down and he felt like he was dying he was leaving his body. And he said to himself, "If this is how it is to die it's not bad," but instead of dying he became absorbed in absolute reality, in consciousness.

He didn't have an out of body experience, on the contrary. He wasn't sailing through the universe seeing things and enjoying things. He was not in the universe, the universe was in him. He was the universe. He was the source of all phenomena. He had this realization. His essence was in the trees, the mountains, people, animals, everything. He became pure awareness. He was totally aware of everything at the same time, omniscience.

Then for some reason he came back to the body. He became body conscious again. Yet his entire personality changed extraordinarily, he was a completely different person. He was born again as a Sage. He no longer had any interest in school work or his friends. He used to sit for long hours at his uncles house and do nothing. He wouldn't do his homework.

One day his older brother saw him like this and told him, "If you want to be a sadhu why don't you go out into the jungle and stop spending your uncles money for tuition fees for school?" Ramana thought about this and pondered it and he decided to leave. He wrote a little note for the family saying, "I am going about my fathers business, please do not try to look for me. I am paying my brothers school fee." And he had the money to pay his brothers school fee that day and his school fee. So he went and he paid his brother's school fee and with the money he had left, about 3 rupees, (it was considered about a dollar in those days). He had heard his father talking to a friend of his fathers uncle, talking to a friend about Arunachala, Tiruvannamalai, the sacred mountain. When he heard the name Arunachala a thrill went up his body. He heard that name before, very much so, it was very meaningful to him.

So he bought a train ticket for Tiruvannamalai only he got on the wrong train. When he got off he was about a hundred and fifty miles away from where he wanted to go. He had spent his money and didn't have anything left. So he sat down at the railway station and started to meditate. He became absorbed in consciousness.

A couple who lived nearby saw him, a man and wife and they said, "Here is a great saint sitting here meditating let's take him to our house and feed him." They sat down with him. Four hours later he opened his eyes and they took him to their home, fed him. They asked him where he was going, he told them but he wouldn't take any money from them to take the right train. He said he had gold earrings, he was a Brahman boy, they pierced the ears and put gold earrings in your ear. They were very expensive. So he told the couple, "You hold these earrings for me and advance me that money to go on the trip." Which they did.

So he took the right train and finally got to Tiruvannamalai. He got off and saw the beautiful temple, the ancient temple. He started to walk towards it. As he did he took off all of his clothes piece by piece and threw them away. The extra money he got for the earrings he threw into the pond and all of a sudden it started raining. He saw this to be a blessing from God to wash and clean. He was reborn. Ramana was dead and a Sage was born. He went into the temple and sat down underneath one of the giant pillars and became absorbed in nothingness.

You can imagine how cold it was. The floors were marble. It was raining, cold night and he was entirely nude sitting there in front of the pillar. To make a long story short he remained in the temple, around the temple where there were mango trees close by, for many years. And people started to gather to look at him, he started to run away. He ran up the hill, Arunachala, lived in various caves for many years, came down again. An ashram was built around him called "Ramana Ashram" which is there today. He lived an extraordinary life.

Of all the Sages that I have met in my travels, Ananda Mai Ma, Papa Ram Dass, Nimkarali Baba, Nisargadatta Maharaj many others unknown, Ramana is the purest soul I've ever met.

I had a similar experience when I was fourteen years old but it's different being brought up in New York City and having a spiritual experience. In India they realize what it is. In New York they want to put you into a psychiatric ward. So I went to confirm this. This is the only reason I travelled to see Saints and Sages. I wanted to confirm the experience. Where I was, what I felt.

(Someone arrives) Welcome John.

I wanted to know if there were any other people who felt the same thing. The spiritual teachers I met in the United States only went so far. So I went to India when I was young. Met these Sages. Realizing they were experiencing the same thing as myself, I became satisfied, fulfilled.

Now all of the great Sages since the beginning of time have taught basically three methods, three direct methods for self-realization. And these methods I'm going to share with you. These three methods I'm going to share the highest teachings on earth. If you only practice these things you would need nothing else and we will awaken and become free which we already are anyway but you don't believe it. It behooves us to practice these three methods.

The first one is being in the acquaintance of Sages in satsang. Hanging out with Sages, being around Sages in satsang. This is the first principle. It doesn't sound important to some of you but it's very important. This is the highest teaching you can get. To be with a Sage, Why?

A true Sage is like the sun. The sun's rays shines all over the earth. The Sages grace shines all over also just like the sun. But those people who come to the Sage, who hang out with the Sage receive the powerful rays of the Sage more so than everybody else. It is like the sun again where you take a magnifying glass and you bring the ray of sun close so it starts a fire. This is what happens to the person who hangs out with a Sage, who is around the Sage and at satsang most of the time.

Now some of you may say, "I've been around Sages for a long time nothing has happened. I'm still the same as I've always been." The answer to this is check yourself out. What are you really doing? In other words what is your main interest. You have to be honest with yourself. Is your main interest release from bondage or social life? What is your true reason for coming to see a Sage? What do you want? Ask yourself. Find out.

Do the material things of this world turn you on more than self-realization, wanting self-realization? What is your real purpose? In the ultimate truth there is no purpose of course. But we're speaking of the aspiring Jnani who wants to awaken fast and not have to go through incarnation after incarnation again. If they find a Sage they should stay with that person as long as they can.

The mistake many of us still make is we keep running from Sage to Sage from teacher to teacher. Checking people out going here, going there. This is fun, this is good to an extent but the time comes when we have to stop and get a little more serious about this. By going from Sage to Sage, from teaching to teaching it will be very hard for you to awaken. Why? Because every Sage is different and by the way real Sages are few and in-between. There are many teachers. In today's age there are more teachers than there are disciples. (students laugh) Teachers are all over the place. You know everyday we see a brochure of a new teacher who is coming to town, Quack Foo Duck, (students laugh) he will be here tomorrow to show his new methods. Mishugamiyogi will be here to bring you peace and harmony and on and on. Our life is full of teachers and Sages all over the place. Now we mean well. But if we really want to find the truth you should stick with one person.

Now I'm not speaking about myself, you know, because of you who know me know I don't care about having a lot of people, I'm not looking for fame or name or anything. But it's up to you what you're looking for, what do you want? You have to find the right Sage that you respect, share something in common with and stick with that being and follow the teachings. This is the only way you'll ever awaken. This is the true way of awakening. It's not reading so many books. So now I know everything now there is nothing else to do I know it all. I'm finished with this path. But if you look at your life you will see that you're not finished because you have the same old problems, same old depressions, same old nonsense going on in your life. Things disturb you, things bother you. How can you think you're realized if you have these problems going on? Don't fool yourself.

So being in the company of a Sage is very important. It is the highest principle of all spiritual teachings.

The second direct method is self-inquiry. Self-inquiry is very important also. I know many of you have tried practicing self-inquiry and it becomes boring to you or you say you don't need it. You've done it for a couple of hours and that is enough for your life. But Bhagvan Sri Ramana Maharshi and other great Sages, Shankara, many Sages, many Saints, have emphasized the importance of self-inquiry, atma-vichara. It's very easy to do. You should practice all day and all night. Especially if you've found a Sage.

When you're sitting with a Sage in meditation practice self-inquiry. Practice it during the day when you're going about your business. Practice it during the night when you're going to sleep. Keep on practicing, practicing, practicing, practicing, don't stop. Keep doing it again and again. So fortunate is the person who has found a Sage to be with and can also practice self-inquiry. Self-inquiry simply means that you question everything that arises, that's all it is. Everything that arises you question it.

When you get up in the morning for instance you question yourself, "Who is getting up? Who just awakened?" When you're getting dressed you question, "Who is getting dressed?" And you examine your feelings you watch your feelings, your thoughts. "Who has these feelings?" you say to yourself, "Who has these thoughts?" As you're eating your breakfast you question, "Who is eating?" Whatever you do you question it. Now as you keep questioning something interesting is happening within yourself. Your mind is becoming weaker and weaker from this questioning. The mind is nothing but a conglomeration of thoughts of the past and the thoughts of the future. That is all the mind is, a bunch of thoughts. It keeps you earth bound.

You question yourself, "Who is feeling this? I am, who am I?" I've explained this to most of you so many times but yet some of you just do not do it. You think it's for beginners or children but on the contrary, it's very powerful. See you have to have a lot of humility to do these things. If you have a big ego you will quit everything and think that you're great. You have to have a lot of humility a lot of humbleness. You have to forget about yourself totally and completely.

The third direct method is self surrender. You can do all three of these things simultaneously you know. You can be with a Sage, practice self-inquiry and also surrender. This is what a true devotee does. They do all three. Without even knowing that they're doing them.

What is self surrender? When you give up your ego, your life, your possessions, your body, your thoughts, to the Self, to the one Self. When you let go of everything, everything. If you can really do this where is the problem? Where is the anxiety? Where is the sorrow? For you are surrendering it all to the Self, to God. You're giving it all away. If you can really do this what you call God will take over all of your life completely and absolutely. You will no longer have anything to worry about. You will have no responsibilities yourself, but yet you will do what you're supposed to do in a beautiful way, a harmonious way, lovely way and you will feel happy all the time.

When the time comes, when you can sit in a chair by yourself become absorbed in the infinite and feel the bliss. That is your true nature. Realizing that there is nothing in this world that can give you this bliss, nothing, then you've made headway on the spiritual path.

In other words if your friends invite you and say, "Let's go drinking. Let's go have a bowl. Let's go steal a car. Let's go shoot somebody on the freeway," and you say, "Nah, I don't think I'll do this today." And you sit down and feel the joy, the peace, the love which is your Self. You've come along way if you can do this.

Most of us are running around all over the place going here, going there looking for a good time and we think we've made spiritual advances. But as you know the first thing that comes along of a derogatory nature upsets you very much. This tells you how spiritual you are. When you become very mad excited about something or somebody who has upset you. How can you think you're making spiritual progress when you can still get upset? Become angry, become fearful. When you think some ones trying to hurt you or take something from you. How can you call yourself spiritual?

A true spiritual being is at peace at all times.

When something doesn't go right in their life of a spiritual person, they observe it, they watch it, they smile at it and get absorbed in it and come out smiling, laughing. In other words nothing can ever hurt them again.

So, let's talk about you. Where do you think you are on the spiritual path? Again you can answer this yourself by the life you're living. Take a look at your life right now and see what's going on. Are you truly free and happy and peaceful? Or are you only happy and peaceful because things are going your way right now? As you know in this world everything changes constantly, consistently. So if you have beautiful things going your way it will change shortly as it must. And then you feel upset and sad and disillusioned. And you'll say this doesn't work. This Sage is no good let me go find another one.

Remember it's also interesting again the way the mind works in a case like this. I'm here with you all the time and most of you get to know me intimately. We go to lunch we see each other a lot and you get used to me. But if you go traveling and you see a Sage or a teacher, you're only seeing them once or twice or three times. So you think it's something real special, it's different, because you're thrilled by seeing these people, you haven't seen them in your life, you've heard so much about them. But yet if you had to live around the proximity of them, week and day after day watching them at work you wouldn't like them too much. They'd be different than what you thought they were.

What I'm trying to say is be thankful with what you've got. Your life is your life, you can do with it anything you want. Try to find the bliss within you. Awaken the peace within you. Awaken the love within you. Live spontaneously in the moment, forget about the past, the future. Try to understand that somebody out there loves you. This whole universe is your friend, nothing is against you. You have no enemies. All is well and everything is unfolding as it should. Peace.

(silence)

While the food preparers, prepare the food so we stuff ourselves, we can get perhaps Kerema to sing a song or too.

SK: Oh?

R: David White couldn't come today he has the flu, no voice, so we will improvise and do what comes naturally. So listen to Kerema's beautiful songs.

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

IS EVERYTHING PREORDAINED?

30th December, 1992

Robert: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om. It's good to see your smiling faces again. I said smiling faces. (laughter) No frowns.

SR: You're supposed to look behind you.

R: Is there a frown behind me? (SR: No it's a smile.) Well then good. (SR: Obedient servant.) You are. (laughter) I welcome you with all my heart it's good to be with you again. I love you. All is well. Let's go home. (students laugh)

As most of you know, I receive many phone calls from all over the world. I received an interesting phone call last night about 8 o'clock. So I will share it with you. It was from Osaka, Japan. Somehow this Japanese lady got a hold of one of the transcripts. I asked her, "How did you get my phone number?" She related to me that she thought I was in Ramana Ashram. So she called Ramana Ashram and they gave her my phone number. What are they doing with my phone number? (laughter) I'm glad the address is a box number at the back of the transcripts. (laughter) For the box person has already told me that many people have come looking for me? Let them pay homage to the box. (laughter)

But anyway this Osaka lady asked me a question. She said, "Is the world really an illusion and is everything preordained?"

There is a lot of confusion about this. This is why we'll discuss it with some of you here. I spent approximately an hour on the phone with her and when she hung up she was more confused than ever. I asked her to start with, "From what viewpoint are you speaking? From the viewpoint of the Jnani or from the viewpoint of the ajnani? Or from the viewpoint of wisdom or from the viewpoint of ignorance?" If you're speaking from the viewpoint of the Jnani, from the Sage, to the Sage there is no world and there is no preordination. But to the individual souls, the individual ego, to the individual I, there is a world and preordination really exists. To the person who believes they are the body.

Now you cannot intellectually say, "I do not believe I am the body, therefore the world doesn't exist for me, I can do anything I like." This will never work. As long as you feel you are alive as a human being then no matter how intellectual you will say to yourself, "This world does not exist," it will exist. Do not make that mistake. Believing that the world does not exist. For some people tell me if the world does not exist they can do anything they like. I can rob a bank. I can kill people. It doesn't matter nothing exists. Of course the answer is, if nothing exists you wouldn't be talking like this. If you really were aware that nothing exists, the world does not exist, you would be silent. There would be absolutely nothing for you to say because you do not exist either.

Therefore who is asking this question? As far as preordination is concerned this is a truth for the ajnani. For a human being who is steeped in ignorance of the world. And you can tell yourself if you are or you're not by the way the world affects you.

If you become depressed, discouraged, angry, upset. You think there is something wrong somewhere. You look at the world situation, you worry, you're upset over it. This means that you believe you are the body and you are going through experiences on this earth. Therefore this world does exist for you. It is very real never think it's not. And everything in your life is preordained, predestined. Therefore do not believe that you can do anything you like. Whatever you do is preordained.

So she asked me, "If I go and rob the bank is that preordained?" "Of course," I said, "if you rob the bank then it's preordained. You would not even be asking the question. What you have to do you will do. What you are supposed to do every second of your life in this body and ???, what you feel exists has been mapped out before you were born. Every turn you make, every finger you move has been mapped out before you were born. So there is no use asking a question like this, if you can rob a bank or not rob a bank, just by your talking to me is preordained. Asking me stupid questions is preordained. It's all preordained.

Do not concern yourself whether you're going to do anything wrong or right. You are just one of the many actors on the stage of life. Everybody has come here to play a role, so-to-speak. Some people have to be the good guys, some people have to be the bad guys. This is the reason we never judge anybody. This is the reason you should never call anybody evil or bad. It is really a role that they're playing. And a person on the path of Jnana does not judge anybody or anything. They leave everything alone. They observe it, they watch it. Come to no conclusions. Good and bad is out of their vocabulary. Right and wrong has been transcended. This happens before you become fully enlightened.

There is absolutely nothing wrong in this whole universe least of all yourself. You no longer worry about yourself. For even though you still feel you are a piece of the body you understand that there is a grand bliss, a joy, an absolute reality that you can call God that takes care of you completely and totally when you surrender completely and totally to the source.

So you see you do not have to look after your life. You do not have to watch what you eat or watch where you go or watch what you do. For whatever you eat, wherever you go, whatever you do is the right thing for you at the moment. It is where you're supposed to be. You are where you're supposed to reap. Everything is in its right place.

If you learn to have faith like this you will grow. But if you keep believing I am the doer and I have to make things happen, otherwise nothing will happen and I will fall apart, then you will be making things happen all of your life. There will always be something to make happen. It will never end. Yet this is also your role that you have to play here on this earth. This is the destiny that's yours. To do what you're doing right now.

So, the person who understands what I'm saying does not consider the question any more, "Is the world real or false?" Remember if you have to ask that question, then the world is real and you have to act accordingly. In the same instance that person does not ask the question, "Is everything preordained?" For remember for whom are things preordained? Only for the ajnani, for the ignorant one. The only freedom you've got is to turn within and not react to anything. This is your freedom, your total and complete freedom. And that is really a lot of freedom if you think about it. You can really see that you're free, to that extent.

In other words whatever befalls you, you do not become upset, hurtable, angry, you merely observe it and watch it and you realize that is your stuff that you've got to get rid of. That is your stuff you have to go through. It makes no difference how deeply you're suffering, if you're suffering or how happy you are, if you're happy. If you're sick or healthy or you're poor or rich. If you are married or single. If you are living in a hut or a mansion. These things are irrelevant. For what is relevant is your reaction to these things.

The person who does not react grows spiritually and becomes Master of the world, so-to-speak.

When I tell you, becomes Master of the world, I mean that person begins to realize that the whole universe is an emanation of the self, of the mind. It is you who are creating all these situations. It is you who are creating your good and your bad, your right and your wrong, your happy and your sad, your rich and your poor, your healthy and your sick. It is you who are creating these things. Consequently you take a step backward and you observe this in peace and in wisdom.

You begin to look intelligently at the world and your reaction to it. In retrospect you look at your life where it's been up to now. You realize there is no future except the future that you are going to create by thinking. You think the future into existence. Where else would the future come from? Is there a machine that churns out futures? How does tomorrow get here? Where does next week come from? Next month? Next year? The way of the world, the universe. Where does all these things come from? They come from yourself. You are the one that is thinking of these things and creating your past, your future and your present. Therefore the way to understand it is that there is no world, that the world is an illusion, that everything is preordained, is simply by not thinking about it. To not allow the mind current to carry you away into that type of thinking. It is the thinking that causes you to believe those things. And causes those things to become an expression. To look real for you. So it's always you.

To meditate, to pray, to seek right action. Again this is for the ajnani. For the person who believes they are a human being. For the person who believes they are a person, an entity, a self, an I. If you were the supreme wisdom, if you are the infinite intelligence, the absolute reality, the pure awareness would you have to meditate, would you have to pray? Would you have to do anything? Of course not. For the source does not pray about the source, because it is the Self. The one Brahman does not pray about the one Brahman because it is the Self. The enlightened one does not care whether the world is real or false. For to the enlightened Sage there is no world that is real or false. The Sage is beyond all concepts. Beyond all preconceived ideas, beyond all imaginings.

The Sage does not look for out of body experiences or for contact without of body spirits or for anything else. The Sage remember, is all-pervading, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda, parabrahman. To the Sage there are no thoughts, no ideas, no past, no present, no future, the true Sage can never be understood with the finite mind.

Now let's talk about you. This by the way was the gist of the telephone conversation I was having with her. What do you do with your life all day long? What do you think about? Are you in control of your emotions, of your thoughts? Are you still allowing the world to show you what is going on? Are you still allowing the world to show you what is right or wrong, what is good or bad and you react to this? Are you still trying to change the world from bad to good?

If you are you can never awaken this way. You can never awaken to your true Self as long as you believe something is wrong anywhere. Something being wrong anywhere means that what you call God doesn't know what he or she or whatever is doing. For they have allowed something to be wrong. But when you awaken to the fact that you are the God, you are the ultimate reality, and the whole world is manifesting from your mind and all you've got to do is blink and keep still, stop thinking, stop the thoughts from arising and everything else will take care of itself and you will be home.

The important point here is you have to stop the thoughts from rising. In order for you to do this you have to find the source to your thoughts. What is the source of your thoughts? You never answer a question like this. For if you answer this question it's the ego answering the question. You may have read somewhere, where the source of your thoughts are but do not repeat the words like a parrot. A parrot maybe taught to say, "I'm not afraid of cats, I'm not afraid of cats, I'm not afraid of cats," but the first cat that jumps into the cage it starts squawking and screaming its head off. This is like most of us. We go around repeating affirmations, words of truth that we read some place, we become like a parrot.

The whole idea is to be silent. Not to add affirmations or words to your garbage pail. It is already filled with garbage. By garbage I mean, preconceived ideas, dogmas, opinions, samskaras from previous lives, you're filled with these things and you are a reacting machine, you react, that is what you do all day is react, react, react. Therefore when you try to learn more knowledge and you read more books all you're doing is adding on to the garbage pail. Of course most of you realize, the highest truth is to delete, not to add. To get rid of the things you believe in now. So empty yourself out totally and completely. All of your ideas, your feelings, all have to be emptied out of you. When you become totally and completely empty there is nothing you have to do to fill it up again. Emptiness is realization. Emptiness is Brahman. Emptiness is the Self. Emptiness is your real nature.

So do not concern yourself whether the world is real or if everything is preordained. Do not waste your time thinking about things like this. Wouldn't it be more useful for you to say, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking these thoughts? To whom do they come? They come to me. Then who am I?"

I tell you this will be more useful for you. You've been wasting your time trying to find out what is real, what is false, who is enlightened, who is not, who is real, who is a fake, who is this, who is that and trying to make your life a certain way when the one is always looking after you. The power that knows the way will always take care of you and lead you to where you're supposed to be.

Wake up! Be free!

Stop searching for something you already are. Stop judging others, leave everything alone. Dive deep within, deeper than you've ever gone before. Become one pointed. Leave this world alone. You will be all right. Noone really wants to hurt you or cause you any suffering. You are blessed. If you only knew what you were for an instance, you will burst out with joy. If you only knew your true divine nature, you would not be able to contain your happiness.

Make your life simple, live simply. If your life is too complicated then you do not have time to go deep within yourself. Remove the complications from your life. We do not do this physically. We do this mentally. By inquiring, "To whom do these complications come? Who needs them?" Remember when I talk to you this way, I never mean for you to leave your family or leave your job or drop everything and go into a monastery or a cave or anything else. All of this is done mentally. As within so without. As above so below.

The world responds to your new shape of your thoughts. The universe responds to your new being. In other words the universe always turns into what you are. Whenever you look at the world you're seeing yourself never forget this. All of the images in this world, including your body, are like bubbles on the ocean, like waves. They come and they go but the ocean never changes the bubbles always change. They're there for a while, they pop. They become part of the ocean again. Then another bubble pops up, lasts for a while and pops, part of the ocean again. And so it is with forms of this earth. Your body, the world that you see are simply the bubbles on the ocean. Do not be the bubble, be the ocean and become free. For you're already free, awaken to it.

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: On Sunday there was a little discussion on out of the body experiences. And I thought of this guy in Vietnam, he's a liberal, and this right wing nut beat him up and almost killed him. When he was in the operating room he left his body and went up to the roof and over to the corner and he looked down on the operating table and he could see the doctors working on him and the nurses and he could hear what they were saying. (R: Umm.) And he tried to talk back but he felt a little disappointed that he wasn't able to make himself heard. And it seemed to me that it must be real significant that an individual can see without his eyes or hear without his ears. Would you comment on that?

R: All of this is from the mind. Just as we have this world, the dream world, we have a source which we call the astral plane which seems to be the source of the physical plane. We have the causal plane, the mental plane. In all of these planes different things are happening. But these planes are like the world. They really do not exist. They're simply from the mind. All of these things do not exist in reality. What you want to do is transcend, transmute all of these planes completely, totally and absolutely. And they will never bother you again. (SF: Forget about them?) The reason out of body experiences are so important to us is because they're different from our normal way of living. So do not treat them like a miracle or seem like something phenomenal has taken place, which it is. But when we talk about Advaita Vedanta, there is the one. The one that causes all these planes to be in existence, consciousness, pure unalloyed consciousness.

Consciousness is total freedom. When you go into out of the body experiences, then what usually happens is you come back to your body and you have to live your life again. Just go through life maybe feel a little better because you realize that there is no such thing as death, you were never born, you can never die. But if you talk to many of these people who have had these experiences the feeling gradually begins to go away. And they become very earth-bound again.

Consequently the things you want to really do is to go beyond all these experiences, go beyond all the occult. Go beyond everything the human mind can understand, to that place where there are no thoughts, no movement, no questions, perfect bliss. Which is your real nature.

SF: Something you said earlier, reminded me of the story of Shankara-Acharya in the knowledge of the mad elephant ??? since he was proclaiming that there was nothing in duality, so-to-speak. Why did he seek shelter along with the rest of us - I have forgotten what he said but - (laughter)

SH: You've forgotten the punch line? (laughter)

R: I think we told that story last week didn't we? (SF: It's very similar, not that particular story.) Not that particular story? (SF: Same idea, and I forgot what you said about it.) (laughs) Well when the Master came to him he was all beshevelled, the elephant threw him a couple of yards, and he said, "Master I thought you told me that all is well and God is looking after us and will take care of me?" So the Master said, "Yes, but why didn't you listen to the fellow that told you to get out of the way? Because God is always looking after him too. You should've listened to him."

SH: That was the voice of God.

SR: Robert when we sense a light within, moving around inside our body, I guess we feel the limits because it's running up against the walls of our body is that just another plane of the mind working?

R: When you feel the light within? (SR: Yeah.) It means you are going to have a big electric bill. The light within cannot be spoken of. When you really feel the light within it will totally and completely transform you. Many of us imagine there is a light within. We can tell if the real light within has been seen or not, by the way we react to life's situations. Again if the light within is real, you will be totally transformed into a new being. You will be at peace with yourself. Things will no longer frighten you. You will have compassion and love for everything. This is what this light does for you. (SR: This light seems to have some barriers within. It seems to be lighting up parts of the body but not all of it. Maybe in that state it's still mental, huh?) Yes, I believe so. The mind can play many tricks on you and it does. The mind can make you believe all sorts of things. But again the experiencing of your self by changing your whole mode of living. Everything in your life will change if you have a true spiritual experience. You will not be the same person any longer. You can't, because the light has burnt out all its gross feelings, it has burnt out all the ignorance and stupidity and nonsense. You become a refreshed blissful being. So you will know when the light is real. You will simply know it yourself.

And again if you have to ask the question about it then it's not real. For when you have the true light there is no question about it whatsoever. You will be in the light and you will know what freedom means.

SF: There is no question about anything.

R: Really? So why do you ask so many questions?

SS: Is there any milestone between the human being and the Jnani? (R: Any what?) Is there any milestone between a Jnani and a human being? Then we can know where we reach. What is our progress then?

R: What will happen to you is you will no longer be a human being. The progress of your body is dissolved in the Jnani. (SS: So that is the last result, but in between is there any milestone that...?) In between you feel peace, you feel joy, you feel bliss. You have wonderful feelings. Things no longer upset you.

SS: So what I have to do in the daily life? Suppose I am a businessman or I have to drive a car? Always I have to react with the mind you know? And if I sit down for observing the mind then all of the whatever the experience of daytime that coming up at the same time. All the thoughts and everything, you know? If the whole day gone peacefully then I sit down quiet. If all day have the problems then I cannot sit down with the quietness.

R: You are to know that you are not the doer. You are not the doer. You do not have to sit down to find quiet and peace. As you work, whatever you do, realize you are not the doer, and inquire within yourself, "To whom does this work come? Who does this work? I do. Who am I?" You can say who am I? to yourself all day long. It is not a mantra. But you can repeat it to yourself continuously. It will remind you of your true nature what you really are. It makes no difference how hard you have to work, where you work or what you do. Just know I am not the doer. I am not the body. I am not the mind. I am! And do your work. And you will find your work is more efficient...

(tape ends) [TOC]

SIGNS OF A TRUE SPIRITUAL MASTER

7th January, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...and salutations. It's good to be with you again. Happy holidays. The holidays are over. The holidays is dead, we're still here alive.

I brought a picture for you of yourself in the future. Here it is. (students laugh)

SH: Thanks a lot.

R: This is you. This is what is going to happen to you whether you like it or not. (laughter) You're going to look exactly like this. (more laughter) No matter what you do or don't do. No matter whether you're happy or sad, rich or poor, sick or healthy, you're still going to turn into a bag of bones. This is what happens to the average person. That is what I have to look forward to but if you would only go within yourself and know the truth about yourself then this becomes a mirage. When you discover you have eternal life that you've never been born, you can never die, when you discover bliss is your real nature, bliss. You were meant to be blissed out every second of the day. Happiness, true happiness that does not involve person, place or thing. When you understand this truth you become free in it. And you will always be alive, always. The body becomes like a bubble in the ocean. Bubbles come bubbles go, bodies come bodies go, here today gone tomorrow.

Many of you want to have fun all day, enjoy things. There is nothing wrong with that but it must come to end. Everything comes to an end. All of your enjoyments, all of your pleasures. Everything you've earned, worked for, strived for comes to an end. Everything must end.

When you're sort of young you don't think about these things. You think about having fun all the time, enjoying, holding on to the world making something of yourself. Well you've made something of yourself, you've made a mess of yourself. By believing you are the mind. By believing you are living in reality. Whereas in truth the only reality is the reality you don't know. The reality that is beyond time and space, beyond worlds, bodies. But you cannot taste this reality that I'm speaking of unless you virtually give up your life. I don't mean you have to kill yourself. I mean give up the life that you're living, mentally. Stop believing that the life that you're living is important, that there's something you have to do, something you have to accomplish. Your true life is within. The real world is within yourself. Free of all pain, sorrow. Free of man's inhumanity to man. Free of everything.

There is a world like that you know. A real world, that is full of happiness and joy and peace. A world that has no beginning and no end. That world is you! You are that! But we're going about it the wrong way, most of us.

I have been receiving a lot of telephone calls from Santa Cruz during the holidays. Santa Cruz must be completely enlightened because everybody that calls me from there tells me they're enlightened. (Students laugh) This has been going on for about two or three years. They want a confirmation for their enlightenment. I usually give the same answer. I say, "If there is anybody looking for confirmation, kill that somebody. Who needs a confirmation? Does the Self need a confirmation? The ego wants a confirmation."

But last night I got a call from Santa Cruz from a lady who got a hold of my transcript. And she tells me, "Robert for twenty-five years I've been reading Advaita Vedanta. I've read everything there is to read, everything, every book. I sit in meditation four times a day. I travel the world. Met all the Jnanis. Seen all the holy places but nothing has happened." This is what I told her and this important for us too. I told her, "You are doing everything backwards. The more you read, the more knowledge you gain. And who profits by this? The ego, every book that you read gives you more intelligence. Who has intelligence? The ego, every time you think you have to meditate, it is the ego that is meditating. Does the Self have to meditate? Does reality have to meditate on reality? All of the gurus you've seen, everything that you've done has actually put you back in time, not forward but back."

The whole idea in Advaita Vedanta is to remove everything we've ever learnt. To get rid of all the things we've learnt, not to add to it. Not to add new knowledge to the old knowledge, but to become like little children so-to-speak. We do not wish to know something, we wish to know nothing. How can you know nothing when you're reading and reading and reading or when you're meditating your life away?

When you're searching for new teachers all the time, all you are doing is filling yourself up with knowledge, more knowledge and more knowledge and more knowledge. The only thing that could happen to you is you become a walking encyclopaedia. You'll be able to cite aphorisms, sutras, if you have a good memory you'll memorize the bible backwards and you'll have a lot to say. This is the mistake most of us make.

A true spiritual aspirant hardly has anything to say. There is no one to debate. No one to argue points of spirituality. No one to say, "I'm right or you're right. This is right and this is wrong." A true spiritual aspirant is very quiet, very still. Does not make a lot of waves but watches, looks and does nothing. Everything that has to be done will be done through the person. It's so easy to live a life like this. It's so easy to be still and allow the power that knows the way to move you in the right direction, to lead you. You do not have to raise a finger. And there is absolutely nothing that you have to do.

Why will you not trust yourself and stop fighting? Stop having a battle within yourself. Leave yourself alone. Remember I told you before you have to learn to love yourself? To really really love yourself. If you can really love yourself you can trust yourself. Go easy on yourself. Develop loving kindness, compassion.

A Sage is with you for a very short time, so take advantage of it. If you're fortunate enough to be with a Sage realize that you've earned the privilege sometime, somehow.

Perhaps in a previous life or something you've done before. If you really follow what I'm telling you something wonderful will happen to you, you will find that you are the Sage yourself. You are the Sage that you've always been looking for. It's you! Who else can it be. Me? Don't look at me, I am simply your image, you have created me. You have created me in your own image, in your own likeness. This is the only reason I appear to exist. I am your creation. What are you going to do with me? It's up to you.

Life is never what it appears to be. Everything is maya, yet maya is also beautiful. Do not hate maya. Work with maya by not reacting to things but enjoying its beauty and love and peace. The whole thing may be a dream but enjoy the dream. Pick out the good things of the dream and think of them. Ignore the bad things.

Learn to be still. When I say, "Learn to be still I'm not referring to meditate." Remember when you meditate there has to be a subject and an object. When I say, "To be still," just be still. Be still, do not think of anything special. Just be still, quiet. I'm not speaking of being still over here alone, in everyday life.

Think of all the noise that some of you made this morning as you got out of bed, the talking, the arguing, the mind chattering. That is what I'm referring to, be still. You can talk to your mind this way, tell your mind to "be still!" When your mind begins to chatter say, "Be still!" When the mind starts telling you all kind of things about somebody else say, "Be still!" When the mind brings things of the past say, "Be still!" That's all you have to do. You are the power. You can still the mind if you really want to, just by telling it to be still.

There is absolutely nothing in this world to be excited about, nothing. For everything must change. Therefore if you become excited about something in this world you become confused, disillusioned, upset, for all things are subject to the law of change. Rather go within. If you can really go within you will feel a peace which passeth all understanding, divine joy and this peace and joy will become your world. You will see it wherever you look, wherever you go. Remember the only thing you see in this world is yourself, nothing else. Wherever you look you see yourself. If you don't like what you see change yourself. Nothing wants to hurt you. Nothing wants to cause you pain.

What are the signs of a true spiritual Master? A real Master. A real Jnani. What are signs to look for?

Number One: A true Sage avoids name and fame like the plague. If a Sage has transcended the ego why would he or she need name or fame? If a Sage claims to be enlightened why would that being want to be known? To have a following, to write books, to advertise, to go into magazines, television. Can you imagine a real Master doing something like that? For what purpose? If you inquire of a person like this they would say, "Well I'm here to help people." Bullshit! The only way to help other people is to become self-realized and leave everything alone. Why a self-realized person is all-pervading, omnipresent and automatically people find peace by the person being self-realized. You don't even have to be in the proximity of a saint, a Sage, a real Master. There is no reason being in close proximity to a person like that. That being is all-pervading, everywhere present.

Such a one has found total peace within the Self. They're not looking for anything. They're not looking for students to impress, followers to follow them. They avoid this like the plague. The only reason you see me around every week is because I've got a contagious disease. So think about this. A real Sage needs absolutely nothing from people. It is true where devotees gather devotees take care of the Sage. This is a different story. But a Sage feels at home wherever he or she lives wherever they go. A Sage can be happy in a cave or in a mansion, makes no difference. It makes a difference to the onlookers. They always see something wrong and talk about it. But a true Sage is total freedom, totally happy within himself.

Number Two: A true Sage has a great compassion for humanity and is filled with loving kindness automatically. Total compassion! A Sage never says, "I have come to bring you peace," or "I have come to destroy you." A true Sage does not come from anywhere. He's always been here. There is nowhere for him to come from, to bring you anything. The Sage and the peace go hand in hand. The real Sage is the peace and the joy and the happiness and the love and the understanding and the compassion. So he really has nothing to say, nothing to do. A true Sage is a lazy fellow, real lazy. He has trouble blinking. He just exists, so-it-appears, to other people that he exists.

Number Three: A real Sage never gets angry. Never has tantrum...tremors, tempers. Never becomes excited over anything except in certain cases. When a Sage is dealing with disciples, devotees, sometimes the Sage has to put on a little act for the person, because this is what the person needs at the time. This is why it is written, "Never judge a Sage." You have no idea what the Sage is going to do or how he is going to act. What this means is you have to make sure the Sage is real. If you feel the Sage is real then you have to sort of throw yourself at the Sage. By "throw yourself at the Sage" I mean you must come into the sage's consciousness and trust the Sage forever without judgment, without criticism. Yet most westerners are not ready to do something like this, because there are so many people claiming to be Sages in town it's difficult to know what to do. But if you pray within yourself, to yourself, you will know what to do. Everyday you have to remember your real nature, you have to remember who you are. That you are pure awareness. You are the absolute reality which is like boundless space. The only difference between boundless space and absolute reality, in absolute reality there is consciousness. Consciousness is like boundless space. It is everywhere present and all the images are only superimpositions on consciousness. Your body is only an image. It is not the truth about you. It is an image. It is an image on boundless space. This means it doesn't exist. It appears to exist but it doesn't. Just by remembering these things that I'm sharing with you will free you. Start your day off this way by remembering who you are. You can say this to yourself, "I am not this body who runs around all over the world. I am not this body who has problems. I am not this body that sees things wrong. I am not this body at all. I never was this body. I am that which has always been and that which will always be. That which has never been born. That which never dies. Eternal, self sufficient, I am that!!" You have so many years left on this earth in this body so-to-speak what are you doing with them in the days, the weeks, the months, the years. If you're running around looking for material gain you're wasting your time. If you're looking to make yourself happy physically you're wasting your energy. I can assure you, you will be wonderfully happy if you go within the Self and try to understand who you are, then you will really be happy. You will have unknown happiness that you never believed existed. You are the one and there is no other. You are the one that has always been and will always be. See yourself that way. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. The reason you feel sorry for yourself is because you think of the past and the future. If you will only stop thinking, all of your sorrows would end so-to-speak. Everything will come to a screeching halt if you shut your mind.

So for those of you who are taking new year resolutions, as a result of this year you will find illumination. You will find total freedom this year. This year you will be completely free and liberated. This is the year for liberation. Some of you are making excellent progress. By going to lunch with you and talking to you I see where you're coming from and you're doing very well. You're disappearing. You are coming into your own. Everything is unfolding as it should. Have faith in your Self. Enjoy your Self. Trust your Self. Love your Self. Be at peace.

(Robert plays a song on tape)

It's time to play stump the guru. Do we have any stumppers?

SM: We have one. (R: One stumper.) (SH: Maybe this will do it. Hallelujah! (laughs))

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert what is logic? (there is another thing) What is organization? (what's the next word)? And if they don't exist can they have any significance? Logic is the first and organization is the next. Communication is I think, the next.

A: Who needs to be logical? Does the Self need to be logical? Does the reality which we really are need to be logical? If we only try to remember that these are only words and you've associated the words with feelings, certain feelings. You want to be logical. Why do you want to be logical? For what reason? To impress somebody? So you get ahead in life? Does humanity really need logic? Rather understand who you really are. Discover your true nature and logic will take care of itself in its proper place. But your job is not to be logical. Be yourself! When you are yourself logic comes into play by itself also. And you may do certain things and people may say you're logical but you know nothing of these things. Logical or illogical they're all the same, there is no difference. Discover who you are and then see if a question like that comes into play. What's the next word?

Q: Oh, Organization and communication?

A: What are these words to you? Organization, communication, what are these words for? What do they do? Who wants to organize? Who wants to communicate? The ego, it's always the ego that wants to do all of these things. The ego wants recognition. It wants to act intelligently. So you can applaud it, appease it. It wants to communicate so you can have a relationship with people. But it's still the ego and the ego is never your friend.

The ego exists only to confuse you and confound you. That is why it appears to exist. But to whom does the ego exist? Only to the mind, so we're back to basics again.

Destroy the mind by not thinking about it. If you do not think about the mind it becomes weaker and weaker and finally it's totally annihilated. When there is no longer a mind logic will be unnecessary, communication is unnecessary, everything is unnecessary. For everything works by itself. It takes care of itself, in its own time and in its own place. That is why I emphasize so much, turn into yourself. Turn within to yourself. Never try to solve your problems. You cannot do it, rather know yourself, be yourself and see if any problems disturb you at all. What I say to you sometimes seems to be ludicrous, nonsensical, but yet if you do it, if you try it, you will see if it's nonsensical. If you would only turn within yourself and stop trying to change other people or change conditions or change behavior patterns. Leave these things alone. Be yourself! Love yourself! Worship yourself! And then see what happens to you. (pause) Is that all the questions? (SM: Yes.)

SB: Robert does the mind have any legitimate role in this life at all?

R: To confound you and confuse you. That is the only reason it exists. It exists because of the senses, taste, touch, feel, smell and hear. You need a mind to do these things. But if the mind is destroyed, so-to-speak then reality ensues. Reality is love, loving kindness, compassion, joy, peace, happiness, the true Self. This is what the universe really is. Not what it appears to be. Never judge by appearances, this means you should never judge any human being. No matter if you think you're wrong or right whatever. You have no...you can't judge it, you have no right to. The rapist, the murderer, you cannot judge these people. It's not for you to judge these people at all. Everything will take care of itself. If you judge something you become that something yourself because you have your mind embellished in it and you become...you begin to think this way. So try to be still. Quiet the mind. Do not search for anything. Do not try to become anything. You will become what you have to become, everything will happen by itself. (dog whimpers) Yeah you believe me. Toku believes me. My best dog, Toku. Anyone have anything else to say?

SH: Why would the Self want to appear anything other than it is?

R: I told you that before Henry. The Self doesn't want to do anything. (SH: Yeah, but it's coming on like it isn't.) It's not coming on at all. (SH: But it appears to come on.) To whom does it appears to you to come on. (SH: Well, to you too.) Why to me? (SH: I don't know. You have senses as well as I.) How do you know? (laughter) (SH: I can see you're stumbling around, you're getting there.) People tell me all the time I have no sense. (SH: Well, there is a point there too.) (laughs) It's all an hallucination. (SH: Huh?) It's an hallucination. (SH: I know but why? Why hallucinate? What's the point?) There is no point. You think you're hallucinating.

SH: And when I come straight out with it and not vary from what really is all along, why the illusion?

R: To whom is the illusion? (SH: To he who sees it.) Who sees it? (SH: You do.) How do you know? (laughter) (SH: Because you're not blind, you can see what is going on.) I see what's going on and I don't see what's going on also. (SH: Yeah.) I see and I don't see at the same time. (SH: That's a new trick.) (laughs)

SF: I thought something kind of interesting. The disciple asked the Master, "Do we live in the same world?" and the Master said, "Yes we do but the difference is that you see yourself in the world and I see the world in my self."

R: Umm. That's good Fred. (SF: It reminded me of the time when I was telling you how frightened I was at the riots and explosions and all and I said ??? and you said they were in me.) Umm. Which means? (SF: They weren't real.) Exactly. This world is very funny, you're always seeing your self wherever you look. All of the riots, the dastardly things going on in this world, in this city of Los Angeles, are your creation. Where else would they come from. Collectively we're all thinking certain things, seeing certain things this is why many of us appear to see the same things ??? We appear to see nonsense and goodness and badness and all kinds of things. We appear to see these things because we're all collectively thinking the same thoughts. Step out of the crowd. Be yourself.

SY: Robert if everyone was enlightened would the world dissolve?

R: If everyone was enlightened there wouldn't be a world to begin with. There would be no world to dissolve. (SY: Then it would dissolve?) It wouldn't dissolve because it never existed. So nothing would dissolve. There would be nothing to dissolve. (SY: Well if we created the world then if we had been our ego then the world would dissolve wouldn't it?) You only create the world with your mind. What you're saying is to go beyond the mind. (SY: Then the world would dissolve?) There is no world to dissolve beyond the mind. The world exists only because the mind exists or appears to exist. So if the mind is made still then you will see the world never existed and there is no world. There is absolutely nothing to dissolve. Dissolving only comes from the mind. No mind, no dissolving. Sorry about that.

SB: Robert in the Jnani you say you see the world how the appearance has an appearance in consciousness but it appears that you can't... (R: Change?) ...eliminate like?

R: Yes. If I were able to eliminate this whole world and didn't see the world, I wouldn't be here any more. What you call this body sees exactly what you see and doesn't see exactly what you see at the same time. It sees and does not see. Whereas you see it and you accept it. There is nothing in me to say not to accept it and there is nothing to say I should accept it. It's as if I'm looking at a dream. I'm 100% sure and certain that I know the dream does not exist. But I know that I'm in the dream, as a body. The body appears to be a part of the dream. But I'm always aware it's a dream, all the time. But you forget it's a dream and you react to it. That's the only difference. (SB: You know it's a dream by comparison to some other reality, right?) No, no comparison whatsoever.

SB: So if you're abiding in consciousness so you're abiding in the real, noticing the dream as a dream. So you have something to compare it to. Whereas we're just abiding in the dream and we're not abiding in consciousness. We're unconscious of being consciousness, you're conscious of being consciousness.

R: Not quite. There is only consciousness. I'm aware that there is only consciousness that is what I'm aware of. The rest I'm not aware of, but it appears.

SH: You're not aware of the appearance?

R: I'm aware of the appearance but not as you are aware of the appearance. I'm not aware at all of anything but I see the appearance. (SH: You see it differently than we do?) I see it like you do. (SH: You see it as illusion?) But I don't see at all. (SH: Don't see it at all?) Yet I see it. (SH: That is quite contradictory. You see it but you don't see it?) (laughter) Exactly. Now you got it, that's it. (laughter) (SH: You're nuts.) (laughter) Thank you. (SH: You're welcome. That's my final conclusion.) (laughter) That is a compliment, thank you. (SH: Yes it is.)

SB: Did you say you see it through awareness. Through a different position?

R: No you can't say that at all because there is nobody left to see it like that. (SB: There is no duality to be separate from? And yet it appears and if it appears there seems to be two but you know that it is only one.) (laughter) You're getting close. I see it and I don't see it and there is no definition. There are no words. There is nothing to say. (SB: Would it be like we were dreaming and there was a part of us that was inspecting the dream and we knew we were dreaming?) No. (laughter) (SG: Nice try though.) It's so different than what you can imagine.

S: You always create a duality and that is where we get off on the wrong foot.

R: Of course, otherwise I wouldn't say a word. (SH: And you aren't coming from a dualistic position.) But I have to talk to you. (SH: But that is your tough luck.) (laughs) I know. I can sit here and say nothing. And you'll say, "Robert never tells us anything." So I talk about these things that don't exist. It's okay. All is well. (SH: But you never see it as divided as...) No I don't. (SH: It's always monistic, it's always whole and one?) Yes and no. (SH: Okay, confuse me further.) I just see. (SH: What do you see?) Nothing.

SH: Nothing. Trust you to take care of it that way. (students laugh) You always wind up wiping out the universe.

R: It never existed to begin with. (SH: Umm, well.) So you've got to wipe it out, in the end. (SH: Uh-huh. A new trick if it would work.) A new trick if you can do it? And you can do it if you try. (SH: Wiping out the universe is wiping out your own mind.) Of course. Now you've got it. (SH: Yeah but it's a boot strap operation and no one to do it.) Why do you always want to do something, do nothing. (SH: There is no one to do something or nothing.) And nothing. So do it. (laughter) (SH: Uh-oh. You're seeping back in I thought we got rid of you.)

SB: I think that is the hardest thing in the world to do, nothing. Nobody can do it. (R: Try it.) The hardest thing in the world. I tried to pay somebody to do nothing for me and they didn't accept it.

R: Really? You didn't offer him enough, pay him more. (laughter)

SH: Try me. (SB: Yeah right.) You know you'll lose your money fast. (SB: You just pretend Henry.) And you? (SB: If you could really do nothing you'd be sitting over there.) No way.

R: Henry doesn't want that burden. (SH: No thanks.) Everything is beautiful.

SL: I agree. That as you said the riots scared Fred, the riots came from Fred. Is that what I understand what you said?

R: Fred is responsible for the whole thing. (laughter) (SL: There is no creation though? Nothing is created?) You're right. (SL: And yet Fred created this fear in his mind? As a response?) Yes. (SL: So, fear is created in some and fear and joy is created at other times in other people.) Fear and joy come out of the mind. When the mind goes there is no fear, there is no joy. (SL: Then there only appears to be creation, huh?) Yeah that is all an appearance. Even Fred is an appearance. He wants you to think he is real. You're not real Fred you're an appearance. Fred's pondering that.

SF: We react differently. Some people will be scared to death by the riots, others wouldn't. Each of us reacts differently according to our own make up. (R: Yes.) We have different tasteS, different conditioning.) (R: But go beyond all that.)

SB: Robert does human love ever become divine love? What I mean by that is consciousness. Divine love in terms of consciousness. Do you go through human love for it to become divine love consciousness or do you have to completely transcend human love?

R: Human love is sort of a step in the right direction. It is an inkling, a glimpse of what divine love is all about. But it's a part of the material world. So naturally you've got to give it up. Yet if you can love enough you will be the divine love that you're expressing. I was speaking of the average person who just loves something because they can get something from it for their own self aggrandizement. When most people love why do they love? For their own benefit. So they can get something for themselves. They want something in order to be happy. They want to have joy, peace. But if they really love they would love everybody and everything. So human love is step in that direction. It gives you a glimpse of what divine love really is, it's a thousand times greater. Millions of times more intense. (SB: So through that, through human love and then toward divine love the ego would be transcended eventually.) Yes. But love is the highest quality we have as humans so-to-speak. If we could only love enough we would totally transcend the body.

SF: Christians say God is love. (R: Umm.) Oneness, no separation. (R: Exactly. But who is God.) Just a word.

R: It's your Self! So you are love, keep loving.
(silence)

Let's sit in the profound silence for a while. Just be still. If your mind attacks you just look at it. In a loving way just leave it alone. Don't try to stop your thoughts, change your thoughts. Just be still. Be quiet. Do not think of anything in particular. Become aware of the thoughts that come to you. Just watch them. Do not give them any attention or change them, do no not try to change them. Just be yourself.

(long silence as tape ends) [TOC]

WHEN WILL I AWAKEN?

10th January, 1993

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om, peace.

Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. I love all of you just the way you are. All is well.

Many people still ask me, "Robert will I be enlightened in this life or do I have to go through many lives? Will I awaken in this life? Will I become free in this life or do I have to go on playing games like everybody else, making believe, when will I awaken?" And it's very funny to me. My answer is never! You'll never awaken! It's like the water in the mirage asking, "When will I become real water? How long do I have to be a mirage? When will I become the real water?" Of course it will never become the real water. For the mirage can never become anything but a mirage. It will always be a mirage. So it is with us. What you are can never be anything else. For you do not exist as a body at all. And if you do not exist as a body what can become self-realized? In other words you have nothing to become self-realized with. You cannot become self-realized it's impossible. Forget about it. Don't even think of it.

Self-realization has absolutely nothing to do with your body or your thoughts or your mind or your practices or your sadhanas or anything else. Self-realization is the ultimate reality. It is the pure awareness, the nirvana and that doesn't exist either. So what exists? There is no answer. For what exists can never be known with a finite mind. This is why we do the work from where we are. We do not think about becoming self-realized or becoming liberated. We simply wonder who we are. We just ask ourselves, "Where does this body come from? What appears to be a body?" And we compare it to the water in the mirage. It's an hallucination. It has no validity. In other words you have no existence whatsoever.

You have never had an existence. Nothing exists. Yet we appear to exist. So what to do? Nothing, there is nothing you can do about it. That's just the way it is. Do not try to change it. Stay the way you are and keep still. That is the best thing you can do. Be happy just the way you are. Of course the only way you can be happy is by keeping still and not reacting to things, by leaving everything alone and being yourself. When I say, "Being yourself," I mean being you the way you are right now, nothing else. The world of reality exists by itself. It just is.

There is nothing you can do to change anything. Do not try to change anything. Do not work on yourself. For every time you're working on yourself you are emphasizing that you're the self, the mortal self that needs to be worked at. Just be yourself the way you are right now, in this moment. I'm not saying to be your self last week or to be your self a week from now. Be yourself right this moment, this second, this instant and you'll be safe. Do not concern yourself how to be the self. Do not concern yourself what you have to do to be the self. Don't even wonder what it is to be the self. Just be!

Do not question it. Do not try to understand it. You will always be the way you are, nothing will ever change that. So you might as well get on with that and be happy. Suffering comes when you try to change yourself. Suffering ensues when you try to develop moksha, liberation. When you try to transcend yourself, then you suffer. For you are trying to attain something that doesn't exist and it hurts.

Isn't it wonderful not to do anything. Never try to attain a thing or become anything else. What about pain, what about lack and limitation, what about poverty. What about the rest of these things that exist? It's all part of life. Do not try to get rid of it. Look at it, accept it, be happy with it and leave it alone.

What I'm really saying is, "Get your mind off yourself." Stop thinking about yourself. Stop thinking about anybody else. Whatever is supposed to come to you will come to you. Whatever you are supposed to have you will have. Wherever you have to go you will go. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. So why not enjoy where you are right this moment. Stop trying to change things. The very trying makes them worse. The body that you're wearing right now is an hallucination. You are not that person whatsoever. But because you appear as that person you go through many experiences of what that person has to go through. Do not fight it. Do not try to change it. Leave everything alone. You'll be very surprised at what happens if you leave everything alone. But when you try to change bad for good you're fighting a losing battle for it cannot be done.

You may tell me of people who have used their mind to achieve things in the world, to heal themselves of disease, to heal themselves of lack or limitation, to become powerful beings through thinking. Those things are only changes, temporary changes. Do not try to be a human being. Go beyond that. You go beyond that by doing nothing. Yet some of you do not understand and think you have to sit down like a lump and do nothing on the contrary. When you're doing nothing you're doing something. Something is being done. Something will always be done by you. Yet at the same time nothing is being done. So the question is, "Is something being done or is nothing being done?" and there is no answer. What do you want to achieve and why do you wish to achieve those things? Only for your self aggrandizement. An animal leads a normal life. It cannot think like we do. It goes through its life and when it's time to leave their life it leaves it peacefully, happily. But as human beings we fight, trying to live forever. Trying to maintain the same beauty we've always had, the same happiness, the same joy. This is all a waste of energy.

All is well, just the way it is. You are perfect just the way you are. There is nothing that you have to do. There is no one you have to please. There is no God that you have to appease. You are the one. All of these ideas that are going through your mind of people, places, things, Gods, are all you. You are creating everything. Everything that you can think about you're creating. Everything comes out of yourself. Just like you're dreaming. The mistake we make is we try to awaken from the dream, the mortal dream, from this dream. Yet who is to awaken from it? The person that wants to awaken doesn't exist. Do you see what I'm saying? Nothing exists that has to do anything. The person who wants to be free does not exist, has never existed. The person who is looking for moksha does not exist. Then again what does exist? Total silence exists. Pure profound silence. Never try to comprehend these things. For you're using the mind, you're using the cells that are the mind, that are connected to the cells of the universe and you make your life miserable by doing this.

There is no difference between you and a tree or a mountain, a sky or the ocean. The whole universe is composed of hydrogen atoms. So you're nothing but a hydrogen atom. How does it feel to be a hydrogen atom? (SB: Hydrogenating.) (laughter) See how your mind begins to think? It's difficult for most of you to stay silent. You are not required to understand a thing I say. I speak utter nonsense. It's all nonsense and some of you are taking it in so profoundly like it's important.

Who are you really? I have no idea? If you have an idea of who you are you've got a problem. For you're not that at all. Again we go back to the beginning when I opened up this sentence. Who thinks they're something. You can never be anything. The you that you think you are can never be a thing. Always remember this. The you can never become anything. The only freedom you really have is to be still and quiet and that is the only freedom you've got. To be totally quiet. Everything else is an hallucination, a lie. So most of you want me to sit here and tell you lies. Stop worrying. Stop fretting. Stop believing something can happen to you, to hurt you. What you are was never born. It knows nothing of birth. The one that knows about birth and death doesn't exist.

So here we are together again. Why do you come here? If you have a reason for coming here it's the wrong reason. There is no reason for doing anything at all.

(long silence)

(Tape stops and restarts for questions. No questions as Robert remarks)

R: What a bunch! (SB: We've given up trying to stump the guru.)

R: Feel free to ask anything.

SG: Well that's the question. (laughter) Is there a question that can be asked where the answer to it is not in the same category as the question asked?

R: Every question you ask has its own answer in the categories that we have in our mind. Is we put categories on questions. Therefore when you ask a question it has an answer. The answer may be in the same category asked because it is the only category there is. Put them in a category. There is only one question one category, it's all the same. There is nothing else.

SE: What's the number on your drivers license? (laughter) (R: I don't have one.)

SG: Good try. (laughter)

SK: You said always be yourself and I look at myself and I see I'm always changing. So I've come to the conclusion that there will always be changes. It sounds like an oxymoron.

R: Change is the only reality. Everything must change. But look at yourself and don't judge yourself. Just look at yourself. Watch the changes being made and keep looking at yourself. If you do this correctly you'll go through the changes. You'll go beyond the changes. By looking at yourself the changes are outside of you not inside. But your true Self does never change there is nothing to change. Because there is only one Self and that is you. So when you look at yourself you see changes. As you keep looking at yourself day in, day out and watching the changes, the changes will come to an end and you'll find something beyond the change. But it's something that cannot be explained or talked about.

SD: Robert I have a question. You've often spoken of reality as effortless choice-less pure awareness. Can you explain the use of the word choice-less in that context?

R: We do not have a choice because we're already real. What we are is choice-less. There will be nobody making a choice. There is no choice whether you want to be real or not. You are choice-less awareness, you're pure awareness, this is you and the one who chooses is the ego. But in reality you have no choice. No matter what the ego does, no matter what you choose, no matter how many mistakes you make or appear to make you are going to be choice-less awareness this is your real nature, this is what you really are. No matter what else you do. Deep down you're choice-less awareness. You have no choice in the matter that is what you are, awareness. So when you think you're making a choice you're making a mistake. It's the ego that seems to choose. But as choice-less awareness just exists by itself and you are that.

SF: We don't have a choice in any area really?

R: Exactly. You have no choice whatsoever. Everything is unfolding as it should. Everything is happening the way it's supposed to happen.

SG: The idea that there are choices is illusion. There are no choices?

R: There is no illusion either. (laughter) Who has the illusion? The one who has the illusion thinks that they are human, they can have an illusion. But if you don't exist you don't have an illusion. You have to exist to have an illusion. But since you do not exist there is no one left to have an illusion. Do not think about these things, just be yourself, just be, just... We get very confused when we think about illusions, reality. They're both impostors. Reality is something we make up with our finite minds. We say, "Absolute reality, pure choice-less awareness, Brahman." We say, "This is reality." For we don't know what we're talking about. For reality is way beyond those things. There is no such thing as reality to begin with. Nothing is real and nothing is unreal. That is why the only thing I can help you with is not to think. Do not think about what is right, what is wrong, what is good, what is bad, what's real what's not, don't do it. And then you'll be safe.

SB: Robert if reality encompasses everything, so thinking is part of reality so why would thinking encumber reality? (R: Thinking is not part of reality.) Well how can something be outside of reality if reality would have to be all there is.

R: Reality is all there is but it has nothing to do with your thinking. Your thinking comes from the ego, not from reality. (SB: Yeah If reality is everything that exists, how can there be something like - if reality is God and God is everything, how can we be thinking outside of reality and outside of God?) There isn't. Who says there was? (SB: Well you're saying to stop the thinking. Why should thinking have to be stopped? Why should it be an encumbrance if it's part of reality?) It shouldn't. (SB: Right.) But I tell you this so you can know what you're doing. (SB: But it does. We know for a fact that thinking does, of stopping it, the realization of what we are, it's funny.) It is funny. Nothing can stop the realization of what you are because you're nothing. So you have no obstruction. But to think about this is also a hindrance. But I tell you to stop thinking because it is the only thing I can tell you. There is nobody to stop thinking really. Nobody exists who has to stop thinking. But as long as you think you exist then you have to stop thinking. So I say, "Stop thinking," because you believe you exist as a body or somebody or something. (SB: Oh so the one that is thinking is an illusion?) Of course it's an illusion, it's all an illusion. As long as you believe you are the body then you have to stop thinking. (SB: Very strange.) You're very strange. (laughter) We're all very strange.

SK: Robert where is Elvis?

R: Where is Elvis. Wherever you want him to be. It's up to you. Elvis came from your mind and returns to your mind. You're the creator of Elvis.

SL: Robert? (R: Umm.) You were talking about becoming less...that we should become less self involved, less self absorbed. How does one go about doing that?

R: By not doing anything. Become self absorbed by simply watching, listening, looking and not reacting to anything. By taking time out during the day to sit and do absolutely nothing just sit. Not meditate, just sit. Just by the very act of sitting, self absorption really begins. As you sit everything becomes very clear, it comes back on you. You pull the whole universe back inside of you, just by sitting by yourself. And you're self absorbed. It happens by itself. There is nothing you have to do to make it happen. There are no books you have to read, no teachers you have to see, nothing you have to get rid of, just sit.

SE: The way of the couch potato. (SL: That's right.) (R: Exactly.) (laughter)

SB: What do you do to keep from gaining weight? (laughter) Call it the weightless watcher. Weightless watcher cookbook. Eat your way to enlightenment.

R: If you sit you won't get hungry.

SL: Last week Robert and Henry were talking about the impossibility of doing nothing. And it used to be part of christian practice or at least an acceptable part of observing the family and people weren't supposed to even buy a newspaper or anything like that. This is ridiculous, at least it's close to doing nothing. If you can do it, it actually is. (laughs) But Sunday's become such an active day where all the stores are open and people are never quiet.

R: Yes. That is people what about you? (SL: Matured.) Matured. Let people do what they want. (SL: It was just interesting because it seemed like such an outrageous idea to be quiet and still in the mind then we have this, a well known practice.) Yes, the quakers are good at it.

We will now have a reading from the Ashtravakra-Gita by Mary.

(Mary reads.)

Dispassion

Seeing to this, neglecting that. Setting one thing against another, who is free of such cares? When will they ever end? Consider, without passion, with dispassion, let go. My child rare is he and blessed who observes the ways of men and gives up the desire for pleasure and knowledge, for life itself. Nothing lasts, nothing is real, it is all suffering threefold affliction. It is all beneath contempt. Know this and give it up and be still. When will men ever stop setting one thing against another? Let go of all contraries, whatever comes be happy and so fulfill yourself. Masters, Saints, seekers they all say different things. Whoever knows this with dispassion becomes quiet. The true Master considers well with dispassion. He sees all things are the same. He comes to understand the nature of things, the essence of awareness. He will not be born again. In the shifting elements see only their pure form. Rest in your own nature set yourself free. The world is just a set of false impressions give them up. Give up the illusion. Give up the world and live freely.

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

(Robert plays a song on tape)

R: Someone one asked me, "What does this song have to do with this teaching?" Absolutely nothing because I have no teaching. Announcements?

(Announcements about satsang newsletter (Village Idiot) and new transcripts)

R: Anyone wish to announce anything? Birth, death? Divorce? Marriage?

SQ: I've been meaning to ask you a question about relationships with a man, I can't get the question out at times when I want to ask you about relationships. Every time I want to ask you something I know it's illusion. All this stuff about soul mates and partners and the right person it all comes to me as rubbish. (laughter)

R: It is and it isn't, yes and no. (SQ: A clear answer.) It's rubbish when you think about it. When you don't think about it, it happens by itself. (SE: It's still rubbish.) The word rubbish, the idea is about... (break in tape) ...leave you and everything happens by itself. That is the beautiful thing about life. If you're really living, you will always be with the right person, doing the right thing and the right things will happen by themselves. When you have to plan and scheme then that is rubbish. Where do all these soul mates come from? (SE: Hell.) (laughter) Do not put anything down. You do not believe anything either. Do not accept or reject and you will always find yourself in the right place doing the right things. All is well. (pause) Howard do you want to say something?

ST: Does anybody know someone who has a potters wheel they'd like to sell? See me?

R: You're becoming a potter in your old age?

Anymore brilliant questions.

Well it's time for prashad. Time to eat...

(Prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

THREE SIMPLE WAYS TO MAKE PROGRESS

14th January, 1993

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om peace, peace.

Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. It is wonderful being with you again this beautiful Thursday evening.

There are three simple ways in which to make simple progress. Spiritual work should be very simple. It should not be complicated. It should be in accordance with your nature. It should not be foreign to you. These rules have been propagated by Sages since the beginning of time. It is part of a lineage of Sages. And if you practice these rules you will see spiritual progress very fast. But the idea is that you have to practice these things. It is true in the ultimate there is no practice. There is nothing to do, but that's in the ultimate where are we? You have to be very honest with yourself and realize where you are and what you're doing and what is happening to you. You cannot fool yourself too long. For if you try to fool yourself the whole world will come crashing down on you. Be true to yourself and I cannot be false to any man, our friend William Shakespeare.

So the first rule is coming to sating, when you can. The reason for that is this, what you put first in your life determines what happens to you. That makes sense. Where your mind is your heart is. So whatever you're doing at home if you think of satsang, you think of being here always sitting at satsang, breathing satsang, even when you're not here. Feel that the whole world is satsang. All the people are devotees, including the animals, the trees, the mountains, everything is full of life, vibrant life. When you look at everything as being alive, filled with love, filled with bliss and joy then you can feel that you are the source of everything. In other words there is no difference between you and the trees and the forest or the flowers in the fields or the mountains or the animals or any human beings.

There is no difference between an enlightened person and an ignorant person. The difference is only in your own mind. In God's eyes everyone is God. In a so-called ignorant man's eyes everyone is ignorant.

When you come to satsang you don't even have to listen to the words. Just be here, that is all you have to do or be at any satsang you choose. It's not too kosher to run after gurus or to go to different teachers all of the time, for you become utterly confused. This is reasonable to assume. Every teacher has their own method, their own way of teaching. If you find a real Sage somewhere, stay with that Sage whomever he may be or she may be and try to keep still. Do not keep looking for new teachings all of the time or asking the Sage to explain certain teachings to you. Just be there and be still. Of course you have to make sure that you're going to a Sage. There are no new revelations in a Sage. In other words if you go to a teacher, the teacher claims to be a Sage and tells you he or she has had a revelation that if you take off your clothes and stand on your head and recite the Vedas upside down you become enlightened. Be careful of that person. (students laugh) There are no new revelations. There is nothing new under the sun. Spiritual life is very simple and has been handed down through lineages. And even those who have their own experiences go along with lineages. Be very careful.

Remember these days they have more gurus than disciples. Open your heart, be true to yourself and you will know where to go, and what to do. All the answers you're looking for are within you. Do not really look to a teacher for answers. You go to the teacher for grace, not for answers. The sage's grace always flows, in the silence and if you are in tune with that grace you will awaken. Simple as that.

You can be a sinner. You can be any kind of a person, but if you're true to yourself, the Self which you really are will lead you to the right Sage, to the right teacher and cause you to awaken. It means you have to be humble, have humility, loving kindness, peace of mind and you'll know what to do.

This is all satsang. You are satsang. There is no real difference between you and me. Everything is the same, pure, good, blissful, absolute reality, nirvana, pure awareness. This is how things are now. Not tomorrow or next week, but right this moment! As you keep coming to satsang again and again and again and again and again something begins to happen to you slowly but surely. Your system becomes refined. You become pure enough to receive grace and you become free. This is why I emphasize it's important to catch yourself during the day and see where you're really coming from, what you're really doing. How you're reacting to things. How you look at life. You have to keep catching yourself and remembering you're at satsang. You take the satsang with you wherever you go. Consequently when I say, "Be at satsang," it means to keep satsang in your mind always. There is no excuse why you don't have satsang. You do not have to be here physically sometimes, but wherever you are have satsang in your mind, the same thing. So again the first rule is to come to satsang, always. Physically or mentally, when you're working, you can imagine all of the co-workers are satsangees, as hard as that may be for some of you. There are no evil people. Do not see evil anywhere.

I know some of you may say, "What about what I read in the paper? What about the people going around killing people?" For whom is this, is this for you? This is not your world. I know if you're here for the first time it sounds sort of strange, when you're involved in this world and I'm saying this is not your world. If you're on a high spiritual path it's not your world. The world of violence, of dog eat dog so-to-speak, of man's inhumanity to man, you do not belong to this world. You belong to the world of total freedom, total joy and bliss, pure love, unalloyed happiness. This is the world you belong to, what do you see? What you see you become. So again the first rule is to be at satsang.

The second rule is to sit in silence at the prescribed hours that the Sage tells you to. This is important. For this is the time that you tune into the grace which flows forever. The times that we sit together for this group is from 12 to 3am and from 6 to 9am. I know they seem to be un-godly hours, but try doing it for a week and see what happens. There are people all over the world sitting at these hours and we're all tuning into each other. Again if you're serious on this path, if you want to make progress, do not look to read every new book that comes out but do the work that we're talking about. Take the action. So many of you get involved in all of these books by new teachers that pop up here and there. And you're always reading reading reading reading reading. And for those of you who are reading like this, take a look at your life. How much progress have you really made in all these years you've been reading. You want to start doing and not reading. Sit at those hours and watch what happens.

The third rule is to practice self-inquiry and you can do this every minute of the hour every day. There is no time you cannot practice. To begin with this is the greatest psychotherapy that has ever been invented. It makes you calm and peaceful and relaxed. It removes the heavy burden from your shoulders that you're carrying and it's very simple. For every disturbance that your mind comes up with, simply ask yourself, "To whom does this come? Who is feeling this?" And if you're being true to yourself you'll say, "I am. I'm feeling this." When you say, "I am," stop to think a moment what you're saying, "I am. What is the I? From where did it come?" Take stock of yourself and realize that all day long you say, "I. I am happy. I am sad. I am sick. I am well. I am rich. I am poor. I feel this. I feel that. I feel depressed. I feel happy." You're always thinking of yourself, you're always centered on yourself as I. "Who is this I? What is this I? Where did it come from?" And you inquire, "Who am I?" All the time keeping the I in your mind. Thinking of the I. This I is your ego. It is the first pronoun that you think of every morning when you wake up. When you say, "I am awake." Who is awake? "I am. Who am I?" You never answer that question. There is no answer for that question. There is only the question, "Who am I?" No answer. Quietness, stillness.

Now other thoughts come to you. Whatever the thoughts are, good or bad makes no difference. See in this practice you're not trying to exchange good thoughts for bad thoughts or bad thoughts for good thoughts. You're not trying to change any thoughts at all. You are trying to find the source of the I. Therefore whatever comes to you inquire, "To whom does it come?" Whatever thoughts that come to you. The inquiry is always the same, "To whom does it come?" Do not think for one moment if beautiful thoughts come to you, you can stop the self-inquiry. For they're still thoughts and they will change, as they must. For all thoughts are subject to the law of change, from good to bad, from happy to sad. Therefore do not examine your thoughts so much because it makes no difference what you think. It's all the same. All thoughts are the same they're all belonging to the I. The I-thought encompasses all the thoughts that you can ever think about. Imagine a string with the I at the end of it. As you keep pulling the string out of your subconscious mind, all the thoughts that you ever thought and all of the lifetimes that you ever lived, are attached to that I-thought, the string. This is a wonderful revelation for you. For it means that if you get rid of the I-thought it will all go with it, everything will go with it. All of the thoughts that you ever thought about, your ego, everything attaches to the I-thought. Therefore you don't have to work on getting rid of thoughts, you merely follow the I-thought back to its source. And again all of the karma, all the samskaras, all the samsaras that you're involved in, everything that you have ever been involved in will disappear when the I-thought is gone.

Now you may do this anywhere. While riding on the bus, driving your car, making breakfast, watch, be aware, look, see what your mind is doing. Even when you're sitting in the prescribed hours from 12 to 3, from 9 to 6 you can practice self-inquiry. Remember self-inquiry is not meditation. Meditation requires a subject and an object. You are the subject and you're meditating on an object. Meditation alone can take you so far, but to go beyond the subject and beyond the object, self-inquiry is the thing to do. For the subject and the object, like the body and the mind, the world, the universe, even God, all of these thoughts are attached to the I-thought. They're all part of the I. If the I weren't there could you say, "I believe in God?" There is no I to believe in God the I has been gone. You have transcended the I so who believes in God? Which means that you have become God. It is only when you're aware of I, that you think that you're separate from God.

This can be very egotistical to some people especially to new people who have never heard these things before, be very careful. For instance somebody asked me the other day, "Robert is it true there is no God, there is no universe, there is no world, there is no liberation, there is no ignorance, there is no body, there is nothing?" I said, "No no it's not true. There is God, there is a universe, there is a mind, there is a body, if there weren't you wouldn't ask the question." This is what I mean when I say, "Do not kid yourself, do not fool yourself." As long as you feel that you are a body and you feel it all day long for some of you, for every little thing bothers you. How many times did you become upset today? How many times did you react to life in a negative or positive way? This shows you where you are. So you can't go around saying, "There is no God, there is no body." You're lying to yourself. The ultimate truth is that there is no God and there is no body but are you experiencing the ultimate truth? Until you do be humble, have humility. Love God as yourself. Pray to God as yourself. Worship God as yourself. Bow to God as yourself. And one day all the images will disappear and you will find that you are that very Self.

So you have to begin where you are. Anyone can do self-inquiry. You simply ask, "Who is thinking these things? To whom do these thoughts come? To whom do these feelings come? To whom do these emotions come? To whom do these fears come? To whom do these doubts come? To whom do the suspicions come? The hate? Who is feeling these things?" Be honest with yourself and say, "I am, I am feeling all these things." But as you keep practicing with these things, you will begin to separate yourself from the I. You will notice whenever you say, "I am," that you're not talking about yourself any longer. When you come to this point you've made headway in spiritual life. When you can say, "To whom do these things come? To whom does this fear come? This fear comes to me," and yet you have a smile on your face because you realize, I am not me. So you inquire further, "Then who am I?" And again you keep still. It's very simple. Make it very simple.

But like some of you if you're reading four or five books at a time, going to a different teacher every night of the week, following twenty-thousand paths, you'll go crazy. You won't know what to follow and pretty soon you'll drop everything you'll say, "Ah, this doesn't work." Again you have to be true to yourself. You have to ask yourself, "What do I really want out of life? What am I really trying to acquire? Do I really want to become free or am I really looking for name and fame? What am I really looking for? Am I doing this practice because I want to have millions of dollars? Have abundant health? Have recognition?" Those are all the wrong reasons for doing spiritual work. These things may come to you but they have absolutely nothing to do with spiritual life. Spiritual life is for liberation, for freedom, that's all.

Why do you want to be liberated? Why do you want to become free? For some of you realize that to be free and liberated means you will never have to be born again. There will no longer be any birth for you. And if there is no birth there'll be no death. You will live forever. You have become absolute pure awareness. Your essence is all over the universe. You're all-pervading. Your essence is in the mountains, in the trees, the universe, you are that! And you have bliss, total bliss, which can never be explained, can never be comprehended. It is so far beyond human thought. This is the reason you want to become liberated. This is the reason why you want to become free. Again you have to be totally honest with yourself and see what you're doing with your life right now. What direction you're really going in. What you're really striving for, what you really want to do. People call me all week long telling me they're going to Hawaii, they're going to India, they're going to the moon. They go everywhere to see all the gurus, all the swamis. Why? Don't you realize by now that it is all within you. That the whole teaching is within yourself. You are the teacher and the teaching. There is only one and you are that. Awaken to your true Self. Stop playing games.

Some of you came here tonight to see what Robert is all about. To hear something profound, something illuminating. And I will purposely always disappoint you. For there is nothing profound to say. There is nothing illuminating to say. I'm not here to try to make you feel better so you can go home and say, "Ah that was a great lecture, I feel good." You can go to any church and hear that. I'm not trying to do anything. I'm just sitting here talking to myself. You are that Self. It's fun talking to your Self. I can say, "All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should." I can say, "I-am is absolute reality. I-am is pure awareness. I-am that," and yet I am not talking about myself. Talking about I-am, who is the entire manifest universe. So you see I always throw it back to you. This is your ball game. It's your life. Are you tired of playing games? Reading the books, going to gurus, running all over the world. When everything has always been within yourself. So again, the three rules to remember: Be at satsang as often as you can. When I use the word satsang, I'm speaking of the spiritual truth which is within you. So satsang could be in your office, in your home, in the woods, the mountain top, it's all satsang. Always be at satsang.

Rule number two. Sit with me at the prescribed hour, 12 to 3am and 9 to 6am.

Number three. Practice atma-vichara, self-inquiry. By inquiring, "To whom do these things come? Who has these thoughts? Who do they come to? I feel them. I have them. They come to me. Who am I? What is the source of the I?"

If you practice these things I've outlined for you, you have to make spiritual progress. There is no question about it whatsoever. There is no doubt about it, you have to make spiritual progress. That means you have to drop everything that has been taking hold of you all of these years. You've got to drop it! And practice these three rules. Let go of everything else.

Of course in the ultimate reality, there is absolutely nothing you have to do, because there is no one to do it. Like I say you've got to be honest with yourself and ask yourself, "Am I living the ultimate reality? If I am living the ultimate reality I will not be aware of my body or my mind or the world. I will be in the world but not of the world." And your feelings will no longer be hurt. You will no longer really feel anger or distraught. Then you can stay in the ultimate reality and don't have to do anything. Because again there will be nobody left to do anything. You will have transcended the I-thought and the body and the mind. They'll all be gone and you'll be totally free. But as long as you still feel the body and react to it, then practice the three rules that I outlined for you and become totally free. Peace.

Feel free to ask any questions.

S: Robert I was trying to remember all week when you said imagine you are boundless - is it consciousness? (R: Boundless pure awareness.) Boundless pure awareness?

R: But consciousness, it's all the same. Consciousness, pure awareness, I-am, absolute reality, they're all the same. This is the pure state that is unaffected by the world and the universe. This is the substratum of all existence. Call it what you may. It makes no difference what name you give it. It's what you feel. Words are really not that important. Those who feel the ultimate reality have no name for it. So when we talk about it, I have to make up a name and call it the ultimate reality. Noone can really know what it is unless you've experienced it. When you experience it there is silence. There is nothing to say.

(long silence)

R: Could you read the Jnani?

S: Yes Robert. (Student reads the Jnani)

R: Thank you Mary. Announcements?

(announces availability of the 1990 satsangs in book form).

R: It is time for prashad, the real reason why you came here. (laughter) To eat...

(tape ends) [TOC]

HOW TO GET RID OF PROBLEMS

19th January, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...makes you one pointed. Removes problems from you. Makes you feel wonderful all over. So let's all get involved in the chant. You were all supposed to join in. (students laugh) You all looked like a bunch of zombies. I've seen better expressions on a dead corpse. (laughter)

SH: You didn't lead us.

R: I'm not a leader. (SH: You didn't even follow.) I'm not a follower. (laughter) (SH: What the hell are you.) I am a nothing. (SH: Good. (laughs) You've made it.)

(silence)

R: Even though you look like a bunch of zombies, so serious. You look like you have the whole world on your shoulders. You shouldn't feel like that. You should feel joyful and happy. This is a happy occasion. It's raining. It's the end of the world. Rejoice! (students laugh)

People continuously keep asking me how do I get rid of my problems? Everybody seems to have a problem. I keep telling you there aren't any problems. But you tell me about your particular problem. Things are like this, things are like that, that's not a problem. You want things to be a certain way, your way. You want things to fall into place the way you've been brought up to believe is right. It will never happen. Life goes on just the way it is.

It's our business to understand what life really is, what we're all about. If we have a clear understanding of ourselves we become the happiest people on earth. Where we become compassionate, kind, peaceful. Where we no longer have anything to fight. We no longer wish to change anybody or anything. We leave everything alone just the way it is including ourselves especially. We stop feeling sorry for ourselves because we don't have what we think we should have or because we have what we think we shouldn't have.

People want to know in Advaita Vedanta that the best way to get rid of a problem is to sit still and surrender everything to God. Or if we should become active and make something happen ourselves.

As an example: Somebody cheats you. Should you sue them take them to court? Should you take any action? Should you just sit still and say, "Let God take care of it." What should you really do?

S: Both.

R: Both are wrong. (students laugh)

Both supposes that you are the doer. That you can do something. That you have a choice in the matter. That it's up to you. In reality you have no choice whatsoever. Everything is predestined and preordained. This means that whatever you're doing was inevitable to happen.

In other words if you find yourself sitting still and doing nothing this is what you're supposed to do and nothing can make you do anything no matter how hard you try. If you're supposed to do something nothing will make you sit still. You'll go ahead and do whatever you're supposed to do. But the whole secret is that you're supposed to understand that you are not the doer. Whatever you wind up doing you're not the doer you're not doing a thing. It is not you that is doing anything whatsoever. Everything is happening the way it's supposed to happen.

There is a karmic principle involved that causes you to do what you do. You are like a puppet and the puppeteer is karma.

A lot of you do not like to hear something like this. Because the ego tells you that I'm the doer, I'm supposed to do something. I make my own decisions, I make my own laws, my own rules, my own regulations. That's what you think. That is how it appears to you. But whatever happens is happening from karma. Everything is a continuum. Nothing happens to you that is not supposed to happen. The only freedom you have is your reaction. This is the freedom you have. If you react in the right way you'll be happier than you can ever imagine. I'm not saying the problem will be resolved the way you want it to be resolved. I'm just saying you'll be happier than you can ever imagine.

There is no one on this earth who does anything. The whole universe is a puppet show. We're dancing the dance of Shiva. We think we're something important. But we're really nothing as we appear. Your job is to observe to watch, to see what's going on and not to react to anything that is happening but to stay...to stay separate from the happenings. To separate yourself from what is happening. What's happening is happening to the I, to the ego, not to you. Nothing can ever happen to you. For your true nature is Brahman, absolute reality, pure awareness. This is what you really are whether you like it or not. Yes you are God whether you like it or not. Whether you care or you don't, you are God. So what are you going to do about it.

All you really have to do is to know who you are, to know yourself. Not intellectually, not physically, but consciously. When you see yourself consciously as God you will see the whole universe as your Self. Everything in this whole universe will become you. There will be no separation between you and your fellow man, the animals and the minerals and the flowers. It will all be one. They'll be you. You are that!

So you see there are no real problems in the world. There are no challenges in the world. Some people like to use the word challenge for some problem. Who wants to challenge you there is nobody who challenges you. There is nothing you have to overcome. There is nothing you have to fight. There is nothing you have to attain and there is nothing you have to become. All you have to do is see this clearly for it to happen. Just see it clearly. Not cloudy but clearly. When you see it clearly you become that which you see.

Now my question to you is, what have you been seeing all of these years? What have you been seeing? What have you been looking at? Have you been seeing problems, lack, limitation, feeling unloved, feeling as if there is something wrong someplace? This is the reason why you see things outside of yourself to. The world becomes what you see and you have the freedom to choose what you see. That is the only freedom you have. Everything else is preordained. This doesn't mean you're stuck in karma or it doesn't matter what you do because whatever you do is preordained. It means that as you see the truth about your life you become free.

In other words to the extent you can see the truth about your self that you are really Brahman, God, that you are that which will never change, that which is permanent and totally free of anything, to the extent that you can see yourself this way to that extent are you free. If you see yourself 20% this way you're free 20%, 50%, you're free 50%, 100% you're free 100%.

How can you tell what you're doing? By the way you react to conditions. What frightens you. What makes you mad. What makes you angry. What makes you think something is wrong. This will tell you where you're coming from. When you are filled with peace and harmony nothing can ever hurt you. You become unhurttable. But when you believe what you see, when you believe what you hear, when you believe what the world tells you is true, then you have to experience all the things that you see and believe and hear. It's so simple.

Lift your head to heaven and you'll be in heaven. Lift your head down to hell and you'll be in hell.

The world has absolutely nothing to do with it. People have nothing to do with it. You have the freedom to being known as Brahman. You have the freedom to being known as a person who has problems. The choice is always yours. The choice is always yours.

How do you feel about yourself right now? Do you really like yourself? Do you appreciate yourself?

It makes no difference what position you're in or what you're doing in life. You can't say you like yourself if you have a good job and you're making a lot of money and you're the healthiest person on earth. These things have absolutely nothing to do with it. For you are not the body. You are not who you think you are. Let go of all the thoughts about yourself, good or bad.

Right now let's go over everything. Everything that has ever bothered you. Everything that has ever hurt you, drop it. Lift yourself up to the highest. Where there is no pain, no lack, no limitation.

This is the land of the Buddha, the end of samsarra. In the land of the Buddha there is only peace and quietness and joy. You have crossed the ocean of samsarra and you are totally free, right now. Your burdens have been expunged. You no longer have to carry your karma around with you.

Samskaras, karmas, it's all finished for you, feel this. Feel your freedom. Your freedom from being confined to a body. Feel free from this. You are consciousness, pure awareness and you encompass the whole universe. How beautiful it is, all fear has left you. You are seeing the whole world as a dream. It can never hurt you again, it has no power. The only reason you've been hurt previously is due to the fact that you thought this world as being real and you've reacted to it. But now you're beginning to see that this world is maya.

It is a dream and like in a dream you are the dreamer. When you're asleep you are total peace. You have a dream about a war, you're in the war, you get wounded. Your leg has to be amputated. You go through all kinds of experiences. Then you wake up and you feel refreshed. You had a long and beautiful sleep. But you were dreaming about the war. You were dreaming about the experiences.

This is how this is right now for you. The whole world, the whole universe that you behold is your dream and you're taking it for reality. This is where suffering ensues. You take the world to be real and you react to this world but you're reacting to a dream. And as long as you keep reacting to this world you'll never awaken. It is virtually impossible to awaken as long as you think this world is real.

Catch yourself thinking, ask yourself, "Who thinks?" Be truthful to yourself say, "I think." But you'll realize that you are not the I. So I thinks and you have absolutely nothing to do with it. "Then where did this I come from? If I have absolutely nothing to do with it," you say to yourself, "why is the I there? Why does it present itself to me?" By that very question the I will be destroyed and you'll find absolute freedom. You have to learn to keep inquiring within yourself. Nobody outside of you can help you. All the answers are within you. You are the answer.

Feel how wonderful this is. That all the answers you've been looking for are within yourself. Whatever you've been searching for, whatever your needs are they're all within yourself. You've got everything you need within yourself. Dive deep within yourself. Don't be afraid to let go. Nothing can ever hurt you again.

As you're sitting here this way all of the stuff that has been pulling you back from your highest good is melting away. Feel this happening. All of those things that have held on to you for so long in the form of disease, lack, limitation, unhappiness of any kind, ignorance, feel it all dissolving right now. Feel it happening. You are the divine one. You are that which has always been and that which will always be, pure awareness, total joy and peace. You do not have to try to make it happen it's already happening.

There is nothing you have to do just be still and know that I-am God. "Be still and know that I am God," say this to yourself. Not your ego, not the personal I but I-am which is really you, is God. "Be still and know that I-am God. Be still and know that I-am God. Be still and know that I-am God."

(silence)

It is now that time again to play “Stump the Guru.”

Do we have any stumpers over here?

SM: I don't think there is anything Robert.

R: We forgot to pass the basket around. (SM: There is nothing here.) No stumpers today. We'll have to ask if you have any questions.

SF: Yeah I got something. A couple of weeks ago I mentioned something that I've run across, heard that seemed to be important and the more I think about it the more so it seems. But it's about this disciple who went to the Master and I use the word Master because "the Master" rather than "a Master" because there is only one Master. And he asked him, "Do you and I live in the same world?" And the Master said, "Yes we do but there is a difference and that is that you think you live in the world and I know the world lives in me." That seems to be the whole deal in a nutshell.

R: Yes that is in a nutshell. The whole world in a nutshell. (SF: Nutty shell.)

SH: You're the nut. (laughter)

R: I'm the head nut. That's good Fred. (SF: It's still intellectual.)

R: Anyone like to say something, ask a question. Do something.

SG: Shouldn't we start building an ark? (R: This is an ark.) Sure is.

SK: Robert if it's all predestined then what happens to man's freewill in creativity and literature.

R: Man's freewill is only not to react. The only freewill that we have is not to react to a condition, person, place or thing. (SK: Umm.) Art, literature will take care of itself. It's all karmic. Your body is here for a specific purpose. In reality your body doesn't exist. And because you think you are a body, leave it alone. If you leave it alone it'll be done better than you can ever do anything. Whatever you came here to do will be done, in a beautiful way, and you will have absolutely nothing to do with it. It'll happen by itself. When you think you have to do something and you're the doer, you're not the doer. When you're the doer you suffer accordingly because you're part of the world which doesn't exist.

But when you realize that you are the one beyond everything, transcending everything, then everything takes care of itself. So whatever is happening watch it, don't judge it, observe it, look at it, do not react to it and then you will do whatever you're supposed to do automatically. Whatever you came here to do you will do. Karmically we all came here for a specific purpose. That is the appearance. So you will find your right place by doing nothing. (SK: It's hard doing nothing.) By doing nothing I mean mentally. Keep your mind still. Do not agitate your mind by thinking thoughts that you have to do something, that something has to be done. Keep your mind on God so-to-speak. By keeping it clear, absent from thought. Through self-inquiry, it will calm the mind down. But you will see while you are doing this your body will pick itself up and do what it has to do. Better than you can ever do it yourself. Everything will be done. You can rest assured that it will be done you have nothing to do with it. It will be done.

Try it, see what happens. Try let's say starting tomorrow. You will not think about your work or the food that you're going to eat during the day or what you're going to wear. But try to keep your mind clear, free. But you will watch yourself. You will see that you get up out of bed. You put on the right clothes. You eat your breakfast like you're supposed to. You go out into the world and do whatever you're supposed to do. But you're not part of it anymore, mentally. Your mind is on God. Your mind is on the absolute reality. Your mind is on perfection. Your mind is still and quiet. Yet you will continue to do what you have to do. You will no longer have to watch the clock or watch space and time and leave everything alone and everything will happen by itself in a beautiful way. Try it.

SI: Robert whenever it gets to the morning I'm trying to keep peace of mind and I just get stuck. Nothing seems to happen I just get in my way?

R: How do you get stuck? (SI: It seems like I just get to my name and that is as far as it goes.) What happens after that?... (short silence) ...that is what supposed to happen, nothing, so you're doing well. (laughter) You always want something to happen. Nothing is supposed to happen. So you're doing good. Keep it up. (laughter) When something happens then you got a problem. (SI: I always think something is supposed to happen.) No, on the contrary nothing is supposed to happen. (SI: I'm not supposed to have a realization?) (laughter) There is no such thing. Do not look for anything to happen and then everything will happen how it's supposed to. Everything is natural.

Scientifically if you investigate this universe you will find that there is no room for anything to happen, because everything has already happened. Everything is already done, finished. There is nothing to be done, there is nothing to happen. Most of us are hallucinating, we think we have to make something happen. Be happy and to have peace of mind but it's already happened you just have to wake up to the truth. It's a waking up process. It's not a happening process, it's a waking up process.

This is what I meant before when I said, "Be still and know that I am God." Be still and you will know. You will know that there is no one to know. There is nothing to know...

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 218

MAYA

21st January, 1993

Robert: Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. I love you all. All is well. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place unfolding as it should.

There are some schools of Advaita that teach that when a person becomes enlightened and I use that word loosely - for nobody really becomes enlightened, it is your natural state - but they say when a person becomes enlightened so-to-speak, that particular person brings peace and joy and happiness to the world. That person brings healing to the world. That person makes the world a better world in which to live. That person alleviates man's inhumanity to man. This is all a lie. No such thing happens. How can it? Think for a moment. When a person awakens there is no ego left, there is no mind left. It is the mind and the ego that create the world and its manifestations. But if there is no mind or ego left in a Janna what business does he have with this world. This world is a non entity to a Janna. It doesn't exist. So if a Sage goes around trying to heal people, heal the world there is something wrong there. For a Jnani does not make this a better world in which to live. A Sage has transcended the world where there is no longer an ego or a mind left to do anything with.

This is why Advaita is known as a selfish teaching to some people. Some people believe that this is a very selfish teaching, for a Sage really has nothing to do with the world whatsoever, because a Sage knows that the world does not exist. To the Sage this world does not exist at all. The universe does not exist. To a Sage it's like a moving picture. They're images on a screen. Yet you do not get involved with the images. For you realize they're only images, they're not real. If you try to jump in the screen to beat up the bad guy you're only punching the screen. That is how a Sage sees this world.

Now perhaps you can understand why people like Ramana Maharshi, Rama Krishna and others had nothing to do with their body or healing their body. For the body is part of the world. It's part of maya. Do not get both worlds mixed up. The spiritual world is completely different than the material, relative world. To the enlightened there is no relative world at all. The relative world does not exist. It never has existed. There is no relative world whatsoever. People see a world which is really a movie. It's a play in consciousness. The universe, the world is a play in consciousness but people take it to be real so they suffer accordingly. The Janna realizes that the world does not exist whatsoever. It never existed and it never will exist. Therefore the Sage has absolutely nothing to do with this world. Ponder this, try to understand this, it's very important. There is nobody to heal, there is nobody to save, there is nothing to do. The whole universe is maya, an illusion. It has no substance and no validity. It is false. This is the reason I say do not get mixed up in the world. A real Satguru, a real Sage, never gets mixed up with the world, never takes the world seriously. For again he sees the world as you would the water in the mirage. He realizes it's an appearance. It has no substance. So again you will never find a Sage going around the world healing people, saving the world, trying to make this world a better place in which to live due to the fact that there is no world. It's all maya.

An illustration of this maya is told by a little story I tell once in a while: One day Sakimuni Buddha and his chief disciple Nerada were walking down a dirt road in the forest, in the silence, they were both silent. Then Nerada asked Buddha, "Master explain to me what maya is. What is maya? What is this maya of yours that you always talk about? You always talk about maya, I don't understand what you're talking about, can you explain this to me, what is this maya?" And Buddha didn't say anything and they kept on walking. An hour later Nerada asked the Buddha again, "Please Master explain this maya for me. I do not understand this maya please explain it for me." The Buddha looked at him compassionately and he said, "Would you please go to the first house you see and get me a glass of water, I'm thirsty." Nerada obeyed.

He ran half a mile ahead, he saw a house and knocked on the door, and an old lady answered. Nerada told her that my Master Buddha would like a glass of water can you oblige please. And she said, "Certainly my son, come in." He came into the house, he saw the most beautiful girl he ever saw in his life, he couldn't keep his eyes off her. The old lady saw him looking like that, full of lust and she said, "How would you like to marry my daughter." So Nerada was spell bound by her and he said, "Certainly." They had a big wedding at the Beverly Hilton Hotel... (laughter) ...thousands of guests were invited. Just before they were about to be married the girl asked Nerada, "By the way Nerada how often do you have sex?" and Nerada said, "Infrequently," the girl says, "Is that one word or two?" (laughter)

SF: What was that again I didn't hear. (laughter) (R: You're better off you didn't hear me.) (laughter) Depends on what? (R: You're better off that you didn't hear.)

(Robert continues) Anyway they got married and their relatives gave them forty acres of land. Nerada had to get up every morning and grow rice, he was a rice farmer he worked very hard. Pretty soon the girl became pregnant and Nerada had to work harder. He bought a cow to have milk for the baby. He became more successful. Bought stocks and bonds. Became president of the chamber of commerce. And had two more children. Was an executive, owned property houses, had money in the bank. They built a bigger house for the big family. One day a hurricane came along. Powerful hurricane with winds of a hundred thirty miles an hour. Nerada's house began to flood and he took the family up to the roof and the flood was rising higher and higher. The winds were blowing harder and harder. On the roof were the grandmother and the three sons, Nerada and his wife holding onto a television antennae for their dear life while the winds were blowing. The winds were blowing so hard that the old lady couldn't hold on any more she let go and she drowned. Then Nerada said to the rest of the family, "Hold on! Hold on!" and he told his wife, "She was old anyway. She only had a few more years to go so it's okay we lost her." But then the winds became stronger and the TV antennae snapped and his three sons were drowned in the hurricane. They were swept away. The wife was screaming and hollering. Nerada was troubled, but he said to his wife, "We're both young we can have more children." Then she said, "Nerada I can't hold on any longer," and she let go and she drowned. He was completely distraught. He was about to let go of the antennae also when he found himself on the road again with Buddha, walking on the dirt road. And the Buddha said, "Well did you get my cup of water?" And Nerada said, "Now I know what your maya is."

It's all maya. All this stuff about properties, marriage, children, stocks and bonds, Beverly Hills hotel, it's all maya. It's all an illusion. It's not the truth, it's not reality. There is only one reality and you are that. You are reality there is nothing else but you. Yet you think you're not. You think you're something like a human being. Who has to go through experiences and suffer and you're hurttable. When will you wake up and realize the truth about yourself. That there is only Brahman, not duality. Not Brahman and the world or Brahman and man, only Brahman. Nothing comes out of Brahman. There is no world that comes out of Brahman. The world is an hallucination, your hallucination. You've been taking too much L.S.D. (laughter) You're seeing a world with people and things.

Yet some of you may say, "Robert you see the world also?" "Yes, I see you. Peek-a-boo I see you." But I see you as a movie. I see you as images. There is no question about it at all, that you don't exist. No question, you don't exist as you appear. But I see the appearance. I know it's like the movie screen with the images but you think it's real. That is the only difference between me and you. I'm a thousand percent certain that this is all a movie, picture show that doesn't even exist. My body is the same thing. The body that appears as me is a part of the picture show. So naturally it's going to see you as a picture show also. If I didn't have this body I wouldn't be able to see you at all. I wouldn't be here at all, I'd be everywhere. But since I have this body I'm able to see you.

You have to stop getting caught up in maya. I have lunch with many of you and you get so involved in your problems, you get so involved in circumstances. You think you're the only one that has this problem in this whole world. You know what has a problem? Only the mind, only the ego, not you. This is why in the highest teaching is to get rid of the mind and the ego completely, totally, absolutely. To work on that. Do not work on resolving your problems. For if you have that consciousness where you have problems, when you resolve one problem another one will pop up. As many of you know it's happening in your life. You try for years to resolve your problems. You work at your problems you go to psychiatrists, psychologists, witch doctors, trying to resolve your problems. And then when you think you've been helped and the problem resolved something else pops up to the same degree as your other problem which is a different situation completely. And you always have that happening to you.

If you look back in retrospect you see I'm telling you that truth. It's one problem after another. The secret is to leave the problems alone and get rid of your mind. When you no longer have a mind how can you have a problem. It is the mind who has the problem not you. You are bright and shining. You are absolute reality, sat-chit-ananda, nirvana that is what you are. But you don't believe me because even now when I'm talking to you some of you are thinking of some problems. You are thinking of something being wrong someplace. Something that you have to deal with. Something that you have to overcome and I keep insisting that there is nothing to overcome, there is nothing to deal with. All is well. But you won't believe me. You keep on feeling problems. You keep on feeling hurttable. You keep on feeling that there is someone trying to do something to you. What can anybody possibly do to you? Even if you're playing this game of karma you have to realize that your karma is burning up as you keep going. You only accrue new karma when you react to a situation, when you react to a condition and those of you who feel the world on your shoulders have karma to work out. Only because you feel the world on your shoulders. As soon as you let go of the world it will fall off your shoulders and crack into a million pieces and there will be no more world for you. So drop the burden right now. Drop whatever burden you're carrying right now. Whatever it may be, how serious you think it is, drop it right now, be rid of it. Think of it for a moment then drop it and watch it crack into a million pieces. Your problem it's gone, it's finished, kaput. You're free. You're totally free, absolutely free. Do you feel free? Some of you actually refuse to feel free. For some strange reason you don't want to feel free. You're afraid to be free because you don't know what you will encounter. You've been caught up in problems for so many years. They've become like a friend of yours and you're afraid to release them, let them go because you'll be in space. There will no longer be anything to lean on, to hold on to. Yet I can assure you if you let go you will be filled with bliss. Bliss is waiting for you to let go.

Do not pay attention to what your body does. You will do whatever you have to do. Everything will be done at the right time in the right way. Trust the current that knows the way. Having faith in the efficacy of consciousness will do it for you. Even if you do not understand what I'm talking about. Just having faith in the efficacy of God, of Brahman, of pure awareness, will do it for you. As you keep saying to yourself, "Not this, not this, neti-neti," to the world, to conditions, to situations, you keep changing slowly but surely.

Begin this when you get up in the morning. Immediately when you get up in the morning when you open your eyes. Deny the whole universe. When your mind starts to think of the problems that you have or the situations that you're involved in, don't carry it through, deny it. Keep denying it as long as you have to. Accept nothing, good or bad, it's all maya. It all turns into suffering. It's like the presidential inauguration. Everything is beautiful during the inauguration then problems begin. Then there is trouble. This is true of everyone on this earth. As long as we believe in the world as authentic we're going to suffer there is no question about this. This planet is a third grade planet. Since the beginning of time we've had wars, man's inhumanity to man, dastardly conditions going on in this planet. Things have not gotten any worse. The only reason we believe things are worse is because of communication, television, fax. We are able to know what is going on in any place in this world at a moment. So it's all condensed for us on television. People getting killed all over the place. We therefore believe things are bad for us than they've ever been before but this is not true. These things have been going on since the beginning of time. We had Atilla-the-hun, the Spanish inquisition, the crusades, go on and on where millions of people were killed. And noone has ever saved this planet. Noone has ever saved this planet. Yet we read about Sages, Sages, Jnanis all kinds of people in this world and the planet is still going on the way it's supposed to go. This is the point I'm trying to make. Everything is unfolding as it should. This planet is unfolding the way it's supposed to. It's not your business to run this planet. Your business is to try to get the hell off this planet, by awakening. But as long as you believe you're part of the crowd you have to realize that you are on a third grade planet and go along with this until you get old and die. And according to your karma you go to another planet perhaps, which is a little more peaceful. You may go to a second grade planet. If you think this is bad, you ain't seen nothing yet, or a first grade planet where things are really terrible or a fourth grade planet where things are improving. It's like school. Maya is a university to educate the soul so-to-speak. There are different grades, different classes. But who needs to go through all this, the ego, the mind? Why do you allow this to be? Stop it now while you hear these things. You are fortunate that in your life that you're able to hear these things. To understand that you're not the body nor the mind nor the world. Do something about it, free yourself. Do not accept this any longer. Forget about this world. Don't pay too much attention to your body. Do not think too much about having a good time or a bad time. You have to loose it and let it go. Let go of all the stuff that has been hounding you for years and years. Become free, happy. By knowing who you are. It's only by knowing who you are that you become free and have unalloyed happiness. If you're looking for happiness in this world you'll be fooled all of the time. The world will show you happiness for a while and then it will pull it right out from under you and you'll start crying and screaming again until more happiness comes your way. The same thing happens, again and again and again. And maya is laughing its head off because you are taking it all so seriously. You're taking the world so seriously, you're taking the world so seriously, why? Stop it, stop it right now. Quit while you're ahead.

You're all divine beings. You're all consciousness. Pure awareness is your nature, why not go for it, why not do it now. It's not hard. It only means emptying yourself out. Becoming totally empty of your thoughts, your fears, your emotions, your reasoning, your dogma's, your preconceived ideas. Empty it all out of you. Get rid of it. It's not important. Save yourself. You can do it and you will. Peace.

(silence)

Shanti shanti om peace. Feel free to ask questions.

SY: How did the hallucination originate if our essence is space?

R: The hallucination never originated at all. It appears to have, it appears to have originated. It really has no substance. It didn't come from anywhere, it's like a dream. How did your dream originate when you dream at night? It's the same thing it has no substance, nothing. It didn't originate it's a mirage. It appears to have originated as is. Only Brahman is, consciousness, pure awareness but nothing ever originated. It's like when you're hypnotized when you're hypnotized you're made to believe that something is...a spider on your arm, crawling up your arm and you believe it. And actually you come out of the hypnotic state there is a red welch on your arm where the spider was. There was never a spider there but yet you saw the spider yourself. The hypnotist made you see a spider. No spider ever existed, the same thing. We're seeing the world. We're seeing things in this world. We're seeing planets, universes. We're seeing all these things it has no origins, no substance. They come out of your mind but it doesn't exist. So nothing ever was originated. Only call it hallucination for want of a better term. And it's as if you were hallucinating. Seeing all these things that does not exist. Nothing exists, it didn't come from anywhere. When you begin to dream the dream has no beginning, it just begins, the same with creation. Creation just appears to begin. It came out of nowhere but we didn't come from any place because there is no creation. It's all part of the mind stuff. Stop your mind from thinking and everything else will stop also.

SL: Robert, (R: Umm.) what do you mean by when you said, maya exists for the so-called education of the so-called soul. Why does the soul need to be educated?

R: It doesn't but it exists when you believe in the world. And you believe that what you see is real. Then we say that maya exists for the education of the soul because we have nothing else to say. It's all part of the nonsense I always talk about. But if you believe you are a body living in this world going through experiences then maya will really educate you. It'll make you suffer, it'll make you be happy, it'll make you suffer, it'll make you be happy again and again and again until you get tired of this whole thing and you go on to the next plateau. That's how you're being educated. But forget about all that and go right to the top. There is really no top to go to. Don't go anywhere just sit the way you are.

(silence)

When I watched the tape of Ramesh people seemed to ask him questions for hours but our group never had any questions to ask. That's good. After all the answer is always the same. So whatever you ask it's all a lie it doesn't exist there is really one answer to all of the questions. When you get into all the scientific explanations it's only to pass time. Just accept that you don't exist and forget it. (SF: It's a waste of time.) Of course, you're a waste of time, I'm a waste of time were all a waste of time. Time doesn't even exist.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.) Do we have any announcements?

SM: Yes, I do...

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

BECOME WHAT YOU'VE ALWAYS BEEN

24th January, 1993

Robert: Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) It is good to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart. Peace unto you.

There are many people who still believe that when you become enlightened you have to give up your entire lifestyle. I use the term enlightened loosely. Nobody ever becomes enlightened. What you do is you sort of wake up to your natural state. That's not really true because there is really no state to wake up to. You just become what you've always been.

For instance the sun shines all of the time but when the clouds hide the sun you do not go around saying, "Let's go create a sun? We have to create a sun or the sun won't be here." You realize that if you wait a while the clouds will dissipate and the sun will shine once more time with all its glory and splendor.

So it is with us. We don't have to make anything happen to us, there is no enlightenment we're looking for — as if it were gone and we're trying to bring it back to us — we simply wish to awaken to what we were before we were born. Before the body came into being so-to-speak what were we? Where were we? We always were and will always be. The body has absolutely nothing to do with it. The body is simply a superimposition on consciousness. We are consciousness. We are an image as a body but consciousness is our real state. And when we forget about the body, consciousness takes over by itself. There is nothing you have to do. There is nothing you have to make happen. There is no prayers you have to do. There is no mantras you have to do. You just have to be still and everything happens by itself.

So, there are those beings who think when this happens to you, you become dull, uninteresting. You have to give up all your life. This is a false notion. The only thing you ever give up is your thoughts. Your thoughts about person, place or thing that is what you give up. But your body will continue doing whatever it has to do. In other words you don't have to give up sex or wine or beer if you like to have a drink now and again. You do not have to give up your family or give up anything for when you awaken everything takes care of itself. You will find you're just the same you've always been. Yet you see things differently. Nothing actually changes only the mind has been transcended.

When the mind has been transcended there is no longer a world that you see like it was before. You see the world as images, appearances on the screen of life and you become blissful. You become more blissful than anything this earth can offer you. This world, this universe cannot offer you anything as good as this bliss that you already are.

As good as the bliss that your Self is. And we want to have this bliss because it's our natural state. This bliss is peace happiness, joy. Can you ever imagine being in eternal happiness, eternal peace, eternal joy? When nothing bothers you any longer. Nothing comes into your mind any longer. Nothing disturbs you any longer. Yet the so-called disturbances are still going on. They're still going on as it was before but not for you. For you no longer have a mind to comprehend these things. The mind has been totally annihilated, totally destroyed. Yet the body will continue what it does yet you will understand that you are not the body. You are not the doer. You are free. You are total freedom. You are effortless, choiceness, pure awareness. This happens by itself.

Now this may cause some of your habits to drop away. It may cause some of your negative things to disappear from your life. It'll bring you a peace that you never understood before. A joy, a happiness that you never realized existed before. But we're talking about two different worlds so-to-speak.

There is really only one. That one is Brahman. Yet it appears there are two, the world of reality and the world of relativity. This appearance goes on until the body is dropped completely. When the body is...body is dropped completely the Jnani becomes the Self which has always been, the consciousness which has always been, he is merged in the absolute.

You don't have to think about giving up things. Some people say this teaching is for monks and nuns. People who have renounced the world. But again I say to you there is nothing you can renounce as a human being which will stay renounced. There are certain people all over the world who say they've renounced the world because they said so. There is nothing you can do about these things with your physical body, with your active mind like renouncing the world. You may say you're renouncing the world then the feelings may come to you when you see the world in action. Feelings of greed, feelings of lust, feelings of inadequacy, feelings of depression, feelings of fear these feelings come to all these so-called people who say they've renounced the world.

For who are you to renounce the world. Who gave you permission to renounce the world. You are not here to renounce anything. You are here to transcend. To see yourself as who you are, bright and shining. It has nothing to do with the mind or the ego or your mouth or anything you may say or do. It's not a question of wanting something or trying to become something. You simply let go of everything as it is by doing nothing. Then you will find that whatever you're supposed to be doing you're doing and whatever you're not supposed to be doing you're not doing. Everything will take care of itself.

It's a wonderful feeling to realize that you have nothing to do, nothing to prove, nothing to become, nothing to be. It's a beautiful feeling. You have absolutely nothing to fear, nothing to fight. Just be what you've always been and you don't even have to know what that is, because they're just words. Noone is called upon to renounce a thing. Yet this doesn't mean that you make a fool out of yourself and use this teaching as license to do anything what you want.

Remember as long as you think that you are the doer you are under the laws of karma. As you sow so shall you reap. This law is always in effect for those of us who have not reached the other side. The law of karma is always in effect. Noone can escape it. It is only by inquiring, "To whom does this karma come?" by inquiring, "Who am I?" that the time will come when you no longer have any karma to bare. All of the samskaras have been transcended. Karma has been eradicated forever. But of course this only happens when you have dropped the body mentally. Everything is done mentally, not physically.

When you're able to see yourself as your true nature, who you really are then you will find that you never had a body to drop to begin with. There never was a body. And if this sounds sort of contradictory, it is. The body that you feel you have, does not belong to you. You do not own your body. So why concern yourself with it, why worry about it. Keep your mind on God always.

How do you keep your mind on God? By keeping your mind on yourself. How do you keep your mind on yourself? By not thinking, by stopping your thoughts, by erasing your ego. When the thoughts slow down you become happier and happier automatically. For when the thoughts slow down something is rushing in to take their place. And what rushes in is bliss. Therefore to the extent that you make your mind slow down to that extent do you feel blissful and happy. Some of you have already proven this in your life, you've told me so.

When you're no longer fretting or worrying or concerning yourself about anything, you're becoming more peaceful. Do not think you come here to solve problems. Some people still believe they come to this earth to work things out. There is nothing you have to work out. Only if you believe you have to work things out, then you have to work things out. But where does it come from? It comes from your mind. You are giving power to things like this. You are creating the situation like this that you have to work things out. There is nobody to work anything out.

Just be your Self, what you've always been. Rest in your own swarrupa. Center yourself, drop the past, drop the future. See yourself as an expanding entity — what I mean by an expanding entity I mean — your body circumference is not the end of you. You think you're a body and you're enclosed in a jail so-to-speak which is your body. This is not true. Break through this shell called the body and you will pervade the whole universe. The whole universe is really your nature. How is the whole universe your nature?

Think of the dream state. In the dream state you see a universe, a world, actions taking place. You dream that you're a prince or a princess, you own a kingdom, you go through all sorts of experiences. Where did this dream come from that's so real for you? The dream comes from your mind. Which means that you are in the dream, you are in everything, you are all a part of the dream. For the dream comes out of your mind and you're playing all the parts, aren't you? How can there be different people playing the parts when you're dreaming the dream?

Do you see what I'm saying?

The dream is coming out of your mind. Not out of a thousand minds just your mind. So you are the grass in the dream, you are the trees in the dream, you are the sun in the dream, the people in the dream. It's all you because it came from you. And when you awaken in the morning the dream is gone it's gone back inside of you.

So it is with this world, what you call the earth, the universe. For some reason you have been hypnotized to believe that you're separate. So you've got to take action, you've got to work, you've got to stick up for your rights. You have to do all sorts of things. It's just like when you're dreaming you believe you have to do all kinds of things also. And then you find out your dream was just a bubble. It came from nowhere and ends in nowhere.

This world is exactly the same. What you think is the world is only an extension of your consciousness. The whole universe emanates out of your mind. You are dreaming the mortal dream right now, right this minute. Because you're thinking there is you and me. There are the trees outside, the flowers, there is furniture and you believe it's all external to yourself. This is what keeps you back from your freedom, from your unalloyed happiness, from your total bliss. By thinking that the things of this world are apart from you.

So the solution is just to understand that everything in this world comes out from you. This understanding alone will take away all of your fears, all of your frustrations, all of the things that have been disturbing you, just by knowing this. This universe cannot be if it were not for you.

Again as in sleep. When you are in deep sleep and you do not dream where did your world go? What happened to the world? There is no world for you. The world only begins when you wake up or when you dream. Then there is a world. But in deep sleep there is no world, where did you go then? What did you become then? Find out.

So the beginning of wisdom is when you understand that this world is only an emanation of your mind. That is all it is, it's a bubble, a dream bubble. If you really new this and you understood this, would you ever feel serious about anything that's going on in this world again? Would you believe someone is trying is trying to hurt you? That you have to have revenge and hurt somebody else? Would you believe that you have to have your own way and make things happen the way you want it to be? You would simply become the observer wouldn't you? Where you observe this whole world and all its manifestations wouldn't you? You just watch everything happen, taking place. You would not react to person, place or thing. You would not react to anyone and you would never be hurt again. What could possibly hurt that you think is separate from you? For in truth you are one with it.

This is the reason I say so often, noone can ever leave you or be away from you. There is nothing you could ever lose. For you are all of these things yourself. All of your relations, all of your co-workers, all the people you dislike, all the people that you like. They're all part of your creation. If they're all part of your creation consequently you would not wish to be in conflict with them because you would be in conflict with yourself.

Do you see what is happening now? Whenever you're in conflict with anything, any place, any person, you are really in conflict with yourself. For there is one Self and you are that. Just by knowing this frees you. Just by understanding what I'm saying to you.

Your body is also part of the dream. For when you sleep and you're dreaming you are not aware of your body, you're only aware of the dream. And so it is that your body is also part of the dream. It's all part of the whole dream. This is wonderful news. It's something you always have to remember. Always be aware of this. Just being aware of this causes something to happen to you. Become aware of this truth. Now you know what I mean when I say, "You're not the body. You're not the world. You're not the situations." They are all part of this dream. Awaken to your Self. Become free.

Stop trying to analyze things, to figure things out. Do not be judgmental. Do not walk around with a chip on your shoulder. Stop playing a role. When you start looking into these things you will find out they all drop away and then your true nature will be revealed. Then you will understand what Brahman is. Brahman is that aspect where everything is dropped away, including your body. I don't mean physically, I mean mentally. To others you will still appear to be in a body, but you will know definitely, sincerely, truly, beyond a shadow of a doubt that there is no body. There never was a body and if there is no body there is no world. See it all starts with a body.

Do not try to eradicate anything in this world, or change things in this world because it's the body that is doing this, can't you see this? It is your body that is trying to make the changes. It is your body that believes something is wrong, that something has to be changed. But when you realize the body is a dream like the world is, like the universe is, like everything else is, then there is nobody left to change anything. You just observe it you watch it you let it go and it dissolves into the Self which you are. Everything dissolves into you, you are the one and there is no other.

Think of yourself as a God and let the dream manifestation take place. Do not fight it. Just observe it, watch it, look at it. Do not fight it or try to change it because if you do this it is the ego that you're working with and the ego will take over and become more powerful. Anytime you use your mind to try to change anything you are inflating the ego and it will cause you more problems. Watch yourself or your body self. Look at the things that you're thinking about. Watch yourself doing things as if you were the doer.

Watch yourself in action, judging people, coming to conclusions. Saying, "This is right, this is bad, this is good, this is terrible, this is wrong." Who can say such a thing? Can God think like this? If what we call God were able to think this way there would be total destruction, total chaos and confusion. To God all things are a dream. They have no relevance of their own, no existence of their own yet you walk around the world trying to change things, trying to do things. Even visiting holy temples, visiting holy people. It's all part of the dream, where there are no holy people. It's all yourself. You're playing games with yourself.

In other words some of you think this is okay as far as problems are concerned. When it comes to visiting holy people or seeing holy books this is different, there is me and a person. This is all false, it's all false thinking, false imagination. You are the one. You are the holy one and there is none other but you.

Think of all the years you've wasted, yes wasted, reading holy books, chasing holy gurus, going here, going there, trying to find answers outside of yourself. Can't you see now everything has been happening outside of yourself. Why didn't you go inside of yourself to begin with where everything came from? Doesn't this make sense to you? Everything came from yourself to begin with, therefore why don't you jump into yourself and you would have been free many years ago. But instead you insist on thinking the things external to yourself are real and have power. But you always wind up with yourself, don't you? When it's all over. You might get a big thrill, feel good for a while.

Go and tell all your friends, your relatives, "I saw this person. I felt so good when I saw this person. I felt bliss, I felt joy." The bliss and joy you're feeling are coming from your Self not from the person. For the person is your Self. You are that one. There never were two of you there has always been one and you are the one. Awaken to this truth, awaken to this fact, and be free once and for all. You are the one you've been searching for all of your life. It helps to understand what this means by understanding that everything comes out of you. That is why you're the one. There is no other one. You are that one.

Be still and know that I am God. Again this means to be still. Not to do anything. Not to try to make things happen. But be still and know that I am God. Only when you are still can you know that you're God. When you're making noises with your mouth, when you're blabbering all over the place, then you think you're someone. You think you're a person who has to blabber. You have to get your point across, win an argument. But when you really know that you are the one, there is absolutely nothing to win, nothing to lose, nothing to be, nothing to become. For that one there is no delusion, there is no liberation. There is no good, there is no bad. Why? Because you have created that one out of your Self. And that one has created all of these conditions out of itself and they're all happening within you.

This is why when I talked to you in the beginning I said, you do not have to do anything to become enlightened. You do not have to give up anything that you're doing. Stop thinking that you have to give up something. Things that you love. By thinking this way it will go away from you, physically because you're thinking that you have to give it up. Therefore forget about giving up anything and turn within the Self where all the answers are and be free.

(silence)

(tape restarts with students laughing) R: So do we have any stumbers back there?

SB: Could you please walk us through a sample of "Who am I?" (R: A sample of "Who am I?") Yeah.

R: As soon as you get up in the morning the first thing you do is ask yourself, "To whom does all of these things come?" Which means your body, your thoughts, whatever you see there, whatever comes into your mind. In other words do not get up and go about your business like you always do. Get up and inquire, as soon as you open your eyes, "To whom does this come?" What you're really saying is, "Where did my body come from? Where did the morning come from? Where did the sun come from shining through the window? Where did all these things come from?" What you are trying to do as I just said before, you are trying to understand that it all came from you. It came out of yourself. It all manifests out of you. By asking this question something happens that makes you realize this, this is true. So you inquire, "To whom does this come?" Whatever it may be. If a problem comes into your mind you inquire, "To whom does this problem come?" If you feel good and wonderful you ask yourself, "To whom does this come to? Who is feeling good and wonderful?" You keep inquiring, "To whom does it come?" And after when you do this something is going to say, "It comes to me." I'm the one it comes to, I feel this. Right away you'll feel a separation from the I, that you're not the I, because I feel this. "I," feels depressed. I feels wonderful. I feels good, hallelujah. I feels this and I feels that but it's not you. By inquiring, "Who am I?" you're really saying, "Then who is the I that feels this?" That's what who-am-I? means. Who-am-I? means where does this I come from that feels this, that feels the world and all its manifestations. "Where did this I come from?" And then you keep still, you never answer that question. For if you answer the question it's the ego answering. By asking the question and keeping still, sitting in the silence, the ego will become weaker and weaker and weaker.

But of course as you sit in the silence in the beginning stages, more thoughts will come into your mind you repeat the whole thing again, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking this?" Again, "I am. I feel this, they come to me." Again you separate the I from yourself and you ask, "Who is this I? Who am I? Where does this I come from? What's its source? Who gave it birth?" And you keep still. As you keep still you will find the space between the question, "Who am I?" and the thoughts that come again — that you have to ask, "To whom do they come?" — will become greater and greater, the space between. This is when you know you're making progress.

For there are no longer any thoughts. The thoughts begin to slow up. As the thoughts slow up the mind becomes quieter. When you say, "Who am I?" nothing will happen. As you keep doing this week after week after week the space will become greater and greater. The space between, "Who am I?" and "To whom do these thoughts come?" when you have to do it over again. The space will become greater and greater and greater. And that space is your reality. That space is consciousness, that space is pure awareness and everything will happen by itself. Yet this takes some time with people.

This takes some time for this to happen but keep persevering, keep doing it, don't stop! Sometimes you think you're overwhelmed by thoughts and you have to keep doing it again and again, but that's okay. It's better than some of the things you're doing. So keep doing it don't be afraid to do it over and over again. Do it all day long. Before you fall asleep. While you're washing dishes. While you're working in the office. Whatever you're doing keep it up. "Who feels this? To whom does this come? Who feels depressed? Who feels sick? Who feels lack, limitation? Who feels that if I do this I'll have enough money to buy a house and I will live happily ever after? Who feels this? I do." The I is the ego and you're trying to annihilate the ego. You want to get rid of the ego totally and completely. The ego has to be annihilated, totally annihilated, totally destroyed. And this is how you destroy it by inquiring, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. Who is me. Who am I?" Keep still that is all you have to do.

SB: Robert if consciousness is reality why do we lose it in deep sleep? It appears that consciousness seems to be controlled by where it is in the body, in the waking state, in the brain connected to the mind it's awake, and when you fall asleep it seems to fall down to lower centers in the body and if consciousness is reality why should it be controlled by centers and bodies why does it seem to lose itself and lose consciousness as it sleeps?

R: You are referring to consciousness as an entity. The consciousness that I'm referring to, is not an entity. The consciousness I'm referring to, is the absolute reality, Brahman, God. But you're referring to consciousness as an entity, as a thing. (SB: So a Jnani doesn't lose consciousness in deep sleep?) No. (SB: He's always just as conscious as he is while he is awake?) There is no difference. (SB: Why do we lose consciousness in deep sleep?) Because you believe you do. Who loses consciousness? The one who believes he does. (SB: The mind appears to lose consciousness in deep sleep.) Who has this appearance? Find out, go within the self. Who does it appear to? Who appears to have this consciousness? (SB: The mind.) Of course it all goes back to the mind. (SB: Yeah.) So by knowing this it will stop.

SB: Sometimes maybe once every few years I can stay conscious in deep sleep, I mean there is something there that's awake in deep sleep and it's a very blissful experience but it happens very rarely.

R: Yes when I use the word consciousness I'm always referring to the absolute reality. It isn't an entity, a thing. Consciousness is synonymous with God, pure awareness, Brahman, sat-chit-ananda this is all consciousness. You can never lose consciousness except when you refer to consciousness as an entity, as a thing. That's what I'm talking about when I use the term consciousness. Ask yourself, "Who sleeps?" Always inquire within yourself, "Who is doing this? Who is going through this? Who is experiencing all these things?" Keep working on yourself, never stop.

ST: Are you saying that the universe is a belief?

R: Yes, it's a bubble. Like bubbles in the ocean. They keep coming and going continuously while the ocean remains the same. The bubbles keep merging in the ocean. New bubbles are born they merge new bubbles come, they continue this process. So it is with us. You are the pure Self and on the Self images come and this is like images on the screen in a movie, it's filled with images. But you don't identify with the images you identify with the screen, then you become free. But if you identify with the images you become an image yourself. The whole universe is an emanation of the mind. Because when you're in deep sleep there is no universe, nothing. For when you dream, there is a universe, when you wake up there is a universe. They're both false.

SF: Seems that all religions agree that the truth abides in the silence and it's the only place it abides. And once words enter the picture there is a departure from the truth but at a certain stage of the game words have a purpose and that's what we're doing here this afternoon to some extent.

R: What is the question? (SF: Is that right?) It's not wrong. (laughter)(SF: Same thing)

SB: Robert in deep sleep again, if consciousness is still very much alert and yet we're not aware of it, I still don't understand why is it that we're not aware of it. If we are that consciousness that never sleeps. Why do we appear to lose consciousness?

R: Who loses consciousness. (SB: The consciousness that I feel I am right now.) Of course, but you're not that consciousness at all, you're beyond that. You are the Self. The Self doesn't sleep. (SB: You're telling me that but I don't experience it.) What can I do then. (laughter) (SF: I need shock treatment.)

SH: You just got it from him. (laughter)

SB: Everybody loses consciousness in deep sleep and it shouldn't happen if they're really consciousness. Why do they lose it?

R: Why are you a body? Why do you appear to exist? Why do you appear to go to work and do all kinds of things? The same reason. (SB: It's a disaster.) It's all a false notion. It's hallucination. You've been hallucinating for many years that you're a body and that you have to sleep and wake up. It's all an hallucination. Go beyond it, step backwards and watch what's going on, observe yourself. Observe all the thoughts that come to you, observe all the situations you're involved in. Look at yourself, see what you're doing and realize that this is just a superimposition on consciousness. Like the words, the ink-words on paper. If there was no paper there couldn't be ink-words. There couldn't be any print. The paper is consciousness, the print is the images. Because there is consciousness you can read the print. The same is true of us, because there is consciousness your body appears as consciousness. If there were no consciousness there would be nothing. You wouldn't have to worry about the question. So identify with the consciousness or the white paper rather than the words on the paper.

S: Everything that appears must necessarily appear on consciousness as a manifestation?

R: Yes, that's how it seems, that's how it appears. (pause) It's all the same dream.

(tape ends) [TOC]

CONSCIOUSNESS IS EVERYTHING

January 28th, 1993

Robert: Good Evening. It is good to be with you again.

I want to thank those of you who celebrated my birthday and gave me some gifts last week. Thank you for thinking about me. To be born is really a curse! So I don't know why I'm thanking you. (laughter) But thank you anyway. I especially enjoyed all the tapes and the shirt I'm wearing, all the clothes I'm wearing are gifts. Otherwise I'd be here naked! (laughter) How would that look. (SH: Good.) Anyway you know that you're giving to yourself. There is only one Self. And when you give from your heart to the Self, you'll never lack or want of anything. This is universal law.

There are certain points you have to remember, if you want to be happy and live a good life, never make a pretty woman your wife! This is an old calypso. (laughter)

ST: That's not going to make the pretty woman very happy. (laughter) (SR: How do you know?) I'd be grateful. (laughter)

R: But anyway...

SH: Get one to love Bob. (laughs)

R: There are certain things that you should remember, if you want to be happy and live a good life. And what I'm talking about is consciousness. Consciousness is everything never forget this. Consciousness is absolute reality, pure awareness and pure awareness is Brahman. If you could only realize that consciousness is everything, you'd be at peace and you'd be very happy. For consciousness is peace, love, God, bliss. And if you remember that you are consciousness, and so is everything else, how can you be sad or upset or depressed or feel there's a problem going on? It's virtually impossible to have a problem of any kind when you consider and ponder that consciousness is everything. Everything, everyone, every situation, no thing is apart from consciousness. But when you know that consciousness is bliss then nothing will ever disturb you again. Whatever your eyes behold, whatever your ears hear, wherever you are, wherever you go, realize that consciousness is all of these things. Everything is consciousness, everything! Again, this means that everything is harmony. Everything is good. Everything is perfect, just the way it is!

This is what the word consciousness means, that everything is perfect. Perfection.

There are no mistakes and there is nothing wrong anywhere. If something appears wrong to you, then you'll have to re-evaluate your thinking. "Why does this thing appear wrong to me?" you say to yourself. It's because it's not acting the way you think it should act. It's not doing the things you think it should do. In other words, the world is not turning the way you think it should. So you become upset, you become angry, you become mad, you become depressed. But again, when you realize that everything is consciousness, you will only associate everything with perfection. Then you can say to yourself, "Even though I do not understand this, it is perfect and good." By making this statement, by realizing this greatness in the statement you make, you will be put back on a harmonious path and everything will be resolved in your life. This is true!

It's not that things will change to your liking. It's just that your attitude and reactions to things will be quite different, when you had the realization that everything is consciousness. You will be able to see through the things going on in your life through the negation, through the depression. Through all these things that have been bothering you perhaps. You'll be able to see through these things. And you'll see bliss. You'll see peace. You'll see joy. You'll be the happiest person that ever lived when you realize and know that consciousness is everything.

It means the universe is your friend. You have no enemies, nobody's against you. No one wants to hurt you. You're free! You'll develop a great deal of humility, a great peace, loving kindness towards person, place and thing. All of this happens just by realizing that everything is consciousness. You should do this when you first awaken in the morning. Do not start thinking about your life and what you have to do during the day. But as soon as you get up in the morning, realize immediately that everything is consciousness. Consciousness means there's something alive going on, some living thing happening. The very air you breathe. The space that you take up is consciousness. It is your true nature. You are that your Self. Everything is consciousness. Nothing is left out, nothing!

You may say to yourself, "What about the evil going on in this world, or man's inhumanity to man going on in this world?" To whom does this happen? Who thinks this? Who sees this? Who believes this? The ego. The mind. But when you have the realization that everything is consciousness, you transcend the mind and the ego, you go beyond the mind and the ego. You become the substratum of all existence, the underlying energy where all images rest. The world and the universe seem to be resting in space but it's really consciousness.

What I am saying is all is well. Exceedingly well.

In order for you to prove this you have to let go of those things that have been hounding you for years. Those things that appear to be wrong or erroneous. You have to turn away from these things and turn to consciousness, which is your friend, your lover. Which will never desert you, never leave you, which is always with you under all circumstances. All you have to do is know this truth. That is all you have to do is know it. Know it intimately and wonderful things will begin to happen to you.

Do not judge the world or judge by appearances. Do not judge other people. If you find yourself in a certain situation, do not think that this is bad or something is wrong with this. But see the situation for what it is consciousness. See the people you are associating with as consciousness. Remember consciousness is bliss. It is goodness. It is God, joy.

It is love. There can never be consciousness and anything else. There is only consciousness. Everything is consciousness. Ponder this deeply. Realize what this means to you personally. Assimilate this.

There are many things happening in this world that some of us don't understand why these things happen in this world. Yet you can never look at this world as if it is real. If you realize the world is not real, you will no longer react to things. It's only when you believe the world is real and can hurt you, do things to you that you feel you have to respond in the same kind. You have to get even, you have to do things to other people. When you do this, when you act this way, then you're setting up karma. You're accruing karma. You come under the law of karma. And you go through all kinds of experiences believing the experiences to be real. But instead of trying to hurt somebody or do something to somebody or get even with somebody, if you realize that everything is consciousness, all is well!

I know it sounds too simple for some of you, but nevertheless, try to do this and see if it's simple. Try to think of everything as being consciousness. When you're watching television, when you see dastardly things happening in the news. When you're dealing with a body that may be sick or you're the care-taker of somebody else that's sick or somebody just mugged you. All kinds of situations may happen. Yet if you prepare yourself ahead of time you'll be able to handle it correctly. But if you wait until the last minute, you'll not be able to handle it correctly. In other words, you have to know that everything is consciousness before anything happens.

It's just like when you're leaving your body. It is known that when you leave the body the last thing that you think about you become. So you say, "That's good. I'm going to think of myself as a saint, a Sage that will live forever." But if you have not practiced being this, when it comes time to leave the body you will not be able to do it. You will be filled with fear, anxiety. You think you'll be able to do it but you won't. When death knocks on your door, you become a coward. You become afraid.

But if you've been practicing all these years, where is there fear? You will realize that you came from consciousness and you're returning to consciousness. You're just becoming your real Self, that's all. You will feel beyond a shadow of a doubt that you were never born, you can never die and you have never prevailed. That you are total freedom right now, this moment. You're all-pervading, effortless, choice-less, pure awareness is your nature, this is who you are, all the time. No matter what appears, do not allow your mind to decipher these things. Look at it and turn from it. Turn to your real Self. Turn to consciousness. I know it's hard to imagine that you're not the body when you see yourself every day as a body. But your body is really consciousness. You never did have a human body. Even though it appears human to you. It is like a dream body. In a dream body you may cut yourself with a knife and bleed all over the place, but you wake up and it was only a dream. So it is with consciousness. When you realize and know that your body is a dream, nothing will ever bother you again. Nothing can ever hurt you again. But when you take your body to be real then you become like everybody else. You have to fight for survival. Always be aware of this truth.

Just by knowing this, the knowingness goes deeper and deeper and deeper inside of you, until everything is transcended totally and completely and absolutely. And even though you still appear to be walking around in a body, there's nobody home! Nothing can ever happen to you again! Do you see what I'm trying to say? If somebody shoots you, hits you over the head, tears your eyes out, and all these other good things, it will not be happening to you!

This sounds strange, I know, to some of you, but it's the absolute truth. All of these things can only happen to a human being. As long as you believe you're a human being you'll experience these things over and over again like all good human beings do. But as soon as you give up the body, I don't mean dying, I mean giving up the body and you will say, "This is not me. This was never me. I am not a being that gets older and older and older and dies. That's not me at all! I am pure consciousness. I am Brahman." Then something very interesting will happen to you. You will see through the dream to reality. The world will never fool you again. The world to you will be like water in the mirage. It will be an hallucination. The world will never hurt you again.

The choice is always yours. You have total freedom of choice. The question you have to ask yourself is, "Whom shall I follow this day, God or mammon?" Who the heck is mammon? (students laugh) Mammon is the bad guy! And you have the choice of what you want to do. You can believe in this world, go through many experiences of this world or you can become free and have life everlasting. This is the only freedom you have. Everything else is preordained, predestined. You're like a puppet on a string, manipulated by Ishvara, the God of karma. To break out of this hypnosis, you merely have to see the truth. You have to see yourself as all pervading consciousness.

You were born to be happy, so-to-speak. You were born to have peace and love and joy in your life, but you're seeing something else. All of the power is within you. You have the choice to see whatever you like. Whatever you see you become. Whatever you believe you become. Whatever you think you become. Look back in retrospect on your life and see if what I am saying is not true. There are no mistakes. No mistakes have ever been made, none are being made and none will ever be made. Everything is in its right place right now, everything. You are in your right place. You may hate the place you're in. You may hate your job. You may hate your environment. You may hate lots of things. But you're in your right place because you put yourself there. How else would you get there? Life is not chance. You didn't get there by chance. You got there by your actions, your belief systems, your thoughts, your vision. This is what put you where you are today. If you don't like where you are, change your mind. That's all you have to do, is change your mind. When you change your mind you then get rid of your mind. It begins by taking a good look at yourself. You have to be totally honest with yourself. If you're not totally honest with yourself you're defeating your whole purpose. You have to inquire within yourself, "How did I get into this position? What caused me to be the way I am?" Accept yourself as being responsible for being where you are and what you are. Once you accept yourself as being responsible for your actions and responsible for who you are, then you make an about face and know the truth about yourself.

I-am parabrahman. I-am the absolute reality. Never was I born. Never can I die. I-am not the body nor the mind nor the doer. I-am pure consciousness, all-pervading. Fire cannot burn me. Water cannot drown me. No harm can ever come to me. For I am not what I appear to be. How wonderful this is. You should spend all of your spare time thinking of these things. Most of us do not like to be alone without people around us, without the radio playing, without the TV playing, yet you have to face yourself someday. Why not do it now? Sit by yourself for a half hour and see if you can do it. When you're getting depressed or feeling bad, sit by yourself, no noise just yourself. And watch the thoughts that come to you. You will see how uncontrolled your mind really is. Some of us believe we've got it together. Yet we're afraid to sit by ourselves with nothing to do. Try staying up all night sometimes, just sitting, doing nothing, watching your thoughts, watching your emotions, observing yourself. This will explain to you how disciplined you are, how spiritual you are, by what happens.

When you sit by yourself you can practice self-inquiry which becomes very interesting. Watch your thoughts as they attack you and inquire, "To whom do they come?" Observe your thoughts, become the witness to your thoughts, and inquire, "What is the source of my thoughts? Where do all my thoughts come from? I do not wish to think about them but yet they attack me from all directions. Where do they come from? Who thinks these thoughts? I do. What is the source of the I? Where does the I come from who thinks these thoughts?" You see I share these tools with you for you to use and play with. Some people have read a lot of books on Jnana, Advaita Vedanta and they think there is nothing they have to do. Some of these people believe that enlightenment will come to them sooner or later anyway. So they might as well do nothing. The only problem is while you're doing nothing the world will press itself in on you and you will find the world is very strong, because your mind is very strong and your mind is the world. But when you start controlling the mind through self-inquiry, asking, "How did I come by this mind? Where did this so-called mind come from? What is its source?" You will soon find that you're becoming more peaceful, more kind and more joyous, happier than you've ever been before. All of these things happen by themselves if practice self-inquiry or you practice some spiritual discipline. So spiritual discipline is very important. The ego is very cunning. It will tell you, you do not have to do anything, but it will control your life more than you can ever imagine.

I have met many people in my travels who claimed to have been enlightened, who tell me they're on the verge of enlightenment yet the first person who bumps into them they become angry, when they trip and stub their toe they start cursing, is this control? Do not fool yourself. Forget about things like enlightenment, awareness, liberation. Just work on yourself and let the consequences take care of themselves. One of the methods that works very well for people who enjoy to meditate, people who like to meditate, is the I-am meditation. The I-am meditation is a very powerful meditation. When you're alone and you have nothing to do you should practice this all of the time, it's good for you. It lifts you up. So let's all do this together. The I-am meditation.

Close your eyes, make yourself comfortable, become aware of your breath. Listen to your breathing. Practice a little bit of vipassana meditation. Observe your feelings, observe your thoughts. Do not attempt to change anything, just observe. Ask yourself this question, "Who is the observer? Who observes? Why I am." Now with your respiration inhale say, "I," exhale say, "am." Inhale say, "I," exhale say, "am." If you loose your thought and your mind starts telling you all kinds of things gently bring it back to I-am. This type of meditation transcends the mind. Makes you very powerful and strong. Keep on doing this. "I" inhale, "am" exhale.

(silence)

SF: You said that once in a while there is somebody who announces that he's become enlightened, but a man of realization there is nobody apart from him to be impressed by that fact. Is that not so?

R: This is very true. There is no more ego, there is no mind left. So who became enlightened. There's noone to become enlightened. (SF: There is no point in announcing it.) There is nothing there. (SF: Nothing.) No announcer. The announcer has been wiped out completely.

SI: I've been following your processes too. I have been able to slow down my thoughts but they just keep happening. And I've been able to get into the space where there is no more thoughts. And I feel connected to space but I don't feel the boundary of my body but that's all it is, it's just simply that I don't feel connected yet to the source.

R: That comes later. You're on the right track, go deeper. Go beyond all that. Go deeper than you've ever gone before and you will feel your own bliss which is all-pervading, which is your reality. What you're doing is you're experiencing the void. You're going into the void. That's three quarters to the top. We go beyond the void. You may do this by inquiring, "To whom does this void come to? Who is experiencing this void, this emptiness?" And you'll go beyond. But you're doing well, keep it up. Do not settle for anything else but the reality, the whole reality. Whatever you're experiencing go beyond it. Always go beyond it, go deeper.

SY: Robert up until about a week ago I could differentiate between the states of sleep and waking up. So I would have that few seconds before the thoughts, but last week I had insomnia because the mind has speeding up, I'm not thinking, it's just when I'm trying to sleep at night that the thoughts are just driving me nuts, I have to hold really strong to stop them during the night because it's going on all the time. I won't get any sleep unless I stop the thinking.

R: Can you observe yourself? Can you observe this happening?

SY: It's very difficult, it's fuzzy. It's a funny stage. The thoughts are just streaming on. I feel like I'm not really involved in them. There seems to be an observer. But I'm not quite awake and not quite asleep. But I'm aware that the thoughts are running off without me.

R: The mind is very tricky. It will play all sorts of games with you. Everything emanates from the mind. Again go beyond that by realizing that it's all from the mind. All your experiences are from the mind. Ask yourself, "To whom does this come? Who is experiencing this? Who is going through this? I am. Who am I?" Keep going deeper and deeper, further and further beyond everything. Do not settle for anything except the ultimate. Keep watching yourself, keep observing yourself and keep going deeper. You can go as deep as you like, it's up to you. But do not let this annoy you at all. It's the mind that wants you to believe that it annoys you. It's the mind that does all these things. Just go beyond the mind. Sit still and smile and watch these things happening to you. Watch the thoughts rushing by and ask, "To whom do they come? Who is experiencing all of this? I am. Then who am I?" by doing this you will go deeper than you've ever gone before and you'll overcome that problem. You can also go down to the heart center. Feel yourself in the heart, that's where all the thoughts came from to begin with, the heart. (SY: The thoughts came from the heart?) Umm. The mind, the thoughts came from the heart. When you watch yourself in the morning as you said, you will see that you're at peace when you first wake up, the first few seconds that you awaken.

SY: I could sit, I could do that easily but the more I get into self-inquiry I don't have that break, this is going on all night, you know. I read about the part about, "Abide in me," in the heart and I was doing it, then this thing comes and there is no break in it, I feel as though I'm going to break up ??? I'm just staying at the same constant level.

R: Yes, it's all coming from the mind instead of the heart. (SY: Oh.) That is what the problem is. So go back to the heart and watch it coming from the heart and it will all stop. You'll overcome it, truly this week you'll see, you shall overcome. Be at peace.

Mary would you read the Jnani?

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.) Any announcements?

SM: Oh yes, I mentioned that I had a few people ask me about the book, "Silence of the Heart?" These are the talks of Robert from 1990. And I've had people ask me how they could get it. Andy is here and he will take your orders for the book. They're beautiful talks. They help everyone. Believe me they do. (SY: How much are they Mary?) They're twenty dollars. (SE: That's two bottles of Tequila.)

ST: And a large part of that twenty dollars is a donation for these meetings. Jane is getting these books made at a low cost so it's a donation as well as a purchase that you make.

(more discussion about the book)

R: Anything else? It is time for prashad, the real reason for you coming here...

(tape ends) [TOC]

ROBERT ARE YOU REALLY A JNANI?

31st January, 1993

Robert: Shanti shanti shanti om peace.

Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) I love you with all my heart. I love you unconditionally. Which simply means you can throw pies in my face, throw stones at me, do what you will I'll still love you because that is my nature. I can't stop loving. It makes no difference what you do or don't do, it has nothing to do with it.

Love is all-pervading. I love the Self. I love the Self in you. There is one Self. You are that. The Self which has always been and will always be. You may call this Self God if you will. It makes no difference what you call it. There is the Self, if you learn to love the Self you will become the happiest person on earth and you will receive love from everyone. No matter what is going on in the world. Man's inhumanity to man. The dastardly conditions that are happening in the world. If you can love enough you will receive love back. For where does the love go? It is omnipresent. You are that. Learn to love.

Notice I'm not saying, "To love yourself or I love myself." Myself is ignorant. It knows nothing. Robert is absolutely nothing but the Self is God. The Self is the substratum of all existence. That is your real nature, Self. Know your Self, love your Self, as Self, not as ego. What you see you become. What you feel you become.

See and feel the radiance of the Self and that radiance will be brilliant everywhere. Wherever you look. Wherever you go. It'll follow you. It will guide you. It will take care of you for it loves you, the one Self. Open your heart to it. Do not allow world situations to make you cynical, arrogant, afraid. We live in a wonderful universe as-it-appears. We are the universe. All is well. There are no mistakes.

Never allow your ego to tell you how things are or what's right and wrong, what's good and bad. For the ego will turn one against another.

Try to understand what the Self is. Know what the Self is and you will always be happy. You have to be happy. For the Self is infinite happiness and you are that.

I receive many phone calls. Sometimes I like to share them with you.

I received a phone call from a lady this morning and she asked me, "Robert are you really a Jnani or are you just Robert? What are you? You never say that you're a Jnani. You never say that you're enlightened. You never say anything about yourself. What are you Robert?" Inquiring minds want to know. (students laugh) I will share the answer that I gave her with you.

I told her neither is correct. I am not Robert and I am not the Jnani, because those are relative terms. They're part of the world. The words mean something to you and it spoils the whole thing. Go beyond the terms, the words.

If anyone tells that they're a Jnani or they tell they're something important and they have a special message for you, be careful of those people. There are no special messages. There are no special people. We're all one. I'm not any different than you. What you see is of your own imaginings.

Now lets talk about you.

To remove problems from your life, to get rid of unhappy situations, to remove fears frustrations, you do exactly the same thing. You do not try to change a condition by working on the level of conditions. Do not try to change bad for good, evil for happiness, for you're working at an ego level. Rather turn away from both terms. Let go of both situations, the good and the bad, the happy and the sad. Turn from it. Turn to the source, the source of all existence. And you will find that the situations resolve themselves. For the source is total harmony, total peace and total love. The source is God, consciousness, pure awareness.

This is what you've always been but somehow you got lost in the shuffle, and you think you're a human being. You think you're limited to your body. You've been brought up this way with that kind of thinking. Your schools, your churches, your environment, your parents have emphasized the fact that you're limited. You can only go so far.

But I say to you, you're totally unlimited, you have no circumference anywhere. You are space. Space is maintained by consciousness. You are really all over the place. You're falling apart. The atoms that you're made out of are not permanent. You turn this way and you turn that way, you go in all directions and there is big spaces between the atoms. Just like everything else in this world. You're simply a part of all things. All things are a part of you.

You are wonderful, made in the image of God, but what God? The God that you created in your mind. So if your God is a good God then you think of yourself as a good person. If your God is a santa clause God who lives in the sky, with a long beard that you pray for things to give you things, the anthropomorphic type of a God saying, "God I need this, I want this. Please let me have this," whatever God you believe in you become. You become the God that you worship.

Or should you worship a God at all? If you believe that you're an ego or a human being that is blown around like a leaf, then you should worship a God. For you have to turn to someone, you have to turn somewhere. But if you realize that God is within yourself, if you understand that you are the God that you've been worshipping all these years, it's a whole new ball game. For you stop worshipping and you start meditating. By meditating I mean you keep still. You become quiet. You no longer need use words.

As the mind becomes quiescent, as the thoughts subside, the divine harmony which has always been appears to awaken within you. You become radiantly happy for no reason. You become totally peaceful for no reason. You gravitate to the place that you're supposed to be. The right people come into your life who are supposed to be in your life. Everything happens by itself. You need not do anything.

It is like a fruit tree. The tree bears fruit by itself. It doesn't have to talk and say, "I've got to bear fruit." It doesn't pray for the fruit to grow. It doesn't do anything, it just stands there and the power which maintains and sustains the whole universe takes care of the tree, in the correct way. So apples grow, oranges grow, mangoes grow, everything happens to sustain mankind and the animals and the bugs. Everything takes care of itself.

Now we call ourselves advanced people, human beings. We're supposed to be higher than the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom the mineral kingdom.

But are we?

We as human beings appear to make trouble wherever we go. We're selfish, greedy, lustful, we have a lot of pride, a lot of ego. We think we came to this world to take over the world. To leave our mark, do something great. This is not why we're here at all. We're here to cooperate with the animal kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the mineral kingdom and the human kingdom. We're here to cooperate with the whole universe. It begins with yourself by seeing peace. We don't try to change people to be peaceful like the way you want them to. Not by making people do what you want them to by your ideas of peace. What you think peace should be and try to enforce it on somebody else, but by keeping still, keeping quiet and allowing the divine circus to break through.

If you practice keeping still you will see what I'm saying is true. Things will happen all by themselves. You no longer have to fight for survival. You no longer have to change anybody at all, any situation, any condition. You just become still. That is all you have to do.

As you practice this being still, being quiet, you will find that you're expanding. Not because you had a big meal but because you're becoming a part of all things. And you'll begin to ask yourself, "Who am I?" This also will come by itself. The quieter the mind becomes the greater the inquiry within the self. You let it happen by itself.

When you're busy, busy busy running around here and there trying to make things happen and thinking if you don't do something everything will fall apart, the question of, "Who am I?" never arises. For you're too full of yourself to think of something like this. But if you learn to keep still and keep quiet and stop reacting to things the question of "Who am I?" comes by itself.

And you realize that I is not Self, it is the ego. What you're saying is, "Who is this person who is saying these things? Who is bothered by these things? Who is hurt by these things? Who feels something is wrong? Who is this I that feels this way? Who am I? Where did the I come from? Who gave it birth? What is its source?" All the answers are within yourself.

As you begin to investigate the source of the I, the I will one day disappear, for it never existed to begin with. And you will find that you are that which has always been.

That which is, that oneness, that nirvana, that sat-chit-ananda. It's all within you awaiting to come out. But you hold your beauty back by identifying with the world, your body and your mind as being real.

You are holding yourself back from your Self, by continuing to believe that all is wrong. That something is wrong someplace. But as you let go, as you stop thinking, as you stop trying to change people, then it becomes very evident that the I is the ego. For you will see that it is the I that has been trying to change people, trying to change conditions, that reacts to things, that feels hurt. Not you but the I. You've always been free. You've always been God. You've always been bright and shining, this is your real nature. But it is the I that has caused all these problems.

Work on removing the I totally, completely through self-inquiry, "To whom does the I come? Who gave birth to the I? What is its source?" As you keep inquiring within yourself like this, things will begin to happen. Things will begin to change. You will find that you are not the same person who started years ago. You are somebody else completely.

You will feel that you used to be a bubble on the sea of consciousness. Now you've become consciousness and the bubble's burst. You are no longer like the bubbles that come into play then disappear, come into play then disappear then return to the ocean. That is what all human beings appear to be like bubbles. You seem to be born here for a short time then disappear. More bubbles keep coming, more bubbles disappear. It goes on eternally. But the ocean always remains the same. So it is with consciousness, pure awareness, it always remains the same and your body is only an image on consciousness. The whole relative universe rests in the lap of consciousness. It keeps changing continuously constantly, while consciousness remains the same forever.

So you have to make the right identification. Are you consciousness or are you the bubble or the image? If you believe you are consciousness then you begin to act like consciousness. You will stop worrying, you will stop fearing, you will stop thinking something is wrong someplace. You will feel all is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. You will be at peace with yourself and the world. But you will know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you are all-pervading. Your essence is everywhere and you are total freedom, total freedom. Right now! Right this minute. You are totally free of any problem that has ever been bothering you. You are totally free right this minute of anything, of everybody. You're totally free, totally free. Feel it. You are free! You're no longer in bondage to person, place or thing. You are infinite freedom, infinite bliss, infinite love. This is your real nature. Love the Self. Love the Self always, and you will always be happy.

(short silence)

It is time to play stump the guru. So pass the stumpers.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: If there is no reply to the question, "Who am I?" What would be our motivation for asking?

A: (Robert answers.) The motivation for asking is because you don't care who you are. Who are you right now? Are you sick and tired of this world? Are you sick and tired of all the situations that you've been involved in and you realize there is something else going on, then you inquire, "Who am I?" But if you answer it is the ego answering. It is the same ego that is giving you all these problems. The same ego that has brought everything upon you that you want to get rid of. When you want to get rid of that ego you ask, "Who am I?" You can't answer that because the ego will be answering. "Who am I?" Goes goes deep deep into the heart centre where it disappears forever and reality ensues. Your own reality. So you've to be motivated by the fact that life is impermanent as it appears. That you were born to die and that is the only reason why you're living, so you can die. The world's a mess and filled with fears and frustrations, that's the motivation.

For you realize deep inside when you inquire, "Who am I?" you're going beyond all these dastardly things that are going on in the world. You're going beyond person, place and thing. You're going to that place where there is eternal peace when you inquire, "Who am I?" That's the motivation. By knowing all things are impermanent. Happiness is short lived, worldly happiness. Everything must change change change invariably. So you've been through life and its nonsense and you realize there must be something else. And if you've been on a spiritual path no matter what spiritual path it's been, for years then you will come across somebody that teaches you, "Who am I?" And you begin to inquire and you will begin to practice self-inquiry. And one day when you say, "Who am I?" One day the answer will come by itself and you will be totally free from all the nonsense you've been going through. That's the motivation. Next case.

Q: Is there a way of combining the I-am meditation and self-inquiry or does one have to choose between them?

A: It depends what you want to combine it with. You want to combine it with a bottle of gin? What do you mean you want to combine? Combine with what? When practicing, "Who am I?" it is something that you do all day long, 24 hours a day. If you're talking about other spiritual methods it depends how you use it. I suppose you can combine it with meditation. But "Who am I?" goes beyond all this. It goes beyond meditation. Beyond other forms of spirituality. It goes right to the heart of the matter.

So if you're practicing "Who am I?" there is no time to practice anything else. It takes up all of your time if you do it all day long. But if you wish to combine it with other forms of spirituality then it's up to you. You've got the tools of "Who am I?" to work with. That is really all you need. You do not need anything else. Of course it's up to you the way you feel. If you wish to combine them of course you can combine them. It's your choice you must do what you want.

SD: Robert I'm just wondering if the person who asked the question isn't confusing the I-am meditation, which you've taught us, with "Who am I?" Because you taught both the methods.

R: That's good. The I-am meditation can be practiced at all times also. You can change it once in a while. If you get sort of frustrated doing self-inquiry, practice the I-am meditation. Self-inquiry is not a meditation. It is a method of denying the whole universe and allowing reality to come into your life. So self-inquiry is actually the better method. But when you first begin you may get a little frustrated with it, get tired of it a little bit, then practice the I-am meditation. If you're doing any practice at all you will know what to do. It will come to you by itself.

That's the interesting thing about this, if you're really sincere and you're practicing you will be told what to do from within. Something will show you the way. It will tell you what to do. But if you're just saying which method should I practice and not practice at all, then you will always be confused. Start practicing something and be sincere about it and something will happen to you and you will know what you're supposed to do. It will come by itself.

Q: Since your realization came to you very early and without effort, how easy is it for you to understand and advise us who are struggling for it?

A: The idea of my being here is in itself a method of going within. When I had the experience it made me totally different than what I used to be, completely different. I realized that everybody is enlightened and all they had to do was get themselves out of the way. So it's not very hard. I've been able to see that consciousness is your real name. Pure awareness is what you really are. I am able to see this, to observe this in you. So because of my awakening I am able to see that all you have to do is to get yourself out of the way totally and completely and you'll be totally free. Remove yourself from your Self. This is what I'm able to see. So I'm speaking from a viewpoint... (tape break) ...and what's covering you is called ignorance. It doesn't belong to you at all. It is because you become attached to person, place and thing and because you react to person, place and thing. That sheet of ignorance has overcome you. All you have to do is turn away from it and you'll be free. This is my message to you. Turn away from all of your fears and your ignorance by inquiring, "Who am I?" and then you will see what happens. I am able to share this with you because this is what happened to me. The whole universe dissolved into nothingness. If I didn't have the experience I wouldn't be able to talk to you about it. I wouldn't be able to share it with you. So I can say to you truthfully and honestly, you are divine being, you are spiritual being, you are consciousness, you are pure awareness. This is your real nature. Go within and see it. I can give you this advice because I've been there. Do it and find out for yourself.

By being in satsang it helps tremendously also. As the weeks go by, as the months go by, as the years go by, you will find out that you are not the same person that you are when you started. Wonderful things are happening to you. So be happy, all is well.

Q: If we keep telling ourselves that all is well where will we find the energy needed for the final breakthrough. Is it not dissatisfaction with our ego and the world that is needed for the extra push?

A: Not really. If you're dissatisfied it motivates you to do spiritual work. To do something else. Dissatisfaction makes you do spiritual work, go after spiritual life. But to become totally enlightened you let go of everything. You let go of dissatisfaction. You let go of spiritual life. You let go of everything you've ever done, and become quiet and still. It's a paradox.

In one way you have to do something, you have to always do something, to do spiritual work and another way you let go of everything you don't do anything. But it will take care of itself. As long as you are sincere and you're trying and you're doing something within yourself, things will happen, things will happen by themselves. Then you can say, "All is well." When you're saying, "All is well," you're stating the truth to yourself. What you're doing, you're voicing the truth that in reality all is well, there are no mistakes. Mistakes appear to the outer world but yet everything is happening the way it's supposed to. Do not judge by appearances. Leave things alone and everything will fall into place.

Q: You teach us not to react but to be the witness, which in bad or unpleasant situations, seems quite helpful. However would this not also diminish the good or pleasant?

A: What you call good or pleasant in a human standpoint, is only temporary, only here for a while. The real good and pleasant is your real nature. It can never diminish, for it has no size no shape, no dimension. The happiness which you are is your real nature. It will always be with you. As you remove the others, reality will shine forth by itself and you'll be happier than you've ever been in your life. So do not worry about getting rid of your goodness, the goodness will expand into infinite goodness which is indescribable. You see the substratum of all existence is bliss. Bliss is the greatest happiness that you can ever imagine. There is no word to describe bliss. You have to experience it.

The happiness that you're afraid of losing in your question, is only human happiness which is not real to begin with. But bliss will come and take its place when the ego has been totally been annihilated. You'll never lose anything that you haven't gained. You are not worried about losing the happiness in the world. It will just increase. The right thing will take place. The right thing always takes place. There are no mistakes. Nothing is here to harm you or lead you astray. Do not be afraid, go for the gusto, dive within yourself. Do not worry about losing any happiness. Happiness will only increase.

Q: Can you give an example of a right self-surrender attitude?

A: When you surrender you're surrendering the ego. The way this is done, is by looking at the world with humility. Looking at the world with love and peace. Saying to yourself, "Not my will but thine." Feeling that you have no will of your own any longer. You have no questions, you have no wants, you have no desires, you let them all melt in your heart. You leave it alone. You stop worrying, you stop fretting. You stop trying to accomplish things or to change things. By realizing there is a power greater than you. It's available to you right now.

As you do this you're surrendering all of your wants, all of your needs, all of your fears, all of your stuff that you've been carrying on with all these years. You're surrendering it all. Everything must go, everything.

You can say something like this, "Take this God. Take it. I give it to you. Take my life. Take my possessions. Take my family. Take my problems. Take my goodness. Take everything. I just want you alone." This is perfect surrender. When you give everything up to God, everything. Hold on to nothing and you stand naked before God. Then something wonderful will happen to you.

But not many people can do this. Most of you can give up certain things that you don't like. When it comes to giving up things that you like you won't do it. You think you're going to lose something. This is what is holding you back. So perfect surrender is when you give up everything, everything to God including your body. Do what you want with me. Do what you want with my body, with my mind, with my affairs, with everything. Not my will but thine. If you can surrender like this you're already free. Try it, it's hard, because you're afraid what will happen after you do that. You believe everything will be taken away from you. This is human thinking. Stop being human. Surrender yourself and become totally free.

Q: How do I know that the changes you are talking about which I do perceive in my life is not a result of intellectual integration rather than a spiritual transformation?

A: Intellectual integration will be changeable, that's why. But will never be permanent. Anything intellectual is changeable. But a spiritual integration is forever. What happens is you know you've been transformed. Intellectual integration is only on the surface. Spiritual integration is deep within. They're both different like night and day. You will know. You will know because you will feel joy, you will feel a bliss that you've never felt before, it stays with you. If it's intellectual you feel good but you will worry about it that it's going to go away. If it's intellectual you will feel it for a short time only. You will feel somebody can take it away from you, can hurt you, can change it for you. But if it's spiritual you'll feel its eternal. It will always be with you. It'll never leave you.

(Robert says to himself) That's it Robert.

(tape ends) [TOC]

UNCREATE THE UNIVERSE!

7th February, 1993

Robert: I welcome you with all my heart. I love you all unconditionally. All is well. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place where it's supposed to be.

People keep asking me, "Robert how long does it take to become self-realized? When will I become self-realized?"

The answer is always the same. When you get rid of the world in your mind. The world is in your mind. Where else would it be. It doesn't exist on its own. It has no existence of its own. It exists in your mind. You have created it out of your own mind. Consequently when you uncreate the universe, the world and your mind, self-realization will be there. It never went anywhere. It's yours. You've got it.

It is the world that you believe in that keeps you back. It's like the clouds in front of the sun. Today we have no sun we have rain and we think there is no sun. What happened to the sun? We call it a gloomy day. We say we feel depressed when it's not sunny. Yet the sun is in back of the clouds and the clouds will dissipate and you'll be full sun again. And so it is with life. You believe conditions are real. You believe persons, places and things are real. You will not remember they are of your own creation. You forget about this. No matter how many times I tell you this you look at the world and react to it because you think the world is real. This is what keeps you away from self-realization. This is the only thing there is nothing else.

If you're only able to get rid of the world in your mind by putting it back up into the mind, going for the source, the source of creation. You will see it comes out of you. You are the one that created everything. You are the one. So, what you have to do is uncreate the universe. You uncreate the universe by looking at things and not reacting to them. By just observing the world, doing this and doing that but having no reaction whatsoever, neither good nor bad, neither happy nor sad. It's like looking at a movie. You as the audience are looking at a movie, the movie has a beginning, a middle and an end, but it has absolutely nothing to do with you. You wouldn't get up on the screen and start beating up the bad guy. Maybe you would, I don't know? Because you realize that this is a movie. It will end soon. And then you go back home.

So it is with spiritual life. It's a movie, you are the screen. And the images of things are superimposed on the screen. For this means it's all in your mind. All of creation is in your mind. You have created your own world. The world that you live in now. You have created your own world. The world in which you live in now. It came out of you, you've done it. Otherwise where would it come from? Now as I have said, I've explained this to you many times but most of you still believe that you have to read books. Find sacred teachers. Meditate for hours. Travel the world looking for the right person, the right place, the right thing. Searching for the holy grail to become free.

What are you doing when you do this? Aren't you accumulating more knowledge? You want to empty the garbage pail, not keep adding to it. True? But yet you keep adding to it. Every time you read a new book it comes out. You're adding to the garbage pail. In other words you're inflating your ego more and more, your ego becomes bigger and bigger. Because you have something new to talk about don't you. A new teacher, a new method, a new mantra, you become excited over this and you become excited over that. This is what keeps you back from realization. Always remember this. Never forget this. You want to subtract, you want to delete, not add on.

No matter how many times I tell you this there is still somebody who calls and says, "Robert have you read this it just came out. Great book!" or, "I found a new method, standing on my head repeating a mantra will do it." (laughter) Think of what you're doing. There are no new methods. There are no methods. All you have to do is remove the world. You do this simply by looking, by observing, by watching intelligently. And inside of you something tells you, "This is not real. This is not me. I have nothing to do with this world. My nature is Brahman. I am the absolute reality. I am consciousness. I am pure awareness, not the world." You want to unlearn everything you've ever learnt. You want to become a divine madman. Know absolutely nothing. Nothing means no thing.

You may say then, "Well what about a profession? This is okay for people who live in ashrams or who've given up the world but I've got to work for a living." It's all foolishness. What you have to do will be done without you. This again is something to remember. Your body will do whatever has to be done and do it perfectly and good, when you get yourself out of the way. As long as you believe that you are the doer and it's up to you to make things right or wrong, you suffer accordingly. But when you let go and let God so-to-speak, everything works harmoniously, beautifully and you will always find yourself in the right place doing the right things. Yet you never plan anything, you never scheme, you never try to make anything happen you are simply observing the world, observing conditions by not reacting to them at all. This is how you become self-realized.

When the last ounce of world is removed from you and there is nothing left, you awaken to the truth of your being. But as long as you're holding onto something. Things frighten you, things make you angry, things make you mad then you have a problem. Again you have to unlearn everything you've learnt. You have to let go of everything you've been holding onto. To be free you have to become nothing, perfect nothing, no thing and then freedom is yours. Another problem we have on this path is judgement. Many of us are very judgmental and this again keeps you back from your realization. When you're judgmental who are you judging but yourself. If you're familiar with metaphysical Advaita you begin to understand that there is only one Self! And you are that Self, so whom are you judging? You're judging yourself. You hurt yourself when you judge someone else. You have to learn to leave people alone, to leave the world alone and not be judgmental. You say to yourself, "Well this person is doing this, this person is doing that." This person is you! This person is not separate from you.

When you hear about the bank robber, hear about the murderer, you hear about man's inhumanity to man you want to become outraged, but as long as you're studying Advaita and you're coming on this path, you will have to understand that there is nobody to be outraged at. There is nothing to be outraged at. It's all yourself. There is only one Self and that Self is you. You are that Self. Out of you emanates everybody and everything. So you're becoming outrageous to yourself. This strikes me to be very funny when I see people being angry at people, hurting people, hurting themselves. It comes back to you. It comes back in different ways, strange ways, but it always comes back to you. Then you say, "Well you mean I'm supposed to be a doormat and let people walk all over me?" On the contrary, that will never happen to you if you're in the right consciousness. If you're in the right consciousness people will not walk all over you at all. People will leave you alone. When you understand that you are the one Self, who can hurt you? But think of the ways you get mixed up in this world by believing situations are real. Think of your life just today since you got out of bed. How many things turned you on, to anger, to hatred, to disharmony? It's your fault, it's always your fault.

A wise students of Advaita never reacts to anybody or anything. But when your ego is at play then you're going to say to yourself, "They can't talk about me like that. They can't do this to me, I'll show them. I'll get even. I'll do this and I'll do that." Who are you hurting but yourself, for you believe you are a body going through experiences and that is a lie. You're not a body and you're not going through any experiences. You are Brahman. You're all-pervading. You're not a body that appears to be a body that is bound, you are boundless awareness.

Whenever you're judgmental, again you can never get the correct picture. I use the keyhole example again. You look through the keyhole and you see four people fighting with each other with knives and clubs, beating the hell out of each other. And you're looking through the keyhole and you're saying, "Wow this is terrible. This is awful, look what's going on, they're beating each other to death. I've got to do something to stop this." So you open the door and you're surprised you are no longer looking out of the keyhole you're seeing the whole picture. You are seeing these people on the stage and you see an audience of millions of people and they're acting this out. It's not real. It's all a play. It's a play of consciousness, it's a leela and you're amazed. Now the audience represents consciousness. The players on the stage represent the ego. The ego is always fighting, always angry, always trying to get even. Only thinks about me me me me me. While the infinite lies in sweet repose smiling, observing, watching, does nothing. Then you notice the play is over and the people who were fighting go down to the audience and become part of the audience. They have overcome, they have transcended, they're a part of consciousness and new players take their place. Now there is a war on the stage. Like the war in the Bhagavad-Gita or like the civil war. Nation against nation people are killing each other, there is blood all over the place but now you're able to see the whole picture and you're not disturbed for after a while all the players come down off the stage and join the audience and they become part of consciousness. Then you look you again and you see there is nothing, there is no longer an audience, there is no stage, there is no players, there is absolute bliss. Everything has turned into bliss, into joy, into happiness.

So you see all of your judgements were wrong. Remember you were programmed since you were a child to believe certain things are good and certain things were bad, this is this way and that is that way, but nothing is anyway, everything just is and your programming makes you feel upset, your programming makes you feel something is wrong that you have to take some action to do something to somebody. This is all a lie.

Another example is the tapes I play here. Some people after all ask me, "Robert why do you play some of these tapes that have nothing to do with spirituality?" I say, "You've just answered your own question. I play them because I have nothing to do with spirituality. To break up your linear thinking." Some of you believe that being spiritual is having a long face, never laughing, taking things seriously. (students start laughing as Robert puts on a mask, a students comment)

SB: Now we'll call you miss sugananda.

R: This is my real self. (laughter) We have to be serious about spiritual life. (laughter) You're not supposed to laugh. (laughter) You're supposed to be real serious. (laughter) This is a serious situation. (laughter) (SB: So you finally had your nose fixed, it's an improvement.) Therefore you believe things should be a certain way. So I play certain tapes to break up that thinking. Everything I do with you is planned. (SE: Seconds ahead of time?) Exactly. (laughter) True. Everything is sacred. Everything is spiritual, everything. There is no such thing as this is sacred and this is not. Somebody else asked me, "Well Robert, why do you play some love songs once in a while?" Because I'm in love, with you, with life, with the Self. So I do this for you. Learn to be loving. Not to pick pick pick pick pick. Learn to be happy. Learn to be yourself. That is all I've got to say to you. (pause) Now I'll play a little of those songs. (Robert tries to play his tape) Nothing is happening here. Okay let's see. Nothing, nada. (laughter)

SH: You fix it for him Mary.

(tape played)

It is now that time to play... (everyone yells out) Stump the guru!

R: Right. (laughter) Do we have stumpers? (SM: Yes right here Robert.) You're ahead of me Mary? (SM: Yeah. I checked it already but we only got three.)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Robert is ones enlightenment already predestined or can one get enlightened at any moment? I've been waiting fifteen and a half years already. (laughter)

A: Enlightenment has absolutely nothing to do with predestination. They're both different places, different things. Predestination doesn't exist except when you believe you're the body. So as long as you're working from that viewpoint you have a problem. But if you forget about predestination and you go back to yourself who you really are by giving up all attachment, giving up all kinds of holding onto the universe in any way shape or form then you become free. You're already free, you've always been free. There never was a time when you were not free.

So predestination is one part of the ball game, realization is your very nature. In reality there is no predestination because who determines predestination? Good old Ishvara, the God of karma, but does that God really exist. Only for the one who believes they are the body and the world is real. As long as you feel that everything that happens to you is real. As long as you feel upset, mad, angry, something is wrong, then you are creating the God called Ishvara and he throws thunderbolts at you called karma. As you go through your karma, you go through predestination and everything else. But when you're ready to give it up you will dive deep within the Self, understand immediately who you are and become free and liberated. The choice is always yours. Do you want to go through life playing these games over and over again for another fifteen years? Give it up. Forget about time and space. Understand who you are, what you are, where you came from, where you're going and you will find out you came from nowhere, you're nothing and you're not going anywhere. You've always been and you will always be, just the way you are, pure Brahman, absolute reality, this is you.

Q: Sometimes one is on a path of training with very great Masters and being a yogini for a very long long time, then how do you know what your career is, which truly benefits the greatest amount of beings and also the financial abundance is continually also there? Thank you.

A: Being a yogini, being on the path are erroneous conclusions that you come to. A yogini and a yogi are both on the same path to destruction. For these people go over life after life after life and never find freedom and realization because they think they're on a path. Forget about a path, there never was a path. It's a mirage, hallucination to think you've got to be on a path. You are what you are and that is what you are, you're popeye the sailor man. That's who you are, accept it. We think too much, that's our problem. We just think too much. We think by thinking we're going to solve any situation, we're going to come to a resolution when we become enlightened. Not by thoughts, not by thinking, not by words, but again by emptying yourself out completely.

So for the yogini, get rid of the idea that you're a yogini. Get rid of the idea that there is a path that you're on, that you have to follow a path. Get rid of the idea that you've been doing this for fifteen years and nothing has happened to you. All those are stumbling blocks. There are no paths to realization. There is only realization. Realization is already here. It has always been here and never went anywhere. All you have to do is awaken to it, wake up! Awaken to yourself! Stop thinking. Stop trying to make things happen. Leave everything alone. See the truth within yourself, by denying everything in the world. What do I mean by denying everything in the world? By looking at things and saying, "Neti-neti, not this, not this, this is not the truth." When you're watching television, don't feel what you're watching, the news, as if it were true. "This is not the truth," you tell yourself, "this is not it, this is not it." As you keep doing this you're emptying yourself out. But if you don't do this what are you doing you're absorbing ore information, aren't you?

What happens when you absorb more information? Your ego expands. The more information you absorb the more your ego expands. Think of all the information you absorbed this week, about politics, about crime, about man's inhumanity to man, about what's going on in the world and you eat it up. You're filling up the garbage pail. Instead of emptying it, you're filling it up. Whenever somebody bothers you, whenever somebody annoys you, whenever you bother to be judgmental, think of what you're doing, you're filling up the garbage pail more and more and more how can you ever become enlightened this way, it's impossible. You're keeping yourself back by looking at everything as being real. As far as your employment goes, as far as your job is concerned that will always take care of itself. It will always take care of yourself. You will do what you have to do, but you have nothing to do with it. It may sound paradoxical but it's true. Whatever has to be done will be done but it has nothing to do with you. Become like an apple tree. The apple tree doesn't worry whether it's going to bare apples this year. The apples come by themselves. Everything happens by itself and I'm very serious when I say this, look at my face and it'll tell you. (laughter) Have you ever seen anybody more serious than this?

SB: Robert how can we trust you when you have to hide behind a disguise? (laughter)

R: Who tells you to trust me, you shouldn't trust me. (laughter) (SB: Does your nose make a noise like a horn, can we squeeze it?) No it'll fall off. My nose will fall off. (laughter) When you trust yourself you'll trust me. I am nothing but a reflection of you. You have all created me this way. (laughter) You're looking at yourself. What have you done to yourself? (SB: You look like you're a reincarnation of Sigmund Freud.) (laughter) Whatever you see that's what I am. (laughter) More. (Robert asks Mary for the next question)

Q: Some Master said there was no teacher and no disciple. Can you comment on that?

R: If there is no teacher and no disciple what's to comment on? (laughter) Listen next time. (laughter) Anything else? (SM: That's it Robert.) Anybody else wish to comment? Make funny noises?

SF: Yeah I got a deal. Often times we hear this thing, God is love. The word love means so many things now, but in this context it might be called oneness which is the same as pure awareness, pure consciousness. And if anything is separate from oneness, then it's departed from reality and - hold on a sec I have to straighten my mind - in other words everything is nothing and nothing is everything as you said. And if I think there is anything separate from me I'm separate from God, separate from the Self, pure awareness. In other words if I think I'm different from the Brooklyn bridge (laughter) or the Taj Mahal, I'm living in ignorance, that's a fact isn't it?

R: Yes. (laughter) (SH: That's fairly complicated.) (SF: I'm afraid it's true.) (laughter) Fred you are the essence of all existence. (laughter) (SF: The what?) Don't ask me. (SF: We all are.) So you're the Brooklyn bridge you're everything you want to be. I bet you always wanted to be a Brooklyn bridge? (SF: In my dream my mother sir had dedicated it. In 1885.) (laughter)

SH: You know you stumped him. You wanted to stump the guru, you've done it.

R: I said he's the essence of everything.

SF: There is another thought. We might come upon some important information if we compare the dream state to the waking state. Because in the deep sleep state something happens and all conscious things arise in the dream state. Some things we are familiar with in the waking state and somethings all new, they just arise, they're witnessed and they go away again. And the time element is all together different than it is in the waking state and it may seem like a long period of time in the dream but in the waking state...the time in the waking state is altogether different. And the idea is everything in the dream state is unreal. We don't worry about it the next morning and it's a similar situation in the waking state. Is that not so also? (R: Yes it's so.) Thank you.

R: Any other brilliant questions? (laughter) Or we'll play some more music.

As many of you are aware, Joel Goldsmith was the first teacher that I contacted when I had my experience when I was fourteen years old, and he meant a great deal to me. So Mary is going to read to you from one of his writings, why words and syllables are a waste of time to speak. Go ahead Mary.

(Mary reads)

All too often prayer consists of too great a degree of words, statements, quotations. Whereas prayer itself actually is wordless. Prayer has nothing to do with anything that we voice. Whether in the form of a petition, affirmation, denial or any other form of speech or thought. Rather prayer is that which we become aware of, in the silence, the word of God uttering itself within our consciousness. In other words we do not pray unless prayer can be understood as a state of receptivity. Actually the word of God is nothing that we say but rather that which God says within us. One form of meditation is to quietly consider some idea concerning God, think upon it or even voice it, but dwell upon it for only a short time. Then become receptive and let the meditation come through from God. In other words God does the meditating we become aware of the fruits of that meditation.

In an introduction to an old edition of the bible we read, "For as the kingdom of God become words or syllables. Why should we be in bondage to them if we be free? Is the kingdom of God words? Is the kingdom of God syllables? No, the kingdom of God is within you and that kingdom of God must make itself manifest to you. It must declare itself to you, utter itself to you, voice itself to you. And so the kingdom of God is not your words nor your syllables. In our prayers very often we carry around problems and we wonder what form of treatment we could use for this particular problem or that articular problem or what form of prayer or if there was some greater understanding we could inquire as to how to pray. If you are having that experience ponder this passage and the realization in it. For is the kingdom of God become words or syllables? Why should we be in bondage to them?" That is to the words or the syllables if we be free. Scripture teaches that we are free. We are children of God, if children then heirs, if heirs then joint heirs in Christ with God. We are already free, if we were not free there is no God power that could make us free. We are free and the entire truth teaching is of course to bring out that realization or revelation of our present freedom. Not to make it so. It would be well for us to remember with any of the problems now bothering us that we might just as well not be in bondage to words or syllables or statements of truth. But be willing to sit a while and let God reveal its plan to us, its plan for us, to us.

We find this in the Smith translation of the scriptures, the nineteenth psalm. The heavens are telling the glory of God. The skies shows forth the work of his hands. Day unto day pours forth speech. Night unto night declares knowledge. There is no speech nor are there words. Their voice is not heard yet their voice goes forth through all the earth and their words to the end of the world. But the last four lines go back to the first. The heavens are telling the glory of God. But then it says, there is no speech nor are there words and that is true. The heavens are not voicing themselves in words of speech and yet they are telling the glory of God. And the skies shows forth the work of his hands and he says, "Their voice is not heard." Certainly the sky has no voice and yet it does show forth the work of his hands. Yet their voice goes forth, that is the heavens and the sky and the day and the night. Their voice goes forth without speech, without syllables, without words. Their voice goes forth and declares. And so it is that our entire experience is one that shows forth the glory of God. It tells the story of the glory of God. Our whole experience, our entire life, our body, are continuously showing forth the work of his hands. If at this moment our bodies or health does not seem to be showing forth that divine harmony it is only because we have come under the belief that we have health of our own, bodies of our own, powers of our own instead of realizing that all that concerns us in the body, in the purse or in the home is God showing itself forth, manifesting its beauties, its nature or its character.

The moment we make the transition from the belief that we have health, that we can lose or gain, the moment that we give up the idea, the belief that we have health that can be improved and understand that the only health that there is in all the universe is the health of God manifesting itself as the health of our bodies. Then do we come into the realization of this nineteenth psalm. The heavens are telling the glory of God and they are doing it without words and without speech. The sky shows forth the work of his hands and it does it without words and without speech. Day unto day pours forth speech. Yes but day unto day does not talk, it only pours forth speech in the sense of pouring forth the harmony of God's being. Night unto night declares knowledge and it does so without voicing it in speech or other impartations of ideas except through the activity of showing off God's glory. Now all that we are and all that we hope to be, is God. Showing itself forth as our health, as our strength, as all of the good in our experience. Then let us give up at once the belief that our health or wealth is dependent upon certain arrangements of words into treatments or prayers. For the kingdom of God is not words or syllables. The kingdom of God is already established within you. Give up the belief that your health or wealth or home can be dependent upon anything other than the activity of God. Once you have seen that point that it is the activity of God that maintains the harmony of your being you will commence to see a new light on the subject of prayer.

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert...)

(tape ends) [TOC]

THIS IS WHAT HAPPENS TO US

11th February, 1993

Robert: It's wonderful to be with you once again. I love you with all my heart, unconditionally just the way you are. All is well. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place. Everything is the way it's supposed to be.

There was once a man who was training his son and he went outside and put his son on a step and he said, "Now jump into daddy's arms and daddy will catch you." The son did so. And he put his son on the second step and he said, "Jump into daddy's arms. Daddy will catch you." And the son did so. And he put him on the third step and said the same thing, only this time he didn't catch him and the kid fell and hurt his legs. And the dad looked down at him and he said, "Son never trust anybody, even your father."

Now what does this have to do with anything? Absolutely nothing. (students laugh) This story is not a metaphor, it's not a parable, it's nothing! (students laugh) It's worthless, doesn't mean a thing, yet you listen to it with great interest as if it will enlighten you. But let's see what we can do with that story. The son represents pure intelligence that comes into the world as a body, and is totally innocent. The father represents the ego. The son comes into this world, pure, innocent, as pure intelligence, and begins to lose that, by looking at the world, looking at the ego. The ego tells the son, "Look at this world, it's yours. You can have anything you want. You can do anything you want, this beautiful world. Believe in me, the ego. There are riches in this world beyond your imagination. Look at the beautiful trees, the sky, the clouds, the flowers. Everything is beautiful."

And the son being young, without any experience, begins to identify with those things but just because everything is going smoothly and rightly the ego pulls the rug from under the son and the son has negative experiences. Starts to fret, worries, become upset. It forgets about itself being pure intelligence. It forgets about itself being innocent. But now it begins to identify itself with an ego and it says, "I want this. I desire this. I'll feel upset if I don't have this. I want this person. I want this toy. I feel hurt. I feel alone. I feel happy. I feel sad." He has come into full swing as an ego.

This is what happens to us. When we first came into this world we came from pure intelligence, absolute reality and while we're still babies we took on this body we still had this innocence, this sweet innocence within us. This great beauty and joy, this pureness. But as we became programmed in the world we forgot about this and we became human and here we are today full blown human beings with the I dominating. The I desires this, the I desires that. The I is full of desires and we try to pacify the I by giving it what it wants. Consequently sometimes we're very happy, sometimes we become miserable when we do not get what we want or what we think we should have. We have forgotten about our divine heritage. We have forgotten that we are divine intelligence, pure awareness, we identify completely with the body. And you know this is true.

Look at your life only for today and see the desires you had, the wants you had, the needs you had, the things that you think you want enough to have. See how miserable this makes you when you do not achieve what you want. Then you become totally body conscious. Believing that you are a body-mind phenomena. Yet as we go through the vicissitudes of life, some of us because of previous experience because something happened to us begin to realize, "This is not all there is. This is not what life really is. Who am I? Where do I really come from? What is my mission in life? What am I here to do?" We keep asking ourselves these questions and the answer is all within the self. We have all the answers within us. Yet we keep searching, going from pillar to post, running around the world, seeking answers, seeking teachers, seeking wisdom when all of the time it has been within yourself. You have been what you are seeking all of this time, yet you keep on seeking. As if some force has made you go seek something that you've lost. When you totally surrender, when you sort of give up searching and seeking, then things begin to happen and not before. As long as you keep seeking you will keep on seeking. There will be no end to it. You have to put an end to it yourself.

You have to sort of say to yourself, "What I have been seeking has been seeking me." There is no more going out and going in, going out and going in. There is only that which is, and I am that. You become more peaceful, more loving, kinder. You begin to understand that there is only one life and that life is pure intelligence and that life is your life now. There is nothing to analyze, nothing to discover, nothing to really do, but to be yourself just the way you are. There is no one around that can tell you anything. There is no book around that can teach you anything. You are the one right now. You are the one you've always been looking for. You are that! Right this minute, right now, incomprehensible beauty and joy. That bliss that you hear about if yours. It is yours right this moment.

Yet you appear to be struggling. What are you struggling for? It is your mind that has been programmed that tells you that you have to struggle, that you have to fight, that you have to survive, those are ideas that have been printed in your mind, you've been programmed. You believe you are a person with rights, you like to stick up for your rights, fight for your rights. This is all the mind, it's all the ego that tells you these things. You have no rights. What are these rights anyway? You can always read the bill of rights. It will tell you all kinds of interesting things. But it is something beyond all of these thoughts. Something beyond all of your desires and wants and needs, feelings, emotions and that something beyond it is you! The real you! You are the ocean and the bubbles your body. Bodies come, bodies go continuously, but you remain as the ocean not as a bubble on the ocean. To do this you have to think about these things everyday. Instead of getting up in the morning and thinking about your work or thinking about the clothes you're going to wear or the food you're going to eat for breakfast. You have to think about these things we're discussing. You have to become aware of yourself, of who you really are. To understand that I am not this body, I am not this mind that tells me all these things all day long. I am neither person, place nor thing. I am pure awareness. I am absolute reality. I am total freedom. Not limited to the circumference of my body, not limited to anything. I expand in all directions. My essence is in the plants, in the trees, in the sky, in the people, in the animals, I am all of these things. The whole universe is my Self. Everything emanates out of my mind. Everything comes out of me. This whole creation is my creation. If I want to find this is true I have to go deep, deep within myself. I must dive deeper within myself and find the source of my being which is consciousness.

As I go deeper within myself, the whole universe follows suit and the whole universe dives deep in me, everything goes within me, everything. That's where it came. It goes back to where it came, to the source of all life itself. I am that Self. The one Self, unblemished, pure, all-pervading. I and the father are one, I and the Self are one. I am that one! You must talk to yourself that way. As you talk to yourself this way the ego begins to listen. The ego begins to diminish. Until one day it will disappear entirely completely. Then you will discover you have never been the ego, you've never been human, you've never been anything. You have discovered your nothingness and the you as a feeling that disappears also. There is no you left that has discovered anything. You is gone. There is just is-ness. You have become is. Is you is or is you ain't my baby. Remember that song? (laughter)

Why will you not admit that you're free? Why will you not accept your is-ness? If you only knew how beautiful you were. The true Self. If you only realize the joy that you are, the love that you are, the peace that you are. You have no problems, no worries. There never were any problems or worries. The worries and problems simply appear to you because you didn't know who you were but now you know who you are. You are the truth, the whole truth. You are the light. You are the way. What appears to be your body disappears, nowhere, like a dream, and the world follows suite. That is not you, you know this now. Never will you be disturbed again by anything, by anybody. How can you be hurt if you're not hurt-able? What can possibly hurt you? Only when there is certain wants and needs that you think you don't have can you be hurt-able and you can only do this by comparing yourself to other people. When you realize that your Self is totally sufficient, totally sufficient, there is nothing missing, then you become divinely happy but when you believe you are a human being, then you have problems, wants, desires. So the secret is not in getting rid of your desires or wants or longings, but awakening from deep sleep of mortality. When you awaken from the deep sleep of mortality all your wants and needs and desires will be gone. They will disappear by themselves.

Look to yourself. Learn to worship yourself, to bow to yourself! You are the one! Never forget this. You are that one that has always been and will always be, it is wonderful. There is nothing you have to seek any longer. You have heard the truth, you have seen the truth, be satisfied with it. If you are the one then there is nowhere to go, there is nothing to do. You're just happy all the time. When you recognize that you are the entire universe what is there to do? Where can you possibly go? It's all within you. Everything is within you, everything. Why not accept this for yourself? Your needs will be fulfilled of their own accord. Everything will unfold the way it's supposed to in your life. Give it a chance. It is when you are peaceful that things resolve themselves in the right way for the good of all concerned. When you are at total peace with yourself. You are the power, the totality of everything. Accept this about yourself. Say to yourself, "I am that I am. I am absolute reality, nirvana. I have never been anything less than that." Everything I see and behold with my eyes, I have created myself. If I do not like what I see I simply uncreate it by letting it go back into my mind where it began. I am in control of my world, my destiny, and it is all good. It is all wonderful. I am at peace with myself and with this world in which I live. For after all the world is my creation and I am infinite love. Subsequently everything I see is love. I see love everywhere.

In the clouds in the sky, in the tree, in the birds, in people, in the animals. I am able to see this because I am that myself. Nothing and noone can hurt me any longer. For I have become unhurt-able. Noone can show me any evil anywhere because evil is not a power. It has no validity. It is just wrong thinking. All is well, all is right, all is good. If you truly wish to repent just sit in silent meditation and see that perfect reality within, for all manner of evil merely arise in erroneous thought and like the morning dew before the rising sun can completely be eliminated through the magnificent wisdom and light. You are that light. You are that wisdom. And all is well. Feel free to ask questions.

SF: Something crossed my mind. (R: Yes Fred.) What happens if I have a desire, that means that something might be different than it already is, and there is no way that something can be different than it already is at any one time. Also that brings in the matter of time which is also a mental creation. So it's really kind of a waste of time to have a desire. (R: Exactly.) The trick is to stop it.

R: You stop desires by understanding who we really are. When you understand your true nature desire cease by themselves. Desires only come to human beings. How can the infinite have a desire? The infinite reality is the whole universe, everything. It can't have a desire because it's fulfilling itself completely all of the time. So only a human being can have a desire and since you are not a human being Fred you have no desire. You are Fred a non-human being. Congratulations. (SF: Thank you.) (laughs)

SH: You can only have a desire if you imagine you are what you aren't? (R: Exactly.) And insist on it?

R: When you stop imagining everything, you'll be free. You'll have no desires, nothing. As long as we have imagination this is what is called false imagination in Buddhism. We imagine that the world is real, we imagine we see people the way they look, we imagine things are going on in this world. In reality there is nothing going on, nothing is going on. Nothing is happening. It is your mind that moves not the world.

SF: This is the world of infinite possibilities. (R: Okay.) On the relative plane or any other plane, anything that I see in the dream or drug experience, delirium tremors, it's all equally real or equally unreal whichever you want to look at it.

R: That's true yes. It's up to you, that's your free choice, that's your freewill. That's the only freewill you've got. To be able to take an honest look at life and say, "I accept this and I reject this." That's the freedom you've got. (SF: In AA (alcoholics anonymous) we had this thing called the serenity prayer, it said, "God grant me this serenity to accept the things I cannot change. What matters is the thing's what it is, I can't change nothing.) So why try? (SF: I should quit.) Let go of everything. (SF: That is what you keep telling us to do.) There is nothing you have to change Fred. Change takes care of itself without you trying to help. (SF: You're better at that than I'd be doing.) Change is for whom? For the ego, for the body, for the mind, go beyond change. Throw all your change away and keep a dollar bill.

ST: Robert I've been reading some stuff on quantum theory and they are proving today, the new science of quantum theory, everything that you've been saying, advising us about ten times a year...that it's all an illusion in a sense that it's a giant hologram, everything that is here is a creation of everyones own mind. What we're saying tonight that there is some sort of ??? which will be sort of an everyday understanding, coming from a scientific point of view.

R: Not really because science can only go so far. When you go into places like consciousness or absolute reality, there are no instruments to measure this. Science has to be measured to say how it works. But this is beyond science. They have nothing to measure consciousness with. Noone can measure consciousness. Noone can measure absolute reality. A human being can never be able to do this. No scientist will ever be able to measure it. You can go a certain way and say what you just said. Everything is in a state of flux. Everything is composed of hydrogen atoms. (ST: I think that the point of what you're saying is that there is only one thing here there is no one to believe this. I'm an individual, we think there is an individual. There is only one thing here. And that's ??? in a materialistic sense. I think they're going beyond that with the hologram.) To know the absolute reality, there has to be a direct experience. You have to experience it directly yourself. (ST: Yeah, yes) Again there is no instrument that can measure it. The finite can never know the infinite.

SH: That Self power gets lost trying to measure the infinite... (tape break)

R: ...nothing is really happening. It's all mass hypnosis. It's all hallucination. Consciousness never made anything happen. Because what you call consciousness doesn't exist anyway. But for the sake of talking and explaining things we bring out all of these words. Like the bible teaches creation coming from Adam and Eve. The Upanishads tells us that Brahman created everything. Everything is Brahman. But this is for the sake of people wanting to know. When the ego wants to know there will be someone to write about it to tell you what happened. But when you have transcended then you will be free there will be nobody to tell you anything because you'll go beyond everything. So listen in the silence. Go beyond everything that you ever understood and you'll be free...

(tape ends) [TOC]

YOU'RE IN YOUR RIGHT PLACE, RIGHT NOW!

18th February, 1993

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.)

You must always remember that silence is the greatest teacher. Quietness, silence, total stillness, it is the greatest teacher. Reality shines through where there is silence. If you want to experience reality just keep quiet. That is all you have to do. Shut up. Stop talking. Stop thinking. Stop imagining. Leave it all alone.

There is a power that will take care of everything for you. This is the truth. If you leave it all alone, if you stop worrying, you stop fretting, if you stop imagining what is going to happen, everything will work out. It has to. It has to because we live in a universe of bliss. Bliss is your very nature. Joy, happiness, harmony, this in truth is what you really are but when you start to think you spoil it. When you start to talk you mess it up. When you start to worry you will fail.

You are where you are because that is where you're supposed to be right now. This is why I always say you're in your right place, right now at this moment. There are no mistakes. If you do not like where you are do not try to run from it, hide, go somewhere else, dive deeper within yourself and you will see the true reality which is harmony. Where there appears to be disharmony if you dive deep enough you will see harmony, you will feel harmony, you will feel joy, happiness, you have to. Because the happiness and the harmony are the substratum of the universe, of all existence. That's what really is. If you're not experiencing joy you're living in an illusion.

One of the questions most frequently asked me is, "How do I solve my problems?" No matter how many times I tell you this people still ask me the same question. I've got problems you say, "How do I solve them?"

Well, there are many ways to solve your problems. It depends on your maturity. How mature you are. First of all you have to ask yourself, "To whom is there a problem? Who has this problem? To whom does this problem come?" and separate from it immediately. Separate yourself from the problem immediately. Do not carry it along with you by thinking about it. Because as most of you know by now that when you think about a problem that you think you have, the problem seems to expand, to enlarge. It brings you more thoughts about the problem that makes it sound impossible to ever get rid of it. In other words you must turn away from the problem, totally, completely, absolutely. No matter how serious a problem may look. No matter what other people think. You have to turn away from it.

This doesn't mean that you do nothing. It simply means that you are not functioning on that problem any longer. And when you're not functioning any longer the solution arises. There can only be a correct solution when the mind is not functioning on the problem. As long as the mind is functioning on the problem you may come up with solutions, they will be the wrong solutions. It will be the wrong reactions. Why because you're at the level of the problem. But if you turn away from the problem totally and completely then you have risen to a higher degree. And when you have risen you will know what to do. It'll come to you as a...like a flash. You will know exactly what to do.

But when you worry, when you mope, when you feel sorry for yourself, when you keep pondering the problem over and over and over again, it will become relatively worse because again it will expand in your mind. This is how the mind tricks you. This is how the mind plays games with you. First it makes you believe something is wrong someplace, with your life, somebody else's life somewhere, then it gives you all the ammunition to make it happen. In other words you will do things that will make the problem worse and you will worry and you will fret to no avail. And the problem goes away for a while as it usually does but doesn't last long, it has simply gone into the mind deeper and deeper, taking a rest, taking a nap. It will come up in full force soon, again, perhaps in a different way.

As an example: Let's say a lady is a secretary, she is an executive secretary, she has a good job in a big company. She can't get along with anybody at work. She blames people for her errors. Always finds fault in everything, with herself, with people. Always feels that somebody is cheating her, somebody is doing something to her, someone is trying to hurt her. So she says, "I'm going to get out of LA I'm going to go to Tucson." When she decides to move the problem goes to sleep. It's in abeyance, because you're making a physical change.

When she gets to Tucson she gets another job same problem all over again. The problem comes out again. Different people, different environment, different places, same problem. Unless you nip the problem in the bud it'll keep haunting you again and again and again in different ways. Because you're at that level, at the problem level. You have to rise above it not change it or stop it. And you rise above it by knowing the truth about yourself. This is the only way to alleviate the problem forever. This is the only way to transcend the problem forever. You rise above it. You can inquire, "To whom does this problem come? Who has this problem?" And realize the I has the problem, not you, but the I. Of course when you ask and you inquire, "Who has the problem," you'll say, "I do, I has the problem, I worry about this problem, this problem is terrible." But you say, "I have it," all of the time don't you? Not you but I. Not you but I. I has the problem. Then you must separate yourself from the I, the I is not you. The I that has the problem is not you at all. The I that has the problem is the ego. Not you!

Then you further inquire, "Then who am I?" Which simply means, what is the source of the I? If I'm not this I then what is its source? Where does the I that has the problem come from? If it isn't me where does it come from? How did it arise? At this point you keep still. If you keep still in the right way, then you're in the silence we were discussing previously. You have entered the silence. In that silence there is total bliss and joy. And you're able to see that the problems are a product of the mind, the ego, not of you. To the extent that you're able to see this, to that extent will your problem be totally resolved. You will find that all is well.

Now why does this happen? It happens because the universe in which you live is the absolute reality, Brahman. In other words you are not Brahman but Brahman is you. For as long as you're thinking and you have to analyze it and inquire, "Who am I?" You can never be Brahman. So you keep affirming, "I am Brahman. I am the absolute reality," you're making a fool out of yourself. Does Brahman who is all-pervading say, "I am Brahman?" Since Brahman is omnipresent and is everything to begin with, there is nothing but Brahman, it would be pretty silly for Brahman to keep saying, "I am Brahman?" Because there is nothing else. There is only Brahman. But Brahman can never say, "I am Brahman," or God could never say, "I am God," but you can. Which shows you that you are not that.

Anyone ever tells you that I am God be careful of that person. What you are can never be God. What you are doesn't even exist, a mirage, an hallucination. Only Brahman exists. When I say Brahman exists as you, I'm not referring to your body. I am not referring to your affairs or your world or your universe. I mean that Brahman exists as I-am. See it's the other way around. You see it's not, "I am Brahman. It is Brahman, I-am." Which leaves no place for your body or your mind or your thoughts or anything else. You're free. How can Brahman have a problem? It's ridiculous. The absolute reality cannot have problems. The pure awareness cannot feel hurt.

Some of you have told me, whenever you feel upset, whenever you feel depressed, you say to yourself, "I am God. I am Brahman," is this the right procedure? This is the wrong procedure. We're only confounding a problem. You have to get yourself out of the way in its entirety. You have to get totally out of the way and allow Brahman to function as Brahman. There is only Brahman. There is no world, there is no body, there are no problems, there is no universe, there is only Brahman. If you can only get this far in the thinking, by the time you get this far your problem would be resolved and gone. You will start laughing at yourself. To think that you had a problem, that's an insult.

When you believe you have a problem you are insulting God, blasphemy, think about this. For how can you say there is something wrong? What you're really saying is God or Brahman doesn't know what he's doing and there is something wrong, I'm hurting. God made a mistake, that's what you're saying. As you know it's virtually impossible for Brahman or God to make a mistake. There is no such thing in Brahman. Again Brahman occupies every corner of the universe, every nick and every cranny. Brahman is every thing and everywhere and this world is only a dream in Brahman. That's all the world is. This so-called world is a dream in Brahman. So when you're fearful, when you think something is wrong, something is not going your way, you feel hurt-able, this is blasphemy. This is why you can't get rid of your problem because you keep insisting this problem is for real. Whereas in truth the only reality is Brahman.

So do you see what you've been doing all of your life? You've been reacting to TV, to the newspapers, to the dastardly things you see happening in this world, the things in your own life that are going on, you have been reacting to these things. No wonder you suffer.

Some people who are new here may ask, "Why does Brahman allow this to happen in this world? Why does God allow all these dastardly things to take place? Wars, man's inhumanity to man." The answer again depends on your maturity. To the average person I will say to them, "This is God's leela, God's sport, brahmans play. Brahmans playing with himself and creates all these conditions," and this satisfies the people who are at this level of thinking. To others I'll say of a more mature nature, "First find out who you are then see if Brahman brings these conditions to you. In other words forget about everything. Forget about the world, your problems and find out who you are. How you relate to all of this, then see if anything matters." To a further mature person I will say, "Brahman only knows himself and nothing else exists," so the answer is determined by where you're coming from. What you can comprehend this time. And you have to be very careful how you talk to people.

If I visited a patient in a hospital dying of cancer and who was not aware of the ultimate truth. He's not aware of the ultimate truth that Brahman is Brahman, nothing else exists. I wouldn't tell him that while he's dying of cancer. He wants compassion, love, kindness, nice words, not an advanced advaitan philosophy. They wouldn't understand.

Think how you answer people. Some of you have read the books but you have not had the experience. You've never had the direct experience of the truth. Therefore you get into debates, arguments about who is right, who is wrong. What exists, what doesn't exist and try to be smart and say, "Brahman is everything. Nothing exists, everything is a dream." Wanting these people to respect you and say, "Boy he knows everything, he's smart." You're only fooling yourself. If you're not demonstrating a lot, keep silent. This is how you will grow spiritually. You will stunt your spiritual growth when you start telling people how much you know or trying to impress them with your knowledge of Advaita.

The most advanced advaitan is a fool and knows nothing. There is no knowledge in Brahman. Can't you see that now? To have knowledge there has to be someone to receive it. And if there is no one left, who has knowledge? Knowledge of what? Knowledge of whom? All of the so-called knowledge is head knowledge. It's what you don't know that sets you free, not what you know!

This is complete in reverse from going to school. In school they jam all kinds of knowledge into your head and look what's become of you. Look at our politicians and great souls, so-called, who have knowledge. They create great problems in the world. Knowledge creates problems. So you really don't want knowledge.

And other people they ask me, "Robert, if I only knew this I'd be so happy." I say, "Wrong, if you didn't know this you'd be happy. Remember it's how much you know, it is how much you don't know." This is very important to understand. Can you see now that most people who have become self-realized did so before they read a book. If they would have read a book before they would be complete idiots and joined a debating team. I will not say most I will say just about everybody, for centuries who have become self-realized, never read a book. Take the Rishis of old. The Rishis didn't read books. They sat under the trees in the silence, in quietness and everything was revealed to them.

Now take yourself. What's revealed to you everyday, problems, situations? Stop thinking this way. Start to feel in your bones that there is only Brahman, nothing else, period, end. And do not qualify that statement. It's even better if you say one word, if you say, "Brahman," nothing else. Sit in the silence and say, "Brahman." Let's do this right now.

Close your eyes. Drop everything. Say, "Brahman," to yourself, nothing else. Wait a few seconds and say it again, "Brahman." Wait a few seconds and say it again, "Brahman." Feel how happy you're becoming, just by uttering the name of Brahman. What joy you're beginning to feel. You feel uplifted. Your so-called problems vanish without a trace for they never existed to begin with. "Brahman!"

For those of you whose mind starts to work and thoughts begin to come. Ask yourself, inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? I think these thoughts. What is the source of the I?" Keep still and say, "Brahman," again. Sit in the silence. Be in a state of no thought.

(silence)

Om shanti shanti shanti om, peace.

Feel free to ask any questions.

SF: When you were talking that Brahman, God and pure awareness is all one, everything is one, that's correct isn't it? (R: Exactly, even you're one.) I'm one, one what?

SH: One without a second.

SF: (Student describes experience when he was accused of stealing from a store)

R: Where did you say I'm going to find this guy?

SF: He didn't say anything. Who would want to put two light bulbs in his pocket? But it really made me sore but it occurred to me that had I handled it in any other way all kinds of karma would have ensued, the police and lawsuits and all kinds of things. And it kind of follows that when the bible says, "Turn the other cheek," it means it literally. It means if someone slapped you in the face I'm supposed to turn the other cheek and let him slap the other one otherwise, as you said, there is going to be a whole slew of karma coming at you. Do you want to comment on that please?

R: Of course. When we read about turning the other cheek it is referring to renunciates, to monks. The way to live in this world is not to react, mentally. Sometimes you have to slug somebody, you have to slug them, but don't react to it, mentally. In other words you're very calm in your mind, but you have to do what you have to do. The way to react is mentally. (SF: And whether it's anything physical or not is besides the point.) If somebody came in here right now and tried to shoot me, if someone did. I probably wouldn't sit down and let him shoot me, I would try to wrestle him and get the gun out of his hands, but my mind will not change. I will still be filled with love and compassion and happiness. (SF: What happens to your physical world is another world from which you live in.) The only time when karma accrues is when you live in your mind. Karma comes from your mind. So when you're doing something in this world physically, there will be no karma attached to it, you do not think about it mentally. (SF: If I hit him that would be another leela.) You could say that, all right. Again this is what it means in the bible when it tells you to keep your feet on the ground and your head in the clouds.

SY: The end of the world term.

R: You're living in the world, you're working in this world. You're not in a monastery, you're in the world. As long as you feel worldly you have to take action or people will step all over you, so-it-appears, but mentally you can be at peace and at rest. Mentally you can know it's all a mirage, all a dream, and these things are happening to you because of where you're at, what's going on in your life, when you try to do things.

SH: Are the mental and the physical so disparate, are they not connected or are they not related?

R: It's all in the mind. Everything begins mentally. You have to have a certain attitude of mind and you attract situations to you. It is your attitude of mind that attracts situations that gets you.

SH: That will teach you to steal light bulbs. (students laugh)

SI: Robert talking about someones reaction, Rama Krishna had this story of this king cobra that eats children. (R: Oh yes, yes) Finally they called upon a holy man and the holy man went up to the cobra and told the cobra not to bite anymore. Months later the holy man passed by the same village and he heard some movements from the forest and there was this bloody blackened beaten cobra, and the holy man said to the cobra, "What happened to you?" and he said, "I listened to you and I stopped biting people," and the holy man said, "You fool I didn't say don't hiss." (laughter)

R: Exactly, really true, make your noise, whatever you have to do, but don't take it seriously. (pause) Anyone else like hissing?

SK: (student asks how a person with a lot of anger and hostility and be totally at peace?)

R: Like keeping peaceful? Like being peaceful? If your mind can be peaceful, really at peace, these people will feel it and change their attitude.

SK: (students continues about anger and hostility)

It will happen. It will happen because peace is the nature of the universe. When your mind becomes peaceful, you're identifying with the nature of the universe, then the nature of the universe will affect all the people around you and you will find peace wherever you look.

SK: (students continues about anger and hostility)

R: Umm. This is why you have to work on yourselves now. Not wait until you're confronted by a situation. If you work on yourself now and you become a total embodiment of compassion, peace and kind heartedness then when you're confronted by a situation, what you've become, you will alleviate the situation. You will cause the situation to turn into total harmony. It's just like when you're dying, it's a matter of what you think about before you die that's where you go. So most people say, "Well I'll wait till I die and think of going to heaven or going to a nice place where there is gold and silver and everything will be okay." But when you die you won't be able to do that. You will be in total fear when you're dying. You will not be able to think of some place where you want to go. This is the reason why you have to work on yourself now, all of the time, and make yourself that way. When you are about to give up the body so-to-speak, you'll be able to think of Brahman and you'll go directly to Brahman. You'll be absorbed.

But if you do not work on yourself and you keep fooling around with this world and working too much in this world. When it comes time for you to drop the body you will not be able to do anything, you will be full of fear, you will be frightened, totally frightened. Then you'll go back to Henry's house. (laughter)

SH: I'm locking the door. (laughs)

R: So if you don't want to come back to Henry's house next lifetime, work on yourself or you will have to put up with Henry's jokes forever. (laughter) It's really a pleasure being here Henry.

SH: Yeah.

R: I said it's a pleasure being here and it starts.

(talking about the rain pouring down hard)

SH: Yeah, you, you did that.

(students laugh as tape ends) [TOC]

WHO WERE YOU BEFORE YOU WERE BORN?

21st February, 1993

Robert: Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) Greetings and salutations. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again this lovely Sunday afternoon.

How many of you believe you were born? That's the first mistake you make. To believe that you were born. You may say to me, you may say, "Of course I was born. Everybody was born." (Robert turns to the barking dog as students laugh and says): You wasn't born. It appears as if everybody was born doesn't it. Yet water appears in the mirage. The sky appears blue. Appearances are all over the place. We accept them until we know otherwise.

To know that you were never born, that you can never die, that you do not exist, frees you from the attachments that most people are attached to. It gives you a different life, totally different life, to realize that you were never born but yet you've always existed.

So the question is, "Who were you before you were born? Where were you before you were born?" Only you can answer this question. I can tell you all kinds of nonsense, why should you believe me? You must answer this question for yourself to find happiness and freedom. For as long as you believe you were born, you suffer. Everything was born to suffer because everything dies as soon as it is born, it begins to die. Everything trees, animals, people. As soon as it opens its eyes when it is born it begins to die.

There have been those few people in the world who have gone beyond birth and death. There have been those people, very few, who know the secrets, the answers to life, to the mysteries of life. Yet they can do nothing for you until you can find out yourself who you really are, what you really are, what you're all about.

For if you believe you were born you begin to accumulate knowledge, as soon as you're born. You become aware of your environment, then you become aware of other people. Your parents feed you all kinds of knowledge and all this does is expand your ego. Your ego begins to live. It's fattened up by thoughts, knowledge. Just like the body is fattened up by food.

When you're about four or five years old you go play out in the street with your friends, you acquire further knowledge. You go to your particular church or school, you acquire further knowledge. And the more you grow up the more knowledge you receive. And the ego expands and expands until you believe you know something. When you believe you know something the ego has taken over completely and you become an ego.

So when some of us believe there must be an answer, or this is not the answer, there must be an answer to the riddle of life, we start to give ourselves further knowledge by reading books, searching out teachers, listening to lecturers and we receive further knowledge. It appears to help but it's fooling you. The appearance is a lie. You become intellectual, you're able to debate, you acquire more knowledge at university, you study philosophy and soon you become a walking encyclopaedia. You're now filled with knowledge, filled with relative knowledge, worldly knowledge. Has this done the world any good?

Look at the precarious condition the world is in. Has all the knowledge of lawyers, politicians, doctors, Indian chiefs done this world any good? Knowledge seems to be destroying this world not making it a better place in which to live. The great secret is we have to unlearn everything we've learnt if we wish to become free and liberated. No matter how many times I say this to you, you're still acquiring more knowledge, some of you.

Think of the books you read recently. The news you've watched on TV. The newspapers you read. Aren't you acquiring more and more knowledge? What is this knowledge doing for you? Expanding your ego and your ego grows and grows and encompasses the whole world, the whole universe. You have complete knowledge of the universe, of the world in which you live and you think this is going to free you.

Freedom comes when you're empty, when you know nothing. That's when you're free, completely absolutely free. Not when you accumulate knowledge yet you keep on doing it. And you will keep on doing it until life throws you around so much, that you'll get disgusted with this world and start searching for answers within yourself. Then you will know that you have to give up everything, not gain anything. You'll have to drop everything you ever learnt. Everything that you've learnt in school, in your travels. All of this must be given up if you want to be free, if you want to be liberated. Liberation is your very nature, your swarrupa. Absolute reality is what you really are. Pure awareness.

But it's emptiness. These things are totally empty of anything. Pure awareness, absolute reality does not carry any knowledge to it. It does not contain any bit of knowledge whatsoever. It is emptiness. Total absolute emptiness. Emptiness is what makes the universe comes to pass. It is out of the emptiness that the universe grows. Everything comes from nothing.

There is a story I tell you every once in a while about the boy who is going to the school on Advaita and the teacher is telling him, "Everything is nothing. Everything comes out of nothing, there is no creator, there is no creation. It's all nothingness." And the boy keeps telling the teacher, "I don't understand this please tell me more, explain it to me more. I do not comprehend what you're talking about." The teacher told the student, "Go out and get me a fig that's hanging on a fig tree outside." So the students obeyed obediently and he brought the teacher a fig. The teacher said, "Cut open the fig, what do you see?" The boy said, "I see seeds, tiny little seeds. Here is a razor blade open the seed and tell me what you see." He opened the seed with a razor blade, a little hard to do but inside the seed there was a hollow, nothing, emptiness and the teacher wisely said, "The emptiness that you see in the seed produces the fig tree. When you see emptiness within yourself you will then realize that the whole universe emanates out of your own mind, but the mind must be free and clear. The mind must be empty like the seed to realize this.

And so it is with us. We're all looking for freedom, for happiness, for fulfillment, for joy, but you are all of these things. You've always been all of these things. Nothing can stop you from being this. You can only stop yourself by accepting your limitations and the biggest limitation is that you were born as a person. You are consciousness, you're not a person, you have never been a person, even though you appear to be a person. You must find this out for yourself, by going deep within yourself and see that I'm telling you the truth.

Who are you? What are you? Never accept things as they are. Nothing is as it appears due to the fact that we live in a world of constant change. So nothing is ever the same. You're not the same person you were ten years ago, twenty years ago, you're a totally different person now. So where did you really come from? What is life all about?

There are valid answers to these questions but you have to discover them for yourself. You should not believe a word I'm saying to you. Find out for yourself.

You are the one with the answers, yet you keep reacting to life outside of yourself. You keep allowing the world to show you how you should feel. If the world shows you something nice and good you become happy. If it shows you something that is not nice or good you become miserable. Depending on your upbringing, what you believe is good, what you believe is bad. But yet nothing is good or bad but thinking makes it so. It is your mind that dictates to you and tells you that this is good or this is bad. It is your mind that tells you that this is right and this is wrong. Where did you mind get this knowledge? From experience. But is experience the truth? No. The experience is not the truth, it's just your training, how you grew up.

If you want to make this world a better world in which to live look within yourself and inquire, "Who lives? Who's world is this? To whom does this world belong?" Some of you are saying to yourself, "It belongs to God." How can it belong to God if you don't even know what God is? The word God is just a word that you've been trained to say. You picked up the word in your church, in your synagogue, in your mosque, in your temple, God. People kill for God, rape for God, murder for God, do all these dastardly things in the name of God, their God. My God is better than your God.

It's like a world full of kindergardeners, fighting with each other, killing each other, murdering each other. Trying to achieve success for ourselves or we step on somebody else. We're filled with fears, frustrations, most of us become psychopaths and we think we're living. You're not living until you know who you are, until you find out what you are. What you are doing now is vegetating.

Most of us are not satisfied with our lives and we try to improve our lives and what do we do we try to improve everything external to ourselves and this can never be done. We try to change our environment, meet certain people, do certain things and we think this will make us happy. But it only lasts for a short time doesn't it? And you're back to what you were before.

This world can never make you happy, it's impossible. It may appear to make you happy for a while because you're gaining something that you want. But it will only last a short time. True happy...true happiness comes from nothing. When your happiness arises from nothingness then you're really happy, because nothing made you happy and nothing can take it away. If something makes you happy then if something take it away you will be miserable. But if you learn to achieve happiness from nothing this is everlasting. It will never leave you because there is nothing to change.

The same is true for peace of mind. If you want peace of mind stop reacting to life's situations. Turn within to yourself. Nothing can keep you back from knowing yourself except you. Know yourself!

Who am I? Where did I come from? What is the cause of the I?

These questions must be pondered within yourself and inquired within the self over and over again. In all situations at all times. Do not think about what I'm saying to you. When you think about it you spoil it. Do not accept anything I'm saying to you. If you accept it there will be a fight within yourself. Your ego will fight you at every turn. So how are you to react to me? You're not to react to me at all. Listen to the words I speak to you. Just become still within yourself. Never attempt to analyze anything I say.

Empty yourself, and the truth of life will be revealed to you. Get rid of this extraneous knowledge and then you will know. Remember you do not know by acquiring knowledge, you know by getting rid of the knowledge. When you are empty you will know. As long as you are filled with knowledge then you will know relative knowledge of this world, but you will never know the truth of your existence, of who you are, where you came from. With all these things you have to be empty, not full.

You appear to have taken the body that you have because of karmic reasons. The body that you appear to have right now, you have created yourself. You have made this body and now you appear as it. If you do not like who you are or what you are, first realize that you have made the body for yourself, then understand that you are not the body. You have never been the body, even though you have appeared to have made it out of karma.

When I say you have made this body out of karmic substance, I mean every so-called cell of your existence appears to be under the laws and influences of karma, and everything you do has been preordained. Every step you take, every move you make, has been preordained. You're like a puppet on the strings being manipulated by the laws of karma. Therefore you appear to be not free at all. Now how do we get out of this trap?

The first thing we do is we surrender everything to the Self, everything. We do not try to analyze things and figure it out or try to come up with more knowledgeable facts about who we are or what we are. We surrender it all, we give it all up to the Self. We surrender everything to the Self, everything. Then we inquire, "Who am I? Who appears as this body? Where did this body come from? To whom does it come?" Then you say, "Why it comes to me. I feel this body. I feel hurt, sad, happy, depressed, peaceful. All these changes are going on within me." But then catch yourself and remember that you said, "I feel these things." Not you, but I. You are the imperishable Self that was never born and can never die. You are the absolute reality, Brahman, infinite bliss consciousness. This is what you are, but I is the ego.

Therefore you begin to follow the I to its source. For I is the first pronoun that you learnt when you're born. You say, "I, mine," that's what inflates the ego. Now you're going to reverse the situation. You are going to cause the I, the ego, to return to its source from whence it came which is pure awareness, sat-chit-ananda, the atma Brahman. The I causes everything to happen to you that's happened to you. You are the I, the ego I. Follow it, follow it to its source.

When the I goes into its source, it's completely swallowed up and your true nature emerges, all-pervading, all-encompassing. Whatever happens to you, wherever you go, whatever you do, practice self-inquiry. It doesn't matter where you are, whether you're in prison or a castle or market place, if you live in Egypt, wherever you live it doesn't matter. "Who am I?" should be asked of yourself twenty-four hours a day. "Where do I come from? What is my real nature? Who feels hurt? Who feels depressed? Who feels this way? Who feels that way? I do. Then who am I?"

So the important point to remember, do not acquire any more knowledge. For it sort of makes sense to you to realize the more knowledge you acquire the more your ego grows. That is what you're doing expanding your ego more and more and more.

Then some of you are saying, "If I do not acquire any knowledge then how am I going to make a living? Nobody will hire a dummy." See you're becoming judgmental. You're believing that unless you have relative knowledge that you can't get a job, you can't work on the contrary. When you let go of the relative knowledge there is a power that knows how to make mangoes grow on a mango tree, oranges grow on orange trees. The power that makes the grass grow. The power that makes the sun shine, the rain fall. That power will sustain you and maintain you of this I can assure you, when you let go of all the knowledge that you've had.

But as long as you're fearful to let go, then you have to fetch for yourself. It appears that you have to make your own life. But when you develop faith then you will realize that there is nothing in this world that can give me anything. Everything comes from within. All my needs are met from within. And you turn within more and more each day, surrendering everything and everybody. Then you will find that you're in the right place, going through those experiences that you're supposed to go through, totally happy, completely peaceful and all is well.

Let's practice this right now. Close your eyes. Free yourself of any...of all your preconceived ideas, your dogma, your feelings, everything. Feel yourself becoming perfectly empty. Feel all those years of karma loosening up. Feel how light you're becoming. You're breaking down the circumference of your body, as you begin to expand throughout the universe. Feel that you've got no shape, no circumference.

All the animals, all the plants, all of the people of the world are all within you and you keep on growing and growing until you feel all of the planets, the galaxy, all within you. Feel all of your Gods that you've always believed in, the heavenly bodies, the heavens, the hells, all of your beliefs are all within you. All within yourself. Surrender everything to the Self. Give up everything.

Feel how light you're becoming, how happy you're becoming by surrendering everything, that you have no life of your own any more. From now on consciousness will be your guide. You will never worry about anything again. You will never be concerned about anything again. For the power which knows the way is now active in your life.

Become aware of your respiration, as you inhale say, "I," as you exhale say, "am." I-am encompasses the entire universe. Your real nature is in I-am. With your breathing inhale, "I," exhale, "am." As you exhale feel the thousands of years of karma going out of you, you're blowing it out. You're inhaling the I-am, reality.

(silence as tape ends) [TOC]

WHATEVER YOU SEE IS THE SELF

25th February, 1993

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om, peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening.) I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you again. I love every one of you, unqualified. Just the way you are, for I love my Self. If I love my Self I have to love you because I love my Self. There is no difference. This means if you go out and rob a bank I'll still love you. It makes no difference what you do because I'm still seeing my Self. There is only one Self and you are that. Always remember this.

Whatever you see is the Self. There is nothing else. If you see something else you have problems. For you'll see the maya world closing in on you. Giving you all kinds of thoughts and feelings and ??? When you go to sleep you are devoid of all possessions and also the body. Yet strange as it may sound when you wake up you're happy. You say, "I slept well, I wish I could have some more sleep. It was a wonderful sleep I had." You would think that you would be unhappy for you are devoid of all of your possessions when you sleep. There is nothing, but you feel happy.

Compare this with the dream state. In the dream state if you're devoid of all your possessions you feel miserable. Especially your body, which means you're dead in the dream state. The same as this waking state, this reality here, right now. If you are devoid of possessions you feel miserable. You feel as if there is something missing. Yet of all three states sleeping, dreaming and waking the dream state is the only state in which you wake up happy. Yet you have nothing.

The conclusion we come to, is that happiness is inherent within the person and nothing to do with the world. By finding the Self you find happiness. Ponder this, think about this.

In the deep sleep state is the only state in which you find true happiness. So a Jnani or a Sage, is one who is consciously experiencing the dream state. Not a dream state, a deep sleep state. One who consciously experiences the deep sleep state. In other words there is nothing in the deep sleep state but the Self. And the Self becomes the Sage or the Jnani. And the way to get to that state is through experiencing the Self, as I-am.

This means that you must negate the world or what it appears. You must do self-inquiry or going deep within meditation negate the senses. Whatever you see, whatever you smell, whatever you taste, whatever you feel, whatever you hear, is false assumption. What you're really doing when you are identifying with the senses is you are seeing how you've been programmed since you were a little boy or girl. This is all the senses are programming.

You've been brought up to believe that this is good, this is bad, this is right, this is wrong, this is this way, this is that way, since you were a little person. And you grow up disliking this and disliking that, according to your programming. Everybody thinks something is right, something is wrong of their own making. So you have to deprogram yourself by leaving the world alone.

This is a strange thing for me to say to leave the world alone because we're always involved in the world, but yet this is exactly what we must do. Remember the only thing going for you is your programming. You've been programmed. In other words everything you see, taste, touch, hear and smell are erroneous it's not the truth, it's not reality. Yet most of us identify with these things and make it our reality. We become depressed, we become anxious, we become upset, we become angry, we become happy, we become this way and we become that way by what our senses tell us is real. And our programming that tells us this is right this is wrong and this is what is keeping us back from self-realization.

And I can share these things with you over and over again for many years. Certain people are set in their ways, and it's very very difficult to break it up. To break up the programming, because they refuse to let go. Going smoothly simply means, things are going your way. Things are going the way you think they should go. Then something happens you lose your job, there is a death in the family, your house burns down, your car is stolen. What do you become then? Are you in control? Do you remember it's all a dream? And in truth you cannot lose anything or gain anything? Whether you react violently or you react with malice? Be honest with yourself, see what's going on. See what is really going on with your life.

You have your ideas what is right, what is wrong, what is good, what is bad and you don't want your world to shake up. You want the world to continue the way it's going the way you think it should go. If anyone comes along and shakes up your world you become totally upset. How can a being like that become self-realized? Awakened? When the world of maya presses them down.

As I mentioned before happiness is your swarrupa, your reality. And you have a taste of it in a deep sleep stage, when you are in deep sleep and you wake up you feel happy. But then you go through the day, you go through various situations and you go through the vicissitudes of the day, catch yourself and see how you react to things. See how many times a day you become angry, mad, upset over something. It's all going to change in any event, no matter what you do. Everything must change, yet you are going along with the way things are in this world. As if the world were real. You keep forgetting it's a dream. You keep forgetting it's all maya. You keep forgetting it's God's leela. It's all a cosmic joke. Yet you take it seriously. And I tell you, you can never awaken when you take this world seriously, it's impossible. All you're doing is accruing more karma. Ponder this, this is very important.

Every time the world shakes you up, you feel something has happened not to your liking, you're accruing karma. You have to be aware of these points all of the time.

Point number one: This world is a dream, just like the dream I dream at night. Everything in this world is karmic. Nothing is real. So I will never again allow this world to dictate to me what is right, what is wrong, what is good, what is bad.

Point number two: My nature is divine. I am not the body nor this world nor have I got anything to do with this world or this body. The body goes through its own karma, it takes care of itself, does whatever it's supposed to do. It has absolutely nothing to do with me.

Point number three: Everything I observe in this world is myself, nothing else. I only see myself wherever I look. Whatever I'm involved in. I see myself and nothing else.

Point number four: In order to transcend this world and become totally free, I have to somehow awaken from this mortal dream. And I can only do this by becoming non-judgmental, peaceful within myself, looking at this world like a moving picture, in all kinds of scenes in a movie. I know I'm not affected by these things, by the things of this world or any other world.

Point number five: I-am the substratum of all existence. I-am the screen in which the movie is being shown. I-am the director and producer of the movie. I-am also the actor. I play all of the parts. Therefore I will never again become confused in the picture or the screen.

You should ponder these things every morning when you get out of bed, when you first wake up. Become aware of this. Do not turn on the television and watch the news, or read the newspapers, because this will confound you and confuse you totally. It's the same old thing always going on in this world, so we get involved in those things. You profess to be a student of truth. You want to become free and liberated in this life. Yet what are you doing about it. You can't live the same old life and expect to be liberated. Changes have to be made within yourself. And it is up to you to make these changes, nobody can do it for you. You have to do it yourself. You have to see where the years have put you in this world. What your situation is, what you're going through, and transcend the whole thing. There is no other way. The whole ball-game is yours.

You have the freedom to accept your reality, by letting go of everything else, or you have the freedom to want everything else, and let go of reality. This is the only freedom we've got. Everything else is preordained, predestined. So when anybody asked me, "Is everything predestined, preordained?" I say, "Yes and no." For the average person it is. The person who is walking around reacting to everything in life or is judgmental. To that person everything is preordained. But to the person who is truly working on themselves by not allowing conditions to upset them, situations to come upon them make them judgmental, that person is working for their freedom. And little by little they chip away their karmic blocks, the samskaras, until they become totally free and liberated.

You appear to come into this world alone and you appear as if you're going to leave this world alone. All the things that have upset you or made you happy, you can't take those things with you. All the things you've accumulated, your furniture, your houses, your cars. Everything has to be left behind. Your hopes, your dreams, all left behind. And where you go is determined by what you're doing right now. What's important to you? Be honest with yourself. For some people it's important to worry, to fear, become upset. To look at the shady side of life and believe something terrible is always happening. Everybody is different, but you make your own life by what you allow yourself to think and believe. Thoughts are things. Whatever you ponder, whatever you identify with becomes your reality sooner or later.

Why not ponder I-am continuously. Why not ponder pure awareness, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda. There is an old saying that says, "Think of God and God will think of you." Which simply means, think of your higher Self and you will become what you think about, your higher Self.

But if you get mixed up in this world and you think of worldly things, what do think happens to you. You become a worldly person that worries, upsets herself, himself, who gets into all types of mischief, troubles, the choice is always yours. There is one reality, one Self, one principle, one consciousness and you are that. Why will you not accept this? Open your heart to it.

You are not alone. As soon as you begin to think of your higher Self, the higher Self begins to think of you. Happiness is your reality. Peace is your true Self. You've got it, it's where you are right now. Awaken to it. But you must leave your world alone. Stop trying to change things or people or situations. Remember this is what keeps you back from your self-realization.

Do not try to figure people out or analyze conditions, situations. You cannot do this, it's too complicated. This is why it is written in all the great books, leave everything alone. Leave people alone, leave the world alone. Remember there is nothing to fear and there is nothing to fight. You are carried along in a stream of blessedness to your highest good. Everything is on your side. There is nothing against you you know. There is no one or nothing trying to hurt you. You do not have to defend yourself against anyone or anything, because there is nothing trying to hurt you.

Every situation that comes into your life is necessary at this time, everything. If you look at everybody and everything as God you'll be on your right track. Look at every situation, every condition as Brahman.

If there is only Brahman, and there is only Brahman, how can there be mistakes somewhere. How can people make a mistake? See what I'm saying? There is only the one, and that one is all-pervading, omnipresent, perfection, love, happiness, joy, that one is you. You are the one.

So when you react negatively to a situation, you can call it blasphemy. For you're saying that God doesn't know what he's doing. That somehow consciousness has made a mistake someplace and you have to correct it, what nonsense. Yet most of us are doing these things everyday. Thinking that it's up to us to straighten something out, up to us to correct somebody, it's up to us to fix things. These things that you're trying to correct and fix have been going on since the beginning of time, when the illusory universe first appeared. It's all God's leela. The sport of God, it's a joke and you're taking it seriously.

Is there any wonder that you're feelings are always hurt. That you become angry everyday over some situation that is a trifle or nonsense, for you refuse to understand your divinity. You're looking at yourself as a mortal being who has to go out into this world and fight for survival. It's a lie, it's not the truth.

This is what you should focus on day and night, and the best way to work on yourself is through self-inquiry. It encompasses all these things we're talking about. But it's up to you to do it and keep doing it day and night without stopping. Whatever comes to you, whatever you see everyday, whether it's a trifle or it's a serious thing, you have to inquire, "To whom does this come? Who feels this? Who sees this?" I know it's hard for some of you to do this and this is because you're not practicing the little things.

If you keep practicing the little things first, then when a so-called big catastrophe comes along, you'll be able to handle it beautifully. You'll simply say, "To whom does this come? To me, the ego, the I. I am free of it completely," and be able to shrug it off and walk away in complete peace. But if you're not practicing this, then when a so-called catastrophe comes along in your life, you will become violently upset over it, depressed, mad.

It's like when you're going to die and leave your body. What you occupy your mind with when you die is that's where you're going to go. So some of you say, "Well I'm going to occupy my mind with Brahman, when I die I want to go straight to Brahman." Of course it doesn't work this way. Because if you have not been practicing previously to death, so-called, you will not be able to do it. When mr death comes to pay you a call, you will be in total fear. You will not be able to think straight. This is why it's so important to practice now. It makes you stronger, in control.

Practice "Who am I?" constantly, continuously. "Who is this I that has this problem, this fear, this frustration? Where did the I come from?" As you keep separating yourself from the I daily, continuously soon you will not have to voice these things. It will be automatic. Whatever situation unveils itself, you will not say anything you will just look at it and smile and not be involved in it whatsoever. You will have risen to a higher consciousness, just by smiling at the condition, the situation. But if you are not practicing, then when a situation confronts you'll get angry, mad, upset, depressed and the rest.

So this world of maya is yours to play with as you wish. You can take control of it or it can take control of you. It's your choice. If you do not wish this maya world to take control of you, then you have to get out of it as fast as you can. Again you get out of it by not reacting to conditions to people to places to things and inquiring, "To whom do these things come? Who is feeling this? Who is...to whom does this come? To me. Who is me? Who is I? Where did I come from?" You keep doing this without looking to time and space and anything else. Just keep doing it. Try and make yourself happy everyday, laugh at yourself.

Sit in the silence by yourself as much as you can. When you sit in the silence do not think about the world and conditionings, just sit. Observe your thoughts in your mind. Observe your feelings.

You are a product right now from the conditioning you had since you were little. That is what you're experiencing right this moment, nothing else. Most of us believe we've got our own thoughts, we can think. We can make decisions, but that is not true. You're totally programmed, mesmerized, hypnotized. You have many false beliefs inside of you, waiting to come out at the first opportunity you give them. They're like dormant seeds waiting to sprout. Yet you've got all the ammunition that you need to get rid of all of these things if you will but use it.

You have self-inquiry to work with. You can become the witness to your thoughts and emotions. You can realize the world is maya and not identify with its conditionings. You can know that your body is also maya and not react to it. You have all those wonderful tools in which to work. You are free, totally and absolutely free. You are boundless, pure awareness right now. The old you is melting away. All your fears and frustrations of the past are gone. You have lifted yourself to a higher vibration. The things that used to bother you, annoy you, are now gone totally and completely. You're awake and all is well.

SY: Robert I have a question. (R: Umm.) Is there a reason why you've chosen twelve to three and six to nine to meditate for a specific reason? Or is that just the time that you meditate in? Thinking that we should all be meditating at the same time?

R: It's really just the same when I meditate. I don't really meditate I just sit in the silence. (SY: So it doesn't matter really, any time?) Well the time that you do it with me, you'll get more out of it. You're doing when I'm doing it. Because there is oneness, a feeling of oneness, a feeling of light, of energy that permeates all of the devotees, same as that at this time. (SY: That's a lot of hours.) You don't have to do it at exactly at the same time. I mean you could do it for an hour if you like, a half hour, or whatever is convenient for you. But if you have to do it, do it at a time that I have allocated and time in-between as from twelve to one. You can start off small, you can start off doing it for fifteen minutes perhaps, twenty minutes and as you feel the energy you can increase it. Things will begin to happen for you.

Many people tell me from Europe, Asia, United States, who are sitting at those hours, they feel powerful energy and they've changed in their lives. Things have changed for better for them. I hear all kinds of stories about this. Try doing it at that time. If you're beginning to do this for the first time, like I say, you don't have to sit for all those hours, you can sit for twenty minutes for a half hour. Whatever is convenient for you, whatever feels right for you. When you get up you forget all about it. Do not think of it any longer. You get to see things differently, feel differently, feel happier and more peaceful. But again you've got to take the effort to do it.

SY: You know it's funny I seem to be able to get inspired to do it and then this terrible thing, it's too warm in bed and...oh no.

R: Do it in bed. (SY: Really?) Sure. (ST: Under the covers.) (laughter) Why not? Begin by doing it in bed and things will change, then you get out of bed. You will find that it's so refreshing that you will get out of bed and sit in a chair. But start wherever you desire. (SY: Well I was told one time that it was much better to sit up to get your spine in an upright position.) Well this is in the beginning of meditation when people first start to meditate, but you don't really have to do that. Not what you're learning here, not for Jnana or Advaita. If you're practicing different forms of yoga what you're saying is correct. You have to sit a certain way, a certain posture. But this is not yoga. This is Advaita, it's different. Try you'll like it. (SY: Thank you.)

Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself for God dwells in you as you, peace.

Time for prashad...

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 227

“WHO AM I?”

28th February, 1993

Robert: Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again.

The question arises, "Who am I? What am I doing here?" If you investigate deeply within yourself you will find there is longing within yourself for the Self, to know who you really are. To understand who you are, what you are. This longing is in every human being, this longing for the Self. When this longing is deep enough, you gravitate or you attract to yourself a living teacher who is really your Self. There is only one Self. I am your Self. You have created me out of yourself. I didn't just happen along, I didn't just appear, you have made me what I am today. You've created me, you've made me and here I am.

The only thing I can give you is love. This is all I'm capable of being, love. This is why when I say, "I love you with all my heart," I really mean this, I can't help it. Sometimes it's so hard to love certain people but I have to love I can't help it. No matter what you may do, wherever you go, whatever you are, whatever you think, I love you just the way you are, unqualified. Love, that is all there is.

If you can only learn to love enough, if you can turn within yourself and love yourself with all your heart, with all your might, with all your being, then when you look at the world you will see yourself. For isn't that what you're seeing right now?

You're only seeing yourself when you look at this world. You believe you're seeing something else, but you're not. You believe you see trees, people, sky, mountains, rain. You're only seeing yourself. Whatever you think of certain people, whenever you look at people, whatever conclusion you come to about people it's your self you're talking about. This is the first metaphysical principle of Advaita Vedanta. There is only one Self and you are that! So how can you possibly see something else. Ponder this. Think about this.

The one Self, the only Self, the absolute reality, consciousness, that self is active within you. When I say, "Active within you," I mean there is no real you the way you appear. There is only the Self appearing as you. In other words there is not the body and you, there is no body. There is only you, the one. If we appear to see bodies, this is like a dream, hallucination. They seem real enough and we react to them, but if we can hold onto the first premise that there is only one Self and I am that, then you'll be careful what you say to another person.

You'll be careful how you look at another person, what you think of them, how you judge them. For in truth you're judging yourself. There is only you. The whole world emanates from you. You have created this world out of yourself. Where else would it come from? It just didn't appear out of nowhere. You have created this universe out of yourself and who you are.

Do you like your creation? Do you enjoy what you've made?

If you see something wrong anywhere you have to go deeper within yourself and find out who sees this thing that is wrong. Where did it come from? Did it just appear out of nowhere? Does somebody else have power to create situations, conditions? You are the only power. This is something you have to ponder deeply, to really understand. There is nothing going on without your consent. To react to a condition is pure ignorance. For there are no conditions there is only the Self and you are that.

When people become pure enough this way, and they get to understand what I just said and ponder it day and night and think about it. They will be attracted to the right teacher, to the right books, to the right situations, where you can go further and realize that you are the only one that exists. Noone but you. You are the one.

Ponder this.

A question that I'm most often asked, "How can I tell if I'm making spiritual progress? Is there a sign? How can I know if I'm making spiritual progress on this path?"

The answer is very simple. When you look at the world what do you see?

Do you see the same world you saw five years ago? If your habits haven't changed. Your judgmental-ism hasn't changed, your ego hasn't changed, your anger hasn't changed, this really means you're not doing anything. Not practicing anything and you will see the things that you are, outside of yourself. But, if you're feeling more peace, more harmony, when there is strife going on, so-to-speak, you look right through it and you see harmony. You no longer are judgmental towards anybody or anything. Right and wrong, good and bad, up and down, forward and backward are all illusory to you, then you know you're making progress, things are happening. Only you can save yourself.

Remember you do not know how much time you have left in this world, in your body, so-to-speak. You never know when you're going to give up your body. What are you doing with your time? Do you waste it by worrying over nonsense or trying to change person, place or thing, or trying to get your own way, manipulation? You're only fooling yourself. You must try your best to let go of this world, if you want to make spiritual progress.

By letting go of this world I don't mean you have to go live in a cave and ignore everybody, I mean mentally. This all begins mentally. You have to mentally make the correction within yourself.

As an example: You go to a school room and you look through the window in a school and you see a teacher adding on the blackboard, two times two is five. That's the wrong answer. You have no right to go into the school and beat up the teacher. I guess that's what they do now. You can go to the teacher and become angry at the teacher and scream at her and say, "Look what you're writing down, two times two is five, this is wrong!" Of course in her words, she is just trying to show the class. You really don't know what's going on, you're seeing a partial picture and you're judging by the partial picture. But your duty is to make the correction mentally. You see the difference? Mentally you're saying to yourself, "Two times two is four, not five!" And once you've made the correction you're finished with it. That is how you should live in this world.

When you see disharmony, man's inhumanity to man, wars, all the nonsensical things going on in this world, you mentally change it, by knowing the truth about these things. The truth is there is only Brahman, there is only the absolute reality and you are that absolute reality. There is only the one and you are that one.

As you begin to do this day after day, make mental corrections, the day comes when you no longer have to do this, for you now live in a higher consciousness, where there is no disharmony, no confusion, no chaos. You have lifted yourself up to a higher plateau. Even when I say there is no confusion, no chaos, no disharmony, I'm not saying it will stop being like that in this world. This world will never change, this world is the world that we see.

This world goes through certain universal karma and it has absolutely nothing to do with you. This is why you learn to leave the world alone. You learn to leave people alone. You learn to leave yourself alone. It all starts within yourself.

If you're not satisfied with yourself, if you do not love yourself, how can you possibly love other people? Or be satisfied with other people? You will always find fault. That fault comes from a deep dissatisfaction, probably since you were a kid.

How do you remedy this? By staying the mind on God, on Brahman, on consciousness.

How do you do this?

By inquiring, "To whom does this come? Who sees these things? Where do these things come from? Where does everything come from? Where do I come from? Where does the sky come from? Where do the trees come from?"

If you do this often enough, you will be taking a step backward from this creation. You will become the screen, the screen of life, on which these images project themselves. But you always remember that you are the screen and you're not the images. You will be able to observe the images and smile. You'll see all the images fighting with each other, shooting each other, killing each other, being happy sometimes, being sad sometimes, going through all kinds of experiences. But you will smile and you will not identify with these things anymore. You have risen. You have risen to that place where there is only the screen.

The screen in this instance is boundless space. Boundless space when you look all around you, you see air. It's nice to see the air, and you say this in the air. But it goes further than air, it's boundless space. Boundless space is the screen of life, consciousness. And everything that you see with your eyes or with your senses is a superimposition on boundless space.

In other words boundless space is like the book without the print. When the print is on the book you forget about the boundless space you forget about the white pages in the book. You now focus on the images which is the print. The print is not reality, the print is an effect. Reality are the white pages or the boundless space or the screen. You must ponder these things day and night.

When you ask yourself, "Who am I?" The picture of boundless space will come into your vision, the screen. And one day you will discover that you're not this world at all, for this world does not exist at all. It never existed it has no validity. Where did it come from? How did it begin if it just appeared like a dream? In the dream you don't have a beginning, the world just begins at any place, any spot. The dream just is, there is no beginning to a dream. And so it is, there is no beginning to this world. This world has no beginning it never began. It came out of you because you are consciousness. You are pure awareness. Anything that exists came out of you so-to-speak.

When you begin to inquire, "Who am I?" you're pulling it back in. The more you inquire, "Who am I?" The more you pull the whole universe back in within yourself. You are the one. There is no one but you.

So you can see how foolish it is to become angry over something, to judge something, to think something is good, something is bad, something is right, something is wrong. You are supposedly truth students. Students of the highest truth. You can never get anywhere by judging this world, by coming to conclusions, by taking sides, by feeling angry. All it does is keep you back into humanhood, pushes you back into humanhood, thousands of years back.

Yet, sooner or later you will find yourself. We're all hell bound for heaven, so-to-speak. But take a look at what you do with your life everyday. Catch yourself, watch yourself. You have to become very diligent. Watch your thoughts everyday. Watch your actions, observe yourself in action, observe what you do. Observe what is important to you. Where your mind is most of the time. Are you feeling sorry for yourself? Do you feel depressed, discouraged about something? How can you?

When you realize that you are a God, how can a God become discouraged or disappointed? You must always look at yourself as a God. You're not a human being with problems. It's not really you. You are Brahman, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda. You have to feel this in your bones. You must keep going deeper and deeper and deeper.

Never let a day go by that you do not think about these things. There is an adage, if you think about God, God will think about you. This is true, if you think about reality, reality will think of you. But if you sink to the lower depths of society and think about all confusion and nonsense what do you expect? That'll think of you. That will become your teacher and guru. It's your choice.

This is the only freedom you've got remember, everything else is preordained. Everything else has been mapped out. If you would only be aware of this why would you worry about anything? And realize everything is karmic that you see. Under the laws of Ishvara, the God of karma, there is really nothing wrong and nothing right. Things are just the way they're supposed to be.

Now can you see what I mean when I say, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should?" Everything is in its right place just the way it's supposed to be. There is no mistakes. If you don't like the way things are then go have a talk with Ishvara, tell Ishvara your troubles. But when you start to flow with the universe instead of fighting it, not trying to change things to make them your way, you will find that all is well. Very well indeed.

So the only freedom you've got is to make a choice. Whom shall I follow this day, God or mammon? Who the heck is mammon? You have this choice to go toward freedom or go in the other direction. This is the only freedom we've got. We have no other freedom. So be happy.

It's now time to play stump the guru. Do we have any stumpers?

SM: Nothing. (R: No stumpers?) No stumpers Robert.

R: Well the guru wins again. (students laugh) Anything you like to say or add on or talk or ask?

SR: There is no sense in trying to stump you because you wiggle out of everything. (students and Robert laugh) It's like I stumped you right? What's the prize I get for stumping you?

R: You get a cookie.

SR: Yeah magic cookies?

R: We'll see.

Anyone like to read? Ed will read from the Ashtravakra Gita?

(Ed reads)

R: Well thank you for coming. Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, for God dwells in you as you, peace.

Go forth and multiply.

(students laugh as tape ends) [TOC]

TAKING REFUGE IN CONSCIOUSNESS

4th March, 1993

Robert: Good evening. Welcome. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. I love every one of you unconditionally.

When I say, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should," I mean that literally. If you understand the nature of the universe, you would realize there's no time or space. It doesn't exist except for the ego. If there is no time or space then what appears to exist is the one source appearing as, person, place or thing. As we get deeper into this, we realize that person, place or thing never existed and does not exist at all. Only the one source exists, which is called nothing, Brahman, sat-chit-ananda, nirvana. Consequently, all is well. For the one source is the ultimate reality, the absolute reality. It is bliss consciousness. This is why when I say, "All is well," I take it literally.

I'm not saying that you're suffering and all is well, or there is something wrong and all is well. I'm saying, "All is well irrespective of what's going on." All is extremely well because all is really God, the ultimate reality, the oneness. Now what you're seeing is your own business. What appears to you is a product of your own mind, your own imagination. And we grow up a certain way, brainwashed by society, by our schools, by our churches, by our parents, thinking this is right, this is wrong, this is good, this is bad, this is up, this is down. And we get further pulled into the illusion as we grow older and we see the world and all of its ramifications and we go through the vicissitudes of life. All of these appearances seem so real to us, and we react to them. Consequently, whenever we react to something, we expand the experience, karma increases and we become further deluded.

So you should ponder carefully these words, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should." After all who makes a mistake? If you have your eye on the Infinite, and you have taken refuge in consciousness, for whom is there a mistake? Where is the error? There isn't any. This is why sometimes I continue that statement and I say, "No mistakes have been made, no mistakes were ever be made and no mistakes will ever be made." For where would they come from? If there's one principle, one consciousness, one absolute reality? Is there room for anything else? The absolute reality is self-contained consciousness. There could be nothing else but that.

It is only when you begin to think, that the problems begin. You have preconceived ideas of life, what it's all about. When you begin to think, you're thinking in time and space. Time and space exist for you so you can think. But in the absolute sense it does not exist. And there's no room for you to think.

It's like having a room full of furniture and bringing more furniture in and more furniture in until the whole room is cluttered with furniture. There's no room for anything. But what happened to the space? Did the space disappear? The space never went anywhere. Even though the room is filled with furniture the space still exists, except it appears to be cluttered with furniture.

And so it is with your mind, so-called mind. You have all these thoughts, feelings, emotions, that's all the furniture. But all of your feelings, emotions and thoughts rest in space, in boundless space. The boundless space rests in consciousness. Therefore everything returns to the source, the one primary source, the absolute reality. Ponder this, this is very important.

There is absolutely nothing in this world that can rise up against you if you understand who you are! It is only when you believe that you are human, when you believe you are a body and a mind, then and only then do you begin to have problems, as it were. But if you stop thinking, if you allow yourself not to think, where are the problems? The problems are in the thoughts. Your body is in your thoughts. Your experiences are in your thoughts. Where else would they be? And ultimately the thoughts do not exist. There are no thoughts. There is no mind. So you're playing games with yourself. This is God's divine leela, the play of consciousness. And we all get sucked into it, putting on all kinds of emotions, feelings, thoughts when you become agitated, insulted, hurt.

This is why as students of Advaita, you must inquire within yourself, "To whom does this come? Who is seeing all this? Who's feeling all this? Who's experiencing all of this? Where does it all come from?" Ask yourself!

All the answers are within you. Everything you're looking for is within you. You've got it all. But yet you refuse to go within yourself. Instead you go outside of yourself reacting to external conditions. You allow this world to show you a certain thing and then you react to it!

As long as you think you're a body and a mind, then you can accept the fact that everything is unfolding as it should. Everything is in its right place. In other words, that which is happening is supposed to happen and whatever you do to try to stop it, you can't do it. That which is not happening is not supposed to happen and no matter how you try to make it happen it'll never happen. Be resigned to this.

Consequently, what to do? Take refuge in consciousness! This is the only liberty you've got. Take refuge in consciousness! Or in Buddhism they say, "Take refuge in the Buddha," same thing. The Buddha is consciousness. The Buddha is pure awareness.

What I'm saying is this, instead of thinking to remedy this world, to make this world a better place in which to live, to straighten people out, to make things go the way you think they should go, rather than do all these things, turn within and take refuge in consciousness. If you can really do this, you become the witness consciousness. You become the witness to what's going on without reacting to it, and you're at peace. And if you do not react to things, they change. They disappear from your life. For they were never real to begin with.

I hope you can hear what I'm saying?

The only solution for your salvation is to take refuge in consciousness, the one reality. And if you can do this, you can say you're a Jnani. That's all you have to do.

There are virtually thousands of Jnanis in the world today who profess to be Jnanis, but they're really a knower of words. They have read many books, memorized many cliches, have sat at the feet of many teachers, and then profess to be a Jnani. But I'll give you one little test to see if you're a Jnani, one simple test. What have you been thinking about all day long? Have you been thinking about your attachments, your health, your finances, the world, conditions? That's it. This shows you where you're at.

What is the nature of a true Jnani? A true Jnani rests in the silence.

There is no reaction to person, place or thing. To most people, a true Jnani seems to be a fool. For they never defend themselves. They never react to anybody or anything. And they just go on with their business, which is no business. When most of us see a Jnani, he may look like an ordinary person. He may have habits you don't like. He may do things that you think are wrong. What you should do in a case like that, is to go within yourself and ask yourself, "Who am I?" Discover your true nature, that's your job. That's the only reason you came to this earth. To find your Self. You were really never lost, but you think you were. So now you have to find your Self because you think you're lost, imagine that!

How do you tell if you're lost? Again, things annoy you, things bother you, you react to situations, and the world hurts you. Then you're lost. Because you're trying to make yourself a better life externally, and you can't do this. Remember what I said before? What is supposed to happen is going to happen whether you like it or not, and you will never be able to stop it. What's not supposed to happen will not happen, even though you try to make it happen, you will not be able to.

The world appears very confusing and a spiritual adept leaves the world alone. They do not accept the confusion of this world no matter what it shows them, no matter what appears to be going on. We see wars all around us, man's inhumanity to man, these dastardly conditions going on all over the world. How are we to react to these things?

I can't tell you how to react to these things, because you're going to react to these things determined by your level of consciousness, where you're coming from. So I cannot tell you not to react to these things you will react to these things, again, depending on where you're coming from in consciousness, what you really know, where you're at. It's all going on within yourself. Nothing is going on outside of yourself. It's all happening within you! The good, the bad and the ugly, are all going on within you. You look out of your eyes and what do you see? You see your-self. What else can you see? (laughs)

Believe me when I tell you this, you cannot see anything but yourself! And some of you will say, "What? How can you say that? All these terrible things happening in this world, in my life? I don't want these things to happen!" Sure, consciously you don't want them to happen, but where you are at right now, you're causing them to happen. Otherwise, where would they come from? If they didn't come out of you, then you are saying there are two conditions. There is me and there's the external condition going on outside of me. You know by now this is all duality. And you know duality does not exist.

Therefore, you can only come to one conclusion, that everything I see is part of me. Not only part of me, it is me! I see myself wherever I look. "If I don't like what I see," the intelligent student says, "I'm not going to fight the world and try to improve it because it won't happen. It may appear to happen for a while, but it will come up somewhere else. So I'll turn within myself and try to lift myself to a higher state of consciousness. Then again, wherever I look I will see myself. But this time, instead of seeing the good, the bad and the ugly, I will see harmony in the midst of all confusion. I will see love in the midst of all hatred. I will see happiness in the midst of all sadness."

You're not trying to psyche yourself out and imagine that bad things do not exist. No, that's not what you're trying to do at all. You're trying to know the truth about yourself. The truth about yourself is, "I am not the body or the mind phenomena. If I am not the body or the mind phenomena, then I cannot be the external world, for the external world is an extension of my body-mind. Consequently, I turn within myself. I dive deeper within myself, until I begin to feel the bliss, the joy."

There's nothing to change. Do not you think that you have to change yourself, because this will keep you back. There is no self wrong that you have to change. You just have to awaken to the truth, that's it. Awaken to the truth.

Do not play mind games with yourself. Trying to change bad for good, wrong to right, hate to love. These are all mind games. They're both opposites. They do not exist. You want to awaken to the truth. And you can do this by becoming the witness consciousness or practicing self-inquiry or surrendering taking complete refuge in the Self. There are so many methods that you can use to do this. But are you doing this or are you just coming here to be entertained?

There has to come a time in your life when you start working on yourself. I know that there are certain Jnanis in this world who tell you, "You don't have to work on yourself, there's nothing you have to do." In the ultimate reality this is true, because who does what to whom? But you cannot fool yourself into becoming a false Jnani, as I mentioned before, by saying to yourself, "I don't have to do anything. I'm already enlightened." You can immediately disprove this to yourself because if you're already enlightened, why do you feel hurt? Why do you have thoughts that you react to, conditions that you react to?

This will show you're fooling yourself. So, you develop humility — that's a hard one for some of you. Let go of the arrogance, the cynicism. Develop some humility. When you begin to develop humility, then the hard core stuff begins to melt away, that you've had for years and years and years. It begins to dissolve, to disappear. And you don't have to make a ridiculous statement like, "I'm already awake. I'm already self-realized." If you were, you wouldn't say it! For there would be nothing to say!

As you work on yourself this way, as you become the witness consciousness or surrendering to the Self or self-inquiry, you will notice within yourself that you're becoming more peaceful all the time. The thoughts come less and less. You become less vulnerable, less hurt-able. And then you do awaken one day. Yes, you will awaken one day. You have to awaken one day because the truth is you're already awake. This is the truth about you even though you don't know it. There are no hindrances except the ones that you impose upon yourself. There's absolutely nothing that can hurt you except the hurts that you impose upon yourself.

Look at yourself intelligently. Do not fool yourself into believing that you are something that you are not. If you are not a Jnani, you are also not a human being. They're both wrong. Therefore, what are you? Find out! Find out if you are something at all. Remember, as I often tell you, do not try to accumulate more knowledge. Rather, empty yourself out of the knowledge that you already have. It is knowledge that you have that's keeping you back from your self-realization. Ponder this!

It is all your beliefs, your preconceived ideas, your concepts. And every time you read a book, you add on more and more concepts. You learn more words. You become a knower of words. Whereas, the truth is in reverse. You have to know less and less words. You have to do less and less reading, less and less debating, less and less arguing. It all has to go!

In the human world, the best debater wins the contest. If you ever went to school and were on the debating team, the better the debater you are, the bigger the hero you are in the eyes of men. But in the spiritual world it's completely opposite. The more of a fool you are, the greater your spiritual knowledge. I'm speaking of course, being a fool in the eyes of men, in the eyes of the world. (pause)

Ask any questions.

SR: Robert, what can we do to encourage the Self to envelope us more? (R: To encourage yourself to do what?) What can we do to encourage the Self to envelope us more?

R: Who has to encourage whom? (SR: Excuse me?) Who has to encourage whom? What can you do to encourage the Self? The Self doesn't need any encouraging. You can't encourage the Self at all. You just have to let go. Stop your mind from being so active. Become still. You have nothing to do with the Self, per-se, by encouraging it, trying to make anything happen to it. The Self is the Self. It's like saying, "What do we have to do to fill up all of the air of the universe," which you mention.

The air exists. The Self exists like the air. You're already that. So you have to remove the thoughts that tell you otherwise. By not getting into debates or hot gossip or trying to make things happen, because whatever is supposed to happen will happen. By leaving everything alone, by turning within instead of without, by trying to see what is stopping you in experiencing your true Self. Be honest with yourself. See what is stopping you. Is it your emotions, your anger, your reaction to life? And surrender those things to the Self. Every day keep letting go more and more of all of the stuff that you're going to relieve. Empty yourself out totally and completely, just like a garbage pail. Empty the garbage. Begin to have more faith in the power that knows the way.

When you get up in the morning do not turn on the television or the radio or read newspapers or drink a cup of coffee, turn around and look, look deep, inquire, "Who am I? What is this body? Where did it come from? What are my thoughts? Where do my thoughts come from?" Inquire, dive deep within and everything will take care of itself. But what we call the Self doesn't need any encouragement from anybody. It just is, like the air, like boundless space.

Try to be still most of the time. Try not to get into heated discussions, heated debates about anything. The mind always wants accomplish something, wants to do something, wants to be the doer. Discourage the mind by becoming the witness to its actions. Learn to be by yourself more, leave the world alone. Do not have any opinions for or against and everything will take care of itself.

(pause)

Thank you for coming. Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you.

(End) [TOC]

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

7th March, 1993

Robert: Om. Shanti, Shanti, Shanti, Om. Good Afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good being with you again. I love every one of you, unqualified, just the way you are.

People still inquire and they ask me, very often, "Robert, is the world really real or is it an illusion?" Now the answer I give is dependent on who is asking the question. It isn't an easy answer to give. Those of us who are well read in Advaita Vedanta can give these flip answers that the world is an illusion, only Brahman is real. Everything else doesn't exist. This may be true in the ultimate reality, but as far as we're concerned in our every day experiences, the world is as real as you make it.

Always remember, you are the creator of the world. The world that you see is a creation of yourself. All that you're involved in, the circumstances in your life, the vicissitudes you go through every day, are a result of what you are, nothing more, nothing less. So, if you feel your attachments, if you feel the world pressing down on you, if you feel something is wrong some place, then the world is real! It's real to you! So I would not say it's not real. This would be giving you the wrong advice. The world is real as long as you feel it. But what I will tell you to do is to go within and ask, "Who sees the world the way it is? To whom does this world come to? Who is the seer? Who observes the world this way?" Of course you do. But who are you who sees the world the way it is?

The world becomes illusory only to the person who has transcended the self, the personal self, the ego self. Then the world is only images, like the images on the screen. People are not involved in the screen, they're involved with the images. They know nothing about the screen, they see the images on the screen. Without the screen, the images would be destroyed. The images would be bent out of shape. But with the screen you've got a perfect image. So it is with the world unconsciousness.

Your true Self is consciousness but you don't know it. The whole universe is consciousness, but you don't know it. You identify with the images. Your body appears to be an image also, but you think it's real. Your thoughts appear good and real to you. The thoughts appear very valid. Your reasoning is very valid. Therefore, the world is real to you. And you have to go through experiences in this world, good experiences, bad experiences, as long as you think it's real.

Now I'm not speaking of belief. You can believe one thing and feel another thing. For instance, you can believe the world is real and you can believe the world is illusory. It doesn't make any difference what you believe. What matters is what you are.

This is an important point to ponder. What you are determines what this world is for you! Not what you believe. It doesn't make any difference what you believe. Belief has absolutely nothing to do with it. If you can feel in your experience that all is well, that everything is unfolding as it should, then you will know that the world is Brahman. Not the world as the world, but the world as Brahman. Everything will become holy to you, sacred. And nothing will ever annoy you or bother you or disturb you. For you will understand this world to be only of images, and Brahman is the reality or consciousness.

Therefore, it's up to you. It's always up to you. No one is to blame but you. No one can ever do anything for you except yourself. You have the freedom to see what you like. But what you see determines what happens to you.

Therefore, the wise person does not judge by appearances, but observes the appearances without reacting and realizes that everything is for a time. This too shall pass. Everything happens in time and space, in the worldly sense. But in reality there is no time and space. There's no world. There's no universe. There's no God. There's no self-realization. There's no illusion. There is only Brahman, consciousness.

But you can't go around speaking this way if you're not experiencing it! This is a mistake many aspiring Jnanis have. They have ideas about what the world is through reading books, reading sacred literature. And they go on exclaiming their beliefs. Remember, again, your belief system has nothing to do with this. It is only your experience that determines what happens to you, what you're experiencing. Are you experiencing peace and harmony? Are you experiencing compassion and love? Joy and happiness? If you're not experiencing any of these things, then the world is real.

I'm not speaking of fleeting happiness, temporary peace, being quiet for a time. I'm speaking of eternal happiness, eternal peace, eternal joy, eternal bliss. This is your birth right. This is the only reality, this perfect Self, that has never made a mistake, has no problems, this perfect Self that is bliss, it is really you. At that time the world becomes null and void. For the whole world becomes you, your realization becomes the whole world.

Right now most of us are bound by the body. We only expand ourselves as far as our circumference. When you break the binds that have been holding you for so many years, you become all-pervading, omnipresent. You see yourself as a whole universe, as everything and you feel it. You feel this peace that passes all understanding. You're not hurt-able any longer.

Nothing can turn you on and off like a faucet. You see conditions happening, you watch and observe, and you smile within. For you know deep inside that this is not the truth. This is only changing images, like movies. It's just like the images on the screen in a movie and you try to grab them, you grab the screen, not the image. Because the images don't really exist! Yet it appears to exist on the screen. It's a film. Yet it looks very real, but try to grab it and you can't.

And so it is with your life. Your life appears to be so real. Situations appear to be so true. Yet if you see it in the right light, it does not exist at all. They're a dream. This is all a dream. Nothing is the way it appears.

There should be a little longing in all of us for total freedom. And a little longing for total peace and harmony. And a little longing to realize and experience perfect harmony in all conditions. But what you're really experiencing right now is your programming. Time passes by, before you know it, you're gone.

What have you accomplished? Be honest with yourself. What have you accomplished in this life? I'm not speaking of material things, material possessions. You've got to leave those behind. You cannot take those with you. I'm speaking of your spiritual life. Have you really been practicing some kind of sadhana to release you from the bondage of humanhood? Or have you just been running along with the tide, waiting for something to happen to you? This is your life and what you do with it determines where you go and what happens to you.

A real seeker of truth is only interested in the truth. Not in situations, experiences, what happens to the world, but is only interested in the truth. The truth being the Self, the pure awareness. And if you're really interested in the truth, you would not carry any burdens in your mind, of any kind. You learn to let go of them as fast as they come.

For instance, you see an accident. Your job is to help as much as you can, but not to carry it, to let go of it and continue your life. Not to think who is right, who's wrong, who's good, who's bad. It goes through you, you transcend that. You're of service to the world, but you do not act in the world. Again, this is your life. Where are you on the spiritual path? Only you yourself know. What are you interested in? What do you do with your life all day long? What do you think about all day? This tells you where you're at. This shows you the progress you're making.

There's nothing in this world that's worth your becoming angry, upset or disillusioned. Remember all things in this world pass. They could be like this today, tomorrow they may change completely!

Learn to go within, where all the answers are. Learn to be true to yourself. Find out who you really are. See if you are this body or this mind! And the experiences that you're going through. It's up to each one of you to do this. There is no one who can really help you. In the last analysis you've got to know the truth yourself. You are the one. There are no others, there is only you.

Yesterday morning I was in the park walking my dog and I usually let the dog pull me wherever he wants to go. So he pulled me over to the bench because he wanted to sit down and he wanted me to sit down also. I sat down on the bench and there was a little girl playing nearby. She came over to me and she said, "Mister, can you make my wish come true?" And I said, "Maybe, what is your wish?" She was about four years old. And she said, "I want to be big like you. My brother's bigger than I am. My sister's bigger than I am. My mommy and daddy are bigger than I am. Will I ever become big?" So I laughed and explained to her that she'll be big one day also, to have patience. Then her mother called her.

The point I'm trying to make is the innocence that was in the child, the pureness, total awareness. Her only problem was to be big. This was the whole world to her, to become a big person. Then I said to myself, we grow up and look at us then. When we become big, what happens to us? We've been so programmed, so brainwashed, the innocence of childhood is gone. The purity of childhood has vanished some place and we've taken on the burdens of this world. This is maya. This is the grand illusion that most of us are stuck in. And we refuse to let go.

We get involved in everybody's business. We have a television we watch daily. The newspapers we read every day. We identify with soap operas. Metaphysical things mean nothing to us really. And yet we become involved in these things. The first step we have to take is to be totally honest with ourselves, totally and completely honest with ourselves and see where we're really coming from.

Realization will come to you when you empty yourself out of all these burdens that you've carried so long. It will come by itself. But in the meantime, don't walk around saying, "The world is an illusion," or "the world doesn't exist," when you're feeling the world for you're talking nonsense. When you discover the world is an illusion, you will have nothing to say about it. There will be absolutely nothing to say! For you will have become that.

In the meanwhile, practice loving kindness, compassion. Help your fellow man all you can. Do good deeds and work on yourself continuously, twenty-four hours a day. By working on yourself I mean, know the truth about yourself. Say to yourself something like this, "The world I see seems real. My body appears to be real. My mind appears to be real. My thoughts have hold of me. My body has a hold of me and tells me I'm this, I'm that. But I know there's something else, something more profound, something more beautiful than I can ever imagine. There is something beyond my thoughts, beyond my feelings, beyond my body. Perhaps I have not discovered what it is as yet, but I know it exists."

And you give yourself examples. Say to yourself something like this, "The water in the mirage seems real enough, but upon close investigation you realize that it's a mirage. It's not real at all. The snake and the rope seems real enough, but upon investigation I find out it's only a rope. It's not a snake at all. The sky is blue seems real enough. But upon investigation there is no sky and it's not blue. These are all optical illusions, if these are optical illusions then my body must be an optical illusion also. The world I see and believe in must be an optical illusion because it keeps changing all the time. It's never the same. What can I call real in this world? What is real? Everything changes, nothing is real?"

Then you can ask yourself, "Then who am I? If nothing is real and everything is an optical illusion, am I also an optical illusion? Yet I can think. I can reason. Where do thoughts come from? To whom do they come? Who thinks them? What is their source?" As you keep prodding this way day after day, as you keep pondering these things day after day, the day is going to come when you find release from all this. It will! You'll find total release, total freedom.

And you will laugh at yourself so much for you'll understand what this world is, a dream, nothing but a dream. But again, if you're feeling the world do not say it's a dream. It's not a dream to you if you're feeling it and it upsets you, it's real. And I'm not going to convince you it's not? I will not tell you it's an illusion at all because you're feeling it! I can only tell you to go within yourself and find out for yourself. What is the truth about yourself? Find out.

The answers are all within you. Yet the day will come when you realize there is no body but until it does practice your sadhana. Forget about the spiritual games and spiritual entertainment. This is your life. Work on yourself.

Do whatever is necessary to make your environment better so you can have more time to work on yourself. If something is disturbing you put an end to it once and for all. If you hold on to those disturbances that happened fifty years ago, thirty years ago, twenty years ago, or even yesterday this keeps you back from spiritual advancement. For your mind is contemplating the foolishness that you think is so important. Somebody hit your car and drove away and now you've got to pay for repairs. What happened? That's the way it is. Do not dwell on this. Do what has to be done and get it over with and continue. Go forward. Never dwell on a problem! It expands the problem in your mind and builds up your ego! Dwell only on God. How do you dwell on God? By surrendering all your stuff to God. Giving up all of the misery, all the attitudes, all the anger, depression. Give it all up to God!

God will chew it up and spit it out and you'll be free of it. Try to remember that your life is more than the body that appears to you right now. We forget about who we were before we were born. We have many experiences but we've forgotten all these things. We're so wrapped up with our life right now that we think it's so important. We're forgetting there was a before and there will be an after. It's up to you what happens.

You have been around for millions of years. You've been around forever! You have many experiences as other people. You've had many experiences. So why should this one worry you and bother you? This is only another experience, that's all it is. In universal time you're here today and gone tomorrow. You're only here for a few seconds in universal time. You did not come here to get involved in circumstances and predicaments. You came here to find yourself, discover your real nature.

Now what are you doing to make this happen? It's up to you. I can lead you to the gold mine but I can't do the digging for you. You have to dig for yourself. I share with you my experiences. I can assure you that this world does not exist. Not because I read it in a book some place or somebody told me about it. It has been my experience! There is no world and yet it appears. The question, therefore, is: "To whom does it appear?" Not, "Why does it appear?" but "To whom does it appear?" Find out!

I can also assure you and tell you that no matter what experiences you're going through right now, what is worrying you or disturbing you, if anything, this too shall pass. Therefore, cut through the jungle of maya. Remove all the fears from yourself. There is absolutely nothing to fear, nothing to change, nothing to fix, no body to straighten out. This whole world is preordained, predestined. Everything that happens is supposed to happen but you're not supposed to react to it.

It is true that you're absolute reality. It is true that you are sat-chit-ananda, Brahman. It is true that you are pure awareness, but you have to have the experience. And again, you cannot have the experience if your mind is filled with all the garbage of this world. If you think about it, it makes sense. How can you entertain the soap operas of this world and expect to have realization! You can have one or the other! The choice is yours!

You can vehemently make up your mind that from this day on you are not going to judge by appearances whether in your life or somebody else's life.

Just give it a watch, to be aware, look and let go, or you can stay the way you are and keep worrying and keep fretting. The choice is yours again, it's always your choice. Yet if you will find out who you are and let go of this world awhile, you will be surprised what happens. Find out who you are. Spend the time doing that. Are you really this body that appears to be a man or a woman, a boy or a girl? Are you really this person? Find out! Who are you? You have been given all the tools to work with. The factory of intelligence is within you. All you have to do is dive down and check it out. And you will be amazed what you find.

So in conclusion, the world is both real and unreal, depending on where you're coming from. It makes no difference what I tell you or what anybody else tells you. You're the one who needs to have the experience for yourself. You can run all over the world, visit many gurus, Sages, teachers, read many books, yet until you're ready to give all this up and do some serious work within yourself you will only build up your intelligence, that's all. That's all you will do. You will know about the different traditions, spiritual traditions. You know all about spiritual life and yet you have not experienced this and in the end you go crazy, true, I've seen many people do that. They've read so much, seen so many teachers, they went mad.

Yet spiritual life is the easiest thing you could ever do. All you have to do is sit by yourself in the silence, keep still and watch your thoughts. That's all you have to do. Observe your thoughts. What could be easier than that? As you continue to observe your thoughts, you automatically go deeper and deeper and deeper within yourself until you begin to question, "Who am I? Where is this I? Who does this I belong to? Where is the source of it? It's not me. It never was me." And everything will take care of itself. Everything will happen by itself.

Become free, for you're already free. Peace.

(tape ends) [TOC]

YOU HAVE CREATED ME OUT OF YOUR SELF

11th March, 1993

Robert: Om shanti shanti shanti om. Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. I love every one of you, unconditionally.

When you look at me what do you see? I am simply made in your image. Always remember that you have created me out of yourself. I am what you believe I am, nothing more and nothing less. But you should always remember that you are observing yourself. There is only the one Self and you are that. And we all see the Self sometimes through darkly colored glasses so-to-speak. If we were self-realized we would see perfection wherever we looked. We would never see anything wrong anywhere. So depending on whatever consciousness you're in this is what you see in me or anybody else.

When you look at your world that you have created you're simply seeing yourself. You can see beauty and joy and love and harmony or you can see sickness and death, upheavals and hurricanes. You are free to choose what you should see. This is the freedom you have. To be able to see what you want to see, and then when you react to it this is where the problem comes in. For what you are doing is accruing karmic debts by seeing what you wish to see. But always remember that you are the seer. We're all different we see different things. This is also true with the rest of our senses, hearing, touch, taste, smell, feel.

Remember the story of the ten people who were blind and touched an elephant? You've all heard the story before. One person touched the elephants trunk and said it was a mighty tree. Another person touched the elephants foot and said it was a mountain, so forth and so on. But each person felt something different and in their mind imagined what it is. So it is with us.

Noone of us are really seeing the right picture. We're seeing what we are. This is all we can see. We cannot see anything else. We only see what we are. This is something we should always remember, for it will get you out of all kinds of problems. In other words whatever you see with your eyes do not believe it. Whether it's good or bad, right or wrong. If you come to a conclusion, you come to your own conclusion, observe it and let it go.

Look at life as if you are looking at yourself. Remind yourself of this everyday. Especially when you first get out of bed in the morning. What are you feeling? What are you seeing? What are you anticipating? It's only yourself. In truth your Self is omnipresence. Your Self is all-pervading, consciousness. Therefore you have the power to see whatever you like. In the creative principle called life, you have the freedom to do this. Yet if you only understood that there is only one life and that life is consciousness, the absolute reality, there is nothing else. It takes up all space, all time. There is only that one and you are that.

Therefore when you are looking at something that is different from that, it is called an hallucination for you're seeing something that does not exist. In other words if you see anything except God it's a mistake, it's error, false imagination. For there is only the God-head, the one principle, the one law, one substance and you are that.

It's wonderful when you can understand this. This is reality. When you look at me you see a person. This is duality, for you see me separate from yourself. When you look at me and you see yourself then you are an advanced disciple. Think about this, ponder this. It is very important to understand this.

Something else you should understand, there is absolutely nothing wrong in the whole universe. Always remember this. No matter what appears, wars, man's inhumanity to man, earthquakes, cataclysms, there is nothing wrong. It sounds so strange to a beginner who has never heard anything like this before. And even for an advanced student it sounds sort of strange because you say, "Well I see all these things happening before me and how can this not be true? I see murders, rapes, man's inhumanity to man wherever I look." Who is doing the looking? Who is the looker?

That is what you always must ask yourself, "Who sees this? Who is the looker?" And of course you will say, "I am." Then you'll start laughing because from practice you will see, I sees all these things going on in the world. I is the ego, the I-thought, not you! You are the divine reality. But it is the I-thought who sees all these things, who observes all these things. Wants to come to conclusions, wants answers, for what? You will always be doing the same thing, looking, judging, comparing, when you finish with one thing, something else will pop up somewhere else, it never ends, if it is not this, it's that.

It is like a tumor on your arm that the doctor cuts out and it grows somewhere else. When the doctor cuts that out and it grows somewhere else, it keeps appearing all over your body, because the doctor never got rid of the source, the source of the tumor. So it is with us.

Until we know the source of our being we will see duality wherever we look, until we understand our source and I'm not talking about apple sauce. Until that time we have to question everything we see. Who sees this? Who feels this? Who believes this? Who is afraid of this? Who is angry over this? Always go back to I-I-I-I, I am. Find out who the I is, where it came from.

And here's another mistake some of us make. We say we're not the body, for we put the emphasis on the body. We say, "I'm not this sick body, I am Brahman." But what we're doing is we're admitting there is a sick body or a poor body or a wretched body or anybody. We're putting our attention on the body instead of on the source. That is the mistake we're making.

When you say you're not the body, know exactly what you're saying. What you're saying, "There is no body." You're not saying there is a body and me. You're not saying my body is going through all these things but I'm not. Again this is taught to beginners in Advaita Vedanta to make them realize they are not the body, but in truth, no body ever existed. There is no body going through anything. There is no body experiencing karma. No body making mistakes. There is just no body.

The Self that you are takes up all time and space. There is no room for anything else. You must ponder these things. There is no space for anything else. There is no space for your emotions, your judgmental views, your concepts, your dogmas, your preconceived ideas, it's not happening. It never happened. Yet most of us feel these things and we say that it's the body that's feeling these things. You're steeped in duality when you do this. Because again you're saying there is a body and there is me. There is truth and there is a lie. And you're saying the lie doesn't exist. But you're thinking about the body and its manifestations and all its things that it goes through, the ramifications of it. In other words you're putting all of your energy into something that doesn't exist.

This is why some of us do not make any headway on the spiritual path. For we're paying attention to the body that does not exist. By denying it, by imagining there is two of you. There is a Self and a body. And the body does certain things and the Self does certain things. No such thing is happening. There is no body to do anything. It appears that as you make progress on the spiritual path things will come along to show you this. You'll be confronted in all kinds of situations. How you react to them determines where you're at.

You can tell spiritually where you are right now on the path, by what appears real to you, what appears false to you, what disturbs you, what makes you happy, what makes you sad. It's simple, test yourself everyday. Before you go to bed, ask yourself, "What did I react to today? What experience did I go through today. What mental anguish did I have today? What disturbed me today? What did I have to do today to try to straighten things out?" As if you have the power to straighten things out.

It's so funny. We think we can actually do something to this world to make the world a better place in which to live, to make our condition more harmonious, to make people see our viewpoint, it's all a joke. There is no viewpoint, there is nothing happening, nothing has ever happened, nothing will ever happen. You are free pure consciousness right now just the way you are. But you have to feel this, deep deep inside. I use the term deep deep inside and yet there is no deep deep inside, there is no deep deep outside, there's no inside, there's no outside, but for the sake of explaining things, for the sake of talking, I use terms like deep inside, jump deep inside, go deep inside. Where would you go? There is no body so there is no body to go deep inside. What exists that will go deep inside? A mouse? There is nothing to go deep inside. Yet when I talk I tell you these things to make you realize that there is something else happening that you're not aware of, something so beautiful, so grand, so blissful. It is you, your Self. What you really are, just the way you are, when you're in the silence. When there is no one to judge. No thoughts to fear. No one to fight, in that second you are God.

Again when I say you are God, again it's a misnomer. You can never be God, what you are right now. Because when I say you, you're thinking of the self, this little self, your small self, and when I say, "You are God!" You are believing you are God as a person. This is impossible. No human being can ever be God. But the you which is the absolute reality, which is Brahman, which is sat-chit-ananda is God! So you have to get your body out of the way, so-to-speak. You have to get yourself out of the way and allow God to shine through as the Self, as nirvana, as sat-chit-ananda. Think of yourself this way.

When you say, "I am the body," realize you made a mistake. When you say, "The body is going through karma," realize you made a mistake. When you say, "The body suffers," realize you made a mistake. When you say, "The body does its own thing, separate from the Self," realize you made a mistake. There is nothing separate from the Self. The Self alone is. The Self is Brahman, period! end! There is nothing else. There is not a body that becomes Brahman, from practicing spiritual disciplines for years and years and years there will never be a body that becomes Brahman. Therefore do not dwell on the body at all. Always think of yourself as the Self, as consciousness, as pure awareness. When your mind wants to think of the body or someone else's body, immediately put a stop to this by simply knowing there is no body. There is nobody to experience anything. How happy you will feel when you can just understand this. You will feel such happiness, such joy, such bliss. Just by understanding what I'm talking about. For as soon as you take the mind off the body, the mind becomes weak and starts to disintegrate. But if you keep your mind on the body or somebody else's body, the body of the world, the body of the universe, it's all the body, the same body — remember there is no difference between your body and the universal body. It's all the same body. Because you think you are a body you think the universe is a body. But there is no universe and there is no body, it's all an hallucination. This realization really brings you happiness, total happiness, total bliss, total joy. Just to understand and know this, know it with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your being, that you were never a body and you will never be a body.

What about karma? What about reincarnation? Remember this is all an illusion. You have to keep inquiring, "For whom is there reincarnation? Who reincarnates?" If your mind tells you the body does, laugh at it, laugh at your mind and say, "Mind there is no body and you don't exist either." Talk to your mind like that and it will become weak. It will begin to dissipate. It will stop controlling you. But as long as you believe the condition has power over you, and you react to a condition, you're putting yourself into a living hell. You will fear, you will worry, you will fret. You will do all sorts of things to make your life be the way you think it should be. And you go through your whole life this way. One thing after another, one thing after another, it will never end.

Why not right now, for once in your life, say to yourself, "I will never react to a condition again. For I realize that every condition comes from a body, a mind, and there is no such thing. There is no mind, there is no body, there is no condition." Do not try to analyze this. Just try to keep still. Do not try to figure it out, come to a conclusion about it, or have any opinion about it. Your duty is to keep still, to keep quiet. Be still and know that I am God. Only when you're still is there a knowingness that says, "I-am." Only in quietness, when the mind stops rambling, rattling, telling you all sorts of things. Only when you become free of this will you feel the bliss I'm talking about, the joy, the peace which passeth all understanding. This can only come when you stop thinking. This includes good thoughts, bad thoughts, all kinds of thoughts. The thoughts must go. The thinking must stop.

I know I can tell some of you this until you turn blue and I turn green, we'll be all kinds of colors, and nothing will happen. Nothing happens because you're still attached to the world and its manifestations that you will not allow anything to happen. There has to come a time in your life when you begin to trust the power that knows the way. When you totally surrender the ego, your anger, all the things that have been keeping you in the lower realms, you have to let go of all of these things.

I know you're saying to yourself, "Well if I stop thinking, if I stop judging, nothing will go right. I can't just let go of this. I can't just let that happen." But to whom are you addressing? Who are you talking to? You're dealing with yourself, that's all. (laughs) Nobody else. But it is yourself that has projected a certain picture of the world and now it's yourself that is trying to straighten it up. This is so funny to me. Yet we keep doing this constantly, we never stop.

We think we're so important we have to straighten somebody up, we have to straighten something up, we have to know something, we have to have an answer to something, we can't sleep. We turn and toss all night. We want to know the answer. Catch yourself! Ask yourself, "Who wants to know the answer? Who needs an answer? What will the answer do for me? Make you feel good for a couple of minutes?" Know absolutely nothing. Have no knowledge. Become a babbling idiot, you'd be better off.

Go into the silence whenever you can. Become silent at every opportunity. Again how do you resolve the problems of your life? By becoming still! Not by looking for answers. Why? Because all of the answers come from the same source, the ego. How many answers did you come with? Were they very intellectual? Were they stupid? Who called on the ego? It is the ego that prods you onward, and you're allowing it to happen. The choice is always yours. This is the freedom that you've got. To follow your ego or surrender your ego. That's the truth you've got. And life presents to you all kinds of situations. So you can make a choice. Everyday you'll be presented with situations. All kinds of situations for you to make choices. The choice you make determines what happens to you. Is anything more important than your salvation?

We're so concerned with other people, world situations, we're so concerned what we read in the newspaper, what we watch on television. Try to understand that these things have been going on since the beginning of time. This is a play of consciousness.

This is God's leela, maya, and many of us are getting caught in it continuously, everyday, by feeling something is wrong. When you feel something is wrong what are you really doing? Aren't you saying that consciousness, God, doesn't know how to do things right? The ego will have to show him how to do things right by taking certain action in your life? That's what you're really doing, subconsciously.

A person who is on the verge of enlightenment will never react to conditions. Will never say this is wrong, this is right, this is good and this is bad, this is up and this is down, there is no reaction. For it's all an illusion and you're reacting to an illusion, isn't that funny? You're reacting to conditions that are illusory? But to you they are very real, and this is called hallucination. It is as if you're watching a movie on the screen, and you don't like the bad guy and you say, "I'm going to kill this bad guy, I don't like him at all," and you run up to the screen and start punching the bad guy, a second later you take out a gun and shoot him, take out a knife and stab him. It's all happening on the screen, but in your mind it's real. You believe the person is for real, so you're doing all of these things. But if you just sat still and allowed yourself to watch the whole movie, you'll see it comes to an end. And then what's left? The screen, the images have all been wiped out by themselves. So you didn't have to worry about the bad guy or the good guy or any guy they all disappeared, the screen is empty, and so it is with life.

Have we stopped reacting to things, have we stopped looking at the world and seeing something we like, something wrong, something good, something bad. To the extent that you can stop seeing that, to that extent will these things disappear of their own volition and you will be able to look right through, through everything. You will know the truth, that the whole world is consciousness, nothing else. For consciousness is self-contained absolute reality, nothing else. And absolute reality is pure awareness, nothing else and you are that. Peace.

(silence)

Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

R: What Mary is going to read is "the Jnani," it talks about the body having experiences and going through certain things. This is for people who need to know these things. Remember in truth there is nobody going through anything. The body never existed and never will exist. There is only the Self. But if we didn't say all of these things and we didn't have these writings there would be no teaching, you would probably be better off. To have a teaching you have to make up all of these things. Make you believe there's a body that you have to get rid of, that does things by itself, and the self which watches. No, there is no such thing. There never was a body and there will never be a body, whether it's a universal body or a physical body or any body. It's all mind and there is no mind. So you figure it out. (students laugh)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

(tape ends abruptly during the reading) [TOC]

WITNESS THE DREAM

14th March, 1993

Robert: Good afternoon. It is good to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you just the way you are. All is well. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place. Always understand this! Everything is always in its right place. The error is in your mind, not in the way things look. Transcend the mind and you will see harmony wherever you look.

Let me ask you a question. What is the purpose for you coming to Satsang? Why do you come here? If it's to listen to a lecture, you came for the wrong reason. If it's for entertainment purposes, you came for the wrong reason. If it's to compare the speaker with other speakers, you came for the wrong reason. There's really no reason to come to Satsang at all, unless you have an open heart! If you come to Satsang with an open heart, reality will be yours. Not my reality or your reality, but reality, the reality, what people call the kingdom of heaven, the kingdom of God.

You are already that, but you have so many concepts, you cover it up. You have so many feelings and dogmas and attitudes that you cover up the Godliness. So you have to open your heart and let your reality shine through.

How do you do this? By keeping silent, by not being judgmental, by leaving the world alone. There will always be something in this world to correct, either in yourself or in your family or in the world or in people. We have learned from experience that you cannot do this. The correction is always made within yourself.

For it is yourself, with a small 's' that sees a problem. But if you try to resolve the problem outside of you, it will never be resolved. It's resolving yourself, knowing the truth, understanding who you are, that brings you peace and realization.

What you see, what you think, what you smell, what you taste, what you hear, this is all false imagination! It appears real. It appears very real, as the world appears real, as your body appears real. But if you investigate you will find there's no reality to it.

Do not be perturbed by whatever happens in your life, whether there is sickness, lack or limitation, whatever you're going through, whatever is happening. Do not be concerned with this. Go deep within, search for reality by becoming still, by not arguing, not trying to make things happen. The universe knows how to cleanse itself. Whenever change comes about there seems to be turbulence, cataclysms, all these things are necessary for change to come about on this earth.

In order for a beautiful rose to grow, the seed has to be destroyed. And if you were the size of an atom, the destruction of the rose seed would be like a major earthquake. Yet when it calms down, the shoot comes out and the rose is blooming in full beauty and happiness. So it is with your life.

Never mistake suffering for something bad. Never say, "Why did this happen to me? I'm just a poor innocent bystander!" For change to come, there first has to be an upheaval of some kind. For instance, if you're going for a new job, you have to make a lot of changes, you might have to move to a new city, make new friends, drop old friends, buy different clothes. Things have to happen for you to get into the new job. So it is with your life.

Whatever happens in your life, never feel sorry for yourself. Never be too serious about anything. For this too shall pass. If you concern yourself with the spiritual work, then all will always go well with you. But if you get involved in trivialities, materialism, then you will have a nervous breakdown, you will have major problems with your mind. You will go through all sorts of rituals to try to make yourself happy.

Happiness in your birthright! You are happy, totally and completely happy, every one of you here! Yet some of you do not think you are. Simply because of wrong identification. You are identifying with a situation that will change eventually. And unless you've worked on yourself before, you will not be able to handle it when it comes along.

When I say work on yourself, what does this mean? It means you understand the truth about yourself, who you are, what you are. To know that you are not the body, you're not the condition, you're not the situation, you're not the thoughts. You deny the whole world. You let go of the whole world, the whole universe and realize your Self.

Yet people get involved in things. They think it's real. They become hurt-able. And when I tell you it's like a dream, you do not believe me. You say, "How can this be a dream? This is impossible, this is going on in my life and this is going on in my life. And the world is in a complete mess. How can it be a dream? How can I be dreaming this whole world, what I see before me as vast splendor and harmony and disharmony and all kinds of things going on? How can this be my dream?" Yet when you go to bed at night and you dream, where does this dream come from that you're dreaming at night? How did it get there? Who gave it birth? Who else but you.

In that dream you may dream that you're a little person, just born. Then you're five years old, you go to school. Then you're a teenager. Then you go to college. You become an accountant. You get married. You have children. You move to different places in the world. This all happens in your dream in less than a few seconds! The dream only last a few seconds, you know. And in that dream, your whole life went by. Why can't you accept the fact that this is also a dream? What you call the waking state?

You were a little girl or a little boy in the waking state. You grew up into what you are right now, just like in the dream. There's no difference. There's absolutely no difference between the dream and the waking state. Yet when you're in the dream, you take it seriously. You become angry over things. You become upset over all sorts of things in the dream. Then when you wake up, you laugh at yourself! You say, "Imagine me, a prison convict. In my dream I went to prison for fifteen years. I got hit by a train. My legs were amputated. Then I woke up and here I am." Then you laugh.

The same thing is going to happen to you in this life. When I share these things with you I am sharing my own experiences. I'm not sharing something I read in a book or something I heard in a lecture. I am sharing my personal experiences with you! You are dreaming the mortal dream! And the only way to wake up is not to take it seriously, but to observe it and watch it and not to react to it. This is the only way to awaken. You have a choice to do this. But you must remind yourself in the morning when you get out of bed. "I just woke up," you say to yourself. "I went from one dream into another dream!" If you remind yourself of this in the morning when you wake up, you will be able to handle the whole day sufficiently. It will be sufficient for you, the day as it is. For you will not get involved in the world too much. You will not become judgmental over things. You will leave everything alone!

Imagine again that you're dreaming at night, but now you're aware that you're dreaming. If you're aware that you're dreaming, are you going to react to anything? Will you react to situations, if you know that you're dreaming? Of course not. You'll laugh! You'll see a war going on and you'll get in the middle of the battlefield and you'll say, "What are you doing? This is all a dream! Throw your guns away. You're wasting your time!" Nobody dies, nobody's killed, nobody's born. It's all a dream. And they'll probably shoot you for saying that! Makes no difference if they shoot you! You're aware that you're dreaming so you're the witness of you being shot and you keep laughing. And then you wake up, sure enough it was a dream.

Now I suppose the only difference between you and me is that I am aware twenty-four hours that this is a dream. Subsequently, if I'm shot or if I'm not shot or if I become a multimillionaire or become a pauper, it's all the same. For I realize that this is a dream. I'm aware of it, I know it. I don't think about it. I don't hope that it is. I don't pray that it is, it is, for me. And I am the witness to the whole process.

Remember this even if you were dreaming at night. But remember now, instead of dreaming to yourself you're not caught in the dream anymore you're awake in the dream. You're awake in the dream, think of that situation. You see everything going on, but you're not disturbed. You see things changing, changing constantly like it's supposed to. You're not disturbed. You understand also that if you get involved in the dream, you'll forget that you're dreaming! You'll forget that you're dreaming! You get involved in the dream, you'll forget all about the dream. But you've been practicing prior to dreaming. And you're in control. Whatever happens you will not react to it. Why not? Remember? If you react to it, you'll become part of the dream! You'll forget that you're dreaming, you'll be asleep dreaming. You'll be in deep surrealistic slumber.

This is what the Jnani is, the witness to the dream.

Take a look at your life. Think how serious you make things appear. Since you were a little boy or little girl, the things you took for granted. Imagine if you were a little boy or girl and you understood this at that time. But here you are, dreaming the mortal dream as if it's real, reacting to it, getting caught up in it, feeling sorry for yourself.

Again, if you were the witness of your dream at night, you would not try to improve yourself, improve your affairs. You would not even react to anything. Because there's nothing to improve, because you're not that at all. The dream is like the images on the chalkboard, they can be erased and new images put on and erased and new images put on. The dream is like bubbles in the ocean, the bubbles come, the bubbles go, but the ocean remains the same. The dream is like the water in the mirage. It doesn't exist but it seems real. And so it is with you.

You appear to be real. Everything appears to be real to you, but it's not. And again I say, do not believe what I say. Find out for yourself. Prove it to yourself. The only way you can prove it to yourself, is by practicing sadhana, spiritual disciplines. If you do nothing, you get nothing. You just go through life like a leaf in the wind and your life will end and you'll appear again somewhere else. Because you continue to dream. In that dream there is reincarnation, there's karma, there's God. There's all kinds of things happening in the dream.

But also remember, the dream came out of you originally to begin with. It emanated from you, where else would it come from? There's no one to cause the dream but you. Who caused the dream that you dream at night? You may dream about God. You may dream about karma and reincarnation. You could dream that you're an angel. You may dream that you go to heavenly planes. You hear blissful music. What's causing this to happen? You! There's only you. You are the cause of everything that takes place. Everything!

Again, to prove this you go into sleep, into deep sleep and you don't dream, there's no dream taking place. You're in dreamless sleep. The universe is gone, the world is gone, your body is gone, God is gone, your troubles are gone, everything is gone! This is why when you awaken, you say, "I feel refreshed. I slept good." Because you were without the world and its manifestation.

You must become the witness to this dream also, not the doer, but the witness. There's quite a difference. The doer believes the body and the mind are real. So they have to take action and make things happen, get involved in the world. But the witness really just imagines that everything's okay, even though they have not had a realization yet, but they try to witness everything to the best of their ability. They become the seer, the witness of all the happenings on this earth. But there's no reaction. And if there's no reaction, the mind becomes weaker and weaker and weaker, for it has nothing to do anymore. Until the mind is slowly transcended and you become free and liberated.

The choice is always yours. As I said before, do not believe anything I say. Why should you? This has been my experience, but you have to have your own experience. When it comes is up to you.

People ask me sometimes, "Robert, when will I have this experience? I have been waiting thirty, forty years and I haven't had any experience at all. I've been practicing sadhana, nothing happens?" So I tell the person what he has to hear at the time. I may say, "Trust in God. Surrender everything to God and everything will be okay." To another person I may say, "Practice self-inquiry, inquire, Who does not have this experience? Who thinks he doesn't have an experience of enlightenment? To whom does this come? Who feels this?" To an advanced devotee I will say, "Be still and know that I am God." Not referring to Robert, but to I-am. Be still and know that I-am is God, and the devotee will understand this and close their eyes and go deep into the Self. So we work on many levels of consciousness.

Some people ask me certain questions and want certain answers. I will immediately feel their egos are so big that nothing can save them in this incarnation. And I will keep silent. I have nothing to say. And they have to stay in the silence and they begin to work on themselves immediately. So everyone is different. Where you go from here is determined by what you are. It's your ball game.

When it's time to give up this body, to drop it, you can't take anybody with you, nobody, no possessions, nothing. All the things you've been fighting for will have to be left behind. All your beliefs, your politics, everything will all have to be left behind. So how fortunate you are to be able to hear these things.

Do not spend your life discussing politics or the world or people or places. Save yourself! Save yourself!

I suppose this is another reason why we have Satsang, so you can hear these things over and over again, until it clicks and something happens. You are the only one who can really save yourself. Take refuge in the Self. At the end of each day, go back to the day in retrospect, and see how you reacted to situations. This will give you a good idea of where you're coming from. It's between you and yourself. See the kind of day that you had. "What affected you today," you say to yourself. Were you affected by life, life's vicissitudes? Is your mind always thinking, thinking, thinking constantly and consistently about person, place and thing? You have to be totally honest with yourself. It's your life. You can do whatever you want with it.

I can only explain to you how the universe works, what's going on and the experiences that I've had. You must learn to love yourself just the way you are. If you really love yourself you will love others. Whatever quality you have, that's what you see in others. Remember, there's no machine that churns out pieces of the universe. There's no God that's created this universe. It's all coming from your own mind. It comes from yourself. You are the one. You must think of these things when you awaken in the morning. Do not get up and put on your clothes and go to work right away, get involved in the TV and newspaper. It's your dream! What are you doing with it? Are you lost in your dream? Are you taking the world as being real and reacting accordingly? It's your choice.

It's interesting when I talk to people, they tell me what's going on in the world, all these dastardly things happening in this world today. And I say, go back fifty years from now, the same things were happening to different people, a hundred years from now, two hundred years from now, the same things will happen again and again to different people. If you go backwards or forward, the world will always be this world. The world keeps changing and changing but it only has so much leeway. It will only change so much until it starts from the beginning again. This world is very tricky. It will fool you.

You think the world is personal to you, but the world is going through its own karma, so-to-speak. And people react when new changes come along, how foolish. In other words, they're not working on themselves trying to become free and liberated. They're concerned with the world and what's happening and trying to change things. It will appear that things are changing but it will never change, it will always be the same. It will keep changing so that it becomes the same again and again and again, different situations, different people, different conditions, but the same world doing the same things.

I suppose what it takes is to be totally and completely disgusted with this world, and have no desire or wants or needs. This doesn't mean that you'll starve to death or it will cause problems for yourself, on the contrary, you will be well taken care of. If you only become still and watch the unfoldment of everything. You become like a giant redwood tree. Think of how many hundreds of years a redwood has stood there, those big redwoods in northern California. How many wars they've seen! How many killings they've seen! How many people were born and died in front of them! And they just stood there majestically, no comment, people come, people go, but the giant redwood just stands there in all of its glory and splendor. You have to become like a giant redwood! Let things happen all around you. Do not react to them! Let everything transpire the way it will. Leave it alone. And you will be spared the sufferings and the nonsense most people go through.

And so, to sum up, when you get up in the morning, become the witness to everything that you see. Do not take anything for granted. Do not react to anything. Do not feel sorry for yourself. Every morning is a new beginning for you. As you get out of bed and you get dressed, realize who you are. "I am pure awareness, consciousness, I am Brahman, the absolute reality. Fire cannot burn me, water cannot drown me. For I was never born and I will never die. I am forever." Remember the I-am you are referring to is not you or your body. It is consciousness itself. I-am forever. I have always been and I will always be. If you can start your day like this, then you will remember these things as you go through the day. When you go to work or wherever you go, you'll remember who you are, what you are, why you're here. And you'll do the right thing to awaken. Again, the choice is yours. Do with it as you will. Peace!

It is now time to play, stump the Guru again. Do we have any stumpers over there?

(Q - Mary reads, A - robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert, please describe what is compassion, where does it come from? In reality, does compassion really exist?

A: A being who has transcended the small self, that has become self-realized, becomes the epitome of compassion automatically. Compassion is a virtue of consciousness, of absolute reality. Compassion really means when you leave everything alone and you love it. You have a joy in your heart for everything that you see, the good the bad and the ugly. It means that you're not judgmental, that you're totally free and you let everything else be free.

True compassion is like when you're in a dream and you see an accident happening in the dream. Even though it's a dream you come over and help the person because you realize that person doesn't know that he's dreaming. You have a great compassion for everything that's happening, for all humanity, the suffering that's going on. Even though you understand that it's a dream, you do not become arrogant and cynical and say, "Oh, this is this way and this is like that and this is going to happen this way, I'm going to fix this and I'm going to take care of this and I'm going to do that." You keep silent and in the silence you have a great compassion, great love for everything that exists.

"The ground upon which I stand is holy ground," meaning that the whole universe is God, so-to-speak. Everything is God and you have compassion for all things, animals, insects, all kinds of vegetation. Everything that you see you have compassion for. But it's a virtue of consciousness. As you work on yourself and develop yourself, then compassion comes by itself. You have compassion for those who abuse you, for those who cause problems in the world. You know that they're asleep. They're living the mortal dream, they can't help what they do. Again, as you work on yourself, compassion will come of its own accord.

Q: What is infinity? Is a Jnani and infinity the same or equal?

A: Everything is infinity. Everything is infinite. The Jnani is infinite, infinite like the sky. Emptiness is infinity, total emptiness, boundless space. The substratum beyond the space is infinity. The glue that holds the planets together in their orbit is infinity. Everything beyond the body, beyond the mind, beyond the thoughts is infinity. So we can say that infinity is just another word for consciousness.

SR: Robert, is infinity equal to a Jnani or is infinity more than a Jnani?

R: When you speak of a Jnani, there's no such thing as more or less. A Jnani encompasses everything. So we cannot say that infinity is different. Infinity is the Jnani, the same as pure awareness or sat-chit-ananda. It's all infinity, there's no separation. You're trying to separate a Jnani from something. There's never any separation. It's all the same. It's all one. It's only when the mind starts to think, that you break it up into segments and duality. But beyond the mind there's infinity. Infinity, consciousness, Jnana, it's all the same. Just words to express a different way. Go beyond the words.

Q: Why is there seemingly intensity of physical energy felt in a human beings awareness after having been in the presence of an enlightened one?

A: Think of going out into the sun. The closer you get to the sun, the more heat ensues. The closer you are to a Jnani, the more reality, the more truth goes into yourself. The Jnani is like a force of power, electrical charge. The Jnani is always emanating grace. If you feel it, then accept it. When a Jnani has transcended the whole world, the whole universe, then all the power of the universe is in the Jnani. There is no longer any difference between the universe and the Jnani. It's all one. It's all-pervading. But the manifestation of consciousness has become the Jnani. Just as the sun shines and the rays of the sun are all different. Some are stronger than others. So it is with the Jnani, like the rays of the sun. The closer you get, the more heat that you get. So the closer in proximity you are with the Jnani, the more the mind becomes destroyed, reality comes, and you feel it. But you are a Jnani! Awaken to this truth, you are That! There's no difference between you and me! You see the difference, I don't.

Anybody like to say anything else?

SR: Robert is the Jnani aware of everything in infinity or does infinity just act through the Jnani?

R: There's no difference between a Jnani and infinity, it's all the same. There's only one. Infinity does not act. If you would imagine a power that takes up all space and time there's no space anywhere, for the power takes up all of that space. So you can't say there's space and something else, for there's no place for anything else. All space has been taken up. So it is with infinity. The same thing has happened with infinity. It pervades all space. There's no place or room for anything else. Again, you can't say that the Jnani is infinity, there's only infinity!

(tape ends) [TOC]

THE GROUND UPON WHICH I STAND IS HOLY GROUND

18th March, 1993

Robert: Om, shanty, shanty, shanty, om. Greetings! Welcome. To the new ashram.(students laugh) I know some of you had a long trip over the mountains, over the hills to get here, but it's worth it. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you. Always remember deep in your heart that all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes anywhere at any time.

What appears to be wrong is simply your own false imagination, that's all. But we live in a universe of Brahman, of absolute reality, self-contained consciousness, where there is perfection, perfect life, perfect bliss, perfect being. This perfection knows nothing about wrong and right, good and bad, happy and sad, it only knows itself as perfection and you are that. You are the Self, that perfect immutable Self. Nothing else exists. Nothing else ever existed. Nothing else will ever exist. There is only the one Self and you are that. Rejoice!

When you really understand who you are you will experience unalloyed happiness. Happiness that you only dreamt about. Happiness in the silence, where nothing is happening, but you're happy, always happy, always at peace.

All of the gods that you've been praying to all of your life, all of the buddhas you've taken refuge in, the krishnas, the Kali-mas, the shivas, the Christ, allah, they're all within you. You are that! There is no god that is external to you. There is no Buddha and god and you. There is only the one Self and you are that. Ponder this.

The knowledge of this brings you eternal infinite happiness, instantly. When you begin to understand who you are, your divine nature, that you are not the body, you are not the mind. Once you understand your infinite nature, who you really are and there is nothing else, you immediately become instantly happy. For happiness is your very nature. Happiness, the Self, are synonymous. Consciousness, absolute reality, pure awareness, are all synonymous. There is only one, has many names. But the one pervades all space and time. That is the only existence and you are that. There is no other existence. Awaken to this truth. You are the only one that doesn't exist and you are consciousness.

When you say I-am Brahman, don't confuse this with your body. When you understand what you're saying when you say, "I-am Brahman," again this will bring instant release, instant happiness, instant freedom, when you realize what you are saying.

I-am Brahman means, I-am, which has nothing to do with your body — who is consciousness and it's all pervading. And what I-am does not refer to your body or yourself or your thoughts or your experiences. I-am refers to the universe, to everything that exists. Everything that exists is Brahman, everything, and you are that.

Do you realize the implications?

This is what Moses meant in the old testament when he said, "The ground upon which I stand is holy ground." Everything is Brahman. Everything is God so-to-speak, everything. Nothing is excluded. When you truly understand this you have reverence for all of life, everything. You have reverence for the animals, the vegetables, the minerals, the human beings, the astral bodies, causal bodies. Everything that exists is Brahman. It's wonderful. What peace this gives you, what joy this gives you.

When you really comprehend what I'm saying, it means, all is well! All has always been well. But you say, "What about my thoughts? What about my experiences? What about all the things I see?" To whom do the thoughts come? To whom do the experiences come? Who is the seer? Who sees? What is the object seen? Inquire within yourself, "What do I see?" What do I see? The 'I', not you, but the 'I'. Never get the I-thought with the small I, mixed up with you. You are Brahman, not your body, but you, not the I, but you. But when you say, "I see," you're referring to something else completely. Something that does not exist, a mirage, an hallucination. This is where the I is, the I-thought. It's a thought. It has absolutely nothing to do with you.

(A noise interrupts talk, then Robert continues) It's in the monitor. Dinners ready. (students laugh)

Learn to love the Self, not yourself as a body but the Self, which is your real existence. Everything appears and nothing exists. Things appear to look real and you get involved in all the nonsense of this world. Where did it get you, nowhere. Only true awakening will bring you happiness, not knowledge, not knowledge of something. Knowledge of something is temporary happiness. But true awakening comes when you transcend all the knowledge. When all knowledge is left behind. Then true awakening comes.

It makes sense if you think about it. As long as you have knowledge that you've collected, how can you awaken? Knowledge only tells you something exists. It appears to be real. You have the knowledge that you're a woman, you're a man, you live in a house, you live in this world, you have knowledge of physics or of mathematics, knowledge of life. What can this knowledge do for you? It cannot awaken you. Yet people are trying to acquire more knowledge, to what avail? What you really want to do is, know your Self, not through knowledge but through experience.

How to experience the Self? Be still, quiet, that's how, nothing else. You do not have to go through long processes of yoga, meditation, it's all unnecessary. Just keep still, quiet. Quiet your mind that is all you have to do. When you meditate you meditate on an object, this cannot awaken you, or you have to go to the pure land of the Buddha where there are no objects. No seer or nothing to be seen. This alone will awaken you.

But by thinking, thinking, constantly thinking and trying to change things, trying to make things your way, trying to acquire knowledge you'll never awaken, you'll never be awakened. Know this once and for all. The only way you will ever awaken is through the silence, not through analyzation of facts. Not by sorting out good and bad, but through simple silence, letting go. Letting go of all thoughts, all the hurts, all the dogmas and concepts. Letting go of these things daily.

When you first wake up in the morning be aware of the concepts that come to you. The thoughts, the emotions, the feelings and let go of them, for you will become stronger. When you practice this you'll become happier over night. Total happiness by doing nothing. There is nowhere you have to go, there are no rituals you have to perform. By looking within yourself your mind becomes weaker and weaker until it's finally annihilated.

As you are aware it's the mind that causes you problems. The mind tells you I have to pay the rent this month, I've got cancer, people don't like me, something goes wrong someplace and you're thinking about it, this is what keeps you away from your highest good. It is thoughts like this that keep you from experiencing your Self. Where did the thoughts come from? From nowhere. They have no creator, they have no mother, no father, they just appear. They seem to appear by themselves. You never asked to think, but yet the thoughts appear by themselves. Where do they come from? They have no source.

When you practice self-inquiry and follow the thoughts back to its source, the whole secret is to realize, there is no source to your thoughts. It is only the source that exist, but there is no source for your thoughts, for your body, for your mind. That has no source. For Brahman is self-contained absolute reality. There are no thoughts in Brahman. Brahman is not a source. Brahman is something beyond words and thoughts. Something that you alone can experience. In other words Brahman can be experienced. Not as anything you're aware of now, not as a person, place or thing but as life experiences itself. Ponder these things deeply.

Continue to ask yourself, "Who am I? Who am I who worries or thinks, who frets, who is upset, always believes something terrible is going to happen? Who is this person? Where does this person come from who thinks like this? This person must go." You find yourself here in a body so-to-speak, on this earth, but is this the truth about you. Is this who you really are? Find out. Find out who you really are.

As you continue to be really silent something will tell you this whole thing appears as a dream. This is what the source says that you're looking for, it's a dream. You're dreaming the mortal dream right now. Destroying your beliefs as in person, place or thing as being real, you're destroying the dream image. When you dream at night you're able to awaken in the morning, but when you get caught up in this dream it appears to be very strong and it's hard to wake up. Due to the fact that you keep identifying with person place and thing as being real. This is why you can't wake up from the dream.

I'm not saying that you should ignore people, I'm saying you should stop thinking that everything comes from your mind and your mind tells you the truth. Stop believing that everything you see is real. Do not be bothered by the vicissitudes of life, always turn within. That is where all the answers are. Without is the dream, within is the Self. In reality there is no real without there is no within but for the sake of explaining this we have to turn within because we think we're living without. When you turn within, the within will eventually disappear and without will eventually disappear. Everything will disappear when you begin to turn within. Yet when you awaken everything will be the same as it is now. Except you will not be a part of it. You will see things as you do now but you will no longer be fooled. The world will no longer fool you. By telling you this is right and this is wrong, this is good and this bad, you will be finished with all of this.

Remember again, why do you wish to awaken? Because you're sick and tired of this world the way it is. By the changes that take place. Everything happens here. It is false. You have happiness. You have sadness. You have good and you have bad. When you will awaken you will never experience these things again. You will be in total bliss all of the time and you'll keep silent, you'll keep quiet. There will be nothing to explain, nothing to discuss, nothing to prove, then you will become the immutable Self that you've always been.

This is your life. You always have the freedom to make a choice. You're always free to make a choice, always. The choice you make depends on what you know, right now.

Feel how wonderful it is to sit in the silence. When thoughts come just ignore them. Do not try to change them at all or try to stop them. Just ignore them. Let them come, let them go. Feel the sensations in your body. Become the witness of what is going on inside of you.

(silence)

Ask.

SG: Like when you talk about the silence, you're talking about the mind being silent?

R: I'm talking about becoming completely silent. The mind cannot be silent by itself. The mind is a conglomeration of thoughts. When you become silent the mind slows down. And you will find that it disappears into the nothingness from which it came. You can't really make the mind still. There is only silence, pure silence. (SG: The absence of thoughts?) Yes you can say that. If you try to make the mind silent you'll have a hard time, because the mind doesn't really exist. Therefore who are you trying to make silent. You just want to be silent. The mind will take care of itself. What appears to be the mind will disappear of its own volition and become silent because it never existed. When you become quiet, quiescent everything takes care of itself. The true Self emerges with all its splendor and beauty and everything else that appeared will disappear.

So it's a misnomer to say, "I'm going to kill the mind. I'm going to make the mind silent." There never was a mind to make silent. Again you just want to be silent. Forget about the mind. And if you become really silent you will see you never had a mind to begin with. You will be of no mind. You'll be out of your mind. (SG: I mean usually when people say be silent, they're relating to speech. You're talking much more than just talking.) Yes, what people are talking about is quieting their mind. I'm not talking about that at all. We're not trying to quiet the mind we're trying to reach an inner silence which is Brahman.

Another name for silence is Brahman or absolute reality. This is the true silence. May you be in silence for the rest of your life and forever. (laughter) (SG: Amen.)

(silence)

R: Sue would you like to give a progress report on your leg and so on? (student demonstrates mobility) (laughter) (SS: It's improving actually.) Good, can you jog? (SS: Yeah and I exercise and I walk.) Do you elevate it? (SS: Yeah it's been a very good experience, it really has.) Tell us about these things. (SS: There's been a lot more silence.) (laughs)

R: Anybody have any announcements. Like the world is coming to an end or something like that. (laughter)

ST: There is no satsang on Sunday. (R: Right.) And there is again starting next week, every Thursday and Sunday.

SS: Is it the same time on Sunday at two? (R: Yes.)

ST: Two o'clock Sunday, 8 o'clock Thursday, forever! (laughter) (R: That's a long time.) Forever, for a moment. I love you forever only lasts seventeen days on the average. So forever is not that long. (laughter)

SP: I have a comment on that? (R: Okay.) I appreciate the later time 8 o'clock and yet the freeway is pretty horrendous. So I don't know whether it's possible to make it a little later? (R: No.) Or possibly have it on the weekend when traffic isn't so terrible.

R: You'll have to use the back roads.

SJ: It wasn't bad coming up on one to Malibu and then across to penny kenny, real quick.

R: I haven't had a cold since I was about sixteen years old. I used to go and see Joel Goldsmith and I lived in the Bronx in New York. I had to take a train, take a bus in the snow. Walk about a mile after that. But I did it because I wanted to be there. So if you really want something it doesn't matter what's going on in traffic or what's going on in the world. You will be where you have to be.

SE: There are no trains, no buses, no snow. (R: Well imagine there is.)

(general talk)

ST: Just in case somebody doesn't know, there are books and tapes in the back.

R: Perhaps we can pool, use one car with ten people in one car.

(general talk)

R: Boy, we have some prashad tonight. This looks good. We have sugar coated cookies...

(prashad continues as tape ends) [TOC]

THE SILENCE OF THE HEART

21st March, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...shanti shanti om. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) Welcome to one life to live. (laughter) On this beautiful Thursday evening. Everybody's wet, it's good for you, make your hair grow. (laughter)

I bet you think you voluntarily came here. You came here because you had to come here. You had absolutely nothing to do with it. All this was prearranged before you were born and here we are. And you think you had something to do with it, you had a choice. You never had a choice to do anything really except to turn within and find out who you are, otherwise you're like a puppet manipulated by karma. You believe you have freedom. Everything is predestined, preordained. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place unfolding as it should.

It's when you react to life that the problems begin. You have been trained, programmed, since you were a little kid and now you are completely spoiled rotten. For you believe this is right, this is wrong, this is good and this is bad, this should be this way, this should be that way. And if it doesn't work out the way you think it should you get mad, you get into a temper. You get upset.

Life is very simple why make it complicated. Life is simplicity itself. Leave it alone don't try to change anything. Be here to enjoy, to love, to be. Never try to improve things or to change things but just to be yourself.

What is satsang? Or why are you here?

When a person begins a spiritual path it is no accident. Again they did not choose a spiritual path it happened by itself. As you are aware there are millions of people who have no spiritual path at all and the world goes on. But those of us who have a spiritual path have not asked for one it just happened to you due to the fact you came this way through karma. You've been this way before and you're continuing the path.

When you first began you were like a little child, learning about God. Does God really exist? Who is God? You were very inquisitive. If you were really sincere in your heart the guru within pushed you forward. Forward to new vista's, new understanding and you come in contact with a Sage at satsang.

Satsang means sitting at the feet of the Master. Literally sat means wisdom, consciousness. The Master, consciousness, presence is all the same. It's not my consciousness or my wisdom. It's not your wisdom, your consciousness, it's just consciousness and wisdom. I don't own it neither do you. So you come to sit in wisdom. You do not come to get wisdom. You do not come to give wisdom. You come to sit in wisdom, the wisdom which already exists. Which has always existed and which will always exist.

The wisdom which asks you, "Who am I? Where did I come from? Where am I going? What is my purpose in life?" Those questions arise of their own accord. There is no answer to any of the questions. Never seek an answer. If you ever come up with an answer it's the wrong answer. Where there is no place to go, nothing to attain, no God to worship, there is no path whatsoever, there is not even satsang. There is no Master, there is no wisdom. Then what exists? Silence. Pure awareness, silence, the silence of the heart. Infinite silence!

In this silence creation begins. Creation begins when you start to think and you break the silence. In the beginning there was silence. Then you came along and began thinking and now we have an entire universe. You created it out of yourself. Everything that exists came from you and you don't even exist yourself.

So how can you do this? How can a non-existent being create a non-existent universe? That is for you to find out.

Suffice it to say everything that you believe exists does not exist. Everything that you have faith in, does not exist. Your personal Gods, your body, your ego, everything you've believed in does not exist. What exists? Nothing exists. Then you ask, "What am I doing here?" Who says you're here? You allow the mind to play games with you. To tell you you're a man, you're a woman. You have things to accomplish. Possessions to accrue. You compare yourself with the people next door and you make a life for yourself.

Then you find out life doesn't work like you wanted it to and you get upset. But the life that I'm talking about is like a moving picture, that only exists for a time then it disappears. And you look back in retrospect in your life, you will see that you've wasted so much time trying to improve things, trying to judge people places and things. Trying to make things go your way. All this means that you'll be happy when certain things happen the way you think they should. Then when they do happen you're not happy at all, or you're happy for a short time and you become miserable again. You spend your time searching, looking, reading, trying to discover new secrets, everything is a waste of time.

There is nothing going on. Nothing is really happening. Become part of the nothing. Now you're part of something. This something has to change. Everything that the senses behold must change. Do not allow your mind to think about these things. Do not allow your mind to differentiate between good and bad, right and wrong.

Now you know what I'm saying to you makes you think, "Well how am I supposed to live then? You're telling us we're not to do anything? We're not supposed to react. We're not supposed to grow up in the world. We're not supposed to think. We're not supposed to create anything. Then why am I here?" Why are you here? What makes you think you're here? Find out. Are you really here? Who is here and who are you? What are you? An organism that has some sort of life to it, struggling all these years for survival.

Life in its essence is beautiful, but not the life that you're living. There is a life that is so beautiful, so precious, so joyous, but it is beyond the senses. It is beyond knowingness. It is beyond all concepts. It is your real life. Some people call this life Brahman. Some people call this life consciousness, pure awareness, absolute reality. Yet if you don't experience this you don't know it exists. It is just something else in your life that you would know. That somebody else has said before.

You have to keep asking yourself this, over and over again, "What is reality? What is consciousness? What am I doing here?" Find out. Spend periods in the silence, where you observe your breath, where you watch your thoughts, do this as often as you can. Never react to the world no matter what it shows you. Dive deep within the Self.

The way you dive within the Self is by not reacting to life. Every time you see a situation and you do not react to it, you're going deeper within the Self. You are not who you think you are. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. Stop looking at situations, yearning for better things. Believing that if you change your life style things will be better for you.

Learn to leave yourself alone. Do not interfere with yourself. And you will find you will become happier than you've ever been in your life, simply by leaving yourself alone. You have everything you need within you to become self-realized, to become liberated. There is nothing anybody has to give you for this to happen. You have all the tools to make it happen yourself.

Yet you insist on reacting to the world. It is this which keeps you back from self-realization. Who can hurt you? What can hurt you? Nothing but your thoughts, if you stop your thoughts you become unhurt-able, where there is no one left to hurt. If you're involved in your thinking process you become hurt-able, where your thoughts will always bring to you in your mind certain instances. Certain things that you think will hurt you. If you don't do this, if you don't do that, even when you have to do certain things to keep from being hurt. All you really have to do is know who you are. That's it! Understand your real nature, who you really are.

Forget about the past. Forget about people who have hurt you before. Drop everything, let it go. Let go of everything, everything. Hold on to nothing. Stand naked in the world without a foundation. With nothing to take refuge in. Then you'll be cleansed completely, then you'll become the ascended Master. But when you take refuge in this and you take refuge in that, this keeps you from your real Self.

As an example: In buddhism you learn to take refuge in the Buddha, take refuge in the sangha and so forth. Yet when you do this you become an idiot for you're holding on to something. You become dull, insensitive. Hold on to nothing. Yet most of us have fear. We're afraid to do this because we won't know what will happen to us. We feel secure when we take refuge in something. The security is your downfall. As long as you feel secure you will never grow.

It's like having money in the bank. You're afraid to spend it. You're afraid to be without an account. Some of you think this is your nest egg, you hoard it. You always look at the balance to see what you have. This keeps you from advancing spiritually.

Remember the Israelites of old when they were in the desert for forty years they were told not to save any manna. So they threw away the extra manna they had, not to save anything, and new manna was provided for them daily. This is the meaning. As long as you have something to hold onto, something to save you from something, you will never become free and realized. Most of us are afraid of having nothing. Yet nothing is absolute reality. Nothing is your savior. Nothing is reality.

Something on the other hand, is your enemy. Something will always hold you back. I'm not saying you have to give your possessions away, I'm saying possess all you will but not be possessed by your possessions. Do not believe that what you earn will be your security, it never works out this way. Your security is your Self, the faith that you have, the power that you have, the love that you have, this is your security, nothing else. Yet most of us never live this way for we have been brought up to believe that we have to have something. For if we feel that we have nothing, we haven't made it in this world and we become depressed, we compare ourselves with others.

Yet every great spiritual Master has lived from day to day, never caring at all what is going to happen the next day. But you say, "How can we do such a thing in the West?" You say, "This is for monks, nuns. For people who have given up this world." On the contrary, you'll be happier than you have ever been in your life when you stop worrying about your possessions what you should have, what you shouldn't have, for they are not your possessions nor are you your body. It is only the mind that thinks these things.

Why not surrender right now to the power which knows the way. Make up your mind this night that you're going to give up everything, mentally. You're going to let go of the past, the future, the present, you're doing this right now this minute. You're letting go of all your fears, all of your frustrations, all of your thinking. You are no longer concerned what's going to happen to you tomorrow, where you will be, where you won't be. You're not worried about a job, income, people places and things, you have found freedom, absolute freedom. This freedom will take care of you, will guide you, listen to it closely it'll tell you what to do at every turn. This freedom is really you.

Behold I make all things new. I will never leave you nor forsake you. I am with you always even unto the end of the world. Notice I-am. I-am is always with you. For I-am is you. I-am with you always. How can it be any different? I-am is consciousness. It is your very soul, your very Self. Every time you say, "I-am," remember what you're saying. You do not have to say anything after that, just say, "I-am," that's the end.

As you go through the vicissitudes of life. Whatever you see just say, "I-am," and everything will be taken care of. When something seems to be wrong in your life say, "I-am." It's very powerful. It will cause many changes in your life. Do not say anything after

I-am, just I-am, that is sufficient. Not I-am this or I-am that, just I-am. I-am knows what to do. I-am knows what you need. I-am knows who you are. I-am.

Let's go within right now and think along with me along these lines. I-am, I have always been, I will always be. I-am is absolute reality. I-am is the truth about myself. I-am lifts me up in the mortal life to that place in consciousness where I am totally free and liberated. The world can no longer affect me in anyway. People places and things can no longer affect me in any way, for I-am. I have returned to my source, I-am. All is well.

(short silence)

SF: ...(question starts abruptly) a talk on quantum healing. And in this talk he said, in this phenomenal world and the relative plane there, is a field of infinite possibilities and it seems to me that anything in duality is a possibility. In other words the sinking of the Titanic was a possibility. The merging of Christ into Sri Rama Krishna was a possibility. When I saw beautiful colored lights dancing to some music that was being played when I was on an LSD trip, that was a possibility. And when a great airliner takes off from Los Angeles with several hundred people and lands in New York six hours later within minutes of when it's due that's a possibility. Anything in duality is a possibility and it's either real or unreal however I want to look at it. Is that right? (R: Yes.) Thank you.

R: Why not? (laughter) (SF: It's possible.) Anything is possible. (SF: In duality, because it isn't real in the first place.)

(silence)

R: (tape starts abruptly) ...say anything? About the weather?

SV: It's beautiful. The grass grows and the pears need water and the apples and there is a hole in the roof. Depends how you look at it?

R: It's neither lousy nor beautiful. (SV: Yeah. It's nothing.) When you project your thoughts into it, it becomes what your thoughts make of it. (SV: You once equated the question, "Who am I?" with, "Where does I come from?" How are those two meanings connected? How do they connect?) Who am I? Actually means "What is the source of the I?" (SV: Yeah but how does it mean that. It doesn't mean that to my brain.) What brain? (laughter) (SV: The brain that thinks it's asking a question. I mean it asks, "Who is that lady so and so," I'll say, "well that's so and so," but it doesn't say to me she comes from Germany. Those two meanings can't connect to me.) You mean "Who am I?" and "What is the source of the I?" (SV: Pardon?) You mean "What is the source of the I?" and "Who am I?" (SV: You once you said it means that where did the I come from. Those two meanings don't...) They're the same thing. (SV: Yeah?) Where does I come from? Who am I? What is the source of the I? When you keep asking these questions to yourself, you will become still and quiet and peaceful and one day the whole thing will disappear, there will be no more I left. There will be no more Fred left. You will go with the I and you won't have any more questions. So who am I? And what is the source of the I? are synonymous, there's no difference.

SK: They always trouble my brain just like Fred's over here. I finally concluded that this nitwit of a mind just didn't understand English.

R: So use another language.

SX: Robert if you said everything is preordained why then I, wants to find out, who am I?

R: Because it's the only freedom that you have. (SX: Well I am going to find out "who am I," any way if it's preordained that I will find out "who I am," why am I wanting to find it out?) Everything is preordained as you say, but yet you have the freedom to find out who you are and go beyond the whole thing. When you inquire "Who am I?" what you're doing is you're letting go of everything. The preordination, the pre-destiny everything must go, it goes away, it disappears and you find out that you are Brahman, you are absolute reality. (SX: Yeah but even though that I do...how would I put it?) See when you realize that everything is predetermined, predestined, then you're stuck, that goes for everything but, "Who am I?" releases you from that. It releases you from predetermination and pre-destiny. It makes you completely free. (SX: But why do I want to find out? If I do not even exist why do I, want to find out, who I am?) Because you don't believe that you don't exist. If you really knew that you didn't exist you wouldn't have to do that. But you don't believe you don't exist for you think you are somebody. Then you have to practice the practices to be nobody. Intellectually you are saying that I am nobody. I don't exist. Then you ask the question, "Why do I have to do this for?" But if you knew you were nobody you wouldn't have to do anything. There is nothing you have to do. So now it makes you realize this. So now when you inquire, "Who am I?" it'll take you to this place where you will be totally free and liberated.

See you really don't believe it consciously right now. You state it but you don't believe it. So you have to practice "who am I?" and take it deeper and further into the Self where you'll be totally free. Do you see what I mean? (SX: Well isn't that preordained too, that...just like when you...while you're here but you think that you're doing something but isn't it all preordained, it's already...) It's all preordained but to get beyond it, to transcend the preordination you inquire, "Who am I?" This takes you out, this awakens you, to give you total freedom, liberation. But if you don't do that then everything is preordained and keeps on being preordained. The only freedom from preordination is to ask, "Who am I?" To go within. Then you'll break it all to pieces. You'll break out of the shell of preordination, pre-destiny, karma. That is the only way you break away from it.

SP: The inquiry is also preordained right? The fact that I ask the question "Who am I?"

R: The inquiry has never been preordained. The inquiry is the freedom that you have. We have a certain freedom. If everything was preordained we would not be able to be anybody, be anything, we would be the same way all the time. Nothing would ever change. We wouldn't get out of it. So when you ask, "Who am I?" it transcends the preordination and brings you to reality.

SX: But actually we don't believe that we don't exist? ( R: Yes.) We believe that we exist that is why we keep on thinking and doing what we think we're doing? (R: Exactly.) And if we realized that we not even exist then we be not preordained? (R: Exactly.)

SP: You often say that we don't have any choice in the matter except the choice to turn within. Do we really have the choice to turn within? (R: Yes.) Who has the choice to turn within if there...if we don't ever choose in the matter?

R: The one who believes they have no choice. (SP: So there is only one choice that we have?) The one choice that you have is to turn within, not to react to any condition. (SP: That's where I get confused. Who has the choice to do that if the thought is predetermined and there is no individual.') It's all predetermined except as a choice that is the only freedom you've got. If you believe you're an individual then everything is preordained. So because you believe this you have the choice to ask yourself, "Who am I?" and turn within. (SP: Yeah but whether or not I do that, is that a choice is that one more event in the process.') It's a choice. It's the only freedom we've got, the only choice we've got. To turn within, to know the truth and the whole ball game is over. (SP: We make a choice to do that? It just does not happen as one more step in the evolution or whatever?') It is your choice, it is your freedom that you have to make. You have the freedom to make the choice.

SP: What's the freedom based on? In other words who is making it? What kind of entity has the freedom to make a choice? Like for me everything that I do is based on a conditioning...

R: Yes it's the ego that makes the choice. The same ego that doesn't exist, the same ego that is preordained is also the ego that makes the choice. But as you turn within you transcend the ego totally and completely. You become free.

SP: Yeah, I can understand that part but I don't understand how there is one choice out of the midst of no choice, do you know what I mean? I don't get where there is an individual who has that some kind of volitional power to do the turning within. It seems like there it's still integrated in the whole scheme of things. Maybe it'll lead to the transcendence of the predetermination but it still seems to be in the realm of predetermination to turn within.

R: It seems that way but it's not. The predetermination exists in all areas except when you say, "Who am I?" (SP: And what makes us say that?') Your spiritual practices that brought you here, throughout the years, throughout the centuries, you're ready to say that now. Prior to this you weren't ready to do this. You just went along with the game.

SP: The freedom to say, "Who am I?" is based on doing something in the past, so-to-speak. Whether it's spiritual practices or just reaching a certain level of some kind, trying to put it in those words?

R: By practicing spiritual sadhana all of these years, you're getting to the point now where you can say, "Who am I?" (SP: So the sadhana is the preconditioning, the preconditions, the prerequisites to say, "Who am I?')) Yes, it has brought you to that place. Prior to that you wouldn't want to do that. Prior to that you wouldn't want to do that. You wouldn't want to do anything like that. (SP: Right) Now you will.

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 234

IN THE QUIETNESS IS YOUR STRENGTH

28th March, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...Don't you feel wonderful? (Students: Yeah.) Of course. Again good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert) It is good to be with you here again.

Most of you have come to listen to words, but I tell you the message is in-between the words. In the silence, where there is no talk going on. That's the message. That's where truth is, that's where reality is, when there are no sounds, no words. Words are only to motivate you to keep quiet. That's all words are good for. Chanting, words, they're only to quieten the mind. Keep you still. In the stillness is your reality. In the quietness is your strength, not in the noise, not in the talk. Try to be quiet most of the time. Do not get involved in too many conversations.

People have been talking since the beginning of time. What did it accomplish them? Look at the world, the precarious position it's in. It's all done by talking, talk, talk, talk talk. And now you come here to listen to me talk to add to the confusion. But I say to you, "You have to give up the talking. You have to give up all the dogmas and confusions and nonsense. Drop it all and be still. Be still and know that I am God."

When you are still you will feel the presence of the power. You will feel the absolute reality of what you are. Only in quietness can you feel this...this peace. Not in noise, but in peace, in quietness. Only then will you feel a stillness and a harmony and joy.

How many of you are happy?

S: We're happy.

R: How many of you are really, really happy?

S: Sometimes. (laughter)

R: How many of you are really really really happy?

S: No not that. (students laugh)

R: Very few.

We still believe happiness lies in things and places and people. We still believe that if we won the lotto we'll be happy for a while or if you meet the right person you'll be happy. When things go your way you'll be happy.

How many times have you done this and you've not been happy. Happiness lasts for a short time, material happiness, then it goes away. Can you believe that there is such a thing as unalloyed happiness, unbroken happiness, happiness that goes with you and stays with you and never changes? Yes my friends there is such a happiness. If you ever felt it you'll never be the same again. It's a happiness that brings you bliss and joy and awakens you to the truth of your Self. This happiness is you. It is your natural birthright it is what you really are. But you've been looking in all the wrong places.

Do you know the song, "Looking for love in all the wrong places?" When it's within yourself, all you have to do is turn within. It's not on the outside. It's not in a better job or a better person or more money or more health. This has absolutely nothing to do with it, yet it appears that it does.

We're all born to die so-to-speak. Noone is going to last forever. Whatever you accumulate, whatever you do in this life, you can't take it with you. So why are you searching for things that you can't take with you? Does that make any sense? You can't take certain people with you. You can't take your couch or your house with you. You can't take your car with you. You can't even take your body with you. It all stays behind.

Yet most of us never want to think about these things. We don't want to think we leave something behind. We think we're going to live forever, what a joke. And yet there is an infiniteness within you, a joy within you, that never dies, it lives forever. What is it that lives forever? Find out. I'm not going to tell you. I'll spoil all of the fun.

You're not what you think you are. You're not what appears to be. Forget about all your problems, all your joys, all your sorrows, all your happiness, forget about all these things. They can do absolutely nothing to you or for you. Stop thinking, quiet your mind, become still, peaceful, then you will feel the presence, then you will feel the power.

Do you feel it? When it's quiet, silent. Tremendous power, tremendous bliss, joy. It abides as you when you keep still. When you rejoice in your Self. When you take refuge in your Self. When you love your Self.

Have you ever tried really to love your Self? I'm not speaking about your ego, what you appear to be, but to love the Self. The real Self! The Self which has always been and will always be. You are that Self right now just the way you are. Nothing has to change. You're saying nothing has to change, my life is all screwed up. If nothing has to change then it has to change. You're looking at the wrong picture. The screwed up life is not yours. You're not that at all. When you love the Self you love the Self which is eternal, the absolute reality, consciousness, pure awareness, that is your Self.

Have you ever thought of yourself as pure awareness, total freedom, complete bliss, boundless space. This is your true nature boundless space, all-pervading, omnipresence. Feel yourself as that. Forget about your body. Stop thinking about it, leave it alone. It's not you. It never was you. You are boundless space, pure awareness, beauty, joy, everlasting bliss.

You must begin seeing yourself this way. What you see you become. What you feel you become. What you think about all day long you become. What do think about yourself all day long? How you see yourself, how you feel about yourself. It's an important question. For you are what you see. There is only one Self and you are that. But if you see something else it's not my fault.

Why are you seeing the confusion, the chaos, the turmoil, the sickness, the poverty, the lack? Who tells you see this?

You've been brainwashed since you were a little person to believe that this is a universe you have to struggle in, overcome things, that's a lie. There is nothing you have to overcome because there is nothing you ever became to overcome. You are pure consciousness, pure being, this is your nature and if you see and think everything is Brahman, you will become Brahman. If you see everything as lack and limitation, you will become lack and limitation. You're in control, you're in charge of this. No one can really control you, you are the power. You have all the power that exists it is all within you. It is all you. You are that! You have always been that. What makes you think you are something else. Awaken to the truth. Awaken to reality, your reality. The one reality!

What about this world? This world is like a dream, that's all, just a dream. It comes and it goes. It's here today, it's gone tomorrow. Would you get involved in the dream and think it's real? If you're dreaming you get tied up by savages and they're cooking you alive. When you woke up would you try to go put the fire out, try to escape? You'd laugh. You'd see this is all a dream, it's not happening I'm awake now. And so it is with this world, this universe.

Things appear to be real, it makes you react to things. You try to change things, you try to improve this world, yet you're doing it all in the dream. So you say, should I do nothing good in this world? Should I help others? As long as you're dreaming help others. Do good in this world. Do what you can to alleviate the pain and the suffering of others. But when you awaken you will see there never were any others. There is no others, there is only the one, the one reality, you are that. There never were any others, but as long as you don't experience this state you must continue to do good works. Do what you can to help the misery of this world, have compassion, loving kindness. Help others all you can. But all of the time work on yourself. Continue to work on yourself, always. Never stop working on yourself.

How do you work on yourself?

Whenever something happens to you, when you see something in the world you don't agree with, you don't like, or have a feeling inside that disturbs you, question and ask, "To whom does it come? Who experiences this feeling? To whom does it come?" And you say, "It comes to me. I feel this." Then inquire further, "Who am I?" This process is called self-inquiry or the direct path. It skips all the meditations, yoga, pranayama, ni-pranayama, it goes beyond everything. It goes beyond everything. Direct path self-inquiry. It's good for everyone, everyone should practice it.

When you first get up in the morning, as soon as thoughts come to you ask, "To whom do these thoughts come?" Ask yourself, whatever the thoughts are. "To whom do these come? Who is experiencing these thoughts? Who has these feelings?" and the next answer will be, "I do." You inquire further then, "Who am I?" What you're really saying is, "What is the source of this I?" This is what you're really saying. Where did this I come from? What is its source? I is the root thought, the root thought, root of all thoughts. If you can quench the I all the other thoughts will go with it. You don't have to try to remove thoughts or change thoughts, you simply get rid of the I that thinks that. When the I is eliminated so will all of your thoughts be and you'll be home. This is what you should practice day and night, all of the time. It's the best psychotherapy in the world.

Whenever something disturbs you, no matter what it is. Whenever something annoys you, whenever something bothers you, inquire within yourself, "To whom does this come? Who feels this? Who feels this?" and of course you will say, "I do." The I is the answer. "Where does this I come from that feels this? Am I the I? No, I wouldn't be able to say, 'I do.' Who is this I? Where did it come from? How did it appear? The I is only a thought. It has no validity, no reality, it's a thought." Follow it to its source by observing it, by watching it.

As you do this certain thoughts will come to you again, then you repeat the procedure again and again. "To whom does this come? Who is feeling this? Who is thinking this? I am. What is this I? Who is this I? Where did it come from? Where did I come from?" What you're doing you're separating yourself from the I. Slowly by slowly, little by little you're separating yourself from the I-thought. And one day the I will just vanish completely. At that time you will become absolute reality, pure awareness.

But you have to practice this continuously. As you're going to sleep, when you wake up, all of the time. Who am I? Meaning what is the source of the I? To whom do these thoughts come? Who feels depressed? Who feels disturbed? Who feels out of sorts? I do. Who am I? And you have to yearn for freedom inside. You have to yearn for absolute freedom and make it first in your life. What's first in your life you become.

Think for a moment, what is the most important thing in your life? To be free? To have a million dollars? If you have a million dollars then you have to go to work and do all kinds of things to get rich, it'll take up all of your time and one day you'll drop dead and that is the end of that. Whereas if you're smart you will try to find out what the truth to your reality is. What is reality? Who am I? Where did I come from? What is life all about? It's all within you, all the answers are within you waiting to express themselves.

Do not waste any more time but diligently begin to practice this method. Wherever you are, it makes no difference whether you're driving your car, if you're watching the TV, if you're doing the dishes, if you're working in the office. Anyone can practice "Who am I?"

Now feel the silence. The silence we're in isn't the silence. It's beyond explanation. When I speak of the silence, I'm speaking of reality, God, consciousness. Feel it! Feel it right now.

As you feel it, if thoughts come to you ask yourself, "To whom do these come? Who is feeling these thoughts? Who is being bothered by these thoughts? I am. Well who am I?" This is a definite method that will bring you home if you will practice it. Do not think of time, how long it will take. For time is non-existent.

It's like the story of the student who was with a Master and his Master was teaching him all these truth principles and he kept asking, "Master how long will it take me to get there? How long will it take?" He bothered the Master all day long. Finally the Master told him, "Come with me." He took him to the lake and told him to look into the lake. When he did this the Master pushed him into the lake and held his head under the water for a long time. When he pulled him up by the hair he looked the student in the eye and asked him, "What was it that you wanted mostly when you were under the water drowning?" And all the student wanted was to grasp for air and he said, "Air! Air!" And the Master said, "When you want truth as much as you wanted air you'll have it. When you want to be free as much as you wanted the air, you'll become free." And so it is with us.

Again what do we put first in our lives? What do we get involved in? Think of all the nonsense going on in our lives. Do we need all of this nonsense? Drop it! Drop everything! Your true nature is absolute reality. Your true nature is bliss consciousness. Your true nature is pure awareness. You are that Brahman who has always been and always will be. You are the universe right now. Enjoy it, accept it, be it and be free.

(pause as tape starts abruptly)

...the guru in which you ask any question. If you stump me you get to sit over here and I get to sit over there, so feel free to ask a question about anything. Very inquisitive bunch of people.

SY: What is the purpose of evil in the world?

R: To whom does the evil come? Who experiences evil? Is there such a thing as evil? That's how it appears. Is there really evil? The logic that appears to us is a cleansing process. A human being so-to-speak, a world so-to-speak, it doesn't exist. It appears to be cleansed every now and again. The way this earth is cleansed is through earthquakes, cataclysms, all kind of good things like that. And everything begins fresh and new. But when a person is cleansed it's through suffering so-it-appears. You go through certain suffering and you come out of it beautiful and happy, maybe not in this life.

It's like a flower. When you plant a rose seed, if you were as big as an atom and you observe the rose seed you see a tremendous explosion taking place. Like a nuclear explosion. In order for the rose to come out there has to be destroyed. There has to be an explosion and the beautiful rose comes out. In other words, if there is no explosion you wouldn't have the rose. This is true with everything in life - what appears to be life.

So something happened that we were told, when we were little, is evil. And we separate it and we say, "This is evil, this is good. This is right, this is wrong." It's all taking place in your mind. Everything takes place in your mind. Stop the mind from moving and everything will stop, and there will be no more evil for you. That is why it is written, "Evil is in the eyes of the beholder." So it's what you see. You may see evil and another person in the same situation sees harmony and joy. Depends who is looking, who is seeing. So rather than try to differentiate between evil and good, right and wrong, dive within yourself and find out who you are, then see if there is any evil in the world.

SK: Robert what can help individuals, in their motivation for liberation? Not quite as much as the fellow that wanted air when he was drowning. Can anything be done about that?

R: Begin to work on themselves continuously, peacefully, until that time comes when you have that kind of desire, that kind of feeling. As you look at this world and become disturbed by it you will one day realize, "Why am I going after this world? Why am I allowing the world to bother me? Why do I react to this world?" And you will go deeper and deeper and deeper. As you come to satsang all of the time, and you keep studying all these things you will find that you are gradually becoming less and less, and your true Self is becoming more and more. And you will win eventually. So don't think that you're not doing it or you have no desire, there are things keeping you back, do the best you can. And when you're not practicing do good to others, have compassion for the world. Handle it the best you can and everything will take care of itself.

It's hard when we look at ourselves and think that we're making progress or not. We can't do this for ourselves. But anyone who comes to satsang like this, or practices these things by themselves, something is happening. Something wonderful is happening inside and one day you will feel it. You just keep practicing, practicing, practicing, then you will be home soon. Have no fear all is well.

SB: Robert is going deeper and deeper and deeper something like when water gets hotter and hotter and hotter? And it doesn't appear that anything is happening, it's still plain old water, and there is a point where it just starts to bubble, and there is a point that it actually evaporates and completely changes from water into vapor and disappears. Is that like going deeper and deeper into silence? There is a certain point where you just evaporate or coincide with reality and then everything, you know...

R: If you wish to use that analogy that's fine.

SB: Because I noticed that long ago, about twenty years ago I had a profound thing happen to me. Just by accident, I had never read a book or never went to any meetings of any kind and just looking back now on how it happened it was like falling and falling and falling into emptiness for several days. And then there was a point where there was just absolutely nothing, a profound emptiness then there was a tremendous fear at a certain point. And when I look back on it, it seems like it was a death, a more profound emptiness, no motion at all. And then at a certain point something happened like an explosion. So the silence, it seems like we could be silent in the mind and nothing seems to be happening. And I look back at that and remember what a difference that was between that silence of absolute death like and that just for a few minutes, and then the mind coming back and then the desires coming back. But it was just like a completely different mode of being. (R: Try for it again.) That day it happened by accident. It was like a coincidence. It wasn't something I knew about and tried for... (R: It happened by itself.) It just happened by accident without ever knowing a single teaching. Never read a single book.

R: That is the best way for it to happen. What happened, why did it go away? (SB: Mind came back, "How could I live like this?" That was the first thought.) See this means...what this means to me is you never really had it. If you really had it, it would never go away.

(SB: So what is it then? it wasn't the real thing but it was some kind of a...) Yes, you had a spiritual experience which was good. (SB: Yeah.) You went to a certain degree but not to the Self of it. At least you know something is there. It makes your belief stronger. Because if you did not experience anything... (SB: Yeah.) ...you wouldn't know if anything exists like this. But since you had the experience you know it exists.

SB: But the funny thing is that, you know, everybody, it's like we're all searching for something, and the funny thing is, in this little thing that happened, it came out of absolutely nothing, nothing, not a speck of anything.

R: You will experience it again. It will stay with you this time. It won't go away. All is well.

We have a reading by Mary. We read this once a year.

S: It is called, "Mind the business for which you have come":

"All events in life are shaped according to the divine plan. What is bound to happen will happen. What is not to happen cannot be brought about by any human effort. On this point Ramana was quite categoric. When Deva Raja Mudaliar questioned him as to whether only important things in ones life, such as major occupation or profession alone, are predetermined, or even trifling acts, Ramana replied, "Everything is predetermined."

"One of the purposes of birth is to go through certain experiences which have been marked out in the karmic unfoldment of this life. The whole program is chalked out. This would apparently be a dampener to all effort, for one would be puzzled as to what the responsibility of man is. Is he an automation of karmic forces? Where do his free will and effort come in?"

Ramana points out that there is another deeper purpose in life, that is to search and find out the truth for oneself. He would say that the only useful purpose of life, is to turn within and realize there's nothing else to do. Ramana would therefore constantly din into everyone the fact that the ultimate truth is ..., immediately available here and now.

When Natanananda asked Ramana, "Is it possible for everyone to know directly, without doubt, what exactly is ones true nature?" prompt came the reply, "Undoubtedly it is possible. The ultimate truth is so simple," Ramana would say. "It is nothing more than abiding in ones own state." This is the essential message of all religions and creeds. Leaving aside the automatic course of our lives regulated by the creator, according to his law, ones duty is to channel effort to be self-aware. Steadfastness of purpose is in treading the inner path through vigilant self-inquiry. On such inquiry as to the source of the individual, the inquirer merges in the conscious source.

The inner odyssey is seldom smooth sailing. Full many a delusion would wean one away. For instance, people would go to Sri Ramana ashram to breathe its rarified atmosphere, while there, instead of surrendering to his flowing grace, they would get involved in the happenings of the ashram management. Ramana used to jovially remark of some visitors, "On their first visit to Sri Ramana ashram, they seemed to be alight. On the second visit they discovered that the ashram is not properly run and on the third visit they start giving advice. On the fourth they know best how to run the place. And on the fifth they discover that the management is not responsive. On the sixth, they suggest that the present staff should walk out, leaving the ashram to them." They would thus get bogged down in things which are irrelevant for the search. When such people complained, Ramana would say: "Mind the business for which you have come."

This would apply, of course, not only to their visit to Shri Ramana ashram, but also to the purpose of human life itself. One has to constantly keep before the mind's eye the liberating purpose, the only worth while one of freeing oneself from the karmic chain, by discovering the hidden truth. Ramana would even seemingly chide if one failed to pursue one's own sadhana, but spent time thinking and talking of others.

A devotee once told Ramana, "I have been here for many years. People got into Samadhi. I close my eyes for a minute and my mind travels around the world." Ramana replied, "Why do you think about others? Let them meditate, sleep or snore. Look to yourself. Whenever your mind goes astray bring it back to the quest."

Once Bhagwan told a devotee, "You wake up, look at the mirror, it shows the growth to be got rid of. Instead of wasting time, start shaving. Similarly, heaven knows when the allotted time would end. Hence, not to seek the truth by vigilant self-inquiry is truly suicidal. Many would like to blame their circumstances for their indolence and laziness and failure to pursue self-inquiry." Ramana would ask, "Why depend on that which is not in your hands. Go ahead with the business which is in your hands, under your control, leaving aside what you cannot do anything about."

Proper utilization of God given freedom of turning the mind, is what is needed all the time. As for adverse circumstances in life of which everyone has a belly full, while sympathizing, Ramana would at the same time say, "You are always free not to be affected by the pleasure and pain consequent on action." The teeth have to be taken out of the event by an attitudinal change which neutralizes it.

Sometimes Ramana would advise leaving things to the sure hand of the sat guru, and to stick single-mindedly to the effort which would make one self-aware. Ramana would say, "Why don't you do what the first class railway passenger does? He tells the guard his destination, locks the door and goes to sleep. The rest is done by the guard. If you can trust your guru as much as you trust the railway guard, it will be good enough to make you reach the destination." Again when someone pestered him for the darshan of Shri Krishna, he said, "Why don't you leave the shaktakara of Krishna to Krishna." We also have the pointed advice given by him to Ganapada Muni. "Remain all the time steadfast in the heart. God will determine the future for you and accomplish the work. What is to be done will be done at the proper time, don't worry. Abide in the heart." Life becomes meaningful if we joyously tread the inward path, remembering that ours is to do the vichara and it is for the inner source to do the rest. Then bliss is not the end product to be found on reaching the goal, but is felt all along the homeward, heart-ward journey."

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert...)

(tape ends abruptly.) [TOC]

GET OUT OF THE DREAM BUSINESS

1st April, 1993

Robert: Om, Shanti, Shanti, Shanti, Om. Good Evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you just the way you are, unconditionally. I mean you could be the biggest bum in the world and I'll still love you. I don't care what you do, I'll still love you. You can hijack cars, rob banks, I'll still love you. Makes no difference. Do what you must, but always remember somebody loves you.

Again, let me remind you, if you've come here to hear a speech, you've come for the wrong reason. If you've come to hear a sermon, you've come for the wrong reason. If you've come to hear philosophy, you've come for the wrong reason. If you came to hear nothing, you still came for the wrong reason! (laughter) So, there's no valid reason for you to be here! Why are you here? Why am I here? (Someone says, The Silence!) That's it!

Someone has asked me to speak about the dream state versus the waking state. So I'll mumble a few words about those things:

First of all, to a Jnani, to a Sage, there's no dream state and there's no waking state. None of those exists for the Sage. But for the ajnani there appears to be a dream state and a waking state. And the remarks that are made is this: "The waking state appears to be long. It appears to go on forever. But the dream state ends." And as a matter of fact, you have about eight, nine dreams a night. You usually only remember the last one.

So how can I say that the waking state is a dream state also?

Well, let's look at it this way. In what you call the dream state, you were born, you go to school, you get older, time passes, you get married, you have a job, you grow older, you're eighty-five years old and you start declining. This is the dream that you're having. Now, if I came into your dream state and I told you, "You're dreaming. You're not really eighty-five years old and you were never born and none of this has ever happened." You would throw rocks at me. And you'd say, "What are you talking about? A century has nearly gone by. I remember when I was a little boy or a little girl and now I'm an old lady or an old man and I've got cancer. And you're telling me, this is a dream?"

You wouldn't believe me. I tell you, do not concern yourself with your cancer or your state of eighty-five years old. Do not concern yourself with what's going on in your life. Rather, look within yourself for reality. Find reality and everything will take care of itself. Again you'll throw rocks at me. You don't want to hear anything like this. You say, "I've gone through all kinds of experiences in my life. And you're trying to tell me it's a dream? You can't fool me, this is not a dream, this is real!" Look I could even pinch you and you'll say, "Ow!" But then I say, "Remember, this is a dream pinch! It's all a dream." But you still won't believe me. Then when I leave, you awaken.

You awaken to this dream state. This state, what you call the waking state. And the dream is all gone, it's all finished, like it never existed. And you laugh. You were never born in the dream, you never went to school in the dream. You never got married in the dream. You never became eighty-five years old in the dream. You never had cancer in the dream. You've awakened to this state! Yet you say, "This state is longer." It's longer because you're having the dream, that's all! Remember when I was in your dream, when you were eighty-five years old? To you it was a long dream. You went through many experiences. You went through eighty-five years of experiences and they all seemed very valid to you. Yet it happened in a split second. It happened in a split second, all the years, the experiences, the cancer. It happened in a split second and you awake, you awaken to this state.

This state is the same thing. This is also a dream state. Not any different than the dream state that you dream at night. Same thing! It's only another dream. And you will only understand this when you awaken! A person is no longer in the dream state, no longer in the waking state, they're in a state of sahaja samadhi between the waking and dream state. There is really no state for a person like that. But to the ajnani, he believes that a Sage is in the waking state like they are.

How do you get out of this, the dream business? How do you transcend those both states?

Simply by going beyond them, you go beyond the dream state by realizing that when you react to conditions, to person, place or thing, you are perpetuating the dream. You can tell where you are by the way you react to life. If you believe that your body's getting older, that you're a person, that you have problems, you react to life's conditionings, then you're caught up in the dream, just like any dream at night. All kinds of conditions befall you and you believe it's real and you react to them. As long as you react to them you will never get out of it. You feel angry, you feel fear, you believe something is wrong some place. Then you can never get out of the dream. In other words, you'll go from one dream to the next. This is called reincarnation. It's one dream after the other dream. It never ends. You take on body after body after body, always dreaming, always reacting, always believing something is wrong, something is right, something is good, something is bad. And again, as long as you believe this, you'll never get out of it.

So the way to get out of it completely is to realize that there is an observer who observes both states. The observer observes both states, the dream state and the so called, waking state.

Now remember this is for the ajnani. For the Sage nothing like this exists. For the ajnani, you have to think to yourself, "Who is the observer? Who created this?" in other words, "Who made all this up? Who created the so called dream state and the waking state?" And if you think real carefully, it's our old friend Ishvara, the god of karma. Ishvara has been playing with his leela again. You tell Ishvara to stop playing with his leela and he won't listen. He's feeling these states.

Ishvara, for some of you who don't know who he is, he's a personal god that you have created out of your mind.

When you believe that you are a body, then you created god in your own image, and we call this god, Ishvara, the god of karma. It is he who dictates all these things, what's going to happen, what karma you're going through, how many lives you're going to live.

Now, here's the secret, if you get rid of Ishvara, it'll be finished. You'll be free!

You've got to kill Ishvara. Ishvara has to be removed, totally and completely then you'll be totally and completely free! How do you kill Ishvara? By laughing in his face "Who are you? Where do you come from? You can't frighten me any longer. I no longer accept you. You're part of my mind, my imagination. You're part of my false imagination! You do not exist!"

Now, I bet some of you here are afraid to do something like this because you think you are insulting god. What kind of god are you insulting? A god that you made up yourself! You created this god. Where else would he come from? Is there a god up in the sky looking down at you throwing lightening bolts, saying, "You're a good boy, you're a bad girl! I'm going to punish you. I'm going to reward you." Do you know some of you really believe this? Yes, while I'm talking to you, some of you really accept this. And you're afraid to get rid of this God.

But can't you see this very god is keeping you in bondage! It's this very god that makes you take on new bodies, makes you believe that you're a person, with problems. It is this very god that makes you worry about your body or about your finances, concern yourself with the world situation. And this god laughs while you cry! You're concerned about this. You're concerned about that. You're concerned about everything. Only when the god is removed will you become free It's up to you to remove this god. You've got to do it, nobody can do it but you. This is not blasphemy. Blasphemy is when you're believing that the Self that can hurt you. When you believe in problems, when you believe something is wrong, that's blasphemy!

But it is virtually impossible for anything to be wrong for this whole universe the whole world is consciousness. The whole universe is consciousness. It has absolutely nothing to do with gods or goddesses, or karma or reincarnation or dreams. These things are part of human thinking. When you realize you're no longer human, they disappear. You must become inhuman. It is up to you to do this.

You have to ask yourself the right questions. Many of you are afraid to question yourself. You're afraid that god is watching you and you'll be punished. Yet, some of you actually believe this. But I say to you from direct experience, there's no god at all anywhere in the universe that can punish you or wants to punish you or has tried to punish you. If there's a god that exists, he's too busy screwing up the world to think of you! (laughter)

What big egos some of us have, we think god is looking at us, judging us. We're so important, we're being judged, by an anthropomorphic God some place up in the sky. We're so important, aren't we? That this mighty god is punishing us personally for being bad little boys and girls. Get rid of all this, once and for all! Remove it from your mind! Empty your mind totally of this kind of thinking.

There is only pure awareness, absolute reality and that is you right now! Right this moment! Don't think about it, just be it! Do not attempt to analyze what I'm saying or try to figure it out in any way, just be it! What I'm talking about you can only be. You can't think about it. When you begin to think about it, the truth about the matter disappears. Then you get caught in the body, in a thinking body. Yet, there's no time or space for any thoughts to exist. For time and space themselves do not exist. So where can you think? There's no place for you to think. For the thoughts have to move. And there is no room for thoughts.

But what I'm telling you is that you're absolutely free right now. Absolutely liberated right this minute. You are. You are the entire universe right now. You who was never born, can never die. You are the one, right now! This very moment! Feel it! There is nothing else.

How wonderful it is to be totally free. Free of praying to gods for your salvation. Free of thinking of a body that needs care or you have lack or limitation some place in your life. Be free of this kind of thinking. I know some of you are saying, "Well, it's okay for him to say that. But the doctor told me I got cancer. I got AIDS. And I have no funds in the bank. My wife or husband left me." Who are you talking about? You're not talking about the real Self, that you are! You're talking about somebody who doesn't exist! You're speaking of a dream person! That's here today and gone tomorrow! You're not speaking of the Self. Wake up!

Try to understand what I'm saying to you. You are the god! You are the Brahman. You are the Self.

Stop thinking of yourself as a mortal being, once and for all. Stop it! Cut it out! Behave yourself! Wake Up! Know who you are. Change your mind. Lift it up from this nonsensical thinking, and allow the mind to think in the heart. The heart will open up as a rose does with its calyx to the sun. And you will begin to laugh in joy and ecstasy, that you are the one. The one that is beyond time and space The one that is beyond reality, beyond causation. You are that one. Awaken to it, now. Wake up! Don't just sit there like a lump of manure, wake up! Who do you think you are? You are the god, remember this always. The only god that exists! There is no other god but you.

Again, do not try to think these things through. The worst mistake you can make is to think of what I'm saying. Do not think about it. Just be it. Let it happen. Why? Because when you think about it, you spoil it. Remember, the mind is only a conglomeration of energy, of thoughts, that's what the mind is, thoughts about the past, thoughts of the future, thoughts of the present. When you begin to think about your thoughts, it puts you in time and space. And in time and space a lot of other thoughts come. One thought leads to another thought it never ends, as you know all very well. Thoughts keep coming and coming and coming and coming once you let them come in. Stop thinking once and for all.

When your mind tries to think, ask it, "Who thinks? Who's thinking?" Something will tell you, "I am." And you realize you're not this "I" at all. The "I" that thinks is the I-thought, an idea. Not reality. Again, the I-thought has to rest in the heart. As you go into the heart, then the heart is opened again. And that time will you feel your reality.

Remember, all this stuff is for the ajnani. All the nonsense and babbling is for the person who thinks they're human, who gets offended, gets insulted, becomes angry, thinks there's something wrong some place. That's who I'm talking to. If you're not that person, don't listen to a word I say.

(short silence)

You are here for one reason. Don't ask me what that reason is. I don't know why you're here at all. But you're here and I'm here and we're all one and all is well.

I want you now to take a hard look at the problems that you think you have. Those of you who think you have a problem of some kind, take a look at it right now. Look at it carefully. Examine it. And ask yourself, "Who has this problem? Who really has this problem?" Try to understand that if you can get rid of the idea that you're human, that you're a personal self, a personal ego, the problem will disappear of its own accord. Remember, it's only the ego that has the problem, the small self, not you!

You are the god. It's virtually impossible for you to have a problem. But when you identify with the self, the small self, the ego self, it's full of problems. It's time for us to awaken to the truth. There are no problems. There's no body. There's no mind. There's no karma. There's no reincarnation. There's no personal god. There is only that! And you are that! Don't you really feel good now, to know that you are that! Some of you are saying, "What's That?" Don't worry about what that is, just become that and be happy.

I tell you all is well. All is exceedingly well, why won't you believe me? Some of you believe you've come here to do great things on this earth, become famous, invent something wonderful. But I tell you, you didn't come here to do anything like this. Because you don't even belong here. You're in the wrong place! You're in a dream world believing that you've got to become famous. And you haven't become famous or you're suffering, upset. Take a good look at this, look at it carefully. Look at what you've been doing all these years.

You aren't like other people or you wouldn't be here tonight. That's why I can talk to you freely. Your lot is not to go to work every day and come home at five or six o'clock, watch TV, go to sleep, take a vacation once a year. This is not for you. You are here to do nothing, absolutely nothing! That should be your motive, your goal, to become nothing.

This doesn't mean you would be inactive. On the contrary, you will accomplish many beautiful things.

But you will not be the doer. You will realize that you are not the doer and you never were the doer. Isn't this wonderful news? To realize and understand that you are not the doer? Yet, you are doing things. I know it sounds like a contradiction, but it's not. Your body will appear to do something, yet you are not the doer and you're doing nothing! Does this mean there are two of you? On the contrary, there is only one. But the world sees you doing something. Yet, you know you're not doing a thing.

Again, do not try to understand this with your mind. The mind will just foul you up. The mind is only good for one purpose, to foul you up, to make life miserable for you. That's all the mind does. It tells you all sorts of things about person, place and thing. And you react to it and you become further pulled into it. This is the nature of your mind! It's false imagination.

Again, how do you get out of this whole thing? By becoming quiet, still, quiescent, finding the observer of the observed. Asking yourself, "Who observes all these things? I do. I've always been the observer. Then "Who am I? Who is this "I" who is the observer? Where did this "I" come from? Who created it?" Every question you ask yourself, you have the same answer, "I did." It's always "I-I-I."

When you do this enough, you will realize it is the "I" that is the root cause of all creation. "I" is the root cause of everything in your life. Everything! This is a new revelation. It's a marvelous revelation for you to understand. "I" has been the root cause of all your problems, all your good, all your bad, everything that's going on in the world, your idea of what god is, what karma, what reincarnation is. It has been "I" who has been the observer all this time.

Next something will tell you, "Kill the "I" and you'll be free." The "I" is synonymous with the mind. Get rid of this "I" and you will be totally free. The question now arises, "How do I get rid of the "I"?" By inquiring, "Who am I?" That's how you get rid of the "I". As you keep inquiring, there will become a greater space between each question. When you ask, "Who am I?" everything will stop and you'll find a big space between "Who am I?" and "Who am I?" In that space is the reality. The space between "Who am I?" is the answer that you're looking for. The absolute reality has no spoken words to describe. There are no words to describe it. But you'll find yourself resting in the silence more and more. You'll find yourself being quiet more and more. You will stop debating with people about points of religion, philosophy. You'll stop talking altogether, as a matter of fact. There will be nothing else to talk about, nothing else to explain, nothing else to prove.

For you will realize it's a personal experience for every person, every being. You will also find yourself becoming happier and happier as the days go by, as the weeks go by, as the months go by. You're becoming more peaceful, more relaxed. You're no longer thinking about the body like you used to. You're no longer thinking about your affairs, yet your affairs are taken care of in a beautiful way. You are coming out of your shell in to the land of milk and honey. Who wants to live in the land of milk and honey? Can you imagine having nothing to eat but milk and honey day after day?

SV: No. (laughter)

R: But anyway, you've got the answer within yourself. You are the answer. You are what you have been looking for all of your life. It is you and only you. Be it, enjoy it, love it. You are that! Peace.

(short silence)

SF: I have something I want to check it out. I have a tape by J. Krishnamurti in which he makes a couple of statements that I find interesting. One is, at one point he says, "Please do not merely listen to a lot of words and ideas which really mean nothing at all but through the act of listening," and then he goes on a little bit, kind of hard to understand. But the other statement is he says, "Please may I suggest that you not accept what the speaker is saying. He's not a teacher, he is not a guru," no he also says the speaker has no authority whatsoever, he "He is not a teacher, he is not a guru, for if he is a teacher then you are the follower and if you are the follower you destroy yourself and you destroy the teacher." And my thought is you could make those statements is that not so? (R: Sure.) Thank you. (students laugh) There's also another thing. If we have a desire and we think that something might be different than it is, the element of time comes in and time itself is unreal. So a desire can have no real basis.

R: Sure. (students laugh)

SF: Thank you...

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

NOT YOU! BUT THE "I!"

4th April, 1993

Robert: Thursday evening at satsang I was referring to the fact that if you want to become self-realized and find liberation, you have to drop your concept of God. The personal God. You have to kill your personal God. And I hit a nerve with some of you, for I had a couple of phone calls which were also...to the extent that they said, "Robert I'm a bhakta, I've been worshipping God most of my life. If I have to give that up it's like pulling the rug from under me. I'll be alone. When I worship God I feel good."

Now as you know I never tell you to stop doing your spiritual practice. If you have to worship somebody outside of you, a God outside of yourself, be my guest. There is nothing wrong with this. It depends on the maturity of the individual, the spiritual practice you're going after. Worshipping God is good at a certain level. But the time will come when you realize that the God that you've been worshipping all these years is none other than your Self. You are the one.

You say, "Robert how can this be? When I pray to God I feel good." Well it's like going to confession. The priest is in a cubicle, you're in another cubicle and the priest goes, "Tell me all of your sins my son or my daughter. What sins did you commit this week?" And you tell the priest all of your troubles, your sins. And the priest tells you to do a thousand "Hail Mary's" and go and sin no more, and you feel great. In other words you've confessed all the stuff you've got inside to somebody, it makes no difference to whom. This is how it is when you worship God. It isn't God that is doing anything for you, it's yourself doing this to yourself. For where would the personal God come from? Is there room in this universe for your Self and a personal God? Of course not. You are the one. You take up all space, all room.

Again it's like going to a psychiatrist or a psychologist. You feel bad and you go into the psychiatrists office and he says, she says, whoever, "Sit down on this recliner, lie down on the couch and tell me all about it." And you can't see him, they sit back of your face. They're taking all these notes and saying nothing. You're doing all the talking. As their time is up and you pay the money you leave and you say, "Boy I feel great now. She's a great therapist." But what has she done? Absolutely nothing! You've done it. You've emptied yourself out and you feel good.

Again so it is in worshipping God. So you see it is good to worship God for you people who have to do that, but one day you will have to get beyond it and ask, "Who is this God I've been worshipping all these years? Where does he live? What's his name? Who gave him birth? Where did he come from?" (or she) and you'll start laughing. You will realize that all this time you've been worshipping your Self. This is why I tell you sometimes, "Pray to your Self, bow to your Self, love your Self, worship your Self. For God dwells in you as you." There is nothing wrong with this.

At least you know that you're doing this yourself. It's all a game of the mind. It is the mind that brings all these things out and makes you do all these things. The mind seems to be a very powerful instrument. It can create anything for you, any situation that you like, but you're in control not the mind. ??? mind tells you things about the past about the future, about now. And what the mind tells us causes us to worry or fear or to become anxious. If we realize what the mind is and how the mind works...

(break in tape, returns to students laughter)

(Robert continues)

Robert: Happy good Easter to you. Happy passover, whatever you're doing. If you really understood that Brahman is all there is, would you take anything seriously? (students laugh) It is only when you get involved in the vicissitudes of life that you begin to worry, because you think you're separate from Brahman, from God. This is virtually impossible. Always remember this it is virtually impossible for you to be separate from God, what you call Brahman, or absolute reality. If you really feel this in your heart, you feel joy all the time. There is absolutely nothing in this universe that can frighten you or make you upset.

In reality what can really happen to you? There is no such thing as death. There is no such thing as disease. There is no such thing as earthquakes, cataclysms, famine, yet they appear very real to us.

That is why I wear my natural face to make you understand how real everything is. The whole universe is a cosmic joke. Everything is funny. There is nothing to be serious about. I know you can tell me, "How about the starving people in Ethiopia. How about man's inhumanity to man and how about the things going on in this world, in Los Angeles?"

Who experiences all of these things? Who is going through all of these things?

It's as if we're living in two worlds. One world is the God world where nothing can happen. Everything is beautiful all of the time. The other world appears to be a human world. Where you have problems, with so called death and sickness and cataclysms. Where do you belong? Never mind what you see. Remember your senses are given to you as a human being. Which means your senses are a part of the false image. What you hear, what you smell, what you touch, what you see, what you feel, it's all part of the dream, the maya. It is not real.

That even when I speak to you like this, some of you really feel the reality of life. You go into this world and you suffer and have problems, so you think. But are they real to you? They're very real to you because you're suffering from them. And I say to you there is a way to become free from all of this. Totally absolutely free!

In other words by turning within and understanding you're absolute reality. Understand that you are one with all there is of goodness and bliss and joy. Nothing else exists. You have to prove this to yourself. You've got to experience this for yourself.

Every time you worry you're denying the Self. Every time you fear, you're saying something is wrong someplace. But again some of you are so involved in this, no matter when I say, you're feeling the fear, you're feeling the worry, you're feeling the dastardly things happening in this life. But I'm saying to you this is not your life. It's a false life. It comes from false imagination. It is something you've been brain washed to believe since you were little. In a world that doesn't even exist.

You have to do something about your life style. Only you can do it. If you only realize that you are all-pervading, omnipresence and nothing else exists, that's your reality. Yet you have to come to terms with it. You have to come to terms with it. I can sit here and tell you about it. But some of you are so far gone into this absolute foolishness of the world that you can't drop it. It's hard for you to drop it. But you have to drop it one day. Either now or when you drop your body.

The trouble is when you drop your body you will only have a short rest and you will laugh at yourself and laugh at everything that you've done and laugh at your reaction to life. You will realize it's not really you. And because you have not realized it's your Self, you will have to go through another body and another body, another body, another body like you've gone through now. You've gone through thousands of bodies because we believe we are the body. That is the only reason we go through bodies.

Let me give you an idea how the mind works.

Compare the mind to the earth and compare the seeds to thoughts. So a farmer has two seeds. One seed is night shade, a deadly poison and another seed is a corn, it's a food. A farmer plants both seeds into the earth, remember the earth is the mind. Is the earth going to say to the nightshade I'm not going to grow you? The earth has no choice but to grow whatever has been planted. So it will grow nightshade in the same abundance as it will grow corn, because you have planted the seeds.

Now the deeper the roots grow this determines how you can get rid of the seeds of the nightshade. If you dig up the nightshade in a couple of days you will catch it right away, if you wait a couple of weeks they will get deeper. A couple of months, a couple of years, the roots will go way under the ground you'll have a hard time digging it out. So part of it will be growing, growing it will spill all over the place. This is the way your mind is now.

You have been brainwashed since you were a small child, you've got samskaras from different lives, all coming at you in full force. And you have a belief system that you react to everyday. You say this is good and this is bad and this is right and this is wrong, I love this and I hate this. All part of your belief system, the mind.

Now these roots have been planted a long time ago. Therefore to get rid of your negative thinking so-to-speak, you have to dig a big hole to pull out the roots. You do this by turning away from your problems, turning away from your situations, turning away from the world and diving deep within yourself. Continually, day after day after day, never looking for results. Never saying, I've been practicing a month now and nothing has happened. Remember how many years it took you to be the way you are. The things that your mind has accepted. The stuff you've got deep in your subconscious so-to-speak. It has to come up and gotten rid of.

This is why many people on a spiritual path like ours ask me sometimes, "Robert since I've started with you things have started to get relatively worse in my life. Everything is falling apart." And I say, "That is very good. It's a good sign, because you're bringing everything to the surface."

If things just got better for you materially, you'd just be adding on to what you've got already. But I'm trying to free you, totally and completely. To liberate you. And the way to liberate you is not by adding on goodness to you, good material things. It's by getting rid of the stuff that's been deep inside for many many years.

As you practice self-inquiry, as you practice observing yourself, being mindful, being still, all the stuff comes to the surface. And when it comes to the surface you're going to feel rotten, you're going to feel depressed, despondent. All kind of things may happen to you. But this is where you have to hold on and really really understand what's happening. All the stuff that is coming up that has been there for years and years and years, centuries, thousands of years. It's all coming to the surface you're getting rid of it. Never waver. Never look for results. Never look for anything. Never allow experiences to tell you how things are. Never judge by appearances. The devotee that keeps still, looks, does not react, is not judgmental and keeps on practicing, practicing, practicing is a person who finally finds liberation.

Look at your lives many of you sitting here today. When I talk to you this way you listen to me and agree with me and say, "Yes." As soon as you get to your home what happens to you? You revert back to what you were before. You're sort of thinking about this and worrying about that and complaining about this and worrying about this person, what this person is doing and you expect to be liberated. You cannot be liberated this way. You start gossiping about people.

You start finding fault in people. You're not leaving everything alone. You're not dropping everything. So you're adding on aren't you? Remember you're either dropping everything or adding on to yourself. When you're doing the range of things I just outlined you're adding on to your stuff and you have more and more and more and more. You're accruing more karma. Every time you see something wrong and you feel it, you're accruing karma. Ponder this!

Every time you see something wrong someplace. Every time something bothers you and you never do anything about it, you're accruing karma. But as soon as the first sign of negation come to you, as soon as the first sign of depression comes to you, as soon as the first sign of feeling out of sorts come to you, "Nip it in the bud." Do not listen. Do not carry it with you. Do not care what your mind tells you. Immediately ask yourself, "To whom does this come? Who is feeling all this? I am? What is the source of this I who feels all this? Where did the I come from? Is the I me?" This is the way you have to talk to yourself continuously, constantly. "Is the I me who feels out of sorts? Is the I me who feels disappointed? Is the I me who feels something is wrong?" and when you keep asking the question to yourself this way something will tell you, "No, it's not you it's I." And you have absolutely nothing to do with the I. The I is not you. The I is merely a thought. It is not real. It is only a thought and when you investigate it properly it disappears like it never existed.

The wonderful thing about this is everything is attached to the I. That is something you have to ponder all the time.

When you start working on removing the I, you're working on removing the world as you see it. All of your problems, all of your troubles and everything that you see, is all in the I. It is the I that feels all these things, not you, the I. When you look at the I objectively and you realize that it is not a part of you how can you suffer? You'll say, "I is suffering not me. Go ahead I suffer all you want. You have nothing to do with me." It is the I that believes that times are hard. It is the I who believes in disease, poverty, lack, limitation. It is the I who believes that people are trying to hurt you, people are talking about you. Not you, but the I.

As you keep practicing this again and again and again and again, the time is going to come when you'll get it and you'll be free and liberated. But it's up to you! It's up to you! Never mind what anybody else is doing. Forget everybody else. Again you ask, "How about helping others?" Of course you help others. You can help the homeless. Help the starving people in Ethiopia. You should never become hard and callous, due to the fact that you know the people that I'm talking about, are you. You're not separate from anybody, you are everybody. Remember your real nature is boundless space.

When you begin to observe the truth in yourself you begin to expand and you take in the whole universe the whole world everybody, everything, the whole plant kingdoms, the mineral kingdoms, the vegetable kingdoms, the animal kingdoms, the human kingdoms, it's all within you. So of course your nature becomes kind, gentle, peaceful. For you realize that whatever you're doing to somebody else you're doing to yourself. Whatever you think of other people you think of yourself. There is only one Self and you are that. When you begin to understand this you will begin to treat everybody as you treat yourself. As you want to be treated yourself. You will show mercy, forgiveness, when you're watching yourself.

So to summarize: Your real nature is absolute reality, consciousness, Brahman, sat-chit-ananda. And there is only you! There is only the Self and you are that. That's all there is. But when you believe you're something else. A human body, the mind, a world, personal God, then you'll have to really work in order to experience this. Simply because we live in a world of constant change. Everything changes constantly, continuously, and change will come to you whether you like it or not. Therefore I say to you turn from the world, turn within, know the truth about yourself, looking at yourself constantly, everything else will take care of itself and you will be free and liberated and happy.

This is the truth about you what are you going to do about it?

What you're going to do about it, you should run out and buy a pair of glasses like mine. (laughter) Then you'd show the world what you think. You are free to do what you want, the choice is yours.

(silence)

Feel free to ask any questions. (pause) Any questions?

(Robert plays talking doll puppet - a gift from Ed and wife Kerema to Robert)

(students laugh)

R: No question that's what you get. (students laugh)

SB: Is that the whole teaching?

(Robert plays talking doll puppet to answer as students laugh)

R: That will answer all your questions.

We'll play some more music. You wanna dance. (laughter)

Always expect the unexpected.

SB: Robert why is it that you can listen to music and you could be completely absorbed and there is no thoughts at all. And yet enlightenment doesn't arise out of that?

R: Music soothes the savage beast, even you. You become soothed by listening to music. But it doesn't go all the way it makes you go into a certain - it picks you up, it lifts you up, but it doesn't enlighten you because it doesn't go in that direction. (SB: It seems to get the mind in a place that it's ready to meditate but...?) It does, true.

SB: You know it's like you feel a lot of bliss and your mind is quiet and everything's in harmony. But yet the mind is absorbed, it's like distracted although there's no vibration in mind yet there is...the mind is actually absorbed and then it seems like at that point it is like a jumping off point where I feel like I'm coming out of there even in the silence...

R: Yes music, art, all different of this world are like a spring board.

SB: Even like playing with an animal. (R: Yes.) When I come home from work and be real angry and full of all kinds of negative stuff and I play with this cat and feel a lot of love and pat it and everything and all this garbage goes out and I feel like in a place where the love starts coming up and then I feel ready for release of everything.

R: Yes, this is true. Music, animals, nature, art, but they do not enlighten you they just go in a certain direction, so far, and then you have to give it all up. (SB: Even though the mind might be silent it's still kind of absorbed kind of like an artificial silence. Is that true?) True yes. (SB: It's still alive but it absorbs the moment.) You have to go beyond that. You have to go beyond everything...

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

LOVE THE SAGE

8th April, 1993

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, shanti, om. Peace. Good evening.

I want you all to ask yourself this question, "Why did I come to satsang tonight?" Ask yourself this question honestly, truly. "What is my purpose of coming to satsang tonight?" Do you wish to be entertained? Have you seen all the movies locally, and you have nothing to do, so you came to satsang? Do you come to satsang for social reasons, to meet people, see what's going on? Be honest with yourself. Ask yourself the question, "Why did I come to satsang? Really, why did I come to satsang?"

There's only one real answer. You've been in this world for many years and through practicing spiritual disciplines you've come to the inner conclusion that this world really has nothing to offer you. Even though there appears to be good things in this world, you understand and realize that there is also just a law of change. Everything in this world must change. Subsequently, there is absolutely nothing that this world can give you. You have to feel this inside.

Again, you have to wonder, "Who am I? What am I really? I never asked to be born. I'll live a certain number of years and then I die, so-to-speak. What am I all about? Where did this world come from? Who or what is God? Where did all the animals come from, the bugs and insects, the trees, the mountains, the planets? What is this all about?"

If you've been questioning yourself this way, then satsang is for you. You begin to feel and realize that there is something called self-realization. When you touch it, it will make you happier than you've ever been in your life. It will bring a profound peace. There will be no doubt in your mind about anything. For you will have surrendered your mind completely and you will be mindless. You have an innate feeling that the real you is boundless space. That you are connected to everything and everything is connected to you. In other words, you're not just your body. The appearance of your body is a lie. The appearance of the world is a lie. You sort of feel this.

If you feel this, and this is true of people only who have been practicing spiritual discipline and sadhana for many years, many incarnations, then you have to find a Sage who has gone all the way and is experiencing realization. Only a Sage of this type can bring you forward and cause self-realization to come to you. Only a Sage who has realized himself or herself.

It's up to you to find such a person. When you find such a person, you have to trust that person implicitly, have total faith in that person to lead you on the right path. If you have problems with that, you have to find another Sage. All the scriptures, all the books tell you that unless one surrenders totally and completely to the Sage, there's no hope for realization. Now it is true there have been certain people in this world who have realized the Self without any help. These people are few and in-between, very few. The average person needs a Sage who has gone all the way.

Who has gone beyond eternity, beyond questions, beyond the observer and the observed, beyond all phenomena, and realized all phenomena is a superimposition on the Self. Which means your body, the world in which you live, the animals, everything, the planets, the universe, is only but a superimposition on the Self. Like the writings on a chalkboard, you can write what you will on the chalkboard, then you can erase it and write something else. You can draw a picture.

But the chalkboard always remains the same. Only the images change. And so it is with a self-Realized Sage. The realization is that everything is the same phenomena. All phenomena is exactly alike. It comes and goes. But the Self never changes. The Self is silence, no words. There is no logical explanation for the Self. It is beyond everything your mind will think of. You cannot find the Self by thinking about it. Only by unthinking! Removing thought.

When you find such a being who has experienced the Self, you have to learn to love this person, totally, completely, absolutely. You're not really loving the person, you're loving the Self. You may see a person in the Sage. But the Sage realizes beyond a shadow of a doubt, there's no person present. Therefore, by loving the Self, you're loving the Sage. By loving the Sage, you're loving your Self, the same thing. The Sage is none other than your real Self. The Sage is you! But you don't know this, you don't believe this, you've not experienced this. So you think the Sage is a person, a place, a thing. Consequently, all you can do is to love the Sage. That alone will suffice.

Now a Sage, having transcended the body and transcended the world comes from a completely different space than you do. And he or she may do things totally differently. But you should know this: everything the Sage does is only for your realization. This is why the Sage or the Jnani exists for you — for your realization, no other purpose. It's up to you to feel this, to realize this, to understand this.

You really have to learn to love the Sage! It is difficult for many of you to love at all. When you think of love, you think of human love. And you think of disappointments, sorrow. But when you love the Sage, it's totally different, completely different. When you begin to love the Sage you immediately feel a bliss inside of yourself. You feel joy and happiness. Why? Because you're loving the Self. The Self is all-pervading, infinite reality, omnipresence. Loving the Sage is loving your Self. There's only one Self. And you have to really learn to trust the Sage in everything you do.

There's a story that reminds me of this. One day Krishna and Arjuna were walking down a path. Towards the evening they became tired, they saw a house. In the house was a mean old man. Through some method he acquired lots of money. He was very mean. They knocked on the door. The mean old man came to the door and said, "What do you want?" And Krishna said, "May we have lodging for the night and food to eat?" Usually the mean old man would have shut the door in their face, but he realized it was Krishna and Arjuna, so he reluctantly let them in. He had a scrumptious dinner for himself but he only gave Arjuna and Krishna bread crumbs to eat. And he had a comfortable bed, but he made Krishna and Arjuna lie down in the corner in the mud to sleep for the night. When morning came, Krishna and Arjuna were about to leave. Krishna put his hand on the old man's head and blessed him and he said, "May you prosper abundantly." And they left.

Evening came again. They came to another house. In this house lived a pious, wonderful, beautiful old man whose only possession was a cow. They knocked on the door and the old man opened the door and when he saw Krishna, he prostrated himself and he said, "What a blessing I've got to have Krishna and Arjuna come to my home! My home is yours." He gave them his dinner. He made them sleep in his bed and he slept on the floor. And he praised them all night. When morning came, Arjuna and Krishna were about to take their leave, and Krishna put his hand on the old man's head and he said, "May your cow drop dead!" and left. Arjuna didn't say a word. But he was thinking about this all day. Finally he had the nerve to ask Krishna, "Master, I didn't understand your message. The other night when we came into the house and this old man treated us poorly, was mean to us, you blessed him and told him, may he prosper abundantly. And last evening, when we came to this old man, pious old man who was wonderful to us, gave us dinner and his bed, you cursed him and said, may his cow die, drop dead. What is the meaning of this?"

Krishna explained, "My ways, Arjuna, are not your ways. And your ways are not my ways. You may see me do many things which you don't understand. Never judge me by what you see me do. Only love me. You see, when I cursed the first man, and told him, may he prosper abundantly, I realized he would come back many times, many incarnations and have a lot of money, and his relatives would haunt him to get some money. And the IRS would come after him. His relatives would want his money. He will have many lives to work this out. He will suffer many lives because of his greed. Now when I went to the other old man, I realized that he was giving up everything for God. His only possession was the cow. And this was holding him back from self-realization. So when I removed the cow from him, then he will be self-realized. This is the game I play with people."

The same is true with us. Never believe the Sage thinks like you or does the things that you do. A Sage may appear to you to be an ordinary person just like yourself. But that's where the similarity ends. Never try to understand a Sage, his methods or what he does. Again, just love him. That's all you have to do. If you can really learn to love the Sage, immediately you will see results in your spiritual life.

The first thing you will see, you will feel profound peace in yourself that you never felt before. Then you will feel joy in your heart that you never had before. You will feel love for everything, from the mineral kingdom, to the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, the human kingdom. You may be going through some karma, perhaps. Remember for the Sage there is no karma. I know in some of the books it tells you that the reason the Sage does certain things is that he or she is going through some prarabdha karma, that's left over and it will be all finished when he or she drops the body. This is a lie. These things were just written to appease the people.

I'm telling you there's no karma for a Sage at all. What you see in the Sage is a lie also. As long as you see the Sage as a body, your thinking is erroneous. The Sage is not a body. Neither are you, because you don't know it. Saying, "I am not the body" is not good enough. You have to experience this truth. What good is this teaching if you can't experience it? Therefore the Sage tests you. You may have many personal experiences with the Sage. The worst thing you can do is become judgmental. Always remind yourself that the Sage is not coming from the place you're coming from. Do not even try to understand the Sage. Just love the Sage, that is sufficient.

Again, when you really love the Sage, you will see very fast changes in your life. This is more important than practicing self-enquiry, than being the observer or doing other spiritual methods. For if you're loving the Sage, self-enquiry will become easier for you. When you have a hard heart and a head made out of stone, it is difficult for you to love. Therefore you look at yourself as an individual and you try to practice spiritual discipline and self-enquiry, being the observer, pranayama, mantras. Yet it's the ego doing all these things! This is why in Advaita, no spiritual methods are required. No sadhana is required. No discipline is required. Only to love. To love whom? To love the Sage as yourself, that's all that's required. Once you are able to do this, everything else will open up for you. It appears difficult in the beginning, especially for a Westerner. For you've been brainwashed to believe that you're the ego and everything that you do in your life comes from the ego point of view.

You think you're making progress, then something comes along that makes you angry and upsets you. And you feel you've lost all your progress and you're nowhere. And you become perplexed and wonder about this and you wonder about that. And you say you've been practicing sadhana for three or four or five years. Nothing has happened, twenty years, nothing has happened. You've forgotten one thing: to love the Sage as yourself.

Look back at your own practice and you'll see that this is true, to really love, with all of your heart and all of your soul. True love means surrender. What do you surrender? Your ego, what else? Give it all to the Sage, become empty, totally free and empty. Then I can assure you, you will feel such bliss and it will never leave you again. You will realize that irrespective of circumstances, all is well. You'll understand that regardless of what is happening to your body, all is well. You will stop feeling sorry for yourself. You will stop judging yourself. You will begin to leave everything and everybody alone.

Another incident of this is when I was with Paramahansa Yogananda, when I was seventeen years old. He initiated me and he told me, "Robert, do you promise to love me, no matter what you see me do?" So I smiled and I hesitated. I said to myself, "What is this guy going to do?" And yet I felt an overwhelming love and I said, "Certainly, yes, I will." And in the six months that I was with him, I'd see him go into different moods, become angry with certain devotees while loving other devotees. I remember a time during Christmas when many devotees wanted to go home to their families in the holidays. And one went to Yogananda and asked him, "Master, can I go home to my family for Christmas?" And he gave him a warm smile and said, "Yes, of course, go home and enjoy yourself." Someone else would come to him and say, "Master, may I go home for the holidays?" And he said, "What? How dare you ask me a question like this? Of course you can't go home. You have no family. I'm your family. The only family you have is here, your brothers and sisters in Satsang." And he would literally scream at him or her and never gave them permission to go home. I observed all this and I watched and I realized at that time also, I'm not here to judge him, to see whether he's right or wrong, good or bad. And there were many incidences that he did in the ashram, that the average person would leave and never come back. But I realized that these were tests to see if people were fit or not. And so it is with us.

What are we really looking for? True spirituality is not easy. It means changing your entire viewpoint, looking at life completely differently. Trying to keep quiet most of the time. Keeping your mind quiet, never allowing it to judge, never allowing your mind to think too much on any one subject. You learn to catch your thoughts. When the mind begins to criticize, catch it before it goes too far. Realize the God within you — your real Self - can never lead you astray.

Ramana Maharshi did many strange things. All Sages do! I won't go into them. Suffice it to say, a Sage comes with a completely different background than you do. Do not try to train the Sage or mold the Sage into your image, like you do God! In other words, do not expect the Sage to do what you think he should do. Because after all who is thinking? The ego! Who else? Realize this, always remember this. If you learn to surrender to the Sage, the Sage will always be with you and never leave you. When you're asleep, when you're awake, when you're working, you will never be alone again! Love will always be with you.

But again, this is only for those people who have been through many, many spiritual experiences in their life, that have an inkling of what I'm talking about. You can't pull a person off the street and speak like I'm speaking here tonight. They will laugh in your face and go their merry way. For these people have not yet even begun to learn the lessons of spiritual life.

When I say there's no person, no world, no God, no universe, no life, I speak from experience. Unless you have the same experience, it's better not to think, better not to speak. This makes sense. For when you stop criticizing, you stop speaking, you stop thinking. Only the true Self can emerge from you. Reality comes in to your existence. It has always been there. But you've awakened it.

You begin by not believing anything the senses tell you. Taste, touch, hear, see and smell. Don't accept what I'm telling you. You stop worrying about anything and everything. Stop worrying! Remember, all is well. You live in an intelligent universe that knows all about you and it can take care of you and meet all your needs in the right way. In ways that you know not of. Trust it. Have faith in that which you do not understand. Drop all fear.

It's so funny to me that people fear something. There is nothing in this entire universe that has a basis in fear. Fear is a human emotion. If you have no thoughts there is nobody to fear. It is only when you begin to think and your mind draws pictures for you and you have all sorts of situations that may happen tomorrow or the next day or right now, and then you begin to fear. And you fear for one reason only. You do not understand who you really are! You think you're a human being with all sorts of problems. And you say to yourself, "If I don't think of these things, who will resolve my problems? How will my problems ever become resolved?" That's why I say, do not try to think about them, just love the Sage and everything will be taken care of. But the answer to all this is simple. Do not try to figure it out. For there's not time or space for a problem to begin. There is no time or space for fear to emerge. Time and space do not exist. Only the Self exists - the pure awareness, the absolute reality, nothing else. And you are that.

I know that some of you listening to these words, you go home and you forget everything I said. And then you become worldly again, start thinking about your income and your sickness, that people don't love you, the job you hate, so forth and so on. But now when you begin to think this way, you have to catch yourself and think of the Sage.

How wonderful it is to understand these things! The rest is up to you. Peace.

Any questions?

Student: How do you tell a false Sage from a real Sage?

Robert: Your heart will tell you. If you are a sincere devotee, you do not have to worry about anything like that. Something within you will tell you what to do, where to go. But if you're a false devotee, you will go to a false Sage! Like attracts like. Therefore you honestly have to take a good look at yourself, to see what you're really interested in, what you really want. That will tell you a lot about yourself, then you'll be attracted to the right Sage, who will concentrate on your frame of being, who you are spiritually, in consciousness. That's why I always say everybody's in their right place. There are no mistakes. Everybody's where they're supposed to be. There are no mistakes whatsoever. And there are no false Sages. Because a false Sage has false people. So they're doing what they're supposed to be doing, having a false teaching. Which is right, the way it's supposed to be. So if you're sincere, you will attract the right Sage.

That reminds me of a story. There was once a girl who was brought up in prostitution. And she didn't like it, but she knew nothing else. She was only about seventeen, eighteen years old and she used to pray every day for her salvation, to become free from all this. She sincerely wanted freedom, but her whole family was involved in prostitution and karmically she was attracted to that family when she was born. She would look out the window at her break and she would see a holy man in the market place across the street and he would be shouting and screaming, "Repent all you sinners, or you're going to hell, love God." She used to hear him and she said, "Oh, I wish I was like that, that I could love God and be like him." And this went on all of her life. Finally the time came when she died, and the holy man died too.

So they came up to heaven, to the gates of heaven, and God came to the door, and he said, "You can come in here," but to the holy man he said, "you can't come in." "You've got to go down to hell." The holy man said, "Why? How come? All my life I've been preaching you are good, and your ways. I was telling people to repent, while this girl was in prostitution all of her life." And God told him, "You've been preaching my name, but inside you, you were corrupt. You never meant what you said. You just wanted people to follow you and have a following. But this girl, even though she was a prostitute, she has a pure heart, so she will never be reborn again. She is self-realized now, while you will have to go back again and think about these things and learn to make your heart pure. Then you will be with the right people."

So this is true with us. We never have to wonder where we will be, where we will go. It all depends on what we are. What you are speaks so loud it can't hear a word you are saying! So you're always in your right place, where you're supposed to be. Make yourself pure. Dive into your heart center. Sit in the silence. Desire self-realization with all your heart, with all your mind, with all your soul. Cry out for God. And you will be with the right people. Everything will take care of itself...

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

Transcript 238

STOP FIGHTING!

12th April, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...so you thought you can get rid of me so easily? It'll never happen I'm here to haunt you forever.

When you look at a situation never judge it. The mind has been brainwashed, programmed for years to judge whatever you see. You cannot do this. It comes from false imagination. You look at me you make decisions, what's wrong, what's right, what shouldn't be done, what should be done, what's happening, it's all false judgement. I tell you in truth nothing ever happens to anyone, no matter how it appears, it's false. Noone is born, noone dies, because noone ever existed. I know this sounds hard to believe.

When you look around you see all the dastardly things going on in this world, with people and you feel it. You hear or see animals being slaughtered all over the place, yet who feels this? To whom does it happen? Really, this is important. Who feels these things? You are the imperishable Self, pure consciousness. This is your real nature.

How can anything happen to consciousness or God? Some of you like the word God, for you are brought up to believe that there is a God in the sky somewhere doing something, whatever he's doing. How can this God, this consciousness bring right action to this world? There would be no place to put it. For consciousness is all there is, there's nothing else and you are that.

In other words you are the one that has always been and will always be, always existed. You are that pure awareness, that boundless space that only knows the Self, nothing else, and the Self is bliss. Always be aware of this. Catch yourself when you see something wrong. See only goodness, see only perfection, see only love, peace. Refuse to acknowledge anything else.

Life appears to be very short on this earth plane. What you call your life is but a split second in eternity. In other words you're here today and gone tomorrow. This is how it seems. But again what is here today and what is gone tomorrow? That which never existed to begin with. That is here today and gone tomorrow. Because in truth there are no tomorrows and there's no today. There is nothing. How can there be anything wrong in nothing? I know some of you do not believe you're nothing. You think you're something. But if you're able to really see your body what it really is, it'll be all space. Your body is made out of space with a little dust spinning around some place. You're made out of nothing. But you don't believe me do you, you think you're something but you're nothing, zero, nada, emptiness.

When you begin to realize that you're emptiness, you become free. In other words to the extent that you feel your nothing, your emptiness, to that extent do you become free. Do you feel free? You can only feel free when there is nothing going on in your mind. As long as you allow yourself to think you will never feel freedom, you can't feel freedom. For the thoughts become things.

When the mind is active it becomes creative in the world and it comes with all kinds of things. But as we all know things change constantly, consistently, so as we grow spiritually we no longer use the mind to create things for us, we use the mind to destroy itself.

When the mind is destroyed that which is the silent witness of itself, becomes yourself. In other words that which is beyond all phenomena is you, your Self. You are that witness, the observer. It is you, no one else but you. You must become fearless. You must observe things, without observing. How do you observe things without observing? You look, you see, you touch, you feel, you smell, but there is no reaction. Like watching a movie. You observe the movie, you watch the movie, but something inside tells you are not the movie. But you're still watching the movie, enjoying the movie, crying with the movie, laughing with the movie, but you're not the movie. So it is with life.

Observe life unfolding. Look at life doing its thing. Sometimes it does its thing to you, but you have to observe that also. Never become lost in a material situation. Yet never allow the relative world to dictate to you, to make you think something is like this and something is like that. Never be frightened with the world and its manifestations. They're all dreams, hallucinations but you must experience this for yourself. You experience this for yourself by surrendering everything to the Self or by practicing self-inquiry.

For some people it's easy to surrender to let go of everything, surrender leads to self-inquiry. Automatically when you give everything up in your mind something answers you, or something tells you inside, "Who gives it up?" it comes by itself when you surrender. It'll happen by itself. Don't be afraid to let go, you'll never be alone. The universe is your friend. It will always take care of you if you do your part first. That is to surrender and allow the universe to take care of you.

It's like the story of the man who went to a cave and he felt a beautiful breeze coming from the cave. He wanted to find the source of this beautiful breeze. He was a fat man weighed about four-hundred pounds. And there was a tiny hole in the cave he couldn't get through. He was so enamored by a breeze and its fragrance he just had to find out the source of this breeze. So he went on a diet, he lost weight, he wouldn't eat and he still couldn't squeeze through. So he gave up everything. He gave up his job, his home, his family. His only thought in his mind was, "I've got to find some of this breeze that smells and feels so beautiful." He wouldn't eat at all. He was determined to find the site of the breeze. He finally got down to a skeleton and he shoved his head through the hole in the cave and half of his body got stuck. He couldn't go in or out. Finally he gave up. He said,

"I've done all I can. There is nothing more I can do." Then the Self pulled him through the hole and he became self-enlightened, self-realized.

What this story means to us is when we stop fighting so much, stop trying to change things, stop trying to make things happen and we let go, depending on God, on consciousness, on the absolute reality, then God will pull you through. In other words you become self-realized. But as long as you rely on one person place or thing then you're alone fighting your battles. This is why true spirituality is not for everyone. For most people are not ready to let go of everything. They still want to hold onto things. So they get involved with spirituality and it makes them pure.

They become involved in various meditations, pranayamas, kundalini, tantra, not realizing all these things come from your mind. They're all mental things and they will never lead you to self-realization. They will only increase the size of your ego. So true spiritual life is very easy. You just need to surrender, let go of everything. Take refuge in the Buddha or the Self or consciousness, whatever you like to call it. It's all names. And you take refuge in this by not allowing the world to make you feel anything. As long as this world makes you feel something good or bad, you're worldly, and you have battles to fight. But when good and bad never impresses you again, then you're free. Only you can make that choice.

Do not look to reality when things are getting bad in your life. There are many people who search for truth only when they become sick or broke or mad at the world or despondent, then they search for truth. If they get what they want they forget all about it and go out and have a good time. But remember things will change as they always do and you have so much time in your body so-called, in this life, you may be called again to leave your body tomorrow or next week or next month you never know. Where will you be then without a body? You'll feel naked. You'll be lost. So you catch another body to get into and to be involved with and go through many many bodies, because you're attached to the world and its manifestations.

So the secret of awakening is to let go of everything, let go, drop everything. All your conceived ideas, all of your dogmas, all of your rituals, everything you've been holding onto, drop it and be free. Do not hold onto anything.

Always question your mind. Whatever the mind tells you ask, "Who is going through this? Who is this coming to? To me, Who am I? Who is the I that's experiencing these things?" Always work on yourself. Remember to do this everyday. Catch yourself daily. It's best to begin when you get up in the morning. If you begin to catch yourself in the morning you'll catch yourself all day long. When I say, "Catch yourself," I mean catch yourself thinking. Catch yourself reacting, judging.

Only in the silence will you find reality. Self-inquiry leads to silence, surrender leads to silence. Be still and know that I-am God. I will never leave you nor forsake you. In this case the I is consciousness, absolute reality, I-am that I-am. This is the only refuge you've got.

You cannot take refuge in this world because it changes, it's a world of duality. Only in the Self can you take refuge. In the I, the I-am. Be not afraid it is I. I is your father, your mother, your brother, your sister, your friend. I is the Self. In order to find this I you have to bring the little I back from your brain to your heart centre on the right side of your chest. That is where your spiritual heart center on the right side of your chest. If you can follow it in the morning it takes a split second. When you're sleeping, the I goes back into the heart centre and rests. At that time you're no longer aware of this world you're in deep sleep. As soon as you wake up a split second the I runs back up to the brain. Then you become that you are a body and there is a world, there are people places and things. It is the I-thought that makes you become cognizant of this.

So the secret is to make the I go back into the heart when you awaken, when you awaken, in the waking state. This is why it's called self-realization. When the I-thought abides in the heart, then you go beyond phenomena. With the average person the I still stays in the brain and causes you to believe that you're a body-mind phenomena.

Try catching yourself tomorrow morning. As soon as you open your eyes before you have a chance to think observe the I, running from the heart centre to the brain. You can also catch it when you go to sleep. Just before you fall asleep. You become very peaceful don't you? You forget all about your problems, the world, you're falling into a deep sleep. But the reason you forget about these things when you're sleeping, is because your I runs from the brain to your heart. If that didn't happen you would be worrying all day long and all night when you're sleeping. The worldly problems would never leave you when you're asleep. So the only reason the world leaves you is because the I-thought is taking refuge in the heart. Follow the I-thought see where it goes, what it does, and if you do that you will soon discover there never was an I-thought. There is only the Self and you are that. Peace.

Feel free to ask any questions. Feel free to say something, anything.

SV: Robert you said don't be afraid to die. As far as I know the truth I don't care if this body doesn't get up off this chair. And that's a truth as I know it. One Saturday I was doing self-inquiry, what happened is that when there are thoughts and I ask, "To whom does it come?" I can't say, "I." because there is no personal I to have thoughts or doesn't have thoughts. So I go again and I ask, so what is the source of these thoughts, or what is the source of the I-thought? What is the source of the thought? Other times I ask, "Well is there an I that has thoughts?" then I go into self-inquiry with, "Who am I?" Often I can't go that way because there is no I. (R: Umm.) Then I have to pretend that there really is an I, then I ask, "Who am I?" (R: Umm.) Like I'm sitting in this chair, not in this chair, not in this chair and not far in between. Now I got a choice which way to go. It really doesn't matter.

R: First of all, if you gave up your body right now there is a way we have to get rid of it. So we have to burn it in the fireplace. (SV: It's okay. Henry worries about it.) It would cause a lot of trouble. (SV: Not my problem.) It's your carcass. (SV: So what?) We don't want any carcass in this house. (SV: The word that comes is liverworst.) All is well, Fred. You're doing the right practice that's a good practice. Keep practicing the way you're going.

SZ: When one is being an observer and into your higher self and achieved enlightenment, can you explain the bodhisattva concepts about enlightenment?

R: The bodhisattva will not become enlightened until the whole world becomes enlightened. They turn back from complete enlightenment. So this is still the mind doing these things. When the mind is totally destroyed there is no bodhisattva. Bodhisattva is part of the mind. So that concept has to go also. Every idea, every belief, every concept has to go. All spiritual teachers have to go to become totally free. There cannot be an inkling of spiritual teaching left. Yet the spiritual teachings were important in the beginning, for they brought you where you are now. So you realize you have to get rid of them. It sounds sort of strange, for years many people have been practicing spiritual sadhanas of various kinds and then you have to give them all up in the end.

But for the average person shouldn't give them up. The average person has to get to that place where he can't give them up. You have to do them so you can give them up. But if you've never done them there is nothing to give up. So everything is important. Becoming a bodhisattva is important. Once you reach that stage you have to give it up. When there is no longer anything to hold onto whatsoever. You can no longer rely on the Buddha. No one will reach the sangha and lean on it and take refuge in it. You must get to that stage where there is nothing to take refuge in. Destroy everything in the way. Everything has to go. Then reality will come of its own accord. But as long as you abide in any kind of spiritual teaching then you get these feelings. You may get blissful feelings sometimes but you cannot become free.

In order to attain moksha, liberation, every teaching must go. Even self-inquiry it all has to go. Self-inquiry is a method to get to that stage where you can give it up.

SQ: In your analogy of the cave what would you describe as being inside the cave?

R: Inside the cave? (SQ: Yes.) Reality, self-realization. But he couldn't get through because he didn't surrender, he was trying to do it by himself. Thinking if he diets he could lose his weight. If he gives up this, if he gives up that. At total surrender the Self will push you into your heart centre. The cave is the heart centre, spiritual heart on the right side of your chest. You can't enter by yourself, you can only go so far, but when you become totally unattached you stop using the ego to get things, to do things, and you just sort of give up and surrender totally and completely, then the Self grabs you, pulls you in to the heart and you become free. So the analogy of the cave is the heart.

SK: To gain liberation what is the relationship between grace and effort.

R: Grace and effort? A little of both. (SK: Both?) In the beginning you use effort. As you practice self-inquiry, practice surrendering when you've gone far enough, grace takes over. Grace is another term for the Self. The Self is grace and it just pulls you in. But grace comes when you make effort. It's sort of a contradiction. The whole of spirituality is contradictions. You have to make the effort and you have to give up the effort.

This is why in Advaita it is really for people who have had spiritual experiences from practicing sadhanas for many years in former lives. They're in the right stage then grace comes. But if you're still quarreling with the world, still quarreling with yourself, still have personal problems, you still think your body is important, your affairs are important or this is important or that's important, it's virtually impossible to have grace, because you're too engrossed in the ego. If you are still worrying what is going to happen to me tomorrow or I'm not happy once I do this or do that, then grace cannot come. It only comes when you give up everything. When you have sort of a care free attitude. Not my will but thine. You give up your personal will, personal power.

But that's not a weakness, there's a strength in this. Do not think that you'll become weak or passive, no you don't. You become very strong. The world can no longer hurt you. There is no fear any longer. You realize who you are and what you are. And you're at peace with yourself and everybody else. So grace and the Self are one.

SP: The time when you become enlightened what makes you a teacher? Like what makes you a teacher?

R: That's a good question. A Jnani or a Sage becomes a teacher without any desire of being a teacher. In my own case I never asked to be a teacher. It just happens wherever I go people gather around me for some reason. I never sent for them, I never ask them anything, they just come. I'm not thinking about it, I talk nonsense. (SP: Would you call it a high indifference?) Excuse me? (SP: Would you call that a high indifference?) Call it what? (SP: A high indifference?) A high difference (SP: A high indifference.) Oh high indifference. Yes you can call it if you like. Call it whatever you like. (laughter) There are really very few Jnanis, real Jnanis, or Sages that teach, but some of them do to balance it out. To make certain people realize they're in the right path. But it happens naturally by itself. There is no effort in it. In other words they are not trying to start a large movement. If I advertise, if I wrote books, if I went on TV, go on the radio, have seminars, then you can know something's wrong there. But I do absolutely nothing. (SP: But it's your non-attachment. You still do these things but it's your non-attachment to life?) You can say that. You can say anything you like. (students laugh)

SZ: Several people have mentioned to me that they have a problem with Advaita Vedanta. (R: What problem?) A problem in the context that they are trying to convince themselves that, yes, this is just a dream, this is an illusion, and yet their actual experience, they still experience anxiety and worry and anger and whatever, so there is kind of a split. Intellectually you're trying to say to yourself, this is just a dream, while actually you're experiencing worry and anxiety?

R: Of course. And yet you're suffering. So the words that you speak make no difference. It's not the words that you speak it's beyond words and thoughts. When you stop speaking, when you keep still. When you stop saying it's a dream, the less you talk the better off you are. When you become still and you go deep inside. Go deeper and deeper inside. Dive deeper than you ever gone before, then something will touch you and annihilate your ego. So the words that you speak doesn't matter. Your intellect doesn't matter, be still. When you practice self-inquiry have no motive or reason for practicing it. Just do it. Don't think about it. Do not think it's going to take you somewhere or do something for you or what's going to happen, just do it and be still and everything will happen of its own accord.

It's good to know it's all a dream, like you say when you're suffering, then how could it be a dream? So if you're suffering with anger and anxiety you have to work with those things and inquire, "To whom does it come? Who experiences these things? I do. What is the source of the I? Where does the I come from who experiences those things?" And you separate yourself from the I, the small I. Realizing the I goes through this, not me. I'm not the I and keep silent. And everything will take care of itself.

Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. Do we have any announcements?

SZ: How do you surrender?

R: (silence) Like this. What you're doing right now. Being silent. Not paying any attention to your thoughts. That is how you do it. Just like you're doing right now. See you're doing it. Keep it up everyday. Everyday you should sit a half hour in the morning and a half hour in the evening by yourself. Don't meditate more than one half hour. Sit by yourself and watch your thoughts like you're doing now. Don't react to them. Don't react to thoughts. Whatever comes to your mind never react, just watch, smile, and you're surrendering. As your thoughts come, as thoughts come to you, you no longer pay any attention to it, it doesn't bother you, that's surrendering. The next thought comes to you, you don't pay any attention to it. It doesn't frighten you, it doesn't make you happy, it doesn't make you sad, just watch it and it'll go away, you surrender that thought. You keep it up, keep it up, and as you keep it up your mind will become calmer and calmer and calmer and quieter and quieter and quieter, until the mind dissolves itself in the heart and you will be free. That is how you do it..

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

TAKE REFUGE IN YOUR HEART

15th April, 1993

Robert: Om, shanty, shanty, shanty, om. Good evening. It is wonderful to be with you once again. I love you with all my heart unconditionally.

When you take a look at the world around you and you see all the dastardly things happening everywhere you can take refuge within your heart. Which you do by letting go of the world happenings. By diving deep inside of your heart where there is peace and harmony and love. Your heart can save you from all the destruction happening in this world. All the things you see and hear everywhere. Take refuge in your heart.

Your heart of course is the Self, consciousness. It is all-pervading, omniscient, omnipotent. So when you take refuge in your heart the whole universe changes for you. Things will still appear to be going on in this world, but not for you. For you have contacted the universal omnipotence, omniscience. Yet it appears that I am talking about two different worlds, but I'm not I'm talking about one world, one universe. One Self which is you.

As you become spiritually mature, you become humble, filled with humility and love and you smile at the world, you understand its nature as maya. It's constant change. You no longer hate the world nor love the world. Just observe the world, leave it alone. You stop debating with people, arguing with people, trying to prove points. You just leave everything alone and leave everybody alone and you're at peace with yourself and the world.

This happens automatically when you take refuge in the Self, in the heart. In other words your job is not to look for peace, for harmony, for justice, for love for these are fleeting things in this world. Your work is to take refuge in the heart, in the Self. Then these verities come by themselves. In other words you become a living example, a living embodiment of consciousness, of divine love, of peace. Whereas if you just look for peace and harmony in this world, you're doing something external and you'll never really find it. Due to the fact that there is not really any love or harmony going on in this world, so-to-speak.

The Self is forever, never changing, never deviating one inch. It's pure bliss. It is your friend. It is you! Learn to love the Self in the heart. Always wake up with a pleasant smile on your face, remembering who you really are. You can say to yourself, "I am the heart." The heart is all-pervading love. Therefore the universal ??? is love. Imagine waking up like that, with thoughts like that. Your whole day will be very pleasant, beautiful. You can hold onto it. Hold onto your heart. To peace and love, that's in your heart. Really learn to love yourself. Not your ego but your Self. We were really the Self. Remember there is never two of you there is only one. And you're trying to make the change from humanhood to the Selfhood. This is done by not reacting to the world again, by watching the world, seeing the world, observing the world. But understand that the world is like a play on the screen. The world is a superimposition on the Self. You are the Self.

Consequently your body and everything else is a superimposition on the Self. So there is only one.

You observe your body, you watch your body doing its thing, but you are not that. You never were the body and you will never be a body. You are pure awareness, the absolute reality. As you think about these things you become them. The worst thing you can do is think about troubles and worries. Always think about the heart. Always think about the Self, which is forever. If you think about anything else it is only temporary, it comes and goes. The good things, the bad things of this world, they come and go. Think only of the Self, the heart. This is your reality, beauty, joy. This is being-ness. This is the I-am that I-am.

Remember all the time it begins in the morning when you first open your eyes and get out of bed. That's when you catch yourself. If your mind starts thinking about the work that you're going to do and the problems of the day, catch yourself and change...make the change. Say to yourself, "I'm not my work. I'm not my thoughts that come to me. I'm beyond these things. I-am that, which has always been and will always be. That which remains the same forever. The substratum of all existence, the absolute reality, I-am that." Just thinking about these things in the morning makes you feel wonderful.

I receive many phone calls. I had an interesting call this morning from a lady, an Indian lady at Phoenix which I thought was really appropriate, I'll share it with you. She asked me, "Robert, in my house I have a beautiful picture of Ramana Maharshi and everyday I do puja to it, in the morning and in the evening. I play chanting tapes. I do aarti, the waving of lights. I put prashad at his picture. I pray to the picture of Ramana. I've been doing this for twelve years and nothing has happened. Isn't Ramana supposed to give me some grace or something and enlighten me? That is how I've spent my time in twelve years, paying homage to Ramana's picture and I feel nothing. Also when I go to sleep at night I think of Ramana's form and face." It is written in the Upanishads when you think of the gurus form and face, the guru gives you grace, blessings. "Am I doing anything wrong, what's going on?"

I replied to her, "The answer to both questions is no. A picture cannot give you grace. No matter how much you pray to the picture, what you do to the picture, you can kiss the picture, do anything you like to the picture, it will not give you anything except plenty of peace. It improves your concentration. It will make your mind one pointed because you keep thinking of Ramana Maharshi and do podia to him. So it will make you more peaceful because it'll make you more relaxed. It will improve your concentration considerably. And as far as seeing Ramana's form when you go to sleep, his face and expect to get grace you cannot do this because he is dead, so-to-speak. You're thinking of Ramana Maharshi like...as a human being. Thinking he is in some astral plane. Ramana Maharshi has merged, been absorbed in the Self. He no longer has a form and only the form of a live Sage can give you grace. You can either do one of two things."

"You can begin to realize that you can never find self-realization looking at a picture or thinking of the form of a dead guru, or you can find another guru, or a Sage, who is alive."

"This doesn't mean that you're deserting Ramana Maharshi. You will always hold him in your heart. But you have to realize that only a live guru, a live Sage, can give you grace and self-realization. When a Sage drops the body, you have to understand that he is doing this for you. For a Sage never had the body. It is you who observes the body and sees he's got a body. He never really had a body, the appearance is only for your sake."

Therefore I said, "Stop doing pooja to Ramana. If you want self-realization go find a Sage and surrender to the Sage, this is important." When the ego is too big you develop pride. When you have a lot of pride, a lot of ego, you never think of surrendering to the Sage, you think of getting something from the Sage instead of giving yourself to the Sage. You must stop trying to get something from the Sage like self-realization.

Self-realization comes when you no longer think about it, when you no longer want it. When you totally surrender to the Sage saying, not my will but thine be done. Keeping the Sages form and face before you all the time. The Sage realizes when you're ready, then grace comes, liberation comes, but do not think of these things. Your job is to develop a tremendous humility. When I speak of developing humility, I'm not speaking of you becoming a stepping stone for people. Real humility is strength, power. Real humility means nothing bothers you anymore. Nothing has the power to disturb you, to upset your equilibrium. You have a tremendous compassion.

You develop loving kindness for everything, for the mineral kingdom, for the vegetable kingdom, for the animal kingdom, for the human kingdom. You're stepping out of your humanhood, taking a step forward in eternity. Not comparing yourself with other people. Not trying to do anything to anybody else. You simply see the Sage in your heart all of the time and then you finally become the Sage yourself.

But when you let your mind loose there is a catastrophe going on. Your mind will come up with all kinds of reasons why should not surrender to the Sage. Why you should do this, why you should do that. The mind will confuse you completely, this is its business, its job, its duty to confuse you, to make you go deeper in maya. This is what the mind does. It makes you believe that you are an important human being, that you're here to achieve great things, accomplish great works. Take a good look at the world, where are all the great works?

The most important job you have is to find yourself. Yet the funny thing is you were never lost. So if you were never lost where do you have to find yourself? Due to the fact you think you're lost, we therefore use terms like finding yourself. You believe you are a human being with all kinds of problems, attitudes, karma, dogmas, yet that is not you at all. You are a god. You are freedom, peace, love. Act on these things. Become simple in your work. Simplicity is the key. Do not make your life complicated.

Do not go into too many details about situations, conditions. There is a power who knows how to take care of these things, your life. There is a power which created you so-to-speak and knows how to maintain you, sustain you better than you can. Yet most of you will not give it a chance to work. For you say I can do it better by worrying, by fretting, by trying to change people, change conditions. The hallucinating power stops, it becomes dormant, it will not work for you when you do not acknowledge it.

A good example of this is when you have a headache. The first thing that comes into your mind is to take a pill, an aspirin, buffoon. There is a power within you that knows how to take care of the headache. There is a power within you that knows how to heal you, take care of you. But when it sees the aspirin, the power says, "Oh well, you're doing this yourself, so I will do nothing." This is how it is for every situation in your life. As long as you feel and believe that you are the doer, this amazing power which knows the way, will stop working for you. For you're saying, "I am the doer, I can do it better." When of course you can't, and you always seem to be having problems of some kind or another. These problems only come to you because you think you are the doer. What I'm talking about is to reverse your whole line of thinking, for you have been programmed in past lives, in this life. Science is beginning to understand this perfectly, we are all programmed in our linear thinking.

As an example: if you put a bunch of flies into a bowl and cover the bowl, for a few hours and then you open the bowl, only a couple will fly away. Most of them have been programmed to believe the bowl is closed and will not be able to fly out. They will fly around inside of the bowl, flying around even if there is no cover. Another example: in India when you train elephants you take a baby elephant and put a string around its foot and tie it to a post, to a tree. When the elephant becomes a big elephant, you put a chain around its foot and tie the other end to a tree. The elephant in one kick can tear the chain and the tree out. But the elephant remembers that he couldn't do it when he was a little elephant, so he didn't do it. He think he is stuck, he didn't realize his own strength, the elephant's been programmed. Another example for those who own a fish tank. If you put a glass between the fish, separate the fish, they can only go so far and after a couple of days you take the glass away, the fish will only go to that place where you had the glass before. They will not go any further, they will stay separated. These are all substantiated cases and that is how we're programmed, the same way.

Think about some of your programming. See what you believe. See how your belief system keeps you in prison of your own making. Think of something that you really believe, how you're stuck somewhere, or something is wrong someplace, and you won't give it up, you're holding onto it. They're simple things.

As an example: You believe if you go out in the rain you'll catch a cold. If you walk in the rain without shoes you'll catch a cold. This is not true, yet most of us believe this, we've been programmed to believe it by our parents, our society. Many of you see what I'm getting at. You believe you're human and that's all you are. You've been programmed to believe this, that you're a human being, you're closed in. Where in truth you're all-pervading, you're everywhere at the same time. In truth you are the universe. But even if I say this to you some of you can't believe this and will not accept this, because of your programming.

Think of the situations and conditions bothering you right now. Something that upsets you. Some limitation you think you have. Do you really have a limitation? Of course not. But as long as your programming says you do, then you do, and nobody will be able to change until you give up the limitation, until you give up your programming. I tell you that you are infinite beings, you are not what you appear to be. You are totally free, accept this. It is truth about you. Act as if you were a god. A god is never disturbed by what they see, hear, taste...taste, touch or feel. A god doesn't get angry or mad at anything. A god does not judge by appearances. You are literally and virtually a god. Why won't you accept it? Because of your programming.

You may believe what I'm saying while I'm here with you. Once we're finished and you go your way, human traits come to you again, do they not? As you're driving home you start thinking about being mugged, being car-jacked, what you're going to wear tomorrow to work, how you hate your job, so forth and so on. This is your programming at work.

If you were totally free, as you're driving your car, going where you're going, going to work, you would never think of these things. You will be virtually happy with everything you do. You'd have complete and total happiness within you all the time. Things will no longer bother you or annoy you. Again you get to reverse your whole life style. You've got to think in reverse. Go within, inside of the heart, dive deep, leave the external world alone. You dive deep within yourself, in the heart, where you will become free and happy and all will be well with you. Peace.

(tape ends) [TOC]

FREE FROM KARMA

23rd April, 1993

Robert: How can we free ourselves from karma?

We know karma is an accumulation of past actions that are similar to unpaid debts. How do we break the effect of the debt that binds us?

It seems the more idealistic one is, the more disappointment we experience. The more attachments we have, the stronger we hold onto life. When we find fault with others, or become too involved with the world, the best recourse is to listen to the words of the Jnani with rapped attention.

He tells us to, "Leave the world alone and follow the current that knows the way." We learn that time is a split second in eternity, nothing more and yet the value we place on it, the goals we set, are wasted for it has only accrued more karma. At that point we look within for the answers that lead us to the feet of the guru. His words change our whole perspective. We live out what is karmically decreed until we learn that karma is confined to the world of illusion. The mind won't tell us this, only in silence can we penetrate the veil of illusion. Then we will remember the words of the Jnani and be free from karma.

(silence)

Robert: Om, Shanti, Shanti, Om. Peace, peace. Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. I love every one of you unconditionally.

Never judge things as they appear. Never look at the world and allow the world to tell you how things are. The world is false. There are all kinds of people living in the world, all kinds of beings, all kinds of animals, all kinds of insects, all kinds of birds. Everything intermingles with everything else. Nothing is as it appears. By judging the world you become very frustrated and your equilibrium gets out of balance. Rather, turn within to reality and see the truth which is within each one of us. The truth is that you are the universe. You are not your body or your mind, it's an appearance, you are the universe. Everything in the whole universe is within you. You have given birth to the universe. If you did not exist there would be no universe as when you go to sleep at night. When you're in deep sleep the universe does not exist. You may say it exists, but you don't know it doesn't, as far as you're concerned.

So it is with the Sage, like being asleep but awake. There is no universe, yet there is a universe. What do you see when you look at the world? Problems, man's inhumanity to man? You're seeing what you are that's all you can ever see.

Each one of us is like a mirror. A mirror can never see itself, but sees its reflection, so where ever you look you're seeing yourself. If you see evil, you're seeing yourself. You're seeing your reflection, there's only one. One is all-pervading, omnipresence, the absolute reality, that one is you! When you look at the world you see yourself, what else can you see? So if you're seeing the wrong things in this world, do not think they appear wrong or there is something wrong in the world, look to yourself! Ask yourself, "Why do I see these things? Why so I feel these things? Where do these things come from?" And soon you'll discover you've been giving birth to them, and it will change your mind and everything else will change.

Change your mind and change the world!

One day a man was walking through the park at night and he heard somebody yelling at him, "Hey you, come here!" And he looked around and he didn't see anybody. And he kept walking and the voice said, "Come here, I'm over here!" And he looked down at the rock and he saw a frog sitting on the rock. So he bent down to the frog and the frog said, "Kiss me and I'll become a beautiful maiden and do anything you want!" And he didn't say anything and the frog said, "Didn't you hear me?" I said, "Kiss me and I'll become a beautiful maiden and I'll do anything you want." So the man picked up the frog and put it in his pocket, and he proceeded to walk along. And the frog yelled, "Hey! I told you you can kiss me and I'll be a maiden and I'll do anything you want!" So the man said, "Well, I'm deciding whether to turn you into a maiden or to keep a talking frog." And so it is with us. Are we all talking frogs? What does this story have to do with anything?

SV: Who knows? (Laughter)

R: Interesting story.

I receive many phone calls, as many of you are aware. This morning I received a phone call from a lady who asked me an interesting question. So when a question is interesting I share them with you. I got permission from the lady first, she's here this morning so it's okay. She asked me, "Robert, when I was younger, I lived a wretch-able life. I was really a bitch. I cheated people, I hated people, I did everything to get my way and I hurt a lot of people. Now my question is, can this karma be abated? Is there some way I can forgive myself, expunge the karma, or does it have to come back to me? The things I have done to people. Is there any way I can become free of this, of the past? Also in my past lives a psychic told me I was a rotten person in those lives too!"

What to do? "Is there any hope for me," she wanted to know.

Well, my answers are always ambiguous, I said, "Yes and no." We'll talk about this. I asked her if I could talk about this in class and she said yes. So we'll discuss my answer, what I mean by yes and no.

No, you cannot abate your karma. You can never remove the karma that's coming to you. This is a very difficult thing to do. And yes, you can, it depends who you are, what you know and where you're coming from. There is no human being on this earth who has not gotten into problems growing up, of some sort of some kind. There's no such thing as a perfect human being on this earth! This earth is not meant for perfect human beings. If you want to be a perfect human being, you have to go to another planet, you're on the wrong planet. There's no perfection on this planet. I kid you not. This is not a planet of perfection, there are such planets, but this is not one of them. So, when one realizes this, in order to abate their karma, they have to change their lifestyle totally and completely and absolutely. And not many people are willing to do this. In other words you have to do a turn-around, complete about-face. Everything you believe has to be dropped.

Every action you've ever taken has to be changed. The way you react to person, place and thing has to be totally changed, completely, absolutely, not just slightly but altogether. In other words, if you want to transcend the karma, become totally free and liberated, you have to look at yourself totally differently. Look at people totally differently. Look at the world totally differently.

It's very rare this happens. It's very rare because most people refuse to change themselves, they don't want to. They want somebody else to do it for them. They want to keep on going the way they're going. And it's true that when you come to satsang, things begin to happen to you. But yet I am with you about twice a week, maybe four or five hours altogether. And the rest of the week, you're on your own. What do you do when you're by yourself? What do you do when you're on your own?

What kind of life do you live? Only you know that! Do you have loving kindness in your heart for person, place and thing? Do you have peace in your heart? Or do you allow things to bother you, annoy you, make you upset, angry, mad? It is only when you calm down totally and completely, and you have peace in your heart that a change takes place within you. And unless that change takes place within you, you're under the laws of karma.

Most of us here know in the ultimate truth, karma does not exist. But what's the use for most of us to get up and say karma does not exist, when we're controlled by it? It's fine to be able to say that intellectually, there's no karma, there's no world, there's no liberation, no illusion, no God, in the ultimate sense this is true. But is it true for you? Are you living that sort of life or are you just speaking words? People learn at the talking school where you just talk, talk, talk, talk, talk, talk on spirituality.

But are you learning to keep silent and make something happen with your life? The choice is always yours.

What difference does it matter, what difference does it make what happens to you as far as going through life? What difference does it make, whether you lose your job or you get a job, whether you have money or you're broke, whether you have health or sickness, whether you're happy or sad, whether you get what you want or you don't get what you want? There should be no differentiation in your mind. If you can learn to treat these two impostors just the same, they're all impostors, human good and human bad, they're all impostors. If you learn to treat them just the same, then you'll see you'll be free. But, if you keep reacting to things, all you're doing is you're accruing more karma. That's all you're doing.

Karma comes in two different sections: what you call boomerang karma and prarabdha karma.

Boomerang karma is like when you step on a rake, the handle hits you in the head. That's boomerang karma it came right back to you. You step on the rake and the handle hits you in the head. It's karma like this, when you do something it comes right back.

Then there's prarabdha karma, which is your destiny, which comes to you from past lives, from things you've done when you were little. This seems to go through time and space. In other words, there seems to be a long time before you get it back.

What I'm trying to say, most of us have no idea what karma has in store for us. We have no idea. We may believe and think things are well, things are going right for us. Then we may step off the curb and a bus hits us and breaks our back and we become paralyzed and we're in a wheelchair for the rest of our lives. We don't know! Not one of us knows what's going to happen tomorrow. But by what you do, you can tell if your karma's going to get you by the way you act, the way you think, the way you react. If you begin to understand and realize, whatever has happened to me, is the result of karma, good or bad or in between, in whatever situation I am now, is a result of karma. Nobody made it like this. No one's responsible for my being who I am.

This is the first truth that you have to remember: No one is responsible for your being the way you are, where you are, where you're living or whom you're living with. No one is responsible. Not even you! Because you're experiencing karma. If you knew what was going on, you'd put an end to it. But unfortunately, you don't know what's going on, so you're experiencing karma, different situations, different moods, different times, different days, different weeks, different situations. All kinds of things come to you.

The important thing for us to understand is that this is all karma. If you know it's all karma you realize if you react to any condition that comes to you, you're accruing more karma, that's all you're doing. Nobody wins, nobody loses in this game called life. There are no winners and no losers. You're always accruing karma, always, by the way you react to a situation. It's up to you to see this, be aware of this.

If you can see this and be aware of this, you develop loving kindness, peace. You no longer believe there's a god that dealt you a bad hand or you can't be like this one or that one. Or, "I wish I was like this person or that person." You stop thinking like this. You look at yourself you make the best of who you are and you work through it. But you've got to do it! You've got to do it yourself! This is what I mean when I say, you take an about-face. You reverse everything.

Never mind what anybody else is doing! What are you doing? That's what matters. For what you do determines what's going to happen to you over and over again.

So here we are. Karma's all over the place. Do you really wish to transcend karma? Do you really want to get rid of it, totally and completely? Then you must turn within, and never react to the outside world again! Understand that your happiness is within you, not in things or people or places. Everything you're looking for is within you. That's the first principle you have to understand. All the answers are within you. The way to become free is within you. Liberation is within you. It's all within you, you've got it all, not outside, nothing's outside. Do not pay attention to one thing in this external world. Do not take one thing seriously.

You've got the power to change anything if you would but recognize it. But as long as you keep blaming person, place or thing, as long as you keep reacting to things, the power lies dormant within you, in abeyance. It will not come forth until you begin to recognize it.

Principle number two: Realize that there's a power within you and know that it transcends all the karma that you ever had and sets you free. You must call upon it, acknowledge it, for it to do anything for you. This power is beyond any earthly person, any earthly situation, and it's beyond all phenomena. This power can be called the Self, the absolute reality. It is the Self that seems to have created karma and the way to get rid of it. The Self is the source, the source of everything imaginable.

Your duty is to merge with the source. Your duty is to become the source. When you are the source of karma, how can you experience karma? When you realize that you are the atman, the Self, and you're all-pervading omnipresence, there's no time and space, where can there be karma when there's only the Self? Do you see what I'm getting at? Only the Self exists! The Self is pure awareness, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda, I-am that I-am. Only that exists, nothing else. There's nothing else, only that!

Now what are you identifying with, worldly situations? You're not identifying with the Self. You can't identify with both! You have to become absorbed in the Self. This is your duty! To become absorbed in the Self, totally and completely. Now do you see why very few people can overcome their karma, for most of us do not want to be absorbed in the Self. We want to go on playing games. We think that if we become absorbed in the Self, we'll be lonely, we won't have anything to do, all the fun will be gone, there will be no TV to watch, no music to listen to, no sex, no friends! Where are you coming from that made you believe that? That's not the Self that you're talking about, it's you, it's your idea of what liberation is.

Liberation means that you're totally and completely free, without thoughts. There are no thoughts in the Self. If there were thoughts in the Self, it wouldn't be the Self. For the Self is only one and all-pervading. When you become absorbed in the Self, it's completely different than what you ever believed. It's not explainable. But as far as you're concerned, you become totally free, happy, peaceful. There is no longer anyone to argue with or become upset over. This is the Self. You become absorbed in the Self by thinking about the Self. How else? And you stop thinking about your problems, your affairs, your mind, your karma. And you begin to think of your Self. You practice the meditation we learned on Thursday. And you never acknowledge the world again! But you remain absorbed in the Self. And at that time, all the karma will disappear and you'll never have to worry about karma again. You won't even think of the word. You will no longer think about overcoming karma, transcending karma, for there is no such thing to transcend.

And it's a new stage of your life. It is only where most of us are coming from now that we have to worry about karma, so-to-speak. But when you start diving deep within yourself and you become absorbed with the Self, that's it. You're cooked. There's nothing else you have to do. So my question to you is, what are you doing with your life every day? How do you see things every day? Do you still have to be entertained by the world? As long as the world has to entertain you and you don't get entertained by reality, you're stuck in karma and you're accruing new karma every day.

Leave the world alone, leave people alone, leave everything alone. I'm not saying to ignore people, to live by yourself, on the contrary, that's not what I mean. When I make statements like this I mean, mentally. Mentally! If you mentally begin to go within, then you never have to worry about the physical again, the so-called physical body will take care of itself. You'll always be happy, always. You'll have real happiness, real joy, real peace. It's not what you think it is. It's complete bliss. Bliss in itself.

Feel the peace that prevails. Feel the emptiness. Feel the love. Feel the harmony. Do not think about it, feel it. If you think about it you spoil it. Just feel it, it's here, it's everywhere. (pause) Feel free to ask questions. I know why you won't ask questions, you're afraid of this:

(Robert presses a button on the doll it says, "Were you always this stupid?")

SG: What's wrong with laughing? (R: Nothing.)

Voice: "You're a schmuck! The biggest!" (Laughter)

Voice: "Screw you at your front door!"

SV: Robert, if it isn't necessary to overcome karma, nobody objects to good karma, they object to bad karma. What I object to is my own reaction to karma, not the karma itself. If I don't react I don't care what happens so there's no need to overcome it. If I don't care about it, it doesn't matter as long as I don't react of it. (R: This is true, of course.) So there's no need to overcome it.

R: No, you're right. When there's no reaction, there's no karma. When you learn to be still, you won't have any karma to worry about. But when your mind is always rattling, making noises, always thinking, thinking, thinking, it accrues karma by the very thoughts. Learn to still the mind. Keep the mind quiet, quiescent. Then you don't have to worry about karma.

(tape ends) [TOC]

Transcript 241

STILL THE MIND

2nd May, 1993

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, om. Peace.

Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is wonderful to be with you again this Sunday, May the second, in whatever year we're in.

Most of you have come here today to listen to a message, to hear a talk, to listen to a sermon, to listen to words. It is really not the words that does it for you. It is the silence between the words. When you are quiet, your mind is still, the reality shines through.

You become happy, peaceful, joyous, by sitting in the silence. There is really no message I have to give you. What you are looking for is within yourself. You are That. You are what you're looking for. There's nothing else, nothing. See this in yourself. Understand who you are and what you are. Never put yourself down. You are the immortal Self, without beginning and without end. You are Shiva, you are sat-chit-ananda. Always see this in yourself, never see anything else.

Feel the presence within yourself. Feel the happiness and the joy that you really are. Feel it! You can feel it. No matter how many so-called problems you may appear to have, no matter what is going on in your life, good or bad, forget about that. It doesn't matter. Feel the presence, the presence of consciousness, the presence of pure awareness. Feel this in yourself. Do not think about it, just feel it. When you begin to think about it, you spoil it. Allow the mind to rave on. Do not pay a bit of attention to the mind whatever thoughts it brings you, whatever it tells you. Pay no attention whatsoever to the mind. Feel the bliss! You are the bliss. There is absolutely nothing that you need or have to become.

Do not search for enlightenment or liberation. You'll never find it. There's no where to look for it. When you look with your senses, where is liberation? Where's freedom? It doesn't exist. When you go beyond the senses, when you pay no attention to the senses and go beyond them by observing them, looking at them, and not reacting to them, then you find that you've always been in bliss. Bliss happiness is your very nature. You are that.

Everything becomes so peaceful when no words are spoken. When there's nothing to think about. Never believe that you have something important to think about. All things are not important. No matter what you may think about it, it's not important. As long as you have to think of something, it's not important. Yet you're saying to yourself, "How can I function without thinking?" Think of what you said, "How can 'I' function without thinking?" Not you, but I. What you're really saying is, "How can the I function without thinking?" What I are you referring to? The ego-I has to think to exist, but the I-am consciousness is self-existent. There's nothing to think about. So whenever you're thinking about something, realize it's the I-consciousness, which turns into the I-ego so-to-speak, that does the thinking. If you go beyond the I-ego and go back to the I-consciousness, the thoughts will stop. There'll be no thoughts.

For again what is reality to think about. Reality is reality, it's all-pervading, omnipresence. There's no room or space for it to think. It is a power which knows itself. It doesn't have to ask if it knows itself or find out if it knows itself or think that it knows itself. If it had to do that it wouldn't be the power that knows itself. The power which knows itself as consciousness, the absolute reality, it can only know itself and nothing else because nothing else exists apart from the Self. There is no duality in the absolute Reality. Duality only appears to exist at the human level. It's an appearance. It's not true. It's not real. You can say this to yourself.

Therefore, whenever thoughts come to you, ask yourself the question, "Who thinks these thoughts? Where do they come from?" As you keep posing these questions to yourself, you will find that the thoughts disappear, they vanish. They return to the nothingness from whence they came.

It's so easy to become peaceful. It's so easy to become loving, blissful, happy. You just have to reject all those thoughts that come to you — all those thoughts, all those feelings, all the emotions. Just reject them. You reject them by not giving them power. You give them power every time you let them feel something inside of you. When your thoughts take on a feeling nature you give them power.

But when you refuse to take on that feeling nature, the thoughts will disappear. In other words, you are the one that gives them power. You are the one that creates your condition, be it good or bad. You are the one who sees the world the way you see it. See only yourself, see only reality. See only emptiness. It's really very simple to do this. Just sit the way you're sitting now and observe. Do not analyze, don't try to change your thoughts, do not fight your thoughts, just observe them, watch them, look at them, and when you're ready you can ask the question, "To whom do these thoughts come?"

Otherwise, just sit and look at your thoughts. Let your mind do whatever it likes. Let it become as nasty as it wants! Let the mind tell you all kinds of things — scary things, happy things, wrong things, right things. The mind is only here to make trouble for you, that's all. But when you do not allow the mind to make trouble for you, it disappears! And, how do you do this? By not reacting to your thoughts, by not allowing them to feel anything.

Where do these thoughts come from? Nowhere, they are called false imagination. All thoughts are false imagination. False imagination is like the water in the mirage. That's all your thoughts are. They appear to come to you but they don't exist. If they were real you'd be able to grab them, hold onto them, save them, put them in a box, store them away. But you cannot do this, which proves that they have no substance. How can they frighten you?

You see, you live in a universe which is self-existent, self-abiding, self-sufficient. This means that all of your needs are met from within. All of your needs are met from within. But this will only happen when you accept it this way. If you think that your needs have to come from a person, place or thing, you've always got a fight on your hands, because you're hoping to get a better job or get some money in the bank or someone will come along and help you with some problem, these are all erroneous thoughts.

If you could only learn to rely on the Self, miracles would take place in your life! If you can only learn to rely on the Self. How do you learn to rely on the Self? By trusting life, trusting life just the way it is. I'm not saying to trust certain people or to trust certain conditions, certain situations. I'm saying just to trust life. To trust life you go beyond people, places and things. You trust the substratum of all existence. You trust consciousness. In other words, you feel and believe in your heart that there is a power that knows the way. You came out of it. So you're that also, for you are it. You are that power yourself and you feel good about it. This is what I mean when I say, trust the power that knows the way.

There's nothing to fix in your life. Nothing to change. Nothing to accomplish. Nothing to do. Except to abide in the power that knows the way. It's so simple yet it's so hard for some of us. And it's hard because we allow the thoughts to come to us and spoil everything. You have to control your thoughts, control your thinking. When you are free from thinking, you will always abide in consciousness, which is the power that knows the way. And soon you'll find yourself becoming happier and happier every day, peaceful, harmonious.

What can really disturb you and make you sad, make you afraid? Only something that you think may happen to you? But if you're living in the eternal now, if you exist this moment, and you do, in this moment is there a problem? There's no problem in this moment, it's only when you begin to think of tomorrow or the next week or the next week. But if you learn to stay centered in the moment where nothing is happening, this moment will become the next moment. And the next moment will become the next hour, the next day, the next week, and the next year.

This is how to live, from moment to moment. But what do we do? We stretch out those moments to days. We like to see the future. We think something's going to happen to us tomorrow or the next day or the next day. But nothing can ever happen to you unless you allow it. You allow it by believing it, by thinking about it. You give it power by fearing it. But I say to you in truth, there's nothing to fear in this whole universe. There's no fear. Fear doesn't exist. Only the Self exists.

Only the Self exists, catch the meaning of those words. Only the Self exists, and I-am that. That's a profound statement.

I-am Brahman. When I make a statement like that, I'm not speaking about Robert. I-am encompasses all of you. I-am, is Brahman. Therefore when you admit to yourself that you are Brahman, you are saying that you're the whole universe. And something has to give. You really don't know what you're saying, you don't understand what you're saying. Say this to yourself. See how it feels, "I-am Brahman. I-am Brahman." You are declaring the highest truth in history, the highest truth in the world. There is nothing that comes after that. There is absolutely nothing to say after that. When you make the declaration, "I-am Brahman." Those are mighty words. The whole universe is Brahman. Yet what we call Brahman is not a thing, not a place. It is complete emptiness. So when you say, "I am Brahman," you're saying you're emptiness. Feel this in every bone in your body, if you have any bones in your body.

What can possibly happen to you? There is nothing that can happen to you! But when you think about something happening to you, you're creating your own destiny, aren't you? For you take certain facts, that are factual to you and you analyze them and you say, "There's no escape from this." And then you wonder that people suffer, so-to-speak. But when you realize that you are the creator of your own destiny, and when you allow yourself to think, then you begin to take stock in yourself. Did you ever take stock in yourself? You can buy stock in yourself! It's on the open market. Call your broker tomorrow and say you want to buy stock in yourself. That's the best stock you can ever own! For out of it comes everything else.

You are never what appears to be. It goes back to the mind again. The mind will read something in the paper, watch something on television and begin to ponder things seriously, worry about it, get upset over it. Is it any wonder that people go through certain experiences and suffer a lot? You are creating your own destiny. You are power. You can do anything you want with your life. If you want to sit around feeling sorry for yourself, nobody cares.

I will tell you again: You are all Brahman. You are all consciousness. You are all the ultimate reality. This is your true nature and nothing else exists.

Accept this for yourself. Accept it right now. You have never been the body or the mind. This is a false image. For when you believe you are the body or the mind you have to suffer accordingly. No one can get away with that, no one on this earth. Everyone who believes they are the body or the mind has to suffer. Why? Because things change. Things are always changing constantly, continuously. And you have a certain idea of how you're supposed to live. You have a certain idea of how you're supposed to feel. You have a certain idea of how you're supposed to...what you're supposed to do with your life in this plane of existence. You have a preconceived idea of these things and this is what causes you the trouble.

So I say to you again, "Stop thinking. Live in the moment. Stop worrying about the past or the future. Awaken to yourself. Be happy. Be free. You are not alone. You have divine forces right now taking care of you, guiding you, directing you to your ultimate good. Trust these divine forces. Have faith in them. All they want is your recognition. When you recognize there are divine forces taking care of you then you will find they are working for you and you find infinite joy."

But when it's taken in reverse and you believe life is against you, there are forces against you, then you create your own hell. So;

Number One: Stop thinking. Take control of your mind.

Number Two: live in the here and now. Forget about yesterday, forget about the future. Live in the moment and be happy in the moment. Do whatever you have to do to be happy in the moment.

Number Three: Do not be judgmental. Do not judge anybody or anything, ever, no matter how it looks, never judge anybody.

Number Four: Leave everything alone. You did not come into this plane of existence to change anybody or anything. You're not here to fix anything or anybody. You're here only to become free and liberated by knowing the truth.

Number Five: Always catch yourself and say, "I am Brahman." When you say, "I am Brahman," you're not talking about your physical body, or your ego. You're talking about the truth about yourself. Reality itself is Brahman. It has nothing to do with your body. Your body doesn't exist. It never existed, it appears to exist but it doesn't exist. Your nature is pure consciousness, pure awareness.

Always remember these things, learn these things. You have a lot of tools to work with. If you only can use these tools every moment of your life, you will never be unhappy again. How can you be unhappy if you know the truth? You were not born to suffer or have problems.

You are here to rejoice! To be still and know that I-am God. To remember that I-am with you always, even unto the end of the world.

You are not an ordinary person, or you wouldn't be here. There is something special about you.

You're ready to be out of the show, the show of materialism, the show of relativity, materialism and relativity.

You're ready to break out of that shell. Let it happen.

The mind will create all kinds of situations to stop it from happening. It will show you all kinds of nonsense. But you know now that you have the power to change these things, to turn from the nonsense, to reality!

You can do it. Work with it. Peace.

SV: Robert I should write this down because when I talk about it I lose more than half of it. I was going through the material that's the transcript 109, and what came out was that there is no "I"...no "I" that persists. Because when I look back ten years ago, so whatever "I" was back then it isn't here. I don't know about it. Whatever "I" was an hour ago or a year ago isn't here. Whatever "I" that may be a year from now I don't know about it. It isn't here anyway. It just doesn't persist.

It's just no identity to an "I" and it doesn't persist. And then there came so-to-speak, I am Brahman and changed all the things into a hershey bar which is a sense of humor I guess? But I-am Brahman is really, really real it can never change into anything, it's not possible. But with the I it changes all the time but when the thought stops there is no I. None at all. And the thoughts are just the beginning and the end and a little in between. And then when this one stops and another starts there is in between there is nothing just a gap. And the I which is something can't jump into nothing and remain as a something, that's not possible. It's like a shadow can't jump into a brilliant light and remain as a shadow. Now there is nothing there that's about forty percent of the memories are gone. There is no I.

Now I can hear myself talk right now, you know. If my mother was alive I would swear on her life I was talking but there is no I and no talking. I still see a serpent when there is only rope. But there is no serpent and there is no rope. But I still see the serpent. And the world is real to me even now and there is no world. There is contradiction all the while.

R: In other words you don't exist. (SV: I don't exist and don't not exist, either...whatever I say is false. There is no words to it I can say, I can't.) True. (SV: You don't have to agree with me.) (laughs) I agree with you one-hundred percent. (SV: Yeah, it's just contradiction. It's just I'm not sitting in this chair, I'm not sitting in that chair, just in between.) Not even in between. (laughter) You're all right Fred. (SV: What Fred?) (laughs) Who knows? (SV: I don't. I talked a lot and I talked about nothing and there is nobody talking. It's ridiculous.)

SG: Sounds like you've woken up?

SV: Thank you Robert. (R: Keep up the good work.) Yeah I'll do that.

(tape ends) [TOC]

REMEMBER ALWAYS WHAT SATSANG IS

9th May, 1993

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) Students: Good afternoon Robert.)

Happy mothers day. (students: Thank you.) Welcome to satsang. I welcome you with all my heart. I love everyone unconditionally, equivocally. You are all divine beings. Everyone here is a replica of God. There are no exceptions.

Whatever you do whatever you don't do, you're God incarnated. Whether you have sins of omission or commission makes no difference. You can never be separated from God or consciousness that is impossible. Therefore you can only say, "God made you do it." True! For there is only God. Who else would do it? There is only consciousness, absolute reality. Every move you make, every step you take, every action you take, is nothing to do with you, it's all consciousness. Therefore what do you have to fear? What is there to be afraid of? You are the one. You are the holy one. Rejoice!

You have to love yourself, to worship yourself, to bow to yourself. For you are the holy one of Israel. Is there a holy one of Mecca? A holy one of Hinduism? Whatever you like, but you are that. Never take yourself for granted. You are the one. Never mind what the physical form shows you, the world shows you, what people show you, do not take these things seriously. Look to your Self! Abide in the Self! Find the absolute reality, this is you. You are that.

What is satsang?

Most of us do not have any idea what satsang is. You know what satsang is, but not what satsang is not. Satsang is not a philosophy. Where you come in and have a debate over points of religion. Satsang is not a sermon that I give. Satsang is not a place where you make casual relationships. Meet new people, new friends. Satsang is not a place where you come to emulate the speech.

The only reason I talk like this is because I see you about twice a week, for four hours a week. In real satsang, if I were with you all of the time, I would sit in the silence with you. I'll be available to you all day long and you can sit with me all day. So since you are not in that position you should be here twice a week, to feel the benefits of satsang.

Sat means consciousness, being, the absolute reality is sat. Sang is a getting together of people sitting at the feet of the Sage. Sangha the holy temple. If one comes into satsang they should be quiet, still, for they're in the presence of the Self. The holy one. You are that.

In satsang there may be bhajans where you sing together, kirtans where you chant together, silence where you do nothing, just sit. Questions once in a while. This is what satsang is all about. It really makes no difference what I say. Whether I talk about God or I talk about chocolate, makes no difference what I talk about. It's not the words. When you sit in satsang with me, you take the form in the name of the Self in your heart, and see the form in the heart, the Self in the heart, the name in the heart. You become the heart, you are the heart. The heart of awareness. The heart of consciousness. This is what satsang does, it opens your heart, totally and completely, absolutely. If your heart is to be opened, you have to have a tremendous humility, tremendous surrender. When you're surrendering, you're surrendering your ego, your past karma, your dogmas, your preconceived ideas, all these have surrendered to the Self in satsang.

Remember this all the time, what satsang really is. Just being here is the same. Be here twice a week. The world has you the rest of the time influencing all kinds of ideas, nonsense. To get away from the world and come to satsang is refreshing, like a gentle breeze that comes along, takes away the heat from you. Makes you calm and cool and collective and peaceful. To help in this process, we sing bhajans which we're going to do right now.

(bhajans sung)

When I say, all is well, and everything is unfolding as it should, I mean that literally. All is well, everywhere. You may see things that you do not agree with. Any experiences that make you mad, angry and upset. When you have personal problems in your life with health, finances, people. You have to ask yourself, "Are these really problems, or is it something I do not understand?"

If we live in universal bliss, and we do, how can there be such man's inhumanity to man. These dastardly things that are taking place all over the world. Yet the question for you is, "Who sees this? To whom does this come?" You've been programmed to see things a certain way and you have your likes and your dislikes, your good and your bad, your ups and your downs. You have to go beyond that, take a step backwards from that.

You must never allow a condition to get the better of you. Whatever that condition may be. And you do this by simply not reacting to the condition. Do not give any condition any power, by fearing it, liking it, seeing it, hearing it. Your nature is bliss consciousness and the universe is also bliss consciousness. There is no difference between you and the universe, yet somehow you've been programmed to see something else. Where does this programming come from? Your mind, where else?

You think you have a mind that creates things, and it experiences the things it creates. But the truth is you never had a mind. You do not have a mind right now. There is no mind. Awake from your sleep and see this. There is no mind. There has never been a mind and there will never be a mind. For whom is there a mind? Ask that question to yourself. Who has to fake to make their life better? "Who?" ask yourself. Be patient with yourself. Never be in a hurry.

You have an eternity. And eternity is this very moment. So this very moment all is well and everything is unfolding the way it's supposed to. Yes, everything is unfolding the way it's supposed to, everything, everywhere. There are no mistakes!

If you cannot comprehend something in this world, it gets to you and makes you feel upset. Do not try to change the condition, for the condition will pop up wherever you go. It's like a person who gets disgusted with the world and she comes to live in an ashram some place, but the world that she got disgusted with is in her mind. And she has to take that mind with her. She is going to find the same problems in the ashram as she found in the streets, no difference. Places will not change you. It'll make you feel good for a little bit, but soon you revert to your old self which has always been.

Try to leave people alone, leave things alone. You will know what to do when the time comes. Everything has been planned for you. Every step you take. Every action you take has been predetermined for you. Consequently do not worry about these things. Don't be concerned about anything. All is well! It is!

What difference does it make what you're going through? The experiences you're having, good or bad, it has absolutely nothing to do with you. For you are beyond experiences, beyond karma, beyond God, beyond eternity. You are that substratum from which everything comes. Learn to love yourself deeply, purely. Never never feel sorry for yourself. You have to see the truth by going within. Spend time alone. Dive deep within yourself, where all your answers are. Everything that you've ever been looking for is in yourself. You are the one. The holy one. There is no one else, but you. See this, feel this, become this.

It's so wonderful that you're beginning to understand that you are the universe. The whole universe is you, everything that exists. Everything that has ever existed is you. There is nothing to fight, nothing to fear. When you begin to think this way then moksha will be shown to you. You will know where to go, what to do, with whom to meet. And you will know everybody you see, every situation you encounter, is only a projection of yourself, that's all, your creation. You are the one, no one else but you. Feel this, see this, accept this. Become free, liberated. You're already free and liberated. Know this!

Stand up tall, fear nothing. There is more going for you than against you. The truth only wants acknowledgement from you that's all, it wants you to acknowledge it. It wants you to acknowledge that you are not the body or the mind or the problems, acknowledge it now. You are free already...

(tape ends abruptly) [TOC]

TRUE DETACHMENT

10th June, 1993

Robert: Om, shanti shanti om, peace, peace. Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It is wonderful to be with you again this hot, Thursday evening. You had nowhere better to go so you came here! Welcome! Good to see you.

Ask yourself the question, "Why do I really come to satsang?" And the answer will probably be, "To become free! To awaken, to become self-realized, to become liberated." Most of us understand that this is your real nature. Liberation is what you really are! But we've been covered over with ignorance, what we call Maya. We believe the world is real, it can hurt us, do all kinds of things to us and we react to the world. So your answer is really right. You want to uncover the ignorance and become free!

Now what happens when you become liberated? When you awaken to your Self?
You

have unalloyed happiness, total peace, unfathomable joy, infinite love. These are all attributes to awakening. Therefore, develop these if you want to awaken. For you will feel beautiful, wonderful all over and nothing will ever spoil it. In other words, if you awaken, you will not react any longer to the television, to the newspaper, to the people, what they say or think. When you awaken, you will know that all is well! All is exceedingly well in every area of your life. And your life will be the life of the universe. There will be no difference between you and the universe! Basically this is the reason why people come to satsang, to awaken!

You have read the books. You realize there's a world of beauty, a world of joy, a world of love that interpenetrates this world. That brings you total happiness always, total peace that never changes. Whereas, now in the world that you're living in, so it appears, certain things make you happy. Certain things make you sad. You react to what the world gives you, how the world treats you, you react to that. So you're never really happy all the time. You never really have peace all the time. Your peace and your happiness is determined by what's going on in your life.

Whereas, to an awakened being what's going on in your life doesn't matter at all. You're deliriously happy all the time! Whether they throw you to the lions, or you win the lotto, or your body is cut to pieces, or you have the healthiest body in the world, it makes no difference, for you're totally peaceful all the time! You're totally happy all the time! This is the reason why you want to be happy for you realize being happy feels wonderful. Therefore, these are valid reasons to be happy. But you don't want the happiness to end.

You want it to be forever. This is what satsang is all about. This is why we're here, to experience unalloyed happiness. To experience total peace, total joy!

Now, the main obstacle that keeps you from experiencing this joy and this happiness that I'm talking about is attachment to person, place and thing. It is this attachment that makes you earthbound. It keeps you reincarnating over and over again, so it appears, on this earth plane. For if you're attached, you believe you are a body and a mind. When you believe you're a body and a mind you're going to experience all kinds of things in this world. You'll experience worldly things and become attached to these things. You will believe that somebody, some place can make you happy. Somebody, some place can make you miserable. You will believe that if you attain this, you'll be the happiest person on earth and if you do not attain it, you will be miserable all the time.

You believe if you can only have this person in your life, you'll be the happiest person on earth. But when this person comes into your life after a while you'll wish he never did. Because he'll make you miserable! And so it is on this plane. So learn to be detached!

A good example of detachment is this: Let's say you have a dream. In that dream you are a little person and you grow up. You get married and you buy a brand new home. You buy a brand new car. You have three children and they grow up. And you live a relatively good life. And then you awaken from the dream. Let me ask you, how long are you attached to your children of the dream before you forget about them? How long are you attached to your wife or husband of the dream before you forget about them? How long are you attached to your car and house? And anything else that you worked so hard to get in the dream, before you forget about them? A couple of seconds? A minute? An hour? It's usually minutes, you forget all about the dream. This is detachment.

If for some reason you did not forget about the dream people and the dream experiences, you wouldn't be able to function. You'd be living in two worlds! You'd be living in the dream world and this world and you'd think they're both real. So your nature makes you forget about the dream. You have enough problems to handle in this world. Imagine if all your dreams were on your mind all the time as if they were real! And so you become detached from the dream quickly.

Now you're done with this world called the earthly plane. In this world you believe everything to be real also! And you do the same thing. You grow up. You elicit the things that you want to make you happy. You want to meet the right person to get married to and you become attached to these things. This is the problem, you become attached to person, place and thing. This is the only problem that you have.

Now, I'm not saying to be totally detached so that you have no feelings, no love, I'm not saying this at all. So being detached is totally different from what you think it is. To be detached means you no longer feel an affinity to hold on to things.

You no longer have the necessity to own things. To hold on to them. You're free from this. The more spiritual you become, the freer you become. For you no longer have to obtain things, have things to make you happy. You leave things alone. You are no longer obsessed with people, places and things. But you have a great compassion and love for every body and everything. But you're not attached!

In other words, when you're with another person, you love that person. But you're not obsessed with them. You don't own them. You give them freedom to express themselves, yet you love. And if the person ever leaves, the love is still there. It didn't go anywhere, for you are love itself! If you understand what this love means, it can't come or go depending on person, place or thing. For love is always there because that's what you are. The attachment is gone. So, if your mate wants to leave you, or your car is stolen, or your house burns down, this does not affect you one iota.

For something deep within your heart tells you all is well. There are no mistakes! You're no longer hurt-able. You can't be hurt by any body, no matter what they do. This is true detachment. In other words, you can own things and not own them. You can have certain people in your life and not have them in your life. You can live in certain areas of this world and not live in certain areas of this world, it's all the same. There is no difference.

Your life will not depend on external things or internal things. Think of what it means to live this way, how wonderful you will feel all the time. You'll never depend on people again for anything, yet you love people. It doesn't mean that you become sarcastic, obnoxious. It means that you become a loving being, an understanding being, a compassionate being. You leave things alone and you leave people alone. You turn within yourself. And all the answers are within yourself. All the answers that you've been looking for, everything that you've been looking for is within yourself! You will learn to depend on the Self for everything. Yet, you cooperate with people. You cooperate with the world, but you understand in your heart that the world is a passing show, a passing fantasy. Nothing is ever the same.

Consequently, you become unhurt-able. The world cannot hurt you again, ever, no matter what it shows you. It doesn't matter if you've got cancer, or you've got AIDS, no big deal, it's okay. It's only the body and you are not the body. The doctor tells you you're in perfect health, all is well in your body - it's okay, too. It makes no difference. See, they're both two sides of the same coin. The only thing that's going to make something happen to us is the way we react to them - the conditions. The only thing that determines what happens to us, is the way we react to a given condition. You are in control. You are in charge of your being, your body. You are the Master over yourself. It is up to you, always remember this!

This life is but another dream! And the only time you will ever awaken from it, know that something else, that something other exists even more beautiful than you could ever imagine, is by not becoming attached to anything. Own anything you want, but never be possessed by your possessions. Learn to live this way and you'll be very happy all of the time. And one day you will awaken and you will laugh hysterically.

You will understand this is only a dream. No matter how real it may be, it's a dream. You are not what you appear to be. You are beyond anything you could ever comprehend. Learn to sit in the silence and be still. Because your true nature is infinite wisdom, absolute reality, pure awareness, consciousness. You do not have to do any methods to become free. If you weren't free you'd have to practice all kinds of yoga, meditations, all sorts of things to become free. But since you're already free, there's nothing you have to do to realize it. So we don't meditate as in Advaita Vedanta. We sit in the silence.

We sit in the silence and we watch. We work intelligently on our conditioning. We observe the mind. What is the mind, but a bunch of thoughts about the past and worries of the future, that's all the mind is! We learn to stay centered in the here and now. We observe things happening around us but we never react. We act from our heart. But we never react! As you begin to live this way, you'll notice as the weeks pass, as the months pass, as the years pass something begins to happen to us. We're becoming more peaceful, more loving, kinder, we feel happy most of the time. We're on the path of self-realization. But if you're arrogant, sarcastic, obnoxious, you have a bad temper, then you have a problem. For these are the things that keep you earthbound. They keep you attached to this earth. And you'll come back again and again and again, unless you do something about it. It's your choice!

This choice is really the only freedom you have. Everything else is predestined. But you have the choice whether to turn within or to react. The choice is always yours!

Nobody wants to hurt you. We live in consciousness, it's virtually impossible to be hurt. Consciousness accommodates us as images. Because consciousness is absolute reality, we're absolute reality, also. Consciousness is all-pervading, everywhere present at the same time. There's no room for anything else. This means that you're made out of goodness, love, peace, happiness, joy. This is what you really are! Focus on these things. Do not focus on the TV news or the newspapers, what people say or do. The world has been the way it is for millions of years. It'll never change.

Your mission is to get out of this world. And you do this by becoming detached, by ridding yourself of the emotions that you have. I know some of you say, "Well, I've had a real hard life!" Everybody had a hard life at one time or another, forget about that. Live in the now, live in the moment.

Become free now! Become liberated now! If you live correctly in the moment you don't have to worry about the future, the future will take care of itself! As far as the past is concerned, it can't hurt you unless you think about it. Unless you think about all the things that happened to you in the past, then you bring them back again. You create them again in your mind, you bring them to life again. You must learn to let go of the past totally and completely. Not to worry about the future and feel wonderful right now. And you do this by taking time every day to sit in the silence observing, watching, inquiring, "Who am I?"

As thoughts come to you, you inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I think them. Then, who am I?" The I-thought is the main source of all of your problems. The I-thought, "I am this. I am that" Therefore, if you get rid of the I-thought, all of your problems will disappear with it. And the way to get rid of the I-thought is to inquire, "Who am I? Where did the I come from? What is the source of this I?" The I-thought comes from your heart, your spiritual heart and moves into your brain. When this happens you become what you are now, a human being. And you say, "I need this, I want this, I have to have this, this hurts me, this makes me feel good."

The object of self-inquiry is, of course, the act to return to the heart. So, you become mindful of the I-thought. When you sit in the silence, you watch it. And as this "I" comes to you, a question comes to you, you inquire, "To whom does it come? It comes to me or the I-thought." It is the I-thought that has the question. It is the I-thought that feels sad, upset, you inquire, "Who am I? What is the source of the 'I'?" Who am I? Really means, what is the source of the I-thought. What is the source?

You ask yourself this question over and over again. One day there will be sort of an explosion in some of you. The I-thought will return to the heart and you'll become all-pervading, omnipresent, consciousness, the real Self, which you truly are! You will have unalloyed happiness and eternal peace forever! It will never leave you again. You will understand that you are not the body or the mind or the thoughts, but you are the substratum of all existence. You are the God that you've been praying to! You are Krishna, Jehovah, all of the gods that you've been praying to all of your life. You are that now! It is you. It has always been you. You are that. There is no God apart from you. You've been praying to your Self. You are the God you've been praying to all these years.

Awaken to this truth and be free. Peace.

S: In the beginning of the talk you said that when enlightenment happens there will be great joy and great happiness and you'll feel this way. Who is this you that will feel this?

R: The universal consciousness itself, it will feel itself. It is absolute joy, absolute love, absolute peace, these words are really all synonymous. The word that we want to use is bliss. Bliss means all of these words, absolute joy, absolute peace, absolute love is bliss, another name for bliss. So when you realize your Self, you feel the bliss that you've always been. It's your natural state. (S: Our language is so dualistic. You said, "You'll feel it" like it's a you feeling it. There will be consciousness feeling what it is.) You're right, of course, but to make you understand what I'm talking about we have to be dualistic. In reality there's only consciousness and consciousness only knows itself. It knows nothing else but itself. And that Self is bliss and you are that!

S: Nisargadatta used to say that consciousness is unaware of itself. Unaware of itself as anything separate at all.

R: True, exactly, it is bliss consciousness, that is its nature. Its nature is Bliss. But since it is that, it doesn't know it. How can it know if there is nothing to compete with, nothing to compare it with? It is itself by itself. It has no competition. (S: It's conscious but it's not aware of it as itself. It's not unconscious.) Because It has no opposite. It has nothing to compare itself with. (S: That's backwards ... verbally that's backwards. It doesn't jive with the language. It doesn't make any sense at all!) That's why I don't talk about it too much. It's true: only consciousness exists and that's it! So find out for yourself what you are.

S: You mentioned that attachment is what keeps you bound to the world, to people, places and things. And when you have children that aren't grown and they're so young and you're their only source of refuge, you feel an obligation and make a commitment to being there for their sake and it seems a tremendous attachment goes along with that.

R: You have to understand what I say about children. What I said was not to be attached, but to have love and peace and joy in your heart. You're their living father and be a high spiritual being at the same time. (S: There seems to be a lifestyle.) If you understand the truth about the Self and understand who you really are and what you really are, everything will unfold the way it should, by itself. It's amazing how it works. When you become spiritually mature, everything unfolds the way it's supposed to. It doesn't mean you've got to leave your family and run away to India or someplace and live in a cave. On the contrary, it means you will become a better father than you've ever been. Because you're not playing favorites. You're not being attached. You'll be able to be a good teacher to your children in the right way, because you'll not be working from the selfish you or from ignorance. You'll be working from wisdom. You'll be an example for your children. An example of wisdom, of total honesty, total joy, total peace. And the children will emulate you. So this is not a question of not caring about your children. It is not a question of not being a good father. If you become self-realized, you'll be a good father. Try it!

S: You mentioned that you don't have to do yoga and meditation because you're already realized. How do you attain it?

R: By everything I've spoken about. Becoming still, sitting in the silence and observing yourself, observing your mind, observing your thoughts. Questioning yourself, "Who am I? What is the source of the I?" Becoming quiet and still, watching you bodily functions, observing them. Watching your mind think. Becoming totally aware of yourself in action ... what you do all the time, without reacting. And as you do this you notice that your thoughts become less and less. When you react to your thoughts, you try to stop your thoughts, they become more powerful. But when you do not react to your thoughts, you just watch them and have no feeling for them one way or the other, they become weak until they disappear in their entirety. When your thoughts disappear you'll be free.

It is your thoughts that keep you bound. That's why in the Buddhist scriptures they tell you to kill the Buddha. When you meet the Buddha on the path, kill him. It means if you have any thoughts about the Buddha, kill those thoughts. All thoughts are to be completely eliminated. When the mind is empty, truth will shine by itself. Peace.

(end) [TOC]

BEYOND MENTAL CONCEPTS

No Date

Robert: Peace. Peace. Good afternoon. Welcome. It is good to be with you again on this lovely Sunday afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you unequivocally, absolutely. All is well.

Last Thursday evening I touched a subject on which I received many phone calls. I was speaking of the fact that a Jnani, when a person becomes self-realized and becomes a so called Jnani, the body no longer has anything to do with him or her. In other words, the body has nothing to do with the Jnani, but it appears to be a body. And the body will go through its own activities, and do what it came here to do. I must have touched a nerve when I said that, for some people, for I got four or five phone calls in regards to it. And people wanted me to elaborate on this subject, so I will. We'll discuss it a little further, see where we get.

First of all, what is a Jnani, a Sage? To come up with that answer, is the question, "What is not a Sage?" A Sage is never a yogi or a spiritual teacher, or a meditation teacher. I use the term Jnani and Sage interchangeably. A Sage has absolutely no teaching to give you. If you want to have a teaching, you'll have to go to a spiritual teacher, a yogi, a meditation Master. But a Sage never has a teaching to give you whatsoever. The idea is to just be in the presence of the Sage, that does the teaching. A Sage does not teach tantric yoga, kundalini yoga, hatha yoga, raja yoga, laya yoga, or anything else. For all teachings are from the mind. Where else would they come from? They are all mental concepts.

The Sage is beyond the mind, beyond the mental concepts. So how can a Sage give a teaching? A Sage is absolute reality, pure awareness. The term Sage is loosely termed, Sage is meant all-pervading. The Sage is not confined to a body whatsoever.

A Sage is the whole universe, all-pervading, everywhere present. So to be in contact with the Sage all you have to do is think about the Sage, and you're in contact with the Sage.

But there is no teaching to give. The teaching is emptiness. When a person, so called, becomes enlightened. I don't like to use these terms, they are so meaningless. But so you understand what I'm talking about I use these terms loosely. I make it simple for you to understand. But when a person, a being, so called, awakens, the awakening has nothing to do with the body whatsoever.

This is why throughout history we've had Sages who have been kings, queens. Sages have been laborers. They've been married or single. They've had boyfriends or girlfriends, whatever the case may be. Some have lived in caves and shunned the world completely. Some traveled from country to country, not interested in one place. A Sage is never looking for anything, for he has nothing left to look for. A Sage has attained everything there is to attain. Total freedom is the Sage, absolute reality, absolute freedom. Freedom from desire, freedom from wants. Yet the body of the Sage remains the same. Not to the Sage, but to the people looking at the Sage. The Sage realizes he has no body. He has no body. But the body of the Sage goes through its karma.

In order for a Sage to come to this plane, to present himself or herself as a Sage, they have to take on a body, otherwise no one would ever hear of a Sage. If Ramana Maharshi didn't have a body, no one would ever have heard of him. So this is true of every Sage that ever lived. They have a body in order to teach in their own inimitable way. So every thing that the Sage does is a teaching, so-to-speak. The Sage is not a teacher, but everything that he does is a teaching.

A Sage kills your mind, destroys the mind. When the mind is destroyed there is eternal, happiness, total freedom. As long as you have a mind, you're thinking, you never will be happy or peaceful. Impossible, for this is not a world of happiness or thinking. This world is not a world of peace. Yet the body appears to be doing the same thing everybody else does.

It's like the example of the fan. You pull out the plug of the fan, it keeps rotating till it stops. You pull out the plug of the fan, it doesn't stop instantaneously, does it? It keeps going for a while before it stops, slows down and stops. Such is the body of the Sage that comes to this plane with the plug out. When the fan stops, so-to-speak, then the Sage disappears. He drops the body and leaves. So while the Sage is on this plane, always remember he's like the fan, going without the plug. There is no karma being accrued, and he never appears to be.

There are many different Jnanis, and we can't judge these things. The worst thing we can ever do is to become judgmental, compare, find fault. As long as we believe we are a body and a mind, we can never really understand what a Sage is, never: It's impossible. For the mind is not meant to do that.

There are also certain Sages in this world called Avadhuts. Avadhut really means "crazy adept." This Sage comes to this world to tear your world apart. He purposely is here to tear your world apart, to see what you believe, your systems. Everything that you stand up for. The Sage tears you all to pieces, to show you it doesn't matter, not be wrapped up in anything. In other words the Sage can go into a bar, see a bunch of people drinking, he'll join them drinking, be one of them. He can get twice as drunk as they are. But they will feel the difference by being with the Sage. So what happens then, they will become sort of realized inside, and start to pursue a spiritual life. A Sage may appear to be a fool, but this comes from your viewpoint. Yet the Sage has nothing to do with the body.

Take the example of the screen. You go to see a movie called, "The Godfather." On the screen you see all sorts of violence, murders, mayhem, confusion. All this happens on the screen, blood falling all over the place. But is the screen affected at all? After the movie is over, the screen is just the same as it was before. The screen has not been affected one iota. The images have finished and are gone, and the screen remains the same. That is how it is with the Sage. A Sage always realizes he is the screen, and all the images are a superimposition on him.

Everything the body of the Sage does is simply like the images on the screen. Yet the paradox is the Sage knows he is the Sage, with other words, with other names. He realizes the body is a body. When you look at the Sage, you see something different. You see a human being. You see a person like yourself. And you create a Sage in your own image. You want certain expectations with the Sage.

You expect the Sage to behave in a certain way, do certain things that you believe are true and right. You believe is real.

Whereas the Sage is always smiling and happy and observes you and watches you. Leaves you alone. Lets you dig your own grave, so-to-speak. The Sage will never interfere in your life. Remember the Sage is not a problem solver. All problems are of the mind. What does the Sage have to do with this? Nothing, all works out of the mind. The Sage is beyond the mind, beyond thinking, beyond thoughts, beyond doing, beyond appearances. This is why there is nothing more powerful than being with the Sage, and having a quiet mind.

Your job is never never to be judgmental whatsoever. Have no opinions for or against anything. Why? Because it's where you are coming from. That's how you see it. But when I speak like this sometimes, it blows the ego. Because the ego's sitting there saying, "You can't say that to me. I've got my own mind. I've got my own opinion." It just keeps you back really, if you're here to try to become enlightened, so-to-speak, awakened. You hold yourself back because you're judgmental.

You've got your own preconceived ideas what a Sage is, what you are, what you want, what you need, and it stunts your growth. This is why the best course of action is for you to stop thinking whatsoever. Catch yourself every time you think. And put a stop to it. Stop your mind from thinking totally and completely. For all thoughts are erroneous. I don't care what the thoughts are, how good the thoughts may be, how twisted your thinking may be. As long as you're thinking, you're hindering yourself.

Again, some of you might say, "But what about my work? I've got to think of my future. I've got to think of the present. I've got to think of my bills. I've got to think of my family. I've got to think of this and that."

There is a power which knows the way.

If you but surrendered to this power, all your needs will be met from within. All of your needs will be met from within, always. But if you sit there being judgmental, say that you can find peace and happiness by doing certain things, it will never happen. And the body will come back again and again and again on this earth plane. Always searching, always looking for something, but never just being.

A true Jnani is something that you can never understand yourself. It's impossible. You can't understand with your mind. For there are no explanations in the mind. Therefore you expect the Sage to be what you are. And you will say that is just a person like me. He or she does the same thing that I do. Always remember the Sage knows he has no body. Even if a body appears to you, the Sage knows a 100% that he has no body. Never had a body, nor will have body.

And the Sage looks at you and sees himself. He looks at the world and sees himself. There's no one else for the world to look to the Sage but the Self. Because he always sees himself everywhere he looks. By seeing himself I mean he realizes the whole universe is inside of him.

It emanates through his mind, so-to-speak. It's how it appears to you. You are told not to judge by appearances at all. Every teacher has said this. Do not judge by appearances. Yet most of us do. It's up to each one of us to do the right thing, and learn the truth about your body.

If you think of the Sage, the Sage will think of you. Again because the Sage is all-pervading omnipresence. Now, where are you coming from? What do you see when you wake up in the morning? You worry about your life, it's not going where you want it to go? You think you have to find a teacher someplace far away? And the teacher will give you something that you need. A special book that you can read, that will enlighten you and make you happy. Give you something that you can do, become peaceful, relaxed, that will last. None of these things ever last, for a while, for a few moments, for a few days, a few months, a few years. Then you revert back to what you were before, because the mind has never been destroyed.

Your job is to destroy the mind that thinks about these things. That's why you're here, to destroy the ego completely. That's the only way you'll be free, totally free forever, the only way. Ponder these wisdoms I'm speaking to you and see if I'm not right. Every teaching is of the mind. Every teacher that you chase, go after. Every teaching that he gives you or she gives you is from the mind. Only from the mind.

If there is no mind, you'll have nothing to look for. And the mind wants to search and look. But if there is no mind, who's left to look, who's left to see? So life goes on with the seek and the object of the seek. This is how you were made to see the objects, and identify with the objects. I'm saying transcend the seer and the objects both, by enquiring to whom does the object come to? Who sees this object? What is its Source? You must ask this question repeatedly all day long. What is the source of my misery? What is the source of my happiness?

Will your mind try to be judgmental? Catch yourself. Ask, "To whom does this come? To whom does this judgment come? It comes to me. I think this. But am I really the I that thinks this? Am I an I? Where did I come from? Who am I? Who is the thinker?" And go beyond. Keep going beyond everything that comes to your mind. Go beyond all the answers. Until you're left in total peace. When there are no more answers, you're totally free and peaceful.

As long as you are looking for answers, you can have no peace or happiness. Always remember, this world is not a world to improve. Even if you are trying to make this a world in which to live. You can't do this. It will only be for a few days, a few months, a few years. This world is not a world to be improved at all. It's a world to be gotten rid of, IN THE MIND. It starts in the mind. It begins in the mind.

Don't think, some day the world will be a better place in which to live. You'll be happy. It will never happen. Since the beginning of time, man has tried to improve this world, of no avail. Things some time seem to improve for a while, but it will become worse than ever before. Why? Because this is the way of this world.

You have to have friction in this world in order for it to survive. If there is no friction in this world, this world would disintegrate totally. You'd have no world. It's good and bad, right and wrong, up and down, forward and backward. In order for a jet plane to fly, there has to be the same amount of power pushing it back, resisting. This is how the plane flies, It has to have resistance. If there was no resistance it wouldn't fly. It wouldn't be able to get off the ground. So it is with our life. In order to achieve something, there has to be resistance. Think about this. All you wish to achieve in life, you have to have resistance, in order to achieve. If there was no resistance, there would be nothing to achieve.

This is why I say to you, Advaita Vedanta has nothing to do with this world whatsoever. You try to make yourself a better human being, or a more competent person. This just makes you more worldly. You've got to get off this planet totally and completely. And when you get off this planet, you have to fly away to some place like mars, where you go deep within and touch reality. Its what's comprehensible.

What happens when you touch reality? It's more beautiful than you can ever understand or appreciate. So stop searching, stop looking, stop being what you are, what you think you are. Stop doing everything you do, mentally. I know you're concerned what's going to happen to you if you stop thinking. You'll always be taken care of. You'll get all the things you need.

One thing you'll awaken now. Whether you like it or not, you will awaken. And then you'll see who's been awake. There never was a time when you were asleep. So do not become bored, bored with life. Some of you become bored with satsang. And you look for new teachers, new satsangs, new jobs, new people in our lives. We're looking for happiness, aren't we? Immediately we'll have happiness, if we do all these things we just mentioned. Nothing could be further from the truth. It will only be a temporary condition.

This is why the wise person hangs on the Jnani in all circumstances. They don't look to be bored or not bored, no matter what's going on. If you're being in the presence of the Sage all the time, it'll happen automatically. If you get bored and want to change things, you start all over again. You'll be born again. You go to a new country, you find a so-called teacher. And hear something interesting. Get involved with the teacher. The teacher becomes boring after a couple of years, and you look for somebody else. It never stops. Everything will stop when you stop. When you become still and consciousness begins to move through you, becomes you.

This is the meaning of "Be still and know that I am God."

Be still! Stop searching! Stop looking! Stop being!

Everything you already have. You are totally free and liberated now. So be it. Peace.

Feel free to ask questions.

S: I have a question. I have been reading a lot about a few people in Ramana's time. Just by a look or even a hug, there is a story of Animali. Ramana ran over to Animali, hugged him for two minutes, and he became spontaneously enlightened. And then he spent the next thirty-eight years stabilizing in that, and then certain other cases. So I was wondering if you could speak a little bit about transmission.

R: Yes. Remember that Animali was not an ordinary person, he was extraordinary because he had been in the teachings many years. He had prepared himself and he was very humble, filled with humility. (S: He was just a boy when it happened.) Yes, he had a joy in his heart, and looked at Ramana as the divine universe. Ramana was the whole universe to him. So he had something inside of him, so when Ramana hugged him and loved him that way, what was left dropped away, and he became enlightened. Now this is true of us too. We're not different from Animali. Except that with us, we have such things in our heads that keeps us back from being ourselves, we are filled with our own garbage. And when this happens we have a long way to go. So we must first develop humility. We have to develop love, peace.

If we stop thinking so much about person, place and things, the Sage will give you a hug, or whatever will happen to you too. Depending on the person, depending on what's going on, depending on circumstances. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place

S: So, Robert, that transmission is radiating all the time. It's not that Ramana just all of a sudden turned on the juice, to that one person. (R: Yes, exactly.) And it's just that the person has to be receptive and open so that the transmission can be received.

R: Indeed, very true. Grace is always with you. There is never a time when grace is not. It's up to you to receive it in the right way, by preparing yourself. And the best way you can prepare yourself is to keep the mind still and quiet.

S: How can a seeker maximize his serious relationship with the Sage? What can he do to make the relationship deeper?

R: Simply by sitting with the Jnani all day long. When you're home, where you're working, think of the Sage. When you think of the sage's form, the sage's name, things will begin to happen to you. Find peace.

Try it. Then you will be with the Sage continuously. Whenever you think of a living Sage, the Sage becomes part of your heart, it's the complete heart and you feel the love of the Sage within you. So if you think of the Sage, the Sage will think of you. Whatever you think about, that you become ultimately. So you have to be very careful what you think about. Whatever you think about, you become. Think of the Sage, you become the Sage.

S: Robert, this week you said that the mind has to be destroyed. And in the past you've said there's no mind, the mind doesn't exist. So how can you destroy something that doesn't exist?

R: To the one who believes he has a mind, he has to destroy the mind. But the one who knows he never had a mind, there never was a mind, there is nothing to destroy. So it's a question of the person who is seeking, where they're at with their mind. There is no mind. No mind ever existed. But because people have a strong belief they have a mind, just like there is a body. As long as you think there is a strong mind and a strong body, you have to do things to make it become less and less. Destroy the mind and the body.

We have to sit around talking like this many times. Depending on who I'm talking to and depending on who's asking the question. Certain people will have to do everything they can, to obliterate the mind. Other people want to be still for a while and the mind will disappear by itself. Everybody is different. But everybody has a state of mind. Obliterate the mind completely and become liberated. This is everybody's gift. You don't have to stay where you are, you can become liberated. It's a gift to become liberated. But will you do it? I mean you have to want liberation more than anything else in this world. So think of the things you're attached to that come before liberation. That's what I'm talking about. You have to let go of everything. Let go of all your attachments, and liberation will come by itself.

S: Robert, I've been studying metaphysics most of my life. And I've never been able to get an edge on my suffering. And then after I've been listening to you like, there has been a progressive thing happening. At first I was able to identify with the problems of the world which was just a tremendous relief to me. And then about a month ago, all of a sudden I was able to not identify any more with the thoughts, the problems with this person. And I found a place where I could be more peaceful and watch this person's thoughts happening. And that's the most freedom I've ever had in my whole life and the most peace. And I'm very grateful to you.

R: That's wonderful, you're getting rid of the self. You're doing what you're supposed to do. You're making progress, that's wonderful. Keep it up.

S: I wonder if you could say something about creativity. You said something about the creative life. It is hard to reconcile dropping the mind and using the mind creatively?

R: Not really. Some of the most famous sculptures, famous artists, did their best work when they did not think. Take Thomas Edison, for example: He used to sit in his rocking chair every day and lose his mind completely. Not think at all. And all the ideas came to him, because it comes out of the Self. The Self of consciousness is always prevalent. But you give it back, because you're thinking too much. Once the mind stops thinking, consciousness, the Self, appears by itself as your creativity, and you become more creative. So do not believe your mind will not be creative. It's not true. You become more creative. Your mind keeps you limited. When your mind is gone, you become more expansive. In any event, what you came to this earth to do in a body, you're going to do, to fulfill. It's all preordained, all predestined. It has absolutely nothing to do with what you think about it or don't think about it. Your job is to make yourself more peaceful and still, and let nature take its course. Then you'll find that you're totally happy and peaceful, more than you've ever been before.

S: Are the mind and the ego two separate entities? Or, when you say mind do you mean ego? When you say ego, do you mean mind?

R: They're both simultaneous. They're both the same. (S: They are the same?) Yes. In order for us to talk about these things, we have to talk about body and mind, the self, the ego. There is only one. The one is you. The one is the Self.

S: Robert, you said you're not the body but yet every week I see you, and your body looks different to me. Some weeks you look very very young and some weeks you look very very old. Yet I've read in the books that Jnanis have spontaneous transformation, where they would get super rejuvenated. Like they were ready to die, and then all of a sudden they look thirty years younger and have many years to live.

R: That's what you see. (S: But when the person is enlightened, and one with this force this consciousness, would that have an effect on the appearance of the body?) Only on your appearance. What you see is what you see. The Jnani has no appearance whatsoever. The Jnani is completely empty. (S: You mean you are the invisible man?) If you see an invisible man, then I-am. What you see is what I-am. (S: Sometimes you appear to have no head.) Then I have no head. (S: It's like the headless horseman.) Whatever you see is what you get. You get what you see.

(end) [TOC]

CONSCIOUSNESS IS THE SILENCE

No Date

Robert: It's good to be here with you again. I welcome you with all my heart.

Everyone is looking for peace and happiness. Everyone wants to be happy and peaceful, without any restrictions. So here, with Advaita Vedanta, we hear about a teaching of one path, non-duality. And we become interested in this, thinking that if we become self-realized, well be very happy, very peaceful. This is a big mistake. For as long as you feel that you're going to be self-realized, you never will be self-realized. For you're already self-realized. You're already awake. You're already free and liberated.

And thinking that the body can become self-realized is a big mistake. The body can never be self-realized. Yet you believe you've got a body, and trying to make it self-realized. You can't do this. What you must do is to let go of the body completely, totally. Not looking for anything, not desiring anything, just being your Self, and then things begin to happen.

The question arises, if I become self-realized, will I still have a body? This is a question only a jnani would ask. A person doesn't understand and know, to the Jnani, there is no body. Yet it appears as a body, does things all the time. But that's what you see. I know I have no body at all. Yet I appear to have a body to you. The body does things, eats, sleeps. Yet the only difference between you and me is this. I realize Brahman is everything.

There is only Brahman. There is only the Self. There is only absolute reality appearing as the world, as people, places, and things.

Whereas most of you think that what you see is real. You take the body, the world, the Universe to be real. The body, the Universe, can never be real by itself. It is only consciousness that is real. What I'm saying is this. What you think is the body, is Brahman, the Self, the absolute reality.

Yet you do not see it that way. You see the body. And that's where the problems begin. For you react to a body, the Universe, the world, people, places, and things, and you try to solve your problems that accrue, with the idea of a body, world, and Universe. When in truth, you have absolutely nothing to do with this. You have nothing to do with your body or the Universe or the world. It's a paradox. You think you are alive. You think you go to work, you do things. In reality, nobody is doing anything. Nothing is really happening at all.

Yet it appears to be happening to you, and then your mind reacts to it. And then the mind creates conditions, situations, and you try to solve them. You spend your entire life trying to solve conditions, situations. Whereas if you only let go of everything, and take things as they come without fighting, without interfering, you will soon find that all is well, very well indeed. For there are no mistakes.

In other words anything that happens in your life is right, necessary and good. There are no mistakes. You are your Self, just the way you are. You are immortal, absolute reality, just the way you are right now. Only when you begin to think, you spoil it. For when you begin to think, your mind imagines all kinds of things. You start getting all kinds of feelings, emotions. You try to change things by psychological means. Yet your mind will never let you go. The more you worry, the more you fear. The more you think something is wrong, the more your mind will perpetuate these things and make them worse.

You must accept life as it comes. Never believe someone is trying to hurt you. Or you've made a mistake and something is wrong. Everything in your life is right, good. It is the way you see it, that the problems begin.

So the question arises, what is a Sage? What is the difference between myself and the Sage. There is no difference. Only you see the difference, but there is no difference. If you want to see a Sage look in the mirror, and see a Sage. You're that one. I'm not saying there's different.

Sages for everybody, everyone's a different Sage. There's only One Sage. Look in back of your face and you'll see the Sage, the One. Not the body with a mind, but reality.

There is only one reality, and you are that.

You've always been That. All is well, just the way it is There is absolutely nothing you have to change in your life, nothing. But do not think about this. If you think about it, you spoil it. You exist right now this moment. And in that moment, All is well, true? It is only when you start to think about past and the future that problems begin. But if you stay centered in the here and now, how can there be a problem? How can there be a mistake?

When you have found this way, the power begins, power begins to move, Universal power. When your mind moves, trouble begins. When the Universal power moves, happiness and joy ensue. Therefore you have the choice to think which one you'll identify with. Will you identify with absolute reality, or with mammon, the world, the trends of this world.

Who are you? Who do you think you are? Forget who you think you are, you are not that at all. Nothing that has ever happened to you has been wrong. No thing that has ever transpired in your life has been a mistake. Everything is in it's right place, right now. So why do you worry? Why do you fret? The past is gone if you do not think about it. Your karma has no existence if you do not think about it. It is your thinking that causes things to happen. And that's only an appearance.

I kid you not when I tell you that you are the Absolute reality, that you are consciousness, that you are Brahman, that you are God. But you don't believe me. You think you are a mortal person, having problems, going through experiences. You have to rise above this. You have to drop everything and rise above it. There is absolutely nothing in this Universe that wants to hurt you, or can hurt you. It is your false imagination that makes you hurtable. Therefore work on quieting the mind. Not in changing your life or changing your problems, but quieting the mind. When the mind becomes quiet, it changes by itself. But when you allow the mind to think, it creates new situations every day for you to solve, to be upset over. Know who you are. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. Stop believing life has dealt you a bad hand. There are no bad hands. Everything is good. Everything is wonderful, just the way it is.

You should rejoice, continuously rejoice.

For when you make yourself happy, life comes along and gives you more happiness, and makes things work out for you. But when you believe something is wrong someplace, when you're suffering, your mind will perpetuate the suffering and it gets worse. Therefore drop everything right now. Surrender it all, surrender everything. Become empty and free.

As you work on yourself, as you practice, you'll know that you become more peaceful everyday, happy everyday. Things that used to bother you before, no longer bother you. This is your Universe, of your own creation.

Everything comes out of your mind, everything. Just as when you're sleeping, you're dreaming, and dreams seem real to you, then you awaken. So it is with this world. You're dreaming the mortal dream. You think it's real. You get involved in it, and you're caught up in it, and it gets worse and worse. You just have to realize it's a dream and wake up. And what happens when you wake up? You do not find yourself in a place called heaven, in a strange land. You'll be as you are. When you awaken, you will function as you do now. Except you'll know you're playing a part. That's the only difference.

The only difference between you and an awakened person is that you figure the part you're playing is real. And to an awakened person it's a play, a show, a dream. Does an awakened person take a part in the dream? He plays the part that was given to him or her. But he is always happy, always peaceful. For it's all an act on the stage. He's playing a part. So why get angry, why get upset? As you get angry and upset, you know it's a part you are playing, it's a part that you choose. To be an angry person, an upset person, as long as you know the part that you're playing is not real, it's okay to be upset, it doesn't matter. For again you know it's only a part you're playing.

But when you think it's real, then you get pulled back into the mire, and you have to start all over again. In other words if you want to become free and liberated in this life, you don't have anything to do with the part, the play, the movie. It's all good indeed. But when you get caught up in it, then you have to play the part again and again and again. It is called karma and reincarnation.

As long as you feel the world is real, people are real, things are real, you have to keep playing your part over and over again. But when you get to the point where you give up, and just focus on reality. You focus on reality when you realize it's all a dream. Then you become free and liberated.

So freedom and liberation, it's not something foreign. It's not far away from you. It's right where you are, and where you see life. That's all awakening is. So you observe the life. How do you see your life right now? If what you can say about yourself, you feel bad, you feel limited, slighted, upset, then you have to turn around by realizing that you have chosen this world of play. You have chosen this world. It's your play, and accept it. But do not react to it. It's reaction that causes the problem.

You see there are all sorts of Sages in this world. I refer to the term Sage to talk about an enlightened person. So Sages live in caves. When they come out, Sages roam around the world. They don't stay in one place too long. Sages get married. Sages work in banks, work in construction. You see what you're doing, your life has nothing to do with Sagehood.

That's something that's most difficult to understand for most people. What you're doing has nothing to do with whether you're enlightened or not an enlightened person becomes a simple person, uncomplicated. They sail through life easily, joyfully. Some people believe if you become enlightened, you'll see visions, you'll not see your body anymore. On the contrary.

Again, let me remind you again. An enlightened Being simply sees the world as Brahman, as the Self. That is all. They see everything as God. Everything is God in this universe, everything.

Where the ajnani sees the world as the world and reacts to it. That's the only difference. By coming to satsang you should try to become free and liberated. Yet I told you before you are already free and liberated and don't know it. So to know it you have to quiet the mind. That's what you have to do. Stop reacting to person, place and thing. Be yourself. Very easy, no problem.

I recall when I was with Ramana Maharshi, I used to stand at the door of the meeting at the old hall, when people used to come in to hear him, to see him. I was interested in the people that came in to see him. And because I was a Westerner, the Westerners would stop and talk to me. They were very funny. They change expectations, and ask me, is Ramana going to speak today? What subject is he going to speak on?

Then one Westerner would ask me, does Ramana speak like J. Krishnamurti? I just smiled and said: 'go in and listen.' Then we'd go into the hall and sit down, and Ramana would be lying on his couch reading a newspaper, saying absolutely nothing. He would look at some of the people, then go back reading his newspaper. And these people were insulted. They would get up and leave. Some people would remark, "that is just a silly old man. He has nothing to say." And he had nothing to say. I'm sharing this with you because many of you think you have to find a Sage that give you profound lectures. or give you certain techniques.

Always remember a Sage is not a yogi. They do not teach meditation practices, or hatha yoga, raja yoga, ashtanga yoga. The Sage does absolutely nothing. Meaning there is no thing of the Sage left. The Sage is an empty shell. Yet the empty shell walks, talks, goes to the bathroom, eats, and most people don't like to see this.

They say something like this. How can this person be a Sage? He acts like we do. This is a paradox. How do you want the Sage to act? What do you expect of a Sage? What you expect is erroneous. Expect nothing and get everything. Expect something and get nothing. It's simplicity in itself. Just be yourself. Don't put on an act of some kind, or imagine you're holy or spiritual, be yourself. You are that right now.

What you've been looking for, that's what you are right now. You are totally liberated right now, totally free right this minute. Can you feel it? Feel your freedom. Feel all the pain leaving you. All your negative emotions are disappearing. Feel yourself melting in consciousness.

Feel your Essence becoming all-pervading. You have become boundless space. And all the planets, trees, mountains, are superimpositions on your Self.

Just as the sun hangs in space, the earth hangs in space, planets hang in space. You're that space you're hanging on. It's you. It's from you they come. In you they go. You're the creator of all persons, places and things. You are the one.

Rejoice. There are no others. All your fears are gone now. You are totally absolutely free right now. Right this moment.

Everything is all right, right now. Part of yourself is gone, the worries that you came in here with. The fears that you came in here with. The doubts, the illusions. They're all gone. For you realize now that you're not hurtable any longer. No one wants to hurt you at all.

The Universe is now your friend. You are that. Everything is your friend There is nothing against you any more. You feel wonderful. You feel wonderful all over. All is well.

(end) [TOC]

SILENT IN THE SILENCE

No Date

Robert: I love every one of you unequivocally, unconditionally, just the way you are. Ask yourself, why did you come here tonight? Why come to Satsang? Ask yourself this question. You come to hear Robert mumble? You come to hear Robert give a lecture? Or did you come to sit with Robert?

Of course the last is the right answer. You came to sit with me in the silence. In the silence is where all the power is. In the silence is where all the Answers are. Because when we talk, when you use words, words have their place, but what can the words really do? Think of the billions & billions of words that have been spoken since the beginning of time. Where does it end for us, for humanity, for the world?

Think of how many words you spoke since you got out of bed. Think of all the words you spoke. What have these words done for you? It is worthless. So sitting in the silence is magic. This is when things begin to happen, wonderful things. Peace comes to you. Happiness comes to you all by itself. Joy comes to you. When you sit in the silence you remember who you are. We come to see we are all one Self. What does this mean? It means we are not separate, we are one, One Self. Think of that. We are all the One Self.

The one Self expresses itself through choiceless, effortless, pure awareness. Choiceless, effortless, pure awareness. This is what you are, pure awareness. Think about this.

You are pure awareness, choiceless, effortless, pure awareness. What do we mean by pure awareness?

Pure awareness simply means that you are all-pervading consciousness. Your essence is in everything. You are aware that the whole universe is a direct product of your thinking, of your mind. It is only aware. You are aware of the trees, of the mountains, the sky, like boundless space, pure awareness. You are aware of reality, the Truth of yourself. Yourself is pure awareness and you are that. Ponder this.

The Self is Pure Awareness and you are That.

If you only knew what this meant to you. You are totally free, completely free, effortless, choiceless, freedom. Everything else is an illusion. Everything else is an illusion, the world, universe personal God. Everything else is an illusion.

So where do all these things that look so real come from? Where do all the people come from? Where do all the things come from, that you see all day long? Where does everything come from? From the 1-thought. The 1-thought produces the small self. That's what makes you think you are a body and a mind, that it's your condition, that you have problems. You have to work through things. The 1-thought does all these things for you. It ruins your life completely. It hides reality, and produces a world. Therefore, you come back to the self.

You have to somehow transcend the I-thought. And this is done by forgetting all the knowledge that you have up to now. All the knowledge that you know. Everything you've been taught since childbirth has to be given up. All your beliefs, all your dogmas, preconceived ideas, they all have to go. When they're gone, you rest in the Self, and you will be unconditioned, choiceless, awareness. You see the beautiful thing about all of this, you are already enlightened. You are already self-realized.

But you refuse to believe it. How do you refuse to believe it? By completely believing everything else. By feeling the world. By allowing all conditions to annoy you, to bother you, to react to them. This hides your reality as if you were hypnotized. And you believe there's a world with others. Believing there is a world that you have to overcome; conditions you have to transcend, and you have a battle on your hands.

The truth is you have nothing to transcend, nothing to overcome. Silence is your reality. Stop thinking. Be silent. Be quiet. Allow the mind to become quiescent. Never mind what's going on. What is going on is always going on, and will keep going on when you've gone. Do not concern yourself with this world, or get caught up in it, and it will be like the world will come and go. Sitting back from the world, you remember who you really are, what you really are.

You are absolutely nothing to do with this world. I know it sounds strange when I say this, but you have absolutely nothing to do with this world. Nothing. This world doesn't belong to you at all. For you are not here at all. There are no mistakes. Where are you? You are nowhere, yet you're everywhere. Why ponder these things? Why think about these things? Just be yourself. Refuse to acknowledge the world, and worldly things. Know yourself as pure awareness, effortless, choiceless pure awareness. Know yourself this way.

When you first awaken in the morning and get out of bed, say this to yourself: "I am choiceless, effortless, pure awareness." And keep still. You'll be surprised how good you feel. "I am effortless, choiceless, pure awareness." Yet you think you're somebody else. You think you are a male, or female, you have a name, you have a profession, a program and you refer yourself to these things. But I tell you, you are not these things at all. Drop these things. Get rid of your pride, your ego. So you believe you have to make things happen, you have to get ahead of people. What has to happen has already happened.

So you come to sit with me in the silence. Be still. Know that you are effortless, choiceless, pure awareness. Know this deep in your heart. As soon as thoughts come to you ignore them. Let the thoughts come, let the thoughts go. Pay absolutely no attention to the thoughts and they'll disappear of their own volition. But you try to change them, and the power of them will become so much stronger. Remember don't try to exchange good thoughts with bad thoughts, or bad thoughts with good thoughts.

Whenever thoughts come to you just ignore them. Sometime in the morning, just scream it out at the top of your voice: "I am effortless, choiceless, pure awareness." That'll send the message home, who you really are. And go through the day like this.

Be still. If you can only be still enough, you will feel this unalloyed happiness within you arising. And you will just become happy, for no reason whatsoever. But it only comes when you're still, when you're quiet, when you're peaceful.

Do not be two different people: one who comes to satsang and is quiet and one who argues in the world all day long with people, and finds everything wrong in the world, gets angry, gets mad, and upset.

Be one person. All-pervading consciousness. Be That.

Never allow yourself to believe that something's wrong in your life. Catch it before it starts. And say to yourself: "I am effortless, choiceless, pure awareness." Whatever comes up, say that. Know the truth about yourself. God has no problems. Neither do you. For you are That.

Have mercy on yourself, your upset. Forget about body, how can you be the You don't have to worry. Stop those thoughts that make you angry or make the past. If you are not the mind, not the past? Never mind the body, the individual, about the past. But you don't. For there was never a beginning, there was never an end. You were never born, you can never die. You do not prevail.

Don't try to analyze what I'm saying or figure it out. Just be it. When you say to yourself, I am effortless, choiceless, pure awareness, this transcends the past, transcends the future, it transcends everything and awakens you to the Self which you are now. Awaken to that Self right now: Awaken to it! Awaken to it, right now! To your true Self.

You come to sit with me to realize, that there is no teacher, there's no truth, there's no teaching. There is only the One, and you are That. I am not your teacher, there is no teacher. I Am. I Am the universal. I Am That I Am.

Be still silly mind, let the true sun shine forth.

Now let us close our eyes for a few moments. Say to yourself, "I am choiceless, pure awareness. I am effortless, pure awareness. I am choiceless, effortless, pure awareness." And keep still and watch. Observe. Watch your body disappear, the mind disappear.

(end) [TOC]

THE WORLD BEGINS WITH LOVE

No Date

Robert: Good afternoon. It is wonderful being with you once again. Good to see you all, love you, all is well.

How many of us are really happy today? (Show of hands). Really really happy? (Another show of hands). Really really really happy?

S: When? (laughter) (R: Now.) Now, oh yes.

Robert: Not because things are going your way. Not because you like what you see. You're just happy because you are. There is no reason for it. Just to serve consciousness, happiness. That's our real state of consciousness, who we really are.

We're really happy people. We don't know it. We think that things have to go a certain way for us to be happy. This is not true. Not true at all. You can be happy when you have good things, and be very depressed -when you don't have them any more. Happiness has nothing to do with person, place or thing. Real happiness has absolutely nothing to do with person, place or thing. Real happiness comes from realization.

Realization that you are not the body, you're not the mind, you're not your affairs, you're not the world. When you can drop all these things, you'll be very happy. It'll come by itself. Otherwise you'll have a false sense of happiness.

Most of us walk around with a false sense of happiness. If you're happy because it is a beautiful day, the sun is shining, the flowers are blooming, you go to the beach, the movie. We think we're happy. But if you search deep within yourself, you'll realize there's a big sadness at large of unhappiness inside. This is true of all human beings. As long as you believe that you are a human being, it is virtually impossible for you to be happy, real happy. That's what I'm referring to. The happiness I'm referring to is beyond humanity, beyond good and bad, beyond experiences. It is your real state. It's what you are. But again to experience it, you have to let go of everything else. You cannot be attached to anything.

Happiness and Bliss is synonymous. It has absolutely nothing to do with this world in which we live. In this world all kinds of things happen. And we believe we have to live a certain kind of life to be happy. We believe we have to have certain kinds of possessions to be happy. It's all false. It is the happiness that will bring the good to you. It's opposite. It is the reverse. In other words if you want to be happy, happiness is the same as abundance, health, joy, peace, harmony. These things come to you as a result of your happiness. It's the other way around. Most of us believe that if we have certain things we'll be happy. but I'm saying to you be happy first, and the other things will come to you, on its own volition. Ponder this.

Consequently we all want to be happy. How to become happy, what do we have to do? Sit by yourself, go deep within yourself, and realize the truth about yourself. Which is: You are not the subject or the object. You are not the seer or the thing seen. You are the witness to all these things. The witness, everything you see. The witness is the witness. You watch, you look, you observe. And yet, you're not the observer, you're not the watcher, you're not the looker.

You're like a clay pot. A clay pot has space inside of it and outside of it. The space inside is not any different than the space outside. When the clay pot breaks, the space merges with inside and the outside. It's only one space. So it is with us. Your body is like a clay pot, and it appears you have to go within to find the truth. The outward appears to be within you. The outward is also without you. There's boundless space.

When the body is transcended, it's like a broken clay pot. The Self within you becomes the self outside of you. Always emerges with the Self. As it's always been. The self merges with the Self. Some people call the inner Self the atman. And yet it is called Brahman. When there is no body in the way, the atman and the Brahman become one. They become Brahman, one-ness, absolute reality, pure awareness. They become free and liberated. We don't have to wait until the body dies for this to happen, it can happen to us now. You can become totally free and liberated now, if you will. All you have to do is let go. You let go of everything that's been keeping you in bondage, mentally. Listen to your heart. Observe yourself. Become cognizant of your feelings, your emotions. Is this really you? Are you really your emotions? Are you really your feelings that you 'observe'? Where do these feelings come from? Ask yourself: "Who am I? Where do my feelings come from? Where do my thoughts come from? Where does my life come from? Who is playing the game? Who is being alive? Who is growing up, becoming old and dying? Who is playing this game? Who is the I that is playing this game? Who is the I that is playing this game? Who am I?"

You must want to be free. It must become first with you before anything else. Everything that you've done all your life, is only a game, a game you're playing with your self. Only it seems to be real. The only reality is the Self and you are That. Why look for anything else? Everything else will take care of itself. You've got to abide in the Self, just in the Self. Everything else will take care of itself in a beautiful way. Know this, you are boundless, space, like the ocean, like the sky, all-pervasive. This is your real nature. But for some reason you believe you are a body, confined to a small space. This is not you. It's illusion. You are all-pervading absolute reality. This is your true nature. This is who you really are.

Just by thinking about these things all the time, something begins to happen to you, something wonderful. Do not think about the weather, or about the days work, or your problems. For all the thinkers, who thinks?

Find out who has the problems? Who has problems? Find out who you really are, who am I? It's up to you to awaken from this mortal dream. You can keep on going like you are right now, with the good things and the bad things. Yet you live in a Universe of dualities. Which means for every good there is a bad. For every bad there is a good. It's a false world in which you live. You need to awaken to this truth

Always realize that you're like the ocean. Any thoughts, ideas, body beliefs, bubbles the same are simply ripples on the ocean; Bubbles come and go. They appear, stay for a time and disappear. The Ocean always remains. This is like us. Our true Reality never changes, but the body appears and the body disappears. New bodies come, they appear, and disappear. Things come, things go. The Ocean will remain the same. Know the truth about yourself. Never forget it. Understand who you really are.

Be aware of yourself, always. The world has its own karma. The world goes through its own karma. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. You belong to God. Everything you see is God. This is why you should be non-judgmental. Leave everything alone. By practicing these things, you become radiantly happy.

Everyone wants something. If your mind stops thinking, what happens? Some of you believe you will not have anything, that you will have more problems. But it's in reverse. You solve problems, you want something and you can't get it. But when you do not need anything or want anything, true bliss comes into the picture. You experience bliss, joy and happiness when you don't want anything. From what we know people want something and when they get it, they become more miserable than ever before. Leave the world alone. Leave people alone. Leave everything alone.

There never was a time when you were not the Self, pure awareness, consciousness. This is your destiny, to awaken into consciousness. Yet you can do it now, or, you can do it in a thousand lives from now. It all depends on you. It's the way you are reacting as yourself to the world which determines the directions you are going in. There are no mistakes. Nothing is wrong. Everything is right just the way it is. Do not try to understand this or figure it out. Leave it alone. It will happen by itself, by keeping yourself quiet and still. You quiet the mind because of realization. Let it be calm. In all situations be calm. Let it be still and quiet.

The world doesn't need any help from you. Aren't you the world, aren't you the Creator? You created the world the way it is. It came out of you, of your mind. Or else where does it come from? The world that you are in, is a creation of your own mind. The mind becomes still, the world begins to disappear. And you're in divine harmony and joy. Therefore happiness comes to you when you stop thinking, when you stop judging, when you stop being afraid. When you begin to contemplate what is happiness.

All the answers are within you. Everything you're looking for is within you, everything. Nobody can help but your Self. Know who you are. You are the Power. All the power of the Universe is within you. You have all the Power you need. Allis well, exceedingly well. It has always been well, it will always be well. When you leave here today act like a God or a Goddess.

Do not act like a human being any longer. Stop feeling sorry for yourself, saying you're unhappy. Stand up tall. Know the truth about yourself. Become the witness of all phenomena that you see, and be free. Peace.

Any questions you'd like to ask?

S: You said that if you're healthy and an abundance comes and health comes. Many Masters were not very healthy They had many physical problems.

Robert: Who sees those problems? They don't see it. You do. They see Happiness and Joy. But you see the body wasting away. Find out who they really are. Find out who you really are. You'll see a completely different picture. It's when you see problems ask who sees all the dastardly things in this Universe. We see them. They don't really exist but we see them. So we have to lift ourselves up to the place where they don't exist. Where Harmony exists. Bliss, Joy exists. So we have to lift ourselves up. (S: But they still feel the discomfort.) Who says so? (S: I don't know.) It's all your pictures. It's all your world. They way you see it. All is well.

S: Robert, I don't know if other people have felt this or feel this. But for myself I feel a lot of times I feel trapped between two worlds so-to-speak. And I know that's all in my mind thinking. But it feels like I am completely caught between the spiritual part of me of life and a more materialistic or a physical sort of existence. And I am caught up in my thoughts and my feelings and I feel really trapped. And I feel both of them sort of warring two parts of me.

R: Yes, you have to resolve this when you get up in the morning, when you wake up in the morning, first thing. Look around you. Look at your environment. Look at yourself, and ask the question, 'Who am I? Keep asking yourself, "Who am I?" and everything else will fade away. You will grow Spiritually. There will be One, not two. But you'll have to take the bull by the horns, so-to-speak. (S: I really understand what you are saying intellectually but I guess I don't experience it.) When you first get up in the morning, deny the whole world. (S: That's very difficult to do when I'm going out into that world. I'm really in that world a lot.) The world keeps changing. It's never the same. (S: That's true.) It's not real. Anything that changes can't be real. (S: Why?) How can it be real if it disappears? Reality is permanent. (S: Reality means non-changing?) Yes, that's Reality. Since everything else changes, it can't be Reality. So when you get up in the morning understand this. First thing when you open your eyes, ask yourself. "Who am I?" Just put this question and see what will happen to you. You'll feel something different. But you'll have to do it every morning. Just try it and see what happens. You'll see Oneness. Keep asking yourself, "Who am I? Who am I?" when you first get up. After that you'll see One Power, One Presence. You are one. Everything will work out for you... Practice.

(end) [TOC]

THREE STAGES TO MIND CONTROL

No Date

Robert: It's good to be with you again on this lovely Thursday evening. I welcome you with all my heart.

I love everyone of you unconditionally, just the way you are. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place.

I receive many phone calls, as most of you know from some people all over the world. I always enjoy sharing the interesting ones with you. I received a call recently from Denver and the gentleman asked me, Robert, can you tell me the easiest way to become self-realized? What is the direct path, the really direct path, one that I don't have to do any work? I want to become self-realized. I'm practicing atma-vichara self-inquiry for sixteen years. Before that I practiced vipassana meditation. I've done yoga, and everything, but nothing ever happens. Is there a way where I can awaken to a simple practice?

I laughed and I said, it's real interesting that most westerners want to be enlightened in one week-end. It's taken you so many years to be where you are right now. Even though you've been practicing for many years, think of how many years you've been the way you are. It's a drop in the bucket.

There is a way for a person to awaken, and that way is to stop thinking. Stop thinking. He says that sounds good, but how do you do it?

There are three steps to mind control. When the mind becomes quiescent, quiet, still, realization comes all by itself. There is absolutely nothing you have to do to bring it about.

As an example, the sun shines all by itself. Let's call the sun the Self, consciousness, pure awareness. Yet every once in a while, clouds form beneath the sun. And the sun doesn't seem to shine any longer. Thousands of years ago, people built statues, idols, Gods, temples to the sun, so the sun would come out and shine once more. But now, it's sort of evolved. We no longer build statues to the sun or pray to the sun to shine. We realize that the clouds will dissipate soon and the sun will once again shine in all its glory and all its splendor. Your thoughts are the clouds.

Whatever you think, no matter what you think about, as long as you think, you're covering up the sun, which is the Self. It makes no difference what you're thinking, good thoughts, bad thoughts, or any kind of thoughts. All thoughts are clouds, all thoughts. And they cover up the sun. So it is your true nature, is the Self. You're really the Self, all-pervading, reality. It is your thoughts that cover up the Self. Whatever you allow what you think, you cover up the Self more and more and more.

You read various books, you take different courses, you go to different teachers. They're only coverings for the Self. You're only covering up the Self. The Self will shine all by itself when you stop thinking. Stop thinking, totally, unconditionally. Stop thinking.

I'm going to give you three steps for mind control:

One, is to stop talking. Stop talking.

Two: have no opinion for or against.

Three: neti-neti, not this, not this.

We'll start with, stop talking. Has all of your talking since you were first born, has it made any difference in this world? Has this world become a better world in which to live by your talking? Have you really accomplished anything by talking? Sometimes it appears you have accomplished something, but not really. By talking you accomplish very little. Asians, Hindus, American Indians talk very little. Most of them realize that talking is a waste of time. It is when they become westernized, they begin to talk like us. Talk, talk, talk, talk. They become part of a gigantic talking school. They go on forever talking, never stopping.

There's a story about the American Indians. They will listen to the white man talk, telling them all kinds of nonsense. Then they say ugh, ugh. That's their answer. In other words they're saying, you wasted all my time talking nonsense. I don't believe a word that you say. This is as much talking as we should do.

Many of you go to lunch with me, and there are those of you who hardly say anything. Some of you tell me all of your troubles. That's OK. I'm here to listen. But if you notice I never answer. I grunt. I just say, "oh", which means I'm listening to you, I can hear what you're saying, but it doesn't mean anything. So I grunt "oh".

Talking doesn't do anything for you. It's when you stop talking, that things begin to happen. For every time you talk you use a lot of energy. You have to think what you're going to say. It all happens instantaneously. For every word that you say, there's a thought that precedes it. In other words you have to think about the words that you are saying.

But most of you don't understand it because you talk so much. It's only words that come out and you say this is all spontaneous. But then you have to think about every word that you speak. Whenever you speak, you're cluttering your mind with stuff, till the mind becomes agitated. It never does you any good anyway.

Think of all the talking you've done since you were born. Think of all the talking politicians do, lawyers, doctors, and the world is worse because of it.

If no one ever said a word, the power that knows the way would take over and peace and joy would be on this earth.

For an example, take an orange tree. Does the tree ever talk about growing oranges? Or discuss it with the next tree? The orange tree doesn't say a word. Yet lovely oranges grow all over the tree by itself. Wheat grows in the wheat fields. Bananas grow on banana trees. The sun shines just right and makes everything sustained and maintained in a great way. No talking is done. Nothing is happening. But everything is happening. And so it is with us. When we learn to shut up by keeping quiet, not talking about thoughts in your mind, I'm talking about keeping quiet and keeping still in the mind also. Things will happen all by themselves.

Everything is preordained in any event. Everything is predestined in any event. So everything will unfold the way it's supposed to. It doesn't need any help from you. Every step of your life has been outlined. Every move you make has been determined before you were born. Therefore you don't have to argue about anything. There's no reason to debate about anything. Just keep still.

This is the meaning of 'Be still and know that I am God'. Not talking, I am God, just be still.

Ramana Maharshi never used to talk. Sages and Jnanis hardly ever talk at all. I used to sit in the old hall at Ramana Ashram, in the corner, and watch Ramana handling the people. They would all line up to talk to him, to see him. He would just stare at them and hear most of their troubles.

He wouldn't say anything. Sometimes he would utter a few words that were necessary. I recall one instance when a person came to Him from the Punjab. First day he told Ramana all of his troubles. It seems he was talking and talking and talking. Ramana looked at his attendant and said, "he comes in with all of his troubles, to whom shall I tell mine?" Meaning that it was the embodiment of consciousness, pure awareness. There is no one for I to go to. So whom shall I tell this to?

And so it is with us. We think we have problems. We think we have troubles, something wrong with our lives. But in truth and reality, those are the clouds I was talking about. All your so-called problems are only clouds. They're covering the Self. As long as you identify with the problems and the clouds, you become sicker and sicker and sicker, covering your Self more and more and more. And so it becomes hidden, so that you are forgetting to think about the Self.

Your mind is continuously on your problems and your affairs and on your nonsense. Stop talking. There's really nothing to, say. Everything happens in silence. Everything that is happening in the invisible world, everything. Do not believe that you are worth nada (nothing).

Think of all the beautiful words that have been written down in books for us, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Emerson, Thoreau, Walt Whitman, so on and so forth. How beautiful their words are but they made a difference in the world? They made a dent in the world? Look at the world. What have they done for this world? It would be better if we never heard of these people at all. For people take refuge in their words, and the world becomes worse and worse. So we have to come to the conclusions there wasn't any answer. Talking is not the answer. So to straighten people out, to get your way with people, is not the answer. To win arguments, to try to win a point of view is not the answer. Stop talking.

We come to step number two, mind control. Have no feelings for or against, for or against anything. Look at everything in the same way. Do not differentiate too much with things. This way you can reconcile yourself with the whole Universe, with the mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, the human kingdom. You're not to see differences. Although it's hard for most people. But yet if you want to awaken, you can't see differences with people or with things.

It's like going to a play. One person is the good guy and the next person is the bad guy. You take sides with the good guy. Then the play is over. There was never a good guy or a bad guy. It was just a play, actors playing a part. Therefore the difference was in your mind. It is your mind that creates differences.

As an example I always use the key-hole. You come to the door and look through the keyhole, and you see Mahatma Gandhi getting shot. That's all you can see. You become very angry. You say to yourself, I see the murderer. Lets get him, hang him and shoot him. He killed Mahatma Gandhi. Then you open the door and you see the whole picture. That's not what you saw through the keyhole. You look to the left and it shows previous lives. He is the same as Mahatma Gandhi in different roles. In previous lives Mahatma Gandhi was a murderer and the murderer was Mahatma Gandhi. The murderer shot Mahatma Gandhi and the people shot the murderer and they are both dead. You look and notice they are in the astral plane now. They are talking about it and they say, well it looks like we chalked some karma for ourselves. Only when we come back again to this earth plane, this time I'll be the murderer and you be Mahatma Gandhi. Exactly, let's do that. This is the way to transcend karma.

So you appear at this time and the same thing takes place that you watched through the key hole. Before, you saw only one scene. Now you see the whole picture. Then you look to the right and you see both people are again laughing and smiling with each other. And you begin to realize nobody was murdered. And there was no murderer. Nobody was killed Nobody dies. No one is born. No one prevails. You've gotten the whole picture. So you see certain things in your personal life. You become totally angry. Who offends you? You only see a small part of the picture You do not see the complete picture. You only see the part you're involved in. That's all you can see. If you could only see the whole picture you would see there is nobody right and nobody is wrong.

As long as you keep reacting to things, you'll have to do it again and again and again, and it will never stop. You'll start laughing at yourself and begin to understand it is all God's leela. It's all a play of consciousness. All of life is a play of consciousness. Nobody is right and nobody is wrong. And yet it is not easy to get out of this plane. You say to yourself, I don't wish to play any longer. I don't want to play this game any longer. I want to be free, liberated. And when you make up your mind to be free and liberated, you'll be led to the straight and narrow path where you have to go to meet the right people, the right teachers, right dharma, right action, and never be involved again. Have no opinions for or against.

Now we come to the third step, mind control, which is neti-neti, not this, not this.

If you wish to awaken you have to deny the whole world. The whole world has to be denied by you. In other words everything that you see has to be denied.

From the moment that you get out of bed, all the thoughts that come to you, what your eyes see, what your ears hear, what your mouth tastes, what your nose smells, all have to be denied. These things have nothing to do with me, and I have nothing to do with these things.

I am pure awareness. I am not the body or the mind. I am pure consciousness.

Keep on denying your thoughts. Deny your life. Deny what you see all around you. The day will come when you will become absolutely free. For there is no one attached to person, place or thing. You'll no longer react to life's vicissitudes. You have freed yourself totally and completely. This is what you must do.

- Stop talking
- Have no opinion for or against
- And deny everything that you see

What do you do with your life right now? Where are you going with it? Are you happy, totally happy? If you only realized who you were, it would be absolutely impossible to think you were not happy. Happiness comes by itself. Happiness and the Self are the same thing, no difference.

As you begin to see everybody as your Self, a whole new world opens up for you. The rest is up to you. You can begin practicing these things we discussed, or you can go on with the way you've been going on with your life up to this point. What are you going to do? It's up to you. Be still -and know that I, am God.

S: Questioner asks question about Arjuna and Krishna and the battle.

R: Since he's not the doer, then nobody is going to do anything. They appear to be going into a battle because it was their destiny. Arjuna didn't want to fight at all. He wanted to break his sword. Krishna told him to go into battle and fight. This was his duty. This was his karma, to go and fight. But not to be concerned with the fruits of the action, whether he is killed or not. Nobody dies and nobody is born. That's what he explained to him. He said that even though you get killed, you will be a hero. If you don't get killed, you'll also be a hero, because you fought in the battle. So don't worry that he got killed or not. It doesn't matter, because in truth, nobody dies. So go out and fight. That was his message to Arjuna.

S: In other words everything is just an appearance in consciousness?

R: Exactly. But Arjuna, remember was not enlightened. Krishna realized Arjuna didn't understand these things, and had to explain these things to him. So he told him to go and fight like he was supposed to because he was of the warrior class. He was a warrior. It was his duty to fight. But not to be considered as the outcome.

S: He had to follow his dharma or he wouldn't have been a warrior. (R: Yes, exactly.)

S: (Asking about the dream state)

R: Both states are real, waking and sleeping. If you could only feel and realize that we are in the mortal dream right now. This is the mortal dream and all the nonsense going on will keep us dreaming longer and longer. The foolishness that's going on, the fighting, the anger, and the nonsense going on with every day, keeps us bound to this mortal dream. In other words, you are dreaming. We'll keep on dreaming until we let go. Stop fighting. Become non-attached, then well awaken and be free.

S: When doing self-inquiry, I'm feeling good and I'm feeling bad.

R: We should always be aware of what's going on in our lives. Be totally aware of what we are doing, and work out our karma by not reacting to things. Don't let things bother us or annoy us. Realize what's happening all of the time and become free, becoming mindful. Watching ourselves continuously. See where we react to things. Watch when we respond to a situation that comes to us. This frees us. But if we just go through life allowing life to make us feel a certain way, we'll have to have it over and over again. It never ends. We take on body after body after body until we give up and surrender to the Self. So the time will come when everybody will have to surrender to the Self. It's all part of the Divine Plan. The only freedom we have is to turn within, not to react to things. That's the freedom we have. Everything else is preordained.

S: I do the same things over and over again until I must do something about it.

Answer: Yes, it depends on what you do about it. What are you going to do about it? If you come from a point of wisdom find out who is experiencing these things. Who is going through all this? And. realize the 1-thought is. going through everything, not you. You have absolutely nothing at all to do with this. Follow the I- thought to it's source. And then you become free. But if you don't do this, you'll have to repeat the same thing again and again, like you're saying. The same thing will happen to you again and again until you stop reacting to it, and you begin to see it as it really is, the part of your thoughts and treat it like a thought. When the thought is gone, right action will take place in your life. The whole idea is to remove the thoughts. The thoughts cause the confusion and your action. Once the thoughts are removed there's nobody to act. You shine as the Self, as consciousness.

S: (Speaks about real nature being perfect.)

R: Yes, of course. This is all about real nature. Everybody's nature is That. Everybody's nature is perfection. When I gave you the example before about the sun, that's it. Everyone is the sun. Everyone shines perfectly. The dark clouds of illusion cover the sun, and the dark clouds of illusion make us feel something is wrong some place and we try to correct it. That's when trouble begins. We begin correcting things.

(silence)

Om, shanti, shanti, peace, peace, peace...

(end) [TOC]

Satsang with ROBERT ADAMS

October 8, 1992

“ENTER THE SILENCE”

Transcript # 114

Introduction:

How and when do we Enter The Silence? The Jnani is always in the Silence even when He is outwardly active. His very nature is Silence.

The same is true for the ajnani, only the ajnani is not aware of it, because he or she is immersed in the world of illusion.

Robert tells us to leave everything alone. Leave the world alone.

How many times do we say we don't want to come back here. We don't want to be reborn. How can we stop that?

Robert says by letting go of our attachments to person, place and thing. Attachments are the strong fetters that imprison us in this dream.

How do we enter the Silence? By dropping everything, mentally, that keeps us attached to the world.

We cannot serve God and mammon at the same time. When day and night merge, when there is no body mind or world, we enter the Silence. When Light becomes Sound that blends into Oneness we are in the Silence.

When do we enter the Silence? When we are pulled into the heart. The pull is always there but it takes a longing on our part to be aware of it. That longing will come from a deep Spiritual need.

When we enter the Silence we are close to Reality. With our Spiritual practices the world begins to fade and the periods of silence bring us closer to Reality, closer to the Jnani, closer to our Self.

These words of Robert's are words-to be remembered.

Realization will come to you when you empty yourself of all burdens that you have carried with you for so long.

Realization will come by itself", then it is time to " ENTER THE SILENCE ".

Robert : Om Shanti Shanti Shanti Om

Peace Peace. Good evening.

It is an honor to be with you once again, to see you, talk to you, say my piece and go home. Beautiful evening. Nice breeze blowing.

ALL IS WELL. Everything is in its right place. There are no mistakes. And you are all Divine spiritual beings, whether you like it or not (laughter).

It has come to my attention that many of you are trying to stop your thoughts, control your thoughts. You cannot really do this. Trying to stop your thoughts, as Ramana Maharshi says, is like a thief becoming a policeman to catch the thief. In other words, the thief that becomes the policeman will not catch the thief, because he is the thief himself.. And so it is with our minds.

When we use the mind to stop the thoughts, the mind will not stop the thoughts at all, because the mind wants to go on living. Stopping the thoughts is annihilating the mind, and the mind does not wish to be annihilated. The mind wants to live on to fill you full of nonsense, superstitions. Therefore we do not try to stop, the thoughts.

What do we really do? We do absolutely nothing. There is really nothing you have to do to make the thoughts cease. Always remember when you do things according to the Sadhanas you've learned, the spiritual exercise you've practice, the meditations, the yoga. This will make you free for a couple of moments, and then the thoughts will come back to you with full force, knocking you over. You cannot stop the mind or control the mind with spiritual practice.

Again you cause the thoughts to cease by doing absolutely nothing. By being your SELF. And all the scriptures we read, unless the mind stops spinning there will be no realization, no liberation. Only when the mind stops, the thoughts cease to be, is there liberation.

Yet we use the words "to stop the mind, to stop, the thoughts". This is sort of a misnomer. For again you have to use the mind to stop the thoughts, and. the mind does not want to do this. It does not wish to cease thinking. Yet by ceasing to think, you do acquire unalloyed happiness, infinite peace, Divine Bliss. When the thoughts do stop, these verities come forward, and you become free.

You do not have to watch the thoughts, analyze the thoughts, be the witness to the thoughts, or observe the thoughts in any way whatsoever. All of these symptoms simply make the mind stronger really.

Most of you have tried to stop your thoughts with various practices like these for many years. And if you look back in retrospect you will see, it made the mind stronger. It causes the mind to have more power. Thoughts hit you from all directions. This means we do not wish to use any method whatsoever to stop thoughts. Yet the thoughts have to be stopped. They have to cease. By doing absolutely nothing, the mind will begin to slow down.

When you think you have to watch your thoughts, observe your thoughts, you're saying to yourself "I'm going to observe my thoughts, I'm going to watch my thoughts", you're using mind' energy to do this, aren't you? You're using energy to the thoughts and you'll never do it this way. But again if you do absolutely nothing, you just sit there doing nothing, the thoughts will get weak.

Now really, no Sage on this earth or anywhere else really stops the thoughts. As long as you see a body, and you call that body the Sage, there will always be some sort of thinking in that body, some sort of thought. For instance I can be sitting here and I'll say to myself "when I go home I'm going to eat a dish of ice-cream". This is a thought. But what happens when I say it and what happens when you say it? When I say it, when I think it, it is similar to a burned rope. A burned rope may appear to be strong, but when you pick it up, it turns to ashes. It's burned. There's nothing there. When you say it, it is like a real rope, not burned. You give it energy, you give it power.

Again when the Sage thinks of something, it is like a fan that has been pulled out of the socket. It's still turning, but there's no power. The power is dead. The power has been cut off. In other words, the source of a Saint is dead. The source of the Sage has no power, no power whatsoever. This is why it is said, a Sage does not think. A Sage has no thoughts.

What it really means is that the Sage's thoughts are dead. When the thoughts are dead, you live in ABSOLUTE REALITY. You live in PURE AWARENESS. When the thoughts are dead you live in SAT-CHIT-ANANDA, in NIRVANA.

So what do you have to do to also cease thinking, so the thoughts can become dead? You simply do not attach yourself to the thoughts. By not attaching yourself to the thoughts, by not reacting to the thoughts, by not responding to the thoughts, they lose their power and begin to fade away. Yet do not give them any energy. Do not give them any power. Do not say to yourself, I have to stop my thoughts. Do nothing like this. Just slow down, slow down. Let the thoughts do what they may. Allow the thoughts to go their own way. Do nothing with your thoughts. Do not think about them. Do not fight them. And above all, do not try to stop them.

You may think this is so difficult, but it's not. It's like when you first wake up, before the thoughts come. You're still drowsy from sleep. And when the first thoughts come to you, you hardly pay any attention to them. That's the attitude to have.

Do not pay any attention to your thoughts whatsoever. But when you say "I am not paying attention to my thoughts", you spoil it. You're not to utter this. You're not to say this. You're just to become this. As you begin to let your thoughts alone, not to pay any attention to them, not to be attached to them, you'll notice something very interesting happening to you. You begin to notice that you're becoming very peaceful, very calm. You become happy for no reason whatsoever. All of these dastardly things that are still going on in this world, man's inhumanity to man, you have your own so called problems. Yet you become happy, you become peaceful, you become blissful. This comes all by itself, because your thoughts have slowed down.

And you have absolutely nothing to do with it. You have not slowed your thoughts down. This is an important point to remember. You have not slowed your thoughts down, not you whatsoever. For you are the mind, and you've not used your mind to slow down your thoughts. You have done absolutely nothing, except to ignore your thoughts. Ignore the thoughts completely, totally, absolutely. Again, do not fight your thoughts. Ignoring your thoughts is not fighting your thoughts. Do not try to change your thoughts. Above all do not try to stop your thoughts.

Just enough to detach them, and ignore them. The example here is, what happens to your friends whom you ignore. If you have a friend and the friend is talking to you, telling you things, and you ignore your friend, what happens? The friend • will walk away. The friend will go away and that will be the end of the friend. And he or she will no longer be your friend. For you have ignored them totally, completely. You've not scolded them. You have not lectured your friend. You have not been evil to your friend. You have just ignored your friend. Your friend will back away and go away, because your friend gets no response from you whatsoever. This is how you want to treat your thoughts, same way.

It makes no difference if the thoughts are good or bad, they're both impostors. In reality there are no good thoughts, there are no bad thoughts. We're not trying to replace bad thoughts for good thoughts. We're trying to LEAVE THE THOUGHTS ALONE. Not to do a thing about them. I want to make this perfectly clear. This is the highest way to handle your thoughts.

There are so many practices. We have Vipassana meditation, we have pranayama. You have so many different methods to stop your thoughts. All of these methods are good to an extent. They make you sort of one pointed, but they will not stop your thoughts. This is why people who have been practicing pranayama, breathing exercises, vipassana meditation, even Zen meditation, and other forms of yoga meditation, having practiced for years and years and years and years. Perhaps they have achieved a semblance of peace, but they have not become liberated. Due to the fact that they are using methods. Whether it is a koan, or it's watching your breath or your feelings, or whether it's changing your thoughts to something positive.

Whatever you've been doing, you're using your mind to do it. And your mind will always fool you. It will make you believe you're getting somewhere. You're becoming something great. But it's really the ego. It is the ego that is controlling the mind, and you are the ego. The ego trying to control the mind!

So again, what do you do to stop the thoughts? Absolutely nothing. Now why is the word nothing so important? You do absolutely nothing because in truth, everything is nothing. This is the reason you do nothing to stop your thoughts.

In reality there are no thoughts. There is no one trying to stop them. There is no liberation, there is no bondage. There is nothing. You're using the same nothing to stop your thoughts. Do nothing. Because you are nothing. Nothing plus nothing makes nothing. Can you see why I tell you to do nothing now? Because you're using your real nature when you do nothing.

YOU are your SELF YOU are the ABSOLUTE REALITY when you are NOTHING.

Consequently when you are doing something to stop your thoughts, you're fooling yourself. Nothing will ever happen. Like I say, you will acquire a little peace, that's it. But by slowing yourself down, saying nothing, hearing nothing, doing nothing, being nothing, your thoughts will stop completely, totally absolutely. And as I mentioned before, you will feel beautiful happiness, peace of mind, bliss, you'll be free.

Practice this right now. Allow the thoughts to come whatever they are. Do absolutely nothing. It makes no difference what the thoughts are. Let them come, no matter how much they seem to frighten you, no matter how powerful they appear to be. Let them come.

Where do the thoughts come from to begin with? They come from nowhere. They do not come from CONSCIOUSNESS. They do not come from TRUE AWARENESS. They do not come from the SELF. Where do the thoughts come from? From nowhere.

They're an optical illusion. They do not exist. They are like the appearance of the sky on top of the mountain. The sky appears to be resting on top of the mountain. But it's an optical illusion. Thoughts do not exist whatsoever. Therefore you ask yourself, who is thinking? And you will find out, the ego is thinking.

So here is another point. When the thoughts slow down, so does the ego. The thoughts and the ego are synonymous. As the thoughts slow down, the ego slows down, and begins to also disappear with the thought. When there are no thoughts, there is no ego. When there is no ego, there is nobody left to think.

And then the question you will ask is, how do I function without thinking? As I mentioned in the beginning, the Sage's thought is like a burned rope. They appear to be real, but they are not. In other words, your thoughts are not real. They are false. How do you function without thoughts? Very well, thank you.

Many of you still believe you have to have thoughts to function. You think you'll become a vegetable. But you will be spontaneous without thoughts. You'll be motivated by the SELF. You will know what to do, where to go, whom to speak to, whom not to speak to, much better than you do now. Much much better.

Things will happen to you spontaneously. Everything we always talk about is very paradoxical. And the paradox is, even though you have no thoughts, you will still think about certain things. It has to be done. But there is absolutely no thinker alive. There is no thinker. There is no one left to think. You just as well appear to be thinking about certain things, so you can function.

It's similar to what we were discussing on Sunday. People always ask me: "what do you see? Do you see the world?" Of course I see the world. If I didn't see the world, I wouldn't be able to function. But I see the world as the SELF. In other words I see the world as images on reality.

Like in the movies, the images are on the Screen. I am able to see the Screen and the images at the same time. I see the reality and I see the images. So it is with the thoughts. Same thing with the thoughts. You appear to be thinking, but you're not thinking. This is a very important point to remember. You will think whatever you have to think about, but the thoughts will be dead, like a burned rope. Like the fan with the plug pulled out, but the blades are still spinning, until they stop.

Why do you want to do all this? For life passes. Pretty soon you become old. And you appear to die. Do you want to believe this lie that you die, that you get old, that there are problems in this world. This is all a lie. It's the mortal dream. Do not identify with the mortal dream.

Know who you are once and for all. YOU are that which was never born, which will not prevail, and can never die. YOU are That which is beyond all concepts, all reasoning, all thoughts. YOU are That which has always existed as PURE AWARENESS. YOU are

That which is not female or male, which is neither good nor bad, which is neither right or wrong, which just IS, BEAUTY, JOY, LOVE, HARMONY, PEACE, BLISS.

THIS IS YOUR REAL NATURE.
THIS IS WHO YOU ARE.

Why not accept this and become free right now?

It all begins by removing your thoughts. You now have an idea how to remove your thoughts. Get rid of your thinking process. You have to do it. You now know you have absolutely nothing to fight in this world, nothing to fear.

It makes no difference what's happening to the economy. It makes no difference if there are earthquakes, cataclysms, hurricanes. What have YOU to do with these things? What have these things to do with YOU? YOU are the SOURCE of all creation.

In this gap that I give you between sentences, at that time you are in Samadhi. Every time I stop talking, you are in Samadhi. Feel your Divinity. Feel your Bliss. Feel your Love. Feel the Truth, in Reality. Clean yourself out. Feel all the karmas, the samskaras, all the things you've carried around with you for so many centuries flowing away from you, completely and totally.

YOU ARE ABSOLUTELY FREE RIGHT NOW

'ABSOLUTELY FREE

ABSOLUTELY FREE

(Transcribed by Fred and Mary ) For enquiries: Robert Adams, 7210 Jordan Avenue, D30 Canoga park, Los Angeles, California, 91304, U.S.A.

© 1993 Robert Adams

GLOSSARY

Advaita Vedanta: A subdivision of Vedanta. The non-duality approach.

Ahimsa: [Nonharming]. Abstention from harmful actions, thoughts, and words. An important moral discipline [yama] in Yoga, Buddhism, and Jainism.

Ajnani: One who has not realized the Self.

Ananda: [Bliss]. In Vedanta, the mind-transcending blissfulness of the Ultimately Reality or Self. This is not considered to be a quality but the very essence of Reality.

Arunachala: The holy mountain in India where Shri Ramana spent all his adult life.

Atman: [Self]. The transcendental Self according to the non-dualist [Vedanta] schools of thought, which is identical to Brahman.

Avadhuta: [Cast off]. A radical type of renouncer who abandons all conventions; a crazy adept.

Avatara: [Descent]. An incarnation of the Divine, such as Krishna and Rama.

Avidya: [Ignorance]. Spiritual nescience, which is the root of all human suffering and the cause of one's bondage to egoic states of consciousness.

Bhagavad-Gita: [Lord's Song]. The earliest and most popular scripture of Yoga, containing the teachings of Lord Krishna to Arjuna.

Bhakta: [Devotee]. A follower of Bhakti-Yoga.

Bhakti: [Love, devotion]. The spiritual sentiment of loving participation in the Divine.

Bodhisattva: [Enlightenment being]. In Mahyana Buddhism, the spiritual practitioner who has vowed to commit himself or herself to the liberation of all beings, postponing his or her own ultimate realisation.

Brahma: The Creator-God of the famous medieval Hindu triad of gods. The other two are Vishnu [as Preserver] and Shiva [as Destroyer]. Brahma must be carefully distinguished from the Brahman, which is the eternal foundation of existence.

Brahmacarya: [Brahmic Conduct]. The practice of chastity in thought, word, and deed, which is regarded as one of the fundamental disciplines [yama] of Yoga.

Brahman: The impersonal absolute according to Vedanta; the transcendental Ground of the world.

Buddha: [Awakened]. Title of Gautama, founder of Buddhism.

Chit: [Consciousness]. Pure Awareness, or the Transcendental Consciousness beyond all thought; the eternal Witness. See also atman, purusha.

Dharma: The cosmic law or order. Teaching-doctrine.

Dhyana: Meditation.

Diksha: Initiation by the guru.

Gopi: Female shepherd. In Vaishnavism, these terms refer to the devotees of Lord Krishna.

Guna: [Quality]. One of three primary constituents of Nature [prakrity]: Sattva [principle of lucidity], Rajas [principle of activity, and Tamas [principle of inertia]. The interaction between these three types creates the entire manifest and unmanifest cosmos, including all psychomental phenomena.

Guru: [Heavy]. Spiritual Teacher.

Hinayana: [Small Vehicle]. The minority school of Buddhism, which has arhatship or arhantship as its leading ideal.

Ishvara: [Ruler]. Personal God. The Lord Of Karma.

Janaka: An Indian king: An account of his Self-realisation can be found in The Ash-tavakra Gita.

Japa: [Recitation]. Meditative recitation of mantras.

Jiva: [Living Being]. The psyche, or finite conscious human personality, which experiences itself as different from others and does not know the transcendental Self.

Jivan-Mukti: [Living Liberation]. The Self-realized adept who is fully liberated while still embodied.

Jnana: Knowledge of the Self.

Jnani: One who has realized the Self.

Kali-Yuga: [Dark Age]. The modern age of spiritual decline, which requires a new approach to Self-realisation. It is thought to have started in 3,012 B.C.

Karma: [Action]. Activity in general of the unenlightened individual, which activates the law of cause and effect.

Krishna: An incarnation [avatara] of Vishnu.

Kundalini: [Serpent Power]. The power that lies dormant in the lowest psychic centre of the human body. The ascent of the kundalini to the highest psychic centre, at the crown of the head, brings about a temporary state of ecstatic identification with the Self. [In Nirvikalpa Samadhi].

Leela: The play of God.

Linga: [Mark]. The phallus as the symbol of creativity, which is specifically associated with God Shiva.

Mahatma: Great soul, great man or saint.

Mahayana: [Great Vehicle]. The majority branch of Buddhism, which has the bodhisattva as its great ideal.

Mantra: Sound that empowers the mind for concentration and the transcendence of the ordinary states of consciousness. Usually the sacred words are given to a disciple by the guru.

Maya: Illusion.

Moksha: [Release]. The highest of possible human pursuits: Liberation. Synonymous with Self-realisation.

Mouna: Silence.

Muktas: Liberated ones.

Nadi: [Conduit]. Channels in the body where the prana or energy travels through.

Nirvana: [Extinction]. The transcendence of the ego, a condition that is untouched by space and time.

Nirvikalpa-Samadhi: [Transconceptual Ecstasy]. Samadhi in which no differences are perceived. It is characterised by an absence of body-consciousness. Although he has a temporary awareness of the Self in this state, one is not able to perceive sensory information or function in the world. When body consciousness returns, the ego reappears, so the ego has not been finally eliminated.

Om: The key mantra of Hinduism, symbolising the Absolute.

Para-Brahman: The Supreme Brahman.

Prana: [Life]. The life-force sustaining the body which has five principals forms.

Pranayama: [Breath Control]. The careful regulation of the breath. This is the most important practice of Hatha-Yoga.

Puja: [Worship]. Ritual veneration of one's teacher as an embodiment of the Divine.

Rama: The main hero of the Ramayana, deified as an incarnation of God Vishnu.

Rishi: A type of Vedic seer, who sees the hymns of Veda.

Sadhana: [Realising]. The spiritual practice toward Self-realisation.

Sadhaka: A spiritual seeker.

Sadhu: A noble person or a spiritual seeker. However, Shri Ramana frequently used this term as a title for someone who has realized the Self.

Sahaja-Samadhi: [Natural Ecstasy]. The effortless ecstasy. This is the state of the Jnani who has finally and irrevocably eliminated his ego. A Jnani in this state is able to function naturally in the world, just as any ordinary person does. Knowing that he is the Self, the Jnani sees no difference between himself and others or the world. For a Jnani, everything is a manifestation of the indivisible Self.

Samsara: [Confluence]. The finite world of change and illusion.

Samskara: [Activator]. Innate tendencies.

Sat-Chit-Ananda: Being-Consciousness-Bliss.

Satsang: [Relationship to the True]. The spiritual practice of being in the presence of someone who has realized the Self. Association with 'being'.

Savikalpa-Samadhi: [Ecstasy with form-ideation]. In this state of Self-Awareness is maintained by constant effort. The continuity of the Samadhi is wholly dependent on the effort put in to maintain it. When Self attention wavers, Self-Awareness is obscured by thoughts and imagery.

Shakti: [Power]. The feminine power aspect of the Divine, which is fundamental to the metaphysics and spirituality of Trantrism.

Shanti: [Peace]. Ultimate peace. Quality which coincides with Self-realisation.

Siddha: [Accomplished, perfect]. A Self-realized adept. One who has reached perfection.

Siddhi: [Accomplishment]. Paranormal power, that comes as a result of spiritual practice.

Swarupa: Real form or Real Nature.

Tamil: A South Indian language: Shri Ramana's mother tongue.

Tapas: [Glow, heat]. Ascetism, religious austerity, penance, heat.

Tiruvannamalai: A town about a mile from Shri Ramana's Ashram.

Turiya: The Fourth State of Consciousness.

Vajrayana: [Adamantine Vehicle]. The tantric branch of Buddhism, especially of Tibet, which evolved out of the Mahayana.

Vasana: [Trait]. The concatenation of subliminal activators [samskaras], deposited in the depth of consciousness. Mental tendencies.

Vedanta: [Veda's End]. The dominant Hindu tradition, which teaches that Reality is singular and One.

Vedas: Four collections of scriptures dating from 2,000 B.C. to 500 B.C. which are the ultimate source of authority for most Hindus.

Vichara: Self-Enquiry.

Vishnu: One of the three principal deities of Hinduism. Vishnu periodically reincarnates in a human body.

Yoga: [Union]. Spiritual practice in general.

Yoga-Vasishtha: A massive advaitic text attributed to Valmiki in which the Sage Vasishtha answers questions put by Rama, an incarnation of Vishnu. Composed sometime in the tenth century A.D.

Yuga: [Age]. According to Hindu mythology, there are four yugas, each of several thousand years' duration. The present age is Kali-yuga.

[TOC]

Photos of Robert Adams

This photo originally distributed to students at Los Angeles
satsang, circa 1991

Robert Adams, Los Angeles,
circa 1992

Robert Adams, Los Angeles,
circa 1992

Los Angeles, circa 1991

With students at L.A. satsang, circa 1993

Dancing with student at potluck, Los Angeles,
circa 1993

Edward Muzika in darshan with Robert Adams, Los Angeles, circa 1993

Robert Adams at satsang in Sedona, Arizona
circa 1996

Shortly before Robert's passing in Sedona, 1997

Drawing of Robert Adams by devotee in Sedona, Arizona, 1997

From article on Robert Adams in "The Mountain Path," June, 1993, pages 21-27
http://www.sriramanamaharshi.org/mpath/1993/may\_june/mp.swf