Now isn't this just like us? We're born into a world that tells us we have to make something out of ourselves, so we make complete idiots out of ourselves. We have to have gainful employment, we have to do this and we have to do that. So we do and we're happy as long as things are going our way. We're contented as long as things are going the way we think they should go. We've got perfect health and we've got perfect finances, and we've got perfect peace of mind and we have a perfect family and we have a perfect this and a perfect that. We feel good. But then things begin to change like they do.

Everything must change. The only thing permanent in life is change. Everything changes. We become upset, like the little bird we curse under our breath, we become angry, we become mean because things are not going our way. Then something changes again and things go our way again, so we become happy once again. We sing, we dance, we get drunk, we go crazy. We do all kind of things, we party, then something happens, doctor tells us we've got cancer, we become bankrupt, there's a recession, we become terminated from our employment and we become miserable once again.

This story is repeated again and again and again. The time finally comes, for some of us, I say, some of us, because most people keep doing these things until they die. They never stop. They keep looking for good things to take the place of bad things until they die, as if that's the answer.

But there are some of us, you can call this God's grace if you like. They've been touched by someone or by something within themselves and they feel that there is another universe. There is something else. There is something else that does not have pain or human happiness, no mental anguish, no good thoughts. There is something beyond all this and they make up their mind to vehemently find the something no matter what it takes.

This means they have to start giving up or emptying themselves of the old. For they have already been filled with illusion, wrong thinking, nonsense, ignorance, they can't hold any more. In other words, they cannot add to what's already full.

If you have a flask of water and you want to fill it with wine you have to empty the water first. And so it is with us. We're filled with all the foolishness, with all the preconceived ideas, with all the nonsense, with all the concepts. Unfortunately most people do not realize this. They think they are quite normal, (but they don't know that I'm the only one that's normal and they're all crazy I'm the only sane one. Don't believe that. The truth is I'm the crazy one and you're all considered sane, due to the fact I do not accept all this stuff and you do. The majority rules, as the majority of the people believe the same thing, then I'm the crazy one and they'll lock me up in the crazy house.)

Anyway, you can't be full of your nonsensical thinking and ideas and expect to become self-realized, expect to awaken, expect to become free. There is work you have to do. The work is to empty yourself out, totally and completely. When you empty yourself out, you will be free. There is nothing for you to fill up because reality is already there.

It's just like when you have a room filled with furniture, what has happened to the space in which you put the furniture? Has the space diminished? You have the same space in the room it hasn't gone any place, except the furniture is also in the room with the space. When you remove the furniture the same space will be there that always was there. The original space was there when you put the furniture in the room now you take the furniture out, the space is still there.

So it is with us. Our true nature is sat-chit-ananda, perfect knowledge, perfect existence and perfect bliss. We are pure awareness! This is like the space, except we have cluttered up our minds with thoughts, feelings, ideas that are erroneous and have to go. And so we begin to work on a plan, those of us who feel this, to totally empty ourselves and if we're sincere we find the right teacher, the right book, the right something that tells us what to do and we listen and we put this first in our lives, for we never know when the life is going to be over. We make this first.

What else can be more important than to find yourself then to become totally free and liberated? Is there anything else in this world that is more important than this? We finally process something we can work with and one of the best ways we can work with something in this life is to practice self-inquiry. It's a way of getting rid of all the stuff that we're filled with.

We therefore begin by examining our thoughts. No matter what type of thoughts we have, good thoughts or bad thoughts, we inquire, "To whom do these come?" In other words we are saying, "Where do these thoughts come from? I didn't ask to think about these thoughts, yet they arise by themselves. Where did they come from? To whom do they come?" The answer always comes. "Well these thoughts come to me. I feel them. I'm experiencing these thoughts. They make me feel bad, they make me feel confused, they make me feel this way, and they make me feel that way. All these thoughts come to me."

We continue with the self-inquiry, "Who is this me that all the thoughts come to? Where did the me come from? Who gave birth to the me?" Me is another name for I. "Where did the I come from who thinks of these thoughts?"

As an example, we feel there is something wrong with our body, and we say, "I am sick," we know scientifically the body cannot become sick by itself. The body is just a heap of flesh and bones and organs, it can do nothing by itself. It has no power. But when you say, "I am sick," you are invoking the power of I-am, which causes a delusion of sickness in your body and this is true of everything else in your life, every other experience that you think is wrong or right. So you begin to understand that I is responsible for your lot, for what you are. I is responsible!

You therefore have a job on your hands to remove the I, to totally annihilate the I. For you begin to see that all of your thoughts and your feelings that you have had all these years are really part of the I. "I feels all these things." I is the one who causes all the problems. You therefore make up your mind you are going to remove the I, so you inquire, "Who am I?" Which means what is the source of the I and that is very profound. You do not use your brain or your mind to come up with an answer. There is no answer. The reason there is no answer is because the I thought does not really exist. When you try to come up with an answer you are enforcing the I-thought to continue its job of deluding you.

Therefore you simply inquire, "Who am I? Where did the I come from?" And you keep still. As you keep still new thoughts come to you. All kind of thoughts? You repeat the same procedure, you say to yourself, "Okay to whom do these thoughts come? Where did these things come from? Who feels them?" Again, "I do, I feel these thoughts. They're telling me that things are bad they are telling me that things are good, like the little bird, good and bad. My thoughts tell me all these things. But I always say," I feel this, I feel that," so again, "Who am I? What is the source of the I?" And we keep still.

Let's practice this together, shall we? Close your eyes and do not do anything until a thought comes into your mind. It makes no difference what kind of a thought it is, good or bad. Ask yourself, "To whom does this thought come?" I feel it. It comes to me. I feel this, the thought. I think this thought. If I think this thought then who am I? Where did the I come from that thinks this thought? And you keep still.

As soon as another thought comes to you, continue the same practice.

(long silence)

Feel free to ask any questions.

SX: Could you please repeat that exercise again? (R: The whole thing?) No just the part to whom...

R: You inquire, "To whom does this come?" (SX: Uh-huh) You're inquiring to whom do these thoughts come. And then you say, "To me. I think these thoughts. They come to me," therefore, "who am I?" or, "what is the source of the I that thinks these thoughts?" And you keep silent, you never answer that question. When further thoughts come along you do the same thing.

SG: You were talking about the thoughts being lies and all of this - are you speaking relatively - what is the origin of the lies or what is the origin of the mind? It's almost a value judgement when making reference to them?

R: I'm not speaking relatively, I'm not speaking spiritually, I'm not speaking! All of the thoughts, the ideas, the concepts, the body, the mind, everything is a lie. It does not exist. That's why it's a lie. Only emptiness exists, nothing exists, no thing! Everything else must be a lie therefore, because it's not the truth.

SD: Could you say that the lie is the same as illusion? (R: Yes! It is the same.) Or Maya, it's all a dream? (R: Maya means the grand illusion, the lie.)

SG: What is the origin of that illusion, that lie, it sounds pejorative to me when you refer to it.

R: Yes, there is no origin because it never existed. Only something that exists has an origin. If everything is subject to change there is no possible origin. It never was created therefore it doesn't have to be uncreated. You simply have to look at it and realize that nothing like this exists. It has no origin. It's like asking, what is the purpose of life? There is no purpose. Life has no purpose whatsoever. For life does not exist the way we think it does. Everything that exists is an emanation of your mind. The mind emanates all of existence and it appears to be so. But it is not really true because there is no mind so there's no existence. There's no origin of the mind, there's no origin, there's no thing.

SD: And this is the illusion from which we are to awaken so-to-speak, right?

R: You shouldn't get caught up in the concepts of the great illusion also because when you think there is a great illusion staring you in the face the illusion becomes greater. Therefore look at it lightly, realize the illusion doesn't exist. Don't take it too serious. In other words, don't make a big thing out of illusion or you can get caught up in the illusion, and then you'll have to get rid of the illusion. Keep every thing simple.

SK: Robert, could you say there is no such thing as truth?

R: There is no such thing as truth because in order to have truth there has to be a falsity. Something has to be false therefore we say there is only truth. But in truth and reality, there's no truth, there's no false, there's no up, there's no down, there's no forward, there's no backward. It has no name. (SK: It's the only thing that doesn't change, right?) There's absolutely nothing that doesn't change.

SG: Sounds very inviting. (R: Then enter.) You know, I can say that facetiously and I shouldn't, but it's just so devoid of everything that sounds attractive to me.

R: Everything that sounds attractive is a concept of your mind. Your mind has come to the conclusion that this is attractive and this is ugly. They are both impostors. They both have to be transcended. (SG: If this is painted in glowing pictures like love and infinite joy, is that just another trap?) Love and infinite joy are all nonsense. When there's love, there is attachment. When there's attachment there is ego. When there's ego, there is the I-thought. If you get rid of the I-thought you get rid of all the love, you get rid of all of the attachments and everything else.

SD: But isn't there a transcendental love just like, that would be the same as consciousness or bliss that's not attachment? Isn't it relative to the level in which you're speaking?

R: I hear what you're saying but the love we have a concept of does not really exist. (SD: But isn't there perhaps a love beyond our understanding?) Yes, there is, but it's so different you can only experience it.

SK: Well that's another illusion, it's beyond my understanding, that's an illusion too?

R: That was an answer to a question. Of course it's an illusion. Every time I say a word it's an illusion. (laughter) Every time I talk it's an illusion. Every thing we are doing together is an illusion.

SD: Is satsang an illusion?

R: Satsang's an illusion? It's all an illusion. It's as if you are having a dream. In the dream you are going to Satsang, we're doing all these things, it appears so real. And you get into it and then you wake up and it's all gone. Who needs Satsang? (laughter)

SH: We do.

SY: So in that case, who will wake up?

R: Nobody, nobody ever went to sleep. There's no one to wake up. Those are just words. If you went to sleep you would have to wake up. Because, since you never went to sleep you do not have to wake up. If you think about it you become confused. (SY: So there's nobody to realize anything, any truth, any real, any body to wake up?) Now you've got it! (laughter)

SG: If all these problems are qualities or are illusions what is our motivation for achieving liberation or achieving that which whatever that thing that we're talking about?

R: The motivation is doing just what we're doing here yet there's nothing happening here. So the motivation is no motivation. (SG: Isn't that the end of things when there's no motivation?) There is no end, because there never was a beginning.

SD: So it's a divine paradox? (R: You can call it that.) I can call it that, who am I?

SH: Why bother?

R: We'll just go right back again. (SD: That's right.) To whom is it a divine paradox?

SG: There really is nothing to do?

R: Absolutely nothing! But don't feel that you'll not do anything. In the appearance world, you will do whatever you came into this world to do, without you being the doer. That's the paradox! You appear to be doing things, and yet you are not the doer. You are free!

SY: Robert, in that sense is it easier to commit suicide and we just get all free of it?

R: Not really, because you are doing nothing when you commit suicide. (SY: Yeah, I mean there is no possibility to realize anything there's nobody there to realize any truth of it or to be awakened? What is the point? It's all hopeless.) The point is to be your self. Committing suicide is the same as having desires. Unless you get rid of the desires you can never really know the truth and awaken. Therefore when you commit suicide, you will appear to comeback again and again and go through the same conditions again and again until you awaken by yourself without any thoughts of suicide. (SY: Yet why do we have to come back again?) Because you're caught in the wheel of delusion, because you committed suicide.

SD: In other words suicide would be part of the illusion right?

R: Yes, you have not awakened to the truth.

SG: You're identifying with the body understand that if I get rid of the body then I'll be free.

SH: You think there is somebody to kill.

SD: Yeah right so if we hold onto the body idea then we're holding onto the idea of reincarnation.

R: You would appear to come back again and karma would appear to be real. And reincarnation would appear to be real and you'd go through the whole trip again and again and again. But it doesn't exist. Therefore you're fortunate to have a body, so-to-Speak, to be where you are right now because you can sort of awaken to this and be free. And then there's no coming and no going. There's no birth. There's no death.

SC: So the whole idea is just to be here now?

R: To be here now is the way it's done. When you're here now there's no body left to think or to do any thing. (SC: Nothing else matters but right now?) This second!

SG: I guess what I've been wanting to say is, this doesn't sound enticing. (R: Good!) So I need to drop all my thoughts of what spiritual goals, my lofty... (R: Exactly.) ...and just face this question that you pose for us? (R: Exactly.) Because I have a burning desire to know that?

R: You have a burning desire to do something. That's how it begins. As you continue with self-inquiry, your desire begins to fade away and you become empty little by little. Until you finally become completely empty and you become nothing. (SG: But Robert isn't there still a subtle yearning to be free and that's the motivation?) That's in the beginning stages, but the subtle yearning has to go also. Everything has to go!

SC: In Buddhism there's warnings about the pitfalls of nihilism... (R: Umm.) ...Like how does one keep from falling into that?

R: This is not nihilism, as you inquire, "Who am I?" little by little everything is destroyed and you enter a place where you are pure awareness.

SG: I would like to go back to what I just asked a minute ago. It seems like a yearning to be free arises spontaneously and that won't disappear of itself until I do, so isn't that still motivation?

R: The yearning appears to be motivation when you first begin the practice. As you continue in the practice the so-called motivation begins to disappear. It's like you become lighter and lighter. There's no mind left to have motivation. And to be motivated there has to be a mind. As you keep destroying the mind by inquiring, "To whom does this come?" the mind just begins to disappear in its entirety. Therefore there's no motivation. (SG: You mean even identification with the so-called motivation end eventually?) The identification with the motivation is the I-thought. As the I-thought becomes weaker and weaker and becomes completely transcended there's no longer any motivation to do anything. How can you be the Self and have motivation? The Self is!

SC: The so-called third evils that are like earthquakes and things like that are hard to stop, there are things we can do with this consciousness in the light of the troubled earth?

R: As you believe you are the body it is your duty to make this a better world in which to live, to feed the homeless, to help the poor, to be of service to humanity. To join causes, to do all these things. But it is the body doing this it's as if you were dreaming and in the dream you did all of these things. But when you awaken from the dream, who's left to do these things? There's no personality left. There's no ego left that has to do any of these things.

SD: Because there is no things to do? (R: Umm.) Wouldn't that be true? (R: Yes.) At the level that you're speaking there would be no things? (R: There is nothing there, right.)

SG: So there is no motivation to do any of these things for others, so-called others?

R: Well yes, because your body will do whatever it has to do. But you will not, since you have absolutely nothing to do with your body. As long as the body appearance is there it will appear to be doing things, being of service. Doing kind deeds. But there is no doer.

SH: Does the witness go too?

R: The witness goes too, everything goes. (SH: Umm.) Everything goes!

SG: And what's the purpose?

R: There is no purpose. (laughter) Why do you want a purpose? There's no purpose whatsoever. The mind has to have a purpose. When there's no more mind, there's no more purpose.

SC: Does the witness really go by inquiring itself, it seems like trying to dig yourself out of a hole.

R: Of course it can because you're inquiring, "To whom does the witness come?" The witness comes to your mind. It's the mind that becomes the witness. Therefore if you keep inquiring, "To whom do these things come?" there will be nothing left for you to do. It will all go.

(silence)

R: Will you read the Jnani Mary?

(Mary reads the Confessions of a Jnani. Refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

Do we have any announcements?

(tape ends) [TOC]

YOU HAVE TO DESIRE FREEDOM

16th January, 1992

Robert: I welcome you with all my heart. It is good being with you again. I notice a few new faces here today.

Let me explain to you that I am not a preacher. I am not a guru. I am not a philosopher. I am not a yogi. I am not a sermonizer, is there such a word as sermonizer. (laughter) I've heard of womanizer. (laughter)

SB: What are you? (laughter)

R: I am absolutely nothing. (SB: Then you prove it.) You have to prove it. I am no thing. You may see me as a mirror, if you desire. When you look at me you see yourself. You see what you believe you are, when you look into the mirror. If you've come here expecting something, you will go away disappointed. For I have absolutely nothing to give you. And I give you nothing. If you feel empty inside you will be filled up. If you are already full, you will feel disappointed again. There is nothing profound that I say. If you're looking for profundity, (Robert asks: Is there such a word?) (SH: Umm-hmm.) (agrees) Don't look at me. Now that we have got that sorted. (students laugh)

SC: That's your sermon for the day.

R: That's it. There was once a seeker who approached a Sage and said, "Master, have you seen God?" And the Sage asked him, "Why do you want to know?" The seeker said, "If you have seen God, you can give me his darshan, allow me to see him also. The Sage said, "Before I give you God's darshan I have to introduce you to the Lord. Pray tell me who are you?"

And the seeker puffed himself up and said, "Why I am John Brown. The Sage said, "John Brown was the name that was given at birth. Tell me who you really are. Who are you?" The seeker said, "I told you sir, I am John Brown, I am a Catholic." The Sage laughed and he said, "Your name, your religion were given to you at birth. You are not that, tell me who you are?" The seeker was becoming flabbergasted, he said, "I am an architect." The Sage laughed again and said, "You went to school to be an architect, this is your profession. But I want you to tell me who you are right now so that I can give you the darshan of God." At this time the seeker was very nervous. And he said, "I am, I am a man!" Again the Sage laughed, "Obviously so, but this is your gender. Who are you really? Who are you tell me?" The seeker was really upset now. He was crying and he said, "I am a part of the family of human beings of mankind." Again the Sage laughed and he said, "This is your genus." But he looked at the seeker and he had a great compassion and decided to give him a teaching. He said to the seeker, "You have such little knowledge of who you are. How can you possibly know who God is? First know thyself. Know who you are. Then you will not have to ask anyone for the darshan of God. You will know it yourself."

So it is with us, we try to eliminate external conditions from our lives. We make a big mistake when we do this. A person has a disease, a sickness of some kind and they seek external ways to cure themselves. Whereas if they only went within themselves, if they discovered who they were, they would realize that the self which they are can have no disease. The self is absolute reality, all-pervading. There is no room for disease. There is only God.

The same with a person who has fears, frustrations, anger. They go to psychiatrists, psychologists, do different things to eliminate these conditions. It's very difficult. If only they would become wise and turn within. They would discover the self. Again the self is pure, uncontaminated. The self has no anger. The self is totally free. There is no mental anguish in the self. There are no problems in reality. The problems are in the dream state. The belief that you are a human being. That you are a mind and body phenomena.

As long as you identify with this state of yourself... (break in tape) ...when will you begin to turn within and stop seeking, without. Everything is within you. All of the answers you're looking for are within yourself. This is true of happiness, of peace. We seem to seek these things forever. We will never find it in the world. The world cannot give you peace. The world cannot give you happiness. Peace and happiness are your real nature. You are that.

How do you find it? By turning within. By realizing your real nature. By awakening to the self. Yet no matter how many times I say this most of you still learn the hard way. You keep searching externally. You keep worrying. You keep looking without. Remember whatever you seem to get rid of in the outside world will turn up again and again. No matter how many times you eliminate a condition in the external world, it will pop up in different ways again and again.

It's as if you have a tumor and you go to a surgeon. The surgeon cuts it off and it grows again some other place of your body. You go to the surgeon again and he cuts off the tumor and after a few months it pops up again somewhere else in your body.

The idea is not to eliminate the conditions but to discover the truth about yourself. To realize who you are. To know the truth. To understand your divine nature.

How do you do this? By focussing on the I. Following the I-thought. Asking, "To whom does this condition come?" Inquiring within yourself. Searching deeply.

There is no human being on this earth who can really help you. No matter where you turn, no matter who you go to. There are Sages who have been self-realized, they can show you the way. Yet you have to do it yourself. You only become interested in these things when the world has disappointed you to an extent, over and over again.

It's unfortunate that when the world shows you the good side of it's nature, you are not interested in these things, most people. For you're experiencing financial success, robust health, peace of mind for a while. But the pendulum has to swing back. Do not be deluded into thinking that you can have these things forever. Just as you cannot have disease forever, you cannot have poverty forever, you cannot have lack and limitation forever, the pendulum has to swing the other way. And so it is you cannot have the good life, so-to-speak, in this world forever.

Yet most of you are still trying to change bad into good and looking to improve your lot. You want to improve your affairs. (if you're having any affairs.) Whatever you try to improve in this world is a joke. You take the world too seriously.

Take an honest look at yourself. When was the last time you became angry, disillusioned, upset, when things didn't go your way. This is the nature of this world. Things hardly ever go the way that you want them to go. They unfold in your human life, so-to-speak, in accordance with your karma. There are certain experiences that your body will go through in this life, which was first outlined before you came into the body. Yet to whom does this come? Who sees this? Who feels this? Who experiences this? The one who believes they are a body.

Once you eliminate the body there will be no one left to experience anything on this earth, good or bad. Yet you will be in the body, so-to-speak, experiencing things, going through situations, yet again you will not be doing anything. You will be totally free of the whole mess.

We have to have a strong desire in the beginning stages to overcome the world. We have to forget about the body, forget about life, forget about trying to make something out of ourselves, forget about trying to improve our affairs and find God. Once you find God, who is the purest of pure, the divine self, pure awareness, you will no longer concern yourself about anything else. You will not be able to see anything else or to feel anything else of the world. Others may look at you and it will appear to them as if they're going through situations with you, as if you're going through certain experiences but they are only seeing themselves. They're only looking at their level of experience. But you will not be where they are. You will be so above this that there are no words to describe it.

You have to desire freedom. You have to desire illumination. When you desire this something will come to you. You will gravitate toward something that will lead you in the right direction, on the right path. Once this happens you give up all desire. Something else takes over and you begin to feel a higher pull. You begin to awaken. You begin to feel the real peace. The real happiness which has absolutely nothing to do with things, persons or places. You are beginning to feel your self.

If you can only begin to do this, how wonderful it is. If you only realized what I was talking about and you were able to feel the presence and the power, you would never again seek anything in the external world. Of course the thoughts would come to you by themselves that the world is a world of change. Constant and total change. How can you be happy with anything that changes. No thing is ever permanent in this world. Therefore no matter what you attain it will change eventually.

The wise person stops seeking outside themselves and begins to seek within themselves. They begin to ask themselves, like in that story I told you, "Who am I? Who am I really? Who was I before I was born? Who was I before I was given a name? Before I was told what religion to worship? Before I became a professional person? Before I had all of my thoughts? My preconditioning? My preconceived ideas?" We become totally honest with ourselves. We begin to see how conditioned we really are. We're totally conditioned.

Our belief system has becoming stronger since we were children and now we have beliefs about ourselves that are unconscious and conscious, both. This is what holds us back. Our belief system. And the worst thing that we can ever believe is that we are a body or a mind. The appearance may be there but to whom does it come? The appearance comes to the ego, to the I-thought.

So we discover something very interesting, we discover that we have to eliminate the I-thought and the ego. Which are really the same thing. We begin to see, slowly at first that we're always saying I, all day long. All day long we say I. I am happy, I am sad. I am lonely, I am peaceful. I am this and I am that. I am hungry and I am full. It is always I, I, I-I. So we do begin to ask the question, "Who is this I? Who gave it birth? From where did it originate?" If we're really sincere we will discover that the origin of I is within ourselves.

How do we identify with the origin and become totally free from the whole mess? We identify with our origin by removing the I. The thought I. Totally destroying the I-thought.

"How do I do this?" we ask ourselves. By allowing the I-thought to return to the source. When the I-thought is in the source there is no going out and no going in. There is complete awareness, complete awakening.

So we begin to observe ourselves. This is how it works. Every time we say, "I this and I that," we catch ourselves and we inquire, "To whom does this I come? Why the I comes to me. I am always saying, I, I, I this and I that. Who is me? (Not woe is me.) Who is me? Who is this me? Who am I?" You feel that the entire universe and all it's ramifications are attached to the I.

Consequently you do not try to eliminate the world or the universe or situations, you work on eliminating the I-thought. When the I disappears into the source everything else goes with it, everything. The entire universe and you become sat-chit-ananda. You become effortless pure awareness. What you've always been. This is what you must do.

But how many of you really do this? You walk out the door and you get caught up in all of your problems and your lifestyle and you believe the whole world is centered upon you. That you are important and that you've got to do this and you've got to accomplish that. You have no idea what is in store for you. You might drop dead of a heart attack tomorrow. You might be shot by accident. You may trip and break your neck. Therefore by relying on the external world for your happiness and your life you're making a grave mistake. For you never know how long you will be on this earth plane. In this form as a body. The wise person begins to focus on reality and becomes free.

So I ask you again, what are you doing with your life? What is important to you? Do you become hurt easily? Do things upset you easily? Does the world matter to you? And you can tell where you are. When you watch the news on TV, do you become excited when you see something? Do you identify with things that you see? For instance if the newscaster shows you there is a terrible flu epidemic going around, do you feel as if it's going to come to you and you have to take precautions? This shows you that you are identifying with the world and you are allowing the world to dictate to you, to tell you how things are. Subconsciously you are attracting the things that you see, believe and feel and then you become one of the bunch. Whatever is going around comes to you also. You have to come to that point and the place where you realize that there is absolutely nothing in the universe, in the world or anyplace else that wants to or can hurt you. You are beyond that.

Forget about the past. It makes no difference what happened to you in the past, you are here now. Now is the appointed time. Become centered in the now. Know yourself. Leave the world alone. Leave people alone. Leave things alone. Always remember when I make these statements, I'm speaking of mentally doing these things. I'm not saying to you, you have to give up your friends and give up your work and give up your family and give up your life and move to a cave. I am saying that you mentally have to let go of your attachment to person, place or thing. It all begins in your mind. Remember the body will continue it's work and do what it has to do but you have absolutely nothing to say about this. For you are not the body.

Do not allow television, newspapers, others to run your life. Stand up for your rights. What rights? You have no rights. You have nothing to stand up for, that is why you're sitting. The world can't hurt you. There is nothing anywhere that wants to hurt you or wants to harm you. You're dreaming that something is wrong, someone is hurting, someone is suffering. Awaken from the mortal dream. Awaken today, now.

Become free from everything in this world. Do not think about this, your thoughts are not your friend. Your thoughts are here to keep you earth bound. Your thoughts will tell you all sorts of things to do to keep you earthbound. You cannot listen to your thoughts. But you can observe your thoughts, watch your thoughts, you can inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come?" But do not allow the thoughts to tell you anything. Know the truth.

I can only make my own confession. I am not the body or this world. I am not the phenomena that is all around me, I am parabrahman. I am absolute reality, nirvana, ultimate oneness. I am effortless choiceless pure awareness. Sat-chit-ananda. Never was I born, never can I die. I appear to have a body yet I know I am not the body. The body is a superimposition on the screen of life. I am absolute freedom, pure consciousness. This is the truth about the self and the self being all-pervading, omnipresent, this is the truth about you. For when the word self is mentioned it is self-contained absolute reality and there is no place for anything else. It takes up all space. There is no room for anything except the self.

So how can you complain? How can you believe that there is something else? How can you feel there is sickness or death or birth or man's inhumanity to man?

When there is only the self which is God, which is self-contained, which is omnipresent, all-pervading. There is nothing else. You are that. Awaken and be happy.

Do we have any written questions today? Okay here's one.

Q: (Robert reads) If we sit at home at the same time you are sitting in your home, 12 to 3 and 6 to 9, and something happens to us, how does this work? What I think you want to know is how does the whole thing work? How does everything work?

A: (Robert answers) When you look at yourself as a body you are separate. You are incomplete. You are all alone, you are all by yourself. When you sit as a self you are omnipresent, you're omniscient, you're omnipotent, you're all-pervading. Therefore when certain individuals sit with a Sage or a person who has realized the Self and they become part of the vibration of the self that has been realized. Subsequently they feel the grace, the peace, the joy of the Sage. And of course this helps them and their unfoldment and their worldly affairs. For they acquire more peace, they acquire happiness, they acquire wisdom for they are sitting with the self.

Consequently those of you who can remember to sit in the silence at home the hours are from 6 to 9 in the morning and 12 to 3 at night. If you cannot sit all of these hours sit the time that you can. I have been hearing many good results that many of you have been attaining in doing this. This is one way to unfold faster. It also gives you the power to practice self inquiry and the energy to be able to watch the thoughts and eliminate the mind and the body. So by all means do this.

Q: (Robert reads) If there is no mind how do we reason?

A: (Robert answers) It is not really the mind that reasons. The mind is a conglomeration of thoughts that is all the mind is. The reasoning power comes from the self. The absolute reality is where reasoning comes from, not from the mind. The mind are a bunch of thoughts of the past and worries of the future. That is all the mind really is. As you surrender the mind by observing it, by watching it, by inquiring, "To whom does this mind come?" you will use reasoning that comes from above, from God, from your self, the real Self.

Therefore you do not have to worry about this. You do not have to concern yourself about reasoning. Concern yourself of getting rid of your mind then watch and see if there is no reasoning. You will be... (break in tape) ...in the ordinary sense of the word, where misunderstandings and something or other. That all is mind and losing our grasp and the reality outside of us. The difficulty is to hold firmly in the mind the two contradictory elements.

Q: Please comment. All I hear is the unreality of things, how about the reality also?

A: (Robert answers) Everything that comes from the mind and the body are illusions. If you believe in these things then you are asking for trouble because this will lead to suffering. Everything in the world leads to suffering. But there is beauty, there is joy, there is harmony, there is reality but this has absolutely nothing to do with your mind. The mind is not your friend. The mind leads to mistakes. When you begin to destroy the mind and the ego and you begin to realize that you are not the body, your life becomes beautiful. You begin to see a completely new world. You begin to see God as yourself. As divine harmony. So when you say, "Please comment, all I hear is the unreality of things how about the reality also?"

The reality is what you are. You've been covered up with illusion believing you are something that is not reality and you've been experiencing things in this world that seem to hurt you. That seem to cause you pain. These things are not the self, they are not really you. You therefore have to inquire, "To whom do they come?" And get rid of them completely entirely. Reality is always present. Beauty is always present. Joy is always present. Bliss is always here. You are that. Awaken to it and be free. That's it.

SC: Can I ask a question. (R: Sure.) I'd like to hear you talk about the self. How we can get in touch with the self, that with a capital "S." When you say, "Who am I?" then you wait and I have up to now been concentrating on the I instead of the - that you talked before - about the Self, consciousness. I guess you can't put a word or label on consciousness and that is what I'm trying to do I suppose but maybe you can speak more about that?

R: You do not meditate or concentrate on the I-thought. You abide in the I-thought and follow it to the source. The I-thought is something that is movable, flexible. It is not anything permanent. The source which is God which is absolute reality is permanent. You therefore in your mind, in your imagination see the I-thought coming from the brain and going into the source which is the self on the right side of the chest, the heart centre. The heart centre is God. The heart centre is reality.

By inquiring, "Who am I?" You're really saying, "To whom does the I come? Who feels the I?" I am sick, I am crazy, I am nervous. I am this and I am that, "Who sees this? Where does the I come from?" As you inquire into the I, the I-thought becomes weaker and weaker by returning to the heart centre, to the source. And as you rest in the silence when you inquire, "Who am I?" one day something will happen. One day you will all of a sudden feel a sort of explosion within yourself. You will feel your body melting. You will feel yourself becoming nothing. And the self, which is the real self, which is the heart centre will become everything, you will be free, you will be liberated.

Therefore do not meditate on the I, the I is problems, it creates problems for you. The I is what brings the troubles and the bad feelings and the emotions to you. Follow the I, abide in the I by following it. It is destroyed when you follow it. It goes into the heart centre and you rest in the silence. You become free and liberated. Do you follow that?

SC: Yes, we don't try to get in touch with the consciousness, just be in the silence?

R: You can't get into touch with consciousness because you are consciousness. All you can do is get rid of the stuff that you're not. You are not the I-thought. You are not Nate. You are not the one going through life suffering with various things and ailments. This is not you get rid of that and consciousness will appear by itself.

Think of your real Self as the sun and all your problems and ailments are the clouds. When the clouds cover the sun do you say there is no sun? You realize that the is up there but the clouds are covering the sun. As the clouds dissipate slowly but surely the sun will shine again in all it's glory and splendor.

In the same instance, you are not your problems, you are not your affairs, you are not your troubles or your sicknesses or anything else. They are clouds that have been hindering your view of reality. So you simply observe the clouds as the I-thought getting out of the way, moving into the heart, which is the sun and you will shine once again in all your glory and in all your splendor.

All this is the I-thought but you are your Self, you are pure awareness, you are absolute reality, you are parabrahman, you are total freedom, you are completely whole, you are bright and shining. Let go of the past, let go of yesterday, awaken to your true Self.

Anyone else care to say something? Make a statement? Throw a pie in my face?

Some of you tell me you would like to practice meditation. Remember always that self-inquiry is not meditation. Self-inquiry can be practiced anywhere. But meditation is the I-am, that I share with you. That you can call meditation. And the reason you practice this is to make yourself one-pointed. When you become one-pointed you can then become still. Your mind will become still. And you will rest in the silence.

This is the purpose for all meditation, is to become one pointed and become still. The I-am meditation is very powerful, very positive, it causes a lot of change in consciousness. You should practice all of these things I share with you. Let's practice the I-am meditation now.

SD: Robert I have a question before we begin. Is part of the power of the I-am meditation is fact that I-am is the name of God? Is that sort of a form of a... (R: Of course.) ...tata?

R: This is what it is based on. I-am is the first name of God. As you begin meditating on I-am you become calmer and calmer first. The thoughts slow down, the breathing slows down. You let go of all of your thoughts and you become free inside your mind.

So the first thing you want to do is make yourself comfortable in your chair. Relax completely. It's better to close your eyes in the beginning stages because it removes obstructions. As you advance with this it doesn't matter whether you close your eyes or not. But when obstructions are in front of you it keeps you from thinking of I-am. So as we close our eyes we begin to relax the body first. We practice a sort of vipassana meditation, where we observe our feelings, our sensations and our thoughts. If you feel your body is tense, you tell it to relax, it will listen to you. It will obey you. Your mind is in control of your body. You can tell your feet to relax, your knees to relax, your thighs to relax, your fingers, your hands to relax. Feel your shoulders relaxing, your neck, your back, the back of your head, top of your head, your face, your eyes, your mouth, your jaw relaxes, your whole body is feeling very relaxed and peaceful. Focus your attention on your thoughts, your breath. You're feeling very comfortable, nothing is bothering you, nothing is disturbing you. Observe your thoughts, observe your breath, do not try to change them, just observe them.

Now you ask yourself the question, "Who is the observer?" The answer is, "I-am." With your respiration, inhale you say, "I," exhale you say, "am." If you get lost in your thoughts when you catch yourself, gently go back to it, I-am with your breath. Inhale naturally you say, "I," exhale naturally you say, "am." You are invoking the first name of God.

(silence)

Do you want to read the Jnani? (Robert asks Mary) (SM: Alright Robert.)

(Mary reads the Confessions of a Jnani refer to beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Any more announcements?

SE: Kerema is preparing prashad. (R: Kerema's preparing prashad, that sounds good.)

SB: I have a question. I've read about what is called Baba samadhi where the realizer is so rested in consciousness that consciousness itself outshines the phenomenal world and the phenomenal world like disappears completely it's out shined by the radiance of consciousness. (R: Okay?) Is that something that happens? (R: Sounds good.) (students laugh) That is called baba samadhi. Because you say in "The Jnani," you say that the phenomenal world is appearing but it can't be gotten rid of. But in this condition of this type of samadhi isn't it out shined by consciousness?

R: What Mary means when she says that... (SB: Yeah.) ...is that only the Self exists. But even when the body appears it is not real. Even when it appears to hinder the person. It's an appearance to others, other see it that way. But to the Sage there is no hindrance, there is no body. There is consciousness just like you said. (SB: Oh so I see. So the Sage is still amongst the consciousness but even though phenomenal objects appear they are not binding to...) Except there is nothing to bind. (SB: He can see through them that they're not real and that only consciousness is...) It's not that he sees through them, there is no one left to see anything. There is nothing to see. There is just pure being. (SB: At that point do even the phenomenal objects disappear?) The phenomenal objects are never there to begin with. They don't have to disappear because if they disappear it would mean that they existed. Only what exists disappears. (SB: So why did you used to say that we can get beyond phenomena but they continue to appear?) This is for the sake of others. Others see certain things happening. They appear real, but it's not true. They don't exist whatsoever. (SB: Is there a point in your resting in consciousness where it deepens to the point of complete immersion and absolute loss of...) You're speaking of stages. There are no stages. When one awakens, they are awakened just like when one turns on the light there is no darkness.

SB: There is no difference to your perception. Now you're speaking to us and when you're completely at rest in samadhi. (R: It's the same thing.) There is no change at all? (R: No change.)

SC: I'll ask a question which is asked many times that I heard that there are men in India when they come stay in United States and when they see a bus coming down the street, they don't realize the potential danger and they walk in front of it, like aha? (R: Well they're an idiot!) (laughter) I heard that they didn't realize that danger was there because they didn't know what it was. It's the same thing as you're saying that, "Things don't exist." Which is hard for my mind and other minds to comprehend this. I know it's the mind, but still bringing it up.

R: Things do not exist but what appears to be the body will always take care of itself. The body will not purposely walk in front of a bus unless the person is a babbling idiot. (students laugh) (SC: It's still is not the point or is it? I keep hearing over and over even in my readings that we don't exist and the mind is trying to grasp the don't exist and making existent or non-existent it's still trying to figure it out. It seems so...) You can't figure it out. Do not use your mind that's the whole problem. You're always using your mind trying to analyze it. Remember your mind is limited, very limited. Your mind is finite, it can never comprehend the infinite. So when you're trying to analyze or trying to figure it something out with your mind you'll get nowhere. The mind is given to you for your body. For the world. Your mind is the world, the body. The universe, that is your mind. Beyond the mind is reality. (SC: So that's what is, is that what you're saying? And the mind cannot comprehend what you just said?) Exactly. So do not use your mind to try to figure something out, you can't do it. Your mind is meant for the earth. (SC: Well it seems so unbelievable that this is an object and yet it doesn't exist.) Science can prove to you that it doesn't exist. (SC: I know with the electronic microscope etc. but...) (students laugh)

SG: Don't believe that either huh? (laughter)

SH: You ain't getting across no matter what. (laughter)

SD: Isn't it partly Robert as you've told us not to deceive ourselves that as long as we have even an inkling that we are thinking that we are the body then we must obey the rules of the universe. So this person who ignores a bus is obviously still relating to the body to a certain degree so they have to relate to the bus as well.

R: Exactly. True. Where is the prashad? Mary has got an announcement.

SM: For the new people that are here we have an introductory transcript to give to you. And Dennis it's was nice he brought back his transcript so we have some today of another number. And please sign our guest book if you will please.

R: Remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself, to bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you. God bless you and peace.

Until we meet again go forth and multiply. (laughter)

THREE COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS

23rd January, 1992

Robert: Good evening. (Students: Good evening.) It is a pleasure to be with you once again. Welcome to satsang.

Most Westerners are used to going to meetings where they sit down as students and they listen to a teacher. This is completely different. I am not a teacher and you are not students.

There is one Self. One effortless pure awareness. That is what satsang is. The one Self already knows everything. The one Self already is everything. There is no message I am giving you. There is no teaching I am giving you. Satsang is being. Not being this or being that. Pure being. We are all being. One being. Ultimate oneness. Absolute reality.

Never look at yourself as a mere human being. As someone who does not know. Never believe that you have to become enlightened, you have to become self-realized. There is no becoming. Becoming never existed. Since there is only the moment, the now, everything is happening now. There is no yesterday, there is no past, there is no tomorrow, there is no future. There is this split second where reality shines and you are that.

It's interesting how many phone calls I've been getting since this year has started. From all over the world. It's also interesting that when someone begins a question it sort of becomes a series of the same question that is asked by different student or different people who call me.

There were three particular questions that people have asked me since the beginning of the year. It is really quite amusing that people would ask the same questions so often. It's like catching a disease. (laughter) One person has it and then somebody else on the other side of the world gets the same thing and asks the same questions. I therefore thought it would be interesting if we get into these three questions and talk about it.

The first one is: Robert what type of teaching do you give your devotees that is fast and best, in order to awaken in this life? The best and fastest teaching that will awaken you in this life.

The second question they ask me, it's not a question it's sort of a statement. Many many people are becoming enlightened these days or so it seems, people have continued to ask me, "Robert I've had a spiritual experience, I've seen visions. I've felt that I'm in another world, I feel as if I'm going to be self-realized very soon, now. Is this true? And approximately nine to twelve people ask me that same question. It's catchy.

And the third questions I was asked, "Robert are you really a Jnani? Are you self-realized? Are you a Sage? You never say that about yourself. Tell me, I won't tell anyone else." (students laugh)

So I thought it'd be interesting to discuss these things. For if these people had this type of understanding and this type of questioning I'm sure you also have the same thing, some of you in your mind wherever your mind is, so we'll discuss it.

The first question: What type of teaching do you give your devotees? The best teaching and the fastest teaching to awaken in this life?

Well the thing we must remember is that not everyone that comes here is a devotee. We have the three classes of people I speak about once in a while. We have seekers, we have disciples and we have devotees. The seekers and the disciples and the devotees are different from one another.

Therefore when I talk in public like I am doing now I have to make sort of everyone happy. That is my job to make you happy. Is everybody happy? (students laugh) So I mix everything together and say all sorts of things. The seekers run around the world seeking different gurus, different teachers, different books they read. Always going here and always going there.

Therefore what I have to tell them is to go deep within, dive deep within yourself, question, "Who am I?" Realize that you are not the body-mind phenomena and become awakened. This is what they want to hear because this is what the rest of the teachers tell them also. So the seeker is never satisfied. The seeker is always seeking a special teacher that will give them seeker teachings that nobody else has given them. Of course they are always disappointed and they keep looking for new books, new teachers all the time.

Then there is the disciple. The disciple has sort of settled down. They go to different teachers but they stick to one teacher more often than the others but they too do not put the teaching first. The search, the awakening is not foremost in their mind. Their jobs, their families, holidays, all of these things are number one in their lives. Therefore how can they awaken.

I explain to them that you have to have God, truth, reality in your mind and in your heart as number one in your life. This has to come first if you're seeking to awaken. I'm not saying that they should give up their jobs or their families or their holidays or anything else. I'm saying that they should have a priority to put God in their life first. To put reality, truth in their lives and keep thinking about the truth all of the time.

The devotees of course are the closest to awakening. For to the devotee there is only the one, only the Self. They're not interested in politics. They're not interested in chit-chat. They're not interested to non-sensical things that are going on in the world. They have one priority, that is the Self, to awaken. This is in their minds forever, all the time.

They always think of the Sage. And because they are always thinking of the Sage the grace of the Sage flows through them. They realize that they are responsible for the welfare of the Sage, the support of the Sage and the livingness of the Sage for they are the Sage themselves. There is one Sage and that is the Self. The only one.

So to these people, I give the best and fastest teaching to awaken in this life and that is silence. Absolute silence. But the devotees know this already. Even if there is noise going on in their lives, turmoil, bodily dysfunctions, recession, whatever is going on in the world they are in silence. They are aware of the world but this is secondary. They sit in the silence by themselves whenever they can at home. They sit with the Sage at certain times. But they realize that the silence is the fastest way to awaken. The devotees are actually the backbone of every spiritual organization. So try to understand this.

The fastest and best way to awaken is not self-inquiry, is not observation, being the witness. Those things are for the disciples or for seekers but for the devotee the fastest and best way is the silence. Keeping the mind quiet, keeping the mind peaceful. Not fighting the mind. When you fight the mind it's like beating a cow with a stick to take the cow where you want him to go. Looking at the mind in quietness without troubling to change any thought is like coaxing the cow with some grass, so the cow will follow you wherever you want him to go. When you learn to sit in the silence, in the quietness, everything will happen by itself, everything will take care of itself, everything will happen by itself.

There are those of you disciples or seekers who say, "Robert I've tried this for years. I cannot sit in the silence. For as soon as I sit in the silence the thoughts come, feelings come, I've got to move, I got to get up, I've practiced self-inquiry it doesn't work. I've tried being the witness it doesn't work."

The idea is not to care or be concerned about your thoughts whatsoever. It does not matter what type of thoughts come into your mind. It makes no difference what thoughts come into your mind. Do not try to observe them or be the witness to them or try to change them or even to ask, "To whom do they come?" Merely sit with a smile on your face and allow what to happen to happen. Allow what is going to happen to take place. Without your interference. Just to be still. So that is the fastest and best way to awaken in this lifetime.

Question number two: I've had a spiritual experiences Robert the last couple of months. I've had visions and I think I'm in the process of awakening. Is this true?

We make a big fuss about awakening. The only reason I use the term like awakening, self-realization, pure awareness, is so that the disciples and the seekers can have some meat to hold onto so-to-speak. The devotees couldn't care less about those terms. Those terms are meaningless to devotees.

When you awaken from your sleep before you awaken you're having a dream. Do you say in your dream, "I have to awaken so I'm going to practice all kinds of yoga's. I'm going to practice mantras and japa and pranayanas. So I can awaken." Of course not.

When you wake up in the morning you just wake up. There is absolutely nothing you do. You didn't plan to wake up. You didn't outline and say to yourself, "I have to wake up in this life or next life or in the next ten minutes." You just woke up.

Awakening to the Self is the same thing. There are no plans you have to make. There is no itinerary you have to keep. There are no yogas or meditations you have to practice. There are no teachers you have to see. You just wake up. Think about that.

You've been sleeping all night, you've been dreaming and now you wake up to this world. When you wake up to the fourth state of consciousness it's the same way you do when you wake up in the morning. You simply awaken.

So again all of the profound teachings that you've been looking for, all the books that you've been looking for, all the Masters you've been looking for, all of the yoga practices, the kundalini yogas, the leya yoga and rajah yoga and the rest of the yogas, they may make you feel better but they have absolutely nothing to do with awakening.

You may say, "Well many people who have awakened have practiced these things in a previous life, perhaps or in this life and doesn't this bring you closer to awakening?" Not really. The reason they've practiced these things is because somebody told them to. They've learned this from a person who is a yoga teacher, a kundalini Master and so forth. It has absolutely nothing to do with awakening. Awakening is a direct experience. An instant experience. It happens.

But prior to awakening comes a complete surrender. Not visions, not spiritual experiences but a total and complete surrender to the Self. When I say it's a complete surrender it's exactly what I mean. You surrender your entire life. This means all your problems, all the things you think are bothering you. All the good things, all the bad things. Everything is totally surrendered to the Self. And as you're doing this you automatically become compassionate and have a tremendous amount of humility transpires within yourself.

Those are the three things that happen to you prior to awakening. There is a total surrender to God. Not certain things. I know some of you like to surrender the bad things, forget about that. You just surrender totally and completely. The bad and good things are all part of the relative world. And the whole relative world has to be totally and completely surrendered. Totally given up.

Then a great compassion and a great humility will come by itself. You see we're not trying to do these things physically? We just let ourselves fall into the space where all these things happen by themselves. And this comes from sitting in the silence. You see how all these things are connected to each other?

As you sit in the silence without desire, without want, without trying to change bad for good. All of a sudden you will feel yourself surrendering. Surrendering all of your ego. The body-mind surrenders. Everything let's go. And you become the epitome of compassion. A tremendous humility wells up within you. When you can feel these things the next step is to awaken totally.

The third question I was asked is: "Robert are you a Jnani. Are you a Sage? You can tell me I won't tell anybody else." Of course I had to laugh at something like this.

When a person who is a seeker or a disciple or does not have love in their heart, or ultimate surrender in their heart asks me a question like this, I can usually tell their motive and I keep silent. I hardly ever answer a person like this. But when a sincere devotee who does not understand, asks me this question, I have to answer the devotee and the answer is something like this; The word Sage, enlightenment, Jnani is really non-existent to the Sage. Those words are for the ajnani. The ajnani thinks there is something different between what he is now and what he is when he awakens. So they're are looking to see if the Sage or who they think is the Sage can tell whether they're a Sage. Yet there is noone to see anything like this. For that word doesn't exist.

We use the word Sage to explain to the seekers, to the disciples that there is a being who has awakened to the Self. Robert is not a Sage. Robert has nothing to do with being a Sage or a Jnani or anything else. Jnana is all-pervading. It is the reality. You are that reality, I am that reality. There is one reality. One understanding. One awareness and I am is that. I am is that, not Robert, but I am. And since you are I am, I am I-am, we're both in the same boat. There is no separation.

Therefore there is noone to say that, "He is a Sage or a Jnani." For that would mean there was somebody left over who can claim to be a Jnani or a Sage. That would immediately mean that his being is not a Jnani or a Sage. Because he exclaims that he is. For the ego is the one that makes that exclamation. The ego is the one who exclaims, "Yes I am a Sage." But when there is no ego, who is to say what? There is only silence. So again the best for you is to stay in the silence, remain in the silence and forever be free.

Now as I mention so often. Most of the disciples and seekers I always say to you, "Do not necessarily believe what I say." Why should you? Do not accept what I tell you, for you have no idea where I'm coming from. You have to find out yourself what you are. Check yourself out. Understand yourself and you'll understand me. Know yourself.

You cannot know yourself when you're thinking of your problems. When you're thinking of the world. When you're thinking of others. The only way you can really know yourself is when you let go of all the thoughts, all the feelings of separation. When you stop thinking. And that is the only time you will really know yourself. But do not take my word for it. Go within yourself and find out. Understand where you're coming from.

When I thought of sharing this with you I wanted to get another point of view. So you can hear it from someone else. So I looked through the pile of books I've got at home, they're all dusty. And I came up with a "Ma Yoga Bhagvan Sri Ramana by Who?" There is a chapter there that is five pages called "The Sage." And then in the end there is a commentary by a devotee of Sri Rama Krishna. A swami who visited Ramana and he makes his comments. So I think it's apropos if we read this and see what you think.

When you read a book like this, it's best to close your eyes and feel it in your heart, so let's see what Who says about this. Who says? Dana would you like to read Who?

SD: Okay. Unprepared as I am.

(Dana reads Who)

R: Now you know the truth about yourself. You are that Sage. It is you. All these years you believed you are human. You believed you were a person with an ego, desires. But now you can see that you're not that at all. You are absolute reality, effortless pure awareness. That is your true Self.

Feel free to ask questions about this.

SV: Robert, it's not a question but during the reading I'm quite amazed how a person can hold a point of view and it's very logical, what you say, logical and another can hold an almost opposite point of view which also seems logical. And today there is all points of view. (R: Of course.) Many of them quite differently. It's almost like a trap when it comes from the ego and just seems so right, you can believe it all your life.

R: The point of our view comes from our upbringing. The way we were trained. The schools we went to, the churches, the synagogues, mosques we attended, all this has established our point of view. Also from past lives, there is the karmic that we carry over, the samskaras and this also causes our point of view to be what it is. The object, the idea is to transcend every point of view and become perfectly clear and free and don't have a point of view about anything.

SF: I read something the other day that I found bodily fascinating. In the issue of the mountain path, it has several things about Krishna Murti. It tells of a man who was a disciple or devotee of swami Ram Dass, who had led him to believe that everything was in the name and the name was in everything. And he tried to live his life according to this precept. And then he heard of a world renowned Indian philosopher who was teaching that the name means nothing, forget it that it's no good. Anyway, so he...this confused him and he was determined to find this philosopher to see what he had to say about it. And of course Krishna Murti went to Madras where he was supposed to but he never did get to see him.

So he went to Rishi valley but he still couldn't see him. And also to Bombay and finally back to Madras. He was so determined to hear what he'd say that he decided to wait in the garden of this great home where Krishna Murti was staying. And he was standing there and Krishna Murti came out and he bowed to him or whatever they do and Krishna Murti lifted him up by the shoulders and said, "We are both saying the same thing." And this relieved this great yogi who wanted to know what would be said when he asked that question. Do you have any comments?

R: The comment I have is, does it relieve you? (SF: Yes.) Are you free because of it? (SF: No but I have what I think is an accurate intellectual understanding.) As long as it affects you positively then it's good. See it really makes no difference what other people really do. Even what Sages do. You have to become aware that you are the Sage yourself. Within you are all the attributes of Sagehood. It merely requires that you drop your thoughts, you drop your opinions, you drop your values, you drop everything that you were brought up to believe and you enter a state of nothingness. When you enter a state of nothingness you become the universe and you become absolutely free.

We have a tendency to rely too much on the words of others, for we are so well read. We visit so many great teachers, scholars, all types of people. We've been around the world we've seen all kinds of things. Whereas the truth is you may stay where you are and be what you are and simply drop everything and become totally free.

SY: Robert, does self-realization occur when it occurs? If there is nothing anybody can do to achieve it?

R: Yes and no. It will occur when it's supposed to occur but when you come into contact with a Jnani because of your past experiences in another life and it's time for you to do something like this and as you surrender yourself completely then the grace of the Jnani pushes you towards the self. And your inner Self expands becomes your reality and your ego becomes completely destroyed.

SF: I think most of us think that there is some change will be brought about but the fact of the matter as I understand it, there is no change, nothing need be added to what we are now, nothing need be taken away, it's already there.

R: Yes again the only change that I mentioned before, when we're in dreaming, when we're in silent sleep and we are awakened. So now we are awake to this world and the dream world is gone. The world of rest is gone and we are awakened to this world. It isn't strange, as you say, "there is really no change."

For when we were dreaming, in the dream there were people like us, situations that we were involved in, places we went, things we did. And now we have simply awakened to this world where we do virtually the same things. And when you waken from this world you will be in the world of reality.

Where the same things will appear to happen but you will see through them that they are images, you are the screen and the images are superimposed on the screen. And you will not be fooled any longer by the images, that's all. You are awake, you are clear, you are free.

(silence)

Shanti om, peace. Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself for God dwells in you as you. Be happy, I love you.

We have prashad.

DOES KARMA REALLY EXIST?

26th January, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. It's a pleasure being with you again. In Henry's lovely home. The dog-house. We're all in the dog-house.

Does Karma really exist? I know that you can say, "No it doesn't." But as long as you believe that you are a body and mind, as long as you feel the world to be real, you cannot fool yourself. Do not lie to yourself. If the world perturbs you, if people bother you, if things annoy you, if you are reacting to conditions this means that you believe you are a body going through these experiences. And as long as you are going through experiences you are in karma. You are experiencing the karma that put you here as a body. It is only when you have realized the self that there is no karma.

Therefore do not go around telling people that there is no karma, it will give them license to do anything they like. Feeling there is no retribution, there is no effect for their deeds. This is not true as long as you believe you are a body. For there are laws of the universe that respond to your actions. Karma means action. And as long as you believe you are the actor you will have to experience the results of the karma.

So in this particular life you are experiencing the results of not only the karma of this experience but of previous lives. Previous lives also come into effect whenever you believe you are the body. There are only two ways to destroy the karma.

One is to inquire, "To whom the karma comes? Who is experiencing this karma?" and the other way is to surrender completely to God. Totally surrender your life to God. God is within you as you. You therefore surrender everything to the self. Thy will be done. You begin to see that as long as you have God to surrender to, you need not worry, you need not fear. Everything will be alright.

There is absolute love in this universe, absolute peace, absolute joy, absolute freedom. Yet you seem to be experiencing other things. Many people or most people are not really happy. They are happy when they get something they want. They're happy when something happens that is good for them but most of the time, in their hearts they are not really happy. They feel something is wrong someplace. What they're doing is they're picking up the unconscious of the universe, of the world. They are picking up all of the things that are going on in this world. They are feeling these things, unconsciously. So they react accordingly usually in a negative way, feeling sorry for themselves, not understanding that they are complete and total freedom.

Everyone is in their right place. Everything is right with the universe and with your life. Whatever happens to you, whatever you go through good or bad appears to be the karma that you have accumulated through past incarnations, that is your experience today. If you want to free yourself again you do not react to it. You do not react to anything in this world. You act spontaneously. You observe things without reacting. You watch, you look and you always go within. Within is a haven and a refuge from maya, from ignorance. It's beautiful when you can dive within yourself and touch the emptiness, the truth, the reality. Then the reality that you touch becomes the external world for you. For what you see in the world today is simply your reality. Whatever you observe, whatever you see is your reality, your personal reality. You therefore do not try to change the condition you rather know the truth. The truth is; All is well, everything is unfolding as it should. As you dwell in this, the external world changes for you.

Everything in this world, in this universe is in a state of flux. The entire appearance of the universe is not a solid. It is energy, pure energy. Energy appears like people, like animals, like trees, like mountains, like birds, energy appears as the universe. But this energy takes shape in accordance with your thinking. You are the one who moulds this energy into the shape that you desire. You are always in control. The mind appears very strong. The mind controls most people on this earth. The mind accepts the thought, the thought becomes a reality eventually. Thoughts are things. The mind is like the earth, it grows things.

A farmer has two seeds, one seed is nightshade and one seed is corn. The nightshade is a deadly poison. Compare the seeds to your thoughts. Compare the earth to the mind. The farmer plants both seeds, is the earth going to say to the nightshade, "I do not wish to grow you because you're poison?" It will grow the nightshade in the same abundance as it grows the corn. And if you do not dig up the nightshade the roots will become deeper, they will spread out. The plants will become stronger and grow in abundance.

If you inadvertently planted nightshade as a farmer and you've realized what you've done and you wish to grow more corn then you can immediately get a shovel and dig it up. But if you wait for months or years the roots would have spread all over. And you'll need a bulldozer to dig up the poison, the plant.

And so it is with our thoughts and our lives. We allow ourselves to think certain thoughts about person, place and thing. And these thoughts are like seeds. They are planted in sort of our subconscious mind. Eventually our world becomes a product of this mind.

So, the world that you are experiencing and each one of us is experiencing the world differently, is a creation of the mind that you have allowed to do what it wants to. You have not stopped the mind you have allowed it to do what it wants. Consequently it has controlled you completely and it's brought into your life, into your personal world, the world that exists for you today.

How do you get out of this? Again you inquire to yourself, "To whom does this mind come? To whom does this experience come? To whom does this life come?" Realizing that this experience is not you. You are not the person with problems. You are not the person with disease. You are not the person with lack or limitation of any kind. You are not the person who suffers. You are not the person who is experiencing anything. You are not a person.

You begin to see this. You begin to surrender your entire existence, all of your beliefs, your entire life everything. Surrender everything that you are, that you have been. Let go of it. Do not allow the mind to rule you any longer. In reality the mind does not exist, karma does not exist, reincarnation does not exist, none of these things actually exist. But again I have to remind you over and over again if you believe you are the body, if you believe you are the mind, then they do exist, they appear to exist. Awaken from the entire dream. Do not allow this dream of maya to rule you any longer. You are beyond this. You are above this. Pure awareness is your real nature.

This is what satsang is all about. By being here things begin to happen to you inwardly, you grow spiritually. The old habits fall away. The belief that everything is in the external world disappears. You stop believing that external world can hurt you or give you goodness or badness. You first realize all the goodness and badness comes from the self. They both do not exist only the self exists, only God exists, only absolute reality exists. All these things begin to unfold in your experience as you look at this world and do not react to it.

Therefore truly ask yourself the question, "Why do I come to satsang? What am I really doing here?" Some of you come here because there is no other place to go on Sunday. You've seen all the movies. You don't feel like going bowling, so you come here. Some of you come here for entertainment. You want to hear a talk a lecture. And you want to hear jokes.

This guy walks into a psychiatrists office with a parrot on his head and the psychiatrist said, "How can I help you?" And the parrot said, "Can you get this God damn guy off my feet?" (Students laugh) That is what you want to hear is jokes.

SF: I got a joke. A Chinaman walked into a bar with a parrot on his shoulder and the bartender said, "Where did you get that?" And the parrot said, "In China of course there are millions over there." (students laugh)

R: That's about as good as mine. (laughter) (SF: About the same.)

SB: Robert can you the one about the lady who wanted to take her pet dog on the plane to Israel, she was moving? (R: Oh, I forgot how that goes. I wanted to be a stand up comedian.) Sit down comedian. Laugh your way to enlightenment.

R: This guy was working for his father in a garment factory. For ten years he was working for his dad. He finally got into his dad and he said, "Pop I want to be partner. I've been working for you for ten years make me a partner in the business." The old man gets up, stares at him, "Make you a partner you schmuck? You want to be a partner? Do you know what's what?" And the son says, "No I don't know what's what?" So the father says, "Find out what's what and I'll make you a partner."

He leaves the factory and he is going home and he is depressed. He goes into a bar to have a drink and he starts talking to a young lady. And she tells him, "Would you like to come up to my apartment?" He says, "Okay." He goes up to the apartment with her and she says, "Sit down on the couch while I slip into something more comfortable." She comes out in five minutes with nothing on but a big leather belt. And he exclaims, "What this?" and she says, "What's what?" and he says, "If I knew what's what my father would make me a partner." Dumb joke. (students laugh)

Life is a joke. Isn't life a joke? (SF: Yes it is.) But you take it so seriously. You believe in all the things you see. You except all the nonsense of this world. You are not the world. You are total freedom, happiness, joy.

What is going on inside of yourself? What do you feel when you sit in silence? What thoughts come into your mind?

SF: I tried to - on Friday night I sat for twenty nine minutes, I lit candles for atmosphere and I just sat. And all kinds of thoughts, but I didn't think about the thoughts. I let them come and go. And the thing that I was pleased about was that I didn't get sore at myself for having those thoughts. And last night I did about twenty five minutes and because mainly because I didn't get down on myself for having the damn thoughts. (R: Umm.) Is that more or less...

R: That is very good, of course. (SF: It was enjoyable. There were lots of thoughts but it didn't get me down.) That's the whole idea. When the thoughts that come to you no longer bother you, frighten you, annoy you or make you believe something is wrong, that you have to change something, you've come a long way. Your thoughts have no power except the power that you give them. You as consciousness give the thoughts their power. Instead of identifying with consciousness you're identifying with the thoughts. So they become more powerful. They build up the ego. They make you feel as if you are a human being that has to overcome something. That has to do something. That has to make something happen. Yet there is absolutely nothing you have to do. It's strange that most of us believe and think we have to be active. If we're not active we believe something is wrong.

Of course you cannot help being active. You will be active as long as you are in this world with a body. You will do things. Yet you will have to come to the place where you feel that you are not the doer and you're doing absolutely nothing. But it appears as if you're doing something.

If you were only able to realize that the greatest happiness in this world that you can ever desire is already within you. You are already that. There is nothing in this world that can bring you this happiness. It may appear to bring you happiness for a short time then it will change like things do change but the true happiness is you. You are that. The true happiness is within you. Total happiness, total joy, total peace, total love. You are that. That is your real nature.

People run all over the world in search of happiness, in search of peace, in search of love. If they only knew that all they had to do was sit down and dive deep within the self and they will find that everything that they've been searching for is within them.

SF: Sir, we're told that the kingdom of God is within us, actually it's the other way around, is that not so?

R: We're in the kingdom of God? Both are correct. The kingdom of God is within you and you are within the kingdom of God. (SF: It's all rolled into one.) It's all one there is no difference. The only difference is the difference that you see yourself. There is one power, one God, one ultimate reality, one absolute awareness, one nirvana, one sat-chit-ananda they're all synonymous they're all the same and you are that. It's been you all the time. And here you believe you have to read it in a book, that you have to find it in a teaching and you have to find it from a guru but in truth and in reality you've been that all the time. It's you. You are the one.

SL: There is really nothing more to learn?

R: There is nothing to learn at all. (laughter) Who has to learn? The person who has to learn doesn't even exist. It is the ego that wants to learn. The mind wants to learn. The ego believes it has to know knowledge. It has to acquire wisdom. But you are wisdom. Wisdom is your real nature. When the ego is gone then you know because you are the universe. But the one who wants to know is the ego.

SF: So there's something to be brought about sometime in the future, which is nonexistent.

R: The ego deals in the past and the future. (SF: The reality is only one.) There is not even a presence. (SF: That would be something of the mind.) The presence comes from the mind, the mind wants to believe there is a presence. Yet there is no presence because this does not exist. What appears to exist at this moment does not really exist. For the only one experiencing the moment is the ego. For if there were a moment there would have to be another moment and another moment. So there is no moment. You have been learning that you have to exist in this second, in this moment, but in truth you do not have to exist at all. You really don't exist anyway. Yet you feel that you must exist. For you believe if you do not exist you will be nothing.

R: But you're afraid to be nothing. So you want to exist as something. You think nothing will eliminate you completely and you will be nothing at all. But nothing at all is reality. Nothing is good. (students laugh) If you're not nothing you're something and if you're something you're not nothing. When you're something you suffer and go through the trials and tribulations of life. When you're nothing there is no-one left to go through anything. Be yourself, be nothing. Nothing really means of course that you're no-thing. Whatever you can think about you're not that. Whatever comes into your mind. You are not that. Everything has to go.

(silence)

See in Advaita Vedanta there are no profound teachings because there is nothing. There is nothing profound anywhere. There are no special teachings that have any answers for there are no questions.

SF: Teachings would be in the mind then the mind is nonexistent.

R: All teachings come from the mind. (SF: It's beyond the teaching.) Beyond the teaching. (SF: So-called teaching.) There is silence. (SF: Sir?) There is silence. (S:F Silence.) Total quietness.

SV: I forget the name of the gentleman who said to me, but he said something is small and nothing is large because any kind of something has a limitation in it but nothing has no limitation.

R: True.

(Very noisy change of tape)

R: Why don't you recorders make a tape of silence. (SX: They come that way.) Then make a transcript out of it. (SB: Nobody will buy it Robert. Nobody wants nothing.)

(general talk between students)

R: That's a good point that he has. Maybe that something deep inside the person that realizes that nothing exists. And they really buy the tape to listen to nothing.

SB: We're the only ones that does though that's the problem.

R: We all do that subconsciously. But when the ego comes into to play we think we have to put a message on the tape. (SB: You mean buy a music tape and you erase all the music and listen to it the way it came without the music.) Yes. Then you'll hear the real message. Then you'll hear the music of the spheres. (laughter) (SB: But Robert it seems that the mind focusses on nothing into particulars. And focusses to veer the attention. It seems like consciousness is like a diffused nothing until the mind focusses by using the attention. And then it gets into particulars which is emotion instead of no emotion before.) Yet there is no mind to begin with. So how can the mind do all these things? Do not give the mind too much credit. When you think the mind is doing all these things that you just mentioned it appears to be a reality and that keeps you in bondage. Whenever the mind tells you about this and about that whatever they appear to be, immediately transcend it.

SH: There isn't any mind per se that is just a term that is pointing to something that doesn't really exist. There are thoughts which occur and arise and disappear and we call that mind. (R: Umm.) But there is no mind per se?

R: There is no mind per se no. The thoughts are the mind. (SH: That's right.)

SB: But the thoughts are like some kind of energy pulsation. They are so subtle, so delicate that we don't even feel we're doing it and yet if you go into it we are giving it the energy, like consciousness is giving it the energy but it's such a delicate vibration. It's so hard to control it because it's so intimately delicate.

R: This is why you have to inquire, "For whom is there a mind?" And you will find out there never was a mind.

SD: And what, you find out is that we never had any thoughts, either?

R: If there is no mind, there are no thoughts. They both come up spontaneously, mind, thoughts. There is no-one to think. To have thoughts there has to be a thinker.

SH: That's the exact point in which the illusion of the whole of maya springs forth, isn't it? (R: Of course.) Uh-huh. Like a jack in the box, it pops out. (R: It happens instantaneously.)

SV: Sometimes thoughts are okay without the thinker, for instance?

R: Without the thinker there are no thoughts. For who will think? Where will the thoughts come from if there is no thinker. The thinker and the thoughts both simultaneously come together. They're all the same.

SB: Robert when there are no thoughts and no thinker there seems to be just unknown.

R: What's unknown. (SB: I don't know, just unknown and just unknowable. Not only unknown, but unknowable.) There has to be somebody to know the unknown, the unknowable. (SB: But there is a feeling, there's feeling of being.) Of being what? (SB: Just being. There is some kind of feeling, I mean you just close your eyes and you just stop thinking. There is still a certain quality that you kind of unravel in a mystery.) Who does all this? The one who does all this should be destroyed.

SH: Bye bye Bob. (students laugh) Nice to have known you.

SB: It's gone into hiding. Then the ego starts to become a non-doer, you know? Then the non-doing does the doing. You know what I mean?

R: The ego cannot be the non-doer because there is no ego.

SB: Then we try to imitate non-doing so we say, "okay the ego is the cause of all this trouble," so now the ego as a masquerade says, "Now I'm going to do, non-doing or I'm going to do, silence, I'm going to do meditation," but it's still the ego behind there. It's all slimy, it's so subtle. He's doing non-doing now but he is still there doing the whole, the whole illusion is still held together. (R: Who says so?) Maybe I need a brain transplant. (laughter) (R: Brain transplant.)

SZ: One way. (students laugh)

SF: Something I wonder about from time to time is all these words, there is many different ways to pronounce them. A lot of people say, Ramana, a lot of people say Ramana. A lot of people say deviti or devouti or Arjoona or Arjuna and one night I referred to Shiva's counsel as poverty and I was told that it was Pavati. Now I can see there is a damn bit of difference the way they're pronounced.

R: It doesn't make any difference whatsoever. (SF: Sir?) It makes no difference whatsoever. (SF: Thank you, it kind of worried me, because you seemed to jump on me when I called her Poverty.) Who jumps on you?

SF: Me. (laughs) Okay. But that's cool. (students laugh) It doesn't make any difference. Like Vivekananda, Vavaikananda all different pronunciations, but then words are nothing but symbols in the first place, even names are symbols, is that not so? (R: It's like saying, tom-ato or tomatito.) (laughter) I'm from New England so its Tomato. But that makes no difference. I don't lie a word of it. I get nothing for it. So it probably doesn't make any difference. (R: It's only the great scholars that quarrel amongst themselves. How to pronounce a word.) Okay, that's good.

SH: Makes you a great scholar. (SF: No.) (laughter)

R: Catch your feelings, catch your thoughts. Observe your mind thinking and realize there is no need to think. Life is all...(Robert waits for dogs to be quiet)

SF: My understanding is that even the Jnani has thoughts but there is no inclination to follow up on them at all because he knows they are something other than his real nature and doesn't get caught up in them and pays them no attention is that more or less...

R: To somebody else who observes, they think the Jnani has thoughts. But there is no place for the thoughts to come. (SF: Oh I see, no mind? There is something I understand called the working mind which has certain knowledge that is useful like, "Where do you live?" The working mind has to know that, so that would be a thought? This happens spontaneously. (SF: There is no clicker. No dealing with it. No getting into it. It's just spontaneous.)) There are no thoughts to dislodge. There are no thoughts to linger. There are no thoughts that mean anything. There are no thoughts. (SF: Even the knowledge of where you live would not be considered a thought.) It's not a thought, it's just an expression. It's just there, you just do it. There is no thinking about it. (SF: It comes automatic.) We feel and we believe there has to be thoughts to exist, to survive. But not really. The dog has no thoughts yet it exists just the way it is. It is only we human beings who believe we have to have thoughts, that we cannot function without thinking.

SH: You appear to think, but you don't really?

R: Why do you think I appear to think? (SH: Because you're talking. That's the verbal expression of thought.) And you're listening. (SH: That's what you say.) So it appears that I'm talking. But there is nobody talking and nobody listening. (SH: There you go. Now you've got it.) Thanks. (SH: Much obliged.) (laughter)

(General talk and joking)

SH: There is nobody there to think.

SB: Think of all the good things to the ego. All but one. Isn't the ego a major addiction, I mean above alcoholism and drug addiction and isn't that an addiction that the whole human race is involved in.

R: It is the ego that does all these things. The ego appears to be the culprit. (SB: So we're all at it, we're junkies.) Speak for yourself. (SB: I am.) (laughter)

R: So let's play stump the guru. Is there any questions?

SM: No I looked in the basket and there isn't a single one Robert. No questions.

R: There is a message from Fred.

S: Oh you typed it ah. You're supposed to write it.

Q: (Robert reads) Thoughts have been grouped by some people into beta, alpha and theta and one more. With beta the fastest thought in cycles per second and theta is the slowest in cycles per second. Could it be said that theta is nearer to no thought than beta? Some people have trained themselves to able to function in the alpha mode. Some may have reached theta. The whole question here is if one continued further than theta is it possible to reach the no-thought state?

A: (Robert answers) Theta, beta, schmeta. (students all laugh) What is all this?

SH: That's a busy mind. (laughter)

R: We're not interested in psychological jargon. All these things are a part of the mind. The mind comes up with the theta and schmeta and beta. (laughter) It is the mind that gives names to these things. There is no thought to begin with. So you really do not have to reach the no-thought state. You already are in the no-thought state. Find out who says no. Find out within yourself why you need a theta and a schmeta and a beta at all. (laughter) Why do you need all these things? Who needs this? Who has to go through all this? Can't you see that all this psychological jargon keeps us from understanding the truth, keep us in bondage. It expands the ego that's what this does. When we come up with a theta, schmeta, beta, this just makes us think what do we have to do to give it up. When in reality there is nothing to give up and these words do not exist.

SD: So Robert would that also apply to when you've spoken occasionally of the fourth state of consciousness, the others being sleeping, dreaming and waking, there are really is no states of consciousness? (R: Correct.) So you're speaking on a relative level. (R: Correct.) So what would pure consciousness be, that would not be a state but it'd be...

R: Pure consciousness are words. They are words to make us understand that there is something beyond. (SD: To know the unknowable is that why we use words, Robert?) To try to understand the unknowable. And yet there really is no unknowable.

SH: It's like the eye trying to see itself. (R: Yes.) Not possible. (R: Yes.) It's a futile pursuit.

R: This is why it tells us in the scriptures, we have to become like a little child. A little child does not concern itself with theta, schmeta, beta... (students laugh) ...with the unknowable or the knowable, with this, with that, we're trying to get rid of thoughts, a little child just is. And we send the child to school and we fill it's little head with all kinds of ideas, programmed and then it grows up to be like us. (SB: What a pity.) Forget all these terms, be free. Be yourself.

Mary is there anything else in there? (SM: No that's it Robert.)

SB: Robert what is the teachings of the Kashmir Shiva's and they call the ego self, the self-contraction. The contraction in the field of awareness.

R: So what do you want me to do? (students laugh) (SB: Why do they use the word contraction?) Because your body contracts. When it's cold it contracts, when it's hot you expand. (students laugh) (SB: In the mind is there a contraction of the pure awareness? Is that why they use the word contraction?) Your mind is a contraction of pure awareness when you've got a mind to contract but if there is no mind what's going to contract? What you want is a contract. A contract between you and the mind. That you will not resist and you will give yourself up to no-mind and become free.

There are voluminous books available with all kinds of teachings. Who are these teachings for? People want to fill up themselves with life. Life is the universe with all its manifestations, maya. You want to empty yourself out. You don't want more teachings, more book learning. You want to become totally free from these things.

The only way you will ever awaken is when you are totally empty of all the learnings, of all the teachings, empty of everything. Then there is freedom. But as long as you have one iota of knowledge, it will keep you back. Human knowledge is a death knell for spirituality. All of the knowledge has to be transcended.

SF: There could be something called knowledge before it becomes knowledge of anything. Like it's awareness before it becomes aware of anything that it's in your consciousness, before it becomes consciousness before it becomes mindfulness. And all these words are just words.

R: And those are more words that you've just spoken. (SF: More words?) More words. You've added on more words to the confusion. (SF: I'll take them back.)

SH: Thanks pal, you're always helpful. (laughs)

SV: Robert isn't it that there are some expressions, terms, which tend to put the mind in abeyance, like "Who am I?" itself or "Being unborn," or "I am Brahma," or... you know those expressions that tend to...

R: These words have a tendency to make us feel good. They have a tendency to lift us a little bit. (SV: Slow down the thoughts itself?) To slow down the thoughts. But for a complete awakening the words have to go. There are really no words. As an example self-inquiry brings you to the place where you inquire, "Who am I?" but it is not the "Who am I?" that wakes you up. It is the silence after you say, "Who am I?" and you keep still. Then the time comes when the stillness wakes you up and you become free.

SV: I use that expression, "Arising in the Self," and who knows what is arising in the self? However if you put your attention to it little by little your thoughts tend to slow down. You will know what you are talking about, what you want to think about. And the process of thinking slows down... (R: Umm.) ...and whatever happens, to know that means... (R: Yes.) ...there are self intelligence tends to help with this process.

R: These things help to quiet the mind. They make the mind one-pointed. So you can sit and be still. But really all of the teachings in the universe are simply for you to be still. To be quiet. Then everything unfolds by itself. All the teachings, the exercises, the mental confusion, everything is to make us be still. (SV: So there are certain expressions which are valid in this sense?) There are certain expressions that make you still, more so than other expressions as the words in self-inquiry. (pause) Be still and know that I-am God.

R: Catch yourself thinking as you sit in the silence. Catch yourself as you think. And notice the things you're thinking about. Are those things really important? (long pause) Do you believe you will not be able to function if you stop thinking completely? Do you believe you have to think?

SF: You said that, "We do not live but we are lived?" or we don't run the show.

R: Who runs the show? (SF: Whatever you want to call it? God or the Self?) So you're separating yourself from that? Are you not? (SF: Sounds like it's two different things?) Umm. (SF: Is it true?) Are there really two different things?

SD: Is there really a show? (SF: What do you call this?) Illusion.

SH: Maya. Grade A Maya.

R: We get together like this and we realize that there is absolutely nothing in this world, in this universe that has anything to give us or to show us. We are that ourselves. The whole universe is an emanation of our mind. What appears to be the mind produces the universe. Everything in this universe is a projection of your mind. Everything! So there cannot be you and anything else. For there is no room for the real you and anything else. What you really are is all-pervading, omnipresent.

SM: Robert is there a universal mind? Are we all...?

R: There is a universal mind to the extent that you believe there is a universal mind. (SM: Oh, Then I wondered if each one formed this universe out of each mind or is it one mind that forms it?) There is one mind. Acting as inlets and outlets of the same mind. That mind can be called God what you're talking about, absolute reality is the mind you're referring to. But yet this had to come out of us or where would it come from? (SM: That's right, that's right.) We are the knower of universal mind. If we are the knower, we are the creator.

SD: At times you've spoken of collective consciousness. For example when I asked can we agree on anything if we're all creating separate illusions, is that the same mind that you're referring to and on the highest level would you say that neither collective consciousness nor that universal mind exist?

R: Correct! On the highest level there is nothing but the self and that's doubtful too, what we call the Self. We give it a name as the Self. That is the name we give it human speech. (SD: Even though it's no-thing?) We call it the Self for want of conversation. But in truth, in ultimate reality there is nothing that can be the self. There is nothing that can be universal mind.

SD: Are you saying in other words, that there is nothing to which a name can be given? (R: Yes, correct. As long as we can name it, it doesn't exist) Name it and claim it. (laughs)

(students make comments with laughter)

R: So just be happy, forget everything. Stop thinking. Enjoy.

We have some prashad. You like eating pershad or prashad? (students laugh)

FIND YOUR SELF

Robert: Good evening. I trust that everyone is comfortable, peaceful, relaxed. Make yourself comfortable if you're not comfortable. Feel free to stretch out your legs, to relax. Lie down on the floor. Take a nap. Nothing is unholy here. All things come from the same relative plane.

I notice a few new faces here tonight. I welcome you with all my heart, and I ask you not to believe a word I say. Words are just words. Do not take them too seriously. The reality which you are is beyond the words. Think of the words that make you angry, words that make you happy, words that make you fearful.

All these words seem to have power, but in reality you give them power. It's you who give the words power and make them meaningful, so that when somebody says a certain word you may cringe, or even smile or even cry. To think that words have this power over you, whereas in truth words are completely meaningless unless you give them the power.

And who are you? You are effortless pure awareness, absolute reality, consciousness. This means you're totally free. You have no past and you have no future. You just are. You have always been and you always will be. Happiness is your birthright, your nature. Peace, joy, love are your reality. You are that. All is well.

Some of you have been remarking to me the fantastic benefits you are achieving by sitting with me in the silence at the appointed hours of 12 a.m. to 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. You've been making wonderful progress you tell me. But still, you tell me, things come into your mind, thoughts. You cannot stop the thoughts. As you sit in the silence thoughts come, thoughts arise.

Well, if thoughts didn't arise you would not have to sit in the silence. The reason you're sitting is because the thoughts still control you. If you transcended the thoughts, and you've transcended the I-thought, there would be no one to sit. No one would be left. You would be absolute reality.

Therefore when you sat you would not really be sitting. You would appear to be sitting, but you would know beyond a shadow of a doubt that there is no one to be anything. You are not the body, you are not the mind, you are not the doer. Therefore when you discover who you are you find there is absolutely nothing to do. Yet you are doing everything.

When you sit in the silence with me at those appointed hours, what should you do? You should practice self-inquiry, inquiring, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who am I?" Practice the I-am meditation. Of course you should do these things in order for them to bring you into the silence, where there is no thought and there is no mind.

Some of you ask me further if you may envision my image when you sit in the silence. When you envision my image, do not think of me as Robert. You may envision my image, this is good, or the image of any deity you choose, whether it be Ramana Maharshi, Buddha, Jesus, Moses, anyone you would choose, but realize that this image is not a person. That's very important. This image is consciousness. It is the self. It is your self with a capital S. It is not a body as it appears.

Consequently, when you envision the form of a deity of any kind, the form to you is the all-pervading self, omnipresence. You are seeing your self, in other words. By using the form of a deity in the silence, and keeping your attention on that deity, you are seeing God as your self. You are feeling within your heart the Buddha, sat-chit-ananda, nirvana, and this is all-pervading. This is your self.

While I am talking to you, a word came to me, and I will follow it through. The word is repentance, which is interesting. When we think of the word repentance we think of somebody walking along with a sign on Hollywood Boulevard, saying, "Repent, the end is near." When we think of the word repentance we think of the word in biblical terms, perhaps "You should repent," meaning to remove your sins and not be an evil doer. This is a negative connotation.

It comes to me that repentance really means to return, to return. To return to what? To return to the source. And I'm not speaking of apple sauce. To return to God, which is within your heart. To return to absolute reality, to watch, to behold, to lift your eyesight into the heavens, which means to awaken to your self, to return to that from whence you came. And you may only do this by giving up your self, giving up your ego, surrendering the mind, transcending the body, becoming totally absolutely free of bodily consciousness. This is what repentance means.

We're not talking about changing your life, thinking about the so called bad habits you may have, and trying to remove them. You cannot do these things because you're working on the relative plane. It becomes very difficult. When you try to remove a bad habit a new one comes to take it's place. What we're talking about here is to lift your vision higher, to forget about your habits and your mistakes, your frustrations, things that have happened in your life. Drop it. We're talking about raising your consciousness to the absolute plane of reality, where there are no habits, no world, no universe, no person, no doer, where there is only I am that I am, your true self. You are that.

As you begin to identify with reality the lower forms will take care of themselves. They will take care of themselves because they do not exist to begin with. It's strange for me to say that all of your habits, all of your pre-conceived ideas, all of your concepts, do not exist. They have never existed.

Where do they come from?

It's like the water in the mirage. When you go to the desert you see a mirage. It appears real to you. You try to grab the water and there is sand. There is no water. But you've seen it. You experienced it and you would fight for it. And so it is with life. So it is with life in the big city. Everything appears real. Everything appears as if it has power, as if something is happening. Yet in truth and reality they do not exist. This has been my experience.

I'm not sharing with you something that I've read in a book, or something I heard from a teacher somewhere. I'm sharing with you my experience. There is no world. You are not a sinner. You have never done anything wrong in your life. You are pure, absolute reality. You are effortless, choiceless pure awareness. You are the light.

Have you ever thought of yourself in this way? All of your life you have believed you are a body, going through experiences. Yet if you look at your life, you are not the same person you were twenty years ago, the same person you were when you were a baby. When you were conceived you were no larger than the size of a pinhead. Look at you now.

Can anything be real?

You came from absolute nothing, and now you're sitting here with a certain amount of years to you. You have arms, you have legs, you have a head, you have internal organs. And all of these things came from nothing, from no where. This means your true nature is nothing.

You are no thing, yet you appear as if you are something. You appear as if you have a life. Somebody told you to go get a life, and you got one. But what are you going to do with it? No matter what you do with your life, it's going to end, is it not? Or so it appears. You have so many years left on this earth and you're gone. All the pride that you have, the ego that you have, everything you've worked for, everything you fought for, everything you've believed in, is kaput, gone, nothing.

So what is the purpose of everything? Why do you exist? To die? Find out. Find out for yourself. Find the truth for yourself, for no one can really give it to you. You are the power. You are the glory. You are the universe.

You are not what you appear to be, but will you not find out? Ask yourself. When you truly ask yourself, "Who am I?" the answer will eventually come. You will know. But yet most of you are concerned with your material life, and this is what keeps you back from finding yourself. You are concerned with your humanhood. You're concerned with the clothes you are going to wear. You're concerned with the people in your life. You're concerned with your job. You're concerned with the world situation. You're concerned with politics, and I could go on, and on and on.

It is written in the scriptures, "Take no thought of what ye shall eat, what ye shall wear, or anything at all, but think ye first of the kingdom of God, and all of these things shall be added unto you." That is a very wise statement. First find yourself. First awaken to yourself. Then see if you'll be concerned with your body. When you understand who you are you will see if you'll be concerned with politics, or with the universe, or with anything else. Find out who you are first. Find yourself.

Do not go around trying to straighten out your life. You can never straighten your life out, for that's the way life is. All of the things that are happening in the world today, have happened before, and before that, and before that, for millions of years. There have been many civilizations on this earth. They came and they went. And now you are here believing that you can make a difference.

You hear that so much on TV. "I can make a difference." What about you can make a difference? You are dust in the wind. We like to attach so much importance to ourselves. Our ego is so enlarged. We want to think we're somebody. Remember, after you die, within twenty years or so everybody will forget everything about you. You won't even be remembered. Your children will have children and they will have children, and you will not even be a memory.

Therefore I ask you to find out, "Who am I? Who am I, really? What is my real nature? I couldn't possibly be this body that changes, changes, changes all the time, and then dies. And if I look at the world, the same thing is happening to the world. It keeps changing, changing, changing, never the same." And we go along with it. Never realizing what is happening, we become befuddled, confused. We're trying to make some kind of sense out of livingness, but it has no sense, for you are not whom you appear to be.

Consequently, you have to find out who you are by following the I-thought to the source. You have to inquire within yourself, "To whom do all the thoughts come? To whom does the world come? To whom does my ego come? To whom does the universe come? To whom does God come? To whom does everything in this whole universe come?" And you will realize very soon, "It comes to me. I feel it. I think it. I perceive it. I enjoy it sometimes. I fear it. But I see and feel and think all these things."

This now gives you an idea of what is going on. You begin to understand that the I is experiencing this world. Not you, but the I. You are not going through these experiences, but the I is.

Who is this elusive I? Where did this I come from? Who gave it birth? How did it arrive?

You ponder all these questions, and you finally ask, "But who am I? Where did the I come from?" Yet you never answer that question. You sit in the silence inquiring, "Where did the I come from?" And as thoughts keep coming to you, you inquire, "To whom do they come? Who is thinking these thoughts? I am? Who am I?" This is really the highest way to remove all doubt and set you free.

Let me remind you again. Do not try to change your thoughts, or to change your life style, or to work on your bad habits, or to try to remove fear, and the rest of it. Rather you lift your vision high, to the highest, by following the I-thought to its source. And one day you will discover something interesting. Your body will appear to melt, to dissolve.

The world, the universe will appear to dissolve. Your God will appear to dissolve. Everything you stood up for, everything you have believed in, all of your thoughts, your feelings, your emotions, will dissolve. And you will find yourself as omnipresence, all-pervading consciousness. You will discover that you've always been the ultimate reality, ultimate oneness. You are the I am. You are free.

You will appear the same. You will look the same. You will not be able to explain this to your friends or family, but you will become one of the few that have transcended the world. There will no longer be an ego or mind or a thinker left. You will know and experience unalloyed happiness, total bliss. No thing will ever disturb you again. Yet you will not sit still. The body will appear to move and do things. Yet you will know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you are not the body. You have awakened. You have become free.

One of the methods we use to make our minds one-pointed so that we may ultimately annihilate the mind, is the "I-am" meditation. This has helped virtually thousands of people throughout the world. And if you practice this diligently, preferably when we're sitting together in the silence, between the hours of 12 a.m. to 3 a.m., and 6 a.m. to 9 a.m., You will see amazing results ensue. We're going to practice this now, so that you may practice by yourself at home.

THE SEARCH BEGINS WITHIN YOURSELF

2nd February, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It's a pleasure to be with you again this lovely Sunday afternoon. You have nowhere else to go. You've seen all the movies. You've gone bowling. You're bored with life so you're here. It's good to see you anyway. No matter what you do, where you come from. When you come in here you're brand new. The past is dead. Yesterday does not exist. You are here free at last.

I have a dog by the name of Dimitri, who takes me for a walk every morning. As soon as I open the door he runs out while I have him by the chain, by his leash. And he starts running to the park and I run with him. He gets to the park and starts eating grass. (students laugh) He thinks he's a cow. (laughter) He eats tons of grass. (laughter) Then he runs around the park and goes back home and throws up. He does this everyday. (laughter)

So I was thinking about this. Isn't this like most of us? We become involved with the world. We never learn. We go through certain situations, certain conditions again and again and again and again. We repeat the same things over and over again. We are told not to get involved in the world physically, yet we do. We go through situations, conditions they hurt us, we take a rest and do it all over again. Some of us never learn.

I tell you every week that the world is maya. Do not take the world seriously. Do what you do in the world but mentally keep your mind in the Self, in God. Be in the world but not of the world. But some of you do not listen. You allow the world to show you its tricks. To make you depressed or to make you happy. To make you sick or to make you well. To make you rich or to make you poor. And you respond accordingly. You become angry upset, you repeat the same things again and again, same situations.

When will you learn that you live in a world of constant change. This world has no support, no substance. It has no beginning, no end, no existence. Brahman is the world. The world is no-thing without Brahman, without God. Brahman is not a person, place or thing. Brahman is something that cannot be explained. Brahman is your Self.

Yet you do not believe this. You believe you are a frail human being who has to go through life's experiences like a leaf in the wind. Being blown in all directions, as if you have no control. Yet you are the Master, you are the one. There is only you. Yet you do not believe me. You keep believing that you are a person with experiences. And as long as you believe this the experiences become stronger and stronger and stronger. You find sometimes it's impossible to break away. For you have allowed the world and its manifestations to totally control you. To push your buttons, to make you react a certain way.

When you see something that you call good you become happy. When you see something that you call bad you become unhappy. The world has become your Master. Yet in truth the world has no power of its own. The power comes from you. You are the one that says, "This is right and this is wrong," or "This is good and this is bad. This is up and this is down."

When you realize that there is no up and down. There is no good or bad. There is no right or wrong. This sometimes maybe dangerous for me to say. When I say there is no right or wrong or good and bad for it can mean to you, to give you license to do all kinds of crazy things in this world. Cause problems to others.

Yet this is the role that you are playing in the world. We live in a world of duality. When there is total peace in the world somebody will come along and create a war, in order to obliterate peace. When there are wars and man's inhumanity to man in the world somebody comes along and tries to make peace.

There is no evenness in this world. You can never have total peace or total chaos. There appears to be two powers and one is always contradicting the other. Look at your personal life. Things are going well for a while something happens, seems to pull the rug from under your feet and you become upset. Things are terrible in your life for a while, something comes along and changes it. And things are pretty good for a while and so it is all through your life.

The time comes when you get disgusted with this whole game. The time comes when you want to search for eternal happiness, for infinite peace that doesn't change. The search begins within yourself. You begin to examine yourself, diligently. You begin to question yourself. And the answers come out of your self. They are not necessarily the answers you've been looking for but the answers come. As you search deep within yourself you are led to the right book, to the right teacher, to the right circumstances, the right experience. You begin to unfold. You begin to look at this world in which you live and you see it differently for the first time.

You see the world as an image projected by your self. The world begins to have less meaning to you. You begin to drop many of the things you've been into. Many of the situations, conditions that you've been involved in. You let go of them. You make your life simple. The simpler your life becomes the happier you begin to feel.

There is no one any longer that can upset you or to push your buttons. To make you feel superior or inferior. When you get this far you begin to search further within yourself, go deeper and you contact the I. The wisdom within you tells you that all of these years you've been trying to exchange external conditions, trying to remove certain aspects of the world from your life. When all the time it is the I that should have been removed. For it is the I that feels the conditions. It is the I that causes you to do all the things you do.

Your belief system, your preconceived ideas, your concepts are really all I. That is all they are is, I. They have no validity of their own. They have no power of their own.

They're simply I. When you realize this, a great weight has been lifted from you. For you come to the conclusion that there is nothing you have to change in the world for all the world is attached to I, is a part of I. Therefore you begin to spend your time in removing the I, transcending the I, annihilating the I, you look for every conceivable way to kill the I. For wisdom tells you, when the I is gone everything else will also be gone. You therefore begin to find the cause of the I. Where does this I come from? You search for its source.

When Sages of the past have sat under a tree and pondered this situation they realized that this I doesn't even exist but yet in order to become free we must still try to eliminate it for we think we are the body and the mind. Therefore we have to work on the I. There have been those people who have been awakened without this. And those people have become enlightened without going through all of this. Yet most people, most Sages who have become realized have used the procedure, the process of removing the I.

So the Sages sat under the trees pondering this question. Where does the I come from? The I that tells me I'm human, I am a man, I am a woman, I am sick, I am well, I am happy, I am sad. They ponder the situation, where did this I come from? They came to the conclusion that the centre of the being is the heart, not the physical heart but the spiritual heart. The centre of the universe, what we call God, reality, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda, is the spiritual heart on the right side of the chest. This is your true Self, this is what you really are. You are the spiritual heart. But to make it easy for us the Sages have determined that the spiritual heart is a place on the right side of your chest.

Now when you are asleep there is only the heart that is present which is the Self. Nothing else exists. There is no universe, there is no world, there's no others, when you are in deep sleep there is only the heart, the Self. But as you awaken somehow, what we call the I-thought begins to leave the heart centre and enters the brain. And you become cognizant of the world and the universe and your body.

Prior to this you are not aware of the body, the universe or the world. You were in deep sleep nothing at all existed. But as you awaken the I becomes active and in a split second it is in the brain and you say, "I am awake." Just the thought of you saying, "I am awake," makes the wise one realize, it is the I that is awake. If I were really awake I will not be cognizant of my body as reality and the world as reality.

Therefore the I is awake. We try to catch the I by not allowing it to go into the brain. Yet it happens so fast it's most difficult to do. Therefore we go the other direction. We try to follow the I-thought back to its source. We follow the I-thought back from whence it came. This is the job we have to do to awaken to the real Self.

The I-thought doesn't even exist to begin with. Yet as long as we believe we are the body do not fool yourself. Do not think that you are not the body and then think that you are not the body and act as if you are not the body. When you are not the body you will know. This is why everybody has to practice following the I-thought back to the source.

One returns to the source, you awaken and it's just like the deep sleep stage only you're awaken you are not sleeping. It's the same as being in deep sleep only you are conscious. You are conscious as the Self, as omnipresence, as infinity. You do this by inquiring, "Who am I? What is the source of I?" And you allow the I-thought to return to its source.

This is what satsang is all about, returning to the source. There are those of us who are really working on ourselves and making progress. There are those of us who do absolutely nothing and have problems. It is your life. The only way you are ever going to be happy is by removing the I from your consciousness, from your life and awakening to the truth.

It is very simple, the I-thought is the cause of all your problems, nothing else. There is nothing else wrong wherever you look whatever you see is because of the I-thought. No thing in itself has any validity.

In the beginning stages years ago, centuries ago, the great Sages came up with the idea to get to the I-thought everything else must be negated. By saying, "Neti-neti, not this, not this," whatever you see, whatever you observe you realize that this is not the truth, this is not the truth, until you get down to the I and you eliminate the I.

But it's been revealed to certain Sages there is a faster way and that is to get right to the I and remove the I. For all of the things of this world are attached to the I. Therefore you don't have to take the hard way by saying, "Not this, not this," and taking each day as it comes, you'll never be finished. There are billions of things, you'll keep saying, "Not this, not this," continuously. It'll never end. Therefore you realize that all these things are attached to this I. And all you really have to do is work on the I to eliminate the I and you will be free.

This is what satsang is all about. To totally eliminate the I-thought. Many people ask, "What are our goals. What is the purpose of satsang?" we have no goals and there is no purpose. It is total freedom. There can never be rules and regulations in satsang or this would not be satsang if there were. There has to be total freedom. It is up to you to see the situation and to become free. You therefore do not come here to get involved in politics or in management or anything else. You come here to remove the I-thought. Simple, remove the I-thought and you will be forever free. It is only the I-thought you have to contend with nothing else. There is really nothing else you have to do.

How many times a day do you say, "I?" You say it continuously. Begin to catch yourself. Begin to see what you're saying, "I feel angry. Who feels angry?" Your real nature can be never be angry. "I feel upset. Who feels upset?" Your real nature can never feel up-set. "I feel bored, I feel this, I feel that." When you are living out of your real nature it makes no difference where you are, whom your with, what's going on in the world, everything is alright. For the peace you're looking for comes from within yourself. That happiness you're searching for is you. You do not have to go out somewhere to find happiness. You do not have to go to a certain place to find peace. It appears that way. It appears as if certain circumstances that are not peaceful you say to yourself, "I have to get away from here so I can be more peaceful." So you get away and you appear to be more peaceful but for a while only.

Sooner or later the chaos and the confusion that are within you will take you over once more. And wherever you go you'll feel the chaos and the confusion. Changing environments will not help you. Changing family members will not help you. Only by removing the I will you become totally free.

Therefore I'm addressing each one of you individually. What do you do with your life everyday? Do you allow your thoughts your emotions to overwhelm you? To control you, to lead you. To make you think something is wrong someplace. Nothing can ever happen to you, no thing can ever hurt you. If you're trying to protect yourself, or feel safe by putting burglar alarms on your house, these things cannot help you at all. Karmically whatever is supposed to happen to you will happen to you. Your job is to overcome everything. To transcend everything. To realize that, "I am that I am." To leave the world alone. There is nothing to fight and nothing to fear in this world. But most of you do not believe this. You think you have to change things. You believe you have to make things happen. If you do not make things happen things will break down nothing will be right.

Who told you this? The only thing that will break down is your ego. Yet some of you will not allow this to happen. You will fight for your ego, you will protect your ego at all cost for you are afraid to let go. You do not know what is on the other side. You think if you let go you will be a wimp or a coward. You think all your good will be taken away from you, this is impossible. The planets spin in their orbits, the sun shines, the flowers grow. All these things happen without confusion, without chaos, everything is unfolding as it should but you come along and want to change things. You want to make this a better world in which to live. The one who has created this world knows how to take care of it. It does not need your help, thank you. Find yourself first then see if you want to change the world. Find yourself first then see if you want to change your life. Find yourself first then see if anything is missing from your life. It all begins with you. It all begins with you. You are the one!

(silence)

Do we have any questions in the question box?

SH: You've reduced everyone to silence. (R: Reduced them to nothing.) Same thing.

R: Anyone like to say anything?

SV: I started to write a question and you already said the answer.

R: Ask another question. (SV: Right, same thing. Then you've got to get rid of the answer.) And you keep going and going. There is no end. (SV: That's forever going, stop going.)

SE: Robert what do you mean by the I-thought?

R: The I-thought is absolutely nothing that exists but appears to exist as something which keeps you away from being enlightened. Something that appears as the world, the universe, God, the body, the mind. It is I who perceives this. I see these things. When I look outside what do I see. Do I see God? Do I see the Self or do I see the trees, the flowers, the sky, the ocean? If I see the flowers, the sky, the ocean this is an appearance and I sees these things. It is a thought in the mind called, "I." If I weren't present there would be nobody left to see all these things. Therefore the I is responsible for being human. The I appears as the world in all its manifestations. So in order for a person to awaken to the true self that he or she is consciousness the I-thought has to be quenched, removed, destroyed.

The I-thought never really existed but as long as we believe that we are the body then there is an I-thought because I am the body. That is what we say. I am the mind. I see the world. This is the I-thought. Yet all Sages have told us that the world is a dream it's an illusion. It does not exist as it appears. It is because of the I-thought that the world came into manifestation as an appearance. So again as we remove the I-thought from consciousness we become completely free and liberated and we are no longer Ed or anybody else.

SE: So there is no I-thought, what there is, is self referring? And that process has to be ended? When you refer things to the body-mind and you say, "I see that. I believe that." When you're self-consciousness?

R: Same thing you can say that yes. There is no I-thought and there is really no one to prefer anything because the I-thought makes you prefer. It makes you prefer this against that, that against this. This is good and this is bad. I prefer to have a million dollars than to be broke. I prefer to be healthy than to be sick. This is all the I-thought. The I-thought tells us all of these things. But there is no one to be sick, there is no one to be healthy, there is no one to be poor, there is no one to be rich. No one like this exists at all. It is the I that makes it appear so. But again in reality there is no I. There never was an I. There is no person. There is only the self which is ineffable, which is total freedom.

SE: Why do you tell people to seek the I-thought if there is no I-thought? It's a waste of time?

R: It's a waste of time to talk. It's a waste of time to say anything. But yet we have to give you an idea of what appears to be happening. All of these things appear to be happening. It's all an appearance. As long as you believe in the appearance by feeling the world to be real in any way that you feel the world to be real, through happiness, through anger, through emotions, through controlling your emotions. All those things are false. But if you're involved in those things then the I-thought is real for you. The I is real only to the person who believes they are the body and going through experiences. Therefore you cannot say that the I doesn't exist for these people because they're feeling all the pressures, they're feeling the pull of the world. They're feeling all the things of this world. So we tell them, remove the I and the world will disappear.

I can say right now there is no I. I doesn't exist. But as long as you feel you are the body and you feel things that the body feels then the I does exist for you so you cannot fool yourself and say it does not exist when you're feeling the world. So the method is to work on the I-thought by following it to the heart, when it sinks in the heart everything disappears.

SD: I think that was the main point. You're really not stressed to seek the I-thought but to seek the source of the I-thought. And when you follow it to its source it just dissolves.

SE: But how can you seek the source of something that doesn't exist? If the I-thought doesn't exist how can you seek the source of something that doesn't exist?

SD: Paradoxical, a divine paradox. But when you trace it to its source and find that it dissolves you realize that neither the source nor the I-thought exist of their own. But I have a question about that, you've talked about trying to trace the I-thought back from the brain to the spiritual heart but I do not understand this process, I mean do you literally visualize a thought going from the brain back to the heart?

R: No. You simply inquire, "Who am I?" That's how you trace it. But... (SD: When you talked about making the choice - you said it's hard to catch the I-thought in the morning, but if you can trace it back to the heart...) Exactly you trace it back by asking, "What is the source of the I? From whence did it arise? Where did it come from?" And that is tracing it back. By inquiring, "Who am I? Where does the I-thought come from?"

SY: Isn't seeing it, what you just said, obscuring yourself?

R: You cannot see it. There is nothing to see. But what you feel is the world. The world is the I-thought. So when you feel the world you feel your mind, you feel something then you ask, "To whom does this come? Who is feeling this?" That's how you trace it back.

SE: So who is feeling it, does not refer to the I, it refers to the awareness?

R: The awareness is your real nature. (SE: What?) Awareness is what you really are. (SE: Yeah.) This is your real nature but when you don't know that, when the world is caving in on you. When you are self contracting and everything is pushing in on you then you have to use this method to remove these things.

SY: If awareness is functioning, it isn't always functioning but you can inquire, it can function then one sees, the I is false.

R: Awareness is always functioning but we don't see it because we're involved in the world. So what we do is we use the I-thought to remove the obstacles so we can be back in our natural state of awareness. Awareness is always functioning, it is always our true nature. There never was a time when it was not. It's always available. But the world the maya has become real to us. We call the maya the I-thought. (SY: Yes but in awareness there is not a feeling that's aware?) In awareness only awareness appears. (SY: It doesn't function?) In awareness nothing functions, (SY: No.) Just awareness, pure awareness.

SY: A bit of awareness allows a certain unfolding which is restoring a natural way or — how shall I say it? — the I is not functioning and awareness is functioning or is being present it doesn't allow the human being that process to functions in the conditions anymore. Conditions are being kind of removed.

R: When awareness is functioning there are no conditions. (SY: No, but there is a different action there. There is pure beautiful action isn't it? Call it compassion, love?) Compassion and love is part of the awareness... (SY: RIght.) ...and that is the awareness. That happens by itself when everything else disappears. (SY: Yes.) That's a good point. When we look for compassion, we look for love, we look for peace, these things are our true nature. By removing the other they will shine by themselves.

SY: But that one can actually, a little bit by what you said that I like very much, not by directing others but one can without criticizing or without judging somehow give the others comfort on that level, from that awareness level. (R: Umm.) For once you see exactly what is wrong or right, in that sense, but it is not right and wrong but it is seeing what is obscured action and I action and reaction innocently and what is not. From that awareness level one can always see that, from where that the human being functions. But that is conditioning functioning or it is I functioning or is it from the pure source of the self which means awareness.

R: In a way this is true, when you are in a state of pure effortless awareness. (SY: Yeah.) There is noone left over to see anything. There is no functioning to be done, there is just pure awareness yet your body will continue to do beautiful work. And your body will do whatever it came here to do.

SY: But it does function in the human being but as unconsciously, it feeds through.

R: Well if it functions in awareness... (SY: yeah.) ...then we're giving qualities to awareness. But awareness has no qualities. Awareness is so ineffable... (SY: Yeah.) ...it is beyond words. There is no way to explain it. It is something above and beyond anything you can ever imagine with our finite mind. Therefore we cannot even talk about awareness. It's like the Hebrew who spell God, G dash d (G - D), they never mention the term "God" because it's beyond comprehension. (SY: Um-hm.) Awareness is like that. (SY: Okay.) There is no way to say that it does this or it does that. It is beyond the realm of doing. (SY: Yeah.) There is noone left to do anything. As long as we believe we are the doer then we're not in awareness.

SY: Isn't it then that which is conscious in that awareness. Isn't it also like compassion or kindness or giving or sharing, whatever. There's no quality but it seems like a conscious out of its own original power or what shall I say, yes power. And compassion is just compassion, it has no attributes but it functions out of that empty open spaciousness. We give names to it but it could not function otherwise without compassion.

R: Yes this is true. You become a very compassionate person. (SY: Yeah.) A very loving person. But the awareness itself is even beyond those qualities. (SY: Yes, right.)

SB: Robert how does our everyday awareness when we're not functioning as the mind, when we're functioning as just consciousness and the mind is silent. How does that everyday pure awareness relate to the actual consciousness itself the pure awareness of realization.

R: The pure awareness of realization is itself all there is. There is nothing else but pure awareness of realization. You cannot function as a human being and yet think that you are aware or that you are realized. The humanity has to go. All the human traits have to be destroyed and pure awareness will function by itself.

SB: But right now I can be looking at you and my mind can be silent but I'm not realized yet. How does it relate, how to experience it? The mind can be silent we've all experienced silent mind for certain periods of time and yet this realization doesn't come up.

R: Because the mind has not been completely destroyed. The mind has to be completely destroyed. The ego has to be completely destroyed. When that happens then awareness comes by itself because your true nature is awareness, that is what you really are. But you seem to be covered up by the dream world that pushes on you and contracts on you and causes things to happen to you. All of these things have to be given up, totally surrendered. Then consciousness, awareness by itself will shine forth. (SB: But your mind functions also when you want it, right?) There is no mind. (SB: You say it's destroyed, but you can still use it after realization?) You are not really using your mind. It is awareness that is functioning. (SB: But can't you form a thought in your mind?)

SH: There is no you left.

SB: I know there is no you but a thought is formed isn't there a thought? So you would have to think what am I going to buy at the groceries?

R: You become spontaneous. You know what to do in the grocery. You buy whatever is necessary but you don't hold the thoughts, they are not solidified. They are not inside of you. (SB: You are not identified with them but you can still form them?) You don't really form thoughts, they are not thoughts. It is consciousness itself. It is awareness itself that does everything. You are not involved in it anymore. You have nothing to do with it.

SY: And it is all comprehensive in a way isn't it?

R: It's all comprehensive yes. (SY: It can see the cause and effect at the same time?) Yes it is cause and effect. (SY: Yeah. Then one can be spontaneous. One doesn't have to think anymore and one sees on that level kind of horizontal level, anything can, all aspects.) The only thing that I disagree with you is when you say something is seen. You see something. The seeing eye is gone. (SY: Yeah. Then I should say, comprehensive... ??? ...then one can act spontaneous?) Yet when you go into these things like you are, to be spontaneous, to be all comprehensive, it's as if somebody has to become that. You just function. (SY: Yeah.) You function... (SY: Just to describe something.) True.

SK: Robert on the subject of - I don't know if this relevant to you but could you say — perhaps less objection rather than being deluded into breaking up the unbreakable into alleged cause and effect we just don't do that or that isn't done?

R: No at the state of enlightenment there is no cause and effect. Cause and effect is for the world. (SK: Right, rather than seeing them as the same would it be perhaps less wrong to say you're no longer deluded into artificially breaking things up into so called cause and effect?) You could say that. (SK: Because none of that occurs?) If you'd like to say that you can say that. (students laugh) (SK: You didn't like that enough so I'll probably never say that again.) (more laughter)

SG: How does what you're saying tally with some of the teachers that say to be enlightened there is nothing wrong with experiencing all the modifications of consciousness or the Zen Masters who say that it's actually a heresy to have the absolute and then we have the functioning of the absolute, and heresy to not deny the functioning of the absolute. Or you have Ramana Maharshi saying that to the unenlightened the world is adapted or the form of the world, or God is adapted to the form of the world or to the enlightened person the form of the world is adapted to God. It's not denying the form. What I'm getting from you is you're denying the form, you are denying what it is that we are seeing.

R: Would you deny your dream. If you were having a dream and the dream so real to you and you wake up and it never existed. But while you're dreaming you do not deny it. You see the dream as real because you're experiencing certain feelings, emotions and you're going through experiences. And you are talking about spiritual life in your dream just as you are now. It's all a dream and when you wake up it never existed. It has no validity. It has no substance. It never really existed. Only the reality exists. It's the same thing. It's all part of the dream.

SG: But if you're in a grocery store and even though you're functioning spontaneously there is still a busyness thinking of the items that you're buying.

R: Of course. This is a paradox. You buy the items you need, you live accordingly but there is no one home. (students laugh) (SG: Are you literally in another dimension simultaneously or have you completely integrated what apparently is this dream to everybody else?) There are no other dimensions and there is nothing to integrate. (laughter) There is just pure being. And it appears to the ajnani as if somebody is doing something. The ajnani sees the world from his own pure objective. Where he is looking from his own purity wherever his purity is. The ajnani looks at the world and sees joy, sees happiness, sees sorrow, sees unhappiness, sees people working for peace. This is from the view of the ajnani.

But for the Jnani, those things have been completely transcended. There is no one left to see those things. It's like images on the blackboard. You draw images on the blackboard, you erase them, you draw other images so it is with life. Life goes on, but to the Jnani they are images on the screen of life. They have no validity, they have no fluidity. It's like a dream. (SG: Yet at the same time you're still seeing me sitting here and hearing me asking questions. Is that correct?) That is how it appears to you. (students laugh) That is how you see it. (laughter)

ST: Robert when you started your talk you were talking about the perennial or continual conflict between chaos and confusion and peace and quiet. Many people, like the discussion we had the other day, the average person cannot possibly understand what makes a Geoffrey Daman or a Charles Manson. What is there in the interpenetration of dimensions that makes something so heinous, so lacking in compassion that it fails to understand - I'm not saying this right - what makes a Charles Manson?

R: We do. Our own mind. We create him in our own image. It is we who see all of these things. As we develop ourselves, as we raise our consciousness and go higher those things will be unnecessary. But as long as we are where we are, we will always create a Hitler or Charles Manson, these people are part of this world of duality. When you have a world of duality, you have to have people like that or you wouldn't have a world of duality. There couldn't be just total peace in this world. For it will be a contradiction. The world and the universe is a universe and a world of total duality. Good and bad, right and wrong, happy and sad, Manson and St Francis. Everything exists in the world of duality.

What we're doing in satsang here, in Advaita Vedanta, in this teaching, is to break away from the whole thing. To break out of the shell of duality where there is a Manson and where there is a St Francis. Where there is a Hitler and where there is a Delai Lama. They are both part of the world of duality. We're breaking away from this, we're breaking out of this shell. We're coming into a completely new understanding. That there is no world that contains a Charles Manson or a Delai lama. There is only pure effortless choiceless awareness. And this is so ineffable there is no way to describe it. It is something beyond anything that you can ever think with your finite mind. The finite mind can never comprehend the infinite.

This is why the only thing we can do is to turn within and find out this truth for ourselves. And until we do there will always be a Charles Manson, a Hitler, a Napoleon, a Genghis Khan, a St Francis, a Jesus, a Delai Lama and so forth. There will always be those types of people in this world but we are to break out of it. We are to go beyond that. To go to the place where nothing like this ever existed. There is nobody born like this, nobody dies like this, there is no coming, there is no going, there is just plain nothing.

SD: So are you saying when we are aware and awake we would realize in our dimension, or of St Francis exist at all?

R: Well you wouldn't even have those things come into your mind. You realize that the world doesn't exist so they couldn't exist. Again we go back to the dream state. In the dream state you dream about St Francis, you dream about Hitler, you dream about Charles Manson, all those things appear to be happening in the dream state until you awaken. When you awaken they never happened. You do not say about a dream, "That was the past and this is the future." There is no past or future, it's a dream. A dream that is out of our mind. The dream came out of your self. (SD: So they would both be part of maya?) Yes.

SH: The mind spins all that?

R: The mind spins the web. (SH: Only an apparent source...) Of course. (SH: ...that the spiders spinning it.) Exactly.

SD: The holocaust and everything? (SH: Everything is in the mind.)

R: But you can't say this to people who are suffering from the holocaust or people who have been through all kinds of horrible dastardly experiences. They will not understand this. This is why Ramana Maharshi, Shankara tells us that Advaita Vedanta is only for certain people, mature souls, who have been through the mill. And they've studied many yoga techniques and Zen and all kinds of teachings in past lives perhaps and have advanced to this state where they can now see it's all nonsense.

SY: And the Delai Lama says it is more important to yearn about the cause and effect, the law of karma than about the Oath Kanapa?

R: Yes he says this because he is speaking to the people. (SY: Yes I understand that.) Yes, that's how you speak to the people, the masses. (SY: Otherwise they would crucify him.)

(laughter) They have crucified Christ.) Yes. (SY: They crucified Socrates, just because of that.) Of course. (SY: It's incomprehensible.)

R: We'll have to crucify Henry. (SY: Pardon?) We'll crucify Henry.

SH: I'm ready sweet heart. (Students laugh) Take me I'm yours.

SG: Robert how about all the teachers who are always insinuating their teaching and there are a lot of teachings out there that we have to be careful because those teachings are within the realms of illusion and those teachers are themselves deluded. Something like this you can't go to the library and you can't get the facts you would really have to go on - I don't know what you go on?

R: Every teaching has its place. Everybody belongs where they belong. There are no mistakes.

SE: Can't we have a rating system? (students laugh) A+, A- or maybe a guru referral service, what kind of guru do you want? (more laughter)

R: Actually this is why they say, "Know thyself." Know who you are then you'll understand the rest.

SK: It seems that there is no possible way mechanically to prove this, being in this illusion though there has to be some sort of higher power that can pull you out of this. I can never do this on my own.

R: Why do you say that? (SK: I get to the same place all over again.) Who says that? (laughter) Why do you say that? (SK: Experience.) That was your past experience this is today. Forget about the past. You are the only one that can bring yourself out of it. You have all that power within you. If you're ready it'll happen. Only you can do it to yourself, no one else can do it for you. (SK: So it's a desire then?) It's more than a desire. It's a sort of an understanding. A total surrendering of the ego, the self with a small "s." A total giving up. A total disgust with all the things of this world. That happens by itself. But as long as you're enjoying the world then it'll never happen. (SK: How about 99%, that is 1% leaves you in it.) Then you'll be 99% pure, 1% deluded. But get rid the 1% and you'll come out of it a bit quicker.

SB: Is that what happens to gurus who think they have fantastic teachings but who want to be worshipped and think they're God and want all your money and everything, is that what happens?

R: I have no idea what happens to these people. Again know your Self. The answer is always know who you are and where you're coming from then you'll understand everything else. And you'll leave everything alone.

SY: If we really look at the teachings there is always something - what is called "know thy self" it means also, how did you act in your conditioning? In the moment of seeing, that will disappear, that conditioning. (R: Yes.) So it is very helpful. Some teachings are helpful. The aspect what you're saying that someone wants to be worshipped, usually it's done by their helplessness. and will of the people. They elevate the teacher it's all that they know. If the teacher is not totally realized it will get at him at one point or her, their role as God but sooner or later they will fall apart anyway noone will be with them who hold up to this pretense too long. Just observe their actions on that level I think.

R: There are different kinds of teachers in this world. (SY: Right.) Even the lowest churches. All of the churches are necessary. (SY: Yeah.) Everything is necessary. There is nothing wrong, there are no mistakes. Everything is necessary for people. (SY: In the conditioned mind those who criticize are way past criticizing because they are arrogant, the ego plays itself up all the time, so why denigrate a situation and identify with the divine.) Sure again this is why it is written, work on yourself take care of your own business. Mind your own business and everything else will take care of itself if you take care of yourself.

SD: I remember one time early when I started listening to you Robert, you said that we were all hell bound for heaven. (laughter) And I never have forgotten that because it's so true of every path being in it's right place at the right time.

R: Sure. So what else is new.

SV: That hell bound for heaven does it mean we have to join a motorcycle gang? (laugh)

R: If you want? Why not? (laughter)

SB: You have to join ego's anonymous. (laughter) Robert were there many teachers in India who were really realized beings who wanted to be worshipped? Is that an authentic path or...?

R: Well there are many teachers doing all kinds of things. (SB: Are they authentic realized beings?) Don't ask me. (laughter)

S: If nothing else happens you can give this. (laughter) Somebody got it. (Don't know what student is referring to.)

SG: Robert isn't it true that even in the dream state the sense of reality can break through? Or can more easily be sensed in the dream state? I haven't had the actual experience but then they say of what I'm talking about wouldn't relate to God wouldn't you say? But even if you think of it would it be possible to awaken for a while?

R: In the dream state yes. You can awaken in the dream state for a while, yes. But when you go all the way the dream breaks and there's no longer a dream. You come out of the dream completely. In that final analysis when you have a complete total awakening.

SG: Yeah and then you wake up in the morning and things are looking great for a while because you woke up in the dream...???... (R: Yes.)

(tape ends) [TOC]

SIMPLY, STOP THINKING!

6th February, 1992

Robert: It is good to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to have you here out of the rain, the wet streets, thunderstorms. You've come to a dry place. You're here, this means something to you. That you would leave your warm home to come here is a sign that there is something within yourself that is anxious to come out. You would brave the storms, the snow, the sleet and you have arrived. A good sign. Not for me for you.

Always try to remember that this is not a prayer meeting or a philosophical meeting or any kind of meeting. This is satsang. Satsang is where the Self meets the Self. Satsang is where you meet the reality of your Self. There is only one Self. You are that. So satsang is different than most meetings you go to. There is something here that most of you can feel. Something within you that says I'm tired of this life, with all its confusion. All the nonsense that goes on in the world. The good times, the bad times. The constant change. There has to be something else. Something within you says that.

Doesn't it, have you heard it? Have you heard something within you talking to you? If you did you're just as crazy as me. (students laugh) There is nothing to talk to you. Why do you want something to talk to you? You're nobody important. Nobody's going to talk to you or tell you anything. This is because you do not exist as a body. You do not exist as a soul. You just do not exist. So really there is nobody that has to talk to you at all. When you hear voices, when you see visions, always remember this is all an emanation of the mind. The mind puts on these shows. The mind loves to entertain you. It will show you all kinds of things, better than going to the movies. It will fantasize. It will make you believe that you've seen a vision. That you've seen light. That you've been transformed. It's all nonsense.

The truth is of course that you are already that. There is nothing you have to become. There is nothing really that you have to do. You simply have to realize, "I am that" and let go. You are not this, you are that! Why aren't you this? I don't know but you're that. What is that? Find out. Find out what that is. How do you find out? By simply awakening. How do you awaken? By letting go. Stop holding on. Do not hold on to your life, your so-called life. Let go of fear.

Some people are afraid to let go because they think they will die. What is death? It is simply like going to sleep. You're not afraid to go to sleep. As a matter of fact we look forward to going to sleep. And when we awaken from the sleep we say, "I have rested. I feel good. I feel energetic." What people call death is the same thing. You just go to sleep and then you feel great. You feel wonderful. You are finished with this cumbersome body as it appears. It's all beautiful.

Most people are dead right now. They think they're alive. They're fighting for existence. Trying to survive, debating, arguing. That's death. Believing that you are the body-mind phenomena is death. For you're not living. To live is to die to the body. To die to the mind. Not to have one fearful thought. Not to have one belief that something is wrong somewhere, somehow. Not to think you have to do this or do that or go here or go there. To be still. To stay where you are. To be happy, blissful. This is to be alive.

You should be able to sit in your home and be filled with joy and filled with so much happiness that there is nothing that you can possibly want to do in this world to have any more happiness. To feel and realize that noone anywhere in this world can give you one ounce of happiness more than you are now. To feel that noone in this world can give anything that you don't already possess.

It's really funny to me that people run all over the place to entertain themselves, to be entertained, where the true Self is at peace right now. The true Self is total bliss right now. There is nothing you need. There is noone that can make you happy. Oh it appears that way. I'm sure you can say this person makes me so happy. My new home makes me so happy. My new car makes me so happy. My new friends make me so happy. Those are all temporary conditions. They have to end. Everything that is born has to end. This means every new person that comes into your life. Every new gadget that comes into your life. Every new environment that you go to will first bring you total happiness, so it appears to you then when it comes time to leave it will bring you unhappiness. For you will have to give it up even if you have to give it up when you die so-called, when it's time to leave your body. The reason we leave our body as it appears is because we refuse to give up everything when we are alive. Think about that.

If you were able to give up everything, mentally. Give everything up in your mind including your body and your mind. If you're able to do this there would be no need to die. Noone would die. Remember death is only to free you from your attachments. That is the only reason death exists.

Some of us become so miserable with our attachments. When I speak the word attachment I mean everything. Say you're ill. You worry about your body. You concern yourself with your body. This is attachment. As long as you are attached to your illness by observing it, by talking about it, by trying to heal it, by trying to do anything to it, you are attached and you have to die. Isn't that wonderful? So you can become free because you refuse to believe and know that you are already free. You are still looking for someone to free you. You are still looking for a secret mantra or a secret esoteric teaching that noone knows. You are looking for the person who can give you something that you think you do not have. And you go searching all over the world. You'll never find it because it doesn't exist. You have been that yourself all along. That has been you. And we go searching for happiness, we go searching for realization, we go searching for the right mate. We're always searching, looking trying to find something that will bring us greater happiness, greater joy and greater peace.

It cannot be done. It appears sometimes as if it is happening like this. For you will find the right mate, the right guru, the right book, the right environment and so forth. It will appear as if you found these things. How long do they last before you become disillusioned again, before you become used to conditions where you are living, the guru, the mate you take for granted, when you've been with a person a long time and you continue searching and keep looking, you're looking in vain. Try to remember this, "You are the one. You are the one you've been searching for all these years. You are the one."

If you believe you've got problems, you've got troubles when you are in deep sleep do you have these problems, these troubles? Of course not. Yet when you awaken to this world, the so called problems, the troubles seem to be staring you in the face. But you didn't have them when you were in deep sleep where did they go? This is a hint. A hint to show you that they never really existed. If they really existed you would be experiencing them in deep sleep. But when you are in deep sleep you wake up refreshed and you say, "I slept well." But as soon as you become cognizant of this world your so-called problems return, whatever they may be.

Whether they are fears of the unknown. Whether it's lack or limitation. Whether it's a disease, whatever it may be. It did not exist when you were in deep sleep but it exists now when you are awake. It shows you that these are not permanent problems. For you would feel them continuously without stopping. They would be in your mind 24 hours a day. But they're not. Only when you are waking to this world. You therefore have to find out, "To whom do these problems come?" I didn't have these in deep sleep.

As a matter of fact I was talking to a person in the park this morning, in the rain, who had cancer. And he was very worried because he didn't think he was going to live. I asked him the question as just explained here. "Do you feel this cancer when you are in deep sleep." He said, "No." "How do you feel when you awaken?" He said, "For a few minutes I feel fine until I remember the cancer." So I asked him, "What do you think would happen to you if you didn't remember the cancer? What do you think would happen if you were just the way you were when you were in deep sleep, no memory of any disturbance?" Of course that was too much for him, he couldn't answer. He didn't know what I was talking about. But the fact is he had no cancer. He didn't have any cancer. The ego did, so it appears. And since there is no ego there is no cancer. It would be terrible if there was a real ego and we would have to get rid of the ego to remove the cancer.

So the point I'm trying to make is there is no one to have anything good or bad. No one like that exists. Do not feel that you have an ego and you have to get rid of that ego, thinking of this all of the time. This will be your downfall. It is true in the books they tell you that the ego has to go. They're trying to explain to you in words that there is some belief somewhere inside of you that makes you believe that there is something wrong someplace, something isn't going right, so philosophy and psychology gives it a name, the unconscious mind or the ego. And then when we get into spiritual work we work on removing the ego. Transcending the unconscious mind. This is a mistake. Why are we trying to get rid of something that never existed? How wonderful it would be for you if you could just realize this moment that none of these things exist. You are absolute reality, absolute reality! That's it! Just by hearing this something should happen.

You are absolute reality! Absolute reality means pure choiceless effortless awareness. Pure choiceless effortless awareness is like space. You are that space all-pervading. No thing can attach itself to that space, to that pure awareness. There is no thing that can attach itself to it. Your body appears to attach itself to it. Your conditioning in life appears to attach itself to it. All the so-called experiences of your life appears to attach itself to it. But this is only an appearance, like a mirage, like a magic show. Where things seem to appear but they do not appear.

To spend your time trying to get rid of your ego, trying to get rid of your body, trying to get rid of your mind is a total waste of energy. Even working with vichara, atma-vichara, self-inquiry this is for beginners. This is when a person comes from the street who has never heard of anything like this and wants to find total freedom. You therefore teach them self-inquiry. You teach them to be observant of their thoughts, to become the witness. But I'm talking to all of you people here tonight, 90 percent of you have been around me for a long time. I can tell you truthfully stop searching for anything. For you're searching for something that has never existed. All you really have to do is recognize what I said and you will be home free.

You are alive in this moment as sat-chit-ananda. There's nothing else. It is only your mind that begins to think about these things that I speak to you that spoils you from becoming awakened. If your mind was able to remain still. If your mind was able to be totally quiet and totally still you would awaken, you would be totally awakened. But because you cannot still your mind you have to practice sadhana and go through the various techniques.

Remember what these techniques are for. To still the mind, to become so one-pointed that everything in this world will disappear and only the one will be left. I can share this truth with you tonight. For again as I explained to you most of you have been with me a long long time. You can stop wasting your time practicing meditation, sadhana, if you will simply stop thinking.

Now I know some of you say it's very difficult to stop thinking. It's virtually impossible to stop thinking. Do not say that. Because you say this then it becomes virtually impossible to stop thinking because this is the suggestion you give to yourself. If you try to realize who the thinker is, who is the thinker? There is no thinker. Noone thinks. Thinking is a misconception. There has to be someone to think. Just as Fred thinks he has to get up, he had to think about that first. There has to be someone, somewhere who thinks. I'm allowing you to think about this. (students laugh) We always believe there is something to think about. We believe that we have to think in order to straighten our lives out. To make things right for us. We believe we have to think in order to be productive citizens. This is a game the mind plays.

Everything that transpires in your life is maya. The whole universal scheme is God's leela. It is a passing fancy magic show. It's abracadabra, I see you. But I tell you you do not exist, you have never existed and you will never exist. There is no such thing as ceasing to exist. For if you have ceased to exist it means that you have existed at one time. We have to get rid of all these words, all these concepts to feel, "I have to do something," is also a mistake. It implies there is somebody there to do something. It is also a mistake to say, "I have to do nothing," it implies that there is somebody left over to do nothing. Even saying, "I am nothing," is wrong. Every word is wrong, every thought is wrong. Be yourself, without thinking. Yes it's possible.

We have been believing many different books and movements and yoga teachings that explain to us we have to stop thinking through these methods. Practicing pranayama, japa mantra. By using all of these methods we will stop thinking. These methods increase your thinking. They cause you to think upon the mantra, to think upon the subject, to meditate on God but think of what you're doing. None of these things exist. So by thinking about something that does not exist your mind moves in waves, so it appears. And the mind becomes stronger.

Then what kind of work do you do on yourself? You do nothing because you are nothing. If you are nothing does this mean you have to do something? There is absolutely nothing for you to do. Know this truth. Become this truth. Stop concerning yourself about anything and happiness will come right to you.

Try to understand that you are in your right place right now. Going through those experiences that are necessary for your unfoldment and leave it alone. Do not try to save yourself. Do not try to overcome problems. Yet your body will do things.

Remember when I talk to you this way, some of you not all of you but some of you still believe that you have to either sit in a chair all day and do absolutely nothing or go to a cave or to a monastery or to a jungle retreat and sit. Of course you know for those of you who have tried this have realized that you have taken your thoughts with you. Your thoughts will bombard you twice as strong, ten times as strong. As they did while you were in the city.

Due to the reason that when you were in the city life things took up your time. And there were times during the day when you were unable to think because you were too busy doing your job or watching television or doing something that you usually do. But when you go to a jungle retreat or to a cave there is nothing there to occupy your time. Therefore guess what is going to happen. All those thoughts that you have suppressed all of these years by covering them up by television, newspapers, magazines, movies, bowling, swimming all the things that you do so you do not have to think will now reveal themselves to you and you'll go crazy. You will become mad. Many people have been destroyed this way. They go completely insane.

Your so-called body will always appear to be doing something. And that is under the laws of karma. Ishvara the so-called God of karma will take care of everything for you. You do not have to worry. You simply have to rest in the moment where nothing is happening while your body is doing the work it came here to do and be free.

I can share with you that I speak to three levels of experience. I speak to the devotees, to the disciples and to the seekers. This is why I'm always speaking of absolute reality, karma, reincarnation and sadhana. The devotees when they hear me couldn't care what I say, they're living in total love. If I recited Jack and Jill they would rejoice. It makes no difference what I say to the devotees. For they're coming from a different space than most people.

The disciples want to measure what I say with a yardstick of the mind and compare notes. What did this teacher say, what did that teacher say, what did this book say, they're always comparing. And the seekers are only interested in removing the problems from their lives. They're interested in other words in exchanging good for bad or bad for good. They're interested in improving their humanhood. So there we speak at three levels. I intermingle all these things so that everyone can grasp something and feel better for a while. But when I speak as I did tonight I was really speaking to everyone no matter what you are. Forget your troubles come on be happy. (students laugh) That's the message. There is nothing that wants to harm you. There is nothing that wants to prevent you from awakening. Stop believing and thinking you have to... (break in tape as Robert continues) ...you do not have to go through any type of realization, to be realized. Self-realization is a misnomer. For there is no self that becomes realized. All is well. All is exceedingly well.

Feel free to ask some questions.

SF: You spoke earlier of satsang and my impression is that we're never apart from satsang. Universal and all-pervasive and in some situations stronger than the Self?

R: Satsang is the Self. (SF: In everybody?) Exactly. Satsang is always with you. When you are by yourself at home or wherever you are in the office, you are in satsang. Feel that! Do not believe this place is this way and a different place is a different way. There is only one, not two or three, but one. Therefore satsang is one. Which means it's all-pervading. It's omnipresent. So if you find yourself in hell, you are in satsang. If you find yourself in heaven you are in satsang. There is no differentiation. Except when you allow the mind to differentiate for you. (SF: I'm beginning to see that if I sit here thinking that a person a place or a thing should be different than it is, it's a pure utter waste of time.) Yes. Exactly. Stop trying to change the world. Stop trying to change yourself. So often I try to say to you, stop trying to change the world and start changing yourself. But I share with you, there is no self that needs changing. Therefore you do not have to try to change yourself at all. Rather you have to be yourself. Be your Self. The Self which you already are.

SF: Going back to scripture for a minute, (laughter) There is a lot of wisdom in scripture. (R: Yes.) And it's all a question of the understanding that a so called individual can find in something that so called scripture. (R: Umm.) And a lot of wonderful things are in scripture. (R: Umm. So?) Well I just wanted to throw it out on us. (students laugh) I'm a fan of scripture, I'm a raunch of scripture. (R: I know.) (laughter) I'll keep it to myself.

R: No you can share it with us, it's fine.

SF: Okay. There is this guy... (SH: Here we go) ...who said "thou I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love I have become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And thou I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge and thou I have all faith so I can remove mountains and have not love I have nothing."

So it brought a question. What it means to me, what the word means to me and what it means to some other guy all depends upon the intellectual understanding is exactly what it's supposed to be in each individual, is that not so?

R: You cannot have love until you know who you are, otherwise love is false. It's predicated on conditions. For you know who you are, you are the Self, pure awareness, then you never think about love. Love is your Self. (SF: It doesn't need an object.) Exactly. You don't even know the word love exists but you have become that. (SF: Thank you)

SB: Robert how does creativity relate to realization?

R: Since creativity does not even exist, it doesn't relate at all.

SB: For instance last night I went to a concert and truly enjoyed it very much and it seems like a lot of people who are arty people, musicians, dancers, painters, their whole life is to be creative and create perfect expressions of love, is the spiritual path of realization, transcending creativity, above creativity, the source of creativity?

R: Learn to leave other people alone. Creativity is an emanation of the mind. The mind wants to be creative. To be creative you need space and room in order to create what you want to create. But since there is only absolute reality. Since there is only pure awareness, there is no space for anything else. Therefore where would the creativity come from? The Self is at total peace with itself. Total wonderful joyous peace. It needs nothing to create to find happiness. Human beings create things to find happiness. To give happiness to others. This is an illusion. You are pure choiceless awareness. You are ultimate oneness, nirvana, all-pervading, nothing else. There is no place to create anything. There is no room to create anything. Creativity is unnecessary.

SD: Are you saying then that creativity is part of maya?

R: It's part of the dream. (SD: So if someone is going to be creative they'll be creative, has nothing to do with the Self?) Exactly. No, I'm not saying you should forget about being an artist or a painter or a sculpture or anything else. As I mentioned before your body will continue to do the things that it came here to do. So if you're karmically supposed to be a sculpture, you'll be a sculpture, or a painter, or a murderer. That's creative. (Students laugh) (SD: Some body.) (laughs) You'll be whatever you're supposed to be according to your karma. Do not concern yourself with this. Do not think about these things. But rather identify with the source which is the Self, absolute reality and let go of everything else and be free.

SB: But on a certain level Robert, since we are already the Self and the creativity seems to spring spontaneously out of the love. When resting in the Self and the great love arises that the desire to express that through music.

R: If you are resting in the Self there would be noone to aspire to write music. There will be noone to rest in the self. There would only be the self. (SB: What of that great love that arises and surprises us with...?) That's the mind. The mind is doing all of these things. The self does not need to love itself. The Self does not need to express itself. It is. It is pure beingness. It has no qualities. All the qualities you are speaking of are from the mind. (SB: But hasn't there been great realized Masters who were also musicians or artists...?) Sure.) (SB: ...they express their teachings through poetry and so on?) Yes. (SB: People like Kabir and...?) Yes there are people like this. Find out who you are first then you will be able to understand where they're coming from. It's virtually impossible to understand, to comprehend people who are expressing themselves in the way that you say, who are realized without first knowing yourself. (SB: I don't understand what you're saying Robert, realized without knowing yourself?) I'm saying, "Realize who you are first." Then see if you know these people or you're concerned with what they are or with what they're doing or if you'll be concerned with the person who is expressing themselves or not. Awaken yourself first. Then see if that question comes to you.

R: Well we all heard the word, now what are we going to do about it. We go back into the world. The world shows us all of its manifestations. Will we continue to react or will we just smile and say, "So what?"

Do we have any prashad? No prashad? (laughter) Why do you think I came? (laughter) Do we have any announcements?

(Announcements about transcripts being returned)

R: Anyone else have anything else to say?

SF: Here's something that I wanted to tell you but I'll say it to everyone. I described that drug experience last Thursday and I had a lot of wonderful experiences but at the time I was aware that what it amounted to, I was sneaking into a show for which I had not bought a ticket. (students laugh) So I quit. Maybe I can buy a ticket somewhere along the line. (SJ: Maybe someone will give you one?) (laughter) That's the idea he can't. It's a question of finding him. Making it real.

(short silence)

R: Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to bow to yourself, to get rid of yourself. (students laugh) (SH: Good variation.) Do it! I love you, peace...

(tape ends) [TOC]

THE THREE VIRTUES: COMPASSION, HUMILITY AND SERVICE

9th February, 1992

Robert: Greetings and salutations. It is good to be with you once again on this balmy winter's day in February. I welcome you with all my heart. Let me remind most of you again, I do not give sermons, I am not a philosopher, I am not a public speaker, I do not even give talks, for there's really nothing to say. Everything there is to say has already been said.

This is satsang. It is here that you meet yourself, the self that you really are, effortless pure awareness. You are infinite like the sky. There is nothing in this world or anywhere else that can effect you or cause harm to come to you unless you believe it. The relative the world is made up of mental beliefs. Everything that you behold is a projection of your mind, and because it keeps changing constantly, you cannot say this is reality. For instance, your body is not the same as it was ten years ago, or twenty years ago or when you were first conceived. How can you therefore say that your body is real?

The world isn't the same as it was twenty years ago, thirty years ago. Everything has changed. Then how can you possibly say that the world is real? Most of us are afraid to get into that subject, for we begin to feel that nothing is permanent, and this brings on fear. If nothing is permanent who am I really? What am I? Where did I come from? What is the source of myself? These questions can only be answered by you.

There is something more beautiful, more grand, more wonderful than you could ever imagine, that exists within you, which is the sub-stratum of all existence. Yet in order to feel this joy, this bliss, in order to find this total freedom from life's so-called burdens, you have to dig for your self. You have to give up something. You cannot stay the way you are, with the same disposition, the same values, the same pre-conceived ideas, the same concepts, and be free. You cannot do this. You have to do an about face and totally give up all of your ideas about life, totally surrender your ego, your mind, your body, your pre-conceived ideas.

To whom do you surrender this? To your self. You thought I was going to say, "To God." But who do you think God is? God doesn't want your problems. Why should you give God your burden? Find out who this God is, where this God came from, and you will soon realize that you have created God in your image. There is no such God, but it is better than nothing. It's good to know you have a big daddy somewhere. (students laugh) Who you can cry to. (laughter) Somebody you can scream at and blame for all your problems.

Yet as we grow, as we unfold, as we let go of all this stuff we've been holding on, something does happen. We become lighter. The burden seems to disappear by itself. The only burden you've ever had is your mind. There is no other burden. See if you can stop your mind for a few seconds, and see how peaceful you are. Where there are no thoughts, there are no worries, there are no fears, there're no anxieties, there are no desires, no wants, no greed, no hurt, no enemies. It is the mind, the thoughts, that causes these things to come to us. We actually create these conditions. We create our own reality.

Think of the kind of life you are living today, your possessions, your friends, your loved ones, your employment. Do these things come to you through luck or chance? Of course not. You have created all these things yourself, for you have believed in the false self. You have imagined that you are a human being who has to go through experiences. You have been brainwashed since you were little to believe the things that you believe today. So, if you really want freedom, liberation, you do not go searching for this. It is no where to be found, for it already exists within yourself. You are already that, so where can you go searching for it? Who can give it to you?

If you want water, you turn on the tap. You do not look at the tap and scream and cry, "I want water." You turn on the tap and you've got water. Yet when you were a little kid you didn't know how to turn on the tap. Therefore, if you wanted a drink, you would cry and make a fuss, and your mom or your dad, whatever the case may be, would open the tap and give you a drink. So can you drink from the spring of eternal life, which is your reality. You have to turn on the tap. You have to turn on the tap. You turn on the tap by letting go of everything that you are, everything. When I say everything I mean everything! You have to turn yourself inside out. Can you imagine how you would look turned inside out? Wouldn't be a pretty sight.

There are three main virtues that you have to acquire in order to become liberated. Most of us believe and think, in Advaita Vedanta, that if you hear the right word, if you awaken through the grace of the Sage, you will be free. This is true in some cases. But these people that you have read about in the holy books, who were touched by the grace of the Sage, these people have done their homework, prior to this happening. You have to want it yourself, and when you want it bad enough something will happen to you.

When you desire liberation more than anything else in life, this means you have begun to give up the rest of your stuff that we talked about. That's the only way to desire liberation. This is a legitimate desire, because you're not really asking for something, you are giving up the stuff you don't need anymore, your anger, your pettiness, your bad disposition, your temper, your greed, all of the things we were carrying around for so long. This is how you desire liberation, by speaking to the Lord within you, in total surrender. "Lord take my anger, take my greed, take my bad disposition, take my temper," and you give it up totally. Once you do this, automatically you are liberated.

So you see, it's not the other way around. It's not trying to find freedom, liberation, self-realization, to add to what we already are. Hear this. You cannot add one iota to what you already are, because you are full up with your own garbage. You therefore have to empty the garbage can, turn yourself upside down and empty yourself out, and it is then that you will find that you are already free.

And even as I talk to you about these things, some of you here are so filled with yourself, small "s," with your ego, that you'll never, never, never let go completely and give up all your stuff, for your ego has been telling you all of these years, if you do this you'll be nowhere. But isn't this exactly where you want to be? Nowhere. When you are nowhere you're not somewhere, and in the nowhere there is nothing. This nothing is everything. This no thing, this nothing, is what we call effortless pure awareness, absolute reality, sat-chit-ananda, nirvana. It is what is left over after you have given up all your stuff.

Yet there are three virtues that are most important, most important for you to achieve, before enlightenment. Every enlightened person on this earth, everyone who has been liberated, has had these virtues, and you cannot be realized without them. The first one is compassion, the second one is humility, and the third one is service. We will start with compassion.

What is compassion? Actually compassion is when you are reconciled with this entire universe. You're totally reconciled with the entire universe. There's no thing in this whole universe that you are against. Think about that. Compassion means reverence for all of life. Everything is alive. There's no such thing as dead matter. Everything has its own life. When you have reverence for life you respect everything. You have no animosity towards anyone or anything.

I'm not only talking about human beings. I'm speaking of the mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, the human kingdom. Have you ever heard of a Sage or a liberated person who was at odds with anything in this world? You have to come to terms with yourself. Too many Advaita Vedantists, non-duality people, always go around shouting, "I am one with this. I am one with that. Everything is absolute reality." And yet they have so many bad habits.

It's sort of paradoxical. So many times I tell you everything is karmic, everything is preordained, everything that's happened to you is pre-ordained. You do not lift one finger that has not been pre-ordained for you to do so. Yet, at the same time, I'm telling you that you have to give up certain things and develop higher qualities. Which is right? For you would say to yourself, "If everything is pre-ordained, why should I care about what I do, how I act and how I live? Everything is supposed to happen anyway." This is true on one level, but then again you have the total freedom to turn within, and not to react to life's situations. You have that freedom. So every-thing's pre-ordained, at the same time you have the freedom to turn within and find out to whom pre-ordination comes to, by lifting yourself up into a higher state of consciousness and becoming free.

Therefore compassion is very important. I use myself as an example. I go to lunch with many of you. I enjoy going to lunch with you, but I do it out of a great compassion, a great compassion for you, because this gives you pleasure. When I'm at lunch with some of you, you always see me taking a handful of vitamin pills. I bring a little bottle filled with vitamins. Before I came to Los Angeles I never took a vitamin in my life. But some of you have heard about a so-called disease I may have, so you bring me vitamins and minerals, and pills and everything else. So I take these things for your sake, not for my sake, because of great compassion.

Approximately two years ago someone came to my home at about 4:00 o'clock one Friday evening. He rang the bell, I opened the door. There was this guy standing there with a big smile on his face, as if he'd known me all my life. He explained he met me once in 1958 in Bangalore, in India, at Papa Ram Dass ashram. I didn't remember him. He also told me he came to my classes in Denver in 1975. But he felt so good about this I told him that I recognized him, I remembered him.

He was passing through. He came to see me. He wanted me to initiate him in Advaita Vedanta. I explained to him I do not do initiations. I'm not a guru or a yogi or anything like that, and besides you cannot get initiated into Advaita Vedanta, for it is non-duality. There has to be the initiator and somebody to be initiated. There has to be a subject and an object. And since there is no subject and there is no object how can I initiate anybody?

But he didn't take no for an answer. He started beseeching me. He came a long way to see me and I must initiate him. I explained to him again that I do not do this. I do not believe in this. It has nothing to do with Advaita Vedanta. Why doesn't he go find a yogi or somebody like this who does initiations?

The next thing he did, he took out $200.00 and put it down, and said, "Here, please initiate me." I took the $200.00 and shoved it back in his pocket, and explained to him I do not take money from somebody I do not know, to be initiated.

Finally he got down on his knees. He grabbed my legs and started crying. So what could I do? I was in a dilemma. So I told him, "Okay." I put my left hand on his head and my right hand on his chest, and I said, "In the name of Advaita Vedanta you are now initiated into pure awareness."

Now something happened to him. It's the first time I had seen anybody's hair stand up. It's as if a surge of electricity went through his body, his head. He stood up and he smiled, and I was actually able to see myself as him. He really had been totally transformed. And he said goodbye and he left. I never saw him again.

Now what is the purpose of this story? It has no purpose. It's just a story I add into this teaching, so time can pass faster. (students laugh)

SD: I thought it was going to have to do with compassion. (R: No.) Sort of?

R: No compassion at all, it had nothing to do with anything. It doesn't belong here at all. (laughter) (SH: You're a card!)

SE: It's like one of Muktananda's stories. It starts nowhere and ends nowhere.

R: It's to make you see and understand that you have to break up your linear thinking.

But to get back to compassion, you have to have compassion! I actually did have a great compassion for this person, but I never use that word. It's a word to make you sort of understand what it is, that we explain all these things. Compassion is very important. Think of the times in your life that you could have had compassion and you didn't, for your thoughts interfered, and you came to a conclusion, based on the thoughts that came to your head.

For instance, you see a homeless person who asks you for a couple of dollars or whatever. It makes no difference why he wants the couple of dollars, whether he wants to buy some whiskey, or he wants to buy bread, or what he wants to do. It is your duty to help anyone who comes into your atmosphere. Anyone who comes into your life must be helped. It is no accident that this homeless person came to you. Do not turn him away, for by turning him away you're turning yourself away.

This is compassion, reconciling yourself with the whole universe, all of the kingdoms. Animals, we should have a great compassion for every animal on this earth, whether they are ants, or cockroaches, or goats, or sheep or cows. If we had a compassion like this would we eat meat? We have to have a great compassion for all the flowers, vegetation, everything that exists. We have to have a great compassion for all of the minerals on this earth. Everything! This is reconciling ourselves with the entire universe. This is important.

Some of us wonder why we have been on this path for a long time and we do not seem to make too much progress. It is because your compassion is not big enough.

Next we go to humility. Humility is very, very important. Everybody wants to win a point, win an argument, win a fight, and yet if you have humility, it never comes into your mind to win or get even. Humility is karmic. Karma is like stepping on a rake and the handle hits you in the head. Cause and effect. The cause is you stepped on the rake and the handle came up and hits you on the head. This is how karma is. Everything that goes around comes around. You stepping on the rake, but the handle doesn't hit you on the head immediately. It may hit you on the head years later or in another incarnation, but you will get hit on the head. So there's immediate karma, and there's future karma. The only way to get rid of it is through having a tremendous humility.

Say somebody slaps you. The first things our ego will tell us is to beat them up, slap them back, shoot them, kill them, get even with them. But if we're wise we'll understand that the reason we were slapped on the face is, of course, somewhere, somehow, this is the karma returning to us, and if we retaliate we're setting new karma in motion, which will return to us sooner or later.

Therefore, anything that has ever happened to you, in any area of your life, no matter how it looks, you are in your right place. No one is picking on you. No one is trying to do anything to you. No one is trying to hurt you. If you cooperate, and do not react, and do not retaliate, but send out a message of love and peace, then you transcend that karma and it will never come back again. But if you retaliate, and you want to get even, and you think you're winning the battle, you may appear to be winning in this instance, you may appear to be getting somewhere, but the fruits of your actions must return sooner or later.

Therefore you're playing games with yourself and you'll never get anywhere. You'll keep repeating the situation again, and again, and again, with different people. You may move to a different state, be involved in different situations, but you will find the same problems. Therefore, whatever seems wrong in your life, whatever seems terrible, do not look at the problem in itself as a problem. Rise above it. Realize no one is to blame for it. You have no enemies. No one is trying to hurt you. This is humility. You're not a coward, you're not a wimp. You have risen above that kind of thinking. That kind of thinking does not exist.

That's why the story of Ramana Maharshi, when he went for a walk in the jungle one day, and he inadvertently stepped into a wasp's nest, and the wasps started to sting him, he didn't even pull his leg out, but he spoke to the wasps and he said, "I deserve this. I invaded your house where you live and I deserve what you are doing to my leg, and if you want you can attack the other leg." When he got back to the ashram from his walk he was bitten all through the leg and had to put ointment on it. But he wasn't phased one bit. He had a perpetual smile on his face, with the realization, "All is well."

Now look at your lives. Think of the things that bother you every day, the things that annoy you every day, the things that make you angry, that make you upset, that make you want to retaliate. Get rid of this.

The third virtue is service. Our mission on this earth is to be of service to humanity. As we're trying to unfold, as we're trying to raise ourselves to a higher state to be liberated, to become totally free, be of service all you can, without looking for anything in return. Serve everyone you meet. Ask people what you can do for them to make their life happier and brighter. Be of total service to everyone.

It is written, "That the first shall be last and the last shall be first." If you try to put your ego up front, and you want fame, and name and recognition, you will be beaten down all the time, and you will have all kinds of problems that come with achieving fame and name. Be of service.

In truth you are absolute reality. In truth you are that I am. I am that I am. In truth you are not the doer, you are not the body, you are not the mind. You are total freedom. You are already liberated. But this is intellectual with some of us. Therefore practice those three virtues and you will be amazed how fast you become free.

We have a basket full of questions and we'll see what we can do with them.

It's time to play stump the guru. (students laugh)

Q: (Robert reads) When you say consciousness explain? I take it personally.

A: (Robert answers) Good, take it personally because your true nature is consciousness. That is what we really are. Consciousness is that which is conscious. That which exists. That which is. Reality exists. Reality is pure awareness absolute. I am that I am. The real self that we always talk about is consciousness. It is conscious of itself. It is all-pervading. Nothing else exists but that.

So when we speak of consciousness I am speaking of your reality, what you really are, your real self, your conscious self. When I speak of nothingness I am speaking of the things of this universe that appear to be something. They really do not exist. Nothingness exists. Nothingness is consciousness, the substratum of all existence, conscious of itself as pure reality. This is you. This is your true nature. You are that.

Q: (Robert reads) If you're in a relationship and committed to self-realization do you detach yourself from the physical pleasures of the relationship? Is celibacy the idea?

A: (Robert answers) For whom is celibacy? For whom is the relationship? For the ego, the ego enjoys the relationship and the ego also believes it has to be celibate but none of these things are true. There is no reason to be celibate and there is no reason not to be celibate. Rise above both of them. When you rise above both of them, you will continue in your relationship. You will have a beautiful relationship because you will not be pinned down, you will not be attached in a material way to the relationship. The relationship will be full of freedom and love which is above the average way of thinking. Celibacy is for the ego.

The body does what it came here to do. The body wants to go and not be celibate, it will not be celibate. This has all been preordained for the body. Celibacy is not a requirement in Advaita Vedanta. When a question like that is usually asked the answer given are always sort of vague. It's very un-open. And that is, find out who you are and then see if celibacy is necessary or not necessary. But first find yourself. Who has to be celibate? Who doesn't have to be celibate? It's always the ego. Go beyond that. Find your self. Know who you are and then see what to do. But in the meantime do not worry about it, enjoy yourself.

Q: (Robert reads) How do we keep the I-am meditation from strengthening the I-thought?

A: (Robert answers) The "I am," meditation that we use here makes your mind one pointed. It keeps away other thoughts and focusses on the "I-am." Which is your true self. The I-thought does not come into play at all. The I-thought comes into play when you are interrupted from the "I-am" meditation.

For instance, you're doing the "I-am" meditation and all of a sudden you start thinking about a problem you've got. This is the I-thought for I am thinking about the problem. I am thinking of a situation. This is called the I-thought. But as you continue with the "I am" meditation, the "I-am" is the self. It is the first name of God. You are invoking absolute reality, pure awareness when you practice the "I-am" meditation. It has nothing to with the I-thought.

Again the I-thought only comes into play when you start to think again. When you interrupt the "I-am" meditation and start to think it's getting late, I'm getting tired, I this and I that. This is the I-thought. But as you keep catching yourself and going back to "I-am" the I-thought becomes weaker and weaker until it disappears and stops bothering you. Then only the "I-am" is left. Your true self is left and you're free.

Q: (Robert reads) If life is a dream, what is our relationship with animals and how do they relate to this dream?

A: (Robert answers) The relationship to animals is like the relationship to human beings. Like your relationship to the trees, to the flowers, to the sky, to the birds. It's all a dream, the animals are in your dream. You cannot say that you're dreaming the mortal dream and the animals are different. They're part of the dream. The whole business is the dream. Everything is a dream. Every insect, every animal, every human being, every flower, every plant, everything is a dream.

When you awaken from the dream you become pure being. You become the self, all-pervading. All the animals are coming out of your mind. Like human beings, like problems, like situations. They're all emanations of your mind. Therefore you relate to animals like you would in a dream the same as like doing this thing. Some people are kind to animals and some people are not kind to animals in this so-called waking state. And the dream is the same thing. You have people who are kind to animals and you have people who are not kind to animals. That is all a dream and so is this.

Q: (Robert reads) I'm unhappy on the inside and also on the outside.

A: (Robert answers) Why are you unhappy on the inside? Why are you unhappy on the outside? Who is unhappy? Ask yourself. Who is this person who is unhappy inside and outside? You have been told you are not the person who is unhappy or happy. You are not that being at all. That belongs to the I-thought. It belongs to the ego. It is the ego that has been brainwashed from birth and from other births to be where you are now. Therefore all the samskaras are being carried around in your mind from past lives, from this life when you were a kid, situations you've been through and you're feeling this great unhappiness inside and outside.

The only way to get out of this is either to practice self inquiry and find out who is unhappy and come to the conclusion that the I-thought is unhappy. It has nothing to do with you. Or surrender everything to God. Surrender the unhappiness to God. In other words, this is God's business to take care of this for you. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. Make it be known to God that you wish to give all this unhappiness to God, to handle it for you. Totally surrender to God and do not worry or concern yourself with this world again. Give yourself away.

Just think all these years you have been carrying the burden of being unhappy. Now you can give it all up. Say, "Take it God you deal with it," and become free. Again, either inquire within yourself, "To whom does this unhappiness come? Who is feeling this unhappiness?" And realize it's the I-thought and ask, "Who am I? What is the source of this I that is unhappy?" Or surrender it to God. But you've got to do it. If you do it the unhappiness will vanish and you will be certainly free.

Q: (Robert reads) Would you explain awareness?

A: (Robert answers) We're always speaking of pure awareness. Awareness is like space. Space is everywhere present. Our planet the earth appears to be hanging in space. Everything has space. The body, between the atoms of the body there is tremendous space. It is the space that holds the body together. It is the space that holds the universe together. It is the space that holds the earth together. Space is like the glue that holds everything in its orbit, planets, galaxies. That space is your true nature.

The space is not your body, it appears to be your body but the space between the atoms. This is you, your true self. This is why I tell you that the atoms of your body are like images on the screen. The screen is the space. Your body is the image. If it weren't for the screen you would have no image. If it weren't for the space you would not exist as a body. So pure awareness is the space like the space around you. Yet it is much more than that. It is ineffable, something that cannot be explained. It is the self, it is pure consciousness, it pure awareness. You are that.

Q: (Robert reads) Dear Robert, you said you begin to see that God is not within myself. Actually I am in God. I am bewildered, befuddled and be-bothered about it. Or in pigeon english, I don't understand. So could you please un-bewilder, un-befuddle and un-bother me about it. Your ever loving blue eyed daughter Fred. (laughter)

A: (Robert answers) When I say, "God is not within yourself," I'm speaking of the self as a human being. As a human being God does not appear to be present at all. But you are in God as the self. What appears to be you is really God or the self. So when I say, "You are in God," I'm referring to your own consciousness. You are in awareness, you are the universe, you are that I am, as the self.

In truth the physical body does not even exist so it's not a question of being in God or God being in you, there is really only one. That one is absolute reality. That one is yourself. The one self that exists and nothing else exists. You are that one self. When I speak sometimes of being in God or God being in you, it's just a bunch of rhetoric talking at a level which some people can understand it. God is always in you and you are always in God. At that level some people can understand this. But in truth there is no you and there is no God. There is only the pure self. And even that's questionable. (students laugh) So you are something Fred that is beyond everything. You are Fred the one and only.

SV: Now there's two of us. (laughter) (R: Two Freds.)

R: This Fred is in God and this Fred God is in him. (laughter) So you are both the same. Full of God, enjoy.

This takes care of the questions. Takes care of everything...

I'M STUCK! WHAT TO DO?

13th February, 1992

Robert: Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart.

Always remember, never forget, your true nature. You are truly choiceless, effortless, pure awareness and as I speak divine nonsense to you, remember this all the time. No matter what I say, no matter what goes on bear in mind always, that you are infinite like the sky. You are spaceless, absolute reality.

As we practice our path, as we practice sadhana, as we practice spiritual disciplines, in the beginning when we start we seem to make a lot of progress. But then the progress seems to slow down. We get stuck. We feel that nothing is happening any longer. We think we're doing something wrong. We believe we need a new teaching of some kind. We feel we have to read a certain book. See a certain teacher to get back on the path.

But this is normal. You appear to burn out. Yet if we can only remember that you are effortless, choiceless pure awareness you would realize there is actually no one to burn out. You cannot burn out because you are immortal. There is nothing in you or outside of you that can burn out. You are spirit, sat-chit-ananda.

As you feel yourself burning out so-to-speak. As you feel that the sadhana you're practicing is not doing you any good any more. You have to remember who feels this. Who feels distraught. Who feels as if they can't make any further progress.

If you were human to begin with then you would have a battle on your hands. For if you were human there would have to be a metamorphosis of some kind to change you into something else. But the fact is you're not human and nothing ever changes. The part you think has to change, never existed. Your mind, your body that you believe has to change into God, that person never existed. You are a God already. Your very existence is divine. You are not what you appear to be. When you feel as if you can't study any longer or vichara, self-inquiry does not seem to be doing anything else for you, always stop and remember who you are.

Who is the person that is trying to become something? Who can't make any more progress? Who is stuck? Who seems to have this problem?

Just remembering who you are lifts you up. Do not feel and believe that only if you're practicing self-inquiry or observation, or becoming the witness is going to awaken you. Do not think like this at all for in truth you are already awake. There is no one to awaken anyone. Some of you believe that there is some God or some person or some being. Perhaps you've have changed the name of God to consciousness. So you feel that consciousness is going to awaken you, enlighten you. It will never happen. There is no such person. There is no such being.

What we call consciousness is a word that implies your real nature, your real Self. Which is you right now. Right now you are the Self. Right now you are everything you want to be. Right this moment. You say to yourself, "No, I'm just a dumb human being," then you are. If that is what you want to call yourself. But no matter what you say to yourself. No matter what you do to yourself you can never change your real nature one iota. You are Brahman, the absolute reality. No matter what you say, no matter what you do, no matter how you act. You're still God.

But you are not God the way you feel yourself as a human being. You are God as all-pervading, without your mind, without your thoughts. There is absolutely nothing wrong with your life. You are wonderful, wonderful, perfect! Just the way you are.

Yet, some of you feel as if you practice for a year or two and now you feel stunted you feel as if you cannot go any further. Then stop the practice! Do not force yourself to practice atma-vichara, self-inquiry. Do not force yourself to do anything. Stop, and be your self. Just be your self. Do not try to be anyone else, or anything else. Just be your self the way you are. When you can really be your self, then you will be the Self. For there is only one Self. There is not yourself and myself. There is the one Self. Perfect! Absolute! And you are that.

When you think about yourself what do you imagine you are? The first thing you have to do is get rid of your gender. And stop believing you are a man or a woman. And then you get rid of your genus, that you belong to the family of man. There is no family of man. There is no individual human being. How can this be?

Well, when you go look at a movie. When you go watch a moving picture you see all these people on the screen. You see all sorts of things happening on the screen. You see men, you see women, you see animals, you see trees, you see all kinds of things in the picture. Yet would you say those forms are real? Even though the pictures are causing you to feel emotional, to feel happy, to feel sad. Watching the movie causes you to achieve all the types of kinds of feelings, emotional feelings. Yet you are not those images, are you? And the images themselves do not have any life. A movie projector causes the life on the screen.

The movie projector is like the mind. A picture is like the world and the screen is like the Self. If you try to grab any of the pictures you grab the screen. Yet all the time you're sitting and watching the movie you never think of this. You look at the images as if they were real and they affect you. Isn't this like most of us in life? You look at the world, we hear the news, somebody tells us something we do not like. We become angry, afraid, cynical. The world can make us become all kinds of things. So can the movie. The movie can make you cry and laugh. Yet the projector shows the movie on the screen. In the same instant your mind projects the world on the screen of life. Everything emanates from the mind. The forms in the world are like the forms on the screen. They do not exist. Yet you believe they're real. The point I'm trying to make is, as long as you react to the world and its problems you are going to suffer accordingly. That is the great mystical secret.

As long as you react to person, place or thing you will have all sorts of things going on in your life. You will have all sorts of problems, emotions, fears, frustrations. And you will have happiness too at times. Peace at times. Just as the figures on the screen seem to do certain things and you become very happy. You're watching a soap opera. There is happiness for a while then someone falls in love with someone else and the things change into a nightmare. The soap opera becomes ridiculous, as you watch all these happenings taking place and all these things are happening on the screen. It's the same thing with your life. As long as you believe the forms and images are real you have to go through all kinds of suffering. You have good times and bad times. Things keep changing, changing, changing.

But again the great mystical secret is as you see the forms in this world as images on the screen they can never harm you again. It'll be virtually impossible for you to have any type of suffering in your mind. You will automatically be very blissful and feel great joy and great happiness and great peace. For you are no longer looking at the world for your satisfaction, for your peace or for your happiness. When you stop looking at the world for these things something happens within you. All of these vasanas, all of these images of the world begin to burn up. It happens by itself. All of the karmas begin to disintegrate. The past begins to dissolve. You begin to evolve at a fast rate of speed and you become the one and only Self. The one and only Brahman, pure awareness that you've always been.

Again all you have to do is to stop relying and reacting on this world. Leave the world alone. Do not look to person, place or thing for your happiness and for your peace. Try to catch yourself. As you feel yourself burning out from practicing sadhana, as you feel nothing is happening, whenever you get a kind of negative feeling simply remember what I'm talking about now. Remember the analogy. That this is all happening as a movie and the projectionist is the mind. The mind is telling you nothing is happening you can't make any further progress. This is the mind that is playing these tricks on you. The reason the mind is playing these tricks on you is because the mind does not want to be dissolved, extinguished. It wants to act distinguished. The mind wants to act as if it's the force. As if it knows everything. Yet you must recognize what is going on.

There is noone to burn out. There is noone who has gone so far and can go no further. That being does not exist. You have to catch yourself. Feel that all of the images, your feelings included are like the images on the screen. Your mind is a projector. The screen is the self.

As you think of this you will start feeling different. You'll feel power! You will feel joy. You will feel bliss. You'll become free. Therefore never put yourself down. Do not believe there is something wrong with you. Do not believe something is wrong anywhere else in this world. Do not believe someone is trying to punish you or you've got bad karma. If you believe all these things it'll become a reality for you.

Remember also that the mind is very creative. It will create what you think about for a while. Be careful what you allow your mind to think. Always catch yourself. Catch your mind thinking. Remind yourself who you are. Be aware. Be intelligent. Always look. Always be ready to observe. And you catch your mind thinking about things. Catch your feelings. When you begin to feel depressed, when you begin to feel something is wrong. Do not allow your mind to carry that thought through. No matter how bad you begin to feel. When you can, catch yourself. Remind yourself of this. Remind yourself that I am not the mind. I am not the body. I am not my affairs and think of the screen with its images or think of the dream state.

See all these things I'm sharing with you, you have to be able to grasp and do this, what I am saying to you. Work on yourself this way. Do not let your mind go on and on rambling. Making you feel this way. Making you feel that way. But try to catch yourself as often as you can. Use the examples I've shared with you.

Whatever problem you may have, whatever is going on in your life try to realize again that when you are in deep sleep none of these things are happening. If you ever notice you have a cold or a cancer or if you have a lack or limitation in your life and you worry about it, when you're in deep sleep you do not worry. The disease does not bother you. It's only when you awaken that you begin to feel all of these things. But in deep sleep you are at peace.

This is why when you awaken from deep sleep you always feel good. Think about this. Watch yourself in the morning deep and long. When you first wake up you feel wonderful. You're not thinking about your sickness or your financial condition, or your enemies or the world situation. You're not thinking about anything when you first wake up and you feel good. But then you allow the I-thought to go from the heart into your brain and you say, "Uh-oh I've got problems." You begin to think about your problem. This is the I-thought thinking about this. It is the I-thought that makes you feel that you are awake in this world and you've got all kinds of situations happening. Just by realizing what I'm saying lifts you up. Frees you.

Then you can also reflect on your dreams. In this dream you're a king and there is a war with a different country and you get killed. But you laugh and you say, "This was a dream, it never happened." But now you're dreaming the mortal dream. You've gone from that dream into this dream. And you're taking this dream very seriously as if it were real. This is the reason you're suffering and you're going through various problems and various situations. If you only did not take this world seriously and remembered who you are, you would never have a problem. The problem comes to the ego. It is the ego that goes through various problems and various situations. You have to catch yourself. Do not let a moment go by when you are not practicing this.

So you see there is no such thing as saying, "I'm burnt out. I can't go any further in my spiritual practice." You have all these things that you can do to yourself also. All these things that I'm sharing with you that you can work on yourself and recognize that you're not the problem, you're not the body, you're not the mind, you're not the world, you're not the situation, you're not your karma, yet you have to do this for yourself. You have to stop identifying with the body. This is the main problem. Again the body does not really exist. You have to therefore see that it is the I-thought that has caused you to believe that you've got a body.

All is well. There never was a problem. There never was anything wrong. You have a lot of things to think about. Therefore I don't want somebody to call me on the phone and say, "Robert I'm stuck. I can't go any further." See all the things you can do. All the things we've shared. Just to think of the statement, "I'm stuck. I can't go any further." Who is stuck? You're saying the I is stuck. Who is the I that is stuck? Where did it come from? Follow the I to the heart centre, where it will disappear in absolute reality.

Shanti, shanti, shanti, om.

Feel free to ask any questions.

SF: (Students asks question about mind being effective in satsang.)

R: As long as the mind is quiet it'll be effective. When the mind is quiet the thoughts subside. When there are no thoughts there is the self. So all these practices are really to quieten the mind, not for any other purpose. No matter what form of sadhana you're practicing. Whether you're a Jnana or bhakta or karmic yoga or anything else they're really the same. All of these practices are simply to quieten the mind. To make the mind one pointed. When the mind becomes one pointed self-inquiry becomes very easy. Then the mind will disappear completely and you'll be free.

SD: I think he's asking if satsang itself has a direct effect on the mind. Once the mind runs rampant during satsang. What if during your moments of silence when we're sitting here thinking a mile a minute. Is there still just a power in just being here that might transcend this?

R: When you're at satsang you're safe. For in satsang there is a spiritual practice going on continuously. Something is always happening to help you. More than you can ever imagine.

SF: Something else I was wondering about. "As ye sow so shall you reap." If a person is in that state, if I do something wrong I'll be punished and if I do something good or valuable I'll be rewarded. If something bad happens to me tomorrow, something really bad, who is being punished? There is no one being punished. There is punishment but no individual is being punished.

In other words would it not be more accurate because granted there is something that can be called cause and effect and it doesn't happen to an individual, it just happens. The bible says, the rain falls on the just and the unjust and then something good or bad happens. If something bad happens to me tomorrow it won't be Fred getting it back for something I did two hundred years ago. Is that not true? It just happens.

R: You are speaking in the relative plane. (SF: Yeah I realize that.) There is no punishment and there is no punisher. There is no one to punish. So how can you be punished? There is no punishment at all in reality. Punishment doesn't even exist. This is all part of your mind that makes these things happen. It is the mind that makes itself be punished. The law of cause and effect is a mental act. It comes out of your mind.

Therefore again if the mind subsides where is there cause and effect. Cause and effect is of the mind. So no matter what you did in a previous life so-to-speak, that was part of the illusion. If you awaken today and you realize that you don't even exist! So it's impossible for you to experience any effect of anything that happened two hundred years ago, yesterday or today. It's only when you believe that. It's only when you allow yourself to live in that state of mind when those things appear to be present. That it happens like that.

Otherwise, who is to punish? For you have to believe that there is a God that punishes. And you said even if you believe that you are not the person that is being punished, you are saying that punishment exists, where would it come from? There has to be a cause for it. And the only cause is absolute reality, pure awareness, God, Brahman. In all God's truth there is nothing about punishment. Consequently there is no punishment at all. It never existed. Only when you believe that it exists then it will happen.

SU: Robert what you started out to say is exactly what I've been going through and I did start inquiry but that doesn't work for me any more. None of these practices work for me anymore. But when you said a little later, "Who is feeling stuck," you say, "I is feeling stuck." And then you say, "Follow the I to the heart centre," but that doesn't really work for me either so I am just really stuck.

R: When you say, you're really stuck? Who are you that is stuck? (SU: Yeah well that's what I can't get beyond it.) Do not try to get beyond it. Just realize that you exist. You exist, you're alive. You don't have to get beyond anything. Don't try to get beyond anything. (SU: But it's very uncomfortable being there.) Where are you? You're nowhere. You're feeling that you're some place, that you're stuck or wherever you are. That's the mind that feels that. It is the mind that goes through these experiences. But become aware that you are not the mind. By looking at yourself, as I gave you examples before by looking at yourself as images on the screen.

Imagine you're watching television. And all these things seem real, they effect you by the story that is going on. It affects you adversely or it affects you happily or whatever. But they're all images. When you're tired of watching you turn off the television there is only the screen. So be aware that's what's happening to you.

The one that feels stuck is the image like on the television. But if there is no image there is no one to be stuck. Just by knowing this you become unstuck. Just by understanding what is happening. Simply understand what is going on. As was just explained and there will be nobody to be stuck.

SF: On Sunday you said how important, how valuable it was to be kind to others including the homeless. We should be practicing humility to all who we can and give service to all of the world. It's to me as though we're getting right back into the fate versus free will.

R: As long as you believe that you are human. That you are the body and the world is real, you have to be of service to humanity. You have to do the best you can in this world and have a great compassion, a great love, a great peace and do all these things we've talked about. But as you graduate and as you rise higher there will be no one left to do these things. The one who does all these things will be totally dissolved. And you will become the whole universe. And you will be able to exclaim, "All this is the self and I am that!" As long as you believe you're Fred you have to have compassion. You have to help the homeless. You have to be kind and the rest. But when Fred disappears everything else will disappear also.

SD: Robert going back to your talk about there not being punishment. I understand intellectually that on the highest level there is neither cause nor effect but as you said the question was on a relative level. Can't it be seen not so much as punishment but something balanced. You're right, there is no punitive God, there is no one to be punished but on the earth plane karmic level there is definitely divine balance that would constitute what we call bad karma rather than the consciousness of punishment?

R: That is just a change in words. If you want to believe it's balanced believe that. Don't get... (SD: But it takes away the idea of a punitive God which is...?) It may but you're still worrying about balance. Worrying if you're balanced or not, if you're off balance. The whole idea is not to allow yourself to identify with those things. Do not think of those things too much. Rather think of who you really are and the truth about you, your reality. Always focus on reality. The I-am. Do not think of balance too long. Do not put yourself on that level. Lift yourself upward.

SI: Robert, the things if there is punishment or any of the things say all is well?

R: Exactly, all is well goes beyond punishment and balance. Everything is right. Drop all the thinking. Do not worry about these things. If you're identifying with the source by saying, "All is well," that will suffice. In other words do not try to be too analytical. And do not try to figure it out to an extent, trying to understand where punishment comes from, where free will comes from. And you just simply say to yourself, "All is well," and let it go, forget everything else.

When you say, "All is well," you are believing in a supreme power. Something beyond your thinking, something beyond your mind, something beyond your body. And you are trusting it by saying, "All is well." Then everything will take care of itself.

SF: The mind creates problems and then turns around and creates the drama? (R: Exactly.) In a way.

R: Exactly, it can, or even if you solve your problems, new ones will pop up. New ones will always pop up. You solve one set of problems new ones will come in. That is the nature of the mind, there is no end to it. Discover what the mind is and become free.

SF: I mentioned to Frank the other day, I was trying sitting in silence. And I set my timing to 30 minutes and after about 15 the telephone rang and it didn't bother me, that the telephone rang I said that is all there is to it. So I went and answered it and then went back and tried to sit in the silence again. Did the best I could but the fact that it didn't disturb me...

R: That's good. Everything is part of the sadhana. Everything is part of the spiritual practice. If the phone rings or there is noise or something appears to be wrong. There is never anything wrong. That's your practice to see if you will react. It's all part of the practice. (SF: In other words there is no way for something to be different than it already is.) Exactly. Now when you forget, there is nothing in this universe that wants to hurt you. There is nothing to try to interfere with you. You are totally free.

SH: You say there is nothing wrong at all that's occurred, that means carte blanche, completely. (R: Exactly.) There are no exceptions? (R: No exceptions.) It's only the mind that misconstrues things. (R: Yes.) There is certainly an appearance as though they are. (students laugh)

R: They certainly can, but to whom do they appear? (SH: From yours truly.) Exactly. (SH: All you have to do is to look at the morning paper.) Of course. It's really interesting. There is floods and rain. We have three days of chaos and today the sun comes up like nothing happened. (laughter) The sun doesn't care. Does the sun say, "I won't come out today because of all the chaos in the world? The rain, the deaths, whatever is going on. The sun always shines. So in the same way the sun is your self. It always shines. Your heart, your true nature. Is always shining. Whatever happens is an appearance. (SH: This is never real.) Never real. (SH: That's a beautiful analogy. The best.) I'm glad you like it. (students laugh) If the entire earth blew up the sun will still shine tomorrow. It doesn't mean anything. (students laugh) (SH: It wouldn't bat an eye. Wow.) Your real self, your real nature that you really are can never be affected by anything. You are never born, you can never die. You have always been and you will always be.

R: Mary do you want to read the Jnani? We haven't read it for a while.

SM: I don't know where it is. (R: That's okay.) Here it is.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary.

Do we have any more questions or if somebody would like to say something?

S: Robert this word, swaruppa? The Jnani rests in...?

R: His real nature. His real self, his real nature, who he really is.

(new transcripts announced by Robert on table for students to take )

(general student talk)

R: Remember to love your Self, to pray to your Self, to bow to your Self for you are immortal, you are the Self and all is well, peace. Until we meet again...

THERE IS NO CAUSE FOR ANYTHING!

16th February, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. (Good afternoon) It is good to be with you again this lovely Sunday.

It is most difficult for people to understand. That life has no purpose. Life has no purpose whatsoever. This is a blow to the ego. We think we're so important. We go through life having various experiences. We believe it's getting us somewhere. Yet life is totally meaningless. No purpose at all.

A good example of this is the dream. When you are dreaming it appears that you have a purpose. You're doing all sorts of things in your dream. Yet you wake up and all of the things you've done in the dream. You've gone to school in the dream, you've earned a PhD, you've gotten married, you have children, you became a grandfather, grandmother. Then you awaken, it's all gone.

And so it is with this life. We take it seriously. We're so concerned about our bodies, our affairs, yet one day we will all awaken. And we will laugh, for we are not the world, nor the body, nor the mind. We have absolutely nothing to do with these things.

It reminds me of the story of the two seekers who wanted to visit a great Sage who lives across the river. It was a rainy day, hurricane winds were blowing and they wondered if they should go across the river, they may drown. It's bad weather. But they decided to go. For it was more important to see the Sage. Then to take care of their lives. They tried to find a ferry man to take them across the river. But the ferry man wouldn't go. They found another ferry man he wouldn't go the weather was just too bad. They finally found a ferry man who said, "Since you're going to see the Sage I will take you across. But remember your life is at risk." There were gail winds blowing, high waves, "Do you still want to go?" They said, "Yes." They got in the boat the ferry man was rowing, the boat was going up and down on the waves. The water was getting into the boat, the ferry man asked, "Should I turn around?" They said, "No, keep going." They finally got to the shore and they saw a bane of pilgrims coming from the Sages place. They asked the pilgrims, "Which way is the Sage. Where can we get the darshan of the Sage?" And they looked at the seekers and they said, "You fools, the ferry man who took you across was the Sage." They looked for the ferry man and he was gone he disappeared.

What is the purpose of this story? It has no purpose whatsoever. (students laugh) Why am I telling this story? To pass the time. (students laugh) There is absolutely no reason to tell you this story. (laughter) That's the way life is. (students laugh)

We become serious, we get involved in religions, we get involved with Sages, books as if these things are going to help us. They appear to help us. Just as the world appears to be real. But nothing in this world can really do anything for you. For you and the world do not exist. You are pure awareness. There is no thing you have to do to see this, to find this. You are that!

The world can do nothing to you unless you react to it and allow it to. There is absolutely nothing anywhere that has anything to do with you. Who do you think you are? You think you're somebody important. You have a good job. You have a family. You pay your taxes, I think you pay your taxes. (laughter) All these things you're doing, why are you doing these things? You don't know. You were born in a certain family. You were totally brainwashed. And now look at you. (laughter) You think you're somebody. But you're a nobody. There is no body.

Why do you want to be somebody? You want to be somebody because you believe it will bring you happiness and peace and love, joy. You want to fulfill your life. Do you not do this in the dream. You do the same thing in your dreams. Yet you awaken and you find yourself in this dream.

You all look so peaceful. Why do you want to look peaceful? Peace is a delusion. Birth is an illusion. Death is an illusion. You are an illusion. You are not what you believe you are. Even if you feel you're spiritual. Who is there that has to believe they're spiritual? Who is the person who believes they are something? Whatever it may be? Whether you're searching, whether you're practicing certain meditations, whatever you're doing, there has to be somebody to do these things.

I am saying, "Find out who this somebody is." Who is this somebody who has to go through various yogas, meditations. Read various books. Get involved in various organizations. Who has to do this? Find out! Find out who that person is. From where did that person come from? Who gave that being birth? Who feels he is the doer? Investigate yourself. Dive deep within yourself. See who you really are and then see if there is a purpose for your life. The only justification we give to our lives is we believe we are making it a better place for our children, a better place for humanity. But if you look through history you would see the dastardly things that have taken place on this earth. You see man's inhumanity to man. All of these things that have happened since the beginning of time. And we've always tried to bring peace into this world, harmony and joy. Nothing seems to work. Nothing seems to work because you're playing with a dream world. You are involved in a world that is a dream.

Yet for some reason you believe you're somebody and you're doing things in this world as a so-called person. Yet in reality you are not a person, this world does not exist. There is no thing of this world that is of importance and you're wasting your life by running after the things that change. I'm not saying that you should give up your life and go live in a cave. Yet that is not such a bad idea. You really do not have to give up anything. Except your thoughts. It is the mind, your thoughts that get you in trouble. You identify with your thoughts. You identify with your mind. Your mind creates all the pictures that you see in front of you. It creates this world that you observe and get involved in. The whole universe emanates from your mind. Everything, people, places and things have come out of your mind.

To awaken find out where the mind came from. Where did the mind come from? The mind never existed so it couldn't come from any place. There is no mind. If there is no mind there are no thoughts. If there are no thoughts there is no body. If there is no body there are no others. If there is no others there is no world and no universe. So you see all these things have come from your mind. You have to question yourself, "To whom comes this mind? Who thinks? Who is the doer? Who am I?"

Everything is nothing. No thing is your true nature. Because you exist, others exist. When you cease to exist, others will cease to exist. There will be only one. That one is emptiness, freedom. That one is absolute reality. That one is you.

Why do you wish to continue playing the games of this world and get involved in all sorts of things? Let go of the world. Let go of the pull of inertia, who makes you believe that you are a part of this world. That you are a human being. That you are an ego. That is all in the game of life.

It is sort of difficult to understand how you would function if you did these things that I outlined for you. Yet always remember that you will function without any help from yourself. You will continue to carry on doing the certain things you came here to do. You will be vibrantly happy. Due to the fact you are no longer the doer. There is no longer anyone who is responsible. The responsibility is on God's shoulders so-to-speak. Not your shoulders. You haven't any shoulders. You no longer have to carry the world. No longer believe that you are responsible for your condition.

In new age philosophy they teach that you are responsible for whatever happens to you. You cannot possibly be responsible for whatever happens to you because there is no you to begin with. There is no such entity as you. Who caused any problems, who is responsible for anything in this world. Such a being does not exist. Yet when you believe in your mind that you're responsible for something the picture your mind paints in this world is of you being responsible. Then you believe that you are a sinner. You believe you've done bad things in your life and you have to be punished, or if you believe in the new age teachings you believe you have invoked the law of cause and effect therefore the cause will bring the effect invariably. So if there is anything wrong in your life with somebody the effect is going to return to you.

In reality, in truth, there is no cause. There is just no cause. So how can there be an effect? In other words, who created the cause? You can say, "I did." You realize, you've got to realize that the I that you think is the cause does not exist and you begin to see where the I arose from where it arisen, arises from, where the I came from that thinks it's the cause and you will find the I never existed. If your I never existed there is no cause. If there is no cause, there is no effect. Consequently you are free. You're free right now. You have absolutely nothing to be sorry for.

This doesn't give you license to go out and do anything you like. For if you're doing anything you like, you're going to fall in the pit, so-to-speak. And appear to suffer accordingly in this world. But this teaching makes you see that there is no cause for any action. Some people like to say that the first cause is God. Yet there is no first cause. God is part of the creation of the mind. Think of this.

The things you have believed all these years to be hurting you. The sufferings that you've had in your life. Believing that you have caused problems for people, you've caused unhappiness is a lie. You are free. You are Brahman. You are sat-chit-ananda, effortless, causeless, choiceless, pure awareness. You have no form and no shape. You have no existence. Yet you are. You are not this and not that. You just are. You are something (for want of a better word) that is so far beyond the mundane world and beyond your experiences that you can never discover this with your mind, or with your trying or your meditating or whatever you do. You can never discover this reality. This absolute reality which you are. This freedom, this total bliss, which is beyond bliss, which is beyond freedom. You are something so beautiful that there are no words to describe it. This is beyond God. Beyond everything you can ever imagine. There is no name for it. When I use the word absolute reality, choiceless pure awareness, sat-chit-ananda, ultimate oneness, they're just words.

It is in the silence when you feel it. When there is total silence, and you're not looking for a description. You are not trying to say, "I feel happiness, I feel bliss," for when you say these words you limit yourself. For you are saying the I feels bliss, the I feels happiness. There is no I therefore there is no bliss and there is no happiness. Yet there is something, you will experience for yourself. It is no thing you can describe. It is no thing you can talk about. It is no thing you can discuss with anyone. It is not debatable. It is no thing you can prove. Yet you are that. You are that.

It doesn't matter what appears to be going on in your life. It is because you are concerned with your miserable life that you do not experience the truth, the reality. You are concerned with your affairs, with people, with places, with things. This is what keeps you back from experiencing this higher reality I'm speaking of. Trying to get your point across. Trying to win a battle. Trying to come out on top. This is what keeps you back from experiencing this reality. If you really want to awaken you must put this first in your life.

How do you put this first in your life? By learning to be calm and peaceful under all conditions, by observing everything in your life and leaving it alone. By allowing people to live their own lives and not judging or condemning. By beginning to see that the person you dislike, that the condition that you do not like, is only yourself. Whatever transpires is yourself. There is only yourself. If you realize there is only yourself whatever you do for others or to others you're doing to yourself.

Begin to work this way. Understand the one self and you will go beyond it. You will go beyond nirvana. Beyond God, beyond anything that you can ever imagine. When you think about these things you spoil it.

Again do not think or believe, this is too far out. You've got your life to live and you got things to do or feel as if you are doing the best you can and you've got responsibilities. Remember your body will appear to go through the processes, your body will appear to do the things it came here to do. You will continue on your track wherever you're going, whatever you're doing, yet you will not be you.

How can you be two different people, two different entities? To others you will appear to be a person. To others you will appear to be doing work. But the paradox about this is you will not be doing anything. You do absolutely nothing. You're not doing a thing. You are totally free and liberated. Yet as others look at you, you will appear to have a body, you will appear as they are. For you can only see yourself.

In other words, where you are coming from in consciousness that is what you see. If you believe you're a body, you're a mind, if you believe in the things of this world then you see them everywhere you look. You see other bodies. If you believe in suffering, you will see other people suffer. If you believe in crying you will see crying wherever you look. Whatever you believe in your mind you are creating in your life. But if you go beyond the mind where there is absolutely nothing going on you will be in a place that cannot be described. Yet when others look at you, you will appear to be working or doing the things you do.

You have to ask yourself, "Is it worth finding yourself by giving everything up?" Look at your life, look at your world, look at what is going on in this world, look at the universe what is happening and see what part you play. Where do you belong in the scheme of things?

If you believe in your humanhood you will go through trials and errors. Fighting for survival, trying to make things happen. But as you begin to let go, as you begin to go deep within yourself, as you begin to leave the world alone, mentally, you will find that you're becoming happier and happier, you're becoming peaceful, joyous, free. And one day this whole universe will be gone. It will have disappeared. And the self will exist. You are that!

Awaken and be free!

(silence, then tape restarts abruptly, Robert continues)

During the holiday season I asked many of you if you would, to bring toys for the children in the orphanage and some of you responded. I have certificates of acknowledge for those of you who did respond. The only two people I see here today who did this is Fred and Jay. Tony ... did also but he's not here. Did you?

SG: I think we did also. (R: Oh right! Anybody else? Who?) SD: Sam.

R: Good, okay. These are the certificates of acknowledgement. Like the wizard of oz. (students laugh) You get your certificate Fred? (SF: Thanks Robert.) Pass this back to Tony. Give this to Pam back of you. We have one more for Tony L... but he's not here. Jay's not here. (SJ: I don't need one. Why, what can I do with it?) Hang it on the wall. (SJ: I'll give it to Tony.) No, I've got one for Tony.

Now it is time to play, "Stump the guru." So pass the questions.

(Robert jokes) These two old fellow's are sitting on the park bench and one says, "Do you ever wonder if maybe life is just an illusion and nothing really exists?" And the other man says, "Well if that is true then I'm definitely paying way too much rent."

Q: (Robert reads) How can you distinguish an authentic Jnani from a phony?

A: (Robert answers) Just look in the mirror and whatever you see that is what you see in the Jnani. If you think highly of yourself you will see the true Jnani. If you think that you're a phony or there is something wrong with you, you will see that in the Jnani also. So by knowing yourself, you know the Jnani because there is only one, one Jnani, and that's you. You are never in the wrong place. If you were with a teacher who appears to be sort of phony that is what you deserve at this time. That's where you should be. There are no mistakes. Nothing is wrong. All is well. So if you want to find out who is true and who is false look in the mirror. (laughter)

Q: (Robert reads) Is fish as tamasic as meat? How about seafood?

A: (Robert answers) How about it? Satvic food is always the best food to eat. If you eat whole grains, fruits and vegetables, that should do it for you. You don't need anything else but that. On the other hand does it really matter? If you understand the truth about yourself, if you have an idea who you are, you will refine your diet automatically. There is really no high Sage, I mean the top Sages in the world that have really eaten meat. It's not necessary.

Do not stop eating meat because I say so. But you rather see who you are. Find out the reason why you like to eat meat, what it does for you. You become a graveyard for animals. As far as fish is concerned, people say it's cold blooded so we can eat the fish it doesn't matter. It depends on you. It depends how you see this. Again the safest diet is whole grains, fruits and vegetables. The rest is up to you. You cannot generally say what people should eat and say, "Eat this and don't eat this." Everyone is different. If you're living in the North Pole you have to eat whale blubber. I know that there are some people who live in the Caribbean Islands who eat whale blubber. Usually these people look like blubber themselves.

But take a look at your own life. See the things you eat and why you eat these things and why you need to eat these things. Find out where you're coming from. Find out who you are. Find the truth about yourself. Then you'll know what to eat personally.

Q: (Robert reads) Has there been analytical cases of a person reaching the state of consciousness that you are in by using the self-inquiry method?

A: (Robert answers) Definitely, there have been quite a few people who have reached self-realization, who have awakened by practicing self-inquiry. When you practice self-inquiry do not look at time. Do not think I have to reach it before I die. I have to reach it by 2 o'clock this afternoon or I'll be late for lunch. (laughter) Just do it without any motive. Practice self-inquiry without thinking anything is going to happen. Let it become part of your life, part of your nature. As you continue to do this, one day something will give, it has to. One day you will find that you're home free. Forget about time, forget about age, forget about everything. Just do the self-inquiry, persevere, something has to give.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert how are the doctors, (whatever this word is) to where you reside who practice colonic therapy. (repeats) How good are the doctors? Here are the doctors who practice colonic therapy. Somebody gave me the name of some doctors who practice colonic therapy.

A: (Robert answers) Somebody gave me some names of doctors who practice colonic therapy.

SC: I got a question as usual, it's simple. Still, I and some people I speak for myself, I still don't understand this illusion. You don't exist, you mean physically or emotionally when you say that, nothing exists. Life is an illusion.

R: You appear to exist in a dream don't you? (SC: Think about now, not in a dream.) But when you're dreaming... (SC: I'm not talking about dreaming, I'm talking about right now.) Imagine this is a dream, what we're doing right now. We're sitting like this asking questions and you ask me the same question. And I tell you, "Nate you're dreaming your life, it does not really exist," And you tell me, "I'm talking right now." You tell me the exact same thing in the dream. Whatever you're doing right now that you tell me in the dream. And I tell you, "All I can say is find out for yourself. When you find out for yourself there will be no question about it in your mind. You've got to find out." And you tell me, "How can I believe this? How can I accept something like this? It sounds so ridiculous." And then you wake up. It's the exact same thing. So-called life never really existed. It doesn't exist at all. (SC: How about the physical reality?) What physical reality, that's life, the physical reality, the mental reality, the emotional reality, it's all part of the mortal dream.

SC: But it actually exists, that microphone stand is solid, the chair you're sitting on is soft and solid.

R: It's a dream chair, it's a dream microphone. Just like when you were dreaming, you're dreaming of the microphone and the chair. You say it's solid then too. I come and tell you Nate you're dreaming. I come into your dream and you reject it. You say, "The microphone is solid, the chair is solid," because it's a dream microphone and a dream chair. Therefore you think it's solid, it appears solid. But when you wake up what happened to the solidity? (SC: It's still solid, I'm sorry.) (laughs) Of course it is solid but so is everything in your dream. (SC: In a dream, it's a dream but this isn't the dream.) But while you're dreaming you believe it's not a dream also. You believe it is reality, that's the point. When you're dreaming in the dream you're reacting aren't you? You think it's all real.

SC: In the dream I can follow you completely but I could see that this could be a dream also. But the physical reality is some of us are older, some younger. My hand is soft, it is flesh. I can cut it with a knife. That chair is a different color...

R: Don't you do the same thing in a dream? (SC: In a dream yes but not in...) But while you're dreaming you believe it's real and you will not say it's a dream. (SC: But it could actually happen now is what I'm saying.) What can happen? (SC: I'm doing this.) You're doing that in the dream also.

SC: But I wouldn't step in front of a car, I may step in front of a car in a dream...the dream would wake up, but if I step in front of a car in reality to me...

R: Then you wake up. (SC: Don't get away from the question.) (students laugh) You're getting away from the question not me. (SC: Okay I'll just drop it, the rest of the guys think it's a joke.) No, but look at it like this. When did you have our last dream? (SC: Probably last night.) Do you remember what you dreamt? (No answer) You forgot. Yet in that dream perhaps you were probably a king of a great country. And you had a duel with a sword with somebody and they stabbed you in the shoulder. And you bled and you hurt. And then the doctor came and bandaged your shoulder.

SC: Let me answer it like this, somebody told me about a dream I don't know how true it is, some man said he had a dream and he had four daughters and they all got killed and in real life so-called he had two daughters and they got killed. And he didn't show remorse and somebody said, "What's the matter with you, you don't show any remorse for your two daughters?" And he said, "In my dream four of my daughters got killed and I didn't show any remorse, so why should I show any remorse for the two daughters that died in this actual life?"

R: No the story goes that, the daughters who were killed they asked him and he says, "For whom shall I mourn? The daughters that were killed in the dream or my daughters who were killed now?" So you answered your own question.

SD: Because he's saying Nate that this is also a dream from which you will awaken.

S: I can't...I realize that. I see that the waiting part then there will be an awakening, I don't know what the awakening will be but in the mean time, I'm aging, feet are sore, they could be sore in the dream and they are sore now, but... (SD: They're sore now in the dream.)

R: You go through a dream, you're born, you go to school, you grow up, you get married, you work. You have sore feet, sore head, everything is sick in your body and the whole life span takes an hour, five minutes. (SC: In the dream?) In the dream when you wake up. (SC: But in this reality it takes 40, 50, 60, 70 years.) That is how it appears. But in the dream it appears as the same thing. You didn't know it takes a minute, five minutes and hour to wake up. (SC: Well okay) Because you were a baby and you grew up and you became Nate. (SC: I'm missing something I don't know?) You're not missing anything. The dream is like this. You dream... (SC: (Turns to another student) Do you understand it?) You go through life, you awaken. You go through this life, you awaken. There is no difference.

SC: All I know is I feel that I'm all alone and all you guys are sitting there not saying a thing. It's that you all know the answers, if you do speak up.

SB: Hey Nate is your awareness sore or who is aware of the sore feet? (SC: My mouth hurts where I had surgery on my gums.) Who is aware of the sore mouth? (SC: I am.) Is awareness sore? (SC: No awareness is not sore.) What's that? (SC: Just what is.) So be that and that's not sore. See what happens?

SB: Robert I had a dream, an interesting dream last night. (R: Umm.) I bought a new car. I was driving around and a girl a friend of mine she wanted to drive it and I let her drive it and she gets in and she drives away. And then all of a sudden I see the door open and she falls out and the car is still running. And then the car goes around the corner and she runs after me and she says, "The car ran over a man." And I said to myself, "Now I'm ruined. My life is ruined. How I wish this was a dream but no it's real. Here I am. It's real, how I wish it were a dream. It is real," and then I woke up. (students laugh) I remember that. How I wish this was a dream and then I woke up. How I wish this was a dream, but no the car ran over somebody and then I woke up. (laughter)

R: That is a good story. (SB: It really happened too because when I woke up I didn't even know I was up, it was just absolutely identical to this life, actually exactly the same feeling. It was great.) And now you're here, going through this dream.

SB: So then I have a cold. So then I say, "Does awareness have a cold?" Awareness is aware of the cold but awareness doesn't get a cold. So am I going to be the cold. Am I going to be the mind being the cold or am I going to be awareness who never had a cold.

R: Throw him out. (students laugh out loud) Any more wise guys say anything?

SF: Yeah, (laughter) if I ask myself where am I in the scheme of things? Either I am the centre of the scheme of things or there is no scheme of things. And the reality of the situation is there is no centre and no scheme of things? (R: Correct.) Thank you. I'm glad you agree. (laughter) If you hadn't I'd feel bad. I'd be confused.

R: You're good for nothing. Your interested in the centers and the scheme of things and realities and all kinds of things. Let go of all these thoughts, do not think! The less you think the more you'll know. (SF: You said the less we think the more we'll know?) Umm.

ST: Today you were talking about no causes and it's paradoxical that in self-inquiry we're looking for the source of the I, the cause of the I?

R: We are not really looking for the cause of the I, we're looking for where the I has arisen. Where did the I come from? How did it arise? I'm not saying there is a cause. We're just trying to think in our minds, where did the I come from? How did it originate? (ST: Well source for me is a synonym for cause.) You can say that to an extent too. (ST: You know there is source then there arises from the source...) Do not try to make our minds believe though, that there is a real cause because that will be a hindrance. For the I doesn't exist. (ST: Yeah.) We find out that the I had no cause whatsoever.

ST: Right so that was a little confusing when you were speaking about the cause, causeless. Also self-inquiry is a process of discovery. I mean I have to take what you're saying as a map and not as the final answer, I have to find my own final answer. Otherwise I am choosing to believe something which is not from my own experience. So I listen to what you say but for me the self-inquiry is the process of discovery of what is true. If that makes sense. I mean if I ultimately find that there is no cause but till that time there has to be only an idea. Just like the idea that there is a cause. They're just ideas. And the experience itself is the discovery is what self-inquiry is about.

R: Do not get hung up on that. Practice self-inquiry but do it in a peaceful, joyous understanding. Do not be too serious about it. Do not say this is the cause and I have to get to the cause and I have to find it, it's the only way I'll ever awaken. Just do self-inquiry in an easy way. Let it happen by itself.

ST: I find in my own experience that happens occasionally but at times self-inquiry requires a demands work, a lot of effort. Because I am interested in doing it but sometimes my mind because of its conditioning would rather solve a problem or digress in many other directions. There are moments when I can do self-inquiry when the mind is very concentrated. It just happens very spontaneously and very easily. A lot of the times I'm tired and I have to think about something else or I have to solve a problem that's at least how I feel and so I have to - it's effort.

R: In the beginning it's true. (ST: Yeah.) But as you carry on with it, when you have to solve a problem, it'll come automatically. Who has to solve this problem? (ST: Right. It happens, but in the beginning it's work wanting to get my mind away from the habit of wanting to solve a problem. Rather than looking at the bigger picture if that makes sense?) Yes it does, it appears as work. (ST: Right.) But try to understand that it is not really work. (ST: Right I understand that only at moments.) Because the person that does the work that is practicing self-inquiry doesn't exist. (ST: Right)

SD: In the same way I think whether you're looking for the source or the cause when you discover that there is no I then there would of necessity have been no source or cause.

R: Of course right. The point is do not put too much emphasis on the cause. Say, I have to find the cause of the I. What you're really doing when you do that is, you are imagining there is an I that exists and you have to find its cause. Whereas it's a question. From whence does the I come? You're just wondering about it. (SD: It is sort of rhetorical right?) It is sort of rhetorical yes. You are wondering about, "Where does the I come from? What is the source of the I?"

SB: Robert also, cause implies motion. A cause moving into an effect but the word source does not have to imply motion. It could be a motionless source.

R: How about apple sauce. (students laugh) (SB: How about spaghetti sauce. No, I mean a source that could be - is no motion, you know. There's a difference.) You could say that yes.

ST: Isn't self-inquiry a process of discovery I mean. If we go into self-inquiry we can assume that everything you are saying is correct, believe in what you're saying or disbelieve what you're saying and find out for ourselves and it seems to me if you try to set up self-inquiry in a way — yes I know the ego, the I is unreal — then it's not a pure question any more, it's a bias question. I know that it's unreal so I am only asking myself a question that I already know the answer to. Understand what I'm saying?

R: Yes but if you keep in back of your mind... (ST: So there is no freshness to the question, it's just...I know the answer and I'm just...it becomes like a mantra or something that's dead.) If you have in back of your mind that there is no source, there is no I and keep asking anyway. But you feel some place in back of your mind that it doesn't really exist, it'll happen faster.

SK: Perhaps for most of us that place at the back of our minds is rather a big place. (laughter) Like he says we really are confused about this I business and it's a real human impression. It sounds like sometimes you say, "Now we've got that problem solved so now let's go and play that even though we know there is not a real I." In fact there are a lot of voices around that think they are a real I, I suspect.

R: You have to work with that. You have to inquire, "For whom comes the I? For whom is the I?" But you have to have a little understanding at the back of your mind that there is no I that really exists. (SK: Right but that may be damn little for me and these words...) Then keep asking. Keep inquiring.

SK: Also going back to what you were saying that, the idea of doing it rather lightly...perhaps what word would you use, playfully or gently for self-inquiry, I can't remember exactly what word... (R: Umm.) And the way to talk about that would be as follows. For example occasionally self-inquiry perhaps for many of us seems to go well, you know everything appears good, there is peace and stuff and we're really in fat city, you know this sitting there and everything working. Many times it doesn't seem to be working that way, like that. Perhaps there is a tendency for the mind to want to force it to feel like that, to be like that. Is what you're saying, just ask and if the mind goes chatty and all that don't worry about forcing it into that...

R: Exactly, that is what I'm saying. When that happens you watch the mind you become the observer and you leave it alone. When self-inquiry becomes a burden to you, when you feel you're spinning your wheels then just watch yourself.

SK: Can you not also just do self-inquiry even though it's not working well? Doing it without worrying about the fact that it doesn't seem to be quote working well and there doesn't seem to be giving a lot of peace and quiet. You still just sort of do it without worrying about the fact that you don't like the results.

R: You can do it but it will not be as effective. It's only effective when you do it without having any tension. When there is no tension in your mind and in your body. You're simply inquiring, "To whom does the I come? What is its source?" And you wait. If you feel upset, if you feel it's a waste of time then observe yourself, watch yourself, find out who feels this way. Ask, "To whom does this tension come? Who feels up tight? Who feels as if they're spinning their wheels?" (SK: That is self-inquiry?) Self-inquiry. (SK: That is just the stuff below, where is the source?) You are getting to every problem that comes into your mind, then it is to attack every problem. But to realize some place at the back of your mind that there are no problems. You can do both at the same time. You can be attacking the problem inquiring about the problem, "To whom does it come?" Then there will be something that tells that there are no problems and you'll start laughing. There is nothing to attack. But if you take it too seriously then you're bringing it to life. You're making it a reality. You are making it a part of the relative world. As if it really exists. And it's a fight you've got on your hands.

SF: In the mountain path there is a piece called the answer is in the question. It's hard to expect an answer in the question. (R: Umm.) Kind of a forlorn hope or intellectual.

ST: It seems to me because I had stages of doubt at times. It seems that doubt is the greatest enemy because it's what you're talking about because it's almost hopeless. When you hit some heavy duty doubt, when you really want to know and then you're saying we have to take all of this as faith that what you're saying is correct. Then I'm stuck. Really I can't go beyond it because when the doubt comes up I don't want to believe anybody or anything. I just want to know what is true and I can't buy that the I is not real at that time because it just seems too real and then it's exactly what you're talking about, it's a fight. The fight goes on between who is right, who is wrong, who is leading me down, you know.

I think that if truth comes it has to be self evident, has to be obvious and there can be no trace that someone told me it was the way it was and I bought into that. (R: Umm.) Because it seems that it's a changeable, you know if you change your mind tomorrow then I'm screwed you know. (students laugh) You know, somebody out of the blue, you said well you know all I've said all these years are all bullshit, the fact is that you know, I was wrong and you guys are all just idiots for following me. (laughter) Where are we, we're up the creek without a paddle you know.

R: This is why I say so many times you probably are not here at these times. Do not believe a word I say. (ST: Yeah but you're saying do believe now. Do believe this I isn't real. Do believe have in the back of your mind this is not real, this is all an illusion. This is a dream. This is bah this is that, you know.) This is my confession. (ST: Yeah that's from your experience but I'm saying at times I really am into that because I have faith in you but the mind has it's way of creating this enormous doubt at times.) Of course it does. (ST: And then I'm just sitting there going, I don't know, who is right, who is wrong and the mind is devious and seems that the mind can whup me every time you know. And I resolve it somehow and the answers, what I'm saying your answers are not satisfying me because it seems predicated upon faith again in you and the mind has a vicious doubt that comes up. Because I guess it tries to hold on to the last degree. I don't know if other people can relate to what I'm saying or not...

R: Many can of course. (ST: So...) It happens to everybody. What you should do when that happens is to keep still. (ST: What happens is...) Just watch. Watch your thoughts keep still.

ST: What happens is I go...okay I've tried that, I go still I observe and then what happens when I'm an observation my mind even gets more active and then I end up going down some other garden path and then it's a while before I even think about self-inquiry again. Do you understand? It's just this vicious kind of mind that I'm dealing with here.

R: I understand perfectly. But try to say to yourself, "I don't care what my mind is doing. Let my mind go whatever direction it wants." In other words flow with it do not try to stop it because it will overwhelm you. (ST: That is what it does.) Because you're trying to fight it, don't try to fight it, just say, "Okay go ahead, do what you will, (ST: Yeah, it does.) go where you want." (ST: Even days later I come back to self-inquiry you know.) (laughter)

R: Just watch and let it go. But if you do exactly what I tell you now, let the mind go in whatever direction it goes, but become the observer of the thoughts. Just watch where you're going. Watch your thoughts deluding you. Watch them pushing you away. Observe them thoroughly. But do not get excited, do not get mad at your thoughts. Do not get mad at yourself. Do not get upset about it. Just say, "It's okay to do that mind. You can do whatever you like. It's okay." Just by observing that, the mind will become weaker it will not have the strength to continue fighting you.

ST: Well then I build up this heavy duty ego observer you know. What my understanding of observer is, the observer is like the place where the ego hides, the last hiding place of the ego. So you're asking me to jump into another part of my ego and watch this part of the ego. Does that make sense?

R: Forget about jumping into another part of your ego. (ST: The observer is the ego?) But the observer is the less ego. (ST: Oh.) It's not a complete ego. It's a very subtle part of the ego. (ST: Right.) It's the last part of the ego that is destroyed. So as you watch it this way and you observe it this way, the mind becomes weaker and weaker, and the ego will destroy itself.

SD: I relate to everything that John is just saying and I also feel sometimes that self-inquiry keeps the mind busier than say a mantra. But I think the answer to our having faith in you, you have already covered by saying find out for yourself. Find out for ourselves is not too different from having faith. And you always do suggest that. That the only way is by not believing you but by knowing on our own. (R: Of course.)

SM: How about surrender Robert? Can you work the two together?

R: Surrender is very good. Surrender is just letting go completely of the struggle. Letting go of the mind. Whatever it's doing, whatever it's saying, whatever it's telling you. Giving it all to God so-to-speak, releasing yourself. Not allowing your mind to do anything to hurt you. Whatever it does, you surrender it. By saying, "Not mine, but thine."

SD: So in other words say for example if our mind gets really busy and we sort of catch ourselves being busy that we could say, "God take this busyness from me," or I surrender this busyness? (R: You can say, "I have no mind of my own. I have no thoughts of my own. I have no body of my own. It's all yours.") Which we have to do to the guru? (R: Yes.) So I know one time you said something about giving thoughts to me that would be, it would be...just when you find yourself so busy I sometimes say, "Robert take these thoughts from me." And I imagine that you've taken them and they're not my problem anymore.

R: You let go, you surrender, you give them up. That is a good method. Good practice. (SH: Do you really want all that garbage?) (laughter) SD: It doesn't affect him, does it?

R: It doesn't exist. (SH: Wow, then you don't receive it.) It goes through me. (SH: It doesn't even do that if it doesn't exist. Who is the you it goes through?) The you that you think appears true. (SH: Wow that's doubly good.) (laughter) You believe that I'm taking your stuff from you. But when you give it up you feel better and I feel better. (SH: I don't involve you at all, so there is no need to.) If you like to you can surrender the stuff. (SH: I wouldn't do you a dirty trick like that.)

SD: But it wouldn't affect him. (SH: He says it wouldn't but it might. I wouldn't want to slaughter you Robert.) He tells me there's no meaning, it's not going to...

SB: No wonder you're so fat.

R: You can use any method you like. (SH: Yeah.) But do not be disturbed about the mind or the ego or what appears to come to you. Be still. Be quiet.

ST: I have issues about that about just being quiet, because you know there is a lot of people that go up on the mountain top and they're real quiet for twenty years and when they come down and they get pissed off and it's all over you know. (laughter) (R: You're right.) So quietness you know to hell with it you know. So you keep the samskaras quiet for a while and then they get a little aggressive when you get involved again, so it just doesn't seem that quietness is the answer. Quietness maybe is a symptom of either two things, either a pacification of the samskaras, so that is that you retreat from the world and then nobody bothers you and then you're happy for your whole life. You win 3 million dollars in lotto and you get a nice place you're all set you know.

And the second way is that you really burn off those samskaras and no matter if you live in hell and you feel happy you know. Because there are a lot of people in India I notice are into the observer and one guy spent seven years in a teraboda monastery he did a lot of self observation. And he noticed when he got back everybody aggravated him you know. So he said, "To hell with all that silence and observing the Self let's do some therapy. Let's get in there and clean out the old garbage pit." And so that was his way of resolving it. And it just seems that the silence isn't enough. Okay we pacify those little samskaras for a while but hell how can we know that they're really burned. I can understand the idea that the grace you're transmitting is burning the samskaras, like you say do the silence certain times of the day. But I don't think that necessarily silence is the answer for liberation. It could be pacification and often is you know.

R: That's a good point but what I'm getting at when I say be in silence, (ST: Yeah.) I don't mean to go away to a cave or to a mountain top or to hide from your work, be in silence where you are. Be in silence by not reacting. This is what I'm referring to.

ST: But by tiemas, my friend used to say about tiemas. They go in like a bastard they are like a saint for twenty minutes and they come out like a bastard. (students laugh) So I've been a bastard a lot of my life and I want to be a little different you know. I can understand self-inquiry maybe if we can find the source. Something beyond the personal I that, just that discovery there will just awaken us. But I think that pure silence sometimes when you speak seems to be a pacification of the ego, you know?

R: Not really. The silence I'm speaking of is the mind becomes weaker and weaker until it dies. And you do this by looking at the world. The vicissitudes of the world that you're in, the problems you go through, watching them, not reacting. Keeping the mind from reacting that is quieting the mind. That is the silence I'm talking about.

So you can be in your job, you can be anywhere. You notice the things that used to bother you and annoy you no longer have the power to do that because you are not reacting, you are not accepting it. And your mind has become quiet while it's active. So this is quietness in activity. Things are happening all around you, you're not hiding from it. You're not trying not to think about anything, you're just not reacting. When you do not react the mind becomes still. The mind quiets, as it becomes quiet this way it weakens and you will eventually get rid of it. So that is the silence I'm talking about.

ST: Well why doesn't it work for all those billions of people in the world over many centuries who have had years and years of quiet meditation time you know. Whether they are Buddhist or Hindu or Christian or Vedic or whatever who are just bastards after all these years.

I saw a whole thousand Buddhists spent years at a ceremony and they were pushing and shoving just as hard as anybody...

HEALTH, SICKNESS AND DEATH

20th February, 1992

Robert: ...shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening. It is good to be with you once again. Beautiful Thursday evening. Good to see you. Share with you.

During the week we had a few incidents happening. A fellow by the name of Ken came here a couple of times, left his body. Some people have a few diseases. Some of you are very healthy. So what we'll do tonight is we'll talk about health, sickness and death.

We have to remember that these things are for the relative world. A being who has transcended the world has absolutely nothing to do with death or health or sickness. Yet you hear so many stories about different Saints who seems to have died horribly. People like Christ, Milarepa, Rama Krishna and our beloved Ramana maharshi, they seem to have died horrible deaths. What's going on? These people were healers apparently. Ramana Maharshi, Rama Krishna, Milarepa were not healers per se, but by people being in their presence, hundreds thousands of people appears to have been healed. Yet these people died these horrendous, horrible, dastardly deaths, what happened? What's going on?

Well there is one school of thought that tells you that the Sage takes on the evil karma of the devotees. I do not agree with this. The Sage has absolutely nothing in him or her to take on anything. There has to be a taker. There has to be a part of the Sage that is still active in this world in order to take on the evil karma of somebody else. But since karma does not exist, evil does not exist therefore how is this possible for this to happen. This is a story that is told. Perhaps some yogi's have taken this on themselves. If they have transferred the disease to their own body perhaps they can do this. As a rule, Sages never do anything like this.

The actual reality of the fact of the Jnani is this: There is health and sickness, disillusion, regeneration, good and bad this has to be transcended. Instead of trying to bring health to a sick person the proper action to take I believe would be to transcend both, health and sickness. For one leads to the other. Who is healthy and who is sick? The ego. If the ego goes where can there be sickness or healthy...or health? There is only sickness and health because the mind or the ego seems to be active.

We have people in this world like Joel Goldsmith who most of you have heard of, who was a healer. He healed thousands of people in his day. There is a place for this. His method was to sit in the silence with his client, not say anything and the person would be healed. The way he worked is he had a strong consciousness of the fact that God expresses as the earth as the flowers as the trees as human beings as animals, there is only God and God is absolute perfection. Therefore if there is only God as absolute perfection where does sickness come from? This is the method he used. But he worked in the silence. He would never acknowledge a disease as having any validity. In other words he would not try to remove the disease, for to remove a disease simply means that you've got a disease. The truth is there is no disease. There is only God.

Yet a real true Sage never works with things like this. Ramana Maharshi never taught his devotees to heal. When I asked him about his disease that he had in his body, he remarked the body itself is a disease. Which is true.

Think how ridiculous healing is to begin with. If a person is healed of a disease. This doesn't mean he is going to live forever anyway. Most of the people that these people healed reverted back to their disease after a while, some didn't. So they lived five more years on this earth, they had to drop their body also. When you look at it this way isn't healing a waste of time? When you can use that energy to become self-realized. You can use that energy that you use to heal people to work on yourself, to awaken to reality and then you wouldn't care less whether it is, health or disease or death or birth. Those things wouldn't matter at all if it were real and you were working to your true self.

A Sage does not belong to this world or to the universe. Therefore a Sage does not become interested in healing or this would put a Sage on a plane of relativity. We will not judge who is a Sage or who is not. But the fact remains in Advaita Vedanta we do not try to heal people. By your very presence healings may take place, just by being. This is why it's so important to work on yourself, transcending your body and the world, going beyond health, sickness, wealth, poverty, good, bad, going beyond this duality. And coming to the place where there is ultimate oneness. Where you have become pure being.

Yet people still observe the horrendous conditions that Rama Krishna, Ramana Maharshi and the rest of these people went through. Evil is in the eyes of the observer. In other words you see this yourself. You're seeing yourself. Where you are at this time in your point of evolution. When you look at a person dying and look at a person with problems, the Sage does not have this problem.

A Sage who appears to be dying from a disease is not doing this. There is nobody left to have this problem. And we can't even say this is the Sage's body going through this, this is not the Sage. For the Sage will explain to you and tell you he has no body. There is no body that suffers. There is no body that has a problem. There is no body who goes through any situation in this world. And again you say, "Well I see this thing." Try to catch yourself and realize what you're saying. "I" see this, it is the I-thought that sees this.

As we evolve on this path we have to learn to catch ourselves when we talk. Not just babble and keep talking and talking. Talk less and try to remember the words that you use. You say, "I saw this so it must be true." The I you're referring to is the ego, the I-thought, the mind. It is the mind that sees sickness and death. And comes to the conclusion this is horrible, this is terrible. When you begin to realize the mind does not exist. When you begin to see the ego does not exist. Then there is no one who sees anything or feels anything and has any problems. You have to work that out with your self. Always catch the I in action.

Even if you're feeling pretty bad. Even if you feel terrible about yourself or about somebody else or about the world. Try to realize who it is who feels this way. It is not you. Your real nature is pure awareness. It is something that feels like you, it's something that appears like you, something that appears so real that you will not deny it. For when you're suffering, you've got this pain, this sickness and this disease or somebody else has it. You see it, you hear it, you talk about it, you feel it, turn the other way. Turn the other way. Begin to feel your Buddha nature. Realize that you are no mind. In other words there is no mind that has the power to cause any problems in your life. It is you who gave birth to the ego, to the mind and your thoughts. What you is this? Who are you? Always be aware of this. Let your body do what it will. Do not interfere with it. Just be yourself. The self that is pure bright and shiny.

Yet do not fool yourself. If you feel that you can't handle it then you have to go to a doctor. Know the truth and do what you have to do to take care of yourself. There are many Christian Scientists who drop dead everyday because they will not go to a doctor. It is true that if you understand Christian Science you'll be able to heal yourself and others yet there are very few people who have that high consciousness.

Do not worry about yourself or fret about yourself. Do not feel guilty if you have to see a doctor. Do not feel as if you're doing something wrong, you're committing a spiritual sin if you go to a doctor or a chiropractor or anything else. You're playing the game. You're living the mortal dream and you're doing whatever has to happen, whatever you have to go through, do it happily. Do not judge it or think about it or analyze it. Just do it. Just like eating. When you eat you do not analyze your food, do not judge your food, you simply eat. And so it is with your health. If you feel something is wrong and you cannot handle it spiritually go to a doctor. This is all on the relative plane.

I'm talking to you about these things because many of you have called me and tell me about a problem you may have. And they really refuse to get medical attention for this problem. They want to be healed spiritually, naturally. You have to remember everything is spiritual. That is the thing that many of you forget. You separate things. You separate things into categories.

If you act spontaneously and you live in the here and now then you will know what to do. You do not plan anything. You break your finger you go to a doctor, you don't think about it. The doctor sets your finger in a cast and everything is okay. There is nothing to think about, there is nothing to worry about, there is nothing to concern yourself about. You just do it.

This is true of everything in your life. If you wake every morning and you realize the truth about yourself. That you are absolute reality, pure awareness, nirvana, ultimate oneness, this will begin your day. And you take it from there doing whatever has to be done.

The problem is with some of you is you think too much about these things. You analyze the things that are going on in your life, you think about them, you worry about them, you fret about them. Whereas in truth you just let go and do what you have to do. In the reality there is absolutely nothing wrong. Everything is perfect and good. And the reality is here and now. This is the reality. This is where some of you become confused.

When I say this is the reality and you're feeling your humanhood, you're feeling your pain, you're feeling your stress, you're feeling whatever you're feeling. I tell you this is the reality, how can this be the reality? I feel lousy, I feel this, I feel that. You only feel bad when you think about it. Follow this closely. If you begin to live in the split second that I talk to you about, in the moment! You will not feel bad.

If you begin to feel in the absolute moment that you are absolute reality, pure awareness, in that moment you feel wonderful. And that moment turns into another moment, into another moment, into another moment. This is what I mean when I say, "Everything is in its right place. Everything is unfolding as it should. You are perfect now, you are perfect now!" Not in your thoughts when you begin to think about this. You are perfect right now! Right now! There is absolutely nothing wrong with you right now! Everything is in its right place right now!

When you begin to talk about it, when you begin to think about it, when you begin to analyze it, something else comes in. Like a mirage. The water in the mirage appears to be real. As soon as you try to grab it, it becomes sand. Your disease, your sickness, your depression, your stress, even your happiness and all the things that are going on in your life, in the world that make you happy are like the mirage, like the water in the mirage. If you really try to grab it, it doesn't exist.

When I say, "When you try to grab it," I mean when you try to live in that moment in that split second. In that split second there is only God. There are no room for thoughts and no room for anything else. But the moment you begin to think you spoil it and you become human once again.

This is the reason you were given self-inquiry. For self-inquiry is beautiful for things like this. You begin to see that I is sick, that I has the problem. I is the one that is giving you the problems. Who is I? You have to catch yourself. Always catch yourself.

When you say there is no sickness, there is no disease this is a truth. But for whom is there no disease? For the one who knows the truth and lives in the truth and is the truth. This is why people like Christ, Krishna, Rama Krishna, Ramana Maharshi, Milarepa, many others appeared to have been suffering. Yet in truth noone ever suffered. Noone ever died for noone ever lived. Try to understand this, your true nature is spirit. Yet for some strange reason, you've taken on this form, what you call a body that is born. While you were being born you are still the self. The self doesn't come into the birth.

People ask the silly question, "When does the soul come into the birth, in the body? The third month, the fourth month, the sixth month?" Try to understand this teaching, there is no soul that comes into anybody. You have always existed. The Self is the Self.

When you take on the body you are still the Self. As the body grows through experiences you are still the Self. As the body appears to go through diseases, illnesses, situations in this world you are still the Self. When the body gets old and seems to die you are the same Self that existed before you were born.

It's like a chalkboard. The chalkboard exists and you draw your baby being born on the chalkboard. Then you draw a picture of a baby growing up on the chalkboard. Then you draw a picture of the baby having cancer when he becomes a man or a woman. Then you draw a picture of the person dying on the chalkboard. From the very beginning the chalkboard was there. The chalkboard was always there. The pictures were different but the chalkboard was always there. In reality you are like the chalkboard. You are the self, pure intelligence. The self can never die and was never born. There is no disease that can affect it. It is all-pervading. And you are that.

You have to begin to feel this. You have to let go of the clinging to the body. By letting go I mean, do not feel that you are being persecuted, that you are being laughed at, that something is wrong with you. That you have any sickness or diseases. Always try to understand when this happens to you. Who has these things? The image on the chalkboard. It is the image that has these problems not you. You are totally free. You have always been free and you will always be free. There never was a time when you were not free. So it's wrong identification. Identify with the reality.

Let's say for instance you have a hernia. You go to the doctor. There is nothing wrong with going to the doctor. There is nothing wrong with this at all. The doctor tells you what you have to do to correct the hernia. All the time you realize you know that you are not the body, you are not the image on the chalkboard. You are the pure self. But yet you go through the hernia operation. You don't think about it. You don't argue about it. You've done whatever has to be done. And the body appears to be in good shape again. When all the time you realize that nothing happened there was no one who went through this experience. This is how you should look at your everyday affairs, at your business. Look at your home life. Look at the world, look at what is happening in the world the same way.

Images, everything is images. The light of the self appears to cause these images to take form and to do whatever it has to do. But there is only the self, this is the reality and the images do not even exist. We don't even say, "They appear to exist." For when you think they appear to exist you're giving them value, you're giving them power. You're believing in them as if they were reality.

So you have to ask the question. "To whom do they exist? To whom do these images exist? They exist to me. I feel them." As soon as you say this to yourself immediately the answer should come to you. It is the I, the I-thought that feels the images not you. You are free and clear, you have absolutely nothing to do with the I-thought. Now when you have done this you have separated the disease the problems where they may seem to be from yourself haven't you? Because the I-thought is out here some place. It has nothing to do with you. The I-thought feels sickness, it feels a headache. The I-thought feels that when something good happens you're happy in this world. That is all the I-thought that feels this. So you just watch. You observe.

As you keep doing something like this as you understand what I'm talking about you will notice that the pain disappears. For after all who has the pain? The I-thought, not you. Therefore look at yourself as two separate entities, this will help. You look at yourself as the I-thought which goes through the world and has all kinds of experiences in the world, good and bad, rich and poor, sick and healthy. And the self which is absolute reality and is free and clear of everything.

This simply means that what you call sickness or disease or a problem is outside of your jurisdiction. It appears to exist by itself, it is not you. You have absolutely nothing to do with these things. Do not judge by appearances. Do not try to analyze or figure it out. For you get deeply involved when you do this. Even discussing this is not right. This is between you and yourself. There is absolutely nothing to discuss. Nothing to talk about.

You remember the chalkboard analogy. And you realize that you've always been, you always will be. There never was a time when you were not and these other things were simply images that seemed to be superimposed on the self. So do not identify with the disease itself. Do not identify with the problem or whatever. Rather identify with the self. The one that has always been. I am that!

It's not really hard. As you go through everyday experiences always catch yourself. Always catch yourself thinking. Catch yourself worrying, being afraid. And immediately understand that you are the chalkboard. You are the absolute reality that has never changed. It has always been and will always be. You are perfect.

(silence) (Tape starts abruptly after silence Robert continues)

R: ...peace.

SF: The other day you were talking about compassion. And my understanding is that Maharshi, he said he felt that this came to him out of compassion for his disciples, devotees. (R: Yes.) Sir? (R: Yes, that's true.) Thank you. One thing that I mentioned a few months ago was the fact that addiction to alcohol was lifted from me overnight and I wanted to see if I got the right intellectual understanding of what transpired. It could be said to be my karma. But there is no such thing as my karma, there is karma. And this particular thing happens to this psychosomatic apparatus. Also I had another similar thing but I didn't have anything to do with it and I wasn't being punished when I had this bad experiences, when I had two heart attacks and two open heart surgeries being a victim of so-called alcoholism. I didn't have anything to do with it, it wasn't real in the first place, anyway. Is that an accurate description on what happened?

R: In a way it is but remember there is no karma to begin with. There is not only not your karma, there is no other karma. Karma doesn't even exist. Do not give it any power by believing in it. This is something we use. We use that word to explain situations to people who don't understand. So we say, "It's karma." But in reality there is no karma. (SF: Karma is in duality.) Karma's in duality. And you have absolutely nothing to do with this. Therefore by realizing the truth about this a healing can take place. As soon as you mention it, it will happen by itself.

SD: Robert this is less a question than just sharing a comment and it's definitely on the relative level but for some reason it's so polite maybe when you spoke of healings or when I had the healings long before I knew you, I never assumed that they were to prolong life but rather to alleviate the pain and suffering from your sojourn and surely on the relative level this is good because just like when Yogananda from the viewpoint of a yogi rather than a Sage said it was much easier to prolong spiritual matters in a healthy body.

R: Yes, this is true. What I'm saying if you dwell on the understanding of your real nature, then what you call pain will diminish. The more you understand the truth about your self. The less you will be involved in pain or sickness or death. Even though your body may appear to be going through it. This is paradoxical. But it's true all the same. If you understand the truth about yourself that you are absolute reality, that you are pure awareness, that you are pure being, that understanding removes the so-called pain from your so-called body. For in the absolute reality there is no pain, no pain exists.

As you keep seeing yourself apart from the pain, as you keep seeing yourself as a different being totally apart from the pain angle, where the pain comes from and separate yourself from that by knowing the truth about yourself then there will be no pain. But the paradox is you will appear to be in pain to others. Just like the people we were talking about Ramana maharshi, Rama Krishna and so forth.

Christ was nailed to the cross but in reality he was not in pain. There was no one to be in pain. He appeared to others to be in pain. This is the way we perceive him. But we're perceiving ourselves as a mortal, as human. As long as you think of yourself as a human being you have to go through pain, through trials and tribulations. But as you lift yourself up and you transcend the pain and the sickness and health and everything else you may appear again to go through all kinds of experiences. But you know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you're not going through anything. In other words you're free from it. Even though other people may see you suffer and in pain.

How can this be? It's very difficult to understand, to explain. But nevertheless this is the truth. Rama Krishna was wasting away, totally wasting away. He was becoming nothing but a bag of bones. The cancer ravaged him and ate him up completely and he was not in pain, he was totally free. Who dies, who is in pain? We are because we see this. We observe this.

How can the pure self be in pain? How can the absolute reality be in pain? When you know that you are the absolute reality then the body of this world and the human bodies, that appear to be human bodies, do not even exist any longer for you. You are finished with all that. Even though you appear to have the body. And you appear to be having experiences in the body. But again the experiences are not for you. They are for others to observe. And you are completely free of the whole thing.

SG: (student asks question not audible: Something on focussing attention)

R: You are to focus your attention on the reality. On the I-am. When you focus your attention on the reality and become the reality everything else has been transcended.

SG: On the other hand I have to admit I read a lot on the idea of karma. I consider the murderers, the atrocities, the torturers, the people that are committing that they really do need to be punished.

R: You are seeing this from the place where you are coming from a state of a human being, a mind. When you are no longer a mind, when you are no longer a human being then you have become the murderer, you have become the saint, you have become the whole universe. You are the self of everybody. There will be no difference between a murderer and you. You are that! You are the Self of the whole universe. You are the whole leela, the whole maya. That is all taking place within yourself, you are that! Yet you feel nothing but bliss. You are pure consciousness, all-pervading. And the whole universe, all the games that are being played in the universe, the murderer, the person who gets murdered, all are within you.

Remember in the Bhagavad Gita when Arjuna refused to fight, Krishna explained to him, "Go and fight." For in reality noone dies, noone is killed, noone kills. And this is the truth about us. Everything we see is a game of maya, leela. It has absolutely nothing to do with your true self. But when you're coming from the stand point of mind what you said is real and true. All karma exists, it punishes. Retribution exists, it punishes. All these appearances seem to exist. But to whom do they exist? Only to the mortal being. To the I-thought. So who are you? Are you the I-thought or are you the self?

If you are the Self there are no thoughts. There is noone who wants retribution. There is noone who wants punishment. There is noone who wants goodness. There is noone who wants happiness. You are through with all of these things. You have risen. You are free.

SK: (Student talks about being with Ken a student who attended satsang previously who Robert had mentioned had passed away that week. tape unclear.)

R: This is good. All these things are good. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this. I'm sure he is well merged in the infinite and all is well. It's a good thing you did for him.

SI: (The student talks about transcending the body. Tape is unclear)

R: Yes you rose higher. You let go to the extent that you are able to raise your consciousness to a higher level. And you are able to see that you are not the sickness, you are not the body that seems to be diseased. You are pure reality. And to that extent you observed your body and saw that it was the body that becomes sick not your true self. If you are able to see it more clearly then the body would just disappear and you would be healed and there would be no sickness to begin with. But if you could just see yourself as absolute intelligence, total reality. The total reality becomes your Self, it is your Self, it always was your Self. So what you do is you let go for a few moments, for a while out of the mortal dream of sickness and you rose higher where it doesn't exist and this is the experience you had.

SF: To consider somebody or something evil, I'm judging?

R: Yes. (SF: We're told not to judge?) Of course. (SF: Sir?) You're right! (SF: Thank you.) We shouldn't even judge ourselves. (SF: Sir?) We shouldn't even judge ourselves. (SF: The avatar, for me I've always felt the differences.) Leave yourself alone. (SF: To thine own Self be true, that is the Self with a big "S," and not the self with a little "s.") Leave everything alone, leave the world alone, leave your body alone, leave others alone. By that I do not mean that you isolate yourself. I simply mean, in your mind. Leave everything alone in your mind. You make your mind one pointed. So it stays in the heart. Then your associations with others will be beautiful. You will find that you are happy and all will go well with you. But learn to leave things alone. Do not interfere in the lives of other people, mentally.

SF: Did I ever tell you about the lady who felt so bad about what was written about Elvis in the enquirer...there was a headline on the front that said, "Statue of Elvis found on Mars." (students laugh) They also had another one. They had a real good one it said, "Survivor of the Titanic found on Iceberg, the dress was still wet." (laughter)

R: Why do you read these things? (laughter) (SF: I don't. I just see them enough to get a laugh out of them.) They'll do anything to sell papers. (SF: Elton said, headlines at the front, sleeping with your wife to making marriage.) That makes sense. (laughter)

SJ: Robert your address today was pretty much for people who were on this advanced level of understanding on the path etc, of the self, do you understand what I mean? (R: People who what?) Your address today was for people who could understand what you were saying and work on it this way. (R: Yes.) There are a lot of people out there, healers who are out there that help alleviate some of their confusion and misidentification. So that they can actually get closer to understanding their true nature.

R: True, there's a place for everything. (SJ: Yeah.) There's a place for everything. But we're talking from the point of Advaita Vedanta. (SJ: Yeah I realize that. What is the relative truth of the heart being located on the right side of the chest?) That is exactly what you just said, it's relative. It's a relative truth. People want to know where the spiritual heart is located which is on the right side of the chest. They want to know where in the body the self abides. So we tell them that the self abides in the right side of the chest. Due to the fact when you talk about yourself and you point to yourself you say, "Who me?" Don't you point to the right side of the chest, unless you're left handed. (SJ: No.) Point to yourself.

SK: I've heard a lot of other people who use the same argument who say, "Don't you point to the centre of your chest?" And this person pointed to the centre of his chest.

SJ: But there is also some people, they point to their heads. (R: Well they don't count.) (laughter) Well there has got to be some other reason. (SH: I bet you that's culturally determined.)

R: This is something that was given by some Saints to make people understand that God resides in your heart and not in your physical heart. (SJ: Right, did Ramana ever tell you about it?) Yes. (SJ: He did?) He did. (SJ: So I think there is something a little more to it in a way?) No, there is nothing more to it at all. (SJ: It's still relative?) It's relative yes. Because many people...especially in India you have many ignorant people who have learned that God is within you. So the question is asked, "Where does God reside if he is within you?" They couldn't understand that there is no body, the body doesn't exist. So we tell them, "God resides in your heart." So where is your heart. It couldn't be on your left side because that is where your physical heart is.

So there is a place called the heart centre which is the right side of your chest and that is where God lives. That is where the self is. If you focus your attention on your heart centre, it expands sometimes for some people and the whole centre turns into light and the whole body becomes a body of light, by meditating on the right side of your chest of the heart centre. (SJ: So there seems to be a kind of effective technique?) It's actually because you are focussing your attention on it. And in your belief you believe that there is God within you on the right side of your chest. So you have all these experiences of lights. (SJ: Right. It's that several people here have been experiencing what you are talking about and some who want to know too.) Yes, so it's valid, it's good. (SJ: Like a trip in the park, good for the mind?) Sure.

R: You should of told him to start his own meeting. Everything is beautiful. I wish I can really share with you the joy and the beauty and the bliss that really is. If you only look through your body and transcend the body and see the reality of yourself then you couldn't care less what the body is going through. But suffice is to see that all is well and everything is unfolding as it should.

That is another thing you can use. When things seem to go wrong some place or when you feel a sickness within yourself or whatever it is, say, "All is well," to yourself and really feel it. There are no qualifications to that, all is well, period. Everything is happening at the right time, in the right place. There are no mistakes. None have ever been made, none are being made and none will ever be made. Everything is really beautiful.

SK: In that same vein is not everything blissful?

R: Both are the same thing, sure. (SK: Bliss?) Bliss. (SK: Bliss. Bliss. Bliss.) Bliss. (laughter) All is well. Everything is bliss. Your real nature is bliss. From now we'll call you Tom Bliss.

Another technique you can practice, especially those of you who are sitting with me in the morning from 6 to 9 am and from 12 to 3 am. A good practice would be to practice the I-am meditation...rather the who-am-I meditation, to give yourself a break from the I-am meditation. And the way you practice this, we'll do this together again, you just close your eyes and you breathe naturally, peacefully and with your respiration, as you inhale you inquire, "Who am I?" before you exhale you say, "I am that," and when you exhale you say, "I am not the body."

"Who am I? - I am That! - I am not the body." You breath naturally, do not emphasize your breathing. Let's try this. Inhale say, "Who am I?" Before you exhale you say, "I am that!" And you exhale and you say, "I am not the body."

(long silence then Robert continues)

R: ...shanti, om, peace.

Any comment on this form of meditation?

All these things are very important to practice.

SL: So when we sit in meditation with you we should do the I-am or what we just did?

R: If you can sit in the silence and do nothing it's better. But if the mind wanders as you do these things it'll help.

Mary would you like to read?

(Mary reads the confessions of a Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Do we have any announcements?

SM: We have more transcripts, the latest. And this is very very beautiful. This is "Beyond silence, beyond nothing."

(general talk)

R: We have some delicious looking cookies here. Mary why don't you pass them along. We have some...

TWO METHODS TO AWAKENING

23rd February, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace, peace, peace. Good afternoon. It is good to be with you once again, this lovely Sunday afternoon.

We are here at satsang for one reason only and that is to awaken. This is the only motive we have. We are not here to improve our humanhood. Our humanhood will take care of itself. Just as the leaves grow on the tree, the law of the universe will take care of your humanhood. You do not have to be concerned about that. Everything will unfold the way it's supposed to. There are no mistakes.

But we are here to awaken. To awaken to our true nature, which is pure awareness. This is the only reason we're here. Do not concern yourself with your health or with your finances or with the world or with politics. Everything will unfold as it should without your help, strange but true.

You will appear to do certain things in this world yet in reality you are doing absolutely nothing. There is no one to do anything. It's as if you were hypnotized and you can't get out of it. You believe in a world that you see. People, places and things appear very real to us. We are not that! We have absolutely nothing to do with that. Yet it appears as if these things are real.

If you have ever been to a hypnotist. Hypnotists can make you believe that something is real that is not. This is sort of the same thing. You react to a world that does not exist. You are parabrahman. This world appears like a bubble. It is here today and gone tomorrow. You can only be happy when you give up reaction to the world. Then true happiness which is your nature shines all by itself. If you are happy because of things in this world you will be disappointed. This world is in a universe of change, constant change, everything changes. The so-called happiness is here today and gone tomorrow.

As we go through spiritual practices we will come to this conclusion. That the world has absolutely nothing to offer us. Yet we appear to be in this world. Pulled in by maya. Going through certain experiences and believing this is living, believing this is what it's all about. It is only when you awaken to your divine nature that you live eternally. Not when you attach yourself to person, place or thing in this world.

So we're only interested in absolute reality. We are only interested in awakening, liberation, moksha. Yet this is our real nature. We are already that! But because we don't believe we are that, choiceless, effortless pure awareness, I have to sit here like a fool and talk to you. (students laugh) Tell you all these stories. For you refuse to awaken by yourself. You want to imagine that you're a person, a human being. You want to play in the world. So here we are.

What are the prerequisites to awaken? In other words, what has to happen for us to awaken? What do we have to do? There are two methods to awakening. There are two ways:

One way is to spontaneously awaken. In other words you've never been interested in spiritual life. You've never read spiritual books. You haven't been to spiritual teachers. Then all of a sudden something happens to you and you awaken. Sri Ramana Maharshi was one of those who this happened to. At the age of sixteen without any prior knowledge at his uncles house he awakened to the reality. Shankara was another one. There have been a few people on this earth who have simply awakened.

Now when you ask about this and you ask, "How did this happen to them and not to me?" You are told sometimes it is God's grace. God chooses the people that he wants to awaken. Again you are told that these beings karmically worked on themselves in previous lives. Therefore in this particular life they are born awakened. At a certain age in their lives they become awakened. These are stories to appease the masses. These are stories that answer the question to those of us who can't understand anything else.

But the truth of the matter is noone has awakened for awakening was always there. There is no karma, there is no reincarnation, there is no God that awakens you with his grace. The truth is noone had to be awakened. This person was always awakened, just like you. Only this person knows it. Awakening just is. This is your real nature. You are that. You are bright and shining you are awakened. This is the real answer to why some people are awakened and some are not. To the Jnani everyone is awakened. There is no such thing as being in maya, being in ignorance. We are all absolute reality and totally free. So there is spontaneous awakening.

Then the next set of people who become awakened are those who have practiced intense sadhana. Those who have practiced self-inquiry or any other method of sadhana. When I say practiced I mean exactly that, making this first in your life. Not a part of your life but putting the awakening process, the sadhana, first! Number one!

Think of all the things that you are involved in. What you think is important in this world. This is what keeps you bound. This is what keeps you in a state of ignorance. The belief that something in this world can bring you freedom or happiness or joy. It is only through the association with Sages, reading spiritual literature, attending satsang, practicing self-inquiry or any other method of sadhana that you will awaken.

Maharaj Nisargadatta was one of these. He awakened at the age of about forty-four. His guru told him, "Dive deep within and see the self, you are that!" Nisargadatta spent three years doing this, intensely. That is all he did, he did nothing else. He took walks, while he was walking he felt and realized, I-am-that. When he was going to sleep he realized I-am-that. When he was eating, when he was bathing, whatever he was doing the thought I-am-that never left him. And he awakened.

Now let's talk about you. You say you want to become free. You say you wish to awaken, become liberated, why does it take so long? Why do I have to go through this life? And go through all the various things that I go through? Take an honest look at yourself. Do you have humility? Do you have compassion? Do you have love? Or do you have anger, fear, hatred? You have to honestly take a good look at your life. See the kind of life you've been living. What are your beliefs? What do you feel about the world, the universe, your self?

You see you have to reconcile yourself with the universe. Be at peace with every living thing, with every sentient thing. Do not allow your mind to tell you anything. Your mind will always fool you. It will tell you all sorts of stories to make you fear. To make you act in a certain way. To make you believe a big catastrophe is going to happen unless this happens or unless that happens. The only catastrophe that can come upon you is of your own making. You are the one. Do not let the world show you anything that makes you fear or causes you to react. Rather begin to act from your own divinity.

Know who you are. Always be aware of the self which is you. There is absolutely nothing in this whole universe, this whole world that wants to hurt you. You have absolutely nothing to fear. Then where does the fear come from? Where do all these negative thoughts come from? These bad feelings we have sometimes? They come from misidentification.

As I explained before, you appear to be hypnotized. You're hypnotized that you're living in a world which seems real to you. A world in which you have to grow up and you can't fool yourself. A world in which things happen all the time and you are in the centre of all of this. Yet as you grow spiritually you will find that the world has no power to hurt you. Where would this power come from? Only you are the power. So you create your own reality. You create all these conditions yourself. You create the whole universe the way it appears to you right now. The whole universe emanates from your own mind. You are the one.

If you think you have a problem sometimes that keeps haunting you, some bad habit you can't get rid of, think about the sleeping experience. When you are in deep sleep everything is forgotten. There are no worries, there are no problems, there are no sickness, there is no lack, there is no limitation. Everything is gone. Where did it go? If it were real wouldn't it exist when you are in deep sleep? Why would it disappear at that time? This is a hint to make you believe and think and ponder the fact that if something is real on this earth, an emotional feeling, anything it is always there. But yet in deep sleep it is not there.

And also in the dream state. When you dream the entire world in which you live changes totally. You are now in a dream world. And all the feelings and emotions that you have of this world are gone. You're having a dream which at that time appears real to you. In that dream you grow up and you get married, you have children, there is an earthquake and your children die, you feel terrible, you're totally upset and then you wake up. You laugh it was only a dream.

Now in this particular life you get married you have children. An earthquake comes, your children get killed. So the question to you is, "For whom shall you mourn? The children who got killed in the dream or the children who got killed in this life?" Now some of you have not heard me before are saying, "That guy is crazy," and you're right. You believe everything is real right now, don't you? Because you can feel, see, touch, see, smell. But don't you do the same thing in the dream? Everything that you're doing here can be done in the dream. And yet when you are having a catastrophe in your dream if I came over to you and told you, "You are dreaming," just like I'm talking to you now. If I said to you, "All this is not the truth. Your children did not die. This is a dream," would you believe me? Of course not. You would chase me away. You would throw sticks at me. "Get away!" For all this has happened to you. Then you wake up. It never happened.

Can't you see what I'm trying to say? This whole world is like that dream. Everything appears so real. We go through different experiences all of our lives and it appears so real. But I tell you the day will come when you will awaken. And you will realize that you are I-am-that-I-am. You will realize that you are absolute pure awareness. You are the self. That there never was a time when you were dreaming the mortal dream.

But of course many of you here still do not believe me. For you feel the experience very strongly. You feel all the things that are happening to you. As long as you feel these things and you do nothing to stop the feeling the attachment to this earth will become stronger and stronger and stronger. This is why certain people can never be in a class like this. Certain people can never be in a meeting like this. For their ego, their mind is so strong that after they walk out this door all of the ugly thoughts come back into their mind. The problems they're having. The things that are going wrong in their life. The things that appear to hurt them. The people who have told them the wrong words and they have become very upset. And they begin to feel this world again.

Yet you do the same thing in your dream and you awaken, where did the dream come from? It could only come out of you. The dream didn't come to you, you all know that. It didn't come from afar and enter your body. You yourself were the dream. When you were dreaming you forgot all about this body as it appears right now. You forgot all about your home, your family, everything. You dreamt about a new family, a new home, a new experience. And you felt it just like you do this world. And no one can ever tell you it's a dream. But you awaken and you laugh. One day you will awaken from this dream and you will also laugh. The awakening can come faster or slower it depends on you. It is up to you my friends to begin doing something to yourself so that you may awaken from this mortal dream.

And the best thing you can do is self-inquiry. Self-inquiry is merely asking yourself, "Who am I?" Pondering, "Who am I?" When the world comes to you in thought you inquire, "To whom does this come? Who feels hurt? Who feels upset? Who feels their emotions so strongly?" As if they were so important. "Why I do. Who am I? What is the source of the I?"

As you keep practicing this you will one day realize that the I has all the problems. The I-thought it is a thought because it doesn't really exist, it feels all these things. For when you ask and you inquire, "Who feels this?" you say, "I do," don't you. This proves to you that I feels this. But the question is, "Are you that I?" If you can talk about the I separate from yourself that must mean the I is not you. For aren't you saying, "I feel this?" Who says that? The self, the absolute reality, and the I that feels this is the ego.

So as you practice you come to the conclusion that all of the problems of this world, including this world, this universe, your body, what you call God is all attached to the I! You therefore do not try to solve your problems. For as you solve your problems new ones will pop up. There is no ending to it. As you solve one problem another one pops up here. As you get rid of this one another one pops up there. Do not try to solve your problems, you get rid of the I-thought. You work on the I-thought. When the I-thought disappears everything else will go with it. There will be nothing left. Or practice some sadhana that will make you think of the Self and not of your problems. As you continue to work on yourself subtle changes begin to take place. As the months pass, as the years pass you begin to feel different. The day will finally come when you will wake up. Just as you awaken from the dream. And you will laugh. You have become the Self. You have become parabrhaman, sat-chit-ananda and you're totally free.

So I ask you, "What are doing with your life? How much effort do you put into your spiritual practice?" The more you become involved with the world the more the world pulls you down. I'm not saying you should give up everything and go and meditate on top of a mountain or in a cave. I am saying continue what you're doing but mentally give up everything. Mentally do not become attached to things by fearing them or loving them or doing anything to them at all. You observe the world. You watch what is happening to you, your affairs.

You remember the dream analogy. In the dream you've had these experiences and you woke up and you feel that you will awaken one day. And you practice. You make your life simple. You make your food simple, your living conditions simple. You do not become a complicated person. You live a simple easy life. You continue to work on yourself again and again. You do not look at time or space. Do not worry if you're getting older for whatever you are doing with yourself will continue when you drop the body and you become happy.

The choice is yours. You can go back into this world after this lesson today. And begin to react to this world as you always do. As you're driving home become angry as someone cuts in front of you. Curse, scream, holler. Or you can smile and realize what is really happening. There is noone to do anything. All is well and everything is unfolding as it should. It's your life do with it as you will.

It's that time again to play stump the guru. Here comes Tom with all the stumps. Let's see what interesting questions we have today.

Q: (Robert reads) If everything is unreal and just a creation of the mind, what is the mind? It must be unreal also? It can't create itself if it doesn't exist to start with, please explain.

A: (Robert answers) You're absolutely right, there is no mind. There never was a mind and there never will be a mind. What appears to have happened is you have been hypnotized, as I mentioned before, into thinking that you are a mind, a body and an ego. Yet you are none of these. These things really do not exist.

I know some people are here for the first time and this may sound very strange to hear. Yet go back to the dream state. In the dream state you had a mind also. And you were perhaps an accountant working in a big company using your mind continuously, using all kinds of computers and making all kinds of decisions. Then you woke up.

Where did that mind go? That mind never existed. Somehow you appeared to be a mind. So we trick the mind. We trick the mind by using the mind to get rid of the mind. It is like a policemen becoming a thief to catch a thief. The mind appears so real. You think you have something important. You believe your thoughts are real. They make you happy, they make you sad, they make you miserable, they make you joyous. Yet your mind is really a bundle of thoughts. Thoughts about the past and worries about the future. That is all the mind is. It is not an entity in itself. It is your thoughts.

And so it is if you inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come?" You're really saying, "Who has this mind? Where does this mind come from?" And the answer will come, "I have this mind. I do. I think these thoughts,"... (break in tape) ...until they totally disappear and you become one pointed. When you become one pointed the guru within your heart will pull your mind into the heart centre. Where it will totally dissolve in the I-am. It will totally dissolve in consciousness and you will be totally free. So the mind does not exist, never has, never will.

SF: What does hypnotism mean when you talk, comment on that?

R: Hypnotism is just an analogy that I use to make you feel that something has happened to you. But in truth there is no hypnotism nothing has ever happened to you, you never existed, nothing is going on. But yet you can't see that. So I have to use hypnotism as a source to make you understand how it is. It's like being hypnotized, that is why I always say, "It is like." I never say, "You've been hypnotized," I say, "it is like being hypnotized." It is as if you were hypnotized.

Other wise I'll just say, "Nothing exists, you are that nothing and all is well. Go home and go to sleep." (students laugh) So I use all these analogies to make you see that something has happened to you that doesn't exist.

Q: (Robert reads) Why do you Robert meditate six hours a day or at all?

A: (Robert answers) Who said I meditate six hours a day? I sit in the silence. There is no one there to meditate. I sit there and I tell you to join me as I sit there. I'm not doing anything. I'm just sitting in the silence. When I close my eyes there is no Robert. There is just the infinite. When I open the eyes the infinite is still there and has become Robert for now. But there is no one to meditate. To meditate there has to be a subject and an object.

When the subject and object and the mind have been totally annihilated, totally destroyed there is nothing left. There is no one to do anything. So I really do not meditate I just sit in the silence. Like I'm doing right now.

SH: Who says?

R: Ask the question, "Who says?" And the answer will be zero. There is no one to sit. (SH: There is no sitting?) Again it is an analogy. There is no one to sit, there is no sitting. No one lives, no one expresses. There is no being, there is nothing. We are dreaming this, I've explained this to you that this is all a dream. There is no substance to it. There is no reality to the world. It's all what you imagine it is. So Robert appears to sit in the silence and when you sit with Robert then you become nothing, which is your real nature. And you live happily ever after. (laughter) (SH: It's a fairy-tale.)

Q: (Robert reads) Robert what is the role of spiritual rather than physical energy in this work?

A: (Robert answers) As you sit in the silence, as you ponder all of these things, the spiritual energy which is the energy of the Jnanis, the energy of the Self comes into play. It transcends all the physical energy. The physical energy is your body. Your body exists as long as you think it is alive. As long as you feel it works and it goes to sleep and it wakes up, it is hurt, it feels bad, this is all physical energy.

But spiritual energy is the energy of the Self, that transcends everything, that awakens you to reality. The spiritual energy again comes into play when you sit in the silence and either inquire, "Who am I?" And practice the I-am meditation then spiritual energy comes into play. So spiritual energy is very subtle. Physical energy is what we use to move around, to lift objects, talk.

(Robert speaks about something in the satsang, maybe the mic he's using) I don't like these people who take off these things.

Q: (Robert reads) What is the difference between I-am and I-am-that-I-am. What is the difference if any between using I-am with the breath and using the words I-exist, instead of the words I-am?

A: (Robert answers) Words only have a meaning in your own mind. If you can say, "I-am" or "Hershey's chocolate bar," and you feel that this means God. Then you'll get something out of it. I-am is the first name of God. As you invoke I-am with feeling, the I-am which is your Self, awakens as the Self. When I say it's the first name of God, God is you, as you. There is actually what we call God who is the Self that seems to be manipulating all of these things. I'm making you understand that you are that.

So when we say, "I-am," we are putting our feelings of what I-am means to us into play and certain results ensue. When we say, "I-am-that-I-am," we're referring to the I-am which is the small self. When we say that, "I-am-that," which is the universal Self, I-am which is consciousness. Therefore what you're really saying when you say, "I-am-that-I-am," you're saying I am consciousness. I am not the body. I am not the mind. I am not the doer. I am pure absolute consciousness. Only consciousness exists. I-am-that-I-am is another name for it. All these words are synonymous. Effortless pure awareness, nirvana, ultimate oneness, parabrahman, all the same and they're all synonymous.

Q: (Robert reads) Many jobs as well as school require a great deal of thought are these incompatible with your practice which stops thought?

A: (Robert answers) On the contrary. As I explained to you before, many times, your body has come to this earth to do certain work, so it appears. And the work will go on without your thoughts, without you. You are not the work that you are doing. You are not the body you are using to do this work and you are not the mind that thinks about this work. You are the Self.

Therefore when you do your work do not think I am the doer. You are not the doer. The work will carry on without you. And you will notice when you don't have to think about your work too much you are able to be more proficient in the work that you do. For you will not worry about it or think about it or compare it with anything, or want it completed at a certain time. You will do the work you came here to do.

Therefore do not think that as you become enlightened, as you become evolved spiritually that you'll have to give up your job, give up your family, give up anything. There is no one left to give up anything. You will be what you're supposed to be physically but you will realize at the same time that physically you do not even exist. Everything will appear to be going on but in reality nothing is happening, nothing is going on.

Therefore do not concern yourself about the work, about the body. Keep your mind on the Self. Always keep the mind on reality. Everything else will take care of itself.

LOVE, COMPASSION AND HUMILITY

27th February, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening. It's good to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart.

Never forget the purpose of why you're here. It is true in the absolute reality there is no purpose. The universe has no purpose for existing. You have no purpose for existing, in the absolute reality. But as long as you believe you are a body or a mind, then your purpose is to become no purpose. You spend your energy becoming nothing. But do not believe you're nothing, when you haven't become nothing yet.

Be honest with yourself. See where you're coming from by the way you react to life situations every day. This will tell you where you are at, by the way you see yourself reacting to life's predicaments. Life will present to you many predicaments, and it's up to you to see these things in the right perspective, never to be frightened, never to believe anything is wrong, always to know, even though you believe you are a body, you are not alone. There is the pure awareness that is with you all the time, just awaiting your recognition, awaiting your understanding that you are not the body, that you are a spirit, called the atman, Brahman, absolute reality. This is who you really are. This is your real nature.

You've heard me talk on many occasions on the subject of love, compassion and humility. These three things are very important to understand. They have to be nurtured and developed. When you understand what love, compassion and humility really are, at that time you become a living embodiment of the truth, and the self will pull your ego into the heart center, and you will become liberated and free.

When I speak to you of all these things I'm referring to my own experiences. Therefore, do not take these things I say lightly, even though I tell you many times to not believe a word I say. It sounds like a contradiction, but it isn't. You are not to believe anything I say, yet you are to reflect and ponder on the things I say at the same time. Try to become a living embodiment of the highest truth.

When I had my spiritual awakening I was fourteen years old. This body was sitting in a classroom taking a math test. And all of a sudden I felt myself expanding. I never left my body, which proves that the body never existed to begin with. I felt the body expanding, and a brilliant light began to come out of my heart. I happened to see this light in all directions. I had peripheral vision, and this light was really my Self. It was not my body and the light. There were not two. There was this light that became brighter, and brighter and brighter, the light of a thousand suns. I thought I would be burnt to a crisp, but alas, I wasn't.

SK: How did you do on the test?

R: We haven't come to that yet.

But this brilliant light, which I was the center and also the circumference, expanded throughout the universe, and I was able to feel the planets, the stars, the galaxies, as myself. And this light shone so bright, yet it was beautiful, it was bliss, it was ineffable, indescribable.

After a while the light began to fade away, and there was no darkness. There was just a place between light and darkness, the place beyond the light. You can call it the void, but it wasn't just a void. It was this pure awareness I always talk about. I was aware that I am that I am. I was aware of the whole universe at the same time. There was no time, there was no space, there was just the I am.

Then everything began to return to normal, so-to-speak. And I was able to feel, and understand, that all of the planets, the galaxies, the people, the trees, the flowers on this earth, everything, were myriads of energy, and I was in everything. I was the flower. I was the sky. I was the people. The I was everything. Everything was the I. The word I encompassed the whole universe.

Now here's the point I'm trying to make. I felt a love, a compassion, a humility, all at the same time, that was truly indescribable. It wasn't a love that you're aware of. Think of something that you really love, of someone that you really love with all your heart. Multiply this by a jillion million trillion, and you'll understand what I'm talking about. This particular love is like no thing that ever existed on this earth, consciously. There is nothing you can compare it with. It is beyond duality, beyond concepts, beyond words and thoughts. And since the I, which I was, was all-pervading, there was no other place for anything else to be. There was no room for anything, because there was no space, and no time. There was just the I am, ever present, self-existent. The love of everything was the love of the self.

This is why, in scripture, it tells you to love your brother, and your sister, to love everyone and everything under all circumstances. This love couldn't differentiate. It couldn't say, "You're good, so I love you. You're bad, so I don't love you." Everything was going on as myself. I realized I am the murderer, I am the saint, I am the so-called evil on this earth, I am the so called goodness of this earth. Everything was the self. And it was all a game. All of the energy particles changed from one thing to another thing. But the love never changed.

Another word for this love was compassion. There was this fabulous, fantastic compassion. For everything! For everything was the self, the I am. There was no differentiation. There was not me, what you call me, and those things. There was only one expression, and that was consciousness.

Of course, I didn't understand all these words at that time. There were no words like I'm talking about now. I'm trying my best to speak intelligently and try to use words to explain what happened, but you can't. All the games that people are playing, and all the planets, throughout the universe, is really the self. It was all the self, and I realized that nothing else existed but the self. Yet all of these things, the multiplicities of planets, of galaxies, of people, of animals, were really the self. Again, there are no words to describe this. I felt and knew that these multiplicities do not exist. Things do not exist. Only the self existed, only consciousness, pure awareness.

Yet, at the same time, creation came into existence. And there's no creation. We cannot understand this in human form. As long as we're thinking with our brains it's incomprehensible, for how can they both be simultaneously creating each other? There was creation going on, and yet there was no creation at all! There was no creation taking place, and creation was taking place. Sounds like the thoughts of a mad man. And it seemed normal. There's absolutely nothing strange about this at all, being nothing and everything at the same time.

So this great compassion was there. Since I was everything, the compassion was for everything. No thing was excluded, for the things were really the self.

And then there was this fantastic humility. The love, compassion, and humility are all synonymous. I'm trying to break it down to make you understand, to an extent, what was going on. The humility was there not to change anything. Everything was right just the way it was. Planets were exploding, new planets were being born. Suns were evaporating, new suns were being born. From the suns the planets came, and then life began on the planets. All this was taking place instantaneously, at the same time. And yet nothing was taking place at all.

Therefore the humility is that everything was alright. There was nothing I had to change. There was nothing I had to correct. The people dying of cancer were in their right place where nobody dies, and there is no cancer. Wars, man's inhumanity to man, was all part of it. There cannot be a creation if there is not an opposite to good. In order to have a creation there has to be opposites. There has to be the bad guy and the good guy. I was able to understand all these things.

The next thing I remember is my teacher was shaking me. I was the only one left in the class, everybody had gone, the bell rang, and I had not even started the mathematics test. Of course I got a great big zero.

But those feelings and the understanding never left me. From that time on my whole life changed. I was no longer interested in school. I was no longer interested in the friends I had. I won't go on any more than that for now, as far as that's concerned.

The point I'm trying to make is this. If the end result of realization is love, compassion, and humility, what if we were able to develop these qualities now? Do you see what I'm getting at? If we are able to develop this love, this beautiful joyous love, for everything, without exception, without being judgmental, and we had a great compassion, for everything, without being judgmental. You can't have a compassion for one thing and not for another thing.

Then of course, there's humility. Humility means we don't have to try to straighten things out, to get even, to stick up for our rights, for there is no one really left to do that. If some of us were to work on those aspects, it would lift us up and make us free.

This is something for you to think about. We have to learn to leave the world alone. We become so involved in politics, in family life, in work and the rest of these things we're involved in, that we forget that we only have so many years left on this earth in the body. And what are we doing with all of the time we have? We're spending the time on things that do not really exist, things that make no sense.

Imagine you're in a play in the theater, and you're playing a role, and you're playing a part. All the time you're aware that you're playing a part. You're not really that person. It's only a part you're playing. In the same way you are now playing a part, but you have forgotten you're playing a part. You think your body, the way it looks, the way it appears, what it does, what it acquires, is real, and you put all your energy into the game of playing the part. This is indeed a waste of energy. If you'd only put your energy in finding the self, that you really never lost. And you can do this by developing the qualities of love, compassion and humility.

This is another method you have to work on. As you're working on self-inquiry, work on the love, work on compassion, work on humility. Do not just practice self-inquiry for a while, and then react negatively to the world, and have your feelings hurt. Be yourself. Awaken from the dream. Refuse to play any longer. Look at yourself all day long. See the things that you do, the thoughts that you have, the feelings that you have. It makes no difference what situation you're going through. It makes no difference what's going on in your life. The only thing that matters is what's going on inside of you.

Karmically you are put on this earth as a body, to go through karmic experiences. Therefore, the experience you're going through is part of the maya, the karma. Do not reflect on these things. This is important. You have to drop this. Leave it alone. If you only knew that nothing can ever happen to you. There never was a time when you were born. There will never be a time when you die. You have always lived. You are consciousness. You have always existed. Identify with your existence. Merge into the existence of nothingness.

I tell you this again and again. Leave the world alone. Remember what I mean when I say to leave the world alone. I'm not saying that you should voluntarily, consciously, make a plan of how you're going to leave the world alone. You'll not be able to live up to it. By leaving the world alone I mean, entertain in your mind higher thoughts. Always have in back of your mind, "I am not the body. I am not the doer. I am not the mind." Feel this. Feel it deeply. Do not feel good or bad about it. Do not try to prolong your life. It's a waste of energy. What you call your life will take care of itself. It knows what to do better than you do. We're very limited in our understanding about the body, or the affairs of the body, what's going on in the body. Do not try to do anything with your body. Your body will do whatever it came here to do. It knows what to do. Separate yourself from that. Of course, you may do this by inquiring, "To whom does the body come? Who has this body?" and remain in the silence.

Many of us here this evening are making tremendous progress. I've been talking to many of you who are really getting there. Of course, I use all these terms loosely. There's no where to get. But I have to talk to you this way, to remind you to leave yourself alone. I know some of you may be in pain sometimes, and you say, "Well I want to live a life free of pain, therefore I have to do things to myself so I don't feel that pain." This is really a mistake. If you could only realize who has the pain. To whom does the pain come? I have the pain. Then who am I? If I have the pain, it means that the person who is thinking these things does not have the pain, for it is I that has the pain. You are free of pain, for you are not the I-thought. Remember the I we're talking about now is the thought, the I-thought, that has the pain and the experience of being born, the experience of dying, the experience of having problems. This is the I-thought that has these things. Not you.

You have to vehemently make up your mind that the only thing that matters to you is to become free, liberated, and let go of all the other things that keep you bound. This is why you have to work with love, compassion and humility. For if this is the end result of awakening, if you do this first, the awakening will come faster.

Even while I'm talking to you, some of you are thinking about your body, you're thinking about the mind, you're thinking about your work. This is what keeps you back. Destroy the thoughts through self-inquiry. Become free. Do not fight. Do not fear. Observe, watch, look, but have no opinions for or against. Some people think if they act this way they will not be able to function in the world. You will function. Always remember, there's an appearance of the body, and the body came here to do certain things, and it's going to do those things. It has absolutely nothing to do with you.

It's interesting, I'm really talking to myself, because there's only the Self. So why am I talking to myself? I must be crazy.

SH: Sure.

R: Many times when I talk to you I have to keep from laughing, (laughter) explaining all these things, talking about all these things, when you're already free, and you already know these things. Sometimes we're pulled into the illusion. For there's really no thing. When I talk of God we're speaking of nothingness. God is nothing. And that nothing is you. We get deeper involved when we study, when we read, we get deeply involved, in maya.

Why can't you be yourself and wake up? Why do you have to go through all these things, and make me sit here talking to you like this? Just think what I could be doing if I didn't have to talk to you. I could be watching Tales From The Crypt. (students laugh) All is well. (laughter)

SD: Robert, I don't mean this irreverently, quite the contrary, but you tell us to try to develop these qualities of love, compassion and humility, that you've described as beyond our comprehension. How do we try to develop something we can't comprehend?

R: Simple. Be your self. When you are yourself the thoughts come slowly to you until they cease. When the thoughts become slower and slower into your mind, and the thoughts begin to disappear, you automatically become loving, compassionate and you'll have humility. In other words, the faster you get rid of your thoughts, the faster these other things come, these other qualities. So it's a matter of stopping your thoughts. It is the thoughts that see everything in this world as good and bad, right and wrong. As the thoughts begin to subside, love comes by itself, compassion, humility come by themselves. So again, we have to stop thinking.

Feel free to say something. (laughter)

SF: I'd like to check these intellectual ideas out. In Hindu Brahman is creator. Vishnu is the sustainer. (R: Umm.) And Shiva is the destroyer. So to ask the question, what is it that Shiva destroy? That is an illusion the first two are real. Finally Shiva himself, if this is the case, is there a reason why an individual who has a deep understanding shouldn't meditate on I-am Shiva. Can you comment on that?

R: Shouldn't meditate on I-am Shiva? (SF: Sir?) Should not meditate on I am Shiva, you said? (SF: Is there no reason why we shouldn't? Or you say we should?) No I'm asking you what did you say, we should or we shouldn't? (SF: There is no reason why I shouldn't, in other words I should?) Vishnu, Shiva, Brahma are all part of the story of creation. Just like our bible in the West, Adam and Eve were the first people to be born. And God loved the world so much that he created Adam and Eve. They're both stories for children who are curious about how creation started. So the Hindu mythology are for the common people. The people making stories to make you understand how things began and what is going on. So they say Brahma created the world, Vishnu sustains it and then after a while Shiva destroys it and it becomes nothing, pure consciousness again. And then creation begins once again. But of course those are stories which are typical for those people who cannot understand that nothing exists. There never was a Brahma, there never was a Shiva and there is no Vishnu. And nothing was ever destroyed and nothing was ever created. This is too much for some people. So all of these books have been written for the masses. So that they may comprehend all of this.

SD: I believe you said one time that Maharshi even paid homage to Shiva and to give support? (R: Yes.) So in that light, may it not be appropriate for someone like Fred to pay homage to Shiva as long as he honestly identifies with the mind and the body. It's sort of like believing it?

R: True, this is what it's for. I am not saying not to pay respect to Shiva. Enjoy Shiva. (SD: But to be honest about it?) Shiva, Shiva, let Shiva take care of himself. (laughter) It all depends where we're coming from. When all these scholarly people used to come to Ramana Maharshi, these pundits, they memorize the upanishads, the veda's and they wanted to see what Maharshi says, and they asked Ramana, "Is all necessary?" And he would just say, "Yes, yes, it's all necessary just keep it up." (students laugh) Because he realized that he would be arguing with these people for five hours. So he agreed with everybody.

And Jesus said the same thing, he said, "Agree quickly with thy adversary." Don't argue with someone. "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." Let people believe what they want. Every human being on this earth is in a different grade in school. The universe is like a school room. We're all in different grades. Some people have to believe this and some people have to believe that. That is what makes maya so interesting. There are multiplicity of thoughts, of forms, of things, of everything. And everybody wants to stick up for their rights and for their point of view. So let them, they're all right. The reason it's all right is because it is all coming from their mind. They are creating God in their image.

Think of the God you believe in, Jehovah, Christ, Allah these are all names given to the one God by man. And people worship these Gods in different ways. It's all good. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this. But when you begin to practice Advaita Vedanta, non-duality, you transcend all the belief systems, you transcend the whole world, the whole universe, you get rid of everything so there is nothing left for you to hold on to. And when there is nothing left for you to hold onto you then become the self. Until then believe all the things you want to believe.

SD: Someone said to me once that to criticize someone else's spiritual involvement would be as ridiculous as criticizing someone for being say the age of three, if you were not.

R: Yes of course. That's why all is well. Everything is in it's right place, there are no mistakes. That is why I keep emphasizing again and again and again, leave the world alone. Do not criticize people let them believe what they like. (SF: If I criticize a person and it's an implication that that person should be more like me then that's not good?) More people should be like you Fred. (SF: Is that right?) Because you're a gentle, wonderful man.

Even when you try to fight the world you can't win. The world will always beat you down. So why fight? Leave everything alone. Try to remember what I mean when I say this, leave everything alone. When I make these statements I'm not speaking of physical. Physically the body will do what it has to do. But clear your mind. Make the mind gentle, peaceful and then allow the body to do what it will.

Everything begins in the mind, therefore if you control the mind you'll be at peace. The quieter the mind becomes the greater the self within you, the greater the consciousness. Pure awareness expresses itself through you. All you have to do is quiet the mind.

Therefore when I say leave everything alone, leave the world alone, leave people alone, I'm speaking of mentally. Do not sit at home or sit at the office and think about all the people who have hurt you, of all the things that are wrong someplace, drop it. Keep the mind quiet. When the mind starts to fight you. When the mind starts to think about other things, you can say, "All Is Well." This will remind the mind that everything is okay just the way it is.

R: Well, it's your turn to say something.

SF: I have a little verse from a professor in philosophy in Fremont, called I may be missing but I'm not lost. And he calls them doll grants. And his wife was saying, his wife drew some stick figures with the ...???...and one of the first things she said, "If I have to think about what words I'm going to use how can I possibly teach philosophy?" And then he goes on to say, "Words can be a formidable barrier to communication." And in another place he says, "When you realize that the broken string in your yo-yo has never fastened anything in the first place, there might be enlightenment." (R: That's a good one.) He has a bunch of them. There is something else, the last statement for the night. There is only one consciousness (I'm sure you're familiar with this one) There is only one consciousness equally distributed everywhere. You through ignorance give it unequal distribution. No distribution, no evidence. (R: True.) Sir can you summarize it?

R: The one consciousness is all there is. There is not even any place to distribute it.

SF: Robert I guess what Jesus meant when he said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God," purity of heart I guess there will be no contaminants in your heart and a contaminant in your heart would be a thought occurring? As a man thinketh in his heart so is he, How's that sound? (R: That's good, yes. You are a bible scholar Fred.) No, I got all kinds of quotes. (students laugh) The Swami down here used to quote Jesus to illustrate points he would make and that's where I got most of them, Christian quotes. When I have them he indicates that my thoughts are aright and that makes me feel good, but it's still of the mind...

R: You're doing well Fred. (SF: When you say I'm doing well, I have a feeling I'm not doing anything?) You're not. You never did Fred. You have absolutely nothing to do with yourself.

(Fred continues to talk but tape is not clear enough to follow.)

R: You're alright Fred. (laughter)

SF: Thank you, better than being the other extreme.

R: Never believe that when you sit in the silence and you're quiet for a while, that nothing is happening. As many of you are aware there is more going on in the silence than when we're talking. The silence is pure awareness.

(silence)

R: Another form of meditation you can practice is just to watch the breath. Become observant of your breath and as thoughts arise inquire, "To whom do they come?" This quiets the mind considerably.

(silence) (then Robert finishes up)

Om shanti, shanti, shanti, shanti, peace.

Keep working in the week for the rest of the week on love, compassion and humility. We have some goodies...

(tape ends) [TOC]

ALL THE WORLD LOVES A LIE

1st March, 1992

Robert: Welcome, it's good to be with you again. I would like to thank Jay for the Artie. He goes to a lot of trouble to do this. We thank you Jay, let's hear it for Jay. (students applaud) Now throw him out. (students laugh)

Here we are again, a beautiful Sunday afternoon in Henry's house, miserable as always. (students laugh) So what pack of lies am I going to share with you today. I call it a pack of lies because all the world loves a lie. Therefore when I speak the truth, it thinks I'm telling a lie. After all it is a lie to believe that you were ever born, that you prevail and then you disappear. This is not true. It is a lie to believe that the world exists as the world all by itself, that's a lie. It is a lie to believe that there is an anthropomorphic type of a God who looks down upon you and sits in a little room with a big book with your name in it. (students laugh) And tells you you're going to go to heaven, you're going to hell. But all the world loves a lie and everything I say is a lie. Due to the fact that I have to share things with you that you want to hear to make you feel better. When you try to improve your health. When you try to improve your finances. When you try to live a better life. That is a lie.

Only consciousness, only God exists. It is what we call God or consciousness that is the world, that is the universe. Nothing exists on its own. Everything in this universe comes from your mind. It isn't real by itself it's like a dream. You believe what you see with your eyes, what you hear with your ears, what you speak with your mouth, what you smell with your nose. You believe all these things are real. They are not real. They are lies. You believe you exist as a human being and you make decisions, you make choices. You do certain things in this world. This is not true.

It is consciousness that does everything. You are like a puppet manipulated by the laws of karma. And everything that you do is the result of that karma. It's a lie. For in truth karma does not exist and in truth you've never done anything because you were never born. There is absolutely nothing that you can ever do. You are spirit! All-pervading! Omnipresent!

Not a little body like it looks and appears. As far as your problems are concerned forget them. As far as your life is concerned forget it. As far as the past is concerned it doesn't exist. As far as the future is concerned there will never be a future. There is only this moment and in this moment you are nothing, pure nothingness. Nothing is everything and everything is nothing.

People ask me, "Robert do you believe in God? Do Advaita Vedantists believe in God?" And I answer, "If you're speaking of the anthropomorphic type as you just described, the old man with a beard up in the sky, no. If you're speaking of consciousness, absolute reality, this is not a belief, this is an experience. So the answer whether Advaita Vedantists believe in God is yes and no. No to the anthropomorphic type of God and yes to the Self."

You are consciousness. Consciousness means that it is conscious of something. Something is conscious.

Everything on this planet, everything in this universe is conscious. Everything is alive. There is absolutely nothing in this universe that you can call dead. From the mineral kingdom to the animal kingdom, to the vegetable kingdom, to the human kingdom, everything throbs with life. Everything lives. There is no such thing as dead matter. Therefore everything is conscious. Everything is therefore consciousness.

Yet this all is established through your mind. It is an emanation of your mind. Consciousness is the Self. The Self is absolute reality, parabrahman, sat-chit-ananda. You are that. That is your true nature.

You have never suffered nor will you ever suffer. You are free, totally free. Totally free in nirvana. Yet you have to experience this for yourself. You exist, you know that. Nobody can deny that you exist. "Who exists?" you ask yourself. You inquire, "For whom is there existence?" Is this existence for you? You exist as consciousness. Consciousness is the whole universe and you are that. Tat-tvam-asi.

Everything is in your mind. When the mind is transcended there is no longer a universe for you. There is no longer good and bad, right and wrong, God and man, up and down, forward and backward. All of these things disappear when you are your Self. And you are the Self. You must never believe you are anything else but the Self. Just to think about this makes you free. Just to understand that the Self is one. Brahman is one without another. And you are that. Feel the power of that statement. Feel the reality. Feel the truth.

Do you still feel human? Do you still believe you are a human being, who goes through the vicissitudes of life, experiencing all kinds of things in this world? That is a lie, that is not the truth. There are no human beings. There is only consciousness.

When I use the term God I'm referring to consciousness, pure awareness, it is everywhere.

Do not look at your life as being permanent the way it is. People try to preserve their life, why? For whom? For what? Your true life is eternal. It never became anything, it never died. Your true life has always been and always will be. But the way you appear seems to fade as you get older. It seems to disappear it goes downhill. Then again you are not that life. You are the I-am. You are God, you are reality.

The way your life appears is but a shadow. As you watch your shadow, you try to catch your shadow you cannot do it. You can never catch your shadow. So it is with your life. The life appears real to you. Just like the shadow, you cannot grasp it, it evades you.

You are an image on the screen of life. The screen of life is your Self. You are the image when you think of yourself as a human being. Do not look at yourself anymore as a human being. You must rise up. You must understand that you are that God which has always been and will always be. You are that consciousness, you are that absolute reality, which is everything and everyone. There is nothing wrong anywhere. There are no mistakes. Everything is right and good just the way it is. Do not worry. Do not fret. Leave yourself alone. Everything always works out in the right way.

Let the world do what it does. Do not judge it. Do not condemn it. Do not love it. Do not hate it. Observe it. Watch it. But leave it alone. As you lose attachment to this world. The attachment to what we call God grows and grows. Until one day you transcend the body and become that which you have been attached to.

Therefore in this life, in the body that appears to be real, thoughts are things. You have to be very careful what you think about because you might get it and you might not want what you've got. Whatever your mind concentrates on, whatever the mind thinks about you ultimately become. Watch the mind, do not allow it to think all of the thoughts that most of us think about. The whole idea is to subdue the mind. To make the mind quiescent, still and quiet. When the mind becomes one-pointed the Self in the heart will pull the mind in. And that is called self-realization, moksha, liberation.

When the mind goes out the world is created. Yet you have complete control over this situation. You may allow the mind to go out. You may allow the mind to go into this world and partake of all the things of this world and you have your days of goodness, your days of badness. Your days of being sick, your days of being healthy. The mind will do this in the world.

Then you have the choice to cause your mind to go deep inwardly. To go inward. To go within the Self and become annihilated. Remember you have that choice.

When does your mind go out? How can you tell? When you feel the vicissitudes of this world, when you feel anger. When you feel depressed. When you feel there is something wrong someplace, when you feel happiness of the world, when you enjoy the world. Then the mind has gone out and becomes the thing that you're enjoying, the thing that you're hating, the thing that you're expressing.

Some people still don't understand why you should curtail the mind from enjoying things in this world. True enjoyment comes from the Self. The Self, Brahman, absolute reality is true enjoyment. It is enjoyment that you cannot ever find in this world. It is love and peace and happiness that only exists in the Self. It makes the enjoyment of this world kindergarten, in comparison. Therefore when you go to a movie or you say you enjoyed it, you say it's a beautiful day you say that you enjoy the day, it is your ego that enjoys these things. Yet the reason I say to not to keep thinking about these things is because it changes, as you very well know.

As an example of this is when it's a beautiful sunny day everyone is happy. When there is a storm and there is rain, most people become upset. They would like it to be sunny all of the time. When you received a lollipop when you were a little boy or a little girl it made you happy. When the lollipop was finished you became sad. And so it is when you grow up. You enjoy your job. You get fired you become upset. You enjoy your family then there is a death, a divorce, sickness and you can't understand what happened and you become miserable. And it can go on and on but you know what I'm talking about.

But when you turn within, to the Self, to Brahman, to sat-chit-ananda, to absolute reality, to effortless choice-less pure awareness that is the power that never stops. It is the ineffable joy that I speak about all the time that you really are. It has absolutely nothing to do with conditions. It can rain or the sun can shine. There can be death, there can be life. There can be human happiness. There can be human sadness. This will no longer upset you for you have risen. You have become that which is always real, which can never change.

Therefore do not put all of your mental thought into this world. For this world will always change. Rather learn to go within. Learn to dive deep within into that Self which is changeless. That is ultimate oneness. That knows absolutely nothing about sickness, depression, the world, but is a pure light of the heart, the absolute reality. You can make that choice. You have the freedom to make that choice. Everything else is preordained. Everything else is karmic. You have no other choices.

Your body came to this earth karmically to do certain things and that is what it is going to do. Yet you are not that. You have absolutely nothing to do with these things.

You begin your sadhana by inquiring, "To whom do these things come, who experiences good and bad, right and wrong, happy and sad, to whom do they come, who has these thoughts?" And something within will say, "I do, I think this," and you question, "who am I? What is the source of the I?" The I is only a thought, it is not real. Everything is attached to the I. The world, the flowers the trees, the clouds, the galaxies, the universe, all of your thoughts, all of your ideas, all of your concepts. They are all I!

Therefore when you follow the I-thread to the source, which is consciousness, absolute reality, parabrahman, the I becomes the Self. The I becomes that which you have followed in your mind and once it becomes the Self there is no longer a mind, there is no longer a body, there is no longer a universe, there is no longer a God, there is only the Jivan-mukta. Which you are. The one Self. The one reality. The one joy. The one peace. The one love. This is your real nature never forget this.

You must stop dwelling on this world. You must stop dwelling on your body, on being happy or unhappy, on life or death, sickness or health, richness or poverty. Do not think of these things. They will take care of themselves. This has to do with your body. You are not your body. You are absolute freedom, absolute reality.

It is now that time again to play "Stump the guru."

SV: Any prizes for succeeding? (R: Nobody succeeds.) Oh shit.

Q: (Robert reads) First question: Is intense emotional release of great benefit and can it lead to awakening? Second question: Is it possible to fully awaken in this life for an ordinary person?

A: (Robert answers) The first question: Is intense emotional release of great benefit and can it lead to awakening? When you ask a question like this, always remember that you are already awake, You are asking from the standpoint of the ego. The ego can become very emotional. It is true when you become spiritually emotional something may happen to release you from your bondage to a body. But this has to be spiritually emotional, not physically emotional.

By spiritually emotional I mean, you have such a love of God in your heart that you feel you're going to burst. You have this fantastic joy and love inside of yourself and you feel these pangs of love and these pangs of joy so deep that your ego actually bursts. You find that your ego just disappears. And you become free. So if you're speaking from the physically emotional viewpoint, this is good. There have been people that I have known who have cried for God emotionally. They wept tears of joy for God, and these tears wiped away the karma. Removed the sorrow and they became free.

Question number two: Is it possible to fully awaken in this life for an ordinary person? Who is an ordinary person? There are no ordinary people. Everyone is the self. If you were not the Self you would never be able to become the Self. Of course it's possible. It's possible only to the extent that you let go of the world. That you do not become attached to this world, to people, to persons, to things. When there is no attachment there is freedom. Where there is freedom there is the Self.

The object of our being here in a body is to become totally free and released. We have that opportunity now. So what are you doing with your opportunity to become free? What do you do with your life all day long? What do you think about? Where do you go? How do you spend your time? If you spend your time thinking of the Self, practicing self-inquiry, practicing being the witness, doing spiritual things, certainly you can awaken in this life, there is no question about it.

Q: (Robert reads) There is a man in San Diego who claims to be an incarnation of God. He took over a man's body gradually over a period of four years with the man's permission. He claims to be channeling enough energy to make it possible for thousands to become enlightened, sort of. Is he who he says he is? Would God take over somebody's body?

A: (Robert answers) Well it sounds pretty fishy to me. (students laugh) But who am I to judge? I cannot judge these things. I'm only here to bring you to your Self. Whatever this person is, whatever he's doing is between him and God.

What you have to do for yourself is to inquire within, "What do I have to do to become free? What should I do to know God, to understand my real Self as consciousness?" Don't worry about this fellow, he will be taken care of at the appropriate time. Everything always unfolds in the right way. Do not think who is real, who is fake, who is right and who is wrong. Know that God dwells within yourself. Awaken your recognition.

When you recognize God as you, then there is only God and you disappear. Work on yourself and forget about these other people.

Q: (Robert reads) Dear Robert you indicated that you like the questions to be type written. (I never said that, I said it's nice to have them. I don't care what you do with them.) But I don't have anything of world shaking importance to say. In fact I don't even have anything of minor importance to say because nothing is more or even less important than anything else. So here it is. I'm a hershey bar, I'm a hershey bar, I'm a hershey bar. Of course people in the know, know what they're up to and know that hershey bar is a code name for God. But as I said nothing particularly important. Love Fred. (students laugh)

R: I always thought Fred was a hershey bar. (SV: You're right.)

SJ: One with nuts?

R: He's mostly nuts. (SV: Code name nuts is my name.) You're alright Fred.

SM: That's it Robert. (referring to question box.)

R: Those are all written questions. Does anybody have anything to say, to add?

SG: It was interesting in the writing of a lady in the kapas...unclear...in the church. (R: Yes.) And she described an experience called no Self...unclear...she said prior to that you go into a unity state in which the ego falls away and you're in a state of oneness. But she said this unity state is not the end, such that it appears to some people to be the end but if you persist in this it will take you into the state where she said in the market place or living in the world in full experience and through bodily feelings that eventually even what she calls self falls away into this experience of no self whatsoever. And I noticed that this is kind of tally's with some of, struck me with some of Nisargadatta's relationship. He said that this guru that told him first of all, "Be one with beingness and one with the universe," and then that will carry you into a state of non-being. Is there this middle step you have to take first before going into the state of the absolute?

R: There is absolutely no states. It has been my experience that no state at all exists. That you are that now! And you just have to wake up, just have to awaken. But there are those who like to go through states. They go through Denver, Colorado, Florida and all the states they wish to go. It's okay, it is good it doesn't matter.

This has been Bernadettes Piers Roberts, her experience, her expression. This is what she has been through, so this is what is good for her. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this but the more states you add on, the longer you have to awaken. For you say I'm going through this state now and now I have to go through that state. Then I have to go through this state and that state. It never ends. I say be free now, don't worry about states. Know yourself, awaken to your self and whatever you have to go through you go through.

But again when you think about these states, when you think about these things it holds you back. For you believe and think that you have to go through the same experiences that she is going through. You don't. You can awaken any hour. Any moment, any time and be totally free and liberated. It is not going through any states. If someone questions you it's really what you want to do. If you want to practice going through states or do you want to be awakened?

(SF: I wanna be free?) (R: Then awaken and be free!)

SF: If I wake from being sound asleep, which is perfection I'm told and I look out the window and I see a man in a tree. I'm aware of that man and I'm aware of that tree but I'm not aware of what it is that causes me to see the man? And it seems to me what I've done is I've also created... (tape break) ...and the truth of the matter is I'm not this psychosomatic apparatus, it is part of my mistake as the man in the tree was. And I'm no more or less real than I assumed the man in the tree I saw when I woke up. I didn't make it very clear.

R: When you awaken, you awaken from a deep sleep which is the natural state. Before you became cognizant of this world. You are in the fourth state of consciousness, chikara, which is beyond waking, sleeping and dreaming. You're in that space before you become cognizant of this world. The mind is resting in the heart, then all of a sudden instantaneously, the mind goes from the heart to the brain and you become cognizant of your body and the world and the man in the tree, which is none other than yourself. You become cognizant of the mind which produces the entire universe. Or think back to the state prior to that when you were just coming out of the sleep. In those few seconds there were no thoughts. In those few seconds you were gloriously happy, joyous, blissful. That is your true state. That is what Masters state is bliss. But when you allow the mind to begin to think the world comes into effect. The man in the tree comes into effect. The universe comes into effect. So all these things come from your mind. Your mind creates everything, your body, the man in the tree, the world, the universe and your thoughts. Therefore you should immediately ask yourself, "To whom does this come?" And you will realize that it comes to the ego, the mind not to you and you'll be free.

SD: But where is the state of chikara from Colorado? (R: About fifty miles east.) You were talking about there being no states.

SF: I thought it was turiya? (R: Trupala, turiya, they're both the same.) They're both the same.

SG: (Student asks about emotional health)

R: We do not deal with the emotions. The emotions again are like the body, like everything else, they do not really exist, like the ego, the emotions belong to the I-thought. The I-thought are your emotions. Therefore when you inquire, "To whom do these come?" The answer will be, "They come to me. I feel this." This I is the emotion. This I is everything, it is the I-thought. And everything is attached to the I. It makes no difference how deep the emotions are it is all part of the I-thought.

So rather than to deal with the emotions or to deal with any other subject we try to annihilate the I. To destroy the I-thought forever. By causing it to return to the heart centre from whence it came. On return to the heart centre from whence it came, this heart centre is God, reality, pure awareness. Where there are no emotions, no qualities, nothing as you know it. And you become totally free in this state. So the emotions are simply the I-thought. Get rid of the I-thought by inquiring, "To whom does it come?" And you'll be totally free.

SF: One of the Masters said something that translated as, "Heaven and earth will pass away but my words will not pass away." My feeling is that what that translated was my words infers pure awareness.

R: My words that will not pass away is Om, pure awareness, reality, sat-chit-ananda. The reality will not pass away. Reality is eternal from every place. Only what is born can pass away. (SF: Excuse me?) What has been born? (SF: Oh.) Since reality was never born, it cannot pass away.

SH: Before that appears that's it? (R: Appears yes, whatever appears.) That means the whole universe everything you can see, without exception. (R: It's all nonsense, it's a lie, it is fake.) Glad to hear that. (R: Bhodhisatvic.)

SB: If consciousness is all-pervading how come it feels like it's focussed in the body now. Like I'm looking out at you and it feels like it is and the eye's are now claiming I, just like attention.

R: But your focussing is not consciousness. You are focussing on something that is inside of yourself, an emotion, a feeling, it is not consciousness. Consciousness cannot be focussed, consciousness just is. (SB: So attention is like the root of the mind. Right?) Attention is like the root of the mind? (SB: Yes.) Attention is being still, being quiet. It depends how you use that word.

SB: In other words is consciousness completely free of any focus any centre at all?

R: It is totally free. There is no centre, there is no circumference, it is pure awareness. (SB: It's funny how the awareness seems to be the same as attention in the body. As we look at objects and as we're focussed in the head, it feels like that is consciousness.) Pure awareness, consciousness has absolutely nothing to do with focussing or anything to do with the body or any other object. It is pure ineffable bliss. It knows nothing about the things you are referring to. It doesn't make anything happen. It doesn't destroy anything. It doesn't do anything. It is all-pervading. It knows itself as consciousness and nothing else.

SB: How is it related to the attention? If I focus my attention on my toe, I mean that awareness is consciousness, that's part of it or the essence of it and yet it seems to be confined to the movement of the mind through attention.

R: You're getting confused. Consciousness knows nothing about a toe, nothing about attention. Consciousness knows nothing about all the things you're talking about. Consciousness only knows itself. It is pure awareness by itself. It knows nothing about attention. (SB: But isn't that the life force itself that we're using to see and hear and feel and be alive and moving around as awareness? There is something happening some relationship in our everyday awareness.) You're referring to yourself as a body that is aware. In truth there is no body to be aware of anything. The body does not exist. Consciousness has nothing to do with your body whatsoever. You're trying to say that consciousness caused the body to be the way it is. And if you pay attention to the toes or to something else, you say it's consciousness. This is attention, this is awareness. (SB: A certain aspect of it anyway?) No, consciousness is consciousness. There is only consciousness, nothing else exists.

SG: Robert isn't our meditation to have such consciousness, attention on the saying of I-am? Isn't that concentrated attention?

R: All meditation techniques is to still the mind, to make the mind one-pointed. (SG: Attention a technique?) Yes, that is the only reason for meditation. For when you meditate and the mind becomes still, you have no thoughts and when you have no thoughts then you are consciousness, when you have thoughts you are the body. So meditation is only to still the mind. To make the mind one pointed. So you can be the Self.

SK: Robert what's the meaning of consciousness ??? Then how do we account for that?

R: From what viewpoint are you speaking? You're speaking from the human viewpoint. (SK: But that would still imply a duality with consciousness and as a human experience.) No you're speaking from your human viewpoint by saying there is consciousness and there's experience. There is only consciousness. There is no human viewpoint. But you're speaking from the human viewpoint because you think you're human. (SK: If consciousness is omniscient and all-pervading wouldn't it be the one that is experiencing the human viewpoint?) No it cannot experience the human viewpoint. Due to the fact that it is all-pervading there is no place for a human viewpoint. There is no space, there is no place for anything but consciousness. It takes up all space, it takes up everything, there is nothing that exists except consciousness. The human viewpoint when you speak of that you're speaking from your own standards. From where your brain is coming from. The way you see it, the way you look at it. And this has to be transcended. This has to go. Everything has to go. All types of human viewpoints, beliefs, talking about yourself, as compared to consciousness.

SK: It seems like the two are separate, it seems you can't get further than that.

R: Because you're trying to get somewhere, there is nowhere to get. (students laugh) (SK: If they are unrelated then it seems that we're in bad shape.) No they are not completely unrelated at all. There is only consciousness. There is no human viewpoint. You seem to be speaking from a human viewpoint. But that's just seeming to speak from a human viewpoint. In truth there is no human viewpoint. There is no human. There is only consciousness and you are that. (SK: Then how do you account for all these misconceptions that everyone has?) How do you account for your dream? When you dream everything in the dream seems real. It seems as if you're doing things, you're going places, flying in airplanes and being in wars and having children, then you wake up. What was the purpose of the dream? No purpose whatsoever. The same is true for existence as it appears. It has no purpose, it doesn't exist. It is the I-thought. Follow the I-thought to the heart and be free.

Remember all of these things you're asking me are coming from your mind. It's coming from your viewpoint which you think is a viewpoint. What I'm saying to you have no viewpoint, you have no viewpoint it never existed. Don't identify with your viewpoint. What I'm talking about, lift up your thinking. Identify with consciousness. Drop all the chatter about viewpoints. Identify with the highest, with Brahman. You are that and nothing else.

SK: From this viewpoint, why do teachers go into that? You know this very attempt to try to convince people that are not sort of some inward being like that they are not like a bird in a cage, no matter how subtle the body may be whether it goes into a soul body, the subtle body let alone the physical body and try to disabuse people of this notion that they are an inward being, as if there is some potency for these misconceptions.

R: Every teacher teaches from the standpoint of the student. It's like when we talk about creation. We talk about Adam and Eve, we talk about how creation began. This is for those people who need that. Who are in that grade of universal feeling and consciousness, one has to be totally free of this way. But the true Master teaches in the silence. The true Master does not say anything, teaches in silence and stillness. All these things are from viewpoints of certain students, but in reality they do not exist. It never existed.

It's like people who used to come to Ramana Maharshi and ask him, "Does karma exit, does reincarnation exist?" and he would look at them and say, "Yes, yes they all exist." Because he realized if they started an argument and they start talking about it for hours and hours and hours non-stop. So he told them, "Be good, do good deeds and overcome your problems." But to a person who was ready, there is no karma, there is no reincarnation, there is no world, there is no universe, there is only that and you are that!

SF: Words are in the mind. Everything is words to explain things in our minds.

R: Of course, everything comes from the mind. You cannot interpret what I say with the mind for you will have endless questions it will never stop. It'll never be solved. Rather rest in the silence. (SF: It's a forlorn hope to rely on the intellect) Yes, keep your mind from chattering. The mind is like a bunch of monkeys always chattering, chattering, chattering. Still the mind.

SX: Robert when people say...when you see something, God's inner space, are you just seeing things that really don't exist?

R: When somebody tells you that you are dreaming things or seeing things? (SX: Yeah but you really saw this?) Oh I see what you mean. People are speaking from their viewpoint. You may be able to see something deep inside of yourself that noone else can see. So if they can't see it they will tell you that that they can't see it either. But that is where they are coming from. Perhaps you can see through things, you can see beautiful things, you can see everything. So they're seeing where they're at, according to their development. So their outlook in the world sees the world in accordance with their development. When you look at the world you see from the point of your development. So everybody looks at the same thing and sees something else. Do you see? (SX: Yes.) You're seeing this world from your viewpoint where you are coming from. How you see it depends on your age and the way you were brought up. A grown up will see the world from their viewpoint. From the things they've been through, from the experiences they've had, we're seeing where we're coming from.

Therefore when you tell them about your viewpoint they're only thinking about their viewpoint, what they see, they will try to convince you of their viewpoint. Therefore we begin to leave people alone. We do not try to convince people of anything. Just bless them, leave them alone and we search within our selves for the reality and the truth.

SH: All viewpoints are all necessarily false?

R: Yes. (SH: There is no such thing as a valid viewpoint?) Exactly, all viewpoints come from the mind, from your thoughts, from your experiences. Therefore silence is the best answer for everything. To keep still and not learn to keep arguments.

SD: This boys viewpoint is no less valid or valid than anyone? (R: True, yes.) What he sees is what he sees.

SH: They're both worthless. (R: That's your viewpoint.) Yeah and that's worthless. Throw it away. Get rid of it. Drop it.

SF: Somebody asked Maharshi if they should read the Gita. He said, "Always." The person said, "How about the Bible?" And Maharshi said, "The bible and the Gita are the same." And the person said, "The bible teaches that man is born in sin?" And the Master said, "The man sense is sin." (R: The What?) Sir? (R: What's sin?) The man sense. (R: The man sense, of course) The word sin means separation.

R: There are no sinners, noone has ever sinned, so-to-speak.

Announcements of any kind?

SM: No I want to thank everyone for bringing back the transcripts. We have some more coming up.

R: We have some prashad.

There is enough for everybody. Why don't you open the...

DROP IT!

5th March, 1992

Robert: Good evening. It's good to be with you once again on this lovely Thursday evening. My, most of you look very serious tonight. You look like an Albanian that just got his cow stolen. (laughter) Have you ever seen an Albanian without a cow? (laughter) He's pretty excited.

You're all enlightened. There is absolutely no one who is not enlightened.

What do you feel about yourself? What do you say? Do you believe you have a problem? Do you believe there is something wrong somewhere?

There is only one way to deal with problems. And that is to drop it, totally and completely. Let's not beat around the bush, have you ever beat around the bush? (laughter) Let's not do that. We don't want to use techniques, sadhana's, to become enlightened or to find ourselves or to do anything to ourselves. We just want to drop the world. Stop thinking about the world. Forget about the world.

The only reason you think something is wrong someplace is due to the fact you think! Your mind is always active. Your mind waves are always moving. And the only reason you think of course is due to the past. Thoughts about the past create your future.

When you begin to understand that there is no past and there is no future there is no one to think. Thinking is your downfall. Whether you're thinking about good thoughts or bad thoughts, makes no difference. Good thoughts lead to bad thoughts and bad thoughts lead to good thoughts. It's all thoughts and you're not supposed to think. You were not put on this earth to think. Come to think of it you're not even put on this earth. (laughter)

What are you doing here? (S: I don't know?) You don't exist. You've never existed and you will never exist. Why don't you believe me? There used to be a song like that. If only you could realize how beautiful and wonderful it is not to think. Not to have any thoughts coming into your mind. Oh thoughts will come into your mind but you will learn to drop it!

The problem is not with the thoughts that come to you but with your holding on to those thoughts. Giving them energy, giving them power. For only you can give them power. They have no power on their own. They cannot hurt you by themselves. Only you give them power by allowing the thoughts to control you, by looking at the thoughts and fearing or reacting to them. That's where all the trouble begins.

How many of you can really sit in a chair for an hour, without playing the TV, listening to the radio, reading the newspaper or doing anything else, just sitting in the quiet for an hour? That is all you need is one hour. Most of us cannot stand to be by ourselves where nothing is happening for an hour. We always have to be doing something, don't we?

If we're alone we have to play the television or have to play the radio. We have to listen to a tape or we have to read. But we don't like to be by ourselves where nothing is happening. Yet I say to you this is the best time of your life. To be by yourself with absolutely nothing going on.

I know that some of you are afraid to do this because you're afraid of the thoughts that come to your mind. The thoughts just seem to jump at you, when you're not watching something or reading something. But this is how it begins. You have to allow the thoughts to jump at you. To try to take you over completely and become the witness to all of this. To watch how your thoughts control you, watch how you react. Whenever you think of a pleasant thought your countenance becomes happy, whenever you think of an ugly thought you become afraid, perturbed, upset. Thoughts have that power to do all this to you.

I told you this story before about the false telegram. Where Mrs Smith receives a telegram saying her husband has been killed he was out of town on business. And she becomes violently upset, screaming and crying and then the telegraph company calls her back and they say they were sorry it was another Mrs Smith, it wasn't you at all. But look what happened to her when she believed that.

Think of the thoughts that make you angry, make you upset, make you feel out of sorts, make you feel as if there is something wrong. Understand that there can be absolutely nothing wrong anywhere at anytime. It's just that things are not going the way that you want or the way that you think they should go.

Let's take the AIDS epidemic. We believe that is terrible and I suppose rightly so, but if we look at the picture from a higher viewpoint we see that this is a cleansing of the earth. It sounds strange, I know. We can take any subject. Wars, cataclysms, earthquakes, anything, pestilence, disease. There is no God punishing anybody, there are no mistakes, there is not somebody trying to kill you because you cannot die. It's really a joke to me when I see people trying to die and believe they're dying. Nobody was ever born, nobody dies. All of these things take place in your mind.

But since you believe they are taking place and you believe in these things, see it from a higher viewpoint. When there is an over population the animals know how to take care of this. The Lions eat the sheep, all these things take place when there is an over abundance of animals, of sheep. When there is an over population, cataclysms begin, wars start. Man's inhumanity to man becomes stronger. If you view it from a human standpoint you'll be mad at me for saying these things but we're not talking from a human standpoint, we're seeing it from above.

Everything is right, there are no mistakes. This doesn't mean if you're seeing this from a human standpoint we just sit down in a chair and say, "All is well, nothing is wrong." When in your heart you're feeling sad and frightened and you think everything is wrong. This is hypocrisy. As long as you feel that there is a mistake or something is wrong in this world, it is up to you to help correct it. Ironic isn't it. If you see we're being attacked by the Albanians, (laughter) we have to take action. We have to find those cows so the Albanians won't get mad at us. As long as you feel there is something wrong you have to do something. If you see your brother or your sister or fellow human being hit by a car, it's up to you to render service. Yet if you can rise above this you will feel and see a completely different picture. All is well, all is exceedingly well.

Remember all the things that you are afraid of or things that seem wrong in your life are taking place within your mind, within your self. You feel all this. You can even prove this in your humanhood. You may get up in the morning, feel depressed, feel that you have a headache, feel as if there is something wrong with you. And when you go out into the sunlight the trees are still there, the flowers are still smiling at you, the buds are coming out on the trees, there is absolutely nothing wrong with nature.

When there is a war bombs are dropped, cities are destroyed, people are killed and so forth. When everything settles down the grass begins to grow again. The animals seem to flourish again. The apple trees bloom once more. The oranges come out in abundance. The wheat grows. Life continues as it appears. The secret of life is to be in tune with the way nature works. Do not feel mad or upset. Never feel as if something is wrong or somebody is trying to hurt you or there is a God trying to punish you. All is well and everything is unfolding as it should.

Again, drop all those thoughts. As soon as your mind starts telling you something is wrong, drop the thought. Do not really change the thought for another thought, just drop it.

It is true people who have been meditating for a long time, people who have been practicing atma-vichara, self-inquiry, people who have been practicing the witness consciousness and so forth are able to do this faster than the other people. They are able to drop their thoughts and keep the mind still for a while.

If you've not practiced any type of meditation or done anything in your life it will appear to be a little more difficult. You will not be able to drop the thoughts so fast. For even when you drop the thought, other thoughts will attack you and make you feel depressed. Make you feel afraid of something. That is what thoughts do. Yet you remember it's only a thought. It is only your thought that does this, nothing else.

Yet you may say, "What if I'm in pain? What if I'm dying of cancer?" Again most of you don't understand this too well I suppose. Nobody dies of cancer. Nobody is in pain. It appears as if this is happening. The appearance is very strong in some people, less strong in other people and doesn't exist in some others. As you know you can take the same pain and five different people can be experiencing the same pain. One person will feel as if they are dying, another person will feel as if they are just hurting, another person will try not to think about it at all, another person may feel as if it's not even happening. Everyone experiences these things differently in accordance with your state of consciousness. But the top of the line is, that there is no pain, there is no death, there is no disease.

From our talk on Sunday some of us are still having trouble with creation. We still feel creation comes out of consciousness. Consciousness is creation. For we still have a feeling that everything has to come from somewhere. The finite mind cannot grasp that creation comes from nothing or doesn't even exist. It is difficult I admit, for the mind to accept things like this.

This is why I say do not accept what I say. Do not even believe what I say. But try to demonstrate this for yourself. Try to prove these things for yourself. (For all you know I may be as crazy as a loon and I am, what is a loon? (S: You.) Exactly, Looney tunes.) And you shouldn't go around talking about these things to most people. You should always work on yourself. Do not try to prove anything to anyone. Do not try to show off to anyone whatever you know or whatever you think. It is only your experiences that count for you and cause your body to disappear even though it appears to be there.

Anyway to get this creation business out of the way, there is no creation. You do not exist. You have never existed. To some of you, you still don't know what I'm talking about. Always remember the dream condition, where does the dream come from? Does it come from God? Or from consciousness or from pure awareness? From sat-chit-ananda? Of course not. A dream just appears. The whole dream is taking place in your mind. You are the dreamer. And it seems almost impossible to understand to a person who has never had a dream that in the dream all kinds of things are taking place.

There are vast cities, there are universes. You are doing all kinds of things in the dream and all that is taking place within your mind. To the one who has never dreamt it sounds very illogical doesn't it? How can all these things be taking place in your mind? Yet you're dreaming and you've proven it to yourself that dreams exist.

Therefore if someone came to you and argued with you and told you, "I can't believe that." For they never had the experience of a dream and you tell them what you've been dreaming about and they'll say, "That's impossible. That just doesn't make sense. I can never accept this." You tell me the same thing. When I tell you that you're dreaming today, now. You are dreaming the mortal dream. Everything about your life is a dream, everything. And you tell me I'm crazy. I'm out of my mind. This is true. Yet one day you have the dream yourself and you become totally fascinated. You have become aware of the dreamworld. And I say to you right now that you are dreaming, this is all a dream, a bubble, that will one day burst and you will be completely totally free. This freedom is bliss.

It's like this. You're having a horrible dream. You're back in the inquisition days and you're being tortured. Your fingers are cut off. Your toes are cut off. Your nose is cut off. You're being severely tortured. All of a sudden you awaken and you're in bliss, compared to what you've been going through aren't you? You are in total bliss.

And so it is with this world. You go through so many experiences. Think of all the experiences you went through today. You did this, you did that, you went shopping. You were worried about what you were going to eat. You concern yourself with your neighbors. You did things at work. You worried about this, you thought about this. You took this action, you took that action and you forgot what I told you. Whenever you come here you forgot to remember it's a dream. It isn't real. Even though you're feeling it, even though it pains you sometimes. Even though you have to go through many experiences. Yet you do the same thing in the dream, the dream ends and you feel so grateful and so blissful because the experiences of your being tortured are not true. So some of you are being tortured in this life. Maybe because of lack or limitation or disease or marital problems, whatever. Yet it's all a dream. You do not exist the way you appear.

If you're only able to think about these things during the day when you go about your affairs, you'll become the happiest person on earth. For this type of thinking will cause you not to react to person, place or thing. You will not react. You will not feel somebody is doing something to you. Somebody is trying to hurt you. Somebody doesn't like you. All those thoughts will disappear, when you do not react.

But you have to have a reason for not reacting and the reason is the dream. You're beginning to understand slowly but surely that this is all a dream. Therefore if you react to the dream you become further involved. That is why we discuss things like karma.

Whenever you react to a situation or a condition whether you're justified or not justified, for whatever reason all you are doing is accruing karma. By accruing karma I really mean you're making it tougher for you to break away. You're making it harder for you to awaken. For the word karma itself means action and whatever you perform in action you are causing yourself to be drawn deeper into karma. But when you begin to see that you are not the doer then you refrain from reaction.

When I say you are not the doer and you refrain from reaction always remember what I'm talking about. I do not mean that you sit still and do absolutely nothing. It is some peoples karma to do this, to sit and do absolutely nothing. But most of us are in this world doing things. Yet if you can only accept the fact that you are not the doer the things that you do will be done better than you can ever imagine. You are taking action and non-action. You are working and no work. You are thinking with no mind. You have become free.

Therefore never think or believe that this kind of a teaching, Advaita Vedanta, will make you not to love your family, will cause you to lose your job, will cause you to have problems, on the contrary. If you understand what I'm talking about and do this in the right way you will continue to do anything and everything you have to do. And because you're no longer perturbed, your body will not feel stress and things will be much better for you.

All is well. All is well. Drop all the pretending. Drop all your hurts. Drop the self pity. Drop everything, let go. Awaken, be free. Freedom is your real nature. You have always been that, yet you are allowing the thoughts to cover up that freedom so it appears. You're allowing your thoughts to tell you something else. And you're caught up in the dreamworld believing it's the real world.

Another factor to remember is whatever is happening to you in your life disappears when you go to sleep, doesn't it? When you're in deep sleep none of these things matter any longer. When you're in deep sleep nothing is happening. The person who is sick forgets about their sickness. The person who is angry forgets about their anger. The person who is depressed forgets about their depression. The person who feels hurt forgets about the hurt.

That is why when you wake up in the morning you say, "I had a good sleep, I feel refreshed." The reason you say you feel refreshed is because in the state of deep sleep all of your physical problems, all of your mental problems that you have when you're so-called awake have gone into abeyance. They're not here any longer.

It is explained in Advaita Vedanta that the mind is now resting in the heart centre. When the mind rests in the heart centre no thing ever exists again. Nothing is there, but that which always is. When you awaken to this world, the mind rushes to the heart centre back into the brain and you become cognizant of the body, of the world, of your problems, of everything. Therefore when you think about this intelligently you'll see how can these things be real if they disappear when I go to sleep. The word real means something that is present all the time. Therefore when you feel depressed and you fall asleep the depression is not there. So it's not present all the time. Therefore it's not real.

And this is true of all the aspects of your life, everything. Everything that you can think about is not present when you are in deep sleep. So it cannot be real. Even the so-called good things of your life. Your beautiful home, your beautiful boyfriend or girlfriend or wife or husband, your beautiful children, your car, your great bank account, all of your investments. All of these things disappear when you're in deep sleep. As if they never existed. When you wake up they exist once more.

It's like having a recurring dream. We'll go back to the inquisition. You're being tortured a little more everyday. Now they cut off your fingers and your nose and your toes. You wake up during the day you go about your business. You go to sleep at night and you start dreaming again. The inquisition continues, your eyeballs are popped out. All these things are happening to you. Morning comes you wake up you go about your business. You go to sleep again and the inquisition continues until there is nothing left of you. All the parts are gone. And you wake up again and you're in this world.

This is exactly the same thing I'm talking about. This is exactly what is happening to us. We believe this world is so real. It appears so real. It's like new people always tell me when I talk about these things, "Well Robert I can walk over to you and pinch you and you'll feel the pinch." You can also do that in the dream can't you? If you see me in the dream and if you tell me, "Robert this is not a dream because I can pinch you." So you pinch me in the dream but it's a dream pinch. It appears that I felt it in the dream, doesn't it? So you see the same thing happens in this wake up world as in the dream world.

If you can only get what I'm talking about, you will become forever free. This world is not real. You're wasting your time thinking about this world. Getting involved in this world and doing all the things you're doing. What you should try to do is to awaken.

And the last thing I have to share with you. If you believe that this world is real you will also believe that the other worlds are also real. You will believe that when you die you will be free. That is like the born again Christians who can't wait to go to heaven. They say how rotten this world is but when they die they will be in glory, hallelujah. Praise the Lord. (S: Yeah, Amen.) But I say to you if you have not found yourself in this life, you will not find yourself in the after life.

All you do in the after-life is take a break for a while, you take a rest, it's like going to sleep. But then you have to awaken once more whether you're on an astral plane or causal plane or wherever your delusion takes you. And you become aware of the same problems, the same stuff you had before. There is no end to it. The end only comes when you awaken.

Therefore do not think of death as heaven sent. It is only a continuum. You have to awaken now. When you awaken now you will realize there is absolutely no place to go, there is nothing to become. You will just be as you've always been, effortless choiceless pure awareness, your true nature. All is well.

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: What you were saying reminds me of. Krishnamurti said, "Thoughts are responsive to many." One of the great ones he said, "Do not expect to fathom the unfathomable..." (R: Don't expect what?) Do not expect to fathom the unfathomable nor measure the unmeasurable. For he who asks first and he who enters first, there remains only silence." And it seems to me that all of these thoughts and words are so much - as soon as thoughts and words enter the equation there is a departure from the reality. It seems to me. And these are all words upon the illusory.

R: Umm. Was that your own experience Fred? (SF: It's still intellectual.) Have your own experience. Have your own experience and drop all the intellectual. (SF: All the intellectual? Okay I'll try.) Go home and tear up the bible. (students laugh) (SF: That quote wasn't from the bible?) Tear up all the quotes. (SF: Tear up what?) All the quotes. (SF: All the quotes?) Wherever they come from. (SF: All the quotes.) Stand naked. (SF: Okay.) Stand naked in the face of God. Have no crutch. Whether it's myself whomever you have a crutch on or a book. Lean on noone. All those quotations are making your head swim. You're filled with quotations, mystical quotations. That's nice, that's good but what does it do to us? It adds on to all the stuff. We want to empty ourselves, not add on to ourselves, that's important.

We do not want to add on further knowledge. It is the knowledge that keeps us bound. We want to give up all knowledge.

SH: Why do you call it nice and good then when it's our bondage?

R: Say that again? (SH: Why do you call it nice and good then when it's our bondage?) What's nice and good. (SH: You just said, (quote) "nice and good." I'm quoting you.) They're nice and good if you want to listen to that. It's nice and good if you enjoy that. They sound nice to most people. Most people enjoy hearing beautiful sayings, poetry, biblical quotations. Therefore they sound nice and good. (SH: They don't sound nice and good to me.) Good! (students laugh) (SH: If they do to you, fine.) Whatever you accept. (SH: I'd throw them all in the garbage can if I were you.) Okay I'll have to do it. That's good. (SH: Good but not nice.) Good for nothing.

SG: Robert I just want to suggest an eye for an eye. That sounds negative, nice and good.

R: An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, an arm for an arm.

SG: The question I was going to ask was, it is perfect that thoughts arise if it doesn't affect you in any way, however there seems to be a little bit of a problem when there are no thoughts the mind is free that is fine but the thoughts rise up again and sometimes you can observe them and other times you're caught up in them. What is the subtle point at which you can be identifying and disengage from them and do that more and more, how do you do that? To have thoughts arising and not have them affecting you.

R: Without getting into the answer that you want to hear, you simply let go. Just drop them. Simple, drop them. You can do it. Drop the thoughts. (SG: By just being yourself?!) Forget about being yourself, drop the thoughts. Being yourself is another thought. See back in our minds we remember all the teachings we've had over the years. And these teachings conveniently come up to the mind at certain times and tell us certain things. And we think we're making progress but we're not really making progress. We're simply adding more thoughts to the fire, fuel to the fire, by thinking these thoughts and replacing them with these thoughts. We just have to drop all thoughts.

SG: What about the process in which there seems like there is silence and then all of a sudden you discover that you just hit a more and more subtle layer of thought. Woke up and it fooled me again, I thought there was silence and yet the thoughts were more subtle.

R: If you have discovered that about yourself, drop it! Drop that! Make the whole thing simple. Since your real nature is consciousness. There is nothing you have to do to remove the thoughts. There is no procedure, there is no process, you simply have to drop the thoughts. I know we can talk about self-inquiry. We can talk about witnessing. We can talk about many methods but we're trying to get to the point when we understand that these things are for people who like going to school. They go from grade to grade and have to do all of these practices, all of these sadhanas. But most of you have been with me for a couple of years. And you never realize when I tell you, drop it! I mean just that. Drop everything! Stop yourself. Do not become intellectual. Do not become spiritual. Do not become anything. Just drop the thoughts and become free what you already are.

SD: Without being too obtuse what is the difference between dropping it and repressing it?

R: Repressing it is when you feel it and you think about it and you hold it and it goes deep into your subconscious somewhere but you still feel that it's real or it's true. But dropping it is when you totally transcend it, transmute it. Just drop it! Drop it!

SR: Robert, can you describe a scenario and tell me where my perceptions are wrong. For example if I go to work, all the way I'm going to work and saying I'm not really here, there is no park here, there's no road there...

R: You must be out of your mind. (students laugh) (SH: He's nuts.) (laughter)

SR: It's all good...and then I get to work, I have to deal with some people and have to ask the question to get data, so would it be proper to go through the procedure, "I'm in the dream, I'm asking this person this question but I know it's a dream I'm really not here, they're not here." Then I have to write a report. "And I'm not really writing a report. There is no report. There is no me and I'm writing this report." Or, rather than that do you suggest that I say, when I get the thought, "I could be writing a report now," I just push away the thought and my hands just miraculously go up and they start writing and I keep pushing away every thought and refuse to analyze the data and they just keep writing and writing and fifty minutes later the report is done and I can submit it and it's over? Are you suggesting it would be better for me to realize it's all a dream and be putting effort into it, trying to mentally use my mind but realize it's a dream? Or to put away all thoughts, no thinking, refuse to think but my hands and mind will automatically just produce the reports and it will happen?

R: If you refuse to think the thoughts will be stronger than ever. You do not refuse to think. You simply just take a breath and let go of the whole thing. It's all gone. (SR: Will the hands automatically write the report?) Everything will take care of itself. It's so simple that I can't make it any simpler.

SR: What about the idea of this is really a dream and it appears that I'm thinking about this data to produce ideas to put on the report and then move there with the mind that doesn't exist but realizing that this is all a false dream? But allowing myself to get involved in this false dream and write this report and put this data together but realize it's a dream and realize there is no me, there is no hand, there is no pencil, there is nothing that we're doing? (R: No.) That isn't the right approach? (R: No.) The right approach is to drop all thoughts, not think about the data but somehow the report will be manifested.

R: That report will be manifested. Let go. Drop everything. Forget about it and be free. Total simplicity. (SR: It would help if I had a first step that I could understand.) If you want steps we go back into self-inquiry or you can run up and down the steps. What are steps? First step, second step, third step. (SQ: ...and twelfth step.) Twelfth step. We want to forget about steps. We want to get to the stage where we just are. We're totally free without thinking about it. We do not have any thoughts about anything at all. We do not think that we're free. We do not think that we're not free. We just do not think. Just be yourself. That is what I mean when I say, "Just be yourself." Your Self does not have to think about being itself.

SR: Somebody was watching me who didn't realize I wasn't really here, am I really here. Would it appear to them that I was asking questions to get data and would it appear to them that I was writing the report even though I'm not aware that I'm writing a report because there is no me and there is no report?

R: It will appear to them wherever they're coming from. Wherever they are in consciousness. That is how it will appear to them. (SR: So they may say, "I saw you writing a report," but I'll be unaware of it, huh?) No, you will be aware of writing a report but you will not be aware of writing a report. Both are true. (SR: Both.) You will be writing the report but you will be aware of writing the report but then in the same instance, in the same consciousness you will be aware that there is nobody writing a report.

SR: Well that is kind of what I was describing as the first scenario that you rejected. That is what I was trying to say. Aware that I'm doing it and yet aware that there is no me and there is no road at the same time.

R: Simultaneously. (SR: Yeah.) It happens at the same time. (SR: You can buy that one.) That'll work. (SR: The only difficulty is my mind might have to make some analytical effort to analyze the data but at the same time if I realize there is no mind there is no me and no report, maybe okay?) See you're realizing again. Do not realize those things at all. Just be your self. Just do it. It will be done.

SL: Robert do you mean just let your mind do whatever it's supposed to do and let the body do whatever it's supposed to do, is that right?

R: Yes, everything will take care of itself. You have a background that is analytical and you always want to analyze things and place things in a proper perspective. What I'm saying is forget everything. (SL: Does it kind of go back to the second principle which is everything is predestined so let it do whatever it's supposed to do.) True, yes. (SL: And get cut if you're supposed to get cut?) Everything will take care of itself.

SJ: It's like it deals with trust. It's all trust.

R: Well you can say that but there has to be someone to trust. (SJ: Yeah well.) Those things take care of themselves. (SJ: I guess these analogies are so good that you should have all the more understanding so that we can totally trust them?) Well at that level you have to trust. See we're getting all the levels mixed up.

SL: I guess the thing that what you are saying is that...I can understand that my mind runs away with myself sometimes and it's like trying to put everything into place and I have to keep reminding myself that maybe things are predestined. So let it go, don't try to put extra thought into thinking that when I do this report I know I'm thinking about it. Later on maybe just observing myself otherwise I get crazy. Not that I'm not. (laughter)

R: On the level you're speaking on this is true, on that level. But when I say, "Drop it!" This is the ultimate. There is nothing else. Drop it! Stop believing that you have to write a report or you don't have to write a report or you have to have an analysis or you don't have to have an analysis. Drop the whole ball of wax.

SD: Is "dropping it," above witnessing?

R: Yes, it's above everything. (SD: Because it seems to me what Greg was saying was sort of that if he could go ahead and function while witnessing, while watching himself and pray or something, that you've recommended it.) That's on that level yes. We're getting all these levels mixed up. On a certain level you have to practice self-inquiry and ask yourself, "To whom do these things come?" You have to do what you have to do but tonight I'm speaking to you on the highest level when I say, "Drop it!" (SD: But we're in kindergarten maybe we're not capable of dropping it?) Sure you are. Just by being here you are. Drop it! Say that again, what did you say?

SL: When you say drop it, drop what?

R: Drop it! (SL: What's it? I'm not sure about all that?) "It," is the whole ball of wax. "It," is the whole universe, your body, the dream state, everything. (SL: In other words it's the same thing as, "Just wake up!") Yes.

SG: So Robert if we're trying to be in a new situation say that we're in a new job and dealing with some serious matters and we had to give a lot of critical, analytical, creative thinking. There is a lot of pressure it requires, you know concentration of our whole being and dealing with other people. That we can do all that and we can use all those functions and at the same time be free of it? (R: Exactly, that's it.)

SR: Robert would you like to explain a little bit more, what you were saying to Jay, "That is true on one level but there are so many levels." Would you be willing to explain some of them? Some of these different levels that maybe get some kind of an idea, a better idea?

R: Well, there is the witnessing level. When you become the witness, to everything is happening. There is a level where you just watch your breath or pay attention to your breath. There is a level when you practice self-inquiry and inquire, "To whom do these things come." There is a level when you practice the I-am meditation. (SR: We are actually at a different perceptual level at each of these states?) Yes. (SR: You're perceiving things at each of those that you wouldn't perceive at one or the other?) Yes, but what I'm saying tonight is to drop everything. Just drop it and become free.

SD: Is that the same as surrender or is that even beyond surrender?

R: It's beyond surrender. Because when you drop it that is instantaneous. Drop it is right in the now, in the present second. There is no one to surrender, there is no past, there is no present and no one to do anything. (laughter) You just drop it and you're finished.

SI: Robert is that the same as letting go of your attachments to see what is?

R: Well of course. Because when you drop it you drop everything. You drop your attachments, you drop everything that you can ever imagine. You let go of everything. But it's beyond letting go, it's beyond the attachments. You don't even think of those things.

SH: How is it beyond letting go? (R: Because there has to be somebody to let go.)

SD: What? Doesn't there have to be someone to drop it? (students laugh)

R: No, there is no one left to drop it. You just drop it. (SD: Well who are you talking to when you say drop it.) I'm not talking to anyone. (laughter)

SJ: But the next stage is drop dropping it...(students laugh) ...but that's next week.

SG: What you're saying Robert there are all these other forms short of dropping it. There is always a you to do it and when it comes to dropping, you're speaking like consciousness to consciousness. (R: Yes.)

SH: What it really does it eliminates the illusory notion of the separate you totally at one moment. (R: Correct, it's all done in a split second, in the now.)

SI: So it kinds of gets rid of the idea that you think that it's you?

R: It doesn't really get rid of the idea. If the idea was there you wouldn't be able to drop it. Forget about ideas, forget about everything just drop it. Forget about the you or the I. Drop it!

SH: That is the ultimate in simplicity?

R: Of course, I can't make it any simpler than that. You all want me to explain all kinds of things to you. If I explain the things to you in a technical way that you like I'll pull you deeper into maya. (laughter) That's why I ask you so often, "Why do I sit here like this? Talking to a bunch of Albanian peasants," (students laugh) I guess dropping it is too easy for you. You like to make things complicated.

SH: Or it's too direct, it's too straight, it's too naked.

SR: It's like hitting a home run. You have to learn to hit a single first, a double, a triple. It's hard to hit the ball out of the ball park right away.

R: Who has to hit a home run. Who has to get a single or a double or a triple. There is nobody left to do that. Don't you feel good now when you drop it?

(short silence)

R: To help you with this, as you're sitting here listening to me, as you sit in the silence and thoughts come to you keep saying drop it to yourself. Whenever any thoughts come to you say, "Drop it!" Whether the thoughts are good or bad, whatever they may be, whatever you feel, say, "Drop it!"

SD: And that is on a higher level than inquiry, self-inquiry?

R: Yes, inquiry is a method. It is a teaching. (SD: Isn't telling yourself to drop it a method?) No because there is nothing behind it and there is nothing before it. There is nothing to say. You are not saying, "Who am I?" or "What is this?" (SD: Well you're saying, "Drop it," that's...) What does saying, "Drop it," mean?

SH: It's like saying, "Off with their head." (students laugh) "Off with your head!" (R: True, it's direct.) The red queen. (R: Red queen, yes.)

SL: It's not similar to self-inquiry. Self-inquiry is to negate things right? Then you say, "Drop it," it's similar?

R: In "drop it" there is no analyzation. (SL: Yeah.) It's just a blunt statement. Drop it! (SL: So that's what is trying to clear our minds.) You're not really to clear our mind there is no mind to clear. (laughter) You're just saying, "Drop it!" without thinking of what you're doing. If you start thinking what it means, it'll become very complicated again. (SL: Is that similar to the "I-am" or "I - I?") In a way but not really, when you say I-am it's the name of God then it gets back into God, mythology and the rest of it. When you say, "Drop it!" it is simple language, two words and means everything. It is the entire teaching, the entire Advaita Vedanta.

SH: It's a command to wake up?

R: Yes, sure. (SH: A direct command to wake up.) Exactly. So tomorrow when you find yourself complicated at work or thinking about some problem, remind yourself and say, "Drop it!" And forget about the whole thing.

SK: If you happen to be asking, "Who am I?" and then wait in silence is that the entire teaching also.

R: That's a sadhana. (SK: Silence?) The spiritual discipline is, "Who am I?" The silence, is "drop it." If you can stay in the silence? If you can remain in the silence there is no need to say, "Drop it!" (SK: No I said that you say, "Who am I?" and remain in the silence. Is that not the entire teaching, the silence?) The silence is the entire teaching, yes. (SK: We could come from starting off with self-inquiry could it not?) Oh of course, yes. That is what I mentioned before. We've been here for a while we've been practicing self-inquiry, we've been practicing witnessing, we've been doing sadhana, now we're ready to drop it! (students laugh)

SF: All those other things are in the mind? (R: Yes.) Even drop it, you can use it as a mantra. (R: Yes.) (SH: It shoves your "I" away, permanently.)

SR: I just had a thought that we all stay with Robert for ourselves and then see what happens to us, and people start dancing, so forth and so on. (laughter) (R: Could be?) Yeah that is a good idea, isn't it? (R: Sure, there is no telling what will happen.) Gives you real freedom huh? (R: Of course.)

Do we have announcements?

SM: Yes Robert. We have some transcripts to hand out.

R: That's it?

We've got some delicious prashad...

THE EGO KEEPS YOU IN BONDAGE

8th March, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. (Good afternoon Robert.) It is wonderful to be with you again. Is it really wonderful to be with you again? Sometimes I wonder. (students laugh) But here I am. Like it or not. On this auspicious occasion. Is this an auspicious occasion? Sure it is. Why not?

SH: Why?

R: Because. (SH: We can go around in circles here, can we? Go on with your talk.) (laughter) Just for that I'm going to keep quiet. (SH: That's great! That's better! Finally silence at last.) Throw him out. (laughter) For the new people here today, God help you. (laughter)

Always try to remember that I am not a guru. I am not a teacher. I am not a yogi. I am a nothing. I am not looking for name or fame. I do not want to go on TV or write books or go on the radio. There is nobody left to want to do these things. There is absolutely nothing I want. And because I do not desire anything from you, I can say what I want. I can insult you. I can do anything because I don't want anything from you. But all is well.

It is the ego that keeps you in bondage. It is the ego that makes you believe you are what you are. It is the ego that causes all the problems to come into your life. The ego is your worst enemy. Therefore you have to do everything in life that you can do to annihilate the ego. The ego must be annihilated, totally removed, totally destroyed.

The ego is like the uninvited guest that comes to the wedding party. Perhaps you have heard this story before. There is a wedding reception going on in a beautiful home. Everybody is totally blissful and happy and cheerful. There is singing, there is dancing, there is merriment, there is music. An uninvited guest comes into the party and tells everybody that he is a friend of the bridegrooms father. And he starts taking control of the wedding reception. He tells the waiters where to put the food. He tells the musicians what songs to play. He wants to sit everybody in certain places. He gets drunk, he drinks, he eats. The brides father becomes suspicious and inquires to the bridegrooms father and inquires and says, "Who is this person? How did he get here? Where did he come from? What's his status? Who invited him?" The uninvited one heard this going on and he started to slowly move away, until he was out the door and gone forever.

The wedding reception is the Self, absolute reality. The uninvited guest is the ego. That comes along and tells you, "You are this and you are that and you need this and you are that and you need that." The ego that tells you all of these things, what to do, how to live.

When you sleep at night the ego resides in the heart centre in the Self where it can give you no trouble. But as soon as you wake up in the morning the ego jumps from the heart to the brain and you become cognizant of the body. You say, "I am the body," or "I am a man, I am a woman, I am sick, I am happy, I am hungry, I have to go to work," not realizing that the I am that you're talking about is pure awareness, absolute reality. But believing the I am is individualized.

You say, "I am this. I am that. I am an Albanian looking for my cow." You believe all the things that you are what you really are not. This is the ego. If the ego were not present you would be a delightful being. You would be so happy, so blissful, always. You would not look for outside stimuli. You would not need anything in this world to make you happy, for happiness would be your nature.

It is the ego that tries to tell you are happy only when something good happens to you from outside, if you acquire a new home, a lot of money in the bank, or if you acquire possessions, cars, that will make you very happy. And it is true you are happy for a while. But then this changes. You get used to this situation, you therefore need new things. You need new people in your life. You need new playmates, new toys.

Therefore since the beginning of time there have been those beings in this world who have understood this. There was nothing special about these beings. It is we who have not had realization that gives them names like Sages and Saints, teachers of wisdom. Yet these Sages, these Saints so-called are simple people. Who have only realized the truth. The truth that the ego is not you. The body is not yours. The mind is not yours. Your true nature is absolute reality, sat-chit-ananda, nirvana. This is what you really are. Yet you appear to be a body functioning in this world. Like everyone else. This only happens because you believe you are a body.

When you wake up in the morning and you say, "I am the body," then there are also other bodies. For when there is one body there are millions of bodies. When the idea of being the body disappears then there is only one, that one is Brahman, the pure awareness and that one is the chalkboard where all the images of this world are put on the chalkboard. Erased and more images put on the chalkboard. Erased and more images are put on the chalkboard. The images come and go the chalkboard stays.

The chalkboard is the Self, the absolute reality. The images are all the people. The planets the trees. The ego. The ego creates all the images. And you believe they're real. So you react to them. You try to fight them, you try to change them, you do all kinds of things in this world. And you waste your energy by trying to change conditions. The conditions as most of you know are actually part of the individual self. Not the real Self, the individual self. Which is nothing but an I-thought. You no longer change conditions, you change yourself by inquiring where the I-thought comes from. Trying to understand the I-thought when you say, "I, I, I, I," is the whole problem. "I am this and I am that," that's your problem, not the conditions of this world. You have absolutely nothing to do with this world. What we call God knows how to take care of this world without our help.

Therefore you do not need to try to bring peace to this world. Try to solve the riddle of wars and man's inhumanity to man. What you do is solve the riddle of yourself. You try to understand who you are. What you're doing here? Where you came from? What is your objective? Who are you?

You're not who you think you are. For someone gave you a name when you were born and they told you were a girl or a boy. It's all words but who are you really. Where did you come from? They could have called you a dog. (Some people still call you a dog, I guess.) They could have called you a cat, a leaf, a saucer and you would have answered to that. But you were born, they gave you a name and called you a girl or a boy. It is we who put labels on everything. It is we who label the entire universe. It is we who say things are good and things are bad and things are this way and things are that way. We do all of this. Is it any wonder that we suffer? Nothing is real. Nothing is the way that it appears.

The beginning of wisdom is when you plead divine ignorance. When you begin to see that you do not understand anything in this world. You have no idea what anything is. They're just born into this world and they give it names and you have accepted this.

The time comes in certain peoples lives when they do not wish to accept this any longer. They want to find out the truth. Who am I really? Who am I? I cannot possibly be this body because it changes, changes constantly. Look at yourself you are not the same person you were ten years ago or twenty years ago. You're not even permanent. You were born to die. There is no question about this. As soon as you're born you begin dying. This is true of everything. Animals, vegetables, minerals, with the appearance of anything on this earth it goes towards death, towards disappearance.

So what is this truth? There really is no truth. For when you speak of a truth you're speaking of something that somebody told you. Something you read in a book. But if you had a direct experience of the truth. Have you understood for yourself what you really are? Or have you just accepted what the world has told you?

You have to grow up sometime. And growing up means giving up attachment to person, place or thing. I'm not saying giving up friendship, I'm saying giving up attachment. Letting go of all the things that you have memorized. All of the things that you have learnt in school. All of the things you have learnt in church. To be totally free everything has to go. You cannot hold onto one thing.

A good example of this is when Ramana Maharshi arrived in Tiruvannamalai. When he was 17 years old. He threw away the last bit of money he owned, took off all of his clothes and started a new life. Of course I wouldn't suggest that you walk down the street and drop all your clothes and say, "I've come to know God." They'll put you in the funny farm. Yet you do these things mentally. Everything is done mentally. You mentally give up attachments. You mentally give up possessions. You mentally give up good and bad. And you allow whatever happens to happen.

This is a point that most of us are a little confused. When I say, "You allow whatever is to happen, will happen," what I'm talking about is simply this. There is something that takes care of this entire universe in the right way without any help from you. You therefore do not have to take care of your body. What appears as your body will take care of itself. I know this sounds strange to some of you because you still believe that unless you take care of yourself, you will never be able to take care of yourself unless you do it yourself. But this is not the ultimate truth.

The ultimate truth is, the same power that knows how to grow oranges on an orange tree, knows how to grow wheat, knows how to grow mangoes and roses and flowers and everything else, knows how to take care of what you call your body, without any help from you. You simply interfere for you are the ego it appears. And it's the ego who tells yourself how you're supposed to live and what you're supposed to do, whom you're supposed to be with, so forth and so on.

If you will only surrender yourself. If you would only surrender your body, surrender your fears, surrender your nose, surrender everything then the current which knows the way will become activated and you will find that you're doing beautiful things on this earth. You will find that you're well taken care of.

It also sounds sort of strange when I tell you if you have a disease, if you have physical problems, if you have problems of lack or limitation. Do not attempt to correct these things. Whatever problem you may think you have do not attempt to correct these things at all. Become the witness to the whole play of consciousness. Merely watch, observe, look intelligently at everything that appears. Whether it's in your body or in the world or in the universe or wherever.

When you surrender like this something will give way and lead you where you're supposed to be at this present time of your incarnation going through the experiences that you came here to go through. As you begin to trust and have faith in the powers that be you find that you're becoming happier and happier and happier. Fears begin to leave you, anxiety, tension begin to disappear. For you no longer have anything in this world to rely on. Yet you are functioning, things are happening and you're at peace.

Notice how the thoughts come to you when I stop talking. You begin to think. All of these years you have believed in your thoughts. Whenever there is silence, whenever there is quietness thoughts begin to do their work. Watch.

(short pause)

You see what I mean. The thoughts are telling you things. What are these thoughts? They're experiences of the past. That is all the thoughts are. And worries of the future. The thoughts are not your friend. You must grab them when you begin and choke them to death. You can do this by inquiring, "To whom do these thoughts come? The thoughts come to me. I think these thoughts. Well, if I think these thoughts what is the source of the I? Who am I?" And keep still or you become the witness and observe all your thoughts going on in your mind.

Actually when I say your mind it's a misnomer because the thoughts are your mind. There are no thoughts and the mind, there are only thoughts as the mind.

Most people are totally controlled by their thoughts. Watch the way you react and see if I'm not right. Every-time you react to person place or thing you're doing so because your thoughts are telling you something, are they not? Your thoughts are telling you I've been insulted. I have been hurt. Something has been taken away from me. Something is not right. Something is doing this and something is doing that. It is your thoughts that tell you this.

If you weren't able to think, again you would be totally happy. You would be blissful. For the nature, the substratum of everything is total happiness, total bliss.

It is your thoughts that cause you confusion and problems. Make you miserable, make you want to change things. You should be able to stay in one place forever. Without any desire to go any place or do anything.

You may say, "That's not fun, that's boring." For whom is it boring? For your thoughts. It is your thoughts that tell you, you'll be bored unless you go here, unless you do this unless you do that. Your thoughts tell you this. But I can perfectly assure you that if you didn't have any thoughts you would be the entire universe. Therefore there would be no place to go. You would become all-pervading, omnipresent. The whole universe would be in you and you would be in the entire universe.

Consequently there's nothing you have to do. There is no place you have to go. For the happiness that most people are trying to achieve by running all over the place you already are, you already have, it's you. You're at peace with yourself and peace with the world.

Your job is to stop thinking. To remove the thoughts. The thoughts are your Master now. That make you feel sad or happy, good or bad. Why do you feel this way? For your thoughts since you were a little kid have been impressed by the world conditions, by your parents, by your school, by your church and they have convinced you and programmed you to believe this is good, this is bad, this is right, this is wrong. Only when you have this are you successful. If you don't have certain things you are a failure. It is the thoughts that tell you these things. Again if there are no thoughts there is no one left to tell you anything. This is called liberation, moksha, freedom.

You begin where you are now. You begin with yourself. You question yourself. You inquire, "Who am I?" You sit in the silence. If thoughts come you inquire, "To whom do they come? You become still." You try not to get involved with people who talk too much. You live in the moment, in the present. You forget about yesterday, last week, last year, dead wood! Doesn't exist. You do not worry or think about tomorrow. For what you are today will become your tomorrow. You make your life simple. By not getting involved with too many things and you watch, you observe, you look but you do not react. As you keep this up one day everything will just explode into light. And you will find peace, joy, total bliss and total happiness.

Unfortunately most people have to be kicked around by life a good deal before they decide that life is not for them. Unfortunately most of us have to go through many experiences before we're willing to try something else.

Most of you came in here today to listen to a talk, to listen to a lecture and then when I'm finished and you go home you continue in your lifestyle that you've always had. It is this lifestyle that has to be surrendered. It is what you believe you are that has to be surrendered. The idea that you are young or you are old, that you are poor, that you are rich, that you are healthy, that you are sick all of these things have to go.

You try your best to keep from thinking. You follow your breath. You become cognizant of yourself. You become mindful of all of your experiences of everything that goes on in your life. You're doing something. You're not just allowing the vicissitudes of life to hit you square in the face and cause you to react any longer. What does it matter what's going on? Leave it alone do not fight it, for this too shall pass.

It is that time again to play stump the guru. We have questions, and I have to get prepared for this let me take my jacket off.

Q: (Robert reads) How is it that we have to be attune with you from 6am to 9am and 12 to 2am? What if we are at work between 6 and 9 and normally sleeping between 12 and 2?

A: (Robert answers) That's your tough luck. (students laugh)

SB: Then we're doomed. (SF: Is it 12 and 2?)

R: It's 12 and 3am. (Robert continues his answer to student) It means you'll come back twenty thousand more incarnations... (laughter) (SH: Scare the hell out of him.) ...until you're ready to sit still. And stop sleeping so much. (laughter)

SD: What is the origin of those times Robert?

R: There is no origin. Just something I'm doing. (laughter) We always want origins. It's better to want oranges. (laughter) So it's advantageous to sit in the morning between 6 and 9 and the wee hours of the morning between 12 and 3. For some strange reason I sit at those times. I don't do anything I just sit. Just like I'm sitting here. Therefore if you wish to sit at that time, you can say it's like a radio. You tune into the proper channel and you get a clear sound. So people tell me that when they sit with me like this clarity comes to them. Then they're able to understand things. So if you wish to do this be my guest. If you don't a thousand curses on you. (students laugh)

SM: Robert that was the only question.

R: That is the only question, good. I'm sure we have more questions that you'd like to ask. Things you'd like to say. Songs you'd like to sing. Speeches you'd like to make. Feel free to do so. (SE: All at once?) Sure. (Robert has a drink) Is this prune juice? Tastes like prune juice. (pause) So what's cookin'.

SH: The ego. (R: Boil it!)

SD: I have a question Robert, if one were unable for whatever reason to sit with you at those times that should not preclude their sitting in meditation at other times should it? (R: No.) I mean they still have the opportunity to sit in the silence other hours?

R: That is up to them, of course. You can do whatever you like with your body. You can sit, you can lie down. You can run around the block. You can do whatever you like. (SD: But I'm referring more to - isn't there a value to sitting in meditation or in silence regardless of the time.) Of course. There is always value when you sit by yourself and you leave the world alone.

SG: Robert you were saying the other night about dropping it. Things started to speed up, all through what we're doing and what I noticed myself is this feeling things are getting away from me because, since I'm getting involved in things, and getting involved in more movement the mind starts moving faster. At those particular times I suppose this demands the command, "Drop it!" What happens if it seems futile at that particular time? That's when the most is at stake.

R: Umm, just make the statement "drop it!" and forget about everything. Do not think what you are thinking. Do not allow yourself to have those thoughts. When the thoughts come, when you feel futile say, "Drop it!" If you make the statement as an exclamation, just say, "Drop it!" Something will happen to you, you will feel a peace, you will feel radiance. You will feel free.

But don't do like a mimsy-wimsy and say, "Drop it." (laughter) Say, "Drop It!" That means everything can go to hell. The whole world, the whole universe, everything. All my problems. All my fears. You have dropped it, it's finished, it's gone. It's like what I did one Thursday night I said, "Wake up!" Same thing. You are dropping all your theories, all of your knowledge, everything. You drop it and let it go. But do not analyze it. Do not think about it. Do not put it in certain category.

SG: Well when you see nothing happening and totally regard it as a dream but what I'm wondering is when you do that and you're regarding it as a dream fails, you're regarding it as unreality. But it is my understanding that there really can be no opposite to reality. There is no such thing as unreality. There is simply reality. Reality and since it encompasses everything can't have an opposite because that would imply that there is two. (R: So what is the question?) How are we able to regard, you know — it seems like it's nice to regard this as a dream, yet at the same time it's inclined if it's all unreal. If at the same time that seems to create a duality, regarding something as real and something else as unreal.

R: It is because you want to feel that something is real. There is no reality and there is no unreality. They're both impostors. Reality when I use that term is totally ineffable. It is beyond concepts. When you use the term reality you are thinking of certain truths. Whereas those things do not really exist they're only words.

So unreality has to go, reality has to go. Drop both of them. When you drop both of them you feel free. For there is nothing that has to become real. Noone has to become real. Noone has to become. There is noone. Doesn't that make you feel good? (SG: It simplifies it.) There is noone to become real. You're not trying to trade an unreality for a reality.

You're not looking to make a trade. You're looking to empty your mind of both feelings of reality and feelings of unreality. You want to become totally empty. When you're empty you become nothing, when you are nothing you become everything.

I took off my jacket, Glen you put on yours?

SK: Keeping the balance. (laughter)

SY: Robert when we do sit in the morning with you from 6 to 9 do we just clear our thoughts? What would be the best?

R: You do absolutely nothing. (SY: We don't try to think anything.) No. Just sit. (SY: Be still.) Just sit and watch. (SY: Observe?) Observe. But don't voluntarily observe. Let the observation come by itself. Everything will happen of its own accord.

(silence)

Now let us practice some self-inquiry together. What you do is make yourself real comfortable. Close your eyes. As the thoughts come inquire, "To whom do they come?" Then you say, "Well they come to me. I feel the thoughts." Then you further inquire, "Who is this I? Who is this I that feels the thoughts? Where does it come from? From where does it arise? What is its source?" Just like the uninvited guest at the wedding.

As you keep inquiring about the I where it comes from it will gradually slip back into the heart centre into the Self and you will become totally free. You keep still. As thoughts come into your mind again you repeat the same thing all over. "To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking these thoughts? Why I am. I am thinking these thoughts. What is this I? How did it originate? What is its source?" And you keep silent.

When more thoughts come you do the same thing. Let's practice this for a while.

(long silence in self-inquiry practice)

R: Do we have announcements?

SM: Yes Robert. I have a few more transcripts to hand out...

THE TRUE SILENCE

Robert: Good evening. It's good to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart.

Never take life seriously. There is nothing in this world that should be taken seriously. I know you've been told that you have to be serious if you want to get anywhere. But where do you want to get? (laughter) There is no place to go. There is really nothing to get. You are already perfect, bright and shining, pure. All you have to do is to awaken to your real nature. Then you will realize yourself, completely, totally that there is nowhere to go and nothing to get.

Instead of wasting your time taking life seriously do your utmost to awaken, to wake up! Do not pay any attention to your aches, to your pains, to your mental anguish, to the world situation these things come and go.

Since the beginning of time we have had all kinds of people on this planet going through all kinds of experiences. Man's inhumanity to man has always been here. Wars, earthquakes, cataclysms, they have always been with us since the beginning of time. And it's funny to me that people are trying to straighten things out. You can't straighten anything out. You may appear to straighten something out for a while. But it will return again just the way it was. This is why I always tell you, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should."

You may not be able to see this right now. Some of you may believe that you've got financial problems. You've got mental anguish about something. You have physical problems. The point is you must turn away from these things. Turn completely away and focus on the I-am. The real Self, the absolute reality and you will laugh everyday. You will be happier than any happiness this world can give you.

Most of you right now are searching for the ultimate happiness. You think when you get married you'll be happy, when you get divorced you'll be happy, when you get a degree in school you'll be happy, when you get a great job you'll be happy. Why doesn't it work that way? This is not always the case.

You know people or yourself who have strived for a certain position in life. Who work very hard to attain a certain position in life to be in a certain place or where they can be successful, rich, famous whatever. Then when you get there it's not what you expected and you're disappointed. Or some calamity may take place, something may happen to the job or to the family. Nothing in this world is certain. Therefore do not take this world seriously. Be the witness to your condition, to the world condition and then discover who the witness is.

Life is interesting. I was taking a walk in the park this morning it was such a beautiful day. I sat down on a bench and closed my eyes. Then I felt the presence of someone else who sat down near me. And I felt that this person was going to tell me all his troubles, and sure enough he did. (students laugh)

He started talking to me out of the blue, telling me about his rheumatoid arthritis. That his bones are getting real stiff. His fingers are getting knolled. He is in real bad shape. I never looked at him, I kept my eyes closed and I asked him, "What are you doing about this?" So he said, "Years ago I went to the doctors and he gave me all kinds of drugs and it made things worse. But what I'm really upset about is that I'm a Christian scientist and I'm not supposed to get sick. I know Christian science backwards and frontwards. I know all the rules and regulations. Why did this happen to me?" I inquired, "What have you been practicing as far as Christian science is concerned to help you with the problem?" So he remarked, "I've been knowing the truth. That disease does not exist and God is all there is. God is the first principle, the first cause and disease cannot possibly exist."

So I waited a moment or two and then I asked him, "If you say disease does not exist how come you're announcing it? How can you say disease does not exist and then all of a sudden believe that you're healed? When just by voicing disease does not exist means that you believe in disease. Otherwise how can you utter the word? Where would disease come from? Where would the word come from? There is something in your subconscious that knows, disease. For you would not proclaim that disease would not exist. Do you hear what I'm trying to say? The word disease in itself can only be known by a person who feels disease. If you didn't know about disease there would be no such word. There would be no word like health or disease. Disease is the opposite of health. If you believe you're healthy then you also believe in disease. Do you understand what I'm saying?"

And he said, "A little but not too much." I explained it again, "You keep affirming that disease does not exist. How can you affirm that? Only if you realize that disease is an entity. It's a power. It's real. Would you be able to say it doesn't exist? There has to be somebody to experience it. So they can say it doesn't exist. If you were healthy all the time you would never be speaking about health or disease. But because you've got rheumatoid arthritis you're trying to heal yourself by saying disease does not exist. What you're really doing is causing the condition to get worse." And then I asked him, "What do you mean that God is all in all? What is God?" He answered, "Why God is a supreme power, the creation of heaven and earth. This is God."

So I further explained, "Now we're dealing with three entities. We're dealing with disease that does not exist. We're dealing with your body that seems to have a disease and we're dealing with God who is all in all. We really have a battle on our hands, if we're dealing with all of these things. When you go to sleep and you are in deep sleep do you feel rheumatoid arthritis anywhere?" He exclaimed, "No I don't!"

"When you dream do you feel your disease?" He said, "No I don't I feel the dream." "It is only when you're awake, so-to-speak, that you feel this don't you?" And he said, "Yes." So I further continued and I said, Why don't you begin with yourself? Forget about God. Forget about the disease. Those are unknowable right now.

Begin with yourself. Ask yourself the question, "Who has the disease when I awake? I do not seem to have them in deep sleep or when I dream. It is only when I'm awake that I seem to have these symptoms." So I asked him, "Who has it?" He said, "I do." And I explained, "That is just the point. You don't have it, 'I' does. What you call 'I' has the problem. Do you not exclaim this to yourself when you say, 'I have this disease?'" So he asked me, "Doesn't 'I' mean the body?"

And I said, "Not necessarily. The body in itself is a lump of flesh and bones and blood. How can it have a disease? When the body is sleeping, when the body is dreaming, when the body is dead it does not have any disease it has nothing. It is only when you think of 'I,' 'I' as the personal self. It is 'I' who has this problem, not you but 'I.' Not you but 'I.' Where does the I come from? You have to inquire within yourself." I explained. "It begins and ends with you. You have to ask yourself. Where does the I which seems to have this problem come from? What is its source?" He said, "I don't know?"

I answered "You're not supposed to know. Don't worry about knowing or not knowing. Forget about who knows, who doesn't know. Simply ask the question to yourself, "Where does the 'I' who appears to have a disease come from? And keep still." He said, "Well if I keep still I won't have the answer." I said, "That is just the point. Every answer is wrong. As long as you come up with an answer, it's not the right answer. For you are dealing with infinity. You're dealing with the absolute reality. That knows nothing about disease or the 'I' or the body or the mind." I kept still.

Then I felt a lightness and I opened one eye and he was gone. Probably couldn't take the heat. (laughter)

Now let's talk about you. Think of all the so-called problems you think you have. It makes no difference what they are. You identify with them. You always want to correct them. Set things right. You always want to do something to alleviate the suffering, the pain. People have tried this since the beginning of time. Noone has ever succeeded.

It's hard to tell you to leave the world alone. And leave your body alone. And leave your affairs alone. This sounds sort of selfish. For in your way of thinking you say, "If I leave these things alone who will do them? How will they get done?" You always believe that the I, the I-thought, the personal self has to do something. Has to react to situations, become angry, become frustrated, feel out of place, out of sorts yet this is not the truth.

You did not have to come to this earth to be born in a body. Yet here you sit. There is something that knows how to do everything for you. There is something that knows how to take care of you. How to give you eternal happiness and peace and love. This can only happen when you get yourself out of the way. You get yourself out of the way by not worrying, by not fretting, by not being afraid, by not comparing, by leaving everything alone. Leaving everything alone. Not by arguing or debating or trying to prove a point but by leaving everything alone.

You may ask, "If I see a person in need shouldn't I help him?" Yes you should. Something will make you help them if that is what you're meant to do. You will know what to do spontaneously. You will do the right things. But if you think about it then you will not necessarily do the right thing. Because when you think it is your ego that thinks. Your ego is not your friend. Your ego wants to keep you human. Keep you grounded. Keep you in duality. Keep you striving and struggling. When you begin to ignore your ego it will go away.

It is interesting that most psychologists, psychiatrists will ask, "How can you survive without an ego?" They ask this because they never had an experience of a non-ego. They only share with you what they've learned in books in school. They share with you what people have told them. There is hardly a psychiatrist or a psychologist or anybody else who have had an experience of a non-ego. So they try to shape your life so you will fit in society. Who wants to fit into society? You want to awaken to reality, not fit into society.

You have been given an opportunity in this life by having a so-called body with which to work in order to awaken from the mortal dream. Yet you use this opportunity for other purposes. You use it to attain name and fame as if that is going to do anything for you in the long run. You use it to develop powers, you're wasting your effort. Karmically you have been given this body to transcend, to transmute. To let go. To surrender. Yet you spend all of your time doing the opposite.

You waste your time by reacting to everything that comes your way. I tell you things again and again but you keep doing it again and again. Think of the last time when you reacted to person place and thing. Try to understand what is happening if you're not awakened. If you believe you're not awakened, you're not free, you're not liberated when you react to person, place or thing, you come under the law of karma which appears to exist.

I know there are many people in Advaita Vedanta who tell me, "Well you know Robert karma does not exist. Only the Self exists. Only effortless pure awareness exists. So why are you telling us about karma?" In truth you have to look at yourself and ask yourself, "Have I experienced pure awareness? Have I experienced absolute reality? I can't afford to put on an act. It will only go against me." You have to speak to yourself this way.

Therefore I know that if I'm still reacting with my body. I still believe that I am the doer, do not fool yourself. Be truthful with yourself. Therefore if I'm still reacting. If I still believe that I am the body then there are other bodies in this world that respond to me. And there is karma, there is reincarnation. All these things exist for me only because I believe I am a body. I therefore have to be careful what I've got to do with myself.

So whenever you react to a condition you're setting the so-called law of karma which doesn't really exist, you're setting yourself up. It's as if you're stepping on a rake and the handle hits you in the face. That is immediate karma. Therefore if you tell me that karma does not exist I tell you, "Step on the rake," and if the handle hits you in the head that is karma. That is called boomerang karma. (laughter) It came back to you immediately. Yet there are all kinds of karma. That is why people appear to get away with things. That is why we cannot understand why a good person must die early and a so-called evil person seems to live and prosper sometimes. We do not see the whole picture. We see a partial picture. For our life is here partially. We're here today and we're gone tomorrow. It is therefore impossible to know the whole picture.

So say for instance you find yourself mangled by a car that hits you and you've been such a good person. You've given to the poor, you've helped the homeless. And now that this car has hit you, you're all mangled and you can't use your arms or legs any longer. You're blind in one eye. You're a total wreck. If you were able to see the whole picture you would see that in a previous existence you belonged to a savage tribe and it was your duty to torture prisoners when they were captured. And now karma is paying you back. That is all karma is, a pay back.

So while we're on the path to liberation we have to be very careful what we do with our lives. Every little thing is karmic. It is only when you awaken, when you are liberated that none of this exists. This is why I tell you so often, "Do not fool yourself." Look at how many times a day you become angry. You feel cheated, you feel exploited. You feel something is wrong someplace. You feel depressed. You go and do something to cause this condition to stop and whatever you do you're accruing karma.

There is only one way to overcome this. And that is to forget about the world, forget about your body, forget about situations and go deep within yourself inquiring, "To whom does this come? Who is experiencing karma?" Do not feel sorry for yourself if you're ill or something not going right in your life. Do not compare yourself with others. Remember you're only seeing a partial picture. You're not seeing the whole picture at all.

It's like the example I give when you look through a keyhole. You see somebody choking somebody else through the keyhole and you're saying, "Why is he doing this to this person? He's a no good murderer." But then you open the door and you're able to see the past and the future. You see in a past life the person getting choked used to work for the state on the gallows and used to hang people, some innocent people. And you go back to the middle picture. Now somebody's choking him in this life. And you go back to a future picture now they're both laughing. Nobody was choked and nobody choked. This is what life is all about. It's a cosmic joke.

Karma seems to be real and you're affected with it all day long. Whatever you do, wherever you go you're always affected by karma. It is karma that moves your body. It is karma that makes you do things. It is karma that causes situations to come into your life. Do not try to change a condition. Do not intend to change the situation. For you may appear to change it but this is only an appearance. It will come back again in full force.

There is only one way to get rid of it and that is to transcend it by forgiveness, mercy and love. And as you practice forgiveness, mercy and love you inquire, "To whom all this is coming to? Who is experiencing these things? Who is going through all these things?" And again you will discover the I-thought, "I am. I am going through all of these things. I appear to be going through karma. I appear to be suffering. I appear to want to get even with someone." You're beginning to realize it's not you. It is the I. Which is only a thought. Just knowing this alone makes you feel good. For you begin to see that you are free. You are bright and shining. You are sat-chit-ananda, nirvana, ultimate oneness. It is the I that appears to have the problems. You separate yourself from the I, by self-inquiry.

And then you can go further by inquiring, "Where did the I come from?" You never answer that question. By inquiring that is sufficient. And you will find that you're in the silence, the void. Just by going this far you will feel better than you've felt in years. You will feel such joy and such peace. This has nothing to do with enlightenment. But you're going to feel joy and peace. More so than you ever felt before. Just by inquiring, "Where does the I come from?"

The reason that you feel such joy and peace is because you begin to realize that you are not the I. You have absolutely nothing to do with the problems of the I. It is the I that feels anger. It is the I that feels pain. It is the I that feels rejection. But you ask yourself, "What have I got to do with I? I have absolutely nothing to do with the I." Therefore again you ask, "Then where did the I come from? Who gave it birth? What is its source?" And you keep quiet.

A feeling of total love will overpower you. For you're learning to sit in the silence. That's the most important point. You want to get to the place where thoughts do not bother you, where things do not annoy you. Where there are no problems and there are no solutions. Where there is no good and there's no bad. You want to get beyond duality and rest in the silence.

Many of you are getting a glimpse of what I'm talking about right now, as you rest in the silence. You're not thinking about it, you're not trying to analyze it, you're not trying to make it happen, you're just resting in the silence. Perfectly still.

All of a sudden thoughts come up again. You start over again. You begin again. You inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking these thoughts? I am? If I is thinking these thoughts then it has absolutely nothing to do with me. It appears to me as if everything is attached to the I. All of the emotions, the fears, the frustrations, it's all attached to the I." Again you say, "Where did the I come from? What is the source of I? Who gave it birth?" You never attempt to answer. You sit in the silence.

Some of you are beginning to feel how good it is to sit in the silence right now. The mind is completely empty. The fears are gone. There is nothing left to tell you anything. You are quiet, still.

Thoughts pop up again. It makes no difference if they're good thoughts, bad thoughts or in-between. The whole idea is to empty the mind of all thoughts. You inquire again, "Who is thinking these thoughts? I am? Who am I? What is the source of I? Who gave it birth? Where does this I come from that is giving me all this trouble and keeps thinking and thinking? And bringing up to me all these morbid thoughts, all sorts of happy thoughts, all sorts of thoughts. Where did this I come from? What is its source?" And again you enter the silence. Where everything is totally still. Where there is no movement. The vasanas have disappeared. There is just perfect stillness.

You're beginning to discover something very interesting. You're beginning to discover that you're able to sit in the silence for longer and longer periods without thought. It's taking longer and longer before a thought comes to you. Yet you are not falling asleep. You're feeling a peace that you've never felt before. You're beginning to feel an all encompassing love. You begin to experience that the whole universe is an emanation of your own mind. And what you have done is you have pulled the entire universe into your heart, everything! All of the galaxies, the milky ways, the planets, the earth with all of its manifestations, everything has vanished. That's total silence.

When you're sitting in the silence and the world is still available to you that is not silence. That's a false silence. The true silence is when the whole world, the whole universe, people, places and things have all disappeared. You have pulled them back into the heart centre. That is the true silence. For there is no longer anything to think about. Everything is gone. There is just the void. The beautiful precious void. And you're beginning to sit in that void, in that silence for longer and longer periods.

When you come out of it the world appears to you again but it's different. It begins to be different for you. You no longer look at the world in the same way. You no longer see the universe in the same way. You begin to feel everything as an image. You see images on the screen of life. The images keep changing, changing, changing but the screen is always the same. And something begins to tell you that you are that screen. You have always been the screen. Unchanging, absolute pure reality. But you are not free yet. This comes and it goes.

Little by little the thoughts come back again. You begin to feel anger again but less than you did before. You begin to have less interest in your body. The things about your body that used to bother you stop bothering you, stop annoying you. People no longer make you angry or frustrated. This happens little by little. And you can't wait to practice again.

When you are by yourself and you're not disturbed you sit down in your favorite chair and you begin to inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? Why they come to me. I still feel thoughts. Maybe less than I did before but I still feel things," you further inquire, "who is the I that feels these things? Where did the I come from? Who gave birth to this feeling I? What is its source?" And now you begin to feel that the I is only a thought. It is one of the thoughts that you've been thinking about all these years called the I-thought. Yet everything is attached to it and you keep seeing it and thinking about it. But now you're inquiring, "To whom does it come? Who's feeling it? What is its source?" And you go back into the silence.

Now every time you get into the silence you feel better and better. You feel lighter and lighter. The world again, the universe they're getting sucked into your heart. The whole universe has gone. All existence has disappeared. Including yourself. There is nothing but the silence.

(long silence) (tape starts abruptly again with Robert. )

...shanti, peace

Feel free to ask any questions.

SG: Robert is there a possibility that there is fear that we can have that we're holding on to, perhaps that we're not even aware of, that could be holding us back because obviously it's the ego that doesn't want this to occur and we're here because we want it as we are but the ego obviously doesn't and is there something there that perhaps we're not seeing that could be blocking us? because of this fear of completely being destroyed in terms of an ego?

R: Whatever it is, it's a thought and you are to ask, "To whom does it come? Who feels this? To whom does this come? Who believes in a blockage? Who thinks there is a blockage?" It is the ego that does this. That makes you feel that there is a blockage or there is something interfering. Follow it through.

Ask, "To whom does it come? Who is feeling this? I am. Who am I?" And it'll disappear and you'll feel freedom. Whatever comes into your head, whatever thought, good or bad or in-between. Always inquire, "To whom does it come?" As long as it is a thought then follow it through. Then as you sit in the silence more and more everything will break up and you'll feel the blockages less and less and you'll become a total block head. (students laugh)

SX: Robert you said try to leave the world alone but when you encounter problems., you didn't say ignore it. But we also have to face and try to solve our problems? (R: Who does?) What do you mean the body or...? Everyday we do, if we work we also have to solve the problems. (R: Who does? Who does?) If we don't do that, if we don't solve the problems, the body, and the I, whoever you say, the ego.

R: Who tells you the problems must be solved? Why do you believe that if you do not think about it the problems would not be solved? It is your ego right now that believes this. You have been brought up and trained to believe that unless I solve the problem it will not be solved. (SX: It's not that if I solve the problem, well maybe it is not existing the way somebody will look at it, I mean the other person will look at a different way.) Forget about the other person. (SX: Right well sometimes you would say that it's your problem, you will hear that sentence, "It's your problem." Or it's my problem though, it's not your business, so on, so forth.) Well who hears this? Who goes through all of this? All this is human thought. (SX: Yeah.) It all has to do with your ego and your mind. Go beyond that. Do not rest at that level go totally completely beyond the mind. (SX: Yeah and then just sit still and do nothing?) You will sit still and do nothing for a while. But something will pick you up and make you do the things you have to do. And you will find that they are done better than you will have ever done yourself. Everything will be done. See you're sitting there and you're worrying that nothing will be done, when you're sitting still. But you will sit still for a while and when you get up you will go about your business. Without even thinking of it. And your business will be done and everything will take care of itself.

The whole idea is to stop believing that you have to do it. Stop believing that you are the doer. Surrender everything. Let go of everything and see what happens. (pause) In other words when your mind tells you I have business to take care of, and if I don't take care of it nobody will take care of it and it will fall down. Then ask yourself, "Who said so? Who says this?" (SX: So in other words, if I doesn't do that you say that somebody else will take care of it or it will take care of itself?) You will take care of it that is what I mean it will take care of itself. You will do it. But yet you are still not the doer. (SX: Well that's what I'm saying then, and 'I' identify with, as the doer, has to do something. If the body or the mind tells me I have to do something however that is.) The body, the mind and the I are all the same. (SX: Right.) Therefore when you transcend the body, the mind and the I, the Self, the absolute reality will take care of everything through your body. Yet you will realize that you are not the doer and you're not the body. But there will be an appearance of doing the work and doing it better than you ever done it before. You will appear to be doing it. But you will know that nothing is happening. There is noone doing anything. (SX: So in other words we just imagine that it's a problem? When we encounter a problem we think it's a problem but you're saying that it in reality, is no problem. We look at it as a problem?) You see it as a problem. Your ego sees it as a problem. (SX: Right.) Yet the problem does not exist except for the ego. So when the ego is transcended there is no problem. Yet you will still appear to be doing the work.

SF: An experience to understand. When I fold a towel I fold it much quickly much more quickly and much neater than ever I did in the past without really thinking. (R: Umm.) Is that what you're talking about?

R: That is a good point, exactly. It's like when you're walking on the curb when you cross the street. You do it automatically you don't think about it. You've done it for so many years that you cross the street, you go on the curb, you step off the curb. Your body is doing it. Yet you are not conscious of it. You do it automatically.

SF: So you're talking about spontaneity aren't you. (R: Yes.) Just doing things in the now without worrying about the immediate cost or the immediate future or even the result.

R: Yes. Now you will do what you have to do. Everything that has to be done now will be done. Yet you will realize that you are not the doer. You are not the person doing anything. And you will be in total happiness and total peace.

SG: Robert when this happens do we cease at that point to have any kind of interior life whatsoever? (R: Any kind of interior life?) As we know it now? (R: You mean when you awaken?) Umm-hmm.

R: When you awaken there is noone left to have any kind of interior life at all.

SR: I found it. (students laugh)

SK: It's not so bad if there is no exterior life either is it?

R: No, same thing. There is no exterior life, there is no interior life. There is nobody left to have that.

SX: Why is it that you say there is no mistake in life although sometimes you, we always look at it... Say if you burn yourself, you learn from that mistake you try to not get burned again. Would you call that a mistake or...?

R: That is human endeavor. Even though you try and you make a mistake and then you learn from the mistake. If you keep it up in a human way something else will happen. There is always something happening to a human being. This works, this doesn't work, you learn from this. Then you have a new trial to learn from. Then you have to do something else and you learn from that. It never stops. It goes on and on. What we want to do is transcend it. Get rid of the whole bowl of wax. Let go of everything completely. Stop playing the game. (SX: But then you wouldn't call that a mistake, it's just...) You wouldn't call anything. There would be nobody left to call anything. You'll be free of calling it. Only when you're a human being with an ego do you call a spade a spade. Why do you call a spade a spade? (laughter) If you want to call a spade a spade go ahead. But when you're completely empty and there is nobody home, there is nobody left then there is nothing to do. But you will be doing everything that has to be done.

SX: Then why do we have to go through all those experiences in different ways? (R: Who does?) We all do.

R: Speak for yourself. You're seeing all these experiences. And you believe you have to go through everything in different ways. But it is your ego that believes this, not you. It is the mind that believes this not you. You are not your mind, you are not your ego, you are total freedom. But as long as you're thinking with your mind, with your ego then it appears that you go through different experiences in different ways. (SX: Yeah but actually I experience that I am nobody, it's so painful though, you know it's...)

(Robert plays puppet that was given to him as a gift from Ed & Kerema)

Puppet says: Are you always this stupid? Are you always this stupid? (laughter)

R: All is Well. (laughter continues)

SR: Robert, can we say that fear wakes up the ego?

Puppet says: You're a schmuck! The biggest! (students laugh)

R: What was your question? (students laugh again)

SR: I did, he said, "Are you a schmuck?" (R: Tell me.) Can you say that fear is what wakes up the ego?

R: Fear doesn't wake up anything. What wakes up the ego is to inquire, "Where did it come from? Who has the fear?"

SR: I'm saying that a person goes through life kind of unconsciously. Unafraid, relaxed and everything is happening as it should and all of a sudden they run into something and I'm ask- ing, is it possible that they feel a little worried and fear and then they say, "Oh I've got to do it. I've got to take charge now to make sure this goes right."

R: You're still playing the human game. (SR: I'm saying, is that when they're entering the human game is when they become fearful?) It's part of the human game when you become fearful. When you become fearful... (SR: What I'm saying without fear are they living in the Self?) No. (SR: You sure?) (laughter) The Self is total freedom. (laughter) The Self is total freedom it knows nothing about fear... (SR: Yeah.) ...It knows nothing about gains. (SR: I have a hunch we're not understanding each other.) What are you saying?

SR: I'm saying that if a person is living without fear. Maybe resting in their self but as soon as they run into a situation where they get a little fearful and start worrying and something in them says, "Oh I got to take charge to make sure this works out right," then do they enter into the ego?

R: Oh yes that is true. Right. (SR: So fear is kind of like the red flag that, "Oh here comes the ego?") You can say that. But why say it? (SR: Because I like to... umm ...because my ego likes to understand.) Ask yourself, "Who likes to understand? Where does the ego come from? Why do I want to know all of these things?" Make your life very simple. Don't get into mind games. Simply empty yourself out, totally completely, become totally empty, of all the words, of all the deeds, of all the thoughts. When you're totally empty everything will take care of itself.

SK: Robert you mentioned something earlier about a way of awakening - I think that is what you said — a possible way to awakening if there is a way — was through humility, compassion and love. Now if I'm in a state of anger or my ego has been hurt or whatever, so old wounds that I've been hanging onto all of my life. Should I just ignore that feeling or recognize that feeling as who this feeling is coming to? And just override it and just...

R: You can't ignore it. If you ignore it you'll sublimate it and it will always be there. You have to face it head on by inquiring, "To whom does it come? Who is feeling this? Where did it come from?" (SK: So where is the forgiveness and compassion?) As you keep practicing this forgiveness and compassion come by itself. As you practice self-inquiry you become more compassionate. You become very forgiving. You have mercy on yourself. (SK: What I was just thinking about you seem to use the words, "You practice, compassion mercy and love.") Yes you practice mercy and love as you practice self-inquiry. (SK: But then aren't you also saying that it's a kind of spontaneous thing that begins to happen as you practice self-inquiry?) It happens as you practice, yes. (SK: You can't do it by the numbers like you can self-inquiry like you can't say, "Now I'm going to do a love thing and follow this procedure...") Not really but you can think about these things. You can think about being compassionate, being loving... (SK: But you can't necessarily force it?) You don't force it you just think about it. You practice self-inquiry as you think about these things. You become a living embodiment of compassion, love and forgiveness. (SK: Hope?) Sure.

SG: So what you say happens like the ego gets less hurt. It doesn't get so sensitive it's not there as much.

R: Yes. As the ego becomes weaker and weaker and it begins to disappear, it's hurt less and less. What used to hurt it before does not hurt anymore that way.

(silence)

Do you have the Jnani Henry?

(Mary reads the Confessions of the Jnani refer beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Do we have any announcements?

SM: Ah no. We've finally got transcript 53 out.

R: We have prashad.

Thanks to Tony Lightman we have this prashad which is delicious. It's very powerful. So eat it gently. Do not force it. Chew it fifty times. (laughter)

And we have also almond cookies. Twin dragon. No animal fat. No tropical oil. Smells good. Eat drink and be Merry.

SM: Don't say that. (students laugh)

R: Thank you for coming...

SELF-INQUIRY TAKES CARE OF EVERYTHING

15th March, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. Only one part of you Kerema is here, where is the other half? (laughter) Missing in action.

It's good to be with you once again. I don't know why? (laughter) But it's good to be here to see your smiling faces and share this nonsense with you. The nonsense that you were never born. You have always existed. You never die. You are you, the ineffable you. That has always been and always be. You never will cease to be.

All of the world that goes around you is simply an emanation of your mind. You have created all these things for your play. Yet you exist. Who exists? What are you? Some people say I'm a spirit. Other people say I'm a God. Other people say I'm immortal. But what are you really? Find out for yourself. I won't tell you. Find out what you are. What you're doing here on this planet. What your purpose in life is. Find out.

I've become aware that many of you are practicing many forms of sadhana. Some of you are following the Pitanjalis' Yoga sutra's where you regulate your life. You get up at a certain time. You spend so many hours sleeping. You take a cold shower. You sit in meditation for a couple of hours. You do mantra's, pranayama, breathing. You help the homeless. You have a positive attitude. Is all this necessary?

The question arises if you're practicing self-inquiry do you need to do these things also? The answer is yes and no. For the mature soul self-inquiry suffices. For by doing self-inquiry all these other things will come by themselves. You will do what you're supposed to do, spiritual practices, whatever, will happen of their own accord when you practice self-inquiry.

Self-inquiry does not have to be regulated in any way. You may practice at any time, when you're working, when you're driving the car, when you're washing the dishes. Through self-inquiry the mind becomes still and quiet, subdued. You do not have to meditate. You do not have to do mantra's, if you're doing self-inquiry. That takes care of everything.

But, some of us are not really doing self-inquiry, then we have to do these other things, then we have to regulate our life. Do not think that if you do absolutely nothing you will advance and become self-realized. You have to do one method or the other, totally subdue the senses and the body and the thoughts. That is what it's all about. The ego disappearing. The thoughts becoming weaker. Until they no longer tell you what is right or what is wrong or what is good or what is bad. Until they no longer regulate your life by telling you you're happy or you're sad according to what happens in the world. In accordance with how someone reacts to you.

You find when you're practicing self-inquiry it doesn't make a bit of difference what's going on in your life. For your life — you begin to understand — has always been the ego. It hasn't really been your life. It has been the ego's life all of these years. When certain conditions and situations came into your life and you reacted to them, this has been the ego's life, the ego's joy. The ego's been playing with you. And you have believed all of these years this world has something to offer you. Something to give you, something for you to react to.

Now you're beginning to understand that within you is the power. You are That! All of the freedom, all of the joy, all the happiness, all of the love, everything you're searching for, you are. You have always been that. Yet you have been looking for it in the external world. And you still do, most of you.

You allow this world to tell you how you feel. You read about a recession and you begin to believe that jobs are hard to get. It's hard to make a living. That belief alone will make it that way. But for whom is there a recession? For the ego not for you. If you investigate all these things you'll see this is true. During the great depression in 1929 people became multimillionaires. They became very wealthy while most of the people were starving to death. They didn't have any money. That is how it is today.

Conditions, situations are given to you faster than any time before. You just turn on the TV and you hear what is going on all over the world. And you react. You feel it. You apply this to yourself. Having the power that you do, the application of these negative traits to yourself causes you to be one of the bunch. One of the people who suffer. And so you suffer because you believe there is not enough, you believe things are bad, you feel something is wrong somewhere, accordingly you bring it upon yourself.

We have to stop doing these things. We have to turn to the power that knows the way, God, the Self, consciousness. And we have to merge in this consciousness. We have to give up our ego's and the thoughts. Totally surrender to the one. Total surrender, give everything up, mentally, in your mind.

Then you become free. Then happiness is always emanating from you. You become a living embodiment of happiness, total joy. You do not really become anything. The ego just becomes less and less. Automatically your real nature comes out. There should be no thing in this world or any other world that can disturb you. There should be no situation that can cause you pain. There should be no one who can tell you anything that you will react to.

To become this way you have to turn within. And no matter how many times I say this to you some of you still turn without. You're looking at conditions to determine how you're going to feel and what you're going to do with your life. You cannot do this. You are the one that has always been and will always be. There is no other one beside you. That one has nothing to do with your body or your ego or your mind. That one is effortless pure awareness. You are that one without another.

Yet you are still going around believing you're a man, you're a woman, you're a person, you're a body, you're a mind, why do you believe this? Because the world shows you this. Where did the world come from? Where did the universe come from? Does the world or the universe exist when you're sleeping? When you're in deep sleep there is no world there is no universe. When you dream you dream of another world, another universe. Yet you realize it comes from you. But in deep sleep there is no dream, there is no other universe and there is no this universe.

In deep sleep there is a void. Who experiences the void. There has to be an experiencer of the void or there would not be a void. This answers the question that some of you have that think that you have to get into the void and that is it. And then they're self-realized, on the contrary. As long as there is somebody who experiences a void you are not totally free. You have to find out who the experiencer is, that is seeing a void. It is the experiencer that illumines the void. So that you're able to see the void. It comes from the Self which is your real nature.

So again when you're asleep nothing exists. Your troubles do not annoy you, conditions do not bother you. There is absolutely nothing going on when you are asleep. That is why many people like to sleep so much. For that is the only time they find peace. Yet this is not the answer. You are beyond sleep, beyond the void, beyond experiences, beyond everything. That place cannot be explained. You have to arrive there yourself.

The silence is your true home. Beyond words, beyond thoughts, beyond experiences, beyond manifestations. Silence! Silence is your real nature.

In your everyday experiences try not to talk too much. Think of all the words you have uttered since you were born. All of the statements, quotations, remarks, words of anger, words of happiness. All the words that have come out of you since you were born. Billions of words. Has it done you any good? What have all these words done for you? Now think what would've happened if you have never uttered a word in your life. Would you be better off? When your mind is going full speed it's like speaking words there is no difference.

There are many people who go away to retreats that become monks or nuns. They go live in the forest or in a cave, yet their mind is just as strong as it always was. Which means it's not doing them any good. It is better to be in a market place and have a quiet mind than to live in a holy place and have a chattering mind.

This is why it doesn't matter where you go or where you live. For wherever you go you have to bring your mind with you. All of the thoughts of the past, the fears, the frustrations all this goes with you. Destroy your mind and see if you want to go anywhere. Transcend the mind and then see if you have the desire to move to a holy place, so-called or to go anywhere at all.

It is the mind that keeps telling you to go to this place and to go to that place, to read this book and to read that book. If there was no mind who would read the books? Who would have desires? Who would need to do anything? Yet again you will always appear to do something.

Many of you still tell me that you're afraid to stop the mind. For you fear you'll be in limbo and you'll become a raving idiot. Nothing like this ever happens. For when your mind is quieted the Self takes over and you will find that you are in your right place doing those things that you were meant to do. You are happy, peaceful, that all is well.

Go beyond thoughts, beyond words. Do not attempt to analyze anything. Be yourself, observe your feelings, your breath, your thoughts. Notice how everything slows down. Notice how time slows down when your thoughts slow down. Just observe yourself, do not fight yourself, do not attempt to change anything. Just watch, intelligently, effortlessly.

(long silence as Robert begins again)

It's time to play stump the guru. Pass the stumps. (laughter)

Q: (Robert reads) When the mind is quiet without a thought, there is bliss, peace and many insights that come and go but full realization is still elusive though it's right in front of me. This last act of surrender is so subtle it seems impossible, please give some guidance.

A: (Robert answers) You always have to realize, "For who is it impossible? For whom is it subtle?" These are all words that come from your mind. This is what we've been talking about. You have to drop all the words. All the beliefs all the thoughts. If realization is your real nature there cannot be anything that can stop it from happening.

It is only you who believe that you have to go so far and it's harder after that. This is not true. There is no where you have to go, there is nothing you have to do, just be yourself. And you will come to the conclusion that you're already that.

These terms that you use, (Robert rereads) "the last act of surrender is so subtle it seems impossible, please give some guidance." There is no last act. You have those thoughts in your mind that you can only go so far before you get stuck someplace and you cannot go any further. Drop that! Do not allow your mind to think about that. Act as if you're already there.

Q: (Robert reads) How is it that some Jnanis teach and some Jnanis never become involved in teaching?

A: (Robert answers) This is Prarabdha karma this has nothing to do with anything. It is the Prarabdha karma that tells you what you're going to do. (SL: What's that word "prarabdhic?") That means the karma that is coming to you from previous lives. (SL: Prarabdhic?) Prarabdha. It is this that decides what the body is going to do on this earth.

R: Some Jnanis do nothing but stay in a cave or stay by themselves. Others go into the world and do teachings and do many things. Originally I was going to live in Oregon in a shack. I never dreamed I'd be doing this what I'm doing now. But I have nothing to say about this. It just unfolds the way it unfolds. So discover for yourself the truth about you and then see who asks that question. But it is the karma that decides what the body is going to do and what it's not going to do. That is the appearance, that is how it looks.

Remember in the ultimate reality nobody is doing anything. There is no thing taking place. But in the world of appearances it appears that some Jnanis do this, some Jnanis do that. Do not concern yourself with these things. Find out the truth for yourself, go within and see where you are and then you will know what is going on everywhere.

A: (Robert answers) Giving up mentally is giving up all desires that comes into your mind. Giving up the things that keep you back. As an example: If you inherit thirty-million dollars it doesn't mean to be spiritual you have to give it away or get rid of it but it means mentally you're not attached to it. Mentally you are free.

Another example: If you have a disease, it makes no difference what is going on in your body. Mentally you're not attached to it. Mentally you leave it alone. Wherever you happen to be in your life. Whether you're in Los Angeles or in India or in Africa or in China, makes no difference where you are but mentally you may feel this is right, this is wrong, I shouldn't be here, I should be here. It is these thoughts that have to go. The thoughts have to be given up. The thoughts have to be surrendered. The thoughts that this is right, that this is wrong and this is good and this is bad, this is this way and this is that way. The thoughts have to go. Wherever your body finds itself you are in your right place it makes no difference where the body finds itself. But mentally do not react to it. Surrender the thoughts. Surrender the mind and that is how you become free.

What you see with your senses, with your eyes is an illusion. Nothing appears as it does. Nothing is as it appears. It is the mind that has to be transcended. The condition doesn't matter. The condition is karmic. The mind has to go.

SM: That's it Robert. (Referring to question box)

SF: Is there another way of saying the same thing as what you just said, "Don't claim anything?"

R: If you like that say it. Do it! Don't claim anything enjoy it but don't claim it as yours. It doesn't belong to you, nothing belongs to you, you are free, totally unattached.

Anyone have anything to say or forever hold your peace.

Do we have any announcements?

SM: Another transcript to be passed out. This is number 60, Love, Compassion and Humility and I have five copies to hand out.

R: Remember to take life easy. Do not struggle in the world. There is nothing against you. Nothing wants to hurt you. All is well. Until we meet again Thursday night, go in peace. Om shanti.

(tape ends) [TOC]

DIVINE IGNORANCE

19th March, 1992

Robert: It is good to be with you once again.

Many people when they come to satsang for quite a while, begin to take satsang for granted. We get together twice a week in this way. We get to know each other intimately. Yet after a time some people take satsang for granted.

When a teacher comes from out of the country or out of state, people flock to see this teacher. To hear new things, new methods, new ideas, and the teacher is gone for another year or so. Yet, we're together twice a week.

Never forget the truth about satsang. Every word, every breathe, every moment of Silence, every joke, everything makes up satsang. And this is your Spiritual unfoldment. This is what causes you to evolve, to grow, to transcend. It is sort of difficult to see your own growth in progress but I can assure you everyone who comes here, especially twice a week, is unfolding beautifully. No matter what you may think or no matter what you may see in your own life things are happening to you good things wonderful things. Try to understand this. Never forget you're not coming to a lecture or to hear stories or to get out of the rain. There is a reason why you are attracted to satsang. You have prepared yourself for many lives to take the final step, to become totally free. Consider this. The question arises, "Can I come to satsang only and not practice sadhana or Spiritual exercises or practices? Is satsang sufficient? Or do I still have to do Self-Inquiry and other such things? What is the truth about this?" People ask me this question. In reality, satsang is all you need. If you come to satsang twice a week, you may hear a word, a sentence, you may be sitting in the Silence and you will become Realized. In an instant.

So the question that is asked, "Is satsang alone sufficient?" The answer is yes and no. Yes it is sufficient because you have gone through many incarnations where you have practiced various sadhanas. And you have earned your way to satsang like this.

No, you cannot just become Enlightened by coming to satsang, if it is the first time you have been into Spiritual practices. This is why I have said that satsang like this is for mature souls. People who have been through many experiences of religious training, practice in previous incarnations. In other words, you are where you are suppose to be. Yet, to unfold and become Realized just by coming to satsang, there are two considerations you have to ponder. The first one is the practice of divine ignorance. Now I'm speaking about the mature soul who has gone through pranayamas and raja yoga, hatha yoga, various spiritual disciplines, various tapas and they are here now. Therefore, the first thing you have to do is practice divine ignorance.

Divine ignorance merely means that you are totally ignorant in a Divine Way of everything in this Universe. In other words, you become very humble and very truthful, when you realize you don't know what anything really is. You really have no idea in your mortal mind what anything is all about.

Take a tree for instance, we have no idea what a tree is in its Reality. Oh, we say it's a tree, we take it for granted. Yet, where did the tree come from? We were born into a world where people have told us when we were kids, this is a tree! And we say good, a tree. But when you think about it, we are totally in a State of Ignorance, for we have no idea what the tree is doing here. What's its purpose? Where did the first tree come from? What's it all about? We don't know.

We look at minerals, gold, silver and in our mind they are very expensive minerals. Everybody wants gold and silver. But it is we as human beings that gave them names and gave them value. We say gold is hard to get, so it's worth a lot of money because it's shiny and it's pretty. Same with silver. But what is it really? What is its purpose? Where did it come from? This is true of everything on this earth.

Take a cat. What is a cat? We have no idea, if you're being very truthful with yourself. We were born into a world where when we were babies people said this is a cat. If people would have called it a tree, we would have called a cat a tree. It is we who have given names to everything. Therefore, in the practice of Divine Ignorance we admit to ourselves that we really don't know what anything is. We really have no idea what these things are all about. What does it do for us? It makes us humble. It develops humility. Instead of walking around thinking we know something, believing we know anything at all, we realize we don't know what a damn thing is on this earth. Everything just exists and we take it for granted.

We see a mountain we're used to it. We see water we're used to it. It's hard for us to realize that the earth is spinning around its axis and that the water doesn't fall off the earth we don't fall off this earth. We call this gravity. We give this a name. Yet, no matter what scientists have done to try to understand what this is all about, no scientist has ever understood these things. Science only tells us what something appears to be and what its molecular nature is. But we have no understanding of why it's here.

We take a look at ourselves, as human beings so called. What are we doing here? Why are we here? Where did we come from originally? We don't know. Therefore, to a person who wishes to become liberated, divine ignorance is very important. It's a sort of surrender. It's the same as practicing neti-neti, not this, not this. We see all of these things and we understand that they do not exist like we think they exist. Nothing is the way it appears! That's the first consideration you have to have. And you have to keep thinking about these things pondering these things, everyday.

We're told we were supposed to live certain lives, doing certain things, becoming professional people in certain objects and subjects. Why? If we were going to die in any event. What's the purpose of going to school for 25 years becoming a professional engineer, doctor, lawyer, whatever when we have to leave all of this behind. The average person does not want to consider this it's too frightening! The average person wants to go on with their duties, with their work, with their families, with their life as if it is never going to end. But alas, here comes good old death which takes us away.

But we don't want to think about these things we don't want to consider them. We want to have fun we want to run around we want to become the top in our profession we want to acquire millions of dollars be in perfect health that's all we care about. But when you begin to ponder that you have to leave all of this behind, and one day you will leave your body behind we wouldn't like to ponder this at all.

Therefore, the first step to consider in Advaita Vedanta is divine ignorance. When you admit to yourself I don't know? I don't know anything! But most of us have never wanted to be this way. We want to make people think we know! So we talk and talk and talk about things to make people think we know. But we know nothing. To know that you don't know is Divine ignorance. To not know that you do not know is plain ignorance. That's the first consideration.

The second consideration to ponder is to tell yourself, I am consciousness. And Consciousness is like a gigantic Screen that takes up the whole Universe, that is the whole Universe, beyond the Universe. And you think of a screen which takes up all time and space there is absolutely nothing but this screen is consciousness and this is my true nature Yet, somehow, consciousness appears to produce a replica of Itself as a human being as a person, that is superimposed upon itself. I know some of you are thinking, 'But Robert, you told us that consciousness is nothing it is self-sufficient, all-pervading. How can it produce a human being?' Well, it is like water in the mirage. It doesn't really do this but in order to explain it and for us to become evolved and liberated we have to think of it this way. This is a process. Something to think on a higher level. It is true when you see water in a mirage, when you're walking in the desert and you're thirsty and you go after it and you jump on it and you grab it you grab sand! In the same instance, when you try to grab the human beings, so called on the Screen of Life, which is Consciousness, you grab the screen!

So the first person appears super imposed on consciousness. This first person is the I-thought. The personal self. Now the personal self thinks of itself and creates out of its mind other beings like itself all super imposed on consciousness or the Screen of Life. You create families, friends, enemies, different types of situations. They all appear on the Screen, until the Screen is totally covered with people, places and things and you forget about the Screen and get involved with the people that you have created out of your mind and the situations and the conditions and everything else. I am referring to all of us.

Everything you behold everything you see the stars the moon the sky, the trees, the water it is all a superimposition on consciousness on the Screen. It doesn't exist. Yet it is difficult for most of us to understand that when something exists it doesn't exist!! It exists and at the same time it doesn't exist at all. Like the sky is blue. The sky looks beautiful, blue if you go up into the atmosphere there is no blue sky. There never was a blue sky. It's an optical illusion. Like the snake and the rope. The rope appears to be a snake and frightens you until you find out it's not really a snake. Therefore, you will never be frightened by a rope again.

So these pictures on the Screen, some are frightening, some are happy some of this and some of that. You get involved in the play of life. You appear to get old and die and you are reborn again, go through different experiences

Remember you are creating all the time, with your mind.

The further you get involved in this picture the more you create images, situations, persons, places and things the more that you get stuck in these things. And they appear so real to you that again you forget this is a superimposition on the Screen. The Screen has long been forgotten. Consciousness has long been forgotten. The reality to you is the people, the things, the places the things that make you happy you go after things that make you happy trying to get rid of things that make you unhappy.

And you keep on like this, life after life after life after life after life. The time comes when you get tired of playing and you begin to take the search for the answers of life seriously. You begin to ponder and wonder what this is all about by practicing divine ignorance, which is what we've been talking about. You realize everything comes and goes and within time no one will remember you ever existed.

Therefore, you begin to ponder this. "Who am I?", you say to yourself. "What is my Real Nature?" You begin to give up the places, things, situations that seem to make you happy or sad, because you begin to understand this will not last long. So what I really should be doing is trying to find out the Truth about all of these things. Where did they all come from? What gave them birth? What is their purpose? You'll finally come to the conclusion that 'you' exist and yes, that everything is within your Self. This is the greatest discovery a human being has made.

All of the answers are within you.

Why you die, life on other planets, everything, the answers are within yourself. After you ponder these things, more and more the answers are revealed to you.

This is what the Sages of old did. They sat down near a tree they weren't interested in going anywhere, doing anything, becoming prosperous, making a name for themselves, looking for love in all the wrong places. They were interested in one thing, to awaken. They had many interesting experiences books like the Upanishads were written, the Vedas, many other spiritual works that were thousands of years old, giving other people an opportunity and a chance to also discover this Truth. When this Truth was discovered, they realized they had Eternal Life. There never was a time when they were born and there would never be a time when they would die. They understood that they are the one! And there is no other, but the one, the screen. They had gone back to the screen, which is consciousness. And they experienced the fact that the body does not really exist it is like the water in the mirage like the snake and the rope like the sky is blue

They became Eternal Beings, awakened, self realized.

Many of these great Sages became teachers, many did not and the message was passed down. If you want to awaken you have to give up all of your foolishness mentally. You have to stop wanting things, being attached to things. You have to stop worrying about anything and let go of fear.

Focus only on the self, on consciousness whatever you focus on you become.

If you desire to focus on things of the world, you become a worldly person. And you go through trials and tribulations, good and bad times, until you learn and understand that this whole world is nonsense. No sense!!! The world has no substance. No reality. The world is without a foundation for it is a mental image.

Now take a look at your life. Think of the things that are so important to you Think of the things that annoy you That disturb you Think of the things that make you happy These are all things. As long as you're dealing with things, they must change. They will never be the same. Nothing is ever the same. Everything must change. Why should you chase after things that change? Don't you see the folly in this? You're wasting your precious life. Then you come back again and again, until you refuse to any longer get involved with this world and you become free!

So it is easy to say that the world does not exist. Everything is Consciousness, the Self. Yet, if you have not experienced this State, it is foreign to you. If you ponder divine ignorance and ponder the fact that you are really a screen, which is consciousness, something will begin to happen deep inside you. You will begin to let go and your real self will shine through. You are the power. You and you alone are the creator.

I know some of you are saying, "I don't look like a creator, I seem to create hell." But this is what you do anytime you think! Every time you think you are creating. The world in which you are in right now is a creation of your mind. Whether you're single or married, rich or poor, sick or healthy, all these things are created in your mind, subconsciously. You may say, "I didn't choose to live this life, I didn't choose these things to happen to me." Yet, subconsciously you are in that wave length. And everything that is happening to you is suppose to happen. That's what I mean when I say, "Everything is in it's right place. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should."

Do not cry over spilt milk. Let go of the past, totally. Forget about the future. See yourself now. What do you see? What you see is what you get. You are more than you can ever imagine. You are the one!

Do not be fooled do not allow this Universe, the world to shape you and mold you making you believe you are this or you are that. Rather, stand up tall and do not identify with the body or the mind go beyond that There is really no one on this earth that can hurt you There is really no one who can do anything to you except if you allow it to happen.

Start from the point of divine ignorance. Develop this beautiful humility, this humbleness I was talking about. Admit that you know nothing. Then see yourself as the screen, that takes up all the time and space. And try to realize your humanhood came from this screen. Without the screen, without consciousness you wouldn't be at all.

You can practice exhaling and the whole Universe comes into existence. Inhaling and you suck up the Universe in your Heart Center. This is a very profound exercise to practice. Try it. Inhale feel the whole Universe, everything, the stars, the planets, the galaxies, people, places and things-all being consecutive inside your Heart. And when you exhale all of creation begins again. It comes out of you. Let's practice this with our eyes closed. Feel this.

You and you alone exist. All of this creation comes out of your mind. With every exhalation you are creating the entire Universe. With every inhalation the total Universe is sucked back into your Heart. There is nothing but the Self, the screen. And as you exhale again the entire Screen Of Life becomes covered with images, planets, galaxies and there is movement and life everywhere. And as you inhale all of the movement and all of the life disappears in its entirety and there is only the self and that is consciousness! Feel this peace!

Do any of you have any unusual experiences you like to share with us? Do you have any questions?

SD: I have a question but first I have a comment. The exercise we just did which I thought was really wonderful reminds me of Sri Bhagvan once saying something like, "We create the world like the spider throws the web out from its body and in the same way it can reabsorb it." So that was the comment. My question is when you were talking about our subconscious creation of our lives and circumstances how do you reconcile that with karma of which I thought we had no control.

R: Yes. The subconscious part of you is your karma. That is karma. It is that which decides what is going to happen to you. (SD: In other words, we are predestined to create the reality in which we live?) Yes, it is all predestined. (SD: So one does not conflict with the other.) No there is no conflict whatsoever. There is only karma that acts as a subconscious.

SX: Isn't our karma something that we really don't control?

R: By not controlling it you are controlling it. It's controlling you by you not controlling it at all. Whatever you do, whatever happens to you it is because of karma. It is karmically predestined. But as you work on yourself you get to the point where you transcend it and there is no karma at all. You become totally Free. So for whom is there karma? For the mind, for the subconscious mind, for the ego, for the self, the personal self.

SD: So the subconscious is part of the illusion. (R: Of course.) Then why is it sometimes we are sort of led to believe the subconscious is reality and Consciousness is illusion if they are both illusion?

R: Well that is psychology, psychiatry they lead you to believe that your subconscious mind is a power. But it's really karmic, it's all karmic. If karma didn't exist, we'd be totally free! But you have to see that.

(Readings by students followed as tape ends) [TOC]

EXISTENCE IS NOT IN FORM!

22nd March, 1992

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...rainy day. I'm happy to be with you.

There are some teachers who tell us that the purpose of life is to unfold spiritually. This is why you came here. But I say to you that there is no purpose to life and you never came here. (laughter)

SH: Larrikin. (laughter) That takes care of it. (laughter)

R: That's the end. You think I'm kidding? (laughter)

SB: We find it difficult. (laughter)

R: You don't exist. So why am I talking to you.

SH: You should have your head examined? (laughter)

R: What head? (laughter)

(Robert continues) The truth is that you are not what you think you are. No thing is what you think it is. There is nothing that really exists the way it appears. I know it does sound strange and funny when you first think about this. You can bet your life you feel alive. You feel as if things are happening to you and your affairs. You believe you're going through certain circumstances. Yet who feels this? Not you. You really have no life.

When you begin to think on these terms and you begin to really feel what I'm saying to you, that you really do not exist, you have no purpose, there is no spiritual unfoldment and you do not have to achieve anything, think how free this makes you. You're totally free. There is nothing that binds you. There is nothing that holds you down or up. You're absolute freedom. Of course it is only when you begin to think that the trouble starts. So we get back to the mind again. Why do we talk about a mind that doesn't exist? You know that. You have no mind. You are mindless. Or you are out of your mind, whatever the case may be, yet you do not believe me. If you believe me you would awaken and be free.

You say to yourself, "That sounds good but I have all kinds of troubles and problems. I've got lack and limitation and sickness and all kinds of junk in my life." Have you now? My friends you have absolutely nothing wrong with you. You have no life as it appears. You have no purpose. You do not exist. You're absolute zero. (laughter) Yet you really want to exist don't you. You want to exist because you're afraid that if you find out that you did not exist you'll go stark raving mad.

Yet this would never happen. For if you really discover that you do not exist, I don't mean when you tell yourself, "I do not exist," intellectually. Where you're feeling body and you feel pain and you feel problems, but you keep saying, "I do not exist." You're fooling yourself when you do this. And we want to avoid fooling ourselves. But if you really knew what you were saying when you realize that you do not exist at all. Then you would turn into omnipresence.

When you do not exist, existence exists by itself. The absolute reality is existence. But not the kind of existence that we're used to. We're used to existence in form. When we say something exists we think it has a form or it has to have a form. Whereas true existence, real existence has no form, has no shape, has no qualities as we know it. But yet it's alive but not with the life we think about. Not with the life that we know. There is a life, there is an existence that is totally ineffable. An existence that you really are and you've always been. There never was a time when you were not. Yet words cannot describe this existence. There are no words that can describe this.

Yet you are alive, you are alive not as human being, you are alive not as a thing or an object, you are alive as consciousness, pure consciousness. But can you ever know that consciousness? Can you ever discover that consciousness? Can you ever become that consciousness? Can you ever just be?

Only when you let go of thought. Only when you stop thinking will the reality express itself. Will reality express itself, will reality present itself. Only when there is no thought, there is no movement, there is no pressure, when there is absolute stillness, will this real reality express itself. It is beyond anything we can ever imagine. There is nothing in this universe that can help you. There is nowhere you can go to find this reality, to find this truth. There is no one who can really give it to you. It comes at the strangest times.

You may be staring out the window and all time stops. This happens to most of us. We stare out the window. We forget about ourselves, we forget about our environment. At that time reality is presenting itself. But what you do is go back into your old space where you think you're day dreaming. And you don't want to get caught day dreaming. So you return to your old self. The one with the problems. The one with the body. The one with the world and the universe. Yet when I say to you the universe does not exist. The world does not exist. You do not exist. This sounds like the ravings of a mad man and it is.

How many of us can have an experience where they find out that they do not exist and no one else exists either. I don't really know why I had this experience. I wasn't prepared for it. I didn't ask for it and yet it came by itself.

Therefore we can begin to understand that there is something else. This is the good news. Where Masters, way-showers, Sages can make so-called humanity feel good by explaining to them, there is no death, don't worry, you will never die. It takes a load off. When you begin to understand that you can never die.

The real you was never born, the real you does not subsist, the real you is beyond the senses. Beyond taste, touch, see, hear and feel. The real you is not even the observer or the witness. It is beyond the witness. It is beyond the observer. It is something so gorgeous, so beautiful, so grand, so exquisite. This is what we call God and you are That.

When you identify with the material world you deny your reality. The greater the identification with the material world the deeper you're sucked into this maya, this illusion. That makes you believe things are real all around you. It makes you believe confusion, human harmony, unreality. When you give up thinking, when you surrender your mind and your body, when you surrender your affairs you're at peace. As you go deeper into your affairs and into your so-called material life, you live a completely different life in a completely different world called the material world. Yet this material world does not exist. It has no validity. It is like the water in the mirage.

Look at yourself. No matter how many times I tell you this you still believe you are the personal self. Having to struggle to survive. Having to fight for survival. Yet it's really simple, easy to overcome this kind of feeling to transcend the feelings of survival, basic instinct, to live in the world, by right identification. All you have to do is accept yourself as absolute awareness. Accept yourself as absolute awareness. You do this not by affirming that you're absolute awareness but by letting go of the attachment to person, place or thing. As you negate the whole world and the whole universe the absolute awareness which you really are comes into play by itself. This consciousness is awakened as you and you begin to feel omnipresence. You begin to feel total freedom.

Those things that used to annoy you in your everyday experiences no longer have the power to do so. Yet most people are satisfied having a so-called mediocre good life. They forget it's going to end sometime. They forget all things are temporary. They forget, "This too will pass."

But people hold on to the goodness that seem to come into their life sometimes as if it was going to remain forever. Nothing remains forever. As long as you identify with the material world, you have to suffer. Just the term, "Material world," is enough to make you know you have to suffer because everything material is eventually torn down and disappears.

If you would only give up all your longings, all your desires, all of your cravings, even your craving, your desire to become enlightened, even your desire to become free and liberated, this is a false desire since you're already free anyway. You are already liberated. There is nothing you have to do to become liberated. You do not have to practice sadhana, spiritual disciplines. You and I have known people who have been practicing spiritual disciplines for centuries. It makes you passive. It makes you dumb but it will not liberate you. Liberation comes by itself.

There is nothing you have to do to become liberated. There are no tests you have to take. There are no worshipping services you have to do. You do not have to have a guru. You just have to let go. Let go of everything. You sort of have to have an attitude that, "I don't give a damn." But not in a sarcastic and arrogant way. In a loving way. When you have the attitude, "Let the world do to me as it may, it makes no difference what experiences I'm going through. It doesn't make any difference whether I'm sick or healthy, rich or poor, happy or sad. It doesn't make one bit of difference." When you begin to think like this you're on the right path.

Stop thinking about yourself so much. Stop trying to improve your lot. Leave yourself alone. Nature will take of you. You will always know what to do. But stop thinking about it. Stop thinking about your health, your position in life, your relationships. When you stop thinking about these things they will automatically improve and be better than you thought they could be.

Do not outline a plan that you think you have to live by. Do not believe that you have to live a certain way. Have a certain income. Have a certain family. Live in a certain country. Leave these things alone. Everything will take care of itself. Leave yourself alone. Do not fight yourself. You're fighting yourself every time you're thinking something is wrong. You're fighting yourself when you believe somebody is trying to do something to you, or there are bad people out there or good people out there or any kind of people out there.

Out there is only a projection of your mind. Otherwise there is no out there. All the things that appear to be out there is yourself. You are that Self that contains all of the people, all of the kingdoms of this earth, the galaxies, the Gods. It is all contained within yourself. You give it power by the way you think about it. Your thoughts projects itself as the world as the universe. And you find that you're living in a world with certain people around you. Not remembering that you have projected this yourself. You get involved in your own projections and you worry endlessly. You try and make things a certain way. Whereas what you really should do is allow everything to go back into your heart centre and then watch and observe from where the I rises. From where does the I-thought rise. This is what you should watch. The I-thought as it begins to rise from the heart and becomes the world. Then you allow the I-thought to go back into the heart and you become free.

There is such happiness, such joy, such peace, such love. Everything is so beautiful.

SG: Robert... (R: Umm.) ...that song reminds me of a question that I wanted to ask you, the Masters in the period back in the 1400s claimed that going to see the pavilion girls, I guess who were prostitutes at those times, greatly deepened his enlightenment. He happily embraced bodily existence especially after his enlightenment. And I wondered if you could address that as also a means to enlightenment? What it is I probably want mentioned it is a little about the role of perhaps sex in all of this because a lot of teachers talk about sex getting in the way and etc, etc.

R: The only thing that gets in the way is your mind. Sex is neither good or bad. It exists. It is part of the role of the aspirant. Do not deny it, do not praise it. There have been many Zen Masters who were enlightened and continued to have sex, there were many who didn't. It's all part of the world. It's all part of maya. It's neither good nor bad.

Sometimes an enlightened being will have sex for teaching purposes. You have to be careful with this. For it makes you think you have license to do what you want. If you surrender your body. Surrender your sexual desires, your urges, then something will happen inside of you to make you go higher in life, to transcend the world and you will find at that time that if it's part of the plan for you to have sex you will. If it's part of the plan for you not have sex you won't. What I'm trying to say there is no such thing as having to have it or not having to have it. It is something that takes place in each individual's mind and it's up to them to live with themselves, to understand where they are coming from and have complete control over themselves.

SE: Do enlightened beings have sex for sexual purposes?

R: Not really for sexual purposes, for teaching purposes. (SE: What are they teaching?) They're teaching that they can have this feeling without having sex. That the true feeling, the true orgasm is your Self. You are that and you can live in orgasmic states, orgasmic state, all of the time.

SE: Can this be the new meekness lab? (laughter) (R: Why not?) (laughter)

SD: Yeah, but then would Jerry bounce it on us? (laughter) (SH: Well said.) (laughter)

R: Never think you have to give anything up and never think you have to indulge in anything. When you are free what you do will come naturally. It will happen by itself. But when you say I have to have sex or I'll go crazy, then you've got a problem.

When you begin to understand your true nature and you like what you really are all the things will take care of themselves. And you will be able to have it and not to have it. But it will take care of itself, everybody's different. There is no one way about it. There are no set rules. Independent of where you're coming from, what you're doing. What your purpose is. Sex for sex sake is a waste of time. But sex for raising your consciousness is interesting, as in tantric yoga. But all this is part of the mind. Therefore know yourself. Know who you are and you will know what to do.

I was going to say, why do you want things to make sense? Because you want things to make sense. This is why you're caught up in maya. Break up your thinking, be spontaneous. Do not believe things have to come a certain way or be a certain way or follow a certain trends. The more you're shocked in your system the faster you awaken. So all the things that shock you are good. When things are going too mediocre, straight, no shocks, you can't go. All the shocks that come into your life are for your benefit. So all is well. Bob?

SB: You said in the Self there is an exquisite bliss and joy and love but I've heard what you said in the past that there is nobody left to experience anything? So what is it if there is no I to experience it, there is no mind to experience it. What is it that feels that joy, bliss, love?

R: There is nobody left to experience anything and there is nobody who really feels it. But the love, the peace, the joy is self-existence. It is just something that is that you're not really experiencing as an I. But yet there is something there. It is self-sufficient.

SH: Is it non-experiential? (R: It's non-experiential.)

SD: But couldn't you say Robert than feeling it, you are it? You are joy, you are bliss?

R: You can say that, but why should I? (laughter)

SB: So it's really the Self that is perfect fulfillment, joy and bliss and peace. (R: But it's not the Self as you know it.) No not the self with the small 's.' But the self with a capital 'S.'

R: You don't know what that Self is, so it couldn't be that. It is something so beyond those things that there are no words, no thoughts, no feelings, nothing to describe it.

SB: But yet it is peace joy and love and bliss. It's not just like in Buddhism a void? Like everything is zero there is nothing there?

R: No it is beyond that. (SB: Something wonderful, something fun?)

SG: Nobody's there to enjoy it. (laughter)

R: Bob wants to enjoy it. (laughter) (SB: But you enjoy it, you enjoy it. You don't enjoy it as the mind but there is still that happiness there.) There is something there. (SB: There is something there it's not like you're being completely obliterated and unconsciousness...) No. Something is truly there. (SB: And that is an orgasmic bliss too, as you said?) If you want it to be an orgasmic experience then go, be it. (SB: But the whole physical sexual thing, isn't it like a step down version of the bliss of the Self?) Everything that you can figure out in your mind. Whatever you can talk about and describe is a step down.

SE: Robert I don't have a clue do you? (R: A clue?) About it? About this teaching?

R: They used to have a game called clue.

(general talk between students)

R: Thoughts and feelings are not real. Nothing is covering nothing. There are no coverings. There is no thing which is real and no thing which is not real. None of these things exist whatsoever. So the unreal is not covering that which is real. And why waste time working on illusions. Who is working on illusions? Who is wasting time? To believe you're wasting time is an illusion. Who is doing all these things? It is yourself that thinks like this. Transcend the self that thinks this way. There are no covers. Thoughts and feelings appear real as long as you believe you are the body. When you realize you're not the body there is noone left to be able to feel thoughts and things. Therefore there is no cover that is covering the reality. There is only the reality. There is only that which is real. Nothing else exists.

SD: Robert it's not my question but I wonder if the person isn't referring to working on illusion as doing sadhana?

R: Well we discussed this. Sadhana is only necessary for the person who doesn't understand self-inquiry and does not want to wake up. Then they practice sadhana. Sadhana will eventually lead some people to the place where the mind is quiet and still and peaceful. But most of the time people get involved in sadhana get caught up in sadhana. Make sadhana their life's work and this is a hindrance many times to awakening. Awakening again comes by itself. (SD: So self-inquiry is not sadhana?) No. (SD: I thought it was.) Umm. Self-inquiry is self-inquiry. It is a thing by itself.

SF: Is it spiritual discipline?

R: It's not even spiritual discipline. You exist! When you exist you can question yourself, "Who exists?" That is not really a discipline. And it is not sadhana. It is something that you do to yourself to awaken.

SH: Well what would you call it then?

R: Nothing. (SH: Yeah, okay.) Do not give it a label or a name. It spoils it. If you call it sadhana you get mixed up with mantra's and pranayama's and yoga's and everything else.

SF: Those things are done by a doer.

R: Exactly. Somebody has to do these things.

Q: (Robert reads) You have pointed out that we are always thinking about ourselves, except when watching TV etc, (laughter) but certainly that must differ from the non-thinking of Self that you speak of and if so, how?

A: (Robert answers.) When you're watching TV you are not thinking of your physical self. You lose yourself. But then you become what is on the TV, you are part of the program. You're part of what you're watching. It is not like losing yourself to the Self. You're becoming sort of dumbified, by watching the TV or reading a book or a newspaper. It's true you forget about yourself for a while. But since you're thinking about something else you become what you're reading or what you're watching.

The proper method is to be still without TV, without books, without anything. And to confront yourself. Confront yourself totally and completely. By observing your thoughts and watching what they're doing to you, how they control you, how they have power over you. And as you observe this as you watch this you inquire, "To whom does this come? Who is going through all these things? Who has all these things going on in their life?" Then everything slows down and you become still and peaceful.

Q: (Robert reads) You have said to do self-inquiry each time a thought arises and that the space between thoughts will become longer. But what about body sensations? They seem to be continuous are they considered thoughts?

A: (Robert answers) Body sensations are the same as thoughts. As you keep inquiring, "Who am I?" And you stay in the space between the answer, between the question. Then the body thoughts become less and less and the thoughts become less and less, they're the same thing. The feelings and the thoughts are nothing as you practice self-inquiry. You ask, "Who does this come to? It comes to me. I think this. Who am I?" And when you keep still your body sensations will slow down, as well as your thoughts. And soon there will be no body sensations, there will be no thoughts. There will be nothing. So body sensations are the same as thoughts.

When one goes the other goes also. You cannot have body sensations without thoughts. There has to be a thought about a body sensation. So when the thoughts dissipate, the body sensations will also dissipate.

Q: (Robert reads) It is said that the Sage is a mirror. Would you explain how that works?

A: (Robert answers) When you look at the Sage you are seeing yourself. Therefore what you see as yourself you'll see as the Sage. The Sage takes shape to everyone in accordance to their thoughts. That's why the example is the Sage is like a mirror. For you always see yourself when you look at the Sage.

For instance if you are a thief, you will see in the Sage a thief. If you are a loving person you'll see in the Sage a loving person. Whatever you are you will see that in the Sage. But then again the Sage reflects back himself or herself. So if you really look at the Sage deeply you will go beyond your feelings and your actions and what you are. And you will feel the Sages peace and the Sages love and the Sages joy which will transcend all of the stuff that's going on in your life.

You will begin to see the one Self if you look at the Sage deep enough. You will see the one Self. The absolute reality. But if you just glance at the Sage and just look at the Sage once in a while you will feel the Sage as yourself again. But your material self and the self you think you are. And all the attributes that you have, bad, good or indifferent you will also do it to the Sage. But again if you stare at the Sage deeper and deeper and you think of the Sage deeper and deeper you will bypass all that. You will go deeper inside the Sage and you will become the Sage yourself.

SD: Robert, a long time ago you told a story like I can't unfortunately remember the details and it was something that happened to you in which you were confronted by someone who was potentially violent. And that was setup for a violent situation and I remember you said that he looked at you and was somehow able to transcend from the look you gave him, whatever he was feeling and later thanked you. (R: Oh yes.) So could you tell that story again and how it ties in. If he looked at you, if he was about to do something violent or whatever, what did he see? Did he see his true self in you?

R: This happened in the subway, New York. Everybody was hanging onto the straps it was rush hour. And this fellow was drunk. He was bothering everybody and being really obnoxious and rude. And he looked at me and I stared at him. And all of a sudden he became still and quiet and peaceful. And the next train stop and he looked at me and said, "Thank you," and he got off the train.

Apparently what had happened, as he was in a drunken stupor where his senses were not working too well. Which was to his favor. He was able to see through, through the surface. Through the body deep into the Self. And was able to feel the peace and the joy that was there. That is why he said, "Thank you."

SD: Or is that an example of where he saw the true Self in you?

R: Something like that. He was able to see himself as a higher person, as a peaceful person, as a happy person. The drinking made him like that. If you were not drunk you would have only seen the surface which wouldn't help him at all. But because he was drunk he was able to let go of the surface and go deep within and this helped him.

SH: So you advocate getting drunk. (laughter) You should work for the liquor industry.

R: Sometimes it helps.

(general talking, joking and laughter)

SB: So he couldn't transcend his poisoned liver.

R: Who knows what happened to his poisoned liver.

SJ: There really is something about that isn't there? (R: Yes. ) I've been looking for God all my life and finally him in a bottle. (laughter) (R: Was that a personal testimony?) Yeah (R: Jay is on a new path.) (laughter)

SH: The way to God is through alcohol. (laughter) (R: That's possible.) It's time for you to say something Fred, you're the old alcoholic. (laughter)

SF: Something I have to say about thought and Krishna Murti said thought is always old.

R: Always what? (SF: Always old. (SF: Thought can never see anything new.)) Umm. (SF: Would you agree with that? Sure, because what else would you think about except the past. (SF: Thought is responsive memory when it gets the facts right.)) Sure that is true. Every time you think you can only think about the experiences that you had in your life. (SF: In comparing them with what is going on right now?)

SD: Even though when you think about the future I suppose it's based on past experience.

R: Of course. It's all based on the past. For thoughts to be fresh and new, there has to be silence.

SF: Umm. It comes from another place.

SH: But you can't think reality, you can't think...

R: No, you can't think of reality at all because there is no thought in reality. Thoughts are only about the past. When you live in the now, you don't think. That is why we're told to live in the moment, in the now. Not in the future, not in the past.

SG: So would that account for people like Mozart? (R: What about Mozart?) Is that where they're pulling it from, that way?

SH: Mozart we hear of, pulled the symphony in one moment. And then he rationalized them out in time.

R: All great thinkers, people like that were very spontaneous. They were just able to imagine everything going on in the now. They saw everything like Henry said, "In the moment." There was no past, there was no future. But to write a symphony sometimes took time. But it all came into a split second.

SF: Time is a fabrication of the mind, anyway, time is a...

R: A lie. Space, time is a lie it doesn't exist. It appears to exist because you believe you are the body. When the body notion is conquered there is no time, there is no space.

SB: Robert how is it that thought is a motion in consciousness? Why is it that that little motion in consciousness obscures that consciousness of reality.

R: Why is thought a motion in consciousness? Why do you say thought is a motion in consciousness? (SB: Isn't that what it is? It's just a movement?) In consciousness there is no movement. Consciousness is self reliant. Self sustaining. It knows nothing about a thought. The thought comes from the ego, from the maya. Consciousness has no thoughts. (SB: But if consciousness is all there is how can thought be outside of all there is.) Thought is not outside of all there is, thought is part of the ego, part of the non-existence. Thought does not really exist. It's like the body that doesn't really exist. And the world does not really exist. And the mind does not really exist. And karma does not really exist. So thought does not really exist. (SB: So the motion doesn't really exist.) Motion doesn't really exist. (SB: That is why it's an illusion. It just appears pretty real.) An illusion does not really exist.

SH: How can what doesn't really exist appear at all in the first place?

R: It doesn't appear. (laughter) (SH: How can what is visioned appear to be?) It doesn't appear and there is nothing to be!

SD: How can it appear to appear?

R: Who asked that question? (SD: The appearance.) (laughter) So let the appearance get rid of the appearance.

SG: That's paradoxical to do.

R: Well the whole teaching is paradoxical. (SB: Non-sensical?) For in truth nothing appears, nothing exists. We said in the beginning, "There is no appearance that exists."

SH: And this is a flat-out by the mind truth. From which there is no other. (R: Exactly.) We'll throw all that out too. (R: There is no Henry.) Thank God for that. (laughter)

SD: Just your appearance. (SH: My what?) Your appearance. (SD: That's your illusion.)

SB: When I find God I'm gonna kill him. (laughter) (SH: It's the other way around he's going to kill you. You're a done duck but you don't know it.) (laughter) (SH: Slay him!)

SB: I think it's a cruel joke. (R: For whom?) For me. Very cruel, to all be at satsang. (R: Speak for yourself.) Cluttering up everything for me, who lives in the world. (laughter)

SN: The Buddha's in the room. (R: Where?) I'm that Self. (SD: The Buddha is the room.) (rain pours outside)

SE: Let it go for another half hour or so. (SL: Yeah right, until the rain stops.)

R: Anyone else like to entertain us? A song or a dance? A pie in my face?

Okay Mary has some announcements.

SM: I've got some transcripts. This is number 58 "The Silent Word," and I have five copies, no four copies to give out.

(tape ends with Mary giving out transcripts to students for copying)

CONFRONT YOURSELF!

26th March, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. (Students: Good afternoon Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. It is good being with you again. I love you just the way you are. Love is the Self and the Self is love. When I exclaim that I love you, I love the Self which is all-pervading. Therefore how can I not love you? For the Self is all there is.

There was once a Zen Buddhist monk who used to bother his teacher everyday with questions like, "What is the ultimate truth? When am I going to become enlightened? What practice should I use? When I become enlightened will I still be a monk? Will I want to see my family?"

One day the teacher told the monk, "I'm going to send you to a great Sage. She will show you the ultimate reality." The teacher drew a map of where the Sage lives. It took the monk six months to get there. He had to swim across a mighty river where he nearly drowned. He had to cross a bridge a thousand miles up in the air. Pretty far up. (students laugh) He had to climb a mountain ten thousand miles high. He had to walk through the desert.

Finally he got to her house. He knocked at the door and this disheveled old lady came to the door. She smelt like she hadn't taken a bath in ten years. She was totally ignorant. She was deaf in one ear, couldn't hear out the other. (laughter) She couldn't see too well, she couldn't talk too well. He was about to turn away when she grabbed him by the arm and pulled him in. And gave him a broom and told him to mop and broom...sweep the place, clean up the house. He did this then she had him wash the windows and paint the house and plough the fields and milk the cow.

Three months passed and he was wondering what he was doing. But he kept on doing it because he was looking for some wisdom from this old lady. That his teacher told him that she would give him ultimate truth. He believed the teacher. One day she pulled him into the house and sat him in the corner. He didn't do anymore work from that day on. He just sat in the corner watching the old lady go through her routine. Of washing the dishes, sweeping the house.

Another two months passed by. He was really pondering all of this. What is all this about? Who is this lady? What is the ultimate truth? Until he got to the stage where didn't care or give a damn about it. He just sat in total silence and went deeper and deeper within himself. Finally something clicked within him, he became self-realized and he started laughing hysterically. He picked the little old lady up and kissed her and left the house and never returned again. And noone has heard of him since.

What was the ultimate truth he found? He realized that there is no ultimate truth. There never was an ultimate truth. There is no realization, there is no ignorance, there is no universe, there is no world, there is nothing. Everything just is. This was his discovery. Everything is. Not this or that or something else. Everything just is. Just the way it is. Just the way it is. You do not have to do anything about anything. You do not have to change anything or fix anything or improve anything. Everything just is. If you can only understand this great truth you would become the happiest being on earth. For when you realize that everything just is you are living spontaneously. There is no past, there is no future, there is no birth, there is no death. Everything thing just is the way it is.

Look at your life. How many things you try to change or fix or remedy. Things that you're looking for. Trying to become something. Trying to be somebody. Trying to achieve a purpose. When you do all these things then you're not living up to the principle of everything just is. If everything just is, what is there for you to do?

You didn't come to this earth to do anything. You didn't even come to this earth. But you appear as if you did. You appear real. You appear as if you're somebody. And you've been trained to go after something in this world, to become something great, to be somebody.

Yet this is what causes suffering. The belief that you have to be somebody that you're not. The belief that you have to have something that you don't have. Look at your life. The so-called problems you believe you have. Something only becomes a problem when you want to change something or you want something to go your way. Then it's a problem because it isn't going the way you think it should go. But in truth nothing has to go any way. Everything is perfect just the way it is. Everything is total perfection.

You say, "Sure Robert, look at man's inhumanity to man. Look at the wars and the dastardly conditions going on in this world." You're watching the movement of time. Which really does not even exist. When you watch the movement of time things are happening. In the movement of time, things appear to be happening. But if you are spontaneous and you leave everything alone and realize everything just is you would be in-between the movements of time and space. You would be able to see through the mirage. Through the so-called magic of life and happenings. And you would be able to see the stillness, the oneness, the peace. But you see the situations as they appear.

You look at person place and thing and believe that is the way it is. Movement, time, space, these things are not for you. You who are ultimate reality. You who are pure effortless awareness. You who are sat-chit-ananda. The world is not for you. The world is for the dreamer. The one who is dreaming the mortal dream. Who takes everything seriously. Who feels the world as if it's real. For they believe that things are going the wrong way, according to their thinking.

So the first step to rectify all this is to quiet the mind. To make the mind quiescent. Still the mind. You still the mind by not reacting. By watching, by looking, by seeing but not reacting. You sit in the silence observing your mind thinking. Observing your thoughts. Observing your feelings. And you leave them alone. You no longer try to change anything. You stop following your thought patterns. As we discussed before you "drop it!" Whatever comes to you, you simply drop it! You no longer go along with your thoughts. You catch yourself every time the thoughts start thinking. You keep remembering to catch yourself. To catch yourself thinking.

Little by little the thoughts begin to vanish. They stop. There are no longer any thoughts. There is no longer a thinker. You are no longer a body. If you are no longer a body there are no other bodies. You feel happiness. Infinite happiness. You feel joy, love. These feelings are all synonymous. It's really one feeling. It includes a great compassion, love, joy, happiness, peace. Only you can bring this about in yourself.

This is what the Zen Buddhist monk discovered. All of these years he was looking toward his teacher to become self-realized. But the old lady he encountered was totally opposite of any teacher he'd ever seen and this woke him up.

You have within you everything it takes to become liberated. All you have to do is to give up what is not reality. And what is not reality is everything the senses tell you is reality. Everything you taste, touch, hear, feel and smell is non-reality. Yet these things cause you to react to this world. You don't want to react any longer. You want to drop everything. There is nothing in this world that is worth going after, chasing.

Many times when I talk this way people think, "I don't want to become a nun or a monk. I want to live in the world. The things that Robert tells us is for a person who becomes a hermit or a person who lives in the forest or a cave. What about me living in this world." On the contrary, everything I say to you, everything I share with you is living in this world. If you practice the things I share with you it makes no difference where you are or whether you are in the city or in the market place or on a mountain top, doesn't make any difference. Everything is to be done mentally.

When I speak of giving up things not reacting, this is mentally! I'm not telling you to quit your job or to leave your family or to go far away somewhere. Stay exactly where you are! Be yourself! There is nowhere to go. Remember if you do not find yourself first wherever you run away to you have to bring yourself with you. And if you have problems now you'll have more problems wherever you go. Therefore you do not leave town, join a monastery or run to India or go to the woods. You have to take yourself with you wherever you go.

The wise thing to do is to confront yourself. Just where you are right now. Confront yourself totally. See yourself where you are. Watch how you react to things. Watch your thoughts. From the moment you wake up in the morning begin to ponder yourself. Try to observe the I, rising. The I rises as soon as you wake up in the morning, then you become cognizant of your body of the world and others. And by pondering, "From where has the I risen?" Just by pondering this, "Where does the I come from? From where has it risen?" This will take it back by pondering this. The I will begin to return to its source, which is the Self. And you will awaken.

But if you just go along with the I waking up then you forget about this and you get involved in the days work. You become involved in the days activities. You start to think about lunch, breakfast, what you're going to wear, whom you're going to meet, everything becomes external. But if you catch the I and you follow the I back to the source you will be quite a different person. You will still get out of bed, go to your work, do the job you're doing yet you will not be the same person. You have found peace, total peace. And it will not matter what kind of work you do or what kind of work you don't do. Things like hating your job will disappear. You will not think about it one way or another. You will just do whatever you have to do. And this will all happen spontaneously.

Never believe that you are a human being. Never believe that you live in a world which turns around its axis and turns around the sun. This is not really you. There are no mistakes. No mistakes have ever been made and no mistakes are being made. It is your inner feelings, your inner emotions that feel all of these things in this world. Learn to leave the world alone. Learn to leave yourself alone.

It's that time again to play "Stump The Guru." Fred would you pass the...

SM: There is nothing in there Robert, I don't think. There's one.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert what is the sound current stream?

A: (Robert answers) The sound current stream is coming out of your mind. (students laugh) Why do you want to hear a sound current stream? You want to transcend everything not concern yourself about a sound current stream.

There are various yoga's where you see certain visions, you hear sounds, you hear currents, you feel different feelings, always remember this emanates out of your mind. When you touch reality there is nothing. There are no currents, no sounds, no visions. You have transcended this. So don't look for sound current streams. Go beyond that. Become empty and you will be free.

SM: That's it Robert.

R: One question. (students laugh)

SG: Robert as I understood the sounds is the original form of everything that you see?

R: Well form does not exist. Form is an illusion. Form is maya.

SP: But is it true that maya originally formed from sound?

R: Maya originally is nothing. (students laugh) Do not give maya names. (laughter) You can go all the way back to all kinds of currents and teachings and sounds and figures that you see in the mind, geometrical designs. All these things come to one who meditates. But we want to go beyond that where there is no creation. Whatever you think somebody had to originate it, it had to come from somewhere. Where did the sound cur- rent come from? Where did all of the things you're talking about come from? The mind! Where else? We create our own world. We create our own conditions, our own situations. We create these things. Drop it!

R: Fred writes in green.

Q: (Robert reads) Can one get rid of what one considers an undesirable identity? Such as "I am the body" by holding onto or accentuating the opposite or opposing identity? Signed Liverworst. (students laugh)

A: (Robert answers) The answer is Liverworst. (laughter) That's the answer. (laughter) You do not wish to hold onto anything. To hold onto the opposite identity. Whatever you hold onto is the mind again. You're holding onto the mind when you hold onto the opposite. There is no opposite. It's like saying, "Let's get rid of the devil and think of God." There never was a devil to get rid of and there's no God to get rid of. There are no opposites. There is no thing but the Self. There is only the absolute reality and even that doesn't exist.

Do not make the teaching complicated. You want to realize that the teaching brings you to nothingness. Where there is no body, no world, no God, where you no longer have a crutch in which to hold onto. You become completely, totally empty. Then you are the Self. So Liverworst is good. That's the answer.

Would anyone like to say something.

SG: Robert I was reading... (R: You've been reading again?) (laughter) I was reading the Ashtravakra-Gita last night and my understanding of that is this something-ness is not a mere nothingness. What I mean is when saying nothingness it has a kind of like the Buddhist void which is kind of a negative?

R: Umm. When we talk about nothingness we're negating all things of this universe. It all exists as mind. When the mind is totally destroyed then you rest in nothingness which is really something as you say. But it's something ineffable, something that can be experienced and something you become. It is total being. It is beyond the void. But it isn't anything you can explain or talk about or become. You have to experience this for yourself.

But when we speak about nothingness we're referring to the negation of everything in this world and the universe. When everything is negated and everything is gone what is left over is the reality. Make it happen to you and see for yourself. Then you will see what you are, a good for nothing.

SH: That is the same as good for everything? (R: Sure.) Clean and void. (R: Yes.)

SF: I've noticed some Buddhist scripture that seems to be parallel with what you've been saying. I know what you feel about scripture. (students laugh) By oneself the evil is done, by oneself one suffers, by oneself the evil is left undone, by oneself one is purified. Pure and the impure stand and fall by themselves. No one can purify another. (R: That sounds good Fred.) I'll take it back. (R: No it sounds good.)

SJ: Dharmapada right? (SF: Huh?) Dharmapada? (SF: I don't know I just saw it somewhere. It's pretty accurate is it?)

R: It's very accurate but where do you come in? Have you experienced that for yourself? (SF: No. Intellectual.) So what good is it? Only when you can experience for yourself then there will be nothing to say. But that's a nice poem. (SF: Just a poem.)

SB: Robert, language is so absolutely imperfect to even point to this because you say even if we experience it for ourselves - are experiences of duality, subjects and objects of not that? And the Self - I'm going to experience it - that's not it either - So language, this language is absolutely not capable of even pointing to it?

R: Any language is not capable of not pointing to it. It goes beyond language. (SB: So it's like the language of silence is a known kind of language.) (laughs) Even when you think of silence, it's not the silence you're thinking about. It's beyond that kind of silence. It's a silence so profound that one cannot even begin to understand it.

SZ: Yeah. (R: He's experiencing it.) (students laugh)

SH: He's in the silence. (students laugh)

SG: Robert can there be an absence of objects but still functioning of hearing and seeing and feeling and smelling those objects?

R: If there is an absence of objects who is there left to smell or feel or touch or taste... (SG: You were saying about it if there was any "Who" and you said that it cannot be seeing and hearing. Do you have to have a "Who" for hearing?) Yes, somebody has to hear. There has to be somebody to hear or to think while hearing. The thinker is still there when you hear. But you get to the point when there is absolutely nothing to hear, there is no one to hear and there is nothing to hear then you're in a completely different ballpark. You're totally away from this kind of hearing or this kind of seeing. You go way beyond that to a place where you can't even imagine. (SG: Are you saying, there cannot be a state of no objects while there is still hearing and seeing going on.) Yes. As long as there is hearing and seeing there has to be a seer who does all this. There has to be a mind. When there is absolutely no mind you are in a completely different dimension. For there is no hearing or seeing but yet you function. You see and you hear but there is no one seeing or hearing. (SG: So you're saying there is seeing there?) There is seeing and hearing but there is no one left to see and hear. (SG: Now you're saying there is seeing or hearing with an absence of objects?) But there is no one to see or hear and there is no absence of objects. (laughter) It's a paradox. There appears to be a seer and a hearer and there is an absence of objects and then again there is no absence of objects and nobody sees or hears.

SE: Is that clear yet? (students laugh)

SH: Sort of a merry-go-round. (R: It's worse than a merry-go-round. It's a roller coaster.) (students laugh) Let's get off it. (laughter) (SD: It's the whole carnival.) To hell with it.

R: Yet it's so simple. We just have to let go of all these things. Let go of all the intellectualism, the analyzations, the memories, the stuff we've been brought up to know. If we can only give everything up we will be so happy. We'll be very very happy beings. Yet most of us are afraid to give up our lives. Because we've had this kind of a life since we were born so-to-speak. And we're afraid to give it up because we're afraid of the unknown. And I say to you there is absolutely nothing to be afraid of.

(a tape is changed over)

SM: I don't want to miss anything? (laughter) (SH: Just in time for the next jam.)

R: All is well.

SM: It's the death of the ego that's such a horrifying thing, isn't it Robert?

R: The death of the ego. Always remember that there is no ego that really dies because the ego has never really existed. (SB: So what is it that feels terror?) Whatever you imagine it is. (SB: Well that's the ego then isn't it?) That is what you think it is. So we talk about an ego and getting rid of the ego. But in truth there is no ego to get rid of. And there is no terror. Where did this terror come from? The ego? The ego doesn't exist, there is no terror. (SB: And yet people crack up and end up in the mental hospital.) Of course this is part of maya. It's all necessary... (SB: And they suffer?) ...in the grand illusion. Look at all the things that go on in this world. People crack up as you say, people don't crack up. People are millionaires, people starve to death from want of food. This is duality, this is maya this is the way of the world. Go beyond that. Go beyond these questions and these things you're thinking about. To that place where there is perfect peace and nothing is happening. It is within you.

SR: Robert what happens during deep sleep? The body shuts down and then the...

R: The body does not shut down when you're in deep sleep or you'll be dead physically. (SR: Right, but I mean, the mind shuts down?) The mind doesn't really shut down either because it takes care of the body's functioning. You are in deep sleep, you are in a state of realization when you are in a state of deep sleep. But a realization without the physical world, without the physical universe. When you are in deep sleep nothing happens. Nothing is going on as far as you're concerned.

The I that knows the world, the I that sees the world, the I that is the world has gone back into the heart and there is no one experiencing anything. So as far as you're concerned when you are in deep sleep there is no universe, there is no world and there is no body. But to the person who observes you in deep sleep they see your body and they see you breathing and they see the things going on, your respiration, yet you do not feel these things. Realization is when you are in a sort of deep sleep, yet you are cognizant of the Self, in deep sleep.

SR: Like something awakens while you're in deep sleep?

R: You are asleep while awake. But deep sleep is a very good example of letting go of the whole universe. It's like death. It's a sample of what happens when you die. When you appear to die you are in a state of deep sleep. But you don't come back into this world as the same person. You experience other planes, which is your mind creating these planes. The subtle planes, the causal planes, the mental plane all these things come out of your mind.

SH: But that's no longer deep sleep then? (R: No. You awaken in those planes of existence.) You imagine them?

R: Yes. They're all out of the mind. (SH: Umm.) The mind has created this whole ball game. So deep sleep is a sample of that.

SR: Yeah but fear comes out about death but we're not afraid to have deep sleep in fact we need deep sleep. We have all these fears about death is in fact the ...does the body has more programming about dying then it does about handovers?

R: Deep sleep gives you a sample of what's happening when you die. It relieves you of all the pressures of the world. If you did not have deep sleep you would not be able to function. For the world appears very strong in it's illusory force. But when you sleep you let go of the world for a period of time. And then you can go back into the world later on when you wake up and continue. So deep sleep is a sample of dying. This is how it's going to be when you let go completely of this body and you go forward into the infinite.

SD: So you're saying that the body can be dead but the mind still exists?

R: The mind always exists. (SD: Except there is no mind.) There is no mind, of course.

SL: What about the subconscious Robert?

R: The subconscious is the mind. The subconscious mind or the conscious mind or the unconscious mind they're all aspects of the same mind. There is only one mind that appears to be real and it is this mind that causes all the trouble. This mind causes your subconscious experiences, your subjective experiences, your conscious experiences. They all come from this mind. This is the reason we are told to destroy the mind. Then everything stops.

SL: Robert also I think before you said that the subconscious is somehow linked to predestiny or something, is that correct? Or whatever comes into your subconscious is what guides you because that is your destiny?

R: The subconscious is the part of you that you're not aware of consciously. The thing that you picked up inadvertently. Deep fears, deep frustrations, they're in your subconscious. (SL: Maybe I didn't remember correctly but I thought that you linked that up to predestiny your subconscious is where all your predestined to do something that is...) The samskaras. You're talking about the samskaras from previous lives. All of these things are entered into your subconscious, you can call it your subconscious mind. And that stays with you until you annihilate it, until it's totally destroyed. It comes with you life after life after life. Where you experience your prarabdhic karma, that's you work out, the things that are happening to you that are karmic from a past life, from a previous life or many lives before. Until you give the whole thing up and become totally free.

So deep sleep, karma, different states of consciousness, those things are all synonymous. We go beyond all these things.

SB: Robert in Ramana's books he says that even in deep sleep that awareness the reality is still awake because reality can't go unconscious, so the aspect of being that's reality is always awake. (R: In deep sleep the I exists.) Yeah but it's not associated with the mind and brain. So it's like we're unconscious of it.

R: You're unconscious of the physical world. (SB: Yeah.) But the I exists. (SB: Yeah. So consciousness exists in deep sleep and it's wide awake.) The I. (SB: Yeah.) The I exists when you're dreaming it exists when you're sleeping, it exists when you're awake. So what is this I? (SB: Why is it that it's not awake as we seem to be awake now or maybe it is awake?) What? (SB: When we're in deep sleep.) What's awake? (SB: Well the I-am is awake.) The I-am always exists. Consciousness always exists.

SB: Maybe while we are in deep sleep we are wide awake and when we wake up we forget that we were wide awake in a different quality? You know what I mean?

R: When you are in deep sleep you are dead to this world. (SB: Yeah and dead to the mind too. And dead to the ego.) The mind still exists. The mind exists while you're sleeping.

SH: But there is no content? (R: There is no content.) Empty? (R: Empty mind.)

SQ: Robert what happens when you have an out-of-the-body experience?

R: When you have an out-of-the-body experience your astral body appears to come out of it. And floats around some place. What did you say? (SQ: And you're looking down at yourself.) You're looking down at an illusion and the illusion is also the out-of-the-body experience. They're both false. (SQ: How does it physically happen?) Your so-called soul, you think you've got a soul, there is no soul. Except the bottom of my shoe.

SB: No that's a heel.

R: There's a heel and soul. You appear to have an out-of-body experience when your soul so-to-speak leaves your body and that's a different plane, it's an astral plane trip. The astral... (SQ: Consciousness is up there looking down at your physical body?) Not consciousness, the astral body. We have an astral body, we have a causal body so-to-speak. We have a physical body, we have a mental body. These bodies all seem to be in one. They're all inside together. When we have an out-of-body experience. The astral body leaves the body it appears and is able to roam around and have some fun and do whatever it likes to do. While the body is sleeping. (SQ: Well this is when you're awake.) When you're awake you have an out-of-body experience? (SQ: Yeah.) The same thing. Makes no difference, they're all false.

SG: Robert what is the difference when teachers talk about not having these experiences in an astral body or a causal body but having these experiences in a soul body.

R: In a solo body? (SG: In soul body?) A solo body? (S: Soul body, soul.) Oh soul body. What about that? (SG: It's just that there is a big difference because these are very conditional bodies but the soul body is the spirit body and has these experiences and go through these various realms and levels sorts of things...) As long as there is a body it's false. All the bodies do not exist. Soul body, heel body, any body. There are no bodies. Bodies come out of the mind, the mind is the emanation of the universe and everything that exists. When the mind is destroyed there is no longer any bodies.

SG: There seems to be a different point of view in your teaching, trying to tally this with some others because other teachers say that to account for all manifestation there is a positive which is like the spirit and there is all the various planes of manifestation from the subtlest to the grossest and that is like the negative aspect, like a battery, negative and positive, not negative being bad but just two aspects of one battery which accounts for all manifestation.

And the other teachers say these planes of existence all of this manifestation it's not a bad thing, karma is not a bad thing it's more of a creative type of manifestation. And I'm hearing when you say, "It doesn't exist," that there is no counting for it. That's where other teachers in other philosophies on this do account for it. The Zen Masters would say that it's blasphemy, heresy to say the absolute is just nothingness and then exclude all of manifestation. Because they're both are together, they're both the same things. Samsarra is nirvana, nirvana-samsarra.

R: This is a Zen teaching. This is a Buddhist teaching, I understand what you're saying. But the question is, "Where does it all come from? Where does samsaras come from? Where does the soul come from? Where does everything come from?" This all comes out of the mind. And where does the mind come from? The mind doesn't exist. So if the mind does not exist there is absolutely nothing else that exists in this universe or anywhere else. There is total emptiness. Total freedom. Total liberation. Which is beyond anything you can ever think about. (SG: Is that the same as saying that as Zen teachers say, that emptiness is form and form is emptiness.) At that level you can say that, yes. You can say emptiness is form and form is emptiness. But what good is it? Why do you want to say that?

SE: Still shoveling maya. (laughter) From one system to another system. (R: True.) The maya comes in, the maya goes out. (laughter)

R: True. As long as there is something going on the mind is active. The whole idea is to go beyond all these teachings. Go beyond everything. And there is not a void, you go beyond the void. There is something as I say which is very ineffable, something that cannot be spoken of, something beyond anything you can ever imagine, feel or be.

SH: So that is the plenum, when they say, "Plenum void." You lead these two together. The Buddhists call the Plenum void. Which you refer to as ultimate reality. (R: Yes.) Same thing.

SE: Still maya.

SH: Still words. (R: You are beyond that.) You are beyond the beyond. (R: Beyond the beyond the beyond.) The list goes on redundantly forever. (R: Until it stops.) Until the mind stops. (R: When the mind stops.)

SK: Robert regarding the mind stopping you frequently suggest that self-inquiry is somehow a useful thing. Last week or sometimes you talk about living in the moment. (R: Umm.) And living in the moment...self-inquiry seems to imply dropping the senses or moving beyond the sensory experience. Being in the moment it's a very continual fight out, are they both heading in the same direction?

R: Yes they both go in the same direction. Those are methods to go beyond the mind. Methods to destroy the mind and go beyond everything there is, to become totally free and totally liberated. Use whatever method is suitable for you at the time. Whatever you have to do, you do to become totally free.

SG: Well Robert it seems like we're in the best of both worlds here because the great majority of the population out there is not concerned with any of this. They're going about their business most of the time. And then there are people such as yourself, who are there, enlightened and here we are in this limbo. And it seems to be the most frustrating place to be...I mean what is it that we can do to avoid suicidal despair in the mean time and frustration?

R: You can stop thinking the way you're thinking. (laughter) (SG: I'd like to.) Simply observe your mind, observe your thoughts and observe what you said. Watch your thoughts, watch what you're saying. Drop it! Get rid of it. Do not carry it with you. Do not allow your mind to make all of these long statements. Catch yourself when you start thinking like that and drop it or inquire, "To whom does it come?" And follow it through. Do whatever you have to do to stop the mind from thinking that way. And it will happen. You have to go within again and again and again. Until the day comes when you don't have to go within anymore. The deeper you go within the faster you get rid of all of the stuff.

SH: Whatever arises in the mind the only thing to do is to throw it away. It's all garbage?

R: Yes. Throw yourself away while you're doing that too. (SH: Good idea.)

SB: Can I recycle it? (students laugh) (R: Do whatever you want with it but get rid of it.) Repurpose it.

R: Again make your life very simple. Keep your thoughts very simple. Do not become too abstract in your life. Leave everything alone. Live in the moment. Do not try to analyze things or try to figure them out or come up with solutions. There are no solutions, there's no hope. Forget everything you ever learnt. Become like a new born babe. Remember the practice of divine ignorance and be yourself.

SL: What is the practice of divine ignorance?

R: When you realize that you do not know what anything really is. When you begin to see that everything is because you are. The things that exist you have no idea what they really are. Take a tree for instance. What is a tree? Nobody really knows. We give it a name, a tree we say, "This is a tree." But we have no idea where it came from why it's here. We know we chop it down and use it as wood. We make furniture. We have no idea where it came from. We could have called a tree a dog or a bird but we call it a tree. So we take it for granted. Divine ignorance is therefore when you realize that you know nothing about nothing.

SL: Will you call it a practice. How do you practice to achieve this?

R: You simply look at everything and you develop a great humility by realizing that everything is something that you know nothing of. You get rid of the wise guy attitude - that you know about this and you know about that and you know about everything - whereas in truth you don't know about anything. You just have memories.

SL: So in self-inquiry is where you negate?

R: In self-inquiry you can negate all these things.

SL: It seems like it's better in self-inquiry in "Who am I?" or "Who is feeling angry?" If you take it that way say, "What is the tree?" I don't know what a tree is or...?

R: You don't really have to do that as far as these things are concerned. Just realize that everything in this world has been given a name by you when you were born. You were told to call a cat a cat, a dog a dog and so forth. But in reality you have no idea what a cat or a dog is. You just appear on this earth with your body. This makes you very humble. It causes a lot of humility to come into your consciousness. When this happens then you're able to go further.

Remember it's really impossible to go any further on the path unless you develop a great humility. If you think you know too much, you know things, this keeps you back. All human knowledge keeps you back from experiencing your true self. Therefore when you develop a great humility you can go back further and further until you touch that place of truth which is really you.

SB: Can you say that the practice of divine ignorance is resting in that disposition of, "I don't know what anything is," instead of resting in the disposition of familiarity? Like I is mine and my memory and you know what everything is. But divine ignorance is resting in the disposition of knowing absolutely nothing about myself or anything or having no craving no wanting, just "I don't anything and it's unknowable." That disposition.

R: What a dumb guy. (laughter) (SB: It's resting in that disposition from moment to moment.) True you can say that, yes.

SE: Or you can get a job working with Jerry Brown, where you know that nobody has the slightest idea what's going on at any point in time, from Jerry on down. (laughter)

R: Yes you can say that. You already said it.

SB: That seems to be the most wonderful essence of the whole teaching, I think.

R: It's the beginning. (SH: Beginning of the ending of me.) Yes. Me-me-me.

R: Kerema would you like to sing a song? (SC: Oh I didn't come prepared.) That's okay. (SC: Yeah right, spontaneously. Alright I'll sing an old one.)

(Kerema sings) (then Mary reads the Jnani)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: We have any announcements?

SM: No Robert. Transcripts are coming in, which we're thankful for.

R: Remember to love yourself. To pray to yourself. To worship yourself. To bow to yourself. For God lives in you as you. You are that...

SPIRITUAL LIFE IS NOT A BED OF ROSES
(EMPTY MIND)

Robert: Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) It is good to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love you all. All is well.

Many of you have been with me for quite sometime now. And if you're not a devotee if you are a disciple or a seeker - I'm not going to into definitions of these things tonight, it's in the lessons - But if you're a disciple or a seeker you've heard everything. And it is boring for you after a while. We hear the same stories perhaps, same teachings, same jokes. Yet a devotee is never never bored. Due to the fact they listen with their heart and not with their head.

Think of all the great Sages and all the great Masters that have had devotees and disciples and seekers around them. Take for instance Jesus. He used to teach, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and it's righteousness and all these things will be added unto you." You can imagine how many times he said this to new crowds, to new people and the devotees with him heard it again and again and again, over and over again. "I am with you always even unto the end of the world." New people came around him they heard these teachings for the first time. Yet the devotees with him have heard it again and again.

Take Bhagvan Ramana Maharshi. He had 30 or 40 devotees that were with him for over 40 years. They would come into the hall twice a day and just sit there. Watching all the tourists, all the newcomers who would come in. Asking the same questions over and over again. His devotees knew by heart what he was going to say. They could have said the same things he did because they'd been hearing this for 40 years. Think if you were with me for 40 years. Doing the same thing again and again and again.

Disciples and seekers need new life all the time. They can't sit still too long. They have to go where the action is. A new teacher comes to town they think they'll hear something profound from this teacher. Something special. Because they haven't seen this teacher before. They go traveling to different states, to different countries to see different teachers. But they can only stay for so long before the ants in their pants begins to bite. And they have to run to another teacher.

Again this is because they're listening with their head. They're listening to words. They think words are going to do it. Words are not going to do anything. Words are words. It is also true that if a devotee hears the right words coming from the Sage, the words will also enlighten them, because they are not listening to the words as words.

They're listening to words as God. Every word that they hear coming from the Sage to the devotee is the word of God manifested. But the disciples and the seekers do not see it that way. They take everything literally. And they want to hear new words, new stories, new jokes, new teachings.

Take the Buddha. The Buddha traveled with his devotees, through the jungles, through the woods, over mountain paths, came into villages into towns. Taught the same teachings over and over again. Everything is maya. Only the Self is real. Think how many times the Buddha's devotees heard this. Did they become disillusioned, did they become bored? Of course not. For they realized that they were not dealing with a human being.

It is written in all the sacred scriptures, the Upanishads to be around the Sage is sufficient. Nothing else is necessary. No teachings and no lectures are necessary. Yet here in the West talking becomes very meaningful to most people. For in the West people were brought up to listen to people talking. Beginning with the television.

Before you can read, before you can walk you're put in front of a TV to keep you quiet. While your mum cleans the house. You're about 3 or 4 years old and you're put in front of the TV and started watching cartoons. Then when your mum turns on the soap opera's you watch those. This is even before you got to school. So your brain is already being bombarded with words. You consequently grow up believing that words are powerful. And they are powerful to the people who have been brought up thinking of words.

In metaphysical classes you learn that words are things, words are power, words can make you feel unhappy or upset. And this is true to the people who have been brought up listening to words. Yet words in themselves have no power. It is the person who speaks the words that has the power.

Therefore if they listen to the words of a Sage in the right way with their heart, their heart will open up and they become liberated. Think of these things. The devotee can be with a Sage for weeks and months without a word being exchanged. Years, without any words being exchanged. And think of the routine that you go through.

Many of you tell me, "Boy I wish I lived in an Ashram." You wouldn't like it, you couldn't take it, some of you. It's no bed of roses. It sound enthralling when you read about it. When you read about those people who were present in front of Ramana Maharshi and you wish you were one of them. Yet if were one of them and you are where you are now you would run away from there in a couple of weeks or a couple of days. You wouldn't stay. For it's the same routine day after day after day after day.

In the old days at Ramana Ashram you used to get up at 3 o'clock in the morning. Everyday for 40 years. No holidays. Go through the day sitting on the floor, on a stone floor. How many people can take something like this. This is why I always say, "Do not kid yourself." Spiritual life is not really a bed of roses. It is the actual surrendering, the giving up of the ego. Not doing what the ego wants. Not wanting to be entertained.

It's like the rich people in India in the old days, the Rajah's. They used to buy the services of a guru. The guru would live in the palace. But he was always summoned at the kings pleasure, at the Rajah's pleasure. When the Rajah felt spiritual he would send for the guru. And then he would send him away. And of course the guru wasn't sincere he wouldn't be there in the first place. But he did it for gifts and for money.

Spiritual life is not a bed of roses.

Nisargadatta Maharaj said, "When I was 33 years old I found my Master and I listened to every word he said with my heart. I took every word literally. Surrendered to him entirely. At the end of three years I was liberated."

Many of us here tonight always talk about being liberated. When am I going to be free. Take a look at your life. The way you live daily. And you will see why you're not liberated. If you let go completely and had no desires or wants or needs in this world then you would awaken. For when there is nothing to hold on to, you become free. But as long as you can hold onto something in this world whether it's person, place or thing. As long as you're looking to have fun, to run here to go there and you believe these things are very necessary for your livelihood for your unfoldment — you say, "I couldn't do without this, I wouldn't know what to do," can't you see now that this is what is holding you back? Your lifestyle is holding you back.

Your lifestyle maybe a sickness as an example. As long as you believe in the sickness and you're always talking about your sickness and you think your sickness rules you and overwhelms you and is going to kill you in the end then the sickness has become your guru, hasn't it? Because it is ruling you and it has power over you. It tells you how to behave, how to cry, how to feel sorry for yourself.

But look at the life of Rama Krishna, Ramana Maharshi many others. They didn't care about what the body was doing. What the body was going on with. They always were the Self, absolute reality. They were always involved in effortless pure awareness. 24 hours a day. Let the so-called body do what it wants. If it wants to be healthy let it be healthy. If it wants to be sick let it be sick. But this had absolutely nothing to do with them.

Now compare your self to that.

When some of you catch a cold I get telephone calls, "Oh I'm dying I ache all over. Can you help me. Can you heal me? I don't know what I'm going to do." You are attached to the body. And you feel the body is ruining you. It's causing you to react a certain way. The same is true with finances, funds. You have certain beliefs over these things. You believe well if you've got a lot of money in the bank, you feel safe and secure. If you have money saved, in safe deposit boxes you feel safe and secure. But if you ever have to use that money or spend it you become insane. Your security is gone.

Can't you see now how that holds you back from enlightenment? The money has been your God all these years. And when you think you have to spend to or get rid of it somehow or it gets stolen from you or you lose it somewhere, you're lost, you're gone, you're finished. The money has been your God, your Master.

Take companionship. Same thing. You believe you have to have certain companions, certain friends so you can have fun. And if you're not doing something, you're always bored and unhappy. Can the Self ever be unhappy, can the Self ever be bored? Who is bored? The Self? Of course not.

There are many of you that have to do one thing after another. One thing after another, you can't sit still. You are running from a movie, to a restaurant, to a picnic, to a bowling alley, one thing to the other. You do not want to get caught in the place between things where there is absolutely nothing to do.

While you're watching the movie you're already thinking what you're going to do after the movie because you don't want to get caught in the space in the middle where there is nothing to do. For you will have to face yourself, confront yourself! And see there is nothing to do and you don't want to do that.

Can the Self ever be lonely? Can the Self ever be afraid of losing something or gaining something?

The Self is the Self. It is self-contained absolute reality. This is what you are. Yet no matter how many times I tell you this when you step out of the door you get caught up in relativity. In maya. The world makes you react. When you come to class you feel good — as some of you tell me — but when you leave you have to go home and confront your job, your relatives, the world. You become bored frustrated.

Again like when you come to class you hear me speak about the same things again. You always think, "Maybe I'll come to class and maybe Robert will say something new. Something more profound than he ever said before." Truth is not profound. Philosophy is profound. Psychology is profound. But truth is simple.

When I say to you, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should," that should suffice. Your heart should have a warm feeling and you should feel that everything in your life is resolved. That there is nothing to fear and there is nothing to fight. But instead some of you listen to me say, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should," and you're thinking to yourself, "what is he going to say now?" More words of wisdom.

But the devotees do not think this way. The devotees do not even listen to me with their ears. The devotees are me. We're one. And whether I sit still for an hour or whether I talk or whether I sneeze, whether I stand on my head it's all the same. There is no difference because devotees do not come and listen to a lecture.

Therefore think, where are you coming from? Where are you coming from? What is going on inside of yourself? You say, "I want to be enlightened. I want to be self-realized. I want to awaken. I've been with Robert for two days now and I haven't awakened yet. It's time to find another teacher." There is no time. Forget about time. Have no reason for coming here. Just be here. If you have a purpose you will always be disappointed. If you have no purpose you are already awake.

What do you want? What are you looking for? That should be a blank. You want absolutely nothing and you're looking for nothing. You have to be very honest with yourself. You have to really see where you're at, what you do with yourself. In the last analysis awakening is between you and your Self.

When you are in deep sleep you awaken and you see yourself the way you are now. Therefore when you are in deep sleep, while awake you become liberated. How are you in deep sleep while awake? Empty mind - Hardly any thoughts. No desires. No needs. No wants. No anger. No resentments. Then you are asleep to this world.

That is what I mean when I keep telling you things like, "Be asleep while awake." You are asleep to this world just like you were asleep to the sleep world and you awoke to this world. It follows then that when you are asleep to this world you'll awaken to the real world.

So again, how do you become asleep to this world? By total surrender to the Self. When you totally surrender to the Self, to God you actually mean I'm giving up all of my fears. I'm giving up all of my desires. I'm giving up all my wants, my needs, my wisdom so-called, my knowledge. You give it all up. Then you are asleep while awake.

But if you're trying to change things or fix things and make things go your way. And running all over looking for new teachers, looking for new books. Having philosophical discussions, arguing, debating, you are not asleep to this world. That is like when you are in deep sleep and having a dream. And you become so caught up in the dream that no one can tell you it's only a dream. When you begin to let go of the dream you fall into a deep sleep without dream and then you awaken to this world. When you let go of this dream world by surrendering, by letting go, by developing a great humility, by practicing divine ignorance you have to awaken. You have to. For you're no longer holding on to a thing, then you become totally free.

That is why you can always figure out for yourself how far you've come along the path. Check yourself out daily. Take it one day at a time. Just take today and see what you've been involved in today. Where are your interests? If you think of God, God will think of you. Which simply means if you surrender everything to the Self you will awaken as the Self. But if you're amused at this world and you take it seriously. And you think the world has fun for you, games. And has things to offer you then you're stuck in maya.

I know a lot of you don't like to listen to things like this. For it means that you have to give up everything. But I'm being quite truthful with you when I tell you this. Yes, it means you have to give up everything. If you want liberation. This is really no joke. You have to give up everything you've ever believed. You have to surrender your entire life.

I'm not saying that you can't go to a movie or you can't go to a dance or you can't go to an opera or you can't enjoy yourself. But you have to be aware of who the enjoyer is. In other words do not get caught up with the things that you're doing. Always try to remember that the body will do the things it came here to do. Yet it has absolutely nothing to do with you. Check yourself out.

Try to realize that when you're sleeping and you are in deep sleep you have no wants, you have no desires. You are not trying to get rich. You are not trying to get rid of a disease. You're not trying to find boyfriends or girlfriends. You're not trying to run around enjoying yourself, the beach or whatever. You're in deep sleep. That is why when you get up from deep sleep you're happy. The first moment you get out of a deep sleep you feel refreshed. You feel good. Check yourself out and see if I'm wrong.

I don't care what problems you may think you have when you wake up from a deep sleep you always feel good. Until you start thinking! As the I comes to the brain. You become cognizant of the world, the universe and your body. But prior to that you felt wonderful. So this proves to you that when you can do this during waking state then you're asleep while awake. If you can surrender everything. Give up everything then total happiness will come by itself.

Remember that when you are totally surrendered you will feel a greater happiness, and a greater joy and a greater peace.

This is an important point.

Many of you believe and think that when you go to parties, when you go to an opera that when you go to a movie or when you go to a dance or when you go to a bar, wherever you go this gives you enjoyment. Yet the enjoyment disappears when you stop, doesn't it? When the thrill is gone and you have to go home you do not feel as happy any longer. While you are in the bar drinking yourself to death. You're cracking jokes with everybody, laughing, making believe you're having fun. But when you have to go home, you feel depressed. You feel as if there is something wrong.

This shows you that the things of this world never gave you lasting happiness. For if the movie or the bar or the drink, the friend made you happy for a while, made you feel good for a while and when the friend went away or when the drink wear off when the movie has ended you're back to yourself alone. The happiness that this gave you is gone.

It's like going to a laugh club. Where there are comedians. As long as the jokes keep coming you're happy, you're laughing hysterically. When it's over you have to confront yourself once more. You have to look at yourself. You're no longer as happy as before.

So I say to you again the things of this world can never give you lasting happiness. Lasting happiness is your very nature. But your nature has been covered up with ignorance, maya. So you believe that the world can bring you happiness and joy. You partake in this world and you become happy for a while, unhappy for a while. You feel good then you don't feel good. You go through all the ramifications of life like everybody else.

But the wise person, the Jnani doesn't have to run all over the world looking for teachers or read new books or look for new entertainment. The wise person realizes that all these things are within himself or herself. That the great reality is within himself, they are the great reality. There is no secret.

You are the one. You have always been the one. And there is a greater happiness within you than anything you can find in this world. But you have to be true to yourself. And again you have to surrender totally and give up everything that has made you happy in this world, so-called happy, not physically, mentally.

Oh there are things that you have to give up physically also. If you find you're on drugs, you drink too much, if you have bad habits, you have to work on yourself to an extent. You work on yourself by practicing self-inquiry. Who needs these habits? Who needs to get high on drugs? Who needs a drink to relax them? Who needs to be entertained by the TV or the radio, or anything else? Who needs these things? Realizing all the time it was the I. The I was fooling you all of these years. By making you believe that if you find the right mate, if you find the right guru, if you find the right book, if you find the right state to live in, right country, the right friend you will be happy. But as we learn by experience this is not the answer. The answer is within yourself. You are the answer.

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: Something I've been thinking about. On Thursday the 12th there was a discussion on karma and my understanding is that everything that happens has happened and will happen to this psychosomatic apparatus called Fred is referred to as karma. And what happens is the things that I thought were good and the things that I thought were bad are effects and they have a cause.

The implication is that the cause is something that happened in the past. This happened to this particular psychosomatic apparatus in which case I might think when something good happens and I'm being rewarded or if something bad happens and it might be that I'm being punished.

But I wonder if it's not this particular individual who ... these things just happen and I'm not to feel rewarded or punished and these things do just happen. And the famous saying, "As ye sow so shall ye reap," I wonder if it might be more accurate to say, "as it be sown so shall it be reaped," not by any so-called individual. Any thoughts on that?

R: The wise person realizes that karma exists only for the body, for the ego. Therefore the wise person inquires, "To whom does this karma come? Who is bound by karma?" And you will find out not you. But the ego. The I-thought is bound by karma. Therefore you should act as if karma doesn't even exist, even though you are bound by karma act as if it does not exist and inquire, "To whom does it exist? Who has it?" If you try to do the other way as you just explained you have a battle to fight on your hands. Because when you discover why something happened to you — that you did something before in a previous life and now this is the effect — you will lament on this, become upset over it, think about it too much and wonder what you did before in a previous life. You're wasting your energy by doing this.

The proper way is to realize, "For whom is there karma?" Not for the Self. Not for the absolute reality. Not for pure awareness. Only for the ego and there is no ego. So where is the karma? If you follow it through this way you will feel immediately happy and joyous. For you have come to the conclusion and realized that the ego does not exist. If the ego does not exist karma does not exist and you're totally free. And you're born again immediately, into a new life. No matter what happened in the past. No matter how many mistakes you made. No matter how evil you have done things or what you have done to people in the past, do not think of this. But rather think, "For whom does this come, this belief of karma and doing. Am I the doer. Am I the person who suffers from karma and have to go into the effect of things?"

I remember many years ago I was in Miami, Florida. I went to a theosophy meeting. And it was filled with about 40 or 50 old people. Some were crippled, they were always talking about their problems and they all believed one thing, "This is my karma," they said. "I have to go through my karma. I have to suffer my karma. There is nothing I can do I have to accept it." That's a bunch of baloney. Karma does not even exist. The ego does not even exist. The doer does not even exist. But to discover this for yourself you have to go back and inquire, "Then to whom does this come? Who feels these thoughts? Who feels depressed because of karma? Who believes that they're sick or poor or has some problem and this is karmic in effect? Who believes this?"

When you find out who believes this and realize that the ego who believes this does not exist, you will become totally free of the whole bowl of wax and find eternal happiness and peace.

SF: It might also be said that nothing in duality exists? (R: Nothing with what?) Nothing in duality.

R: Duality does not exist at all. There is no duality in truth, in reality. Duality is for the relative world. But there is no relative world. So for whom does the relative exist? You always go back to the basics.

If this world were real then you would have a battle on your hands. To overcome karma, to overcome past deeds and to fight for your rights and stick up for this and stick up for that. And you would have to run all over the world looking for new teachers all the time. You would become bored with the old teachers. You'd have to look for new books. You would become bored with the old books. It would never end.

When you realize and when you see, "For whom is all this? For whom is this world? For whom is this suffering? Who goes through this?" And if you're really sincere you will say, "I do." But then you will come to the conclusion, "The I does not exist. The I-thought never existed, never will exist. Has no substance, no birth," and you will find yourself totally free and liberated.

SR: Robert when you're doing self-inquiry sometimes, "To whom does this happen, etc, etc," what you've been saying. Sometimes I don't answer the question there is no answer. Can one just forget the - you know the way you explained self-inquiry is sort of a two step process. Do we just let go on the second step and just be quiet?

R: Both ways are correct. Depends how you feel at the time. Many times you want to go through the whole thing. By saying, "To whom does this come? It comes to me. Who am I?" And keep still. Other times you may say, "To whom does this come?" And realize that I does not exist and not go any further than that and just stay there. (SR: Because the way I was so stuck in the way you taught it, I would almost try almost to create an I then try to get it to go to the source, I know this is silly.) You do what you feel. (SR: Yeah.) At the time. Many times you will find that you can just sit down and not ask a question at all. There is a peace that overtakes you from perhaps the years of doing this. Where you just sit down and everything just disappears.

SR: Doesn't at times there exists a false sense of security? (R: Time?) No, no. Doesn't a false sense of security exist at times? At times you sit down and the I is just really relaxed and it's not agitated and it's almost a lazy I. It doesn't want to do self-inquiry because it feels secure. Does that make sense what I'm saying? And yet there is still duality because one is still identified with a peaceful I and then one gets agitated later on.

R: You have to go through that experience and then realize that it doesn't work and drop it. (SR: Right but when the peace is there shouldn't...what I'm saying is shouldn't at times even if you feel that peace shouldn't you just continue with self-inquiry?) No on the contrary. (SR: When you feel that peace?) On the contrary. If you're feeling real peace, the feeling is beyond self-inquiry. Self-inquiry is the method that you use to find the peace. But once you feel the peace abide in that peace. Try to go deeper into the peace. Dive deeper into the peace. Go beyond the peace.

SR: But it feels to me sometimes that there is a little I inside diving into the peace so there is still a me...it's only temporary because then later the I goes in and the I goes out. Does that make sense? (R: Yes!) There is no dissolution.

R: It makes sense because you believe it. (SR: Right.) Therefore if you believe that then you have to work on yourself to get rid of that thing. If you believe you're in false security when you find peace then you have to ask yourself, "Who feels the false security? To whom does the false security idea come?"

SD: What about asking yourself, "Who feels peace?"

R: Well if you feel the peace is not real then you can ask yourself, "Who feels peace?" (laughter) (SD: Because as long as you can feel it there is duality, is there not?) If you feel duality when you're feeling peace then you should ask yourself, "To whom does this come?" (SD: Don't you have to transcend anyone or anything feeling peace and just be peace?) You will know when you become peace. You will know whether it's real or not. As long as you have an idea that it's not real then you have to work on yourself. But when the real peace comes to you everything else will disappear. You will feel omnipresent peace everywhere. You will feel the whole universe as the peace you're feeling and you will know. But if you have to ask the question, "Do I feel peace," then it's not peace.

SD: No I was referring to asking not, "Do I feel peace," but "Who feels peace?"

R: Well if you have to ask the question then you're not feeling the real peace. As long as you have to ask that kind of a question then you still have to work on yourself. But as I said when the real peace comes you'll know it. For it will transcend everything. (SD: Including feeling?) Yes, everything. (SD: Because there will be noone to feel.) You will be totally free, yes.

SJ: Don't get hung up on that one either. (laughter) (R: Well there will be noone to get hung up on.) (laughter) Yeah.

R: You will know if there is someone to get hung up on if you're feeling it with the I. Then you have to work on yourself again. But when you really transcend and when there is real peace you will not even know the word peace. You will become the ineffable peace which passes all understanding and you will know.

SL: Robert, before did you say that if we wanted to wake up we should just tell ourselves to "Wake up now!" In spite of like predestination and all these other things did you say that we should just tell ourselves to "Wake up now! Wake up!"

R: You can talk to yourself that way. See we have different moods. We feel different at different times. There are times when you can tell yourself, "Wake up! Awaken." And talk to yourself that way. There are times when you have to practice self inquiry. There are times when you could just be the witness and watch yourself. There are times when you practice the I-am meditation. It depends on your mood.

SL: Is there something that we should just tell ourselves to, "Wake up now," instead of just letting it - I have tendency to be more matter-of-fact — if I wake up I'll wake up whatever I do but I think, was there something that you said that we should still tell ourselves to wake up now instead of letting it happen whenever it happens?

R: If you're in that frame of mind. See when I talk to you about different methods do not take me very literally. Do not think that you have to work on this method forever. This is why I share all these methods with you. Feel in your heart what you have to do when you wake up in the morning. Let your heart tell you what to do. Do not make it very hard on yourself. That you have to do a certain thing and you don't feel like doing it.

In the beginning stages many people will become disgusted with practicing self-inquiry. So let it go for a while. Inquire, "Who becomes disgusted?" (students laugh) Do whatever you have to do to become free. I can't tell you to say, "Wake up now!" all the time. You walk around saying, "Wake up now. Wake up now." There are days when you don't feel like waking up. (students laugh) Be yourself. Do what comes naturally. Do not become a slave to self-inquiry. Inquire, "Who is becoming a slave to self-inquiry?" (students laugh)

SR: Robert some people say that a useful crutch to freedom is the idea of what the Buddhist call a bodhichitta or the idea of service to others versus, you know, think about others rather than yourself. Do you think that is valid? It seems like Nisargadatta says that is sort of phony?

R: For some people it is valid. There are many people who cannot practice self-inquiry. Who cannot come to the conclusion that the I-am is the only reality. So these people should be of service to humanity and do things for people rather than think of themselves all day. (SR: So you think it is a useful crutch?) For some people. You have to do whatever you feel. If you feel by being of service this will help you in your unfoldment by all means do it. Do not become the other way and feel that you have license to feel higher than other people, to feel better than other people or think you're something important and hurt others by doing certain things. Rather let go of all those feelings and all those emotions. Let go of everything. But yet if you feel that you want to help others by all means do so. That can never hurt. But do not make that your sadhana. (SR: Do you feel that at times just being morally good is helpful also, I mean just being a good person?) How can you be a good person if you're not a good person. Many of us sublimate our feelings. And we try to be good because we think we're chalking up points with God, by being good. But as Jesus said, "Only God is good." Therefore when you become God you'll be good.

SR: It's just that in the Yogi traditions they talk about the yamas, niyamas... (R: Sure.) ...Christian, you know and somebody spoke about being very pure and sometimes that is all one can really do in a situation if one wants to act a certain way then he's following the rules sometimes?

R: This is why there are different levels on the path to awakening. This is why I said self-inquiry is for mature souls. Advaita Vedanta is for people who have practiced all these things in previous lives perhaps. And they've gone through all the yamas and niyamas. They've gone through all these teachings, rajah yoga, everything, kundalini yoga.

SR: Many of the enlightened teachers don't seem to have practiced much of that at all considering all the corruption, you know, all the enlightened in the world. I mean I understand what you're saying but it's sort of rare. Most teachers break all the rules and say that's...

R: What do you care what most people do, what most teachers do? Do not concern yourself with what most teachers do. Concern yourself with the work at hand. Working on yourself, awakening. If you are sincere within yourself you will never be attracted to one of those teachers you're talking about. (SR: In my case I do self-inquiry but I have to work hard to be a good person at times.) Well don't work so hard.

SR: Well I think that it can be something I need to learn you know, I mean to learn to control my temper when I feel like hitting somebody or slashing somebody's tyres when they cut me off. And I'm attracted to self-inquiry but yet I'm not above all the people in the world that are just struggling with the basic issues, you know. You're saying it's for mature people, I love self-inquiry and at the same time I don't find myself very much more mature than anybody else, you know on a yama and niyama level.

R: Then you have to work with that. (SR: Yeah.) By all means work with whatever you have to. Do both. That is a good point. We should never fool ourselves. There are many people that become Advaita Vedantists and whatever they do they think is right. They believe I'm not doing this. They steal from other people and say, "I'm not doing this. (students laugh) This is the ego. They blame the ego for everything. I'm beyond all this." They go shop lifting in the store, they say, "This is not me. This is the personal I doing all this. And I'm not the personal I, the personal I doesn't exist. Nobody is doing it." (students laugh)

SV: Yeah but they stop saying that when the body gets put into gaol. (R: Then they say, "Who is going to gaol?") Then they say, "How come this happened to me?"

SP: As long as they don't have to do the time, who cares?

SR: Robert if you have an addiction to something is it useful to go straight against the addiction as a part of a process or how do you handle this strong desire, talking about what you spoke about before. (R: That's the hard way.) If you really want something in the world could you just do what the monks do and give it up as an exercise? Or should we indulge or do what Rajneesh said or...

R: Most of the monks you're speaking of are worse than most of the people in the marketplace. Because they are in their bodies trying to stop from doing all of these things, yet they can't. So they keep it sublimated. They have all these evil thoughts, they have lust, everything but they keep it sublimated.

I remember many years ago I went to a Zen Buddhist temple in Japan, Kyoto. And all the monks, not all the monks most of the monks at night time used to go, climb over the wall and go to a brothel... (SV: Who gave them money?) ...and would drink saki and do all kinds of things. (laughter) (SR: Did it work or...?) Their parents put them into monk-ship when they were children but everybody is different.

SJ: A lot of the reason is so that they can handle their village temple and get money. It's a job. (R: Sure.) For the Japanese or it was or something. So I think that is a very limited example. (R: Sure.)

SR: So what shall I do in my case?

R: In your case forget about everything. Forget about everyone. Simply look at yourself and realize "Who is doing this?"...

THE FASTEST AND EASIEST WAY TO AWAKEN

2nd April, 1992

Robert: Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) It is good being with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love you all unconditionally. For I can do nothing else but to love you.

Love is another word for the Self. The Self is all-pervading. The Self is consciousness. The Self is absolute reality. Therefore when I say I love you, the I which is consciousness, absolute reality, the love which is also consciousness, which is absolute reality come together into oneness. There is only one. One love, one consciousness, one I.

What I'm really saying is, "I love the Self. I am That!" We're not talking about Robert. Robert seems to be a bag of skin with bones and organs and blood circulating. Which is here to day and gone tomorrow. But the Self is omnipresence, omniscience, omnipotence and I-am is That!

When you look at me what do you see? You see an elderly gentleman - I don't know if I'm a gentleman? - You see an elderly fart sitting here, (laughter) talking to you, telling you nonsense. But I can assure that I am not that. I am not what most of you see, "I-am-that-I-am!" Again when I speak the words I-am, I am not speaking of Robert. I tell you truthfully there is no Robert. Most of you see a Robert but I tell you in truth there is no Robert. Robert never existed. There is no Robert that was born, that prevails and then disappears. There is only the one consciousness. Only the one absolute reality and I-am is That!

It is like newspaper and the print on the newspaper. When most of you read a newspaper you do not see the paper you see the print. Without the paper in the background there can be no print. But most of us have forgotten about the paper and we only see the print. We're involved with the print. Whereas when I look at the newspaper I see the substratum. The paper itself and the print is meaningless.

And so it is with consciousness. Just as the print is superimposed on the paper and we become involved in the print, so it is with the human body. The human body would not appear by itself if there was no consciousness. Consciousness is the substratum. The human body appears to be superimposed on consciousness.

Most human beings are involved in the human world, in the relative world, the material world. We forget about the paper or the substratum which is eternal bliss. Absolute reality. Effortless pure awareness. And as we grow older we become deeply involved in the world, deeper and deeper and that is all we know. We see the world as it is. But again the world in itself does not exist. The universe does not exist by itself. It is Brahman, consciousness that exists as the world.

Therefore if someone asks you, "Is the world real?" you answer, "The world by itself is unreal." For by itself it has no foundation. But the world as Brahman is real. Just as if someone asks you when you look at a newspaper, "Is the print real?" The print by itself is unreal for it would have no substance. It needs the newspaper as a background to put the print on. The same is true of consciousness in the world.

As you begin to understand this you begin to identify less and less to persons, places and things. And the deeper you go within as you identify with the substratum of all existence or consciousness you seem to become happier and happier. You become more peaceful.

There are many people who will say, "Advaita Vedanta is useless and fruitless. For it makes you want to leave everything and go to a monastery or go to a cave. And not be involved in this world at all because you begin to understand that the world is not real, it doesn't exist by itself."

This is true and also not true. There are certain beings, certain people when they attain illumination, awakening, it is true they want to be alone. They want to be by themselves. After all they have realized they are the Self of the universe. They have realized that they are Brahman. So there really is no aloneness for them. They have realized that they are the consciousness of the entire universe. And the whole universe is superimposed on them. So wherever they go, whatever they do they are infinite reality. Yet there are many others who continue with their work, with their families, with whatever they were doing before. The only difference is they have attained total bliss and total joy, they have attained illumination. And the world no longer frightens them, causes them any pain and they do not have experiences like most people do.

Yet it's very paradoxical for when you look at such people they appear to be people like yourself. This is a paradox. While they're in the body they eat, they sleep, they do all the things that you do. The one difference is that they realize that they are not the doer, they are totally happy, filled with bliss and peace and joy.

This answers the question that most people ask, "What good is attaining illumination? It appears that I'll lose everything that I have and want to run away some place and live by myself." Again this is true for some people and not true for others. But the thing that I want you to understand is that you become total joy. Why should you work toward awakening? For when you do you will no longer be the one you think you are. You will no longer be a man or a woman, a human being, a world or a God or anything. You will just no longer be.

Yet the paradox is when people look at you, you will appear to them as you were before. They will see nothing different. Yet to the one who has realized knows for sure, for certain, that he or she is not a body or a mind.

The questions asked, "How can you say there is no body when I can see, hear, touch, feel and smell this person?" The answer is who touches, who feels, who smells, who sees? The senses do not exist to an enlightened individual. The senses exist to the one who does the seeing. So from your viewpoint, from your perspective you are seeing a human being due to the fact that you think of yourself as a human being. Therefore you're only going to see yourself. What you are you see in others.

This is the reason again I said in the beginning, "I love you unconditionally," because the surface of you does not phase me. But I see you as the Self. There is no difference between you and me. The only difference there appears to be for some reason is that I realize that I am not the print. I am the newspaper. The paper without the news. Whereas you think you are the news and the print. That is why you talk so much. You're spreading news, for you think you are the news.

When one starts to go into the self deeper and deeper within and finally reaches an awakening, that one becomes the whole universe. This is what awakening is. Awakening is not selfish. There are some people who believe you awaken to a greater and bigger personality. Some people actually believe that you awaken to gigantic ego. Where you're able to do all kinds of miracles and perform all kinds of feats. Again let me remind you that there has to be someone left to do those things. When you awaken, the personal self has been destroyed. There is no one to have siddhis, no one to perform miracles, no one to be clairvoyant, no one to tell fortunes. All that has been completely annihilated and only the substratum remains.

And again when you say, "Well this Jnani looks just like I do. He eats, he sleeps, does everything that I do. Why is he or she different?" It is like a dream. You are living in a dreamworld and the awakened one is not. Everything you say, everything you do, everything you see, everything you feel is from your point of view. You can only see truth to the level that you have risen yourself. What you are is what you see. As long as you're still feeling conditions. Your feelings become hurt. You're able to look at people and judge them. You feel the world pressing in on you. You see others as reality. You have not arrived yet, you're not cooked. When you're totally cooked everything becomes like a movie. You realize that your body that appears to be a body is also a part of the movie. But you are aware that you have no body. You never had a body. Even when you were not illumined you were not the body. Only you're able to see that now. And you become all-pervading, omnipresent.

But for the average person as far as they are concerned if they ask you, "Why should I practice self-inquiry? Why should I practice Advaita Vedanta principles?" Simply answer and say, "Because you'll become happier than you ever did in your life. You will become happy just the way you are. Without things or with things, without people or with people, without work or with work. It doesn't make any difference what stage the world is going through. Whether it's the dark ages or the golden age. You will always be the same, even minded, in total peace, pure joy. This is the reason we try to become illumined. That is how you talk to people who ask you these questions.

The world in itself becomes nonsensical when you look at it from the eyes of a Jnani. How can we take the world to be real? First of all everything changes from day to day. All through the ages we have man's inhumanity to man. We have cataclysms. All kinds of things take place on this earth. People die by the millions, people are born by the millions, people come and go. Animals come and go. Cities come and go. Countries come and go. How can you take this to be real? Most people do not even like to think about these things. It's too mind boggling. Just to think that you were not the same person when you were born, you grow older and older then you seem to disappear. That alone should make you think and wonder if there is any reality to hold onto or if there is anything that does not change.

Unfortunately maya works in such a way that when we're young we don't seem to care about these things. When we're teenagers all we want to do is have fun. This is the way of maya. To befuddle you. To keep you in darkness. To make you believe that the body and affairs are real.

There are very few young people who become involved in this kind of teaching. There are very few old people who become involved in this kind of teaching. (laughter) There are very few people who become involved in this teaching. Sometimes when life pushes you around and the rug is pulled from under you that is when the average person gets involved in a teaching like this. They say there must be something else. But blessed is the young person who gets involved in this kind of a teaching just because they realize that the world gets you nowhere. Think of the reason when you got involved with this teaching. What were you looking for?

It is most interesting when people get involved in a teaching like this in the beginning, they do so because they want to improve their affairs. They want to either get healthy, they've been sickly. They want to get rich. They want companionship. They want something. They want to improve their affairs. So they get involved in a teaching like this.

If they can take it for a while and go through the teaching the day will come when they're no longer interested in attaining anything. Yet everything always works out for them in the right way. They no longer have an interest in improving their humanhood. They come to the conclusion that they have to transcend their humanhood to become free. Whereas if you're involved in metaphysical movements you try to improve your humanhood. To what avail? It gets you nowhere.

The wise person begins to realize at an early age that there is nothing permanent in this world but change. Begins to search, goes through many paths. Usually begins with their own religion. Then they may get involved in yoga, spirituality. Then they become bhaktas. They surrender and surrender leads to Jnana. Leads to oneness.

You begin your Jnana training by trying to find the source of the I. Concentrating on the source of the I. Therefore you pick a place which is usually on the right side of the chest. And this is where the source, or God, or realization lives. And you try to follow the I-thought. You see where it goes, what it does.

The best time to do this is in the morning, when you have your first thoughts. You try to catch the I-thought as you awaken. You do this by inquiring, "To whom does the I come?" Realizing all the time when the I-thought goes from the heart to the brain, the body belief becomes prevalent. When the body becomes prevalent in your mind then you begin to see other bodies and the universe becomes factual. Everything appears. All of this happens instantaneously. This is why it's sort of difficult to catch it. Yet if you persist you will be able to do it. As soon as you awaken before you're able to think. The I-thought has left the centre of the heart which is the source, has flown to the brain. You become cognizant of your body and then you become cognizant of other bodies and to the world and the universe. All this happens instantaneously.

That is why you have to inquire, "To whom does this come?" When you're saying that to yourself in the morning you're actually saying, "To whom does this universe appear? To whom does the body appear? To whom does this world appear? To whom do others appear?" Then you realize that, "I see this." It is the I that beholds the appearance. In other words, "I am not I. I-am. But I am not the personal I that appears, the who am I?" When you say the words, "Who am I?" A reversal begins. By reversal I mean the I, the personal I goes back from the brain into the Self. Into God on the right side of the chest. When that happens you are liberated. Therefore the whole practice is to catch the I-thought as it goes back into the chest, into the source, into the Self. Then only the Self will appear. Everything else will disappear. This is the work you do. This is the job you have.

Yet no matter how many times I say this to you most people will not do it. They either think they're too busy, they don't have the time or they believe they can't do this self-inquiry. Yet this is not true. It can really be done by anybody. If they will take the time and the effort to try it. Without giving up in a couple of days. I know many of you have tried for a day or two and have told me everything happens so fast. I get up and become aware of the world immediately. But I say to you again, if you persevere the day is going to come when you awaken, it has to!

This is really the fastest and easiest way to awaken.

I will explain it again, it's easy. Begin to practice tomorrow morning when you get out of bed. When you go to sleep tonight tell yourself, when you get up in the morning you will immediately think of the source, the Self. Which abides on the right side of the chest. If you tell yourself before you go to sleep you will awaken with the thoughts that follow. As soon as you open your eyes before you become conscious of yourself, inquire, "Who am I?" When you inquire, "Who am I?" you're really asking what is the source of the I. And keep still. As soon as something comes into your mind, the body, ask, inquire, "To whom does this come?" In other words you are inquiring or asking, "Where did my body come from? I wasn't aware of my body when I was sleeping. But now I am aware of this body. Where did it come from?"

That is what I mean when you inquire, "To whom does this come? Where did my body come from?" You try to become still as long as possible. Then of course it comes to you, "Why this comes to me. I feel the body." Remember what this means also when you make that statement. You are in reality saying, "That the I-thought feels this body-phenomena. The I-thought feels it not me but the I." The real you does not feel this, the I feels this. Therefore you inquire again, "To whom does this come? To whom does the I come?" Again you realize, "It comes to me I feel this." Then you can say, "Then who am I?" In other words you are asking yourself, "Who is this I-thought. What is the source of the I-thought?" And keep still.

If you can go this far in the morning when you get up you've come a long way. If you're able to do this alone you have come a long way. The secret is to persevere. Do not do it one day or two days or a week or a month. Who knows how long it will take? But do not think of this. Do not wonder when it's going to happen, when you're going to awaken. Just do it. Make it part of your daily routine.

It's just like when you were a little kid you had to learn the multiplication table. And then when you woke up in the morning you recited the multiplication table. Until you had it down pat. This is the same thing. Keep inquiring. And the day will come when you become liberated. For liberation is your very nature. You are that and all is well.

Feel free to ask questions.

SV: Robert I don't know how clear this question will come. You're saying that in the morning the I comes from the heart and it goes up to the brain and you say, the words is cognized and the body is cognized and you're also saying it's instantaneous. But I mean is it fast or really instantaneous. Is there a time for you to question what's happening or does the question really come afterwards?

R: The question slows down the procedure. (SV: But by the time that you question it's already happened. The words...) (R: Yes.) (SV: ...so your question comes afterwards?) That is why you question. (SV: Right, thank you.) If it happened immediately and you were able to follow it you wouldn't need to question. (SV: Umm?) There would be no need for you to question. The only reason you are questioning is because it's happened. If you were able to catch it there would be nobody left to question. For by catching it the I-thought which is the ego has returned to the heart. (SV: So it's to remind yourself to question it?) As you question it...

SV: Okay so this is sort of a hypothetical question. Supposing if someone was standing next to your bedside and who can tell exactly when you're waking up and supposing at that second they say, "Well tell yourself the question, would that awake you?" Kind of remind you to do that? If you got a gramophone that starts playing at the moment.

R: It would happen too fast. The relationship between the ego and the self happens so fast that before you turn on the gramophone you're already the ego. You have become the ego. (SV: Okay.) So you question and inquire, "To whom does it come?" Again remember if you were able to catch it then you've become liberated. And there is no need to question anything. You question because you believe you are the body. You question because there are other bodies and you're living in a world. That is why you question. If you were able to catch it there would be no need to question. (SV: Because you would recognize it then?) You would be That. You would become pure being. The Self. All the questioning, all the sadhana's are for the ego. All the spiritual practices are for the ego. Self-inquiry is for the ego.

SX: Robert you mentioned something about, we don't have to worry or think about fortune tellers or people who are star readers, so on and so forth. Would you make a comment about, for instance a person like Nostradamus that he can see the future, he can see the body moving, making activities and so on and so forth. Or would you say that he can read peoples minds. For instance sometimes you will feel like you're talking to some person and you would have some kind of instinct or some feeling what they are just about to say. Would you have a comment on that?

R: This is part of the occult practices. Your real Self has no beginning, no end, no past and no future. When you look into the future you are on the mental level. This has to do with the mind and this is all changeable. For instance somebody tells your future and tells you are going to be rich and become a millionaire by 1986. When 1986 comes around you become a millionaire. But they didn't tell you that you have to pay taxes and if you do not pay your taxes they'll put you in jail. And then you lose all your money. And all kinds of things happen to you. They just told you the future that you're going to be a millionaire.

Anything in the occult, fortune telling, futures, past, this is all nonsense. What you want to do is go beyond that. When you are looking to the future you believe that you are a human being. You believe you are a person. And if you're a person you going to have all kinds of experiences. Good experiences, bad experiences, all kinds of experiences.

Nostradamus saw the future what good did it do? Nostradamus was able to predict Hitler and what would happen to the Jews and everything else. What good did it do? It didn't stop anything. He was just able to see what was going to happen. Some of the things he saw were right some of the things were wrong. But what good is this? We're not interested to see what is going to happen. We want to get off the world. We want to transcend the world, transcend the body. Rise above conditions, rise above things. And become completely and totally free and liberated.

Then we're in a different category. We're in a completely different category. We have become the entire universe. We're no longer a body. You're no longer a seer. It's gone, disappeared. You are a God. You have become the absolute reality. So predictions of the future are a waste of time. Fortune telling, psychics are a waste of time.

SX: Well I don't mean that I am contemplating that prediction would be happening or so on, so forth. What I'm asking was though, is it possible that human minds, ego, has different capacities that can see the future. Is it possible or is it fake and all baloney.

R: No it's possible, sure. The mind is very powerful. And the mind can be trained to do anything. But this is all on a mental level. The mind can see all kinds of things. Can become all kinds of things.

SD: Are you saying then that whatever can be foreseen like that is still a part of maya or the illusion? (R: Of course, certainly.) So anything someone predicts about the physical world would still be false. (R: Yes.) Even if it came — to quote — "true?"

R: Of course. Because you have to take everything that comes with it. There is no such thing in this world as perfection. (SD: Umm-hmm.) There is no one who lives a perfect life in this world. There is no perfect condition, where everything goes your way and you're living in heaven. This is for children. It does not exist.

The way the world works is karmically you achieve the things that you're achieving because in a past life you have earned these things. But when that karma is finished you keep going in a different direction. It is like a pendulum. The pendulum swings in one direction then has to go back to the other direction. This is duality.

So you've had good karma and you come into this world a multimillionaire where you have no financial problems. But then there is sickness. There are people who kidnap you, who kill you, all kinds of things can happen. Which is also your karma. Everything is karmic. What I'm trying to say is that if you play with the world you will always be disappointed. The world can never give you eternal peace, eternal happiness, eternal joy. It is only when you transmute and transcend this world that you will have permanent peace and permanent joy.

SF: It seems Robert as though karma was happening to an individual. If something bad happens to me tomorrow, it's something I, Fred did two hundred years ago. My thought was that karma is the effect and has a cause, in so-called time. In other words if something bad happens I, Fred am not me being punished or if something good happens I, Fred am not being rewarded, it's just something that happens. In other words, the number of people on earth is always growing, where does the new people come from that karma is happening to only people who lived before? It's kind of confusing when you think about it.

R: When you think of karma it becomes very confusing when you think of the ways and means of karma and how it works. Before, you have lived many lives... (SF: I have? Or lives have been lived, led?) Lives have been lived. In truth this doesn't exist. In reality there is no such thing. The more you think about these things the more you get involved in these things. Do not believe yourselves when you think about past lives. But as you believe yourself as a human being then karma does exist. This is why I say to you, do not look at yourself as a human being. Do not see yourself as a mortal. For if you do you've got to deal with karma. But in truth there is no karma there is no mortal being. Therefore the things that happen to you in your life do not question it too much, drop it! That is why we had this lesson when I told you to "drop it!"

There are yoga groups and spiritual groups that become so involved in karma and that is what they always talk about and that's all they talk about. This is my karma, I'm going through my karma. This becomes your Master and keeps you back. This is another form of maya. The grand illusion. Calling this part of the grand illusion. So, when something happens to you that you don't like even though it may be karmic do not go into the details of it, just drop it!

In other words take your mind off the condition any way that you can. Lift up your mind to a higher plateau, to a higher level, by starting to realize the Self. By questioning, "To whom does this condition come? Who feels this? I do. Who am I?" So do not dwell on karma too long. Drop it! (SF: Drop it, anything in duality. Drop everything.) Drop everything exactly. Especially karma. (laughter)

SK: Robert when you say, "Dropping it!" It's like not getting...not letting your mind take you anywhere no matter what it comes up with, no matter what it sees outside of yourself. Whatever condition or effects, whatever is happening. What you said before, it's all in your own mind. What you see out there is all in your own mind, it's all your perception. It may not be that way. That's the way you see it. And I'm creating this. I'm still caught up in the mind and I'm trying to separate myself from my own conditioning. My own perception of the way I see everything. And most of the time it's not even the way I see it. I mean I'm trapped in my own thinking. As far as the mind goes and I feel just acknowledging that, the fact of asking, "Who it is?" there has been a lot of freedom for me, you know, and I can really rise above things that are happening to me, wherever my mind is taking me sort of a "drop it" and let it go. (R: That's a good point.) In other words there is really nothing happening outside of myself? (R: Right.) It's all in my head. It's all my own conditioning of thoughts?

R: Right, exactly. Stop the mind as fast as you can. When the mind begins to think about your life, about situations, about conditions, try to catch it. Do not allow it to carry on. Drop it! immediately.

SF: I have another question. On sunday I quoted a little Zen Buddhist scripture that I thought was apropos and you asked me if I realized it, I think that was your question and it's not clear in my mind what you were asking me after I made that quote. I'm interested to understand your question.

R: So what's the question? (SF: What was your question?) (laughter) You tell me your question first. (SF: You asked me something I don't know what it was.) You expect me to remember what you asked me? (SF: No but I can give the quotation again.) Go ahead Fred, what is the question? (laughter) (SF: My question is what was your question? You want the quote?) The quote, yes. (SF: Yes or no!) Yes go ahead. (SF: Okay, Buddhist scripture. "By oneself an evil is done. By oneself one suffers. By oneself evil is left undone. By oneself one is purified. The pure and the impure stand and fall by themselves. Noone can purify another." And you asked me something I can't remember what it was.) That's a good quote I agree with it. (SF: You agree with the quote?) Sure. (SF: That's good. Well let's leave it there.) (laughter) (SH: Hallelujah.)

SC: What is the source? The Buddha huh? It's a good source. (R: Yes. Why argue with the Buddha.) (laughter) Well you've been saying part of that this evening.

SK: I just read something that Einstein said whatever that's worth. He said - I can't quote it like Fred can - but something on the field and matter, and the field is the only reality. Which is what you're saying of the paper and the print.

R: We go beyond the field. What is the source of the field? He was talking of the field of energy. But where did the field of energy come from? It came from your mind. From Einstein's mind. We have to go beyond that, beyond everything. (SK: I felt like the field was God's laboratory.) It could be a baseball field. (students laugh)

SG: Robert, talking about the Buddha earlier, the Buddha said, he finally just said well it was up to everybody to work out their own stuff. It seems judging on my experiences here this last week that I would be in pretty bad shape. It seems that the only assessment I can really draw on is that I'm only a reaction machine. This about not reacting is really beyond me. I feel that I used to feel much more detached years ago than I do now. With all this studying and going to seminars and talks and everything. It's gotten much worse.

R: Sure because you're going into all kinds of teachings. Make it simple for yourself. Do one teaching. Empty the mind. That is all you have to do. When the mind is empty you will be your Self. (SG: That's what I find difficult because it's not now, now. Now is easy. But when you go about business during the week. You seem to get pummeled by the world out there.) This is where self-inquiry comes in. Remember to remember to ask the question, "Who is getting pummeled? To whom does the world come?" And realize it comes to I. It's the personal I who feels this. And you are not that I at all. You are the source of the I.

Remember to do this during the day, during waking hours, during sleeping hours. Just practice this alone and it will take you home. Do not make it complicated. Simply realize that you have to empty the mind completely, totally and you will be free. You empty the mind by inquiring, "To whom does the mind come?" As you persevere and you do this gently, easily, without strain, you will go deeper and deeper and deeper until one day you will be free.

But many people have so many teachings that they're into that it becomes very confusing. For you don't know what teaching to follow. You've read so many books, heard so many teachers, been to so many classes that you want to give up the whole thing and I don't blame you. (laughter) There is really no teaching. There is no teacher, there is no teaching. Keep your life simple. Do not allow your mind to run away and tell you all kinds of things. Grab your mind and bring it back to the source.

SF: I'm wondering about a contrast between the waking state and the dream state. In the waking state I have an idea that what I do or say might have an effect on what happens. And that I should be able to control things. But in the dream state I don't recall in a dream having that idea that I should be able to control anything that happens to me in the dream. In other words there is less or no ego in the dream state whereas in the waking state I think I should be able to control things.

R: Perhaps in the dream state you're not evolved so far to be able to think about controlling things. (SF: I'm sorry?) In the dream state perhaps you're not evolved to the point where you're able to control the mind, to be able to practice self-enquiry, to do anything. Because in the dream state perhaps you're just a human being like everybody else. And not come upon teachings that have told you how to control the mind. So you do not do this in the dream state. Just like many years ago in this state, the waking state so-called. You were not involved in teachings. You're just a human being going about your business. So also in the dream state you are a human being going about your business. You're not getting to the point in the dream state when you have a teaching or where you're practicing to have sadhana, that's all.

SD: Well would that be less evolved or maybe more evolved because it seems that we're less evolved when we get so caught up in the mind. (R: Both of them are false. The dream state and the waking state are both false.) It just seems that if I interpreted what Fred was saying, it seems things happen more spontaneously in the dream state and this seems to me more pure or spiritually evolved than when we're constantly thinking about it.

R: Not really because what you're doing in the dream state is the same as when you were say a little girl. You were just going about your business and having different experiences and you never even thought about the mind or controlling the mind. But there has to come a time in your life as you grow spiritually when you begin to see you have to control your mind completely and transcend the mind. And go through these experiences that you're going through now and get this happening to you. But in the dream state perhaps you have not reached that as yet. So you're just having physical, material experiences in the dream state.

SD: But didn't Christ say to become as little children isn't that what he was referring to? It seems to me like the more we think even about controlling the mind the more we're caught up in maya, rather than the spontaneity of a child.

R: If you can have the spontaneity of a child and awaken that way that is great. But how many people can do this. Therefore the teaching of self-inquiry was given to grown ups. When they're no longer a child and they've lost that spontaneity. To be able to go back again and become like little children.

SF: There is no real reason to fret about either one?

R: No, because they're both false. The dream state is false. The waking state is false. One may be advanced and one may not be advanced. There are people who have high spiritual dreams and there are people who have average dreams, just like the waking state. In the waking state there are people who have high spiritual practices, there are people who do not have any spiritual practices. There are all kinds of people going through all kinds of experiences. In the dream state and in the waking state. But they are both false.

JNANA-MARGA, BHAKTI-MARGA AND KARMA-MARGA

5th April, 1992

Robert: ...shanti, shanti, peace. Greetings and salutations. It is wonderful to be with you again. This beautiful Sunday afternoon. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place. My heart is filled with joy when I look at you. For you are all really evolving to a higher state of consciousness. You're all doing very well. You're filled with happiness and peace.

I love you all with all my heart. Because of this, because of the exuberance and the warmth that you show forth we're going to have another day of satsang. We're going to add an extra day. Which will be on Saturday. From 1 to 4 in the valley.

Remember the Indian family that came here one Sunday? We're going to be at their house from 1 to 4. It will give you an extra day to come if you desire. It will be relatively different than this to an extent. But I will not make speeches and I will not talk too much. It will be like Ramana Ashram, where you come in, sit down, leave whenever you like, ask questions. And we sit in the silence together. We will have chanting. Ed will give you further information when we have announcements.

What do I teach? What am I sharing with you?

Many centuries ago, thousands of years ago some Sages got together and through their own revelations divided the universe in four sections. Like a piece of cheese. Each section received a name. Each section was a different age in time and space. According to that tradition we are now in the Kaliyuga stage. We are in the darkness coming into the light. The Kaliyuga started approximately thirty-five hundred years ago. And this stage lasts approximately to two hundred and fifty-thousand years.

So what do we care about this? (students laugh)

SK: We've got thirteen thousand to go. (laughter)

Robert: The point I'm trying to make is that the Sages understood that at this age the way to realization, the way to unfoldment, the way to liberation, the easiest way is through namah japa, the chanting of God's name. This they say was the thing to do in this age. This is the meditation to do in this age. Namah japa, chanting of God's name. As an example, "Sri Ram, Jai Ram, Jai Jai Ram." This is what human beings were supposed to do in this age to awaken.

As the years went by people such as Buddha, Shankara, Jesus, some others, people that we know about like Sri Ramana Maharshi, Nisargadatta Maharaj and others including myself came to conclusion that what is needed in this age is a combination of teachings.

Jnana Marga, the path of wisdom is the highest stage of all yogas. That combined with bhakti Marga, the path of devotion and karma Marga, the path of service. These are the stages, these are the principles that we have to learn and understand. Therefore what I do is teach those three methods together, combined.

When you teach Jnana Marga by itself as many so-called beings, gurus are doing today it becomes a bunch of rhetoric. It builds up the ego, it doesn't destroy it. Jnana Marga by itself becomes cold and calculating. People start to feel as if they are superior to others. It is called also the talking school. Where people talk to each other debate issues about Jnana Marga. Get involved in heated discussions, debates, arguments and you get absolutely nowhere.

If you teach and you learn bhakti Marga, the path of devotion by itself you can become a fool. Where you become devoted to all the statues and all the trees and become devoted to all the gurus and you have just blind devotion, without knowledge. So that is not sufficient.

When you practice karma bhakta, the path of service to humanity. You become the servant of other bodies. The servant of the people. Yet you become confused because you don't really know who to help. You really don't know to whom to give service to. There are so many poor people, homeless people, deprived people, whom shall you serve? And again you become confused. But when you combine all of them together, Jnana Marga, bhakti Marga and karma Marga you have a beautiful teaching.

For as you are beginning to unfold as you begin to go forward on the path. You are of service to humanity. You become a devotee of the Self and you realize "I am that I am." In other words you understand the highest Jnana teachings. That your true nature is absolute reality. You are pure effortless awareness. But at the same time you realize that you do not understand it thoroughly yet perhaps you have not come to the conclusion that you are enlightened. So you practice the rest. Karma yoga, bhakti yoga. You become a beautiful person. You become a genuine person. No phony airs about you. No showing off in any way. You develop humility and humbleness.

You understand what Jesus said when he meant...what he meant when he said, "The first shall be last and the last shall be first." If you believe you know anything then you fall into the ditch. When you develop humility and you don't know anything you practice divine ignorance, then you stand up tall and you're known by beings as being a pure being.

Look at your own life and see what's happened to you all these years. The many teachings you've gone through. The friends you've had and left. The places you've been to. And now you're all here. What are you doing here? Where are you going? What is the truth about you? These questions have no answer.

You get to the point where you stop asking yourself questions. Where you simply watch yourself, you observe yourself. You look at the way your mind thinks. You watch your bodily functions. And you do absolutely nothing. When I say you do absolutely nothing I mean you, yourself as a person have nothing to do. Yet something takes over within you, a power, a presence. The power that knows the way. The power that makes the sunshine. Everything responds to the sun. Everything grows expands, is born, dies, is born again into a different atmosphere. You observe all of these things. You do not react to them. You realize death, birth, sickness are all the same, there is no difference. There is no differentiation. Everything is the same.

To whom is it different? It is only different when you begin to think about it. But as you hold your mind in check and do not let your mind go further than your nose. Nothing ever happens to you again. By nothing ever happens to you again I mean, no matter what transpires you leave it alone. It has no power over you. It cannot hurt you. For you no longer think about it. Only what you think about can hurt you. Only what you are aware of has power over you. If you stay within the Self and are aware of the Self all of the time how can anything in this world frighten you? Or hurt you or do anything to you? This world can only hurt those people, those beings who think about things.

This is a very important point to understand.

As long as you think about things. Things change. Things are never the same. You will always be hurt. You have to be hurt because you are invoking the laws of duality which are ever present. But as you check your mind and stop it from going forward. As you become introverted and the mind keeps going back, back, back. The true happiness, the true love, the true peace shows itself in your life.

I can never reiterate enough that the things of this world will continue to go on as they do but they will not affect you, they will not bother you, they will not annoy you, they will not frighten you. Again it is only when the mind goes out. When the mind leaves the body when it expands that the whole universe is created with all its manifestations of good and bad. When you begin to realize you are not the mind that goes out and does all these things. The mind will begin to recede, will turn backwards into the heart. You are in control. You're in charge. You are the one that has everything to do with this. No one else.

You must practice self-inquiry.

When I tell you many times to awake. To wake up. To become totally free. This is difficult for most beings in the Kaliyuga stage. There are people who have done this but they are very few. Self-inquiry is usually the best method in this age for awakening. For it transcends the ego and sets you free.

Many of us will become self-realized before we leave the body. And there will be no coming back and no going out again. Remember the way to this self-realization, to this awakening is only by quietening the mind. And all the methods we discuss and use is to quiet the mind.

There are many of you who practice various forms of yoga. Hatha yoga, pranayamas, kundalini yoga. All these things are good to an extent they make you peaceful. They make your body healthy but they do not bring you to self-realization. The only thing that will bring you to self-realization is when you empty the mind. And you can see this now. When the mind is filled with practices, with meditations, it's just another form of thought. It's a higher form of thought. That is all it is. There has to be somebody to be doing these things. That somebody is the ego. It is the ego that tells how good you are in meditation. How you can make your mind one-pointed. But you fail to realize that the proper way is to get rid of the ego that does this. If the ego is totally transmuted and transcended there will be nobody left to practice any form of meditation or yoga or anything else. Think how easy this is, it's not hard.

You do not have to go through any rituals. You simply have to make the mind quiescent. Quiet the mind totally and completely. This should be your goal. You should remember this always. By saying, "All I have to do to awaken is to quiet my mind. That's it!" There is nothing else you have to do. But the way to quiet the mind seems to be a problem for some of us.

If we would just watch the mind as soon as we get out of bed in the morning and see which direction our mind is going and then drop it! Let go of it. Do not follow it along with the thoughts. Do not get involved in all the thoughts. Simply watching the mind will cause it to slow down. When you become aware that you are not the mind and the mind is functioning by itself the mind will begin to slow down. But when you identify with the mind. When you identify with all the things the mind is thinking about, you know what happens you become fearful, frustrated, sad, upset or you become happy about some event that is going to take place today or tomorrow. All this keeps you back from realization.

Therefore the best practice for this would be self-inquiry. Again you simply ask yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking this way? Who is feeling these thoughts? I am. Who am I? What is the source of the personal I that feels everything everyday?" And keep still. Feel how wonderful you are and how good you feel when your mind is quiet. When the thoughts are very slow in coming to you. Or they stop coming at all. Feel how good you feel. When there is no one left to think, you are free. As long as the thinker is there, telling you this and telling you that. Showing you this and showing you that. You are bound to the earth. To maya. But as you refuse to listen to your mind you evolve, you expand.

This doesn't mean that your work will not get done. Your work will always get done without you thinking of it. Since you are not your work, you are not the mind, you are not the world, you will be completely out of the picture. Yet you will also be doing this at the same time.

Again this is very paradoxical. It appears that there are two of you. It's an appearance. There is only one but it appears as if there are two. There's the one which does not identify with the world or the universe or people places and things. And there is the one who does and continues with the momentum of the body moving along. Yet these are only one. There is only one. Noone is really doing anything. Yet everything gets done.

It's like in the growth of a tree. The tree doesn't take thought about what it's doing. It has no idea what is going on. Yet the branches come out. The leaves come out. The fruit comes out. And the tree is growing, expanding. Yet it has no idea what is going on.

In the same way you will do the work that you came to this planet to do. You will continue with your affairs and doing everything you do but then you are not doing it. There is noone doing anything. I realize it's difficult to comprehend this. That you're doing and then again you're not doing. Yet this is exactly what is happening. You do not have to think about this. You just have to be. Be yourself. Love everyone, love everything yet leave everything alone.

Let us practice this now. Close your eyes and watch the mind thinking. Observe the mind. The mind is clear and quiet. Look at that. Watch it. As soon as the mind starts to think about anything makes no difference what it is, inquire within yourself, "To whom does this come? To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I think them." I is the root cause of all the thinking of all the thoughts. Now you begin to examine this I-thought. You examine it thoroughly.

"Where does this I-thought come from?" You ask. "What is the source of the I? I am." Yet the I is telling me something else. The I is telling me that I am this and I am that, but I just am. If I-am then where does this elusive I come from that tells me something else? That tries to tell me that there are problems, there is horrendous conditions going on in this world. There is a world. There is a body. There is a mind. It is always the I that does this. It is the I-thought that tells me these things. What is the source of this I-thought? Where did it come from? Who gave it birth? And you keep still.

Sort of imagine the I-thought returning to the chest, the heart. The I-thought which is also the mind returns to the Self. There are no longer any thoughts. The thoughts have all returned with the I to the Self. Now you are pure consciousness. Absolute reality.

As thoughts come to you and they try to deny this by bringing up various subjects, again inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? Where did they come from? Who gave them birth? I did. So the I is the cause of these thoughts, these feelings, these fears. What is the source of this I? That brings to me all of these thoughts and feelings and emotions?"

SB: Robert in our last talk a few weeks ago on Thursday you said if we had any purpose we will always be disappointed and if we have no purpose we're already awake. That is really a profound statement. Can you go into that?

R: What else is there to say? (laughter) If you have a purpose you're bound. You're bound to the purpose. Your mind bounds you to it. When you have no purpose there is no thinker. There is noone left to do anything and you're free. (SB: So the ego is the one the en- ity the purpose.) The ego always has a purpose. The mind always has a purpose. The mind wants to achieve this and to achieve that. To become famous, to have all kinds of beautiful things in the house. To buy new cars, to do everything. But when the mind dies there is noone left to do these things. And you have the happiness that is real. That does not come from things. The true happiness comes from the Self. That noone can ever take away from you. This is your real nature. This is what you really are. Unalloyed happiness.

SL: Robert earlier you were talking about three different ways, three different - you said to get to the highest path, there is devotional and there is the karmic and you said a combination of all these paths that we can use to help us free ourselves. (R: Umm.) And the highest path is very intimate, the devotional is following with no mind with no guidance or direction or whatever. Can you talk more about that? Or things we really need to know. Do we really need to think in order to... (R: Do we really need to think?) ...yeah I guess that's what I think creative thinking is. The highest path, in my mind, I translated that to thinking versus devotional just doing. Doing minus cerebral and the other is...

R: The highest path of Jnana is no thinker left to think at all. Nobody is home. There is a total blank. There is no one around to do any thinking or preparing anything or trying to solve a problem or trying to do anything. At that stage you're totally free.

When you devote yourself to the Self, when you become a devotee of the Self, this means that you surrender all of your fears, your frustrations, your goals, your needs, your lacks, your limitations, everything is totally surrendered to the Self. This is devotion. (SL: Versus to surrendering to a guru or someone else.) You are the guru. The guru is within you. You give up everything. You surrender everything. You no longer have any needs of your own. You have no wants, no desires.

SH: That's the same as being noone around. Nobody home?

R: Yes exactly. There is no difference.

SL: But from that devotional stage we try to move up to the other stage, the highest path?

R: They become the same thing. They're all one. (SL: What about the karmic path you were saying?) The Karmic Marga path is when you give yourself away to people. When you give yourself away to helping the world become a better world. Even though the world is a mirage and the world does not exist. As you give yourself away you change. You change into that being that realizes there is noone to give away, there is nothing to do, there is noone to really help. Yet you're helping, you're at service to humanity. So this brings you there also. For you have gotten rid of the ego.

The ego tells you that I have to help myself. The ego keeps telling you I'm important. I need this and have to have that. I get no respect. (laughter) I want people to love me and tell me how great I am. (laughter) Tell me how good I am. (SL: That sort of sounds to me like different ways to try to achieve total nothingness?) And you do not really have to try to achieve it you already are that. You simply have to remove the conditions that bind you.

SL: That is partly why you sometimes say, "Well just do whatever you feel like, whichever path. If you feel like saying, drop it, do it. If you feel like self-inquiry, do that. If you feel like saying, I-I or whatever just do it?"

R: There is a time to do all that, true. But don't get caught up in those paths also. Do not get caught up in anything. Simply do what you have to do when you have to do it and then drop it! (students laugh)

SC: Don't be the doer. (R: Right.)

SD: Robert, Michelangelo once said that God created his sculptures that all he did was chip away the extra marble. I think that is what we're trying to do with the Self, you know is just chip away the extra marble because the Self is there. (R: Exactly.) It's just what's hidden. (R: Exactly.)

SV: Why does Michelangelo say anything? (laughter)

SF: In one sense in the path of devotion there is someone who is being devoted. (R: Yes.) And in the path of self service there is someone performing the service but in the path of knowledge there is nobody doing anything.

R: Yes but the other paths comes to that place too. (SF: Yeah I know, different ways to looking at it.) Different paths to go on which you are inclined to do. We have some of us who have an inclination to be devoted to God. Some of us have an inclination to help humanity, to be of service to humanity. Some of us have an inclination to die to the ego. So whatever our own inclinations, that is what we should do. (SF: Whatever feels right for the individual?) That's a statement you have to analyze. You can't really say, "Whatever feels right." What if it feels right to go out and shoot somebody? (students laugh) This is what I mean when we get into the talking school of Jnana. We say, "Whatever feels right, do it." But you have to clarify that. The only thing that feels right is to get rid of the ego. (SF: One person will be inclined toward one path more than another...) Yes. (SF: ...in combination) That's true. (SF: that is all I really wanted to know.) Yes.

SE: Is there a path for couch potatoes? (R: Yes sure. The path of laziness. The path of stupidity.)

SL: That also leads to nothingness? (R: The path of stupidity?) (students laugh)

SD: The couch potato-ism. (laughter) (SC: It leads to half-baked-ism.) (laughter)

SG: Robert, I'm simply glad there is the Jnana path because if there was just the path of serving others and a path of devotion, I'd be a dead duck. (students laugh) (R: Why would you be a dead duck?) I'd hate to say. (laughs) I can just see that my tendency is for the Jnana path. I want to ask you question about all the groups you've had and all the groups out there. You now there seems to be this really horrible fact that hardly anybody ever gets enlightened. What I wanted to ask you is: Is there going to be one or two chosen few. Are all of us going to have one of these enlightenment party one of these days? (Students laugh) And in the past have there been many enlightened people?

R: Everybody is enlightened. But we don't know it. We keep fooling around with all kinds of nonsense, with all kinds of things to try to become enlightened but we already are enlightened. So what we have to do is to quieten the mind again. The faster you quieten the mind the faster you awaken. There will be many people who will awaken, who are awakened. Or will always be awakened. Do not look at others. Do not try to count how many people are awakened. Forget about all that.

When you see yourself in the right way, you will realize that everyone is awakened. Noone is asleep. Everyone is in their right place. Doing the thing that they're supposed to do. Yet you cannot judge others. Do not compare yourself with others. Do not be competitive at all. Simply do your own thing and leave everything else alone. And you will see what happens to you.

SF: You said a week or two ago that we shouldn't spend time in comparisons. I'm beginning to perhaps realize that there is not much point in comparing. Because comparing involves judging. (R: Umm.) We're told not to judge. For instance I've always had the tendency to compare Swami Vivekananda against Swami Bromananda or perhaps compare Sai Baba with Rajneesh or Pope John Paul with the Delai Lama but it's all a waste of time. (R: Of course it is, you said it.) And nothing is to be gained. (R: Nothing at all.) Even if it was a valid exercise, I don't know enough about any of those guys to compare them. (R: True.) Thank you. I know it, so it's just a kind of, maybe I can quit comparing.

R: Compare noone. (SF: Sir?) Do not even compare yourself.

SB: Robert is it possible to be partially enlightened? Because there're some teachers that seem to have tremendous wisdom, unparalleled teachings and yet seem to do the craziest things that look like it came from someone who was totally bewildered, you know. Demented even.

R: Who sees all this? (SB: Well a lot of people. (students laugh) All of his disciples and all his...) Let all the disciples work on themselves. If you work on yourself correctly you will have no time to judge others. You will have no time to look at others. If you work on yourself you will be drawn to the right person at the right time at the right place. (SB: Is it possible to be highly advanced and have glimpses of the Self to some degree and yet have lots of failings, human failings?) It's like science. There are many scientists that go to a certain point, Einstein goes beyond that point. There are many scientists that go to a certain level of consciousness. There are levels in the human consciousness. But when awakening takes place there is noone who is half awakened and half asleep. (SB: So real enlightenment there is no levels in that?) There are no levels. When you're enlightened, you're enlightened. There are only levels are on the path.

SF: Enlightenment consists of getting rid of the idea that we're not enlightened. (R: Of course.) There is nothing to be added nothing to be taken away, no changes or anything.

R: Of course. It's like when you're sleeping and then you wake up. Same thing. You've been asleep and now you're awake.

SD: How about groggy. (laughter) Sort of intermediary stage. (R: Take a cold shower.)

SL: Robert could it be that Bob is describing the situation, could it be that the person is enlightened, then your body is just doing whatever it's supposed to do, which is maybe to be crazy, or semi-crazy or to...

R: You cannot judge these things. Leave it alone, drop it. Do not get involved in who is enlightened, who is not enlightened, who is doing what to whom. Leave it all alone. Be yourself. As I said before if you work on yourself correctly you will not have time to think of these people. Because you will be too busy with yourself. Awakening to yourself.

SF: There is always the question, are there other people?

R: Are there other people? What do you see? (SF: I see other people but in reality there are no other people.) Don't worry about reality, as long as you see other people go work on yourself. When you disappear then everybody else will disappear also. As long as you believe you are a body you will see other bodies. There will be millions of bodies all over. Because you see yourself as a body. When you see yourself as the immutable Self then there will be no room for anybody else. When the Self is all-pervading it takes up all space. There is no room for anybody else.

SD: In that light Robert I remember you once mentioning a book, "The Divine Madman" and having read it I realize that point of his apparent madness was to shock people awake. So I think there is sometimes(quote, unquote) purpose for bizarre behavior that is beyond our understanding.

R: True. It is very difficult to understand people like that, to judge people like that.

SH: The zen tradition is full of stories like that. (R: Yes yes) These crazy guys. Really outrageous. Beautifully outrageous. (laughs) (R: Yes.)

SB: But then there are a lot of phony's who read stuff like that and maybe partially awakened and then they copy that and they're really not enlightened they're just really exploiting people, financially and sexually and all that. (R: True.)

SE: You mean like Dapayan, sex for vigor, ??? (SB: No I'm talking about you. (laughter)

SG: Robert is it possible to ever fall out of that? (R: To fall out of what?) You hear that some people are enlightened and they fall out of it that they are maybe not quite prepared to hold it and then they fall back is that possible? Or was ever enlightenment to begin with if they were ever able to fall out of it?

R: If you're awakened you cannot go back to sleep. You are totally awakened and that is it. There is nobody left to fall in and out of anything. You are totally liberated. How can you go back? There is nowhere to go.

SH: There is no you to go anywhere. (R: Exactly.)

SG: If you use the sleep analogy people do wake up in the middle of the night and go back to sleep again. (SD: People do.)

SE: Rama Krishna went back to sleep. He had the highest truth and he decided to go back to worshipping Kali. (SH: That's not going to sleep.)

R: No he had a vision of the highest truth but then he wanted to go back to Kali. He never actually became that. He had a high vision of the truth, of oneness but he started crying, "I don't want this, I want my Kali." (students laugh)

SF: That was before his initiation into Advaita, that what my understanding is... (R: What's that?) After initiation into Advaita he said, "Tie Advaita to the India cross and face the world." That's what my understanding of what... (R: That's good.) Sir? (R: That's good.) Well my idea was that he told that not too many people are attracted to the path of knowledge and his main thing was devotion. That's my... (R: Yes that's true.) And of course he aspires karma too. (R: Yes.)

SH: But he slew Kali. Totapuri told him when Kali appears in your mind again take out your sword of determination and slash her to pieces... (R: Right that's what he did.) ...which is tough talk. And that's what he did. Yeah. (R: Yes, but that didn't last long.) Well, he liked mother. He was a mamma's boy. (laughs) (R: He was a very unusual being.)

SF: I've always put him in the same category as the other well known ones. (R: Yes.) Jesus and Buddha, those ones. (R: That's a good crowd.) None better.

R: Being a spy. (students laugh)

Announcements?

SM: Oh yes I have the transcriptions. We finally are caught up believe it or not, this is number 59 we have 60 that's already been put out. This is "There Are No Mistakes" and I have five copies to hand out. I have any willing people? (hands out transcripts)

SD: Robert and Lee have reminded me that there will be a bhandara on the 26th of April which is the last Sunday of this month and we'll repeat this announcement. As usual everyone bring a main course and if you can also supplement with some juices. Maybe someone can volunteer to bring paper cups and plates and utensils. It's in celebration for two fantastic events. One on April 28th was Robert's awakening and the second although it comes first was the maha-samadhi of Sri Ramana Maharshi on April 15th. So we've chosen a day in between those two to commemorate both.

R: The 15th. (SJ: 15th?) Yeah.

SD: Facts day. (students laugh) So we'll repeat that announcement. So everyone think about what you're bringing. It usually turns out to be great. Noone is in charge. Noone is in charge anyway. (SM: Everyone's in charge.) And Ed I think was going to announce how to get to the Indian peoples house on Saturday or...

SE: Yes, the....

IMAGINATION: THE KNOT BETWEEN CONSCIOUSNESS AND THE FLESH

9th April, 1992

Robert: Robert: Good evening. It is wonderful to be with you once again. I love you all with all my heart, unconditionally, unequivocally. All is well.

Most of you have come here to listen to words. You want to hear me say something profound, something different, something unusual. How many years have you been listening to words? Since you were born. And all the words have done for you is today you believe what is real is false and what is false is real.

As an example, you believe the world to be real. You believe your body, your mind to be real. You believe that everything your senses show you and tell you is real. That's a lie. And you believe ultimate reality, perfection, infinite love, absolute awareness doesn't exist or if it exists you don't know anything about it.

The truth is it's just in reverse. What you cannot comprehend. What you cannot see, touch, feel, smell, taste is the reality. And what you've been worshipping all these years, a home, a couch, a chair, a car, money, the body, is false. It's false because you have to leave it in the end. That which is not true all of the time cannot be real. And everything in this universe changes to something else. No thing lasts forever. Therefore no thing is real. This is the reason we have this world in the precarious condition it's in today. For people have been believing in things that change, things that come to an end and you're always disappointed. The life that appears to you today can only lead to disappointment due to the fact it has to change.

Yet there is something that is unchangeable, unmutable. Something you can rely upon. Something that will always take care of you and save you and watch over you. And that something is your Self. You are the one. Your Self is not your body or your mind or your thoughts or your opinions. Your Self is absolute reality. Your Self is existence, knowledge, bliss. You are that Self.

People still want to know what happens to people who are realized, when they awaken to this truth. What good is this teaching if it does not bring you peace, happiness, love, freedom. Many of you have never known real happiness, real peace. You believe that things of this world bring you happiness. And you are conditioned to believe certain things here make you happy, certain things in this world make you sad. You've been brainwashed, hypnotized.

Yet how many people want to know the truth? How many people really want freedom and liberation? For no purpose whatsoever just to be free and liberated. It is true when you are liberated the world no longer has a hold on you. The universe, the world, people, places and things can no longer frighten you. You become radiantly happy just by being. In order for you to be happy today you think you need certain things in your life. You think if you win the lotto you'll be happy. If you have a new house you'll be happy. If you have a new husband or a new wife you'll be happy. You have an endless list of the things that it takes to make you happy. Yet you find through experience that when you achieve these things the happiness is only short lived and then you have to search again, it never ends. Yet I say to you your real nature is pure happiness, peace. All you have to do is discover it within yourself. For you are that. You have always been that.

There is absolutely nothing wrong in this world whatsoever. It is you who see the error. For instance you believe that if somebody dies that is bad. Why is that bad? Due to the fact that you don't understand what death is. Death is like sleep. When you lie down and go to sleep, you awaken. Yet when you slept you lost consciousness you're not aware of this world any longer and when you awaken you say, "I slept soundly. I feel good. I feel wonderful." Where were you when you slept? What happened to you? Death is similar. You simply go to sleep to this world and you wake up feeling refreshed and happy. Everything else is the same way.

The unknown is the reality. The known comes to an end and brings misery. We therefore have to seek the unknown. And again the place to seek is within yourself. All of the answers are within you. Everything that you've ever been looking for is within you. We have to change our minds and begin to go inward instead of outward.

We have learnt as we grew older, in school, in the streets that we have to be extroverted to get along with people. Take a look at the world and look at what these extroverted people are doing. The extroverted people are all of your politicians, all of the leaders of this world. These are the people that make the rules and regulations. And they are extroverted.

But the truth is that you have to become introverted. In other words you have to go within yourself. And find this truth we're talking about. This reality, this peace, this love, this joy that never changes. You have to look for it yourself. Search for it until you find it. It is within you. You are that!

You don't have to travel anywhere or read any books or run to different classes. You merely have to take the time to be by yourself and turn within. By turning within I mean you have to quiet the mind. You must use any method you can to quiet the mind. It is the mind that has all of these beliefs.

For instance when we talk about a certain subject such as healing, health. We have been brought up to believe we are a body. And a body can catch a cold become sick, develop cancer, die. All of these false opinions have been accepted by us subconsciously. Then collectively these things happen to us and this enforces our belief. Yet the ultimate truth about healing is that nobody ever became sick. Therefore there is no one to heal. This is the ultimate truth. There is no health and there is no sickness.

Yet most of us do not understand this ultimate truth except intellectually so we take a step down. When we discuss healing and health. When you look at your body without consciousness it is simply a heap of flesh with bone and fluids. This is all your body is. A heap of flesh with bones and fluids. Now the flesh in itself cannot get sick. If you were just a piece of flesh and you are. You believe you are a body with bones and fluids. The flesh cannot catch a cold, cannot develop cancer, cannot have any disease. For there is no consciousness. There is just flesh.

It is the same when you're sleeping. When you're in deep sleep you are not aware if you have cancer or AIDS or anything else. You are free of these things. When you are asleep. In the same way if you are just a heap of flesh and you are, without any consciousness it is virtually impossible for you to get any kind of disease.

But then consciousness comes into the picture. Can you say, "That consciousness bring the disease?" On the contrary. Consciousness is all-pervading, it is the substratum of all existence. If consciousness knew anything about disease the whole universe would be immediately destroyed. Yet when consciousness animates your body, you become like a puppet. You're able to move, run, dance, sing, speak for you have been animated by consciousness. Prior to this you were a heap of flesh. Now consciousness is animating you and you're able to walk, talk, speak, hear. Everything comes to pass.

But the flesh has not done this. Consciousness has done this. Just like the print on the paper that I talked about last week. The paper is consciousness and the print is your body. If the paper were not available there would be nowhere to put the print. So if consciousness were not there, there would be no body whatsoever. Consciousness is absolute reality, pure awareness. Can you therefore say that consciousness has brought disease to the body? Of course not. Therefore it appears to be a mystery.

If the bodily flesh by itself cannot become sick and consciousness is free of disease where does the disease come from? Well there appears to be a knot between the consciousness and the flesh. A knot that separates the consciousness from the flesh. This knot is called imagination. It is the imagination that brings the sickness, the fears, the frustrations and everything else to the flesh. The imagination.

In our case the imagination has brainwashed us since we were children. Perhaps from past lives also to believe in sickness, in lack and limitation and all of these negatives that appear to be real. Consciousness exists. It appears to be dormant for the imagination has taken over. And makes the flesh believe that it has cancer or anything else, cold, disease.

It is like the snake in the rope. Imagine you live in Texas, in the desert and you are aware of all the rattle snakes. You go to your house during twilight time. You're going to take a bath. There is a coiled rope lying on the floor that you have forgotten that you put there yourself. In the twilight hours you can't see clearly and the rope looks like a rattle snake. So immediately you stop short and the imagination begins to work. You start to perspire and fear. The heart starts palpitating. You start shaking. Your imagination has done this to you. It has caused your body to react a certain way and symptoms appear, palpitations, shaking, fear. Then you grab an axe and hit the rope. Then you discover it's a rope, it's not a rattlesnake at all. And you start laughing. The fear disappears, the palpitations stop, the sweating stops. But look what happened to you from this false assumption.

Also the water in the mirage is another example. You've been in the desert a long time you're very very thirsty, you want a drink of water. You've got to be real thirsty for your imagination to take over. All of a sudden you see an oasis a couple of yards away. Beautiful flowing water. Shade trees. You crawl over. There is nothing there but sand. It's a mirage.

Do you see what I'm getting at? The knot between consciousness and your body is the imagination. It is the imagination that causes you to believe and think something is wrong, disease is real and the imagination causes your belief to become real for you.

A simple example is a belief that you're going to catch a cold because you're walking in the rain. In truth and reality the rain cannot give you a cold. It cannot do anything for you. Except make you wet. Yet you believe the rain can do this to give you a cold and sure enough you catch a cold. And all of your life you believe these things. You pass this information onto your children. Do not walk in the rain you'll catch a cold. And they pass it to their children so forth and so on.

Think of all the things you believe right now that are false. Think of all the beliefs that have been imposed upon you. Just about 99 percent of everything you believe is a lie. That is a heavy one but it's true. 99 percent of all the things you believe is a lie. This is why in the higher teachings we are told to stop the mind from thinking. For all of these beliefs are in the mind like dormant seeds waiting to sprout. By dormant seeds I mean, everything is quiet, everything is still until something happens, until there is a storm and you get wet. You believe you're going to catch a cold. Those are the dormant seeds I'm talking about. Your belief system becomes activated and you catch a cold.

But you have invented the cold. You have invented the disease. I know some of you think that is a strange thing for me to say. Aids is so rampant, cancer is so rampant, heart conditions is so rampant and I'm saying that you are causing these things? Collectively we all believe the same things, so it seems. So collectively we cause the conditions to become worse by accepting them as real.

Metaphysical movements, occult movements try to teach you to renounce these things and use affirmations and so forth in their place. But this is all kindergarten. The only way to get rid of the false assumptions, the samskaras, the mental impressions that have been with you for centuries, life after life is by destroying the mind, totally and completely. And the way to destroy the mind is through inquiring, "Who has a mind to begin with? Who has a mind, to begin with?"

The truth about you is you are mindless. Your mind idea is just a belief. It is only a belief that you have a mind that causes you problems, that causes you to become sick, this is a belief. And this is a belief that has to be transcended and transmuted. You are not the mind. You are not the body. You are not the samskaras. You are absolute reality, pure awareness. This is your true nature.

Therefore the fastest way in this age to transcend the mind is through atma-vichara or self-inquiry. You have to work within yourself. You have to observe these beliefs of humanity. And as you feel them yourself inquire, "To whom do they come? Who has these beliefs? Who feels this?" You will say, "I feel this. I feel sickness. I believe this is like this, this is like that. All the things you've been talking about I believe." There is the answer.

The I that you're speaking of is not you. The I is the first person. The first thought that ever comes into your mind, is I. For don't you say to yourself, "I feel this. I have a cold. I feel sick. I have AIDS. I have cancer." This is a clue for you. Think of what you're saying, you're saying, "I have these things." Not I-am the real you, but I. The I we're talking about is a thought. The I-thought is connected to all the things of this world. And when you get rid of the I-thought everything else will go with it.

This is why this is called the direct method and the fastest method to become free and liberated. For you're not trying to remove thoughts. You're not trying to heal yourself. You're not trying to see the truth. You're working on eliminating the I that has caused you all these troubles, all these problems. You step back and examine the I. You begin to realize all of your life, you say to yourself, "I am this and I am that. I have pain. I hate this. I love this. I feel terrible. I feel good." It is always the I-I-I-I. It is this I that has to go.

The I is the mind, same thing. The I has to be totally eliminated and the only way to do this is to follow it to its source by inquiring, "Who am I?" Which means, "What is the source of the I?" The source of the I is absolute reality, sat-chit-ananda, ultimate oneness, nirvana. Yet you do not experience these high states therefore as far as your concerned they do not exist. But your I does exist. Your I has always existed so it appears, since you were born.

At least you realize that your job in this life is to follow the I and destroy it. Again it is only destroyed when you follow it to the source. When you follow it to the source, your personality disappears which is your personal I. You become all-pervading, omnipresent, joy, happiness and bliss. This is the most important work that you have.

Most of you believe that your work is important. The things that you do everyday is important. They have some relevancy of course. But you're going to die one of these days. When you're in your death bed will you be concerned about your work? Will you be concerned about your family or the world or politics or anything else? When you're on your death bed you will be full of fear. Because you're going to leave this world and everything in it. And you're going into an unknown quantity an unknown place that you never heard of before. You have no idea where you're going it is something unknown. Therefore at that time you will give up all of your politics, you will give up all of your wants, your needs.

Why wait until then? Why not give it up now? For if you give it up now you will enter reality where there is no birth and no death, no good and no bad, no duality whatsoever, no universe, no world, no others, no body, no mind. You have become what we call God. Which is the absolute reality.

Therefore if you are wise. You will begin immediately to work on yourself. This doesn't mean you have to give up anything, except mentally. You will begin diligently to work on yourself every moment of the day. When you feel hurt, you feel sick, you feel disgusted, you feel depressed. You feel the world closing in on you. You inquire within yourself, "Who feels this? To whom does it come? I do. What is the source of the I?" Become quiet and still and everything will take care of itself.

(short silence)

Feel free to ask questions.

SZ: I have a question. (R: Go ahead.) How should we treat children?

R: How should you treat children? (SZ: Umm-hmm.) Treat children as if they were Gods. Love them with all your heart and with all your soul. If you really love children the love that you feel for them will encompass them also. And they will become loving children. I don't mean love them with a human idea of love. I mean really love them. With all your heart and all your soul. See them as a sacred being. See them as a God. And realize divine right action is pouring itself through them. See only the goodness in them. Become an example for them. Do not tell them to do anything that you wouldn't do yourself. Children become what they see not what they hear.

Therefore if there is peace in your home, if there is love in your home, there is joy in your home, I mean real peace, real love, real joy they have to pick it up. It has to pour into them. And they will react with love and with peace and with joy. They will grow up to be kind, compassionate, beautiful human beings and this will become a new world. So again become an example of love and compassion and peace. Whenever you look at them or think about them. Look at them with love and compassion and joy and peace and then you'll be surprised what happens.

SK: What about teenagers? (laughter)

R: If you haven't done anything to them when they were kids, when they become teenagers then you've got a problem. (students laugh) So even as a teenager you've got to become an example. They've already been brainwashed. It was Krushov, remember the Russian Prime Minister who said, "Give me a child up to the age of five and I'll give you a lifetime communist." It is when children are babies that you have to do these things. When they become teenagers in a household that is filled with error, filled with animosity they will act accordingly. Therefore the only thing you can do with teenagers is to bless them and let them go. Realize that the current that knows the way, that takes care of the whole universe is taking care of them also. That they are in their right place at the right time going through the experiences that they need to go through right now. Become a very positive personality and let them go.

SL: So Robert when you say, "Treat them like a God," do you mean like in the same way that you told us to love ourselves, cherish ourselves? (R: Yes, exactly.) And of course in the best way we know how.

R: See them as your Self. You've got to love your Self first. If you're an angry person, a mad person, bad temper, do not see them as that self. Rather work on yourself first and get rid of all those negative qualities. Then see them as your Self. For there is only one Self. That Self is love. That Self is compassion, bliss, consciousness. Know this about your Self. Then include your children.

But you can't be a troubled person and then send out love to your children. It will not work. For the children are part of yourself and they become what you really are deep inside. This is why if you want a peaceful household with peaceful children you've got to become peaceful with yourself first. And the vibrations will go into your household your children will pick them up and become peaceful children.

SZ: Is there any person that doesn't grow up with the I-thought?

R: Yes. People who in previous lives have done the work that we're talking about. They have gone through this again and again in many lifetimes. They come back to be a teacher. They come back to this planet voluntarily and they come back as a pure being. So there are people who come back to this planet pure.

Try to remember that we're speaking at a certain level. Most of you who know me realize that it's a whole bunch of hogwash. There is no coming back, there is no going, there is no planet, there is no universe, there is only the Self and you are that. But as long as you believe you are a body then the things we're talking about are real and true for you.

SH: Are they real and true or do they just appear to be? (R: They appear to be.) But they aren't? (R: They aren't of course not. But the maya is so strong that you think these things are real and true. The imagination is maya.)

SK: Robert how come if you know it's a lie and I'm buying the lie, I see the maya and I keep dwelling in it and I'm aware that it's a lie and I still will hang on to it. I mean it's like there is nothing...if I let go of this what else is there sort of thought, you know?

R: It is like taking drugs. If you have been taking heroine for many years you no it's no good, you know it's a lie, you know it's killing you but you have to keep taking it. So it is with this. We've been brainwashed for so many centuries, so many incarnations yet you've done something to be in a class like this. We begin to see it's all a lie.

Therefore it appears that it will not immediately remove itself from you. For it took you so many incarnations, so many lifetimes to be where you are now. Do not look at time. Do not think how hard it is. But be grateful for where you are to be able to see it intellectually at first, and begin to realize the whole world is a lie.

And little by little slowly but surely like skins on an onion - an onion has many skins and you have to peel them off one at a time - or when a diamond is first found in the earth it doesn't appear as a diamond but is filled with crud and dirt after thousands of years being in the earth, it's got to be polished and refined and cut — and so it is with you also you've got to be polished and you have to be cut. All the dirt has to be cut away the crud. As you have patience, as you are grateful for where you are, as you work on yourself everyday then you will wake up at any time.

SV: Robert it's difficult to talk after you talk because you talk quiet and I talk like a storm cloud. When I was at a school in Backlot which is open to anybody. There is a tram there and the tram shows you the studio at Backlot. And the tram also goes through a tunnel and then the tram stops in the tunnel. Now the tunnel is made to revolve around you and it turns off and you know with any doubt that that tram is standing still. That when the tunnel turns this way you feel you turn this way. And you know without any doubt that you're not turning at all. And yet you feel you're turning. Everyone who wants to feel what maya is like should go take that tram ride. (laughter) You know the tunnel is not turning around. You know the tunnel is made to revolve around you but it's standing still. And if the tunnel turns this way you turn this way, the tunnel turns this way you turn this way. It's like you're falling over. You know the tunnel is standing still you know it like you know anything and yet, still. (R: True.) Anyway that is one of the most heaviest experiences of my life I've ever gone through. It seems to be heavier than this body. (R: Umm.) Because you know it every time the tunnel turns around the tram will turn around. (R: Yes. That's a good analogy.) If you just go just to see how strong it is and you know it ain't so...

R: Where do you have to go to see it?

SV: Universal studios. There is a tram that goes and shows you all the backdrops. One of the most powerful mayas I know because you know it ain't so. (R: Umm.) And in fact they had one...they told us that one of the scenes in a movie that they made this guy was running after another guy through the tunnel, it was movie actor even though he knows of course that the tunnel is steady, he's falling over every time he can't even run after him. (R: Umm.) Believe me, I don't know how often you would have to go before this illusion would stop. After a certain number it would stop. But boy if anyone wants to see how strong maya is, that's it. Universal studios.

R: So we'll all go to universal studios and get rid of maya. (students laugh)

SL: You know what I remember going to the same thing at universal studios and I remember knowing that it was an illusion and I remember looking down at the base of the tour bus and then just getting my perspective back and then I would look up again and I would still have the equilibrium and also I was leaning and so I would look back down again to become centered then I would look back up again. I think that is what the meditation is for or whatever we do to try to get centered.

SV: But you know what you're seeing isn't there and you still totally believe it's doing it. Absolutely total you have no doubt you could almost swear on it. (SL: Right.)

SF: Sometimes children of the same parents can be wildly different.

R: Sometimes children can be wild and different? (SF: Sir?) What did you say? (SF: Children of the same parents can be wildly different.) Yes, that's true. That has a lot to do with karma. (SF: There are so many variables.) Umm. This is why the only thing that you should do is become free yourself and then see if these questions bother you.

SK: When you said something about perseverance I was just thinking about something that I read that just applies to what you said. Material coal and diamonds are made out of the same substance it's just a matter of - what makes a diamond a diamond is more pressure. (R: Umm.) Just time and pressure. Just like it takes time for our own awakening that is all it is.

R: That's a good point true. (SK: Yeah.) When a person is truly on a spiritual path you forget all about time. Do not ask how long it takes or when am I going to become this. Do the work that is necessary and leave the rest up to God.

SF: On Sunday you said something that kind of tickled me, I said that I felt that Sri Rama Krishna was in the same category as Christ and Buddha and Krishna and you said, "That's a good crowd," and just thinking about it later I assumed that you agreed with my statement about Sri Rama Krishna. (R: Yes.) And what I was thinking later was that that is the only crowd to run with. (Robert laughs) am I right? (R: Of course.) Thank you.

R: This is why it tells you in all the ancient scriptures that the fastest way to really become enlightened is to hang out with a guru, with a Sage. This is why we have satsang.

Also while I forget because many of you have wanted more than two satsangs a week we are now having a third satsang on the Saturday from 1 o'clock till 4, in the valley. In the home of Indians. The Indian family is letting us use their home. So those of you who are interested and want to come to another satsang feel free to come on Saturday 1 to 4. We'll try it out and see what happens. (SG: This Saturday?) Umm? (SG: This Saturday?) Yes.

SM: Robert can I ask you a question? (R: No. (students laugh) Go Mary.) Is there any significance to dreams of a spiritual nature?

R: Is there any significance to dreams of a spiritual nature? Dreams are of the ego. Yet when you become advanced you do have visions and you do have high spiritual dreams that become sort of meaningful sometimes. So the answer is yes and no. It depends on the person having the dream. Some dreams are spiritual, high dreams because you've been working on yourself diligently and you come to a point where you can have dreams like this and see visions. So this is true.

To others, dreams are just venting the emotions. If you didn't dream you'd probably blow up. Dreams are a ventilation of the emotions. Just as this life is a dream. This whole universe is a dream. Everything we're doing now is a dream. Yet you take it to be real and you react to it. This is why you suffer for you're reacting to a dream. Observe watch but do not react and you will wake up.

SF: Maharshi said, "Visions add zest to meditations." (R: Visions exists as what?) Visions add zest... (R: To meditations?) But they're in duality. (R: Umm, sure.)

SK: Robert, I just wanted to comment on. I have experienced some hallucinogenic drugs before and what I was just thinking of is talking about maya and the mind. It's like from one second I could be in absolute panic fear and then in the next second just absolute bliss and ecstasy and happiness and smiling and then back and forth like a ping pong ball. And it's just like the clock just takes you and it becomes so real and the next second. I mean that's a magnified example of you know what seems to be happening... (R: Where are you now?) Where am I now? This second? Peaceful. Anxious and peaceful. (laughter)

R: Do you need any hallucinogenic drugs to become peaceful? (SK: Do I need it? No. Not any more.) Be your Self. (SK: That is always a good one, be your Self.) Then you will find peace that you never dreamed existed.

SF: I always thought that I should be something other than what I was in one aspect or another but come to think about it there is no way for me to be at any one time, to be different than I am. In other words it's really a matter of acceptance and realize that I don't really have any control over anything, as an individual. So if I can accept myself. I'm pretty good at not judging other people but I'm pretty hard on myself but if I could accept myself I would be in pretty good shape.

R: True. What you really want to do is get rid of that self. (SF: With a small "s.") Yes, then you'll be your real Self.

Do we have any announcements?

SM: No, most of the 59's have come back are coming in thank you very much everyone for bringing them in. We will put them on the table for people who want them.

SW: If anybody wants to buy a copy of the Ashtravakra Gita, I have a few. Good book.

(general discussion about satsang on the Saturdays. Directions to get there and bhandara organization.)

R: We have some delicious prashad, thanks to Tony.

Remember to love your Self, to pray to your Self, to worship your Self, to bow to your Self, for God dwells in you as you, peace.

YOU ARE NOT THE DOER

12th April, 1992

Robert: ...(Students: Good afternoon Robert.) It is good being with you again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you just the way you are.

There is only one way in which to transcend your problems and to find unalloyed happiness and peace. Who can tell me what that is?

SM: Stop thinking? (SF: Destroy the mind?)

R: Destroy the mind, to stop thinking. (SB: Drop it!)

R: Drop it. That's all good but what do you have to become?

SM: Nothing? (SH: What you already are?) SB: No-thing?

R: Henry's on the right track.

SB: Consciousness? (SM: We're already consciousness?) Pure consciousness?

R: You have to return to what you are before you were born. What were you before you were born? Nothing. No-thing. If you can return to that while embodied that is called self-realization. If you don't have to wait to die or to drop your body but you can actually return to that while you are in a so-called body then you will be in a completely different dimension so-to-speak.

You will see man's inhumanity to man, wars yet for you there will be peace. You will see wholeness. Where there is a diseased body you will see complete health, total harmony. Where there appears to be lack or limitation you will see riches beyond your wildest dreams. For you have gone beyond the so-called relative world into the source of your existence. Yet you don't really have to do anything or go anywhere you're already there. Just the way you are right now. It is your thinking that makes you think otherwise. It is your brainwashing that you've had since you were a little kid that makes you think something is wrong someplace, something isn't right or that you have to do something to become self-realized. It means you have to let go of attachment to person, place or thing, mentally.

When you try to be a so-called do-gooder what you're really saying is there is something wrong aren't you? Otherwise why would try to do good? If you try to heal someone you must believe the person is sick or you wouldn't try to heal them. When you try to help the homeless or do altruistic things in your life you are making believe in the play of maya, that there is suffering and poverty and things in this world that exist and you are trying to stop this. Can't you see what I'm trying to say? The world has been like this since it came into being as a dream. Which it really never did. But in this maya in this dream there are people who do good and people who do bad. It is all part of the duality concept. There are people who maim, kill, rob and there are people who give, love and help. They are both impostors.

Yet I'm not saying to ignore the situation. When you ignore the situation you are also making a mistake because you believe in the situation. If you believe in the situation you cannot ignore it. Don't you see? As long as you believe that something is wrong you've got to make it good. In other words when you see a person starving on the street who asks you for a piece of bread, you must give him the bread because you see him starving in the street. There will come a time when you will not see the person starving in the street and just by you being near this person this person will appease his hunger. Without any material bread.

Everything in this world is maya, it's a trick, to keep you hopping, to keep you going along, to keep you doing something. Remember the opposite of bad is good. The opposite of wrong is right. You do not want to change opposites. We want to transcend opposites, where there is nothing. Where nothing exists. Where nothing exists there is total freedom. I'm not speaking of total freedom for you alone when I say this. The total freedom I'm speaking of is all-pervading. If you become total freedom the total freedom that you become is omnipresence. Therefore wherever you look there is total freedom.

I'm not referring to a selfish personal life. Where a person wants to overcome their difficulties and overcome their problems and yet the rest of the world still has them. When you really transcend the world you have transcended it for everyone. Everyone in the world. Every sentient and insentient thing.

Tom what are you doing over that side? I'm over here. Transportation. (laughter)

The world as it appears is neither good nor bad, right or wrong. Try to understand that when you get involved as a do-gooder it appears as if you are helping, but has poverty ceased? Will it ever cease to be? Has man's inhumanity to man ceased or will it ever cease? Are all the dastardly conditions in the world stopping at all or do they appear to be getting worse? What has happened to all the do-gooders that have worked for freedom and peace and happiness and joy in this world? They pass away and no one ever hears from them again. And the world goes on with its foolishness with its nonsense.

This is a hard thing to say to the average person on the street. For they can never comprehend this. Most of you here know what I'm talking about.

The world is maya, an illusion. When you get caught up in the illusion you play your part. And you get so involved in your part you believe this is what you're doing. That you're being of service, you're being of help. And all your friends encourage you. They tell you how kind you are, the good that you're doing to this world. There will always be people like that. Of course you can say that if everybody stopped doing good the world would go to hell. The world is already in hell. You don't have to go anywhere.

The game is, we each have a part of this maya, of this hell, this illusion. And we think we're doing good. We think the things we do are wonderful. We help humanity. We enjoy our lives so-to-speak. We do happy things. Do try to understand this is all part of duality. All part of the game. Karmically you come into this world as either a good guy or a bad guy. You have no choice. This is all duality. So you've got to play a role, as you work in the illusion, and you come back again and again and again always playing a different part, so it appears. One time you come back as a good guy the next time you come back as a bad guy. Like cowboys and Indians. One time you're the Indian and the next time you're the cowboy. It never ends. There is no end to it.

I've spoken to many people who have worked for peace in this world. Who have worked with the homeless, who want to feed the poor all over the world. This is very commendable, this is very good. But they all tell me the same thing they become disillusioned. For when you feed a hundred two hundred appear at your door again. When you feed two hundred, four hundred appear at your door. It never ends.

Of course you're saying, "Well at least I fed the hundred that came to me. I took care of those who came to me." This is true also, for as long as you are in that position, where again you believe there are homeless people suffering and there is injustice and cruelty in this world then you have to do your part to help overcome it. But as you work on yourself and you overcome the maya, the illusion you do not become a person that does nothing. For you're not a person any longer. The personality has been transcended, transmuted. You have become the nothingness in which the world is a superimposition. You have become the screen instead of the players on the screen. As the screen there is absolutely nothing for you to do but observe and watch the players in action.

Yet when I say there is absolutely nothing to do it's paradoxical because you still will do something. Realizing that you are not the doer. When I say, "As you realize you are not the doer," you will not think of it in that way. When you are not the doer there will be no one to think I am not the doer. There will not be an entity who is not the doer. For if you say to yourself that you are not the doer then you are the doer trying to say, "I'm not the doer." When you are not the doer there is nobody left. So you can't say that, you can't voice that. When you are absolute freedom you are like a leaf on a tree. A leaf on a tree rocks with nature, braves out the storms, sometimes it dies but the essence of the leaf never dies. The essence is the same essence of you, pure beingness. You are pure beingness. Try to understand this it will save your life.

As long as you feel you have to do something in this world then by all means do something. As long as you feel that you have to do nothing in this world by all means do nothing. Yet the something and the nothing are two sides of the same coin. For there is somebody who has to do something and there is somebody who has to do nothing. You cannot say, "I am nothing." For again if you say, "I am nothing," it means that you are something. This is why silence is reality. Can you see this now.

This is the reason silence is enlightenment. As soon as you open your mouth you spoil it. As soon as you think about anything you spoil it. For everything you say is duality. You cannot say one word that has absolutely nothing to do with reality and not duality.

There is not one word, one utterance you can make, that has absolutely nothing to do with duality. Can you think of a word that has nothing to do with duality?

You can say the word, "God." The reason you're saying the word God, is because you believe there was no God there. So you're calling upon God. If God was always there why do you have to say God at all? So to whom are you calling upon? All concepts have to be transcended. Everything you believe, everything you've been taught, everything that makes any sense has to go down the drain. You must become senseless. Not say it or speak of it but become it without words. This is the only way to be free. Even when I speak of freedom it's the same thing. The reason we speak of freedom is because we think we're bound. Therefore we speak of freedom. What can you speak about? Nothing.

This is why when most of you see me in my personal life as it appears to you, I hardly ever talk. For what can I say? It's not that I don't want to talk there is nothing to say! It's all nonsense.

I'll ask a person, "How do you feel?" They say, "I feel terrible I got a pain in my head." So I say, "Take an aspirin," and you'll say, "I did it doesn't help." I'll say, "Squeeze your head with both hands," so you squeeze your head with both hands. This may make it better this may make it worse, what difference does it make? You're looking for answers. You're looking for perfection, for something to be, to become. And there is absolutely nothing to be or become.

Who do you think you are? You tell me I'm a man, I'm a woman. That is your gender. That is not who you are. You've been told you are that when you were born. You're neither a man or a woman. But what were you before you were born? You were the reality. Again it's words, for if you were the reality then there has to be an unreality, then it couldn't be a reality. True? Think about this. If you say, "I'm reality," that's only a comparison. There has to be an unreality somewhere for you to be a reality.

Yet most of us always want to be something. We're not satisfied just being we want to be something. And of course what we want to be is better than we are. We don't like what we are. If we're fat we want to be thin. If we're thin we want to be fat. If we're tall we want to be short if we're short we want to be tall. If we think we're dumb we want to be smart if we're smart we think we're too smart. It never ends it goes on. Goes on forever. So how do you get out of all of this? First you've got to be tired of the whole game. You got to be sick and tired of the whole game of good and bad, up and down, happy and sad, rich or poor, sick or healthy. You've got to be tired of everything. The whole game. The whole universe. The whole world. Then when you're tired of it, really tired of it, you keep still.

You stop talking so much, trying to prove points, trying to win debates, trying to explain to somebody what truth is, or what it isn't. You learn to keep still. But you do not become a cold fish. You have manners, you're loving, you're kind not because you want to be this is your nature. When you feel your real Self you do not feel that you're better than other people or that you are good and somebody else is bad or that you know something somebody else doesn't. This is the worst form of egotism.

The more realized you become the more you think you know nothing. There is nothing for you to know anymore. But when you realize the world is false and the world is only an idea in consciousness what can you possibly do in this world, what can you see in this world. What can you possibly do to help anyone? Yet by just being people appear to be helped when they are around you. Things change.

Yet most of you in this room today are still trying to change bad for good. You want to improve your condition, you want to have all kinds of fun and all kinds of joy in the world. And you go after it and you have it and it appears that you have it, again this is a trick of maya. To fool you, to delude you this way. To show you're having fun, you're enjoying life. But remember the pendulum has to swing the other direction. And pretty soon you're miserable, crying. You feel isolated, unwanted, unloved. So you go looking for love in all the wrong places. (laughter) And you find it. (laughter) And you play the game again. You've never been so happy in your life. The pendulum has to swing again back to the other side after so much time. You become upset, morbid, disgusted and your life goes on like this. It is then that most people start searching for answers.

This is why it is not really a blessing to have good karma, so-to-speak. For when you have good karma you don't care about spiritual life. You believe, I've got good karma why do I need spiritual life that is for people who are suffering. Many people believe this you know. They tell me, "I'm living good. I've got plenty of money in the bank. I've got a home. I've got a car. I've got a wife. I've got children. I've got everything I want in life. Why do I need spiritual life that's for people who are suffering?" How deluded can you get? For this will all pass. Even if it goes on throughout the life. Remember change in the relativity...in the universe of relativity change takes all forms, and they goes through time periods. What I mean by this is your life right now is but a split second in eternity. That's all your life is.

It appears to you as you live four score and ten, or whatever score you want me to put. And you had a good life for all the four score and ten. You have not searched for spiritual life. You are in the dream you have not come out of it. You're deeply involved in the dream. You're deeply involved in maya. And if you know nothing about spiritual life and if you're only aware of your goodness, your material goodness that is upon you and that's all you know you have to experience the opposite. Therefore you may come back in another life and you come back the way you left off, rich, in a good family. And then it will die down. It will begin to subside. Little by little you'll begin to experience the other side of it, you've got to. So what may happen is you maybe born in a time where there is a recession, inflation, you lose all of your money. Your husband or your wife commits suicide. You have to go on welfare. This happens little by little in slow motion. So you cannot see it. For you're looking at lifetimes. That you're here today and gone tomorrow. And you believe if I've got good things in my life now. If I feel healthy and strong that is all I want, that will make me happy.

This is why you are told in the higher spiritual teachings, to forget all this. Do not think about being healthy, happy and wise, as they told you when you were a kid. Look at the world in which we live especially the capitalistic societies. The whole idea of living in a capitalistic society is to become rich. That does not mean any other society is any better. It's better than living in a communistic society, because in a communistic society you cannot own anything. They're both maya. They're both a joke. The point that you have to realize again that as long as you believe in a world. As long as you believe in a universe as a fact, as an entity you're going to have to come back again and again and experience everything over and over again.

I was listening to an old Alan Watts tape made in 1954. And Alan Watts is saying on the tape, "I'm sitting in Henry's house and the birds are screeching I can hardly hear my self talk on the tape." (laughter) The same birds that are singing now. The same thing is happening now that happened before. Alan Watts was here in 1954 and I'm here now. (laughter) What has changed? And when we're all gone it will continue. Big deal. (students laugh) In the year 2110 there will be people who have a meeting like this talking about the same things, same nonsense.

SC: Henry will be sitting there. (students laugh) (SH: I give up. It's hopeless.) (laughter)

R: And somebody will be saying, "In 1992 there was Robert sitting here listening to the birds. And Henry sitting there with a long beard. When am I going to leave my body." (students laugh) (SM: With the dog there.) (laughter) (SH: Too much.)

R: And here we are. Where are we? So get rid of yourself and be happy. (laughter)
Now let's see for once who can stump the guru.

Q: (Robert reads.) Where is the mind on the deep sleep state?

A: (Robert answers.) What mind? There never was a mind. When you're in deep sleep you're referring to the mind that you think you've got. That mind that doesn't exist goes back into the Self. When you go into deep sleep, the thoughts, the mind what we call a mind is simply a compilation of thoughts. Thoughts about the past, thoughts about the future. That is all a mind is. But when you're in deep sleep there is no one to think you can't think. Because the thoughts have gone back where they belong, into nothingness. They become absolute nothing. No thoughts, no mind.

So when we explain it to people who think there is a mind, there is a self, there is a this, there is a that. We say that the Self or God is located on the right side of the chest. That is where the spiritual heart is. When you're in deep sleep the mind that has been active returns to the spiritual heart. Where once again it merges with the Self, which is the spiritual heart until you awaken. When you awaken instantaneously what you call the mind or thoughts rush into the brain. And you become immediately cognizant of I. I am the body. I am the mind. Then you become cognizant of the universe and the people and others and everything going on around you. It all happens instantaneously. Very fast.

But if you think about this before you go to sleep and you feel that the mind is going into the heart as you fall asleep, when you wake up you will continue with the thought that you fell asleep with. And you will be able to feel to an extent the mind coming out of the heart and going back into the brain where the light becomes evident. But do not become too technical about these things. Do not become exact or too intellectual about this. There is no mind. There is no heart. There is no body. There is no sleep. There is no time. There is no space. There is nothing. There is only Henry. (laughter)

SM: Thank you Robert. That was the only question.

R: That's the only question. A mind question.

SB: I have a question. (R: Bob has a question.) Robert how does the consciousness after it dies, how does it actually get reincarnated? How does it get... (R: What consciousness dies?) The consciousness plus the tendencies that the person left the body with. And the tendencies I've heard is what causes it - the patterning is what causes it to be propelled and impelled to take another breath. But how - what is that mechanism, how does it work? I mean it has to happen through the reproductive fluid. How does that pattern get into the reproductive fluid? How is it transmitted? We know supposedly pick your father and something like that. How does it work?

R: In order for it to work you've got to work. As long as you exist a question like that is done exactly that way. And all these things come to pass. But in truth it doesn't work because it never existed. (SB: Well let's talk about the falsehood trip for a while. How does it get into the body of the person that reproduces that baby?) Consciousness you mean? (SB: Yeah.) Consciousness is always there. (SB: Like when after I died what happened to my consciousness plus the mind, the patterning. How did that pick that particular man as the father? How did it get into that reproductive fluid? How did that work?) This is all determined by what you are, what you've been. Your samskaras. Your latent tendencies what you were in a previous life or different lifetimes, in this life. Everything that you've been through. (SB: Is it like an all-pervading pattern that just finds a person or consciousness that's unmanifest. Is it an all-pervading pattern that gravitates to a particular man? How does that work?) Imagine you're a drug dealer and you got shot by the police. (SB: Okay.) Then the pattern, what you call the pattern leaves the body takes a rest and goes finds another suitable body to continue its existence from where it was before. And again continues. (SB: How does it go find another pseudo body out of a billion human beings how does it find that man that father, you know, what's...) It's like a needle in a haystack. It finds what it has to find. It finds itself where it's been. It's been a drug dealer so it's been totally motivated by drugs...

SB: ...being propelled to a particular individual?

R: It's like saying, "How do I wake up in the morning?" It's the same thing. These things just happen. They go through all kinds of experiences... (SB: Nobody knows these things?) There is nothing to know. (SB: Nobody actually knows the actual mechanism whereby this divine minded consciousness actually becomes the reproductive fluid of this person or...) You're looking for a mechanism, there is no mechanism. (SB: And yet we're all here and yet some- thing happened, something moved it into a particular body.) Part of the maya, part of the delusion. It appears this way but it never happened like this. It doesn't exist this way. It's only an appearance. You're talking of the seminal fluid. It doesn't take anything it just continues, it's a continuation of what you are and this causes you to pick the right person, the right parents, this is all karmic. There is nothing deep and profound about this. It's just you continue from where you left off...

SB: Well how does the spatial universe where there is time and space is that...I mean when you die does that become an all-pervading kind of a pattern that's all over, and that if it's only printed on a particular vibration that's compatible. I'm looking at the...trying to...

R: You heard of the Arkashik records. The akarshik records of every human being. Every movement they've made. Everything they've done. Is part of the akarshik records. They are so intricate that it would take a billion accountants to be able to understand one iota of how this works. But everything is accountable in the universe. You're accountable for everything you do, every movement you make. So say you lift your finger, it's written down in the Arkashik records. You stick your finger in the water, it's written down in the Arkashik records. You kill somebody it's on the akarshik records. Everything you do is in the Arkashik records.

SH: Who wants to know about akarshik records? (R: He wants to know about akarshik records?) (SB: No I don't want to now about akarshik records.) (SH: This is pure mythology.)

R: Of course, this is what he's talking about. (SB: No I'm not, I'm not talking about this reality.) What are you talking about? Reality?

SH: Yeah he thinks it's real. The myth is real. (SB: I'm talking about relative reality. (laughter) Yet which is maybe not real but here we are.)

R: That is what I'm telling you about the relative reality, the Arkashik records. Everything is recorded in the big book. (laughter) See what happens is every time you make a movement it's recorded therefore when you leave the body that goes in the seminal fluid. Then the same thing appears again.

SB: When it leaves the body is it just a certain, is it a state, is it a pattern or is it all-pervading or is it consciousness all over everything. And yet it's still a particular pattern. How does it get there?

R: It moves through time and space... (SB: Is it a particular...) It's a cell an atom. (SB: One atom in time and space and it moves through time and space and finds the right person to be the father.) You can say that if you like. (laughter) (SB: I'm just trying to know.)

SH: Where does it get you?

SB: Nobody has ever said, nobody has ever explained this.

R: Because there is nothing to explain really. What is there to explain it doesn't exist? Like a fairy tale.

SB: Yeah and yet everyday we have to suffer and work so hard and you say it doesn't exist and yet the life right now is a disaster. You know it's like a torture. It's more real than all the reality that we're talking about all this reality. But all this reality, it might be reality but it's not manifest, our everyday life is very very difficult.

R: But you're saying our, speak for yourself. (SB: Well mine then.) Your life is like this and you're seeing it this way and you're trying to get out of it. But there is nothing that really happens to put you in it. The understanding is you were never in it to begin with. And that goes somewhere far away from you because as you say your experience hurts you. (SB: Yeah.) And you want to know why it happens this way, why it hurts you.

So you think about karma and you realize this is what you're doing as a result of what you've done before. And you think it's a result of something else. Therefore the right molecules and the right atoms come into play. Everything in the relative world that builds in the relative world comes into play and it happens through the atoms, through the molecules, through the cells. And the body is put together through the atoms that you need at this moment to experiences your experiencers and there you are.

SB: It is strange that the reality we don't realize or experience directly but the unreality we experience and realize directly. It doesn't make sense.

R: But you're not really experiencing the unreality. You're so bogged down in the unreality that it appears very real to you. Think of it this way. When you're looking at a movie. You get excited about the movie. And it appears so real to you. Because you got involved in the movie, in the plot and what's going on and you're passionate about it. You're really feeling the movie there are many people like this. You're crying when it's time to cry, laughing when it's time to laugh. But where does the movie come from. Light, camera. There is only the screen. And the light creates a reflection of the image. They're images. They produce images, they're a reflection of the light. It produces images on the screen and everything looks so real for you. So would you ask the people in the movie the same question? Would you ask the people in the movie, on the screen, how did you get like this? What made you this way? What made you be a murderer? What made you be a saint? There is no one to answer because it's a reflection of light. Only the screen exists.

So it is with us. We are a reflection of light on the screen of life. And we appear to be going through all these things but we're not. So it's wrong identification. You have to give up the identification with the things that hurt you. And you have to see it in a different light. In a new experience you have to see the whole thing differently than what you see now. And when you see it differently things will change. But as long as you keep holding on to your hurts and the badness of your position it only increases the delusion. (SB: And yet we're still controlled by it. Even if you wake up, even if you have a realization you're still controlled by it. By this system and this con game and all this. Because you still have to get up and go to work and...you're under control, you're always controlled. Even the Jnani is controlled you know.) On the contrary. (SB: Well it seems to me.) This is how you see the picture. This is what you're seeing. (SB: Same with Ramana if he didn't get food he would have died. As a body but that is not what he really is of course. As a manifestation he is controlled by whatever or whatever the power is controlling manifestation. His manifestation is in control by them not him as reality.) It doesn't work like that. We as individuals see our own world. And we see what we are. And we're seeing this as an experience but there is no such experience. A Jnani does not go through what you think he goes through. Ramana didn't go through any suffering when he died. He would not die if he didn't eat. But the appearance would be that he would. (SB: But the body appeared to be in pain. There was moaning, there was...) You're seeing this. That is the way you look at it. That is the way you see it. That is the way it appears to you. But it's not like that. (SB: Why would he moan if he wasn't in pain?) You're seeing the moaning. (SB: It isn't really moaning even though everybody saw him moan?) He said himself, "I am not what you think I am." Rama Krishna also said, "That noone dies." When he was dying and appeared to be in pain or going through all these things.

You're speaking on relative terms only and relative terms do not exist. Like the mirage in the water, the water in the mirage. We think we see it and it doesn't exist, it's not there. Everything is like hypnosis, it's like we've been hypnotized. Believing we're in pain, we're going through suffering, we're going through things. This is why maya is called maya. This is what it's all about. And then you want to know how technically how it works. Maya is maya. Like a dream. You don't explain to people in a dream how it works. Why this person tripped and broke his leg. It's all in maya. Other people looking at maya are so engrossed in it that it hurts them, it's very real to them. Drop it! Don't get involved in most technicalities for they pull you deeper into it. No matter what the answer is you're looking for, the answer itself is an illusion. Whatever the answer maybe. You call it karma, maya, seminal fluid, whatever you like to call it. It's all part of the grand illusion. The important point is the more technical you become about it the more you're pulled into it.

SF: Maharshi said the words of the great grandson are truth. (R: The words of a great grandson is truth. Well shoot the great grandson.) Do without him. I told that to a friend of mine and he said, "Yeah words are the gravestones beneath which the truth is buried." I thought that was good too.

R: The words of the gravestones beneath which the truth is buried. Okay.

This is why I talk about the principle when you get into this teaching first. You have to practice divine ignorance. Where you say you don't know what anything is. Everything appears as if it is real. All these things appear real.

(silence)

Do we have many announcements?

SM: No Robert we don't. (R: We have no announcements?) No nothing at all. No.

R: We're having the bhandara on the 26th. Put that on the calendar. Where you bring your favorite food. We'll have music, dancing.

(general talk between students about bhandara.)

R: We have some delicious looking prashad. This looks good.

(tape ends) [TOC]

LIVE SPONTANEOUSLY!

16th March, 1992

Robert: Good evening. (Good evening Robert.) It is a pleasure to be with you once again. It is a privilege to be with you. To see your nice shining faces. Everyone staring at me. (laughter) Having all these thoughts in your head. Thinking about all kinds of morbid things.

SH: Oh go on. (laughs)

R: Go on. All is well. (pause) In this age there are many Jnanis, Sages, spiritual teachers being churned out. They're all over the place. The 1990s is the year of the Jnanis. (students laugh) Someone is always telling me of a new Jnani in town. This is all good there is nothing wrong with this. There is nothing wrong with anything. Everyone has their place. Everyone is doing what they're supposed to be doing. As the observer you should not react to anything you should just watch, observe, look intelligently at the world, at the universe, see what's happening and be happy.

In any event there are many schools of Advaita Vedanta that teach that the universe is maya and illusion. Yet when asked where did this maya come from? Why is there maya? Why is there illusion? And many teachers say that this is a great mystery. It's a great mystery they're told. For they're told, students are told that this will confuse you and confound you. So it's better not to think about it. Yet you have to know what's going on.

A Jnani is a being that has become all of these things, maya, creation, everything. Therefore an answer is forthcoming. Confusion, to be confounded is a good thing. I love to confound you and confuse you. It is like a Zen koan. When you come up with the answer of a zen koan satori or nirvana ensues. It is the same thing with answers like this that confound you and confuse you in Advaita Vedanta. For what happens is the brain sort of explodes. The mind diminishes. You begin to feel and see things you never felt and saw before. Every question has an answer. There is no such thing as saying it's a mystery or it will confuse you or confound you.

We have discussed these things before. Creation is maya, illusion. Yet who caused the illusion. Where did this maya come from? Who can tell me?

SF: Inside the individual? (R: Inside of the individual. How did it get there?) It didn't really start?

SH: It came from nowhere. It's just appearing, it doesn't really exist. (R: Exactly.)

SV: But actually the illusion is that there seems to be an illusion.

R: The illusion is an illusion. Maya never existed. It does not exist. This sounds strange to many of us but it's the truth. (SG: You call that an answer?) (students laugh) That's the answer you're going to get whether you like it or not. (laughter)

There is no maya. There is no illusion. It is like you are dreaming and you wake up. What happened to the dream it never existed, it appeared to have existed. But there was no place, no room, no space where it existed. It is like the water in a mirage. It appears real but it doesn't exist. Again you question, "Well why does it appear to exist?" It doesn't. It never did. No thing exists.

Yet we appear to be mortal. We appear to be alive. We appear to be looking at a world. Or beauty out there. Flowers the sky, trees yet in reality, it's not there. You're not there. No thing is there. As long as you identify with the body you can never really know this. For the body-mind phenomena keeps you guessing, evaluating, trying to solve problems. There is no problem to solve. Because there never was anything wrong or right.

Can't you see when you are a student of Advaita Vedanta when you're really sincere about this. You are wasting your time to try to solve problems. I don't care what the problem may be. It is a mistake to try to solve these problems. For when you say you are trying to solve a problem you believe the problem is true, it's real, it exists. Which means it can only turn into another problem. There is no end to it. It never finishes.

This is why I say to Drop it! Do not carry it around. Do not think about it. Do not consider it. Do not give it any power. You are the one who gives it the power. For you consider it, you ponder it, you evaluate it, you try to change it, to remove it.

As an example, say your feelings have been hurt. Who's feelings, what feelings. You have no feelings. To have feelings you have to be a human being. Are you a human being? (laughter) What are you? (laughter) You're a nothing. An absolute nothing. Yet nothing also doesn't exist. But the question will arise, "Where did nothing come from?" (laughter) Nothing didn't come from any place because it never existed.

Yet when you use words you have to say you're nothing. When you think about this you become radiantly happy. You become happy because there are no thoughts. There are no solutions, there are no answers. There is nothing you have to become or do. You just have to stop thinking. Stop trying to solve problems. Stop trying to soothe your hurt feelings, drop it! Leave it alone. Do not look for answers. It is the only way to be happy. As soon as you start talking or thinking happiness eludes you. True happiness is no thing.

What is happiness made out of? Most of you believe it is something that turns you on. Makes you happy. But this is not really happiness. This is only part of the illusion that you believe in. That you believe will make you radiantly happy. And after a time it will change and you'll become miserable. For no thing in this world or in this universe can bring you perfect happiness.

You have to become totally empty. The question always arises, "Where did the emptiness come from?" As long as I think about being empty, again I'm deluded. If you can think about it it's not the truth. If you can discuss it, it's not the truth. If you think you've got a point or an answer it's not the truth. There are no answers because there are no questions.

People search all over the world. For their happiness. For the right teacher. For peace of mind. Yet there is no such thing. There is no peace of mind. There is no happiness. For there is nowhere from which they came. There would have to be a source of happiness or a source of peace. There'd have to be a source of wisdom. Yet if there is a source for these things, from where did the source come from? How did the source come into existence? Can't you see now that whatever you think about is wrong? Whatever you see whatever you say is wrong.

You may not agree with me. Good. But what do you agree with? As long as you've got your own story you're wrong. As long as you've got your own beliefs, your own system, you're wrong. Yet where did the wrong come from? To be wrong you need a source from where the wrong comes from. Therefore noone is wrong. Noone is right. Noone is. Noone. Silence.

Many of us are making tremendous progress in this group and I'm really proud of you. You are beginning to understand there is absolutely nothing to say. There is nothing to correct. There is noone to love or to hate. There is absolutely nothing. All is well.

When I say, "All is well," do not try to qualify that statement. If you were only able to accept "All is well," for what it's worth, nothing, you would instantly be awakened. But whenever I make the statement to you and I say, "All is well," immediately your mind starts thinking about this, doesn't it? You're saying, "If you only knew my problems? If Robert only knew what is going on in my life. I can't find a job. My house burned down. This happened, that happened. I've got cancer of the eyeballs." So what! Now I don't mean any disrespect when I say, "So what," if you're suffering. But the truth is, so what! (laughter) So what really means it's not this and it's not that. It's not right, it's not wrong. It's not good, it's not bad. Do not look at yourself as a body. Do not look at others as bodies. Do not look at the universe as an entity. Just learn to be spontaneous. Watch, observe, look and do nothing. We have to get to that point.

Think of how many times your feelings were hurt today. Think how many times you felt sorry for yourself. Think how many times you believed something is wrong somewhere. You watched the news on TV. If you watch the news on TV you're crazy. (laughter) You're out of your mind. (laughter) There is total chaos and confusion going on. Every Time I turn the TV on I just have to laugh. Everybody is taking everything so seriously. They're running around killing one another. Fighting for the president of the United States. All of these things have been going on and they've been going on since the beginning of time. Nothing has changed. And people never learn.

I suppose if we live long enough like five, six thousand years these things would not bother us any longer because we've seen them before. We've seen them over and over and over again if you were five thousand years old. You would have seen wars, man's inhumanity to man, destruction, chaos, cataclysms again and again and again and again and it wouldn't phase you.

But because you were born in this century and you're only seeing a small part of your life you take these things as serious, you take these things being real and true and you react to them. Reacting to them means that you believe in them that they are real and true for you. Therefore you've got to change something or fix something or resolve something or get even with someone, why? What difference does it make? Awaken to reality. Leave everyone alone especially your own body. Leave it alone. Do what you have to do and leave it alone. There is no confusion. There is nothing. And again nothing means nothing. You are para-nothing, beyond nothing.

What is disturbing you? Many of you would like to change their lives for you still believe that if things were different you'd be much happier. If you had your way you'd be so much more peaceful, so much happier. This will never happen. You cannot change what you are inside by changing conditions. Everything is right just the way it is. Leave everything alone. Accept life. By becoming radiantly peaceful and happy just the way you are, right now. In spite of so-called conditioning.

Some of you believe you are lonely. Some of you believe you are poverty stricken. Some of you believe that you are in ill-health. Some of you believe that you are very healthy. Some of you believe that you are very secure, you have plenty of funds. They're all impostors. It's all a game that you are playing with yourself. It never came from anywhere. It doesn't exist. But yet you identify with your body to such an extent that everything looks real. You therefore believe that if you had this instead of that you'd be very happy. But that is not the case. The people who have what you want are also worrying and fretting and have their own so-called problems in their life. You can only become happy and peaceful when you have no desires. Accept everything the way it is. Just the way it is. The good and the bad so-called, the right and the wrong just accept everything. Do not evaluate it. Do not judge it. Do not try to change it. Just be.

You're going to have to wake up one day. Why not do it right now? The only reason you believe it's hard is because you're not living spontaneously. You're living in time and space. When you live spontaneously there is no room for anything else. Therefore all of your yesterdays are gone, your tomorrows do not exist. There is no room in spontaneity to worry or to fret or to think, if you're truly living spontaneously. It means you're living in every second. When you live in every second where is the time to think. Where is the time to judge. Where is the time to get angry. Trying to convert somebody or convince somebody of anything. There is no place and there's no time to do all that. But when you live in time then all the thoughts come to you about yesterday, worries come to you about tomorrow and you have to make decisions. And you have likes and dislikes. All these things take place in time and space.

Again when you live spontaneously time and space do not exist for you. For you are living fully every second. Every second you exist. You do not exist as anything special.

You do not exist as a man or a woman. You simply exist. And in that spontaneity you are the universe. But as soon as you break away from it you become an individual once more. You become a body and a mind and you see others as bodies and minds. But when you're living in that spontaneity there is no space there is no room for anything. You have become absolute freedom. That freedom is not for yourself. For if you know freedom then it's not freedom. There is no one left to know anything when you're living spontaneously. The knower has been transcended.

What more is there to say. Anything else that I say will become redundant.

(silence)

If you'd like to ask questions, go ahead. See if I care. (laughter)

SX: Robert, according to what you're saying, life doesn't have any purpose in itself?

R: Yes. As long as you don't ask me a question like Bob Saliman, "Where does the seminal fluid go?" (SH: Where does what go?) Seminal fluid. (SH: Oh.) (students laugh)

S: I have a question. (R: Sure.) Before I ask it I know what your answer would probably be. Who wants to know? (laughter) My question is this and the more I think about it the less important it seems. And there is no answer but what the question I thought from time to time was, why did Krishna Murti spend so much time with intellectuals? When almost everything he said is very difficult to understand through the finite mind. In fact I have a tape of a talk by him in which he says, "Do not except what the speaker is saying. The speaker has no authority whatsoever. He is not a teacher. He is not a guru. For if he is a teacher then you are the follower and if you are the follower you destroy yourself and the teacher." Now the meaning of that doesn't spring readily to mind.

But he did spend a lot of time with intellectuals. And what I decided at this point is that it's just one of those things that's for the finite mind...there is nobody to understand it and I just think of other things that Masters have done that don't seem to make sense. Which would be the case with him spending a lot of time with intellectuals. Now I don't know whether you want to comment or not, I don't believe that it calls for any comment but if you have some...

R: Why try to figure out what Krishna Murti did? (SF: Sir?) Why try to understand what Krishna Murti did? (SF: That's what I'm saying there is no use, the whole thing- there is really no point in really talking about it...) All those things clog up your mind. (SF: It's a waste of time to even to discuss it.) Drop it!

SF: Okay I'll drop it. Trying but...I dropped it because even before I asked the question I said it was a waste of time. (students laugh) Which you covered earlier.

R: There have been so many teachers on this earth and there still are many teachers on this earth. Do not try to figure out who is what and what is who. Just be the observer. Do not get involved. Listen and do nothing. As I said before if you live spontaneously there will be no time to think about these things.

(Something happens, seems Fred leaves room students comment and joke)

SH: Don't worry, he'll be back not to worry. (laughter) (SM: He didn't disappear. (laughter) (R: He dissolved.) (laughter) (SV: Not for long.) (laughs)

SK: I got a crazy question too, I think. What you were saying before it was about awakening without the conditions, without being conditioned. Forget your conditions just awaken go beyond it right, so...

R: If you're conditioned you cannot awaken. You have to be unconditioned to awaken. (SK: That's a huge thing, a paradox.) As long as you're filled with thoughts and feelings and emotions and opinions, this keeps you from awakening. (SK: Yeah okay I can see that.) You have to just drop everything. (SK: Right that is the problem. That is the hard part. That's the part I don't see...) If you try to live in the moment in the split second of eternity there will be no time and no space to think about anything or to be anywhere. (SK: I can see that when I'm centered.) So stay centered and whenever your mind starts to think grab it, choke it, kill it. Stop it!

Most of us when we begin to think we forget about all the teachings, we forget about everything and the thoughts take over completely. And it leads to other thoughts and other thoughts. What we're supposed to do is grab the thoughts when they begin and put a stop to them. Thoughts are like weeds. If you do not stop them they will grow over everything. They'll take over everything. As soon as you feel the thoughts coming on whether they're good or bad or indifferent. Stop the thoughts anyway you can. Just by thinking about stopping the thoughts, the thoughts stop.

SF: Sir... (R: Umm.) I've had a kind of a breakthrough. Last Christmas when you told us to give ten dollars to a needy person made me uncomfortable. I've never been comfortable around beggars or so-called homeless or these vagrants. People lying in the street they've always made me uncomfortable. But recently I found out something that seems to work. Interra, what she does is she find out how much she wants to give each day and I read recently that in an authoritative book that maybe we should give to the needy and give to the deserving and to the undeserving because there is no way to tell the difference. So I decided that I'd do that and I figured out each day how much I wanted to give. And I give to the first person who asks me or to someone who looks like they could use a little help. And it kind of helped because those people don't bother me like they used to. And this has really been great.

In fact yesterday I gave a dollar to a ??? black and he smiled and said thank you. And it made me feel good and the main thing is that the whole situation doesn't bug me like it did. I don't even know why I share this kind of stuff.

SV: It's good stuff. (SF: Sir?) Good stuff. Glad you did. (SF: It's nice because up to now those people made me very uncomfortable and there's a hell of a lot of them...)

R: If you have to think about it there is ego involved. Again you must be spontaneous. If you see a homeless person comes into your life you either do something or you don't, but do not stop to think about it. (SF: Well I used to think about it but now I've decided hell I'll just give them a little something to give.) If you think about it, it means that you're trying to be a good person. To chalk up some points for God or something like that. Then you're just kidding yourself. Always be spontaneous in everything you do. (SF: That's an order.) Right.

SF: Actually I don't think I'm trying to be a good person I'm just trying to get rid of this negative attitude towards that. And it's worked up to now. (R: But there are too many thoughts involved.) Okay I'll try to stop them, drop them! No thoughts of any kind is the goal. (R: No thoughts of any kind.)

SH: The spontaneity eliminates that being anyone that is doing something?

R: Yes. (SH: So it's free and natural.) True. Exactly. (SH: Umm.) When you think about it then the ego is doing it. (SH: Then you're back in the soup.) You're trying to do a good deed.

SK: Maybe it could even be - maybe Fred what he was saying was, he was happy because he was more comfortable. Trying to get comfortable. (SH: But who is getting comfortable, that's the ego again.) Right. Good deeds are comfortable. (SH: I know. It's not spontaneous.)

SX: What is the use for the mind?

R: No use at all. (students laugh) Totally useless. The mind is really a conglomeration of thoughts. The mind is made up of thoughts. Thoughts of your past and worries about the future.

SD: So what you're saying, would put a whole new slant on, "if you don't use it, you lose it, right?" (laughter)

R: You want to lose it. (laughter) But most people think that if they don't think, if they don't have a mind they'll be a vegetable. On the contrary you will be your Self.

SK: So getting comfortable or not getting comfortable is just thoughts again? More thoughts? (R: Yes. It's all thoughts.)

SR: I guess there should be no motivations or reactions?

R: No, exactly. The ego lives motivated. It's the ego who goes through all of these things. (SR: I guess there is a fear that if I act spontaneously without a chance to censor that then I'm living dangerously. Because I'm making these acts of others will have their feelings hurt or I maybe... (laughter) It is Jorge who thinks that. That you may have your feelings hurt or this may happen or that may happen. Those thoughts have to go. If you are spontaneous then something beautiful will happen by itself. Where there are no thoughts involved whatsoever. (SR: From your experience do actions that come from no motivation do they tend to be sensitive to the feelings of others? Or do they seem to be willy nilly, sometimes sensitive and sometimes insensitive?) It depends on the condition, what's happening. Sometimes they're sensitive, sometimes they're not but it's all spontaneous. (SR: Sometimes there are legal acts, sometimes they are illegal acts? (laughter) No I wouldn't say that. There are no acts. (SR: Right, but this happens?) There's just plain existence. (SR: But the policeman observing may see an act?) Well let the policeman figure out what to do with it. (SR: Well now maybe we'll be behind bars living spontaneously? (students laugh) If you find yourself behind bars you're not living spontaneously. (laughter) You think you are.

SR: I think we have to be willing to be behind bars and you have to be willing to let anything happen. Whatever happens happens. You must be willing to lose all your money, your wife, anything. In order to live spontaneously right?

R: When you live spontaneously what is supposed to happen will happen. All these things you are saying is true to an extent but it will not necessarily work that way. Whatever is supposed to take place will take place by itself. Everything will happen the way it's supposed to.

SR: I guess thinking prevents what is supposed to take place to take place. (R: Exactly!) And I guess it kind of follows up predestination right?

R: Predestination is working on the level of the relative world. In the relative world, the relative universe there is predestination. But when you go beyond the relative there is no predestination. Therefore if you go beyond the relative there are no mistakes. You no longer live in a world where you do good or bad, right or wrong, you go to jail or you don't go to jail. (SR: Power to the judge Robert.) What's that? (SR: Power to the judge.) (students laugh) When the time comes I will.

SP: So the same applies for education and going to acupuncture school and things like that? (R: Yes.) Getting all this knowledge and information is a useless endeavor?

R: It's a useless endeavor in the long run. But while you're living in this world everything you do seems important. (SP: Then there must be an application of a practical thought, for the use of a practical thought?) It is not practical thought really, it's maya. It's the grand illusion that moves you. That makes you believe you are using practical thought, that makes you believe that what you're doing is important. This is all the maya.

SP: But I'm not referring to a personal self getting the self out of the way. For instance if I have to go out and repair the car. If I start the car and it doesn't start if I hadn't used correct memory - memory is important to function in society - and if I use memory correctly and I go out and lift up the lid and then I check the battery cable and then make sure there is a connection I maybe clean the points whatever little bit of knowledge I know about and that's practical knowledge.

R: Yes. If you're living spontaneously you will do the same thing but without being caught up in the act of doing. (SP: But Robert if you didn't have any thoughts you wouldn't have an idea of all this. That comes with memory and experience. If you have no memory you can't know about a cup of tea or I need some food?) You have what is called memory in spontaneity. (SP: Pardon?) You have what is called memory in spontaneity. In spontaneity you know what to do. You're doing something in the second, in the moment. You're doing what you have to do, what has to be done will be done. But you will not be the doer. (SP: I understand. But when I said practical thought, there is just practical thought there is just no person in it, it's just functioning, except not only tea, if you just have to go fix the battery, you just fix the battery.) Yes. I guess it's what you call practical thought. To have practical thought there has to be a thinker who has practical thought. It's just a name. What you're saying is true. But it's just the terms you're using that I disagree with. Because to have practical thought there has to be a person that thinks practically in the moment. And yet when the mind is gone there is just spontaneity that takes place without practical thought. What you call practical thought and what I call nothing is the same thing I suppose. (SP: With all the language of the same thing and if you didn't have that kind of tool to help communicate verbally there would be no communication.) Communication will take place as long as you're living in the relative world. All these things will happen by themselves.

SP: What I'm saying is if you didn't have language you couldn't communicate. So there has to be thought as a tool that's used even if the mind is silent. Even if that's so, there is still a tool that is used by something else.

R: True it's not thought. It's consciousness. Consciousness is always in effect, always working, always doing something. Yet you can go beyond consciousness and still fix your car and do whatever has to be done. Everything will be done without taking thought.

SP: But I'm not saying about taking thought I'm just saying it's a useful tool. We originally started this because of the mention about acupuncture or in any school what you study. Those are tools to function within the world.

R: Whatever you're doing is necessary at the time. So if you're going to acupuncture school this is what you're doing but this is all on the relative plane. All this is taking place in the relative world. When you are beyond thought, beyond words it will still take place but it will be completely different.

SF: We take the case of a child prodigy at nine years old playing the piano beautifully. The child is not playing the piano the piano is being played, is that...?

R: The piano is being played, yes, true, that's a good point.

SV: (Student talks about his experience with a pigeon while driving)

R: All is well.

(silence)

Do we have any announcements?

We're having the bhandara on the 26th, Sunday. Somebody should coordinate that. We need a coordinator. Any coordinators around?

SL: Robert is it possible for us to just have a sign off sheet or just to bring whatever would you be comfortable with that. People bring whatever they want to.

R: You can bring whatever you want to but unless we coordinate it people may bring the same things. (SL: Well wouldn't we have a sign off sheet?) Sure. Why don't you take charge of that? (SL: Umm, I'm...usually I don't come on Sunday.) We'll all play it by ear. Whatever happens, happens. (laughter)

(Coordination of bhandara continues)

R: Okay, I'll go along with that. (SK: Is it 1 o'clock?) It's 1 o'clock.

We have prashad...

MAKE THE MIND REST IN THE HEART

19th April, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. (Good afternoon Robert.)

SG: Robert there is a white Plymouth duster out there with not the engine but something kind of motor running I don't know if it's alright or not? Anyone have a white Plymouth duster by Henry's entrance?

SD: Ah I do but it just runs for a while and has a fan which blows the engine.

(Robert continues) It's good to see you again. To be with you. How bad do you really want to awaken and become free?

I tell you that as long as you celebrate holidays, as long as you get involved in maya in any way or form this is what keeps you back. As long as you are superstitious, as long as you believe something can hurt you, there is a power outside of yourself, that there is something wrong in this world or there is something right in this world and you get totally involved in it, this is what holds you back.

Now there is nothing wrong with celebrations. I'm all for them. But do not take them seriously. Do not get so involved that you believe the superstitions of the celebration. That you get so involved that you have to do certain things or you will be punished by some God up in the sky. You've got to become loose and free of all these superstitions of person, place and thing and be your Self. We all want to become free, liberated so-to-speak.

Free from what? We think we're attached to something. We believe something has a hold on us. We have fears. We have wants and desires, needs. These are the things that hold you back.

Think about your own life. What is it that is holding you back personally from liberation? Of course you're already liberated you know that. But if you knew that you wouldn't be here. You believe that you're still human going through experiences, having friends and enemies, having good things and bad things in your life.

In other words you believe in powers outside of yourself. You still believe that the world can do something to you if you're not careful. To hurt you. You still believe that there is a disease out there that you can catch. You still believe that there is a person with more power than you who can do something to you. This is all false and foolish. You are the only power. There is no power apart from you. It is your mind that plays these tricks on you. It is your mind that makes you believe that this is like this and that is like that. And you have to fix things and rectify things and straighten things out.

What is this mind? Where did it come from? Who gave it birth? To whom does it belong?

We all should know by now that the mind is just a bundle of thoughts. That is all the mind is. A bundle of thoughts. It is not a separate entity. The mind is maya, the world, the universe and your perceptions of it. It's what causes things to happen to you in your life, good or bad. But when you start to see and feel that mind does not exist then how can you be hurt. How can things bother you or annoy you? For it is only the mind that becomes annoyed. It doesn't really become annoyed. It has these perceptions from karma. If you didn't know about something it could never hurt you. The samskaras that are with you, these attitudes, you have known sometime before or you wouldn't be able to feel them or have them. You have to let go. You have to let go of everything.

Remember that this doesn't mean that you will do absolutely nothing. The paradox is: you will be doing something but you will be doing nothing. There is no one who does a thing. Yet you appear to be doing things but nobody is home.

As you begin to empty yourself of all thoughts, emotions, preconceived ideas by observing them, looking them straight in the face seeing their non-validity involved, the mind begins to weaken. The mind begins to lose its so-called power and pretty soon there is no mind to deal with at all. When there is no mind at that time you are free. So it is only the mind that holds you back. Your belief system. This is what you have to work with everyday. You have to first realize that it's your belief system, your mind that causes the conflicts, the problems, the beliefs. Then you begin to look at your mind for what it really is. Examine it thoroughly. Realizing it's a non-entity. It was never born, it never came from any place, never existed.

If your mind never existed then who are you? If there is no mind there is no body. If there is no body there are no others. If there are no others, there is no world, there is no universe. There is only that which always was. That which always was is nothing. No thing. No thing that this world consists of. All things are an emanation of the mind. Everything. Therefore if the mind goes there is no one to think. There is no one to feel the pressure of this world or this universe as being real. This is the reason in all the high teachings of this world we are told to eliminate the mind. Think of all the thoughts that came to you just today since you woke up, got out of bed. The different thoughts, feelings, emotions, that came to you and you accepted these things. You felt these things as if they were real.

Many of you here are doing very well, annihilating the mind, seeing the only reality the Self, as no thing. Yet some of you are still caught up in this world of maya, of illusion, and it hurts. When you dream. You may dream you got killed or wounded or put in prison for the rest of your life. It hurts. Yet when you awaken these things never existed.

This life is like that. You appear to be going through experiences. Good experiences, bad experiences, all kind of experiences, yet you take it seriously. Forgetting it's just a dream. As you take it seriously it expands in your life. And your whole life evolves around the thing that you fear, the thing that you love. The things that appear real in this world. Then when the changes come you become upset. For you want to hold on to the good things of this world. And get rid of the bad things. Yet what you really want to do is awaken completely. Forgetting about good things and bad things. You cannot afford to hold on to anything. If you want to be free.

You must ask yourself this question, "Do I really want to be free? If I do why am I doing these other things? Why do I believe in this and believe in that? Why is this so important to me? Why is that so important to me?" Remember mentally as long as something is important to you it becomes part of your experience and pulls you further into maya, into illusion. Only you can make yourself free. Simply by letting go. Letting go of everything mentally. Remember I'm not saying you have to leave your family or leave your job or leave your house or leave anything. I am saying that you mentally have to become dis-attached to these things.

You may say, "How can I love my family if I become dis-attached?" What becomes dis-attached is your ego, the mind. When the ego and mind become weaker, love becomes stronger. Therefore you can love your enemies. Love everything in this world, in this universe and yet not be attached to anything. This love comes by itself. You do not have to develop it. It only comes when you let go of the other. As you let go of everything else. Things like love, bliss, joy, peace come by themselves. You have to become totally honest with yourself.

You cannot have a secret life and on top of this want freedom and liberation. There are no secrets in the Self. It's an open book. As long as you're leading two lives then this teaching becomes entertainment for you. You come here when there is nothing to do, when you're not doing anything important.

As an example: Most people here today — not everyone but most people — do not have a family life. You're either single or you do not live with family. So you come here because you have nothing to do on the holiday. But if you met someone, let's say you fall in love with or your family invited you to dinner from far away some place — your parents, your children — would you really be here today? This is something to think about. If things were going your way, so-to-speak, the way you want them to be, would you be here today? There are very few people who can say yes to this. This is what I'm referring to when I say, "Most of us have a secret life," or we have two lives.

One life says, "I want to become enlightened. I want to become free. I want to become evolved. I want to be self realized." But the other life does everything that is against the principle of self-realization. You become totally involved in maya and you think you're having fun. When the so-called fun wears down, wears out you have to have more fun and you're always looking to have fun. And whatever else you may do when you're by yourself. Be honest with yourself. See what you're really all about.

Let me make this perfectly clear. There is absolutely nothing wrong with enjoying yourself. Experiencing the good things of this world so-to-speak. There is nothing wrong with this at all.

The problem arises when you believe these things are real. When you take these things seriously. And you believe this is what brings me happiness. To go to dinner. To go to a movie. To go to a play. To go to an opera. To have friends over for dinner. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this until you believe it brings you happiness. As you know by now the truth is that nothing in this world can bring you happiness. Happiness is within your Self. You are happiness.

What you're really doing is allowing the mind to rest in the heart. When the mind is satisfied that you have something that you love in your life, the mind rests in the heart. When the mind rests in the heart, happiness ensues all by itself. For happiness is the very nature of yourself. Whenever the mind goes out searching for something to make them happy, make you happy then you are not happy until you accomplish whatever you want to do. Once you're accomplishing it, once it's done the mind rests in the heart and you have happiness.

All the time you believe that it is the thing outside of you that brings you the happiness. It's the object that has brought you great happiness. The object has absolutely nothing to do with it. It is when you are satisfied that the mind rests in the heart and you become happy. So we learn to make the mind rest in the heart all of the time and we will always be happy. We can be happy under all circumstances. It makes no difference if we're in prison or if we're in a concentration camp. If we're in hell. As long as you do not allow the mind to come out of your heart you have to be happy.

It is like the person who sits in the hot sun and burns then goes under a shade tree and feels comfortable. As soon as the person is comfortable he goes back into the sun again and again the sun burns him. So he runs back under the shade tree. Only a fool would keep running back into the sun then go back under the shade tree. But that is exactly what we do. We go out searching for things to make us happy. And then when the things wear off we become miserable. Whereas we can sit by ourselves and have tremendous peace and happiness. We can go to a movie, we can go anywhere we want and the happiness never changes. The happiness is your Self. You are that.

You have to always be aware of this. You have to realize that I don't have to run here or run there or go here or go there. If I'm going here or going there it's because I want to but it has absolutely nothing to do with my happiness. It will not make me a better person if I go anywhere or do anything else. All the knowledge that you need is within yourself. All the peace that you need is within yourself. All the joy that you need is within yourself. All the love that you need is within yourself. And since your Self is all-pervading, omnipresence, therefore anywhere you look, anywhere you go you are in yourself. There is only one Self.

When you know that Self others become that Self, the world becomes the Self, the tree becomes the Self, the sky becomes the Self, the planets becomes the Self, the whole universe is the Self. Therefore wherever you go whatever you do you are seeing the Self. And the Self is always love and compassion and peace and bliss. That is why nothing can make you unhappy. For you're not seeing something apart from you. You're seeing yourself.

As you know when you see something apart from you, you have all kinds of problems that go with it. You have to fix it, you have to change it, you have to love it, you have to hate it, you have to do all kinds of things with it. Whereas if you are your Self you do absolutely nothing. You just remain your Self. And you appear to be going here and going there and doing this and doing that but you are always the Self. You are always that.

(short silence)

Feel the power within you. (short silence) Feel the love within you. (short silence)

Feel the peace within you. (short silence) Feel the freedom within you. (short silence)

Can't you see by now that you are that? (short silence)

You have no needs or desires or wants. (short silence) Everything is fulfilled.

(short silence)

Can't you see by now that you are not the body? That you are a spirit, omnipresent, omnipotent, omniscient. You are not limited to a body that seems to get old, get sick, that dies. That is not you. Only what has been born dies. Do you really think you were born? You have lived forever and you will continue to live forever.

The body-mind is a superimposition on the Self. You have identified with the body-mind and that is the only problem you've got. So you now have to identify with the Self. To the extent that you identify with the Self, to that extent does your body and mind become weaker so-to-speak, until they disappear altogether. And you are the Self. Perfect.

The whole universe, everything is a superimposition on the Self. They appear to be real but nothing is real. Stop identifying with the body. You identify with the body when you feel hurt, when you feel good. When you feel this is happening and that is happening to you, you are identifying with the body.

You can tell when this happens. When you just feel good all of the time. For no reason at all. Then you know you're making progress. When you start feeling happiness, joy for no reason whatsoever. You're no longer looking at your affairs or your life in the past or the future of your life. You are spontaneously looking at the Self. Just the way it appears. And that is unalloyed happiness. Un-perturbable peace. Just the way you are. Right now. Right this second. You are that.

As soon as you start thinking you spoil it. In this split second you are pure and bright and shiny. In this split second you are all-pervading, omniscient, omnipotent. Pure awareness is your real nature this second, this moment. Feel it. There is nothing that can disturb you any longer. You have overcome the world and you are free.

R: Let's see if we have any stumps. There are no stumps.

SV: I have a question. Robert when you talk about the mind you talk about the mind like having a group of thoughts. Like thoughts about the past and thoughts about the future. But there can only be one thought at a time not thoughts plural. There can't be thoughts and one thought in the mind. Whatever thought you got to get a beginning a duration an ending and then it's finished. (R: Umm.) There can't be thoughts plural. There is only one thought, whatever it is.

R: There is only one thought at a time. But the mind is composed of endless thoughts since you were born so-to-speak. From many lives. And worries about the future that you learnt in this world. But they come to you one at a time. They don't all hit you at once. If they hit you at once you wouldn't be able to take it, you would drop dead. (SV: But one thought at a time isn't mind, mind has to have more than one thought and it doesn't have...it just has one thought and at the end of it there is no mind, when the thought finishes there is no mind.) Look at the mind as a reservoir. Full of all kinds of foolishness and nonsense and thoughts and everything else. But there is one outlet. So the thoughts come out one at a time. And you get rid of this one and another one comes and you get rid of this one and another one comes. (SV: That's an assumption, all I notice is when I have a thought, I have a thought and that is all there is.) So then why when you get rid of it another one comes? (SV: There isn't another one because the other one is only a thought that I had a thought before but it's a present thought. It isn't another one it's just a present thought.) Say you're thinking about how hot it is here. (SV: Yes.) Then the air conditioner comes on and you think how cool it is. Then we're talking here too much and you're thinking about going home. That you're hungry and you want to eat supper. And then when you eat supper then you think about you want to watch television. So thoughts keep coming. They never stop. They're endless. But they come one at a time. Do you see what I mean?

SV: I'm not sure it is because I only see one thought at a time. (R: Yes.) At the moment there is a thought that is all there is. There is no other thought. There is no past thought. There is no future thought. This is a thought. A thought may talk about the past or it may talk about the future but it's a present thought. And when this thought finishes then there is noone, no mind, there is nothing.

R: In truth that's right. But as we are mortal beings the thoughts never stop coming. (SV: That's how it seems.) Sure that's how it seems. There is no mind to begin with. Of course and there is no mind to begin with. There is nobody asking that question. (SV: Yes but the concept mind assumes that there can be more than one thought otherwise you have no mind. A single thought isn't a mind.) Sure. (SV: It's an assumption.) It's an assumption of course it's an assumption. (SV: Yeah. That's what I was talking about.) Everything we're talking about is an assumption. (SV: Yeah.) You're an assumption. But you have to get rid of the whole thing and become free.

SF: On Thursday you covered pretty thoroughly if you're a disciple, you're a...unclear... if this is so, if that's so in reality everything that we think is outside of us really isn't?

R: True there is no outside, there is no inside. (SF: No opposites either?) There is no thing. Nothing exists. No thing ever existed. But because you believe you're a body these things appear real.

SF: How do you know? I do but... The bible says, "Eye has not seen, nor ear heard the bliss that is prepared for the righteous," the righteous are people who are right? Ones who have gone into the state of pure consciousness, pure awareness which is our real nature. (R: Umm.) Is that right?

R: That is what the Bible says. (SF: The Bibles right.) Sure why not. (SF: Take it or leave it.) But what do you say? (SF: The best thing to do is to be still.) Of course. (SF: Otherwise I'm thinking again.) Always remember when everything is said and done it is you that counts. (SF: Thank you.) You're welcome. (SF: And you, we're all one.)

SH: Don't take it personally. (laughter)

SM: Robert when we spoke before I was telling you, the Self attracts the Self, so does that apply when people are ready? Like the Jnani will come to help them?

R: On one plane that is true. But remember that there is not two selves or three selves. (SM: No.) There is only one Self therefore the one Self is omnipresent and all-pervading. But on that plane that you're talking about the Self attracts the Self. When there is something within you that is ripe and ready, like an orange that is ready to fall off the tree you will attract yourself to that experience whether it's a Jnani or a Sage or something else or a book. Can be anything. But you will attract yourself to that thing that you need to do next for your unfoldment and fulfillment.

This is why I always say that you're in your right place at the right time going through those experiences that are necessary for you at this time. There are no mistakes. Everything is in it's right place. Never believe that there is something wrong in your life. You are where you're supposed to be. Going through those experiences that are necessary for you right now.

When you become angry at yourself because you don't like the experiences that you're going through you are hindering your growth. Rather be grateful, thankful, for every experience that you're going through. Even though it may appear to be terrible in your life. Be thankful for this experience. For the experience is not what you think it is in your finite mind. There is a greater purpose to it. All is well.

SD: Robert when you refer to spiritual growth are you talking about the approach to enlightenment?

R: The approach to enlightenment, yes. Every experience that you have in your life whatever it looks like, is only to take you up further toward freedom and liberation. This is the reason we are told never to judge by appearances. For finitely we can't understand the experiences. We're looking at life from one viewpoint only. (SD: But haven't you said that life has no purpose?) It has no purpose but as long as you believe you are a human being and you're working on yourself then you have to appear to be doing certain things to become free. But ultimately life has no purpose whatsoever.

SB: What about realization because it seems that the purpose is self transcending, self sacrificing purpose. To see it as all nothing, useless...?

R: Who sees? (SB: The Self.) The Self doesn't even exist. (SB: Well it appears to. From that point of view, from the relative point of view.) As long as it appears to exist then you have to do things to get there. (SB: From that point of view it seems to be a self-realizing process of self transcending the ego.) Then you have to work on yourself and do spiritual work, sadhana to get there. But when you begin to feel there is no purpose and there is no realization, there is no confusion, there is no delusion, then you don't have to anything just keep still.

SD: Does a baby have awareness of the Self?

R: A new born baby is pure. It doesn't have awareness of Self. It has awareness like we have when we're sleeping. When we're sound asleep there is no ego. The mind rests in the heart. Only when we're sound asleep. So we do not function. But when you are awake and the mind rests in the heart that is called sahaja samadhi. And then you are aware of the Self. So a new born baby is like the sleep state. It is pure but is unconscious. (SD: And not self-realized.) Not self-realized.

SJ: Unless it's a self-realized baby of course. (students laugh) (R: True.)

SF: At what point do the vasanas and the samskaras come into the individual?

R: As soon as it's born. (SF: He's pure.) Slowly but surely it comes. (SF: But you said he was pure.) He's pure to an extent but he's like us asleep. (SF: Oh I see what you mean.) But as it continues in this life sojourn, all the samskaras come out. Things start to happen. He's being brainwashed everyday by the parents, by society and here we are today, bunch of idiots. (laughter)

SL: Robert if the illusion is as pictures on the screen of consciousness and the pictures are created by our finite minds. How is it that the finite mind could create something with such ineffable beauty as images?

R: The finite mind is simply the illusion of being. We are beings and we're being. This being is creation of symmetry, of beauty, of ugliness, of death, of life, all this appears in maya. (SL: But if it comes from the mind then doesn't that presuppose that the mind can be creative to create a butterfly or a humming bird?) The mind appears to create all these things of course. But who is creating? Where does it all come from? (SL: Well it comes from consciousness.) Consciousness is self contained. The truth is it doesn't even come from any place, it doesn't even appear. It doesn't exist. It is like the mirage in the water. Like the snake in the rope. Like the sky is blue. Everything appears to be but upon investigation it doesn't exist at all. (SL: I can imagine that we can visualize cardboard boxes but ??? that's too much.) (laughs) For whom is it too much? For the ego mind. When the ego mind gets out of the way everything will shine by itself. This thing called maya. (SL: I'm confused about this.) (laughter)

SB: That's why it's maya. Otherwise it wouldn't be maya we'd be able to cut through it.

R: The thing called maya is a very intricate game. It makes everything appear so real. So alive. (SL: And the reality of it, the complexity of it is so demanding.) Sure, this is to pull you in further. To get you further involved. Because you fall in love with all this beauty and all this joy and happiness that appears. And you get involved in it and then you have to go through all the ramifications of it... (SL: I'll be happy to take it or leave it.) And then of course everything has to change sooner or later.

SL: But even the change and decays seem so symmetrically perfect.

R: Of course it does. The whole universe appears so symmetrically perfect. But for whom does it exist? (SL: Can anybody help me go at this. Just that the idea that if we could say that consciousness created it then it would seem...) Your mind wants a creator. According to the mind something has to have a cause. We cannot think of a thing without a cause because it's mind boggling. Yet in truth there is no cause. There is no justification for existence.

SD: And are you saying there is no perfect symmetry?

R: That perfect symmetry appears to be so. In the beauty of things, in the joy of life, there appears to be perfect symmetry. That perfect symmetry is only maya. It has no life of its own. It has no existence of its own. It appears. And the appearance comes from nowhere like the water in the mirage.

SF: The same as imperfect symmetry. (laughter) (R: Imperfect symmetry. Perfect symmetry, imperfect symmetry.) More unreal opposites.

SJ: It's like the perfect insecurity. (R: Sure.)

SB: Why can't we say it's all consciousness? It's really consciousness, it's...

R: You can say whatever you like. But consciousness is consciousness. It doesn't even exist. It only exists because we're talking about it. We make it exist because we have to give it a name. (SB: But everything is that so then the world is really that. So the reality of the world is really consciousness. So it is a cause.) The reality of the world appears to be consciousness sometimes when we talk about it that way. But why talk about it that way at all? (SB: Because it's easier to make sense really.) (laughs) As long as it makes sense it is not real. (laughter) That is the problem, you hit it right on the head.

SJ: It's a false sense of security.

R: Right everything that makes sense is a lie.

SB: But it's a good way to teach. I mean it's a way that people can follow it otherwise it's just totally irrational and nobody can really follow anything.

R: That's good. That's the way I want it. Because when you're shocked out of your life of following and being on the straight line everything being like you can imagine and think about you can never awaken. You have to be shocked into awakening by realizing nothing exists the way you think. Nothing at all is like what you believe.

SD: So to say the reality of the world is self-contradictory right, in other words there is no world.

R: There is no world, there is no self-contradictory.

SH: There is no reality. (R: There is no reality.) What is that? (R: Silence.) Nothing?

R: Silence. There is not even nothing. (laughter) Because in our minds when we think of nothing it's something. (SH: Well then there is not even silence.) There is not even silence. (SH: Why don't you shut up?) I don't know. (laughter) (SH: There is nothing more to be said.) Of course not.

SL: Lets do a giant slide down at the lake. (R: Good idea.)

(short silence)

SF: If we go back to karma a minute. If something real bad happens to me tomorrow, you know I break a leg or lost my income am I to feel that I Fred, are to be punished or is it just an effect, has a cause?

R: Do not feel that you're being punished. (SF: Okay that is all I wanted to know, that is a good thing. Or the opposite thing if something wonderful happens...) Umm. (SF: ...I'm not being rewarded, okay that's what I want to know, thank you.

(short silence)

R: Next week we're having a bhandara. There will be plenty of food because you're going to bring plenty of food right? (laughter) There'll be music, entertainment.

SD: And didn't you say we start at 1:00 instead of 2:00 next week? (R: We start at 1:00.)

Do we have any announcements?

(General announcements about transcripts completed and handed out)

SD: Robert I want to go back to the baby again. (laughter) Knowing on a certain level that a baby is never really born but on a relative level why would it appear to be born unrealized? Would that be a result of karma and samskaras?

R: It is like a tree that is born from a seed. Anything that is born isn't real. Anything that appears to be born is false. The real is never born. So whatever appears to be born like a baby is part of creation. It's all part of maya. (SD: Including the non-realization?) Including the non-realization, yes. Whatever is born, whatever you see in this world is all maya. A baby is part of it, not separate.

SH: It doesn't have to be born it just has to appear.

R: The appearance is maya. (SH: It doesn't have to be born.) But appears to be born. (SH: Does a mountain appear to be born?) A mountain has appeared to be born centuries ago. (SH: It wasn't born it just occurred.) It came into being. It appeared to be, same thing. (SH: There is no birth.) Well it's semantics. (SH: Yeah.)

SC: If you're watching a volcano it does. (laughter)

R: Anything in this world that appears that is born whatever you want to call it is maya. Well, think of it as a dream. When you are dreaming you may dream that you have birth, that you have death, that you have disillusion. Yet when you wake up the dream is gone. So it is with this life.

I don't understand why it's so difficult to grasp. Because when you are dreaming everything that occurs in the dream is occurring now, there is no difference. Yet where did the dream come from? The dream came out of your mind. And in that dream you have all kinds of experiences. The same with this life. Only just like in the dream you refuse to call this a dream. You want to get involved and do this and do that. Yet when you are in your dream you are the same way you will never call it a dream. If I come into your dream and tell you you're dreaming you will not believe me. You will be the same way you are now. You will say, "What do you mean Robert this is real." And then you pinch me to show me it's fake, "Don't you feel the pinch?" "Of course I do, it's a dream pinch." So I feel the pinch. The same thing is true here.

SK: So Robert in that dream there is an implicit reality that you wake up to, it has similar forms to the dream, so if you're saying an analogy pointing to reality we wake up to, and similar forms to what is being experienced now?

R: You do wake up to reality. (SK: In a similar form?) In a similar form. When you wake up you will be totally free of who you are, of what you are.

SF: Is this a correlation between the dream state and the waking state? I had dream where I was waving - I thought the UPS truck was going by and he and I were waving but I thought he didn't see me - So I looked in his mirror as he went by and he was looking at me so I waved at him in my dream. And just then I woke up, I stood up - I sat up in bed and I was waving at him. (laughter) So there is a connection of some kind.

R: Well you probably had a dream just before you were waking up in the morning. It was probably the last dream you had. (SF: Oh I woke up waving.) Yes the dream was just about happening before you awakened. And then when you woke up it continued. (SF: Oh I see what you mean, I see yeah.) See we usually have 7 to 8 dreams a night. And the ones we remember are the last ones that we have in the morning. We forget about the rest. So you were dreaming your last dream about the UPS truck and all of a sudden you woke up and you were waving at that time. (SF: Of course he wasn't there in the dream or in the waking state.) He was there in the dream. (SF: In both cases.) He wasn't there in the waking state because you woke up. Was the UPS truck there in the waking state? (SF: No.)

SH: That would have been a surprise. (students laugh) (R: A UPS truck in his bed.)

SV: But you know Robert the reality of the dream takes off all because in the dream I fly and when I wake up it takes me about a minute or a minute and a half or maybe two minutes before I realize that I'm this kind of reality, it doesn't work. (R: Umm.) You know it takes me that long to start believing it doesn't work. I'm sure it works until I find out, no. It doesn't work. (R: Why don't you go into the mountain, just try.) I will I was just thinking about it. That is as far as I'm going to leave it. (laughter) If it's not going to work in my thought it's not going to work there. But I sure think I can until I find out that I can't.

S: I'm going to get you toe shoes for your birthday. (laughter)

SM: What about if you wake up from a dream that was so intense, that you're just perspiring, that it's been a horrifying experience. I had a horrifying experience in a dream just recently. I was being attacked and I screamed, I screamed so loud but the word I screamed was, "Oh God." And it went way off and I could see it going way, the sound or the vibration of the word God went way out into infinity and it came back into a big light and it came back into me as a power. And I grabbed the guy and he went down into dust. He disintegrated. And I woke up all just wringing wet. (laughs) It was just scary. And that is when I said to you, is there was any significance to dreams and spiritual experiences. But I know it's only a mind thing but it was...oh my God. I think about it now and I perspire from it. (SH: You turned him into dust.) I just did it because the power went through you and I was just shaking with it and it went just right down to ashes. Like, Oh my God I killed him. (laughter) (SH: You annihilated him, did more than kill him.) (laughs) The worst dream I've ever had.

SF: It's a good feeling when you realize it was just a dream.

SM: It was a dream yes, yeah. (laughter)

SB: Robert is it true that the body is really only mind stuff also? Only the concretization of the tendencies from the past?

R: The body is an idea of the mind. (SB: So everything is mind really.) The mind is everything and the mind doesn't exist. (laughter) (SB: Then when you die you're in the world of the mind because the body and the brain is not there to filter out and stop you from the world of the mind so you're in the world of just your own mind. That is your own hell right?) When you die come and tell me. (SB: So I've been told.) Why talk about things like when you die you're going to be this and you're going to be that. Why not become free now? Totally free then you don't have to worry about dying. There will be nobody to die.

SJ: Or just get drunk before you die. (R: Get drunk before you die and come back as an alcoholic.) (SE: Maybe worse?) (R: Umm.)

SB: Why is it that many people rest in the silence and they still don't awaken?

R: Ask them, people do all kinds of things. (SB: Well you said that if you rest in the silence then you're guaranteed to awaken?) Sure if you're resting in the silence. But how do you know that you're resting in the silence? Are you resting in the silence free from thought? (SB: It has to be permanently...) You have to be free from thought. Otherwise where is the silence if there is thought. (SB: Is that a universal law, when you're absolutely silent how long you have to...) It all depends on the person.

(silence)

(General talk during prashad continues)

SB: Did you hear the story of the pussycat that sat on the easter eggs and they hatched? (R: The who?) This kid found some goose eggs or duck eggs and he gave them to his cat and the cat sat on the eggs and kept them warm and they hatched. And when they hatched the cat thought it was the mother of these baby ducks. The cat took care of the ducks. (students in disbelief)

(General talk continues)

R: So until we meet again be at peace with yourself. Do not worry about the world or your life. Do not concern yourself with God or the maya of this universe. Go deep within. Realize the truth be free. Blessings, peace, joy. Go forth and multiply. (laughter)

S: Woops, take it easy...

BE "THAT"

23rd April, 1992

Robert: It is wonderful to be with you once again. On this humid hot night in Henry's house.

I received a call from a lady this morning who inquired, "Robert what is the significance of the Phalanx symbol of Shiva? Why do thousands of Hindu's worship this phalanx symbol? After all isn't the symbol a penis?" So I sort of laughed and I said, "May I answer this question at the class?" And she said, "Yes." So I will answer this question with a story.

Thousands of years ago in the dense forests of India there lived a group of sadhu's or should I say pseudo-sadhus. They were really hypocrites. They would imagine they were going into samadhi, to see who could stay longer in samadhi. They would debate scripture for hours and argue over it and have fights over it. They would imagine they had kriyas and shake all over and dance all over. They were putting on all these acts.

The sadhus were all married to beautiful women. The women were all virgins. For they wouldn't touch them they think it was un-pure. So the women remained virgins. They were very passionate women and they wanted to have love. But the sadhus wanted to show how pure they were.

Now Shiva heard of this. And he said, "I must punish these people." He therefore took the form of a young boy with a beautiful body and handsome features and he appeared naked in the sadhus camp. When all of the wives saw this good looking guy, naked, they became real passionate. They wanted him. And so he made love to all of these wives at one time. Which is a hard thing to do. (laughter)

SV: Shiva?

R: But Shiva can do anything. (laughter)

The sadhus heard about this and they became angry. They didn't know this was Shiva. And they said to each other we must get revenge. And he took out a book of curses. They found a real good curse and they put the curse on Shiva. Shiva was just about to make love again to all the wives when his penis dropped off. A heck of a position to be in. At the same time the sun stopped shining and the moon stopped shining. Everything was pitch-black.

The sadhus then understood that this young man was Shiva. And they said we must ask forgiveness. He came to teach us a lesson and we did this to him. We must beg his forgiveness or we may never see daylight again. They started to search for Shiva every where but they couldn't find him. All they found was the penis. They therefore picked it up put it on a pedestal and started to worship it. Shiva saw all this and felt sorry for them and made the sun come back again and the moon to shine once more. And unto this day millions of Hindus worship the phalanx symbol of Shiva.

What is the moral of this story? When some of you guys are making love to someone else's wife, watch out! (students laugh) You never know what is going to happen. (laughter) You can give it any moral you want. What does this story have to do with Advaita Vedanta? Together, absolutely nothing! (students laugh) So here we are.

The truth is of course, that there are no sadhus. There is no Shiva. There is no penis. There is no universe. There is no ignorance. There is no enlightenment. There is no thing that exists. Absolutely nothing exists. And the nothing doesn't even exist. There is nothing more to say. Everything is zero.

Yet, it appears to us that everything does exist. Look how involved we become in the world. Just look at your life this very day and see the things you are involved in. The thoughts that came to you. The actions you took. As long as you believe the world is real you must suffer accordingly. As long as you feel the body is real then the world is real to you. And we talk about karma and reincarnation and all these other things we talk about. They do not mean a thing. They have no significance whatsoever.

We're talking about the ineffable. Something beyond words and thoughts. Something beyond, something beyond. Yet it's so beautiful that there is nothing to say. There is something there when you go beyond consciousness, beyond beingness, beyond pure awareness but yet it's not something at all. For when you think of something you're thinking of a thing. A thing that you can think about. Something that you can feel perhaps. Something that you can identify with. It is beyond all that. There can be absolutely nothing that can be said about it. You can't even experience it. For to experience it there must not be a you. The you has to be transcended, transmuted. Therefore you can never experience this ineffable. And when the you is gone and no longer is there, there is no longer an experience. For again there has to be a you to experience something. When the you is gone who is to experience anything? The experiencer has been totally transcended and the experience has been totally transcended. You are that!

This is why the sayings like; "Tat-Tvam-Asi, Thou Art That, sat-chit-ananda," are words that have no definition, no explanation. When we say, "You Are That!" Do not try to evaluate "That." For if you begin to evaluate it you're using your mind of course and you'll come up with all sorts of answers. You will say, "Well that is pure awareness. That is nirvana." But that is not what it is at all. It has no name. It has no shape. It has no dimension. It is nothing that the human mind can ever comprehend. It is beyond the human mind. It is beyond nirvana. It is beyond pure awareness. It is not a thing. It is not a thought. It is not a feeling. It is not an emotion. It is simply That.

When we talk about Advaita Vedanta we talk about the five elements, the three gunas, the food body. All this talk is nonsense. It is exactly what it is, spiritual talk. Spiritual talk gets you nowhere. Spiritual talk is for novices. People who are still debating trying to win points. Trying to come up with answers. Asking all sorts of questions. Debating spiritual points. All this is nonsense. So the wise person keeps silent.

In the silence there will come a time when you become "That." We're not talking about absolute reality. Those are just words. Pure awareness, more words. We're talking about "That." That may happen during the story I told you about Shiva, the phalanx symbol. There really is a reason for telling you this story. It is one of the awakening stories. If you think about this story you can awaken through it.

This is why I tell you once in a while that everything we do here is for awakening. Do not take the words literally. Try to read between the lines. Everything is for awakening. But yet if you come in here all filled up with so-called knowledge, ideas, concepts from all of your spiritual training you're never going to get it. The way to come in here is with an open heart. Where there is no question whether you know something or you don't know something. They're both impostors and keep you tied into maya. If you think you know something you're tied into maya and if you think you're empty and you don't know something you're still tied into maya. We want to get beyond this. Even when you say to yourself, "I want to experience nothing," that too is maya.

People continue to ask me, "Robert why don't you give interviews? Why don't you advertise? Why don't you let people know you're here? You can have hundreds of people coming." Well, as I explain to some of you, ninety-nine percent of all of the people in Los Angeles have been on spiritual paths and are all burnt out. When they go to a meeting they come to the meetings with sarcasm. With "Let's see what this guy knows," attitude. "Let's see how much knowledge he has." And they ask the same questions over and over again that countless hundreds have asked before. So we're not looking for numbers. We're not looking for anything.

As I told you on Sunday most of you are making excellent progress. I talk to you on the phone I see you at lunch you're doing very well. To continue we have to shut up. We have to learn to control the emotions. We have to look at this world without reacting. We have to let go of all desires. By desires I mean we have to let go of the idea that we want to better our life, improve our lot. All of these ideas and thoughts keep you back. Do not wonder if you're making progress. Do not analyze yourself. If you're coming to see me I will take care of all of that for you. There is absolutely nothing you have to do.

It is humility, compassion, love, peace that you begin to develop. As many of you have told me, "I'm feeling more peace and love than I've ever felt in my life," this is not an accident, you deserve it! Some of you have let go of all of your fears that you've carried for years. Some of you have gotten rid of the chip on your shoulder that you've carried for years believing everybody is out to get you. You're beginning to understand that there is no you to get. In other words you're no longer hurt-able. Some of you feel nothing at all is happening to you. You're the same way you always were. Not to worry. As long as you come to satsang you will be taken care of. All is well.

The universe is not what you think it is. No thing is what you think it is. You are not what you think you are. Do not concern yourself about your life. Do not concern yourself about your body, about your affairs. You can only live like this when you live spontaneously. When you live in the very second of existence. In this very second there is only 'That'. Which always was and will always be.

You have to catch yourself in that split second. That split second of eternity. You are that eternity. Do not bother to look for eternity. Do not even look for that split second. Just be it. For when you look for it you're using your mind and your mind is a product of time and space. Therefore if you try to find that split second with your mind you'll never find it. When you just are in that very beingness you are in that split second of eternity.

It's really so simple I tell you this all the time, just be! Do not be this or that. Just be! Just say to yourself, "I-am." When you say to yourself, "I-am," you're just being. You feel just wonderful when you just are as some of you are feeling right now.

It's wonderful to drop everything. To let go of everything. And begin to understand there is nothing to fear and there is nothing to fight. That feeling comes to you without the words. You just become that. If you have to say it, "There is nothing to fear, there is nothing to fight," then you are lying to yourself because you feel fear and you feel there is something to fight. You cannot voice these things. You cannot voice these things I'm telling you. For remember to voice it there has to be someone left to voice it. There has to be an experiencer and an experience. When the experience and the experiencer are gone then you are at home in the ineffable.

Some of you still believe that realization is when you resolve your problems. You believe that when you become liberated then things will be the way that you want them to be. I tell you this is a bunch of hogwash. (What's hogwash?) (laughter)

SV: Wash the hog?

Robert: Well, it's hogwash.

When you experience the Self there are no longer any problems to remove, to resolve. When you become 'That,' 'That' no longer feels that there ever was a problem or mistake or a negative condition or a positive condition. Don't you see, "That" knows nothing about these things.

Say you're dying of cancer. And you tell everybody, "I'm going to Robert's class because when I realize my Self I won't have cancer any longer." You do not understand the teaching. When you awaken there is no such thing as cancer. There is no such thing as health. For there is no such thing as a body that has these things. These things will never be in your mind again for you will not have a mind to think them with.

Therefore again let me remind you this teaching is not to change negative conditions into positive conditions. We're not here to improve our lives we're here to get rid of our lives in their entirety. Only if you believe you are a body will you want to improve your life and become healthy, wealthy and wise. When you understand what I'm talking about you will realize that there is no one left to be healthy, wealthy and wise. Of course others may look at you, they will simply see themselves.

That is why I say again when there are too many people who come here to this class, I get telephone calls from people, newcomers all the time, ask me the same question, "Robert do you go to the bathroom? (laughter) Do you eat? Do you sleep like us? Do you do this, do you do that? How come you can't do magic? Walk through the walls? Become invisible?" This is important to these people. They believe this is what it's all about. Can you imagine what would happen if I sat here and materialized some gold coins? What do you think would happen?

SC: Put you on offer. (laughter)

SH: The American Sai Baba. (laughter)

(Robert continues) Can't imagine what would happen. For people give credence to occult, to siddhas. This is important to them. They still believe that when you become enlightened that you develop magical powers. You can read thoughts. Remember again only when there is an ego and a mind do these things take place. When there is no ego, there is no mind, there is nowhere for these things to take place. When there is just the infinite there is nowhere else for anything to happen. The infinite, 'That' is self-contained reality. And there is no place for anything to go on.

Yet again becoming 'That' puts you in a category that is completely and totally indescribable. There is nothing I can say about it. There is nothing I can do to make you see what I see, to experience. Be yourself. Do not try to prove anything. Do not try to find anything.

I know that Fred can say, "In the Bible it says seek and ye shall find." But to whom was this written for. It wasn't written for people who wanted to be enlightened or people who wanted to resolve their life and become totally transcended. It was written for the masses. Sure if you seek you will find. But if you go into the higher truths nothing was ever hidden. So there is absolutely nothing to find. And there is no seeker. Can't you see now when you have these quotations and these sayings and all these questions, there has to be a seeker? There has to be something to find? Something to discover? Something to become? When you realize that there is nothing to discover, there is nothing to become, there is nothing to find what else is there to do?

Feel free to ask questions.

S: (tape starts abruptly) ...what I'm doing will bring about what's called enlightenment or awakening or any of the other words but I do feel that there are things an individual can do that may bring about an intellectual understanding of some of these spiritual matters. Scripture for instance. In AA (alcoholics anonymous) we have what amounts to a confession step. (R: Umm.) Where we admit to God, to ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrong and we have one that takes care of making amends for the things that we've done that is really called for in a man. (R: Umm.) And the reason I say that, that can bring about a difference in the individual. It's really my experience in that not long after I did what is called the confession, the fifth step. Not long after I did the fifth step I read in a book that all Masters are one, they never contradict one another. (R: Umm.) And that rang a bell in me and it awakened an interest in Eastern philosophy.

And I also did some ninth step stuff which is making amends. And things became a lot clearer. They're still very much on the relative level but they do seem clearer. And of course lots of admonition. Spent lots of time in prayer and try to help the other guys karma and all that stuff. (R: Sure.) So I've said in AA talks that I have a very strong feeling that all of the Masters, if we asked them what they thought of the twelve steps, they'd say, "Right on." (R: Sure.) You agree with that? (R: Of course.) Thank you. I'm done.

R: But remember that is on a certain level. (SF: Yeah that's right, it's relativity of course but it makes me feel good.) It's just like if a person is in kindergarten. Are you going to tell that person not to go to kindergarten? To go to college? (SF: No.) The person has to be where he is. (SF: Each of us.) Exactly, so in kindergarten we learn step by step to go to junior high school, to go to high school and unfold in that way. So it is with these steps and everything else. Everything is good at that level. There is absolutely nothing wrong with it. (SF: Yes.) But what we're talking about here is transcendence.

SF: I dig that but it's nothing I can do. I just hope whatever it is...but then that would involve an individual being in that state and enjoying it. When the individual reaches that state there is no more individual. So there is nobody to enjoy it. (R: Exactly.) That's what you've been talking about tonight?

R: Yes. So there is nothing wrong with what you're doing with the steps. It's great! But it's at a certain level. (SF: Yeah.)

SR: Robert? (R: Jorge?) I've been experiencing something maybe for the first time, probably responding to what...maybe this is presumptuous to me but I kind of think I got a little taste of what you experienced. This constant letting go-ness of this body awareness. And in this state I can see that anything that would come to me would bounce off. It would just slop off there would be no emotional reaction. Because there is this constant remembrance of nothingness... (R: Umm.) ...of my nothingness. And so it is a beautiful feeling but...there is a "but." The but is, damn it I can't, I'm practically positive, practically 100% positive that I can't retain this feeling once I go out the door. But if I could, wow.

R: Do not concern yourself with this. Just let it happen and do not think about it too much. Remember the you that everything bounces off doesn't exist. There is nothing to bounce. There are no bouncers. And there is no one for it to bounce off to. What you're talking about is a good step in the right direction.

SR: I can see the emotion wouldn't even materialize. (R: Exactly.) A feeling wouldn't even materialize because I guess if there is no identification with the body there is no need for the feeling to materialize. (R: Exactly.) That's what I'm longing for. Is that un-necessariness to come up with an emotional reaction.

R: Umm, well you're getting there. (SR: Yeah but it's like er...) No, as I said don't qualify it. Just... (SR: No but I like to be honest with myself. I don't like to play games with my mind and think this is going to last.) If you were honest with yourself you would wake up. (SR: Can you pass that one by me again?) If you were honest with yourself you would wake up. You would be awakened. Because the honesty means that you are awake. This is the truth. The truth about you is that you are already enlightened. (SR: I can't see the truth and yet you're equating seeing the truth as honesty but seeing the truth is a big step.) When you see yourself as a human being you are lying to yourself. (SR: Yeah I guess I never thought of that.) When you see yourself as having problems or something being wrong that is when you're lying to yourself. That is why I say do not go one way or the other way with it. Do not try to say, "I can't lie to myself," or "I'm lying to myself," or "I'm this," or "I'm that." Forget about "I'm."

SR: But once I'm out of this room I would feel like I'm lying to myself if I said, "You don't have a body, I don't have a body."

R: Well don't say that then, don't say it. Just be. (SR: I would be feeling my body so much I wouldn't be able to feel my body listeners. Just like now I can feel my body listeners so much that I can't feel my body.) Just observe yourself. Observe the condition you're in. Observe what's happening to you. But do not react. Do not come to any conclusions. Do not think this is right, this is wrong, this is good or this is bad. Just be and let whatever happens, happen. (SR: I just get disgusted with my inability to maintain this awareness.) Well who gets disgusted? The ego. Try to remember that you can't expect to come to a class and all of a sudden you're going to become totally enlightened. That's possible but do not look for anything like that. Just be here now.

It's like the story I tell you once in a while of Ramana Maharshi and his devotees. They were with him for forty, fifty years and nothing has happened to some of them. They just kept on going. They never think whether they're enlightened or they want to become enlightened or they don't want to become enlightened. They don't think about these things. They're just there. They're just being. They're not being this and they're not being that. They're not being good and they're not being bad. They're not being right and they're not being wrong. They're not being enlightened, they're not being unenlightened. They're just being. So expect nothing. Do not look for anything. Just be.

If you can live in that split second that we were talking about then there will be no past and there will be no future. But you're making good progress just the way you are.

SR: The split second seems to be being aware of bodyless-ness of this?

R: In that split second there is really no one to be aware of it because it never existed. That split second is no thing, no thought, no idea, no conflict, no body. Nothing. You're always trying to use your mind to understand what these things are and you cannot use the mind. You've got to go way beyond the mind. Where there is no judgement. There is no comparison. There is just 'That'.

SF: Sri Ramana told his people to think of him and leave the rest up to him. (R: Umm, yes.) Pretty much what you said earlier. (R: Yes.) He asked one fellow, "What brought you here," and the fellow said, "Thinking of you," and he told this man, "That is your sadhana this time." (R: Umm.) Always the right time? (R: Yes.)

SF: I might mention why I brought up the matter of karma and punishment or reward. Not long ago I met a girl who had terrible emotional pain and she had the idea that she was being punished for something that she had done. And I told her that it would be small comfort but she needn't fear whether she's being punished and that was the reason I wanted to check that point with you. Because we have this thing "as ye sow, so shall ye reap" and people take it personally. Whereas it might be better said, "As it is sown so shall it be reaped." Is that more or less...

R: Umm. That's also on that particular level. (SF: On relativity level?) We want to go beyond all this. (SF: Yeah.) Forget about karma, reincarnation, punishment, judgement. (SF: They're all in the mind.) They're all in the mind. And there is no mind. So where are they? They never existed. See we're not really trying to get rid of the mind, there is no mind to get rid of. We're really trying to awaken to that fact. There never was a mind. The mind is another word for creation. There is no creation.

There are many teachers which go into the ramifications of that as I mentioned before. They talk about the three gunas and the five coverings and the food particles that you're made out of and the seminal fluid, and all that garbage. What good is it knowing these things? It's all mesmerism. Make it simple for yourself.

Just feel that you've been hypnotized and now you're becoming de-hypnotized. Don't go into too many details. Do not become too technical or too intelligent. It keeps you back. When you awaken none of this will exist at all.

(long silence)

Do we have announcements? We're having the bhandara this Sunday. It starts at 1 o'clock. Good food, song, happiness, joy. Bring your favorite dish.

We have some delicious prashad, macaroons.

I AM YOUR SELF

26th April, 1992

Robert: Good Afternoon. It is good being with you once again on this beautiful Sunday afternoon. Everyone is sweating profusely. Chanters you are not. Why should we want to chant?

Jnana without bhakta is dry knowledge. You have to have Jnana with bhakta. You have to feel passion. You have to feel love. You have to feel loving kindness. This comes with bhakta. Unless you become a bhakta, you cannot be a Jnani. They both go together hand in hand. It's like a man and a woman. You can't have one without the other.

There are many people who profess to be Jnanis. They are very dry intellectuals. Very cold people. When you chant to the Goddess or the God, and you feel the chant in your heart, you will feel this way towards your fellow man. The same love you give to God you give to your fellow man. How can you love others if you do not love yourself? You love yourself by letting your heart open up and feel the passion, the joy, the harmony which is your divine real nature.

Become involved in the chanting. Feel it. Be it. And you will be amazed at the change that comes over you.

I take a walk every morning and meet many interesting people. There is a little old lady I meet once in awhile and we talk.

She asked me this morning, "Robert, do you believe in God?"

Now, the answer I am going to share with you is true about each one of us here and everyone else on this earth. I answered by saying, "Before I answer please let me know what do you mean by you and what do you mean by God?"

She said, "Well, the personal you." I remarked, and this is important for us to understand, "As long as there is a personality, we have to believe in something. We believe we are an atheist, we believe in God, we believe in politics, we believe in this, we believe in that. Where there is a personality, there is a believer. Then God is apart from us.

Some of us would even say, "I believe in God within myself." This is sort of wrong thinking. If it weren't for what we call God, absolute reality, pure awareness, there couldn't be a you. There would be no personality unless there was a God, or absolute reality, sat-chit-ananda or whatever you want to call it.

It is like a print on the paper. The print is you, the personality, and the paper is God. If you didn't have the paper, you couldn't have the print. Like the screen and the image. The screen is what we call God. The image is you, the personality. Therefore, when the you is transcended, the you is really the I thought. When the personal I, or the personal you, is completely and totally transcended, where is there anyone who has a belief system left? For whom was the belief?

You see what I am saying? There is no-one left over to believe anything. There is no personality left. Therefore, how can you believe something? To believe, there has to be a believer and an object to believe. When you've transcended the personality, when there is no I thought, when there is no you, you become all-pervading. You become the total reality, omnipresent. Consequently, where is there room for God? There is no room for God when you are all-pervading. You are omnipresent. You are the absolute reality, the pure awareness.

Only again when you are a personality, when you are a body, can you say, I believe in God, I believe in this, I believe in that, I don't believe in this, I don't believe in that. You have that option as long as there is a personality.

When there is no personality, when there is no I thought, when there is no body, there is only space. Space is the absolute awareness. This is your true nature. This is what you really are.

There is the story of the holy man who died and went to heaven. As he was going towards the gates of heaven, they wouldn't let him in. He called, "It is me, your humble servant, the one who has praised your name for centuries. I have come."

St. Peter said, "I'm sorry, you can't come in." The holy man sat down and started to gaze in silence to ponder this. "Why won't St. Peter let me in? I've been good. I've practiced the scriptures." He pondered this for six months. Finally, he said to himself, "I've got the answer." He knocked on the door, and St. Peter came to the gate. He said, "Let me in. I'm your humble servant. The one who has chanted your name for centuries, who has bowed to you, who has prayed to you."

St. Peter said, "I'm sorry. There is no room for you here." Again, he closed the door. This time the holy man became completely upset. He didn't know what the problem was. He had been a good person, a holy person. Why won't that guy let me in. He said to himself, "I'm going to sit here forever, if I have to, until I come up with the right answer."

Finally, after a year of sitting in front of the gate, the answer came. He got up and knocked on the door of heaven. God came to the door and said, "Who is this?" The holy man said, "It is thou." God opened the gate and said, "Come in, my son. There never was enough room in here for both me and you."

This is true with us. As long as we think we are individuals, as long as we think we are personalities, we will go through life with problems, having good times and bad times, up times and down times. We will go through all kinds of experiences. When the time comes when you realize there is no difference between you and the ultimate reality, then you'll be totally free. You will appear as a body, but you will no longer be a body. You will be sat-chit-ananda. You will be absolute reality. You will be the ultimate oneness. The Truth.

When you look at yourself and you see yourself, do not think of you as a mere human being. Do not think of yourself as a person. Do not think of yourself as someone who needs help, someone who is alone in this world. That's not really you. You are the one that has always existed, the one that will always exist. That one that never had a problem. That one that is healthy and happy and peaceful. There are no others.

Do not judge yourself. Do not look at yourself and say, "I have sinned, I have made mistakes." Do not worry about the future and think karma is going to catch up with me. I have to reap the laws of karma that I have sown. It is true that as long as you feel yourself to be human, as long as you believe in karma, past, future and causation, you will go through karma. You will appear to go through all the things in space and time that seem to punish you and reward you.

Gradually you will give up the belief in karma. You will begin to see there is no yesterday, there is no tomorrow, there is only the eternal now, and you are that. You are the one that has always existed and that one will always be. You are not your karma. Karma only exists when you believe it exists. For whom is karma? For the body, not for you. Karma is for the individual. For the one who thinks he is a body and a mind. For that one, there is karma.

As you grow spiritually, as you practice devotion, as you practice Jnana, you begin to feel different. You begin to feel oneness with the whole universe. The universe becomes your friend. The mineral kingdom. The vegetable kingdom. The animal kingdom. The human kingdom. You are no longer able to see problems or troubles. You have transcended this. You have risen to that place where there is only God, what we call God, which is yourself. I shouldn't say yourself. The self. The Self makes it impersonal.

The Self is the trees, the sky, the birds, everything. Everything is the Self. Nothing is excluded. This is why you should practice ahimsa, non-violence to any living thing. After all, whatever you hurt, whom are you hurting but yourself? Whatever you do to someone else, you are doing to yourself.

As long as you believe you are personal, the self has to come back to you and return to you what you gave out. It is like a boomerang. You throw a boomerang and it comes back to you. When you throw out words and deeds and actions, they return to you. As long as you believe you are an entity, as long as you believe you are a body, as long as you believe you are an I thought, everything must return to you.

But, you may say, "When I become a Jnani, I can do anything I like? I can hurt people, and steal, and rob and rape, and, I will have no karma?" Well, when you become a Jnani come see me, and see if you want to do those things. You'll never even have an idea of a thing like this. Things like this won't even enter your consciousness. There'll be no place for it to stay. There will be no doer to want to do anything. You will be totally free. You are already totally free, but you think you are not. You are attached to person, place and thing. You respond to the world. You react to conditions, to situations. Is there any wonder that you suffer?

Always remember, your body came to this plane to do certain work. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. You are totally free. You are the embodiment of love. You have absolutely nothing to do with your body. I know it sounds strange.

You're asking, "Are there two of us? Is there the body and myself?" No. There is only one. The one is neither yourself nor your body. There is never anybody else but the one. When the body does the work, it's for others. It's for the world which you know you are not. The body becomes like the water in the mirage. It appears to be there, but when you try to grab it, it's not there. It doesn't exist. Like the sky. Like the blue in the sky. You wake up. You see a sky and you want to grab it. It doesn't exist. So it is with us.

We are like the print on the paper. The print appears on the paper but you need the paper to have the print. You can't have print without the paper.

You have to begin to identify with the real Self. You have to begin to let go of all the false beliefs, conceptions, dogmas, and be yourself. Be the Self you've always been. Be the Buddha. Be Krishna. You have that quality deep within you. Wake up. Do not let calamity rule you any longer. Know your Self. Do not use the mind to react to conditions. Learn to be the observer.

Don't think you must run away from conditionings, or you must run away from your job, or you must leave your family or you must do anything like this. Never concern yourself with the body. Mentally learn to let go, to think less. Cut down on your thinking and your thoughts.

Some of you still believe that if you do not think about something, it will never happen. This is not true. As a matter of fact, it is the reverse. If you do not think, then the true nature of yourself will be revealed, and the true nature of the universe will be revealed.

They are the same. Pure awareness. Absolute reality. But you must let go mentally and not be attached to things. Do not concern yourself with other people, with politics, with the world conditioning. This earth is going through a process, and it will go through whatever it has to go through. The earth is billions of years old. There have been many civilizations on this earth. Civilizations have come, civilizations have gone. We are just another civilization, and yet we think we are in control.

When your ego believes you're in control of things, and you are in charge of your life, and you are in charge of your environment, then an earthquake comes along and lets you know differently. Doesn't it? When you feel an earthquake, don't you feel small and you have no power? You feel very limited. This goes to show you who do you think you are? You are nobody. In one instant you could be wiped out. Therefore, why not turn within and leave the world alone? I know there are many redeemers of the world. Many fanatics and many good people want to bring peace to this world. I tell you this is impossible. The world is as it is. It is maya, a dream, only. It is duality. There are good times, there are bad times. This is the nature of this world. See if I'm telling the truth.

For thousands of years people have been working to bring peace to this earth. They have worked very diligently. People like Gandhi, Martin Luther King. There have been thousands in previous ages. Now, look at the world. Is it any better? Do we have love and peace in this world? Have all those do-gooders given us a semblance of peace? Things have become relatively worse.

I kid you not about the truth of this. If this is God's world, leave the world to God. Your job is to realize the truth. As you realize the truth about yourself, you become the self of all. You become the self of the universe. You become the self of all the countries, all the worlds, all the planets. Then you will see that beyond this world, beyond the maya, beyond the illusion, that all is well. The world doesn't need your help.

I know it sounds good and wonderful to try to bring peace to this world. It's a good thing and there will always be people who will do these things. They mean well. But I say to you that in the higher teachings, to the extent you know yourself, to that extent you can bring peace into this world. You cannot bring peace into this world if you do not know yourself. For if you have not achieved a semblance of harmony, of goodness, joy and peace within you, what are you giving the world? Your hate, your vindictiveness?

All you can give the world is the self which you think you are. Begin with you. Begin to see yourself not as a human being but as the universe. You are all the others. There are no others separate from you. Wake up. Be free. Do not allow your mind to control you. Your mind is not your Master. Inquire within, "To whom does the mind come?" Inquire within yourself, "Who has to bring peace to this world? Who has to change things?"

As you inquire within yourself, you will begin to feel and see that it is your ego that wants to change things. It is the personal I. The personal I wants to do all these things in this world. It wants to become successful. It wants to become famous. It wants to be the savior of mankind. It is the personal I that wants to be all these things.

Great Sages have discovered that if you remove this personal I there will be no one who will want to do anything. There will be total happiness, total love and total peace. Only remove the personal I. The way to remove the personal I is to inquire, "For whom does it come? What is its source?"

Do not try to remove the thoughts, for the thoughts will never cease. You'll have good thoughts and bad thoughts for as long as you live. Realize the I is the culprit. The I has the thoughts. I thinks. I feels. I talks. I acts. Without the I you wouldn't have the ambitions or the type of thinking you've got. Follow the I thought to the source, and that is how you will find peace. That's how you will find love. That's how you will find joy. It's up to you.

THE FEAR OF DEATH

3rd May, 1992

Robert: Hello! (Hello Robert.) Greetings! (Greetings!) And salutations. (Salutations.) It's good to see you.

SH: Ditto! (R: I love you.) We love you too Robert. We're going to be with you all the way along. (laughter)

Robert continues: Most of us are aware intellectually perhaps that we are not the body, the mind nor the doer. We are aware intellectually that we are absolute reality, the Self! Expressing as pure awareness. Yet as we unfold on this path we come across many words that have special meaning to us. Some of these words are negatives that have to be transcended.

As we meditate. As we go deep within trying to understand the Self and awaken the word fear comes along. Some of us become very fearful. For we are letting go of everything. The world used to be a crutch for us to lean on. People, places and things were very important to us at one time. Now we're beginning to see and realize we can only depend on the Self. Our inner reality. This brings up fear also. For in the relative world goodness, happiness, fear, sadness are two sides of the same coin.

If you look at your life you will see that fear is really the motivating factor in everything you've done and do, subconsciously or consciously. For instance when people get married, why do they get married? Perhaps it's fear of being alone. Or fear if you've made a good catch you want to hold onto that person before somebody else gets them. So you get married. Fear of growing old by yourself.

Take your jobs for instance. You have a certain profession and you do certain work. If you look deep inside you'll see it's fear that motivates you. Fear of losing the job, not having any money. Perhaps you're becoming a homeless person. It is always fear in the relative world that motivates you to do anything. Even the happiest person on earth has fears. They may be subjective. The fear of losing that happiness. That something may happen to take away that goodness that you're going through.

You've all heard the expression, "It's too good to be true," most human beings live this kind of a life. Everything is beautiful in their lives. They have everything they need and want and more. Yet there is an underlying fear that this is too good to be true. Something bad has to happen. Can you think of something personally that does not have a motivating factor of fear behind it. Even though you're not aware of it at the time. You may not be aware of it at the time because you're going through a certain condition of your life that's happiness and joy and peace, but you do have that fear in the background. You can't get rid of it. It's part of the relative world.

This is a world of duality. We all live in this world of duality. For every fear there is a joy. For every bad there is a good. For every up there is a down. This is the world in which we live. We live in a world of fear. We live in a world of joy. We live in world of goodness. We live in a world of badness. It's all the same thing. This is the reason why I tell you so often do not think you want to get rid of the fears and the bad things of your life only. You also want to get rid of the good things of your life. The happy things of your life. This may sound strange for some of you. But it's the truth. Why? Because again they are two sides of the same coin.

No matter who you are if you're going to experience supreme goodness, happiness and joy in the relative sense you have to experience sadness, hate and something that upsets you. The pendulum has to go both directions. This is why I laugh when people come to me and say, "Robert, I don't need a spiritual teaching I'm happy already. I've got all kinds of happiness in my life." For how long? Try to understand that you cannot have total happiness only in this relative universe in which we live it's impossible. Nobody does. You can't!

Now perhaps you can understand a little bit why a Sage, a saint also seems to have trouble sometimes. Illness, something going on in their lives. Because their body appears to be going through the same thing that everybody else goes through. But notice I say the word "appears." To the Sage this is not going on. The relatives have been totally transcended. There is only bliss, sat-chit-ananda. There is only absolute reality, pure awareness to the Sage. But the body of the Sage appears to some people to be going through other things. Having other experiences.

This appears to be a paradox and a mystery. But it's very clear. When I explain to you that in the relative world you have to go through duality. Everybody goes through duality no matter who you are. Only by transcending the relative world totally and completely through the process of awakening do you become absolutely free of these things. You become absolutely free of goodness and absolutely free of badness. It's an entirely new ball game.

This is why some of us become argumentative so often, we debate these things and talk about these things and get nowhere. We say, "I see what you're going through. I see what's going on. You can't fool me any more. This is like this and this is like that." Always remember — this is like this and this is like that — in your eyes, in your mind, in your life that is how you see things.

When you understand what I'm saying intellectually you will begin to leave people alone and shut up. You will not have anything to say because you will begin to see it's fruitless to debate. It's fruitless to argue. It's fruitless to come to any conclusions about anybody or anything. For everything is unfolding as it should. Everything is in it's right place no matter how it looks. As we unfold on this path our job is to watch, to look, to see, never to react. Only to be the witness. Having no opinions for or against.

One word, "fear," that everyone seems to have no matter who you are unless you have transcended and awakened is fear of death.

Most of us perhaps are able to overcome certain fears but when it comes to leaving your body nearly everyone, no matter how enlightened you think you are, starts to worry about this. Even though you say you're not. It is interesting to note from my experiences with people. The younger people between their twenties and thirties claim not to be afraid of death. When you're healthy, totally. When you're able to run around the world and do what you want you never think of death. You never think of dying. You don't want to talk about these things. You say, "When I get older I'll be ready to discuss it." Yet if you don't work it out now when you're ready to go you will have total fear in every iota of your being.

It is written in the great spiritual scriptures of the world that when you die, when you're dying, if you can think of God at that time you will go straight to God. Which means you will awaken totally. So people tell me, "Well if this is the case Robert, I'll just go out and have fun and get drunk and do anything I like and when I'm dying I'll think of God." Try it! (students laugh) You'll never do it no matter what you say.

I've had experiences with dying people who used to be so happy and sure of themselves who used to laugh at death. But all of a sudden when the cancer or the AIDS or whatever became very bad there was total fear. Fear to let go. This is also true of pain. Many of us want to go painlessly but unfortunately not too many of us do. To whom does the pain come from...or come to I should say. If you work on yourself during your living years. During your healthy years you will be able to transcend pain like you transcend death. You will be able to step back and look at it, observe it.

But it will not disturb you or bother you. This is the reason why I say, "You have to be totally honest with yourself." There has to come a time in your life when you stop fooling yourself. You have to develop humility and loving kindness while you're working on this path to self-realization.

Go through your life and see what you're doing with your days. See what you're doing with your spiritual life. What are you really after? Unfortunately most people are in spiritual life to change bad for good. And no matter how many times I tell you this you still are trying to do this. You're simply into spiritual life, you're into meditation. You go through certain things in pranayama, breathing, yoga exercises, zen meditation. You do all of these things not really to awaken but to become a saint. To become better than most people. To overcome your problems. These are all the wrong reasons.

What is the reason why you should work on yourself? There is no reason. It's just something that you do. Something within yourself and this again is a great mystery will touch some people a certain way. Where they just feel that this world has absolutely nothing to offer them. No matter how wealthy they are. No matter how much fun they're having. No matter what they're doing with their lives. Something touches them within and they begin to leave everybody alone. They become quiet.

I used to know a boisterous guy. Really boisterous. Had a chip on his shoulder. Always was ready for a fight. Nobody liked him everybody, shied away from him. He lived in an ashram, been going there for years. He always believed he knew more than somebody else. He would always debate with people, argue with people. Try to pin them down. Try to show them that they know more than he does and he would argue with them to show that he knows more than they do. And he went through this for about three or four years. Then something happened, nobody knows what. Overnight he changed totally and completely. Where there used to be a frown on his face or look at people in despise, he had a smile on his face. He no longer had anything to say to anyone. Except good morning, good night, hello, goodbye. He let go of everything. And he left the ashram. Nobody knows what happened to him.

You see when something like this happens to you it makes no difference where you are. Whether you're in prison. Whether you're in an ashram or a hospital. Whether you're homeless. Whether you're a multimillionaire. Whether you're sick or whether you're well. Realization plays no favorites.

Do not think because you say you're good and you meditate everyday at certain amount of time, that you expect to be liberated. Liberation can come to the worst murderer. Who knows nothing about meditation or spiritual life.

This is the reason I tell you all of the time, "Do not try to judge these things. Do not try to figure these things out. Do not try to come to any conclusions about who deserves this and who does not," you don't know. Rather work on yourself. When you become the ineffable Self, pure awareness you will become the Self of all. The all-pervading Self, omnipresent. All of the trees, the flowers, the sky, the plants, the universe will be inside of you. You have become the creator of everything.

Therefore you have reverence for all of life. Everything becomes very important to you. By important I mean you have reverence, love, compassion, loving kindness. Not because you want to be that way, you can't help it. You're not trying to be a good person. The term good is not in your mind any longer. You don't know what good is. You don't know what bad is. For remember if you understood what good is, you have to understand what bad is. Because it's part of the duality. So when you get to the stage of the Self there is noone left to experience good or bad, right or wrong, sickness or health, up or down and whatever.

It is said that if you emulate a spiritual Master you will become a spiritual Master yourself. This doesn't mean that you go around making out that you're enlightened. But when you're by yourself without telling everyone or anyone you act as if you're enlightened. Without telling a soul. By acting as if you're enlightened means you show everyone loving kindness, compassion. You have humility. You're always joyous and happy. You only have kind words for everyone. Yet you do not feign these things. You do not want people to see that you've changed or you're different or you're kind. You're doing this to yourself. You're acting like a spiritual Master. The act will become the thing.

As you keep convincing your subconscious, that you are the Self, you are Brahman, you are nothing, you are the I. As you keep convincing yourself of this you will become this. When is the best time to do this? After you practice self-inquiry. When you've practiced self-inquiry for a while and you've gotten down to the stage where you're saying, "Who am I?" and you're experiencing a semblance of the silence. It is in the silence when you voice to yourself, "I am Brahman, I am absolute reality, I-I." At that time you will be able to do this. It will come by itself.

But for the person who is still experiencing this world as a reality and who has not practiced self-inquiry or any kind of spiritual discipline, when you voice this, it will build up your ego instead. Your ego will be built up. When you say, "I am Brahman. I am pure awareness. I am sat-chit-ananda." It will be your ego that you will be inflating. This is why I never emphasize to you to practice these affirmations. For again you are inflating your ego.

It is only when you're in deep humility, humbleness, that you can voice, "I am Brahman." For is not Brahman the servant of all? Is not the Buddha the friend of everyone? Is not the Christ the forgiver of sins? Is not Moses the I-am-that-I-am? What is one quality that all these Sages have had?

Total humility. Total humility, not pride, not an inflated ego. But total humility. Most of them looked like fools, in the eyes of intelligent people. Most of them are considered dumb, ignorant as far as the world is concerned. For they never gave the right answers. They never wanted to debate truth with anyone. They hardly ever had anything to say. Yet these are the people we all remember.

Another thing that is funny to me is we like to make God in our image. So if we have a chip on our shoulder, we're egotistical, arrogant, we imagine that Christ was that way. We imagine that Buddha was that way. We imagine that Ramana Maharshi was that way. We imagine that Rama Krishna was that way and so forth and so on. If we could only remember these things. It is we who give reality to the world. We see the whole world in our image. When you look at the world you're only seeing yourself. If you're arrogant you will see arrogance wherever you look. If you're suspicious you will see suspicion wherever you look. Wherever you are that is what you're going to see.

Therefore begin today to let go. To let go of all the stuff, the fears. Especially the fears. Remember it's the fears that hold you back. Inquire deeply, "To whom does the fear come? Who feels this fear? I do. Well where did this I come from? Who am I? What is the source of the I?" Always remember that the I you're talking about is the ego. The I-thought. The ego I. It is not the same I that you voice when you're in deep meditation in the silence. And you say, "I am Brahman." That I-am is God. Effortless pure awareness. But as you're practicing self-inquiry the I is the ego. And as you keep practicing, "I-I, I-I," it turns into the real I. The reality is the I. The God I. Try to understand these things. Think of these things.

Many of you go home and you begin to think of the world. We fear the riots downtown, the rebellion. We never seem to understand that these things have been happening since time immemorial. There has always been man's inhumanity to man. There have always been riots, confusion, chaos. But my question to you is, "What does this have to do with you?" You profess to be a spiritual person. A spiritual person understands where the world is coming from. They neither hate it nor love it. They just watch and observe and look. They cannot have feelings for being good or bad because their feelings are steeped in Godliness. Their feelings are always on the reality. The feelings do not go out and say, "This is terrible. This is wonderful. This is bad. This is good. This is how it should be. This is how it shouldn't be." These things are the images on the screen. Begin to see it this way.

Your body and your mind and the things going on in the world are the images on the screen that are changeable, never being the same. This is the way of the world. We build things, structures, edifices, monasteries, big buildings, big cities and then they're all destroyed in due time. And we build them again and they're all destroyed again. It's all a cosmic joke but you're taking it seriously. As long as you're taking it seriously you become part of it. You experience it you go through it. This is why it is written, "Whom shall you follow this day, God or mammon?" Fred likes that. Whom shall you follow? The world and it's peculiarities this is mammon or the Self, the absolute reality. The choice is yours. Do the right thing.

It is time to play "Stump the Guru."

SV: I hope somebody gets that.

SH: Go get it Tom. You have the final one, eliminate him.

R: It's funny that no matter what your question is there is only one answer. All is well. (students laugh)

Q: (Robert reads) Robert you said we could get rid of such compulsions as anger and I presume also greed and lust. By identifying with those emotions that appear. Not sure how that can work or I'm missing in understanding that. What should be done after they have been identified to loosen the hold of those compulsions. Thou is truly butterscotch or marsh-mellow, take your pick. We have somebody ready for the funny farm here. (students laugh) (SV: A long time ago.)

R: When you have a certain emotion, let's say fear. I said one day if you identify with the emotion it will disappear. What I mean is this. When there is a hurricane and you go to the centre of the hurricane what do you find? (S: Silence?) Peace and silence. At the centre of the hurricane there's total peace, total silence. When you see the ocean and the turmoil. Giant waves hurricane size hitting the shore, destroying property but when you go deep into the centre of the ocean what do you find? Total peace, total quietness.

This is true of every emotion you have. If you can only become quiet enough and identify with the centre by going deep within the Self, deep deep within. The deeper you go the quieter you become. And if you go to the centre of the emotion, the emotion will disappear in its entirety and you will never have it again. I can assure you of this.

I'll explain it to you again. If you have anger or greed or any kind of emotion. If you sit still and you observe the emotion, you look at the emotion, you go through the emotion deeper and deeper to it's centre. When you reach the centre there will no longer be an emotion left. You've destroyed it and it will never bother you again.

You get the same result with self-inquiry. By inquiring, "Who has this emotion?" You will come to the conclusion that I have it. Where does this I reside? What is the home of the I? The heart. When you follow the I to the heart it'll be dissolved in absolute reality. This is the way to work on yourself. If you try to get rid of the emotion by any other method you will fail. Do not try to change the emotion or change it to something positive. All the emotion is doing is abeyance. Waiting to sprout once more at a certain time.

So again, you either follow the emotion to the centre by identifying with it deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper and when you get to the centre it will be gone forever. Or in self-inquiry you inquire, "To whom does it come? It comes to me I am experiencing this emotion. What is the source of the I?" The heart. You follow the I to the heart where it will be totally dissolved and obliterated.

SD: Robert I remember once you telling me to do the same with pain. That if you become one with the pain it will go away. (R: Yes.) I found this very helpful and it might help people understand how to do it.

R: It's the same principle. You have a pain that hurts a headache, a migraine, cancer whatever you've got rather than feel the pain and identify with the pain begin to become very still, very quiet and begin to go deep within the pain. Dive deep, deep, deep within the pain. Deep, real deep, feel yourself diving deep to the centre of the pain. At the centre there is no pain and you'll be at peace.

Or again you can inquire, "To whom does the pain come? The pain comes to me, to the I. I am not the I. I have nothing to do with that I. The I has the pain not me." Follow the I to the heart centre and it will all be dissolved, assimilated and eliminated. The more you work on yourself spiritually the easier these things will be for you to do.

Q: (Robert reads) Which of the fears are the most damaging fears?

A: (Robert answers) All fear comes from the same place. Nothingness. It makes no difference what kind of a fear it is they're all the same. You can be afraid of never becoming self-realized. You can be afraid of the rioters if they are going to get you. You can be afraid of your husband or your wife. You can be afraid of wars or man's inhumanity to man. They're all the same thing. There is no difference. And you treat them all the same way. Either dive...dive deep into the fear to it's centre where it doesn't exist, or inquire, "To whom does this fear come? Who is experiencing this fear? I am. Well what is the source of this I am?" Follow the I-thought to the heart, where it will be totally liberated...obliterated.

SM: That's it Robert. (R: That's it?) Um-hm. (R: That's it.) (laughter)

SR: I had an experience with the I-thought and the riots that are going on. A couple of weeks ago you said something about... (tape break) ...and I think it tickled my brain before but somehow it hit me hard when you said it a week ago. It went inside and I was able to digest it for the first time or feel it going in and grappled it, moving on to it.

This week when the riots started some kind of a ...unclear... because I know the ghetto boy personality much better than the average person and I know the Korean personality much better than the average person. And so with all that so-called expertise I was... The Koreans were running up and down Korea town yelling, "We want peace," they're having marches, "we don't want to be stabbed today." And they were having speakers.

And I said I wonder if I have a responsibility to go to the place where they are having their speeches and go and tell them what they need to do about the changes they need to make in their personalities or they will have no peace, since they affect a lot of people negatively. And as I was going in that direction all of a sudden the words from your speech about a week ago hit me. Something about, "Jorge the best way you can bring peace into this world is to let go of your I-thought and your sense of separative-ness."

And immediately the responsibility or obligation I felt to go and tell them — with the risk of being stoned to death - What they were doing to bring on all this enmity from the Hispanics and Blacks. By telling them many of the irritating things that they do that irritate people. All of a sudden the desire and the feeling of obligation left me and I realized that my obligation was to let go of the I-thought. And my own separatist feelings that come with that I-thought. And it was like a tremendous breath of fresh air. And the whole desire left me to...or the feeling of I must do it as a good citizen or something and it kind of maybe saved my life. (laughs) Maybe I gained another life but it saved me. It saved some life and it gained another life.

R: That's a good awakening you had Jorge?

SR: Yeah it was nice. It was nice to have that feeling of power this insight has hit me hard. You know you can really feel it when it's a visceral insight mixed with an intellectual understanding but the visceral was so deep. So I want to thank you for - whether those words are true or not it looks like I've grabbed on to them when I first heard them... Not first, when I heard them a week ago. You probably have said them ten times before the time that I grabbed it and then it saved my life a few days ago when I was in Korea town. So, thank you.

R: You're doing well Jorge. (SR: But I should ask you, did I understand it correctly?) You certainly did. Try to remember also that to the extent that we bring peace to our self to that extent do we bring peace to the world. This is why even today there are many Sages, many Jnanis, many Saints that you never even heard about who are today sitting in caves, on top of mountain tops, in forests simply being themselves. And that Self becomes the world. If it weren't for these beings we would be back in the dark ages.

So to the extent that you see peace within yourself. To that extent will there be peace in this world. By just trying to change the world will not do it. You cannot force things on people. It's an individual proposition. And each so-called being on this planet must come to their own conclusions.

SF: I was wondering the other day if the fear I experienced during the riots might not have come from a desire and any fear comes from a desire that things not change. In other words I desired that there not be riots or fires? If I did not have that desire in fact the fear would not have arisen. It damn sure did.

R: Well you should concentrate on yourself more so than where the desire comes from or who has the desire or what may have happened because of the desire. Rather know the truth yourself that all is well. That is all you've got to know. It's so simple. All is well. (SF: Thank you.) No matter how it looks. No matter what appears to be going on. All is well. As strange as it sounds this is the truth. (SF: I know Bhagvan Sri Ramana told somebody these things aren't for the things that you think are good but you don't think of the things that are bad that's where you go wrong.) Yes. True. (SF: It's Hard for me anyway.) It's not too hard Jorge, it's easier than you think, Fred not Jorge. (SF: I'll try.) Anyone else like to share something or questions?

SV: Yeah I'd just like to ask if you could speak a little louder because sometimes I can't hear or it can't be recorded. Please speak a little louder when you say something. (R: (Robert yells out) Fred wants me to speak a little louder.) (students laugh) What did you say? (laughter)

R: Anyone else like to express themselves?

SF: Yeah one thing, I said this before that if I spent time thinking a person, a place or a thing should be different than it is I'm just spinning my wheels? (R: Yes.) And that person can include me, right? I spend a lot of time thinking I should be different than I am. So what it really boils down to is acceptance? Accept me not quite the way I am. To accept it then possibly some change might come about like my attitude to the homeless. They don't bug me like they did. Beggars on the street and the change in that area.

R: But if you accept something you will never get to the goal. Because acceptance is the opposite of rejection. Again they are two sides of the same coin. So you don't want to accept nor reject. Just be. (SF: Just be, okay. (laughs) I see now that it's the coin. One of the opposites.)

SH: Dual opposites simply have to be transcended period. (R: Exactly.) One way or another. (R: Right.) Through God's grace. God means different things to different people.

R: Do we have any announcements? Mary do you have any announcements?

SM: No Robert nothing. (Other students make announcements)

R: What we'll do now is we will practice self-inquiry. For many of you tell me that when you practice together you get more out of it. So we'll do it.

Make yourself comfortable in a chair, on the floor, wherever you're sitting. Close your eyes. As a thought comes to you do not try to change it or stop it. Merely inquire, "To whom does this thought come?" It makes no difference what kind of thought it is. Whether it's a thought of God. A vision of God. A vision of the devil. A vision of chaos and confusion. A vision of heaven. It's all the same.

Whatever thought comes to you inquire, "To whom does this thought come?" Then it will come to you automatically that this thought comes to me. "I am thinking this thought." Then you further inquire, "Then where did the I come from? Where is the source of this I? That is the root cause of all thought. Where is the source of the I?" And you become perfectly silent. You do not answer that question.

As you sit in the silence this way more thoughts will come. Remember it makes no difference what they're about, good or bad. You do the same thing all over again. You inquire, "To whom does this thought come? Why it comes to me. Again I am thinking it." You come to the conclusion that the I is the root thought. Because all the thought that you think goes back to the I.

Consequently if you get rid of the I there will be no more thoughts. So in order to get rid of this I-thought you inquire further, "What is the source of this I?" or "Who am I? Where did this I come from? Who gave it birth?" And you keep silent.

The thoughts come again. You do the same thing again and again and again and you will discover as you keep practicing the space between the silence and the new thoughts will be larger and larger. Do it!

IT IS IN THE SILENCE

7th May, 1992

Robert: Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you again this Thursday after the riots, and the plundering, and the pilferage, and all the other good things taking place in LA

Many of you simply come here to hear me talk. You wait until I talk and say something, for you still believe there is something that can be said with words, that if you catch the right word, something will happen to you. You will become enlightened. This is not necessarily so. Eloquence is in the silence. It is in the silence that things happen to you, wonderful things, beautiful things.

Has anyone ever been realized while they were talking or while listening to a speech? Most of you here understand that it is the space between the words, the space between the words, that are important.

It is the same like the space between, "Who am I?" When you inquire, "Who am I?" you have become silent and keep still, before you repeat, "Who am I?" again. That space is consciousness. When you are silent, you are abiding in the self. The only reason you do not become the Self, or feel you are the Self, is due to the fact that your mind is moving. Thoughts are moving in your mind. As you learn to become still, the mind becomes still and consciousness presents itself, for consciousness is already here, and you are That. It is not really in the words, for the words are the same as the body, the same as the world, the same as the universe. Words are maya. It is only in silence that truth is revealed to you.

The perennial question arises again and again. Can a person become realized without a teacher? Or must one have a teacher or a guru to become realized? This question is asked of me at least twice a week by some people. Does one really need a teacher or can one become self-realized by themselves? The answer is, "Yes and no."

Of course you must remember that you are always self-realized already. Your nature is pure awareness, absolute reality. If you start from that point of view, it will be easier for you. Never begin with the fact that you are a human being, having experiences, trying to become self-realized, but rather feel in your heart that you're already self-realized trying to awaken to that fact.

Everyone who has ever awakened, who has ever experienced moksha, liberation, has had a guru at one time or another. When Ramana Maharshi was asked this question, "You became self-realized by yourself?" he immediately answered, "I did the work in a previous life. I must have had a teacher in a previous existence."

This is only natural. Can you become a lawyer by yourself? You can, but you'll be a bum lawyer. Can you become a doctor by yourself? Can you become a nurse, or anything, by yourself? You have to go to school, you have to study, you have to have a teacher.

When you really want self-realization, you develop a great humility. The humility will lead you towards the right teacher. Yet if you're arrogant, obnoxious and you want to be realized, you will be led to a teacher that is arrogant and obnoxious also. (laughter) Like begets like.

This is why I always say to you, you are in your right place, going through those experiences that are necessary for you at the moment. There are no mistakes. Learn to love the place you're in, no matter how it looks, regardless of what you seem to be going through, regardless of the experiences in your life. Be grateful for them. Be thankful for you and the experiences you're going through. Never feel sorry for yourself. Never believe you're not worthy or that you're a sinner, because you made mistakes in the past. The truth is there is no past. There never was a past. As you begin to realize this, you will see you never were a sinner. You never made a mistake, for the past doesn't exist.

You can only go a certain way by yourself. You can only reach a certain level by yourself. After this you need a teacher, a teacher who's been there, who's gone through all these experiences before, and who can easily lead you across the river of samsara to illumination.

Most of us also do not understand the relationship to your guru or to your teacher. Some of you are seekers, who run to one guru after the other, see many teachers, can never have a guru-disciple relationship, for you go through many teachers.

I'm not trying to say this so you should stay with me. As most of you know I don't care where you go or what you do. It's up to you. But for your own sake, for your own involvement, if you find the right teacher, you should hold on to that teacher. Take care of that teacher, love that teacher. That's all you have to do.

Every being who has awakened to the Self has had that experience. For the teacher is not who you think he is. The teacher is none other than your Self. There's only one Self, one reality, and the teacher is an extension of your Self. You have been drawn to this teacher because of your years of practice, because you deserve it.

Many times I contradict myself when I tell you there's no reason why some people are enlightened. They may be rotten, and they're doing all kinds of vile things in this world, and they become enlightened. Yet these people have gone through what they're supposed to go through, these people are doing what they're supposed to be doing, and these people are all where they're supposed to be. This is why I tell you again, "There are no mistakes. Do not be judgmental. Do not try to understand this. It is beyond words and thoughts. You are not who you think you are, and the teacher you are attracted to is not who you think he or she is."

This is why again you have to develop a great humility. Without humility you will become proud, egotistical, and you will make plenty of mistakes. The greatest Jnani is the servant of all. Not the Master of all, but the servant of all. The greatest Jnani is a friend of everybody. The greatest Jnani is a natural person, no pretense, not trying to impress anyone, looking for nothing. Students are drawn to this Jnani like bees to the honey.

But a Jnani is not necessarily a yogi, and does not have eloquent speeches. There are certain yogis who draw thousands of people to them. A true Jnani does not look for people or crowds, but rather shuns these things and tries to run away from these things and has few devotees.

With this in mind ask yourself, "What am I really looking for?" And you will say, "I'm looking for moksha, liberation." Then ask yourself, "What am I doing to attain this?" Take a look at your life. Satsang is one of the most important things that you can ever do to awaken. Yet most Americans come to a satsang maybe four times, five times, and do not enlighten. They go looking for another teacher.

The truth is you must have patience, lots and lots of patience, and not run all over the world looking for teachers. But find the right teacher that you identify with spiritually. You will know when you find the teacher, the intuitive part of you will let you know, and be with that teacher all you can. This comes first in your life.

I'm always amused by all the holidays that come along. We have Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter, Mother's day, Father's day, Fourth of July, and people call me and apologize and say, "Robert, I can't come to satsang because I've got to be with my mother." "I've got to be with my family." "I'm going out to the park with my family for a picnic." "I'm going here." "I'm going there." This is all very well and good. But where will you go when you drop dead? Will you have a family then? You'll be all by yourself, and you'll have to go through certain experiences before you come back again into another body.

What I'm trying to say is your family is important, there is no question about this. But you have to adjust things in the right way, where you can come to satsang, where you can be with the teacher, where you can sit in the silence, where you can develop humility and peace, and then you will awaken.

This is why I always say to look at your life. Look at yourself, truthfully. How often do you think of God? How often do you think of spiritual things during the day? Do you always catch yourself, when some experiences come into your life, and realize that these are only images on the screen, or do you become involved in the images, and you have hurt feelings and anger, all kinds of emotional things going on in your head? Or do you immediately catch yourself and smile and say these are just images, what have I got to do with images? I am pure consciousness, pure sat-chit-ananda, nirvana. What have I got to do with situations and conditions?

A good time to test yourself was during the riots, during the looting that was going on. What did you feel? What went on inside of you? If you understood that this is a world of maya, and in maya all these things are necessary. Remember maya does not go smoothly all the time. Maya means duality, as if two powers are at work, good and evil, and you have to experience both. So when a city in a country is very prosperous, everybody is working, and has jobs, making good money, everyone is happy, something has to happen to change that. This is the way maya works.

This is why I laugh at people who are trying to change bad for good. Trying to live what they call a good human life. There is no good human life. There's only a spiritual life. When you're living in a spiritual life, good and bad are both impostors. They can no longer fool you. You have overcome and you rest in Brahman, as Brahman.

The universe is a cosmic joke. It will show you all kinds of things, make all kinds of things happen in your life. Yet you must hold on fast. And you must also let go fast. Always remember who you are. Forget about the name that was given to you at birth. You are not that. Forget about your environment. You are not that. Forget about the experiences in your life. You are not that. You have to stay centered in the here and now. You have to live spontaneously, in the present. The future will take care of itself. The past is already dead. And here you are.

Shanti, shanti, om, peace.

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: I have an observation. On Thursday night before dark I was standing at a place high enough up so we could see the eruptions of smoke and fire in Korea town especially. It was very strange the way they erupted, great clouds of black smoke and they came up very rapidly. And it was a very weird feeling, it was a different kind of fire than I experienced before.

And I had strong feeling, this is like a dream. And I had an awareness if there was someone there in the know they/she would corroborate that it was a dream. In addition to that, the person observing the riots and the fire and experiencing a great deal of fear is as much part of the dream as are the fires and the eruptions and sirens and noises. Is that an accurate appraisal?

R: It's your appraisal. It's what you went through. That's the thing you felt. Ask yourself, "Who is the dreamer? Who is the witness to all this? Who witnesses all this?" (SF: I do.) Then who are you? What I am trying to say, it's the ego that witnesses all this and sees all this. If there is no ego there is nobody to see. Even though it's happening you will not see this. This will be going on, you will be looking at it but there will be no seer. (SF: Had you been there you would've been aware of what was transpiring, would you not?) I'm aware only of the Self. I see everything you see. I watch everything, I look at everything, I partake of things, but I see the Self. (SF: And realize that all the others has no reality or meaning?) None whatsoever, it's like watching a movie. I look at the movie but I'm always aware of the screen. In other words the world of maya cannot fool me any longer. I always see the substratum of all existence which is none other than myself. (SF: And nothing outside?) And nothing outside. What I'm trying to say is that I am not separate from anything. Everything is going on inside of me, inside of myself. I am the Self of all. (SF: And that is what love is, no separation of any kind at any point.) Exactly, and love is all there is. When you feel fear, when you feel something is wrong, that is separation. When you are one with all there is, who is there to fear? The person who fears is gone. There is only God.

SF: I was thinking of the Mahavakya, "Thou Art That," that involves two people or two entities as would be the case with "I am Brahman." I am Brahman and that would throw us back to what Sri Bhagvan said, he had to reach the I - I.

R: The I-am, same thing. (SF: Yeah, and that's all, right?) And that's it, there is nothing else. (SF: No Brahman or Shiva or anything else?) There is only that which has always been and which will always be and you are That.

(silence)

R: Anyone else like to say something or share something. (pause) Sri Glen do you have a reading for us? (SG: I'm going to pass Robert.) You're going to pass Robert?

SH: He's just left you in the dry.

R: Who is the witness that watches and sees everything? That observes the breath, observes the feelings, who is this witness? The answer comes, "I am!"

With your respiration as you inhale you say, "I," as you exhale you say, "am." Breath normally and naturally. Inhale say, "I," exhale and say, "am." If your mind wanders gently bring it up to "I am."

(silence)

Om shanti, shanti, shanti, shanti, peace, peace.

We have prashad.

NO THOUGHTS WILL HELP YOU REALIZE THE SELF

10th May, 1992

Robert: It is good to be with you again on this lovely Sunday. All is well.

Think about that statement, all is well. No thing is the way that you think it is. There is no thing in this universe that is what you believe it is. Everything is something else. Nothing is ever the same, or appears to be the same. The only thing that appears to be the same and doesn't change, are your thoughts.

Most of us have a mind set, and it is very difficult for us to change this. This is the only thing that keeps us from seeing reality. As long as your mind is set, it is in accordance with the universe and the world, and you see things as they appear to be, but not as they are. You look out the window, you see a beautiful tree, a beautiful sky, woods, a lake. That sounds great. Look in the other direction, you see rioting, man's inhumanity to man, destruction, earthquakes. How do you reconcile this?

Look at your own personal life. You have good times and bad times, and it's from this you know what you want to experience. You want to experience the good times, not the bad times. Yet what you fail to understand is where there are bad times there are good times, and where there are good times there are bad times. You cannot have one. You can never have one.

A good illustration of this is the story of the two frogs. Once there were two frogs. They inadvertently jumped into a vat of milk. There was a fat frog and a skinny frog. And they couldn't get out. They were swimming around, the sides were slippery, and the fat frog said to the skinny frog, "Brother frog, there's no use in paddling any longer. We're going to drown, so I might as well give up." The skinny frog said, "Hold on brother. Keep paddling. Somebody will get us out." They paddled for hours. Again the fat frog said, "Brother frog, I'm becoming very tired now. I'm going to just let go and drown. There's no way that anybody can ever get us out of here. It's Sunday, nobody's working. We're doomed. There's no possible way we can ever get out of here." And the skinny frog said, "Keep trying. Keep paddling. Something will happen. Keep paddling." Another couple of hours passed, and the fat frog said, "I can't go on any longer. There's no sense in doing it because we're going to drown anyway. What's the use?" And he let go. He gave up. He drowned in the milk. But the skinny frog kept on paddling. Ten minutes later he felt something solid beneath his feet. He had churned the milk into butter and he hopped out of the vat.

So it is with us. We go through so many experiences in life. We think there's no way out. We believe we're human and we're caught in maya. We've got to go through certain experiences, and suffer, and be happy, and do all kinds of things. But when I share the truth with you, that there is no maya, there's no universe, nothing is the way it appears, it is only your mind that creates these conditions, and your mind doesn't exist, you don't believe me!

You want me to talk about karma and reincarnation. You want to get into all kinds of facets of the universe. You want to hear eloquent lectures about how we're gonna be saved. Yet there's no one to save, for no one ever existed. Yet you do feel human, don't you? You do go through experiences, don't you? If you would only learn to sit still, to be quiet, to stop reacting to the universe, to the world, to the situations, to life.

We give everything a name, that's the problem. We say this is cancer, this is poverty, this is an earthquake, this is a million dollars, this is a new home, this is a new car, this is a war, this is a dog, this is a cat. We have names for everything. What if we forgot about those names, and we stopped seeing things as something? What if we just observed things, watched things without giving them a name, without coming to a conclusion? What do you think would happen? You would transcend everything.

Whatever you're no longer attached to, gives way. Whatever you're no longer holding on to, no longer holds on to you. And as you let go of your opinions toward person, place and things, you find that you're growing, you're evolving. You're beginning to become something that is ineffable, something that cannot be explained, something that's so wonderful, you never dreamed that something like this existed. Yet it does.

Why do you appear to have a body, if you don't have one? Why do you appear to be playing these games, if they're not real? The answer is you're not playing any games. There is nobody doing anything. This is something difficult for most people to comprehend. Nothing at all is happening? But I move, I swim, I play golf, I go to work, I watch television, I'm doing all these things. These things appear to be happening.

You have to remember the question, "To whom is it happening? Who is experiencing this?" And of course we remember it's the ego that's experiencing this. But then you remember again you have no ego. There is no ego. An ego never existed. If it did, where did it come from? Who is its creator? Whatever you believe in, there has to be a creator to have created this. If you believe you're human, something created you. You say your parents created you, you go back in time, who created them, and who created them. You go back to the very beginning. Everything you believe in, there has to be a cause.

Yet when I tell you there is no cause, therefore there cannot be an effect, you think I'm crazy, and I am. Who wants to be sane? To be sane means you conform to society, and to anything happening in the world. You think alike.

I can assure you, nothing exists. And I can assure you when you think about nothing, the nothing you're thinking about does also not exist. Once you think about nothing, you spoil it, because it becomes something.

Always remember, the idea is to stop thinking completely. Not to function mentally at all. Yet some of you still believe if you stop functioning mentally, you will become a vegetable, you wouldn't be able to function. This is not true. What you were will not function, but what you become will function very well. You will always appear to function, yet there is no functioner. You are not what you seem to be.

No matter how many times I tell you this, you're still thinking, thinking, judging, judging, coming to conclusions, trying to work out your life. You have to let go, totally, absolutely, completely. You have to let go so completely, that you will feel no body, no mind, no pain, nothing. That is the only time you will make progress. Do not think about this. The thoughts cannot help you. There are no thoughts that can help you realize the self. It is only a total completely letting go, giving up.

What do you give up? You give up the ego, the mind, your opinions about things. That's all you give up.

But yet a tree seems to appear, and turn into a beautiful tree as it grows. So will you appear, yet you will know you're not the appearance. You will know that you are totally free and you are omnipresence, all-pervading. The whole universe is taking place inside of yourself. And if you are no self, there's no universe. You are beyond the no self, where there is a no-no-self. You're beyond the no-no-self, where there are no words to describe it. Yet it's so beautiful, so blissful, so joyous, that if you have had a taste of it, you'd never return. You'd never want to go back to humanhood.

This is why there have been many who have been touched slightly by this realization. They have been touched by truth, and they can remember there's something there, even though they're back to their human self, so it appears. They never forget that touch. And these people are the one's who strive forward, to go all the way into realization.

What does it mean to go all the way? It means to look at your life as a picture show. All the experiences are images on the screen. It means not to regulate your life at all, in any way, but to observe it and watch it. To look at it intelligently. To see the emotions that come into your mind. To observe the fears, the arrogance, and not to do anything about them. But to look at them, look through them and become free of them. Only by looking through them can you become free of them.

Think of an emotion that you have that bothers you. Perhaps you have a bad temper, a fearful disposition, whatever. First you have to see it. Then you dive deep, deep within it, and it will totally and completely disappear. It will never bother you again. When you try to change things, they all appear to be fine for a while, then you will find yourself in the same position you were before. Different people, different places.

You don't want to change anything. You want to be still and look. As you become still and look, what you're looking at will look back at you. As you look at the world without interpretation, as you look at the world without attachment, what the world is will be revealed to you. The world will be revealed to you as no thing, as an image on the screen of consciousness. You will become radiantly happy for no reason whatsoever. You will find the peace that you never dreamed existed.

You have to want this. You have to love this. You have to want this more than anything else in this world. When I say want it more than anything else in this world, I don't mean in a "I don't have it sense and I want it." I mean to feel, and believe, and know, that you are that. And you want that to be uncovered for you, by going deeper all the time, by letting go of all the things that seem to be happening in life, continuing to dive deeply within the self. You dive deeply within the Self to the extent that you give up the stuff that you've been carrying around for years.

There is no one who cannot awaken. Since your real Self is already awake, there is nothing that can keep you back but yourself. By the self I mean your mind, your thoughts. Your thoughts are the only thing that keeps you back. You have to look at these thoughts and not allow them to do anything to you. Do not allow them to frighten you. You have to remember to practice self-inquiry. To inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come?" To always think in your mind, there are no thoughts. All these thoughts are a mirage.

Remember, you use your mind to destroy your mind. You introvert the mind upon itself. When the mind is introverted upon itself, it disappears, for it never existed. But when the mind is extroverted, then you are alive and well in the world, going through all types of experiences. In school they taught you to be extroverted, to have an outgoing personality. What has it done for you? It made us all into a bunch of idiots. Look at the world in which we are living. See what's going on. Look at our figureheads, government officials, state officials. These are all extroverted people.

We have been told that to be introverted is to be a loner, and you never get anywhere. Where do you want to get? If these people only realized that the world in which they are playing is all karmic. In other words, everybody is in their right place, where they are supposed to be. There are no mistakes. So these people do not believe they're not a body and the world does not exist, but they believe there are bodies, and there is a world and a universe. They should accept the fact that karma is the ruler of the universe, and everything that appears to be is karmic in effect. This is why I always say there are no mistakes. For you are where you are supposed to be in accordance with the laws of karma. But do not keep thinking about getting rid of karma, for you will have a battle on your hands. You have to grow out of this and see that karma never existed and does not really exist. So just wake up. Awaken.

Yet if you want to play with karma, you'll have many lifetimes, many experiences. It will never stop. It will go on and on indefinitely. Start to realize karma never existed. There are no previous lives, and you do not exist now. Do not try to analyze this or figure it out in any way. Just keep it inside of you. Wake up in the morning and say to yourself, "I do not exist now, I have never existed previously, and I will never exist in the future." When your mind is calm in the morning hours when you awaken, you say something like this, you will get a beautiful warm good feeling. You will feel wonderful, for it relieves you of the responsibility of taking care of yourself to an extent. Yet you will still take care of yourself, but it'll be completely different. You will brush your teeth, you will take a shower, you will go to work, you will eat breakfast. Yet when you feel that you do not exist, you are totally free from the reactions to the things that are going on. There is no one to react any longer. Therefore, everything that appears to be done by you, will be done in a wonderful way, all the time knowing that you are not the doer.

I know this teaching sounds absurd to most people. Yet this is the teaching that has been propagated by Roshis, Sages, since the beginning of time. This is it. This is your opportunity to awaken. Why not use it? Do not let another moment go by where you're sitting there and believing and thinking something is wrong somewhere. Everything that is happening in this world today, has happened before. Different times, different people, different place. All of these things have happened before previously. They've always happened in this world. This is the nature of this world.

There are so many people who want a beautiful world in which to live, where there's everlasting peace and tranquility, where there's joy and abundance. Yet these things are temporary. This is not the way of this world. It's interesting, when you stop thinking of joy, when you stop thinking of sadness, when you stop thinking of good things and bad things, again, something wonderful happens to you, for you are no longer attached to anything. Yet in this non-attachment, you feel love and kindness, beauty and joy, in a totally different way.

Why not awaken now? Will you do this for me? Wake up! Do me a favor. Stop playing these games.

Most of you know when you walk out of this door today, you will forget many of the things I'm talking about, and revert right back to your stuff, where you begin to think about eating dinner, going to a movie, thinking about work, and you become involved in the material world once more. You have to begin to catch yourself. Say when as you walk out of this door, and you're thinking of a bill that you've got to pay, or you're thinking of a sickness you've got, or somebody in your family has, or you're thinking about a promotion you're going to get tomorrow at work. Catch yourself! Catch yourself! Stop yourself! Immediately say to yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who's thinking these thoughts? Where do they come from? I am thinking these thoughts. Who is the I? Who gave birth to the I who is thinking these thoughts?" And you'll feel and say, "The I does not exist. It never existed." You will feel beautiful. You must keep this procedure up. The mind must be transcended. All is well. All is exceedingly well.

Do we have questions in the box?

SM: I don't think there are any Robert.

SS: Oh here's one. (laughter)

R: Thank you Scott.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert for the last six months my mother has been grieving and crying due to the death of my father. What can I say to her to ease the suffering?

A: (Robert answers) When there is a death in the family it is difficult indeed. Yet if we can only look beyond it. If we can only see the truth involved. Nobody dies. Yet you cannot say this to a grieving person. They'll have no idea what you're talking about. Therefore all you can do is love this person.

If you can love this person enough then she will feel it deep in her heart and become calm. Love is the answer. Not words. When a person is going through grieving like this words cannot help. And we do not wish to be wise guys and say, "Oh nobody died. Why are you crying, you're wasting your time." This is idiocy, this person is feeling the death, terribly. When you have to hug the person, love the person. And your vibrations will go into this person and make her peaceful.

So do not talk too much. Do not say too many things. Just understand. Hug her, love her. But you know the truth within yourself. Realize within yourself for her that noone was ever born and noone can ever die. Don't tell her this she doesn't understand this. In all humility feel this truth in your heart. And if you are sincere she will feel this also and have peace.

Do we have any other questions you like to ask?

SG: Robert you've talked a number of times now and I've read also how important it is to get to the root of the heart of ones anger or pain or whatever it is, that is caught in ones mind and distracts him from reality. And it makes sense, but somehow I think it is easier to talk about than do. Just wondering you have any instructions regarding that. And also on the secondary level isn't this in a sense talking about an ultimate kind of healing which you sometimes discount as you talk about the importance of seeking enlightenment as opposed the healing? (R: What was the first part of the question?) Some instructions as how to go about this, maybe in a more systematic way or just intuitively. (R: To go about what?) Getting through to the root of pain or anger or whatever it is distracting me from seeing through?

R: Okay, we were talking about this last week. When there is a hurricane. At the centre of the hurricane there is a peaceful spot. The centre is peace. There is nothing happening in that centre. When there is disharmony going on, anger, frustration, fear. At the centre of the anger there is peace. At the centre of the fear there is peace. If you can only dive in there long enough and dive past the external condition and dive into the peace. Then you will become one with the peace and the anger will dissipate, it will be gone, it will disappear. Due to the fact in reality the anger never existed. The fear never existed. Only the Self exists, consciousness, pure awareness. And that is at the centre of yourself and the condition.

If you cannot get to the centre this way, you have to inquire, "To whom does this anger come? To whom does these feelings come?" And keep still. Then something will give. So there are two ways to do it. One is to face the fear or the anger. Face it. Dive into it. See it, what it is. And go deep into it and will be gone, it will dissipate. The other way is to inquire, "To whom does it come?" And realize it doesn't come to anyone and it never existed and doesn't exist now and you are totally free. Does that make any sense?

SG: Sure. And the other aspect was in a sense aren't you talking about a very important healing and yet you discount a healing in another context?

R: Well if there were anybody to be healed then I wouldn't discount it. But who is to be healed? When you're talking about ego, you're talking about healing the ego. Healing comes because noone was ever sick. And if somebody is sick you'd have a lot of work to do, to heal that person. And that is ego.

But when you can just keep still and not get involved in the condition but look at the condition, do not look at the condition as sick or well or in between. Just see the condition for what it is, nothing. Do not think you're a healer or think you're healing somebody or something, feel that there is total absolute consciousness and nothing else. Therefore who has to be healed? And who is healing whom? There is no healer and there is noone to heal. When you look at this way, what is supposed to happen will happen by itself. Your job is to know the truth. Everything else will take care of itself.

Anyone else like to say something?

SR: Robert, a year or two ago I was at the place you were talking about after a long, very long fast. So my question is, why is it when one has become skin and bones by fasting one can be at this place but when one starts to eat the place disappears and one gets back into the body consciousness?

R: Sure. The body is made of food stuff. Food makes the body. You're made of food. Your skin, your organs, everything inside of you, blood is made out of food. So food is the ego. They're both synonymous. When there is no food the ego begins to subside. As the ego subsides the reality comes in because reality was always there. (SR: Could you explain again how food is ego?) Food increases the ego, expands the ego due to the fact that food builds cells, builds molecules, builds atoms, builds mental conditioning. Someone with a sharp mind eats good food. Eats a lot of food. When you stop eating food your mind is not sharp any longer. This is for the material world.

As the brain keeps starving itself from lack of food, it begins to dissipate and then the mind becomes weaker, so-to-speak. Until it disappears altogether. But if you keep on fasting you will just give up the body and go. So you eat again and you come back to your senses, so-to-speak. You become sensible. (SR: What happened was the ability to reason and logically think left but what came was a state of knowingness. You just knew.) That is what I'm referring. The reality has been coming to you in that state. The truth has been expressing itself in that state. But as soon as you eat again you return to what you were, Jorge a human being. And everything else goes into abeyance. This is why many spiritual Sages like Jesus and Buddha and many others have fasted to have a taste of the reality.

SR: What are some other methods Robert of diminishing the mind. This is partly this fellows question here. Okay fasting is one way to diminish the mind. I suppose repeating a phrase like, "I love God," a million times would do it too, right?

R: Not necessarily. The best way of course is to ask yourself, "Who has a mind? Where did this mind come from that you're trying to diminish" That would be the best way I should think. As long as you believe that you have a mind then you have to do a lot of work to make it disappear. So gently see yourself as mindless. By inquiring, "To whom does the mind come?" And just by looking at yourself objectively, seeing yourself as what you are, no mind.

(short silence)

R: Today is mother's day, happy mother's day.

SH: Happy mothers day to you Robert.

R: Thank you. There is a divine mother who is the mother of us all and that divine mother is the Self. You are That. So happy mother's day.

ST: Also today is Buddha's birthday. (R: What's that Tina?) Buddha's birthday is today.

SV: He's getting old.

R: He's getting old, is he? (laughs) Yes that's nice. Mary you haven't read the Jnani in a long time. Do you still have it? (SM: Yes.)

SH: So we're all our own mother?

R: Of course. When someone calls you a mother you know what they're talking about.

SH: What is even worse than that is that we're also everybody else's mother too.(laughs)

R: Sure. Do we have any prashad? Tony isn't here with the prashad. (laughter) We should get a hold of him. (SG: He must have a mother.) (laughs) He took the prashad to his mother.

SH: Here we are prashad-less.(laughs) That's okay.

R: So, remember that all is well, exceedingly well, there are no mistakes, none have been made, none are being made, none will ever be made. You are in your right place going through the experiences that you're supposed to be going through. Do not be angry at anyone. Look to yourself. Love yourself. Pray to yourself. Bow to yourself. Worship yourself. For what you call God dwells in you as you, peace.

Until we meet again have a great mommas day, enjoy yourself. Finish.

(tape ends) [TOC]

YOU ARE COMPELLED TO COME HERE

14th May, 1992

Robert: Tony's writing something before I say anything. (laughter)

ST: Putting my name and the date. That's the truth.

R: He anticipates the words before I speak.

Well hi there. (Hi ya. Hi there.) It's good to be with you once more. Most of you believe you have a free choice. Whether or not to come here or not. But I tell you there is no free choice. You are compelled to come here. (students laugh)

SV: It's true, it's true.

R: This is where you're supposed to be or you wouldn't be here.

SH: I live here.

R: You think you live here. (students laugh) You really think you have a choice in the matter. It's an ego blaster when I tell you that you have no choice and everything you do is preordained. Every movement you make. This really destroys the ego when you think of it. For there is no thing that you do in your life that is not preordained.

So for you to be here means there is something within you that has been working for centuries to put you where you're supposed to be today. But again most of you come here with the impression that you want to be enlightened, you want to awaken. Yet you don't want to give up the stuff that is keeping you from being awakened. So the whole thing is very paradoxical isn't it?

On one hand you can't help being here, on the other hand you're here because you have a reason that is not even valid for you being here. You want to get rid of your problems or get rid of your illnesses or get rid of your poverty or get rid of your spouse or get rid of something or add something to your life. This again is the wrong reason for being here. There is no reason for being here. You're just here. There is really no purpose to it. You think there is a purpose. But there is no purpose.

Remember your so-called physical life is similar to the life of the universe. The universe appears to be here. Yet in truth it has no purpose. It has no existence, it has no substance. The same with you. You think you're here for a purpose yet you're not here for any purpose at all. As a matter of fact you're not even here. You appear to be here. Something appears to be here.

Yet there is only one. One ultimate reality. The one ultimate reality is the substratum of all your existence. What you're doing is playing games on the ultimate reality. You appear to come out of the ultimate reality as a person. You appear to exist for so many years and then you appear to disappear. All this is taking place on the ultimate reality. Yet the ultimate reality never changes it's always the same. The ultimate reality is all-pervading, omnipresence, you are That. You are the ultimate reality. So you are not the appearance that sits here. The appearance that talks. The appearance that goes through your life. That is not you at all.

Waking up or being realized is just knowing this truth. Knowing it 24 hours a day. I'm glad you agree with me. (students laugh) Whenever the lamp agrees with me it shuts on and off. (laughter)

The ultimate reality is none other than yourself. When you achieve this there is everlasting peace, tranquility. There is unalloyed happiness. There is complete bliss. There is total joy. Just the way you are and just the way things are.

Most people believe that when you awaken things will change in your life. The things do not change, you change. The things remain the same but now you see them differently. You see them as a false expression. They're neither good nor bad. But you are no longer that. You have become the ultimate reality. Therefore the world no longer presses in on you with it's bad things and good things and all kinds of things. You have risen above that.

It's just like a person being locked in a dungeon for forty years. And they take good care of their place in the dungeon. They sweep the floors, make the bed, know what time they're going to be brought food. And their life becomes the depth of the dungeon. One day they try the door, the door of the dungeon, the door has been open all the time and they're able out walk out, totally free. If they would've tried the door thirty years ago they would've been able to walk out also. But instead they accepted their fate as being locked in the dungeon.

And so it is with most of us. Our dungeon, our prison is our lifestyle. The certain life we're living that we refuse to give up. The belief system we've got that we've had for centuries, limited, shallow. This is our dungeon. This is our gaol. Yet we don't know this. We think we're living a normal life. Just like the person in the dungeon was attached to the things in the dungeon because they've been there for forty years. They really hate to leave, to go out in the fresh air. They become accustomed to where they are. So it is with us.

We're accustomed to the things we possess. We're accustomed to certain people we associate with. We're accustomed with the work we do and with the so-called fun and entertainment we have in our lives. Yet this is all limiting but we don't believe it's limiting. We therefore go through certain experiences, good and bad and we will not walk away from these things.

This is what I'm referring to when I say, "Many of you come here to awaken yet you've got all kinds of stuff going on inside of you." Habit patterns that you think are normal. You have to scrutinize yourself, really look at yourself what you really do daily. Watch the way you act daily or should I say watch the way you react and you will see what I'm talking about. Watch how you react to person, place or thing. Observe yourself. Look deeply at yourself. See what you're holding onto.

Again in order to be totally free you must let go of everything. I mean mentally of course. Remember when I tell you, "You must let go of everything." I'm not referring that you must walk away from your home and your family and your work and your environment or anything else like this. These things must be given up mentally. Mentally you must disassociate yourself. Yet your body will continue doing what it has to do.

But as you begin to disassociate yourself mentally the mind will become weaker and weaker. The mind will begin to dissolve, to become quiet and peaceful and will rest in the heart centre. When that happens to you the I will become evident to you. The real I. You will begin to feel the real I and you will know that you are not the body you are not the mind.

This is a very high place to go but it's not the ultimate truth. The ultimate truth is when the I itself goes into the heart and you lose your individuality and you become all-pervading. Yet you appear to be a body walking around the earth doing things but you know deep down in your heart that there is nobody and there is no doer.

This all sounds very complicated to some of you but it's not. Your real nature is ultimate bliss, absolute reality. This is what you are right now. Right this moment this second. Only when you begin to think do you feel the I-thought or the body thought. But if you repose in the I right now this second, this moment you are the ultimate reality.

This is why you should always take time to sit in the silence and observe your thoughts inquiring, "To whom do they come?" Thoughts have absolutely nothing to do with the ultimate reality. Yet some of you think still believe and think that you will not be able to function without a mind, without thoughts, without thinking. This you must find out for yourself. You must discover this for yourself. That you do not really need a mind to think. And you will be able to function very well without a mind. Except there will no longer be a you.

True happiness only comes when the you has been transcended. Real happiness has absolutely nothing to do with physical happiness. Physical happiness is temporary. All physical happiness is temporary. No matter what happy situation you're involved in it has to be temporary. For you're aware that the whole world, the whole universe is temporary. That the only thing permanent in life is change. Your everyday experiences will show you that.

Therefore when you become too physically happy you do not want to go searching for truth. You're not interested in finding the Self or reality. This is the reason sometimes certain people seem to be suffering. For in this way they come closer to reality. Whereas if they were not really suffering they'll be out in the world doing all kinds of so-called happy things and this will be very temporary. But this is not always the case it depends on the individual.

The more you are attached to things the more you're going to have to suffer because you will have to give them up sooner or later. Perhaps not even in this life. Remember that your experience in this particular life is only a split second in all eternity. Therefore when a person goes through experiences and you say, "Well this person's been an evil person all their life and they're prosperous and they've got everything they want and they seem to be very happy." You are judging by appearances.

When you understand that this life that you have right now is but a split second in eternity you will realize that life is a continuum. And the pendulum has to swing back and forth. You will go so far in your happiness and then you'll go back the other way. The only way to get out of this trap is to awaken. This is the reason you want to awaken. Blessed is the person who has total happiness in this life and wants to awaken.

For most people if they had the things that they want and desire they would not go after the classes that teach you to awaken. Would not follow teachers that teach Advaita Vedanta. Very few are like that. This is why I share with you, "Do not allow this world to fool you." Maya is very precise. Maya will always fool you. Everything you see in this world is maya. The grand illusion.

The way to handle maya is never to react to conditions. This is how you overcome maya. This is how you become free. Maya will always present conditions to you, situations to you. Like Tom's car blowing up on the freeway. This is the way maya works. Tom really wanted to come to the meeting he had his heart set on it and the car blows up. It's a cosmic joke don't take it seriously. This is how maya works with you. It'll appear to give you everything you want then things begin to happen. If you did not react to maya to begin with you would not be hurt-able. And then maya will say, "He's found me out," and leave you alone. That's what awakening is. So we can say another sentence for awakening is, "When maya leaves you alone." When maya stops interfering in your life. When does this happen again? When you stop reacting to person, place or thing.

You have to do the work. And yet again there is no work for you to do. You simply have to keep quiet. When you keep quiet mentally you're not reacting. When the mind is making a lot of noise you are reacting. This is what reacting means. When the mind is very active. It makes no difference why the mind is very active. As long as the mind is very active you are completely enmeshed in maya. Totally enmeshed in maya. The more active the mind the more you are enmeshed in maya.

Remember again you are in the right place where you're supposed to be. Therefore do not say that you hate your job or you hate your environment or you wish this was like this or this was like that. Everything is just the way it's supposed to be. If you would only see this you would awaken.

Awaken means just what it implies; "Awakening from the dream." Just as when you are dreaming, no matter what is going on in your dream when you awaken you awaken from the whole dream not a part of it. Is a part of it still going on? The whole dream is gone, isn't it? Every detail is gone when you awaken from your dreams. Everything that seems so real is totally gone. There is not even a little piece left. The whole dream is completely totally absolutely gone. Yet the dream seemed so real when you were dreaming.

And so it is with this state. In order for you to awaken this whole game of maya has to be gone, disappear. You cannot have maya and be awakened also. Everything has to go. Do not think about this. Just let it happen. If you think about it all kinds of thoughts will come and tell you all kinds of things. You will say to yourself, "Well will I be able to play tennis when I awaken? Will I be able to go to a movie?" Your in maya again. Whenever those thoughts come to you're enmeshed in maya. You're back into maya.

There has to be a clean total awakening. Where there are no thoughts, no actions and no doing. Again the paradox of this is, you will be doing and you will appear to be acting and things will get relatively better in your life. That's the paradox.

This is the reason I always tell you that the finite can never comprehend the infinite. For in your finite mind you are saying to yourself, "How can I be doing both? How can I not be attached to anything and yet at the same time be involved in things?" You can. You are. You will.

This is why it takes a simple mind to awaken. When your mind is too complicated, when you're filled with theoretical knowledge, abstract knowledge, psychological knowledge any kind of knowledge, this is what keeps you bound to maya. Yet you keep holding on to this knowledge because you feel that if you let go of it you'll be a fool or a vegetable. Nothing is further from this truth. The truth is that the more you give up the greater the happiness and peace that comes to you. For your very nature is happiness and peace.

Do not be concerned about what anyone else is doing. Leave everyone alone, leave people alone, leave things alone. Always realize you are in your right place. Do not strive to be in somebody else's place. You have nothing to fight, nothing to fear. Everything is on your side. There is no thing that wants to hurt you. Keep your life simple. Do not make this teaching complicated. Do not calculate the reason behind this teaching. Leave everything alone. Awaken and be free. All is well.

When we sit here is the silence the force is more important... more potent than when there are words spoken. There is more happening to you in the silence than when words are spoken. I must keep reminding you of this because most of you think when I stop talking that is the end. It's only the beginning. Before and after the words the silence becomes very potent. More than you can ever understand.

When your mind starts thinking, catch it! Don't let it think. When the thoughts stop coming hold onto the quietness, to the silence, to the I. When the thoughts keep coming inquire, "To whom do they come?"

The silence is the reality. Learn to love the silence. Treat the silence as a beautiful entity. As the divine mother, shakti. The silence is all-power. Never take the silence for granted.

(short silence)

You should start feeling the silence as God. Feel good when you are in the silence. Up to you...up to now many of you have believed that the silence is nothing. It is a divine nothingness. Remember it's out of the silence that everything comes. When you return to the silence this is actually a self surrender. You are surrendering your ego, your lifestyle, your karma, everything is surrendered to the silence.

Remember never believe that the silence is a waste of time. Just as we realize now that space is really consciousness. There is no such thing as space. It appears to be space but it's really consciousness. The same way the silence is consciousness. It's a living entity. It's alive, it's reality. Therefore sit in the silence and rejoice.

The reason many of you feel the silence is nothing, doesn't amount to much, is because you allow your thoughts to come into your head and you start thinking about your life and your experiences and your health and your body and all kinds of things. When I'm talking you're sort of listening to me what I'm saying and you have no time to think for a while, as long as I'm talking. But when I stop talking you have to sit in the silence then your thoughts seem to attack you. That is why it's better to sit in silence than to hear me talk. Because at that time you can work with your thoughts. You can work with your mind. You can begin to observe the thoughts attacking you and realizing you are the Self, the silence, thoughts have no power. Enjoy the silence. Rejoice in the silence.

This is why in scripture it is written, "Be still and know that I am God." It doesn't say to listen to a talk and know that I am God. It doesn't say to listen to Robert's ramblings and know that I am God. Just be still and know that I am is God. Couldn't be plainer than that. When you're making a lot of noise then you are aware that you are the ego. When you are in the silence you become aware of I-am.

(short silence)

Funny how we have this backwards. We say, "I want to go and hear Robert's talk." We should say, "I want to go and hear Robert's silence. I want to watch Robert shut up." (students laugh) We get everything mixed up.

(short silence)

Feel free to ask any questions. (1 minute later) If you don't ask any questions I'm going to eat all the prashad myself. (students laugh)

SG: Only one thing of all the things you talk about that I find pretty hard to reconcile. Basing my life on what other teachers have said ...unclear... and that is that this myth about everything being predestined. For some teachers say, "Well you don't necessarily have freewill but you do have choices on this particular level," which you can't think. You know that there is nothing absolute in the world, it could blow up or it could continue to go on and maybe get better. They say that there is no way of predicting the future nobody seems to truly know the future. If everything is absolutely predestined then somebody could easily find out everything that was going to happen.

R: This is the reason you have certain astrologers, certain psychics who have been able to an extent to go back into the future, go back in time, go forward in time also and predict certain things that are going to happen. The only way to get out of the predestination is by turning inwardly and not reacting to things and going into the Self. And then you will no longer bother with predestination. Predestination only exists because the world exists because you think you are a body. As soon as you realize that you are not the body there is no universe, there is no world then there is no predestination. So predestination exists only for the person who believes they are the body.

SG: What about somebody not terribly comfortable with the way their life's been going so you know they use the proper techniques, mental techniques and everything. They make something out of their life, create something that certainly wasn't there before...

R: This is maya. That is all predestination. That is how it's supposed to be. Always remember this, as long as you think you are a body, you are human and the world is real. Karma seems to exist, reincarnation seems to exist, predestination seems to exist but when you turn within and transcend then those things do not exist. They only exist to your belief system. You believe you are a person then predestination exists.

SG: This is another example, one teacher I noticed says that for you to come into this incarnation there is this massive, massive blueprint far beyond what any computer on earth could conceive of. Possibilities in your life with an ultimate divine plan for your awakening. It doesn't necessarily happen but within this massive blueprint there are options and there is movement within this blueprint. This overall blueprint of what the doer is to do in this particular lifetime.

R: That's predestination. The blueprint is part of predestination. What you are to do here is part of predestination. The changes that you appear to make is predestination. You think you are doing it yourself. But it has already been planned for you. But in truth there's no blueprint, there's no predestination, there's no person. To whom is there a blueprint? To the ego. To the person who believes they are the body. That blueprint is predestination.

SR: You just answered an age old question in the religious world Robert. I guess what you are hinting is that when we're in the Self or in the silence there is freedom. And that the person that you...or are you saying that? (R: Yes.) ...and the person maybe can - (I don't know how to say this but) - can do things that are outside his predestination but somehow the wording of that doesn't sound right. Can a person do things that he couldn't do as long as the thought he was a body?

R: As long as you think... (SR: But accept there is no doer.) Any time you think there is predestination. When the mind is in the silence and stops thinking there is no predestination.

SR: Anyway what I had was a cute little goofy insight that may not really work here but it was like, three or four hundred years ago there was a guy named John Calvin and a guy named Armenius in Switzerland. And Calvin preached predestination and it just hit me like a little joke that maybe Calvin was in his body and Armenius was self-realized. And they were both speaking the truth from their perceptions. (R: Perhaps.) Reading back to the original dilemma, if somebody finds themselves in this kind of a quandary — the basic issue - If a problem never existed if you don't get hung up on agreeing or disagreeing with Robert, does it? (R: True.) In other words you can get into confusion by sort of anticipating that you have to agree with Robert. (R: True.) And it's the sort of thing to do would be not to try to get into the silence and let the agreement or disagreement take care of themselves?

R: Yes that's very good. Find out for yourself. Stay in the silence and see for whom there is predestination.

SR: It's hard to say that there is freedom in the state of being in the Self because it's like you're really surrendered. There is no you and you're also surrendered and so there is no act of taking options like you think you do in this body state? (R: Exactly.) So it's not - I don't know how to call it? - It's not, it's surrender and maybe trusting and letting one become involved in situations that one would not have planned if they were planning out of their body-mind. But it's not freedom in the sense of like choosing options but like trusting options. Letting them happen, huh?

R: Those are the beginning stages. When you surrender... (SR: Yeah.) ...the one who surrenders disappears and there is nobody left. (SR: Yeah.) Therefore you forget about options, you forget about everything. (SR: You just see things happening that you just kind of watch your body-mind doing.) Nobody is left to watch. The watcher is also dissolved. You just are pure being. (SR: Yeah and the whole idea of freedom or non-freedom becomes irrelevant.) Exactly.

SH: There always has to be a separate you there for these questions to arise?

R: True, of course. There has to be a separate you to talk about predestination to get into all these things we're talking about. When the separate you is gone there is nobody left to do anything. Then where does predestination come from? It doesn't exist.

SR: To a person observing the self-realized person may probably would say, "What a free person." But for a person who is self-realized I guess what you're saying is they don't even know that they're planning anything, nothings been planned. (R: Exactly.)

SG: Robert what is the state that you say was a very high state in which you know yourself as the I and hence that is the state just before the I is pushed into the heart and dissolves. What would the state be called?

R: You can call it nirvikalpa samadhi. Where you are aware at times that you are the I, then you come out of it. And then you become aware of it again and you come out of it. For when the I stays in the heart and never comes out again. When the I remains in the heart that is sahaja samadhi where you are aware 24 hours a day. And you're no longer a part of any heart or any system whatsoever.

SH: Is that your condition sahaja samadhi?

R: I don't have any condition. (laughter) (SH: I know there is no you to have a condition. Nonetheless you just described the state and called something sahaja samadhi.)

That's what I say. (SH: Yeah. Is that where you're hanging out?) I can't say. (SH: There is no you but is that what's occurring?) Who is to say?

SV: Henry you're not going to get any answer to that, forget it. (students laugh)

R: If I say that I'm hanging out in sahaja samadhi there is an I hanging out. (SH: Yeah well... (students laugh) ...forget it.) These words are just explanation for nothing.

SB: Robert this is a little terrifying to realize that the body-mind doesn't really want realization. That the body-mind's only purpose is to its own fulfillment. Its own self-fulfillment. (R: Why is it terrifying?) Because it's like it just explodes all the wants of the body and the whole purpose of who we are, who the ego is. It's like it cuts through everything to realize that the body-mind is our own worst enemy. Like I, I who I think I am, my whole life of I is the enemy. The ego, I that's the enemy. It's like to realize that is shattering. Because there is nothing left to help the search anymore.

R: That's the way you see it now. But when it actually happens it's not terrifying at all. (SB: Robert, from the point of view of the ego I, it's absolutely destructive.) There is no ego to destroy. There never was an ego to begin with. So what actually happens is total happiness and peace. Because what you thought was the ego was really the I-am. Pure awareness. (SB: In other words all the purposes that the body-mind is active is absolutely invalid and has no value whatsoever.) True. (SB: And that's really from the relative point of view, that's really a shattering blow to know that it all has to go.) Why should it be shattering when you realize that it never existed to begin with. Even though if you realize it intellectually. It shouldn't be shattering, it shouldn't be frightening. You just realize, tell yourself all this time I believed I was an ego and now I know I'm not an ego.

SR: But what forced us into creating one? (R: What's that Jorge?) What forced us to create this ego?

R: What force creates the ego? (SR: Yeah.) No force. (SR: Why then...?) Because there is no ego. (SR: If we had no ego we were born as the Self. Why did we have to create this outer maya trappings of ego to cover up that silence from the Self?) Ask yourself, "Who created all this, who did this?" You never were an ego. There never was time a time when you created anything. It's just an illusion that makes you think you're doing this thing. That you have to shatter the ego, that you have to have an ego or do anything with your ego at all. You were never an ego and you will never be an ego.

Maya is like the water in the mirage. Ego is the mirage. You're hypnotized believing that you are an ego and you have to shatter the ego where in truth you never were an ego and there is nothing for you to shatter. You're totally free right now. But what you're doing is you're holding onto the ego by thinking you have to shatter it. Identify with the freedom. (SR: Why do we hold onto it?) Ask yourself. It didn't exist to begin with and nobody holds onto anything. But yet you appear to be holding onto it. So find out why by going within. (SR: Does each person have their own reason?) (Robert laughs) Each person who believes they are an ego has their ego life, they're living the ego life of various kinds. So each persons ego is living what their life is about. (SR: What comes to me right now is it's the fear of becoming one with all of life and losing...) Your individuality? (SR: Right.) You never had individuality to begin with. Therefore when it happens it's not at all like you think it is. You'll be home free like you're supposed to be. (SR: Yeah but I'm afraid to be home without me.) (students laugh)

SH: Good point.

R: That's the way you feel now. (laughter continues) But when it actually happens you won't feel that way. (SB: Everybody wants to get to heaven but nobody wants to die to get there.) (laughs) That's a good point. (SB: They want realization but they want the ego to have the realization.)

SR: How can you enjoy it without an ego? (SK: That's a point.) R: You'd be surprised.

SL: Kind of on the same lines of the question that you asked. They say that God created man in the universe to amuse himself is that sort of a stairway into an answer to your question? (SR: This is my frustration and torture.) But remember you are God too. So maya or man and the world was created by us who are all God to amuse ourselves. (SR: Sounds like a masochistic sadist relationship.) (students laugh)

R: None of this is going on. We're talking about appearances. We're talking about the I-thought. What appears to be. This is the reason why you're supposed to follow the I-thought which is the root cause of everything. The so-called I-thought is the root cause of all existence and all the problems. Therefore when the I-Thought is destroyed and doesn't exist anymore none of these questions, none of these things will exist at all. Everything will disappear. But when you work on getting rid of your ego by itself you have a fight on your hands. That is why get rid of the I-thought by following the I-thought to the heart centre, to the source. And when the I-thought disappears everything else will go with it.

SG: Robert in one of our more recent transcriptions you mentioned, staying with the I or the me not necessarily even following it but just that, whatever that I or me is can you be a little more specific exactly how you stay with that. My interpretation is just the sense of my own actuality, just being there with that, nothing left over. Is that what you mean by staying there with the I or the me?

R: Not really, when you stay with the I or the me you are abiding in the I and you're following it to the source. You do this by inquiring, "To whom does the I come?" When you inquire, "To whom does the I come?" You are abiding in the I. (SG: So that is inquiry?) Yes. (SG: What about the state of just being, if that is fine until a thought comes up?) Then you go back to the beginning and inquire, "To whom does this thought come?" (SG: But if the thoughts don't come up there is no sense of ruining a good thing like...) If no thoughts come up then you're free. Remember all these methods are to quiet the mind. (SG: My understanding is that when you're free thoughts can still come up?) No, thoughts will not come up. When thoughts come up then you're not free.

SG: I thought that when you're free that there is just, you know who you are and there are all these things coming up. Whether there is appearances and world also thoughts also. (R: No.) It doesn't happen at all?

R: If they come up then you're bound. (SH: The mind is permanently annihilated.)
The mind is killed, destroyed.

SR: Will what's left know how to set the alarm tonight and wake up tomorrow? (laughter)
And go to work and do all the things the old ego was doing before?

R: Something will do everything. (SR: Will it show up to work on time.) Of course, or even come earlier. (students laugh)

SB: He might show up at work but he won't be there will he?

R: He'll be home sleeping.

SR: The best of both worlds.

SG: Robert this confuses me a little bit because... (student says SH: A little bit? (more laughter))

SG: I started thinking about this. Well I started testing my state like when a thought would come up or something like that and see how I responded to it and everything. So this - I'm not enlightened (laughs) - it was, you know thoughts were still coming up... (R: What's the question?) The thing is, I was thinking about somebody's description of after they became enlightened they thought that they were prior to everything. So when the thoughts would come up it wouldn't interfere with anything. Because they knew it was a prior condition and all this...

R: There is no one left to know anything. In a realized person the knower, the known has been destroyed. There is no knower left, there is no known left, there is no knowing left, those conditions are all gone. There is no one to know anything. It just is.

SG: Is there a situation in which the mind becomes more and more quiet and then we're realized? Or does...

YOU ARE BOUNDLESS SPACE

17th May, 1992

Robert: (Students are getting ready to record the talk) Good afternoon. I'm being electrocuted just excuse me. (laughter)

SM: Okay start again.

SH: Mary? You want to kill our guru? Hey, hey. (laughs)

Robert continues: It's good to be with you again. All is well. No matter how things may appear, no matter what you perceive, the highest truth is your nature, your swarrupa, is boundless space. You are boundless space, the imperishable Self. This is you. The whole universe with all its manifestations is merely a superimposition on the Self. Just as the trees, the sky, the mountains, people, places and things, are all in this space. This space flows through everything, yet remains itself, pure, still, peaceful, perfect. In this space all kinds of things keep happening, cause and effect, karma, people are born, people die, billions of insects, animals, vegetation, everything is taking place in this space. Yet the space does not change. The space is limit-less, unchanging, forever the same.

Yet the appearance is that things change. This is just an appearance. You are not the appearance. The space appears to go through your body, yet you are in the space. Because of the space you appear to exist the way you are. Do not identify with the body or the things of this world. Identify with the space, for what you identify with, you become sooner or later. You are like the infinite ocean, and the world is like the waves. The waves keep changing, changing, turmoil, yet the ocean is still and quiet. You are That.

There is no acceptance. You do not have to accept this. There is nothing you have to accept. You are boundless space, just the same. There is no rejection. There is absolutely nothing to reject. You are boundless space, just the same. There is no dissolution. No thing becomes dissolved, because no thing ever existed. You are boundless space.

You must begin to see this in everything you do. All of the fears that some of you go through, the anxieties, the confusion, are simply superimpositions in the space. These things are appearances. This is the reason they change and they're never the same. You may be angry one day and happy the next day. You may be sick one day, happy the next day, well one day, sick the other day. You may be born one day and die the next day. In any case, whatever appears seems to come to an end. Therefore why should you identify with something that ends and begins? It is fruitless. For instance some people are searching to become millionaires. They want all the money in the world, and they work their whole life to attain it. They must die sometime. They must leave everything behind, and appear to disappear. People are always trying to make their bodies healthy. No matter how healthy your body is, it will someday be-come old, decrepit, and waste away. This is why the wise person does not look for these things of the world. They do not concern themselves too much with their body, or their affairs, or the world. For the wise person realizes we live in a world of change. Nothing is ever the same.

You are boundless space, free, blissful, at peace. You were never born, you will never die. You are boundless space. Just to think this way makes you feel good. As you begin to accept and realize that you are not the body, or the mind, or the thoughts, or the experiences, you become radiantly happy. Happiness and boundless space are the same. Just to be aware of these things, to repeat it to yourself, especially when you get up in the morning. I am boundless space. This boundless space is consciousness, absolute reality, nirvana, ultimate oneness. This is your real nature. This is who you are. Awaken.

Think of all the confusion you've been giving yourself, the harassments you've been going through, for you have accepted person, place, and thing as your reality, not realizing these are just a passing fancy, here today, gone tomorrow. Think for a moment of the things you're attached to. You may be attached to a person, a sickness, a lack or limitation. You may be attached to abundance, by never letting it go. You may be attached to health, always believing you have to do this and that to stay healthy, when many of you realize, of course, everything is preordained. When you made your appearance on this earth, as a so called body, there was a certain amount of time allotted to you. And when that time comes you're going to give up the body, so why worry about it? Why be concerned? There are people who eat only special foods, health foods, fanatics, yet these people do not live longer than others.

What you are is not determined by what you do, in reality. You may believe and think that you're under the law of cause and effect. Yet in truth there is no cause for existence, so how can there be an effect? You do not exist. You're a non-entity. Yet that's a blow to your ego, isn't it? "What do you mean I don't exist? I'm important. I'm this and I'm that." For how long? Three score and ten? Four score and twelve? Ten score and four? Whatever the score is doesn't matter. You are boundless space. You are nothing that you appear to be. You are the fathomless ocean, forever flowing. The waves do not affect you. Nothing affects you, for there's no you.

Can you just imagine what would happen if you felt these things every morning when you first got out of bed, when you first wake up, to realize this great truth, that you are boundless space, pure awareness? Yet when most of you get up, immediately you start to think about your affairs, and your body, and your food, and other people. Take time out. Feel within yourself that you are boundless space. Feel that your body is just a superimposition in this boundless space, and it's like a dream, mirage, an illusion. You have never existed, and you will never exist.

I realize that to some of you this maya, this illusion, is very, very strong, and some of you are really involved in it totally, completely and absolutely. You're always thinking about your body. You're always thinking about your affairs. It is this that causes the problem, not the things in themselves. Things have no power. The power comes from you. You are the power. If you believe something is bad, can hurt you, it will probably, because you believe it does. When you get a little excited over something, the excitement causes more excitement and more problems. But when you realize you're boundless space, pure awareness, where is there a problem? Can there be a problem in boundless space?

You can make fires, burn down cities, kill each other, and the space goes on. The space doesn't care. The space is always there. Whatever you do with your life, you cannot destroy the space. If you know you are the space yourself, then what I said goes for you. Nothing can destroy you. No thing can hurt you. No body can do anything to your body, simply because you ain't got a body.

Yet no matter how many times I say this, you still get involved in life, and life gets to you, shows you pictures, and you accept the pictures as reality. You become despondent, depressed, disillusioned. Over what? Over whom? Something that does not exist. Take stock of yourself. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. Do not believe you are in a situation that is impossible. Do not believe that you have something important that you own, and you will not give it up. Remember, in a flash everything can disappear. All your possessions, your body, everything will disappear when the time is right for it to go.

The wise person always works on themselves. The wise person looks after first things first. As you become aware that you are boundless space, the I-thought returns to the heart and becomes dissolved. When there is no longer an I-thought, there is no longer a body, or a mind, or things, for everything has been attached to the I-thought. How can there be an I-thought in boundless space?

Start becoming aware when you use the term I. Watch what you say when you say I. The I-thought does not belong to you. It is a mirage. It is a lie. There is only boundless space, absolute reality. Can you not feel now that you are the ocean of bliss? Can you not understand that you have absolutely nothing to do with anything? You are already free. You are bright and shining. You are the heart's delight. Does it not feel wonderful? Can you see now it makes no difference what you're going through, what's going on in your life, good or bad, it doesn't matter? You will no longer look at situations and react to them. You are boundless space, totally free, liberated.

Stop searching. The search is over. You are free. The bonds have been cut. There is no longer anything holding you back. Awaken. Awaken. You have experienced the mortal dream long enough. Awaken from this dream. You are not limited to your body. You are boundless space. You are all-pervading, omnipresent. You are all the bodies. You are the universe. You are the sub-stratum of the universe. The whole universe is playing its game within you. You are boundless space.

(short silence)

We'll play stump the guru. We will see what interesting questions we have.

SM: Oh it's a big one. (R: Oh it takes up about half a page.) Yeah. (laughter)

R: Signed by Fred, I wonder who that is? (laughter)

SV: Keep you busy and out of mischief. (laughter)

Q: (Robert reads) Sunday stumper, maybe not? Whatever can be talked about doesn't exist. The doer or ego can be said to have two appearances or actions. The doer that lessens the appearance of the ego and the doer that strengthens the appearance of the ego. So the only information that relatively our dream life seems to be worth knowing about is which appearance leads to which? Isn't there such a thing as a choice of direction but what so-to-speak is the criteria by which one can advance and attain and which leads to which? In the selected works of Ramana Maharshi page 98 one of the three ways of realizing Self is by breath control. Please elucidate on that and for which person would that be suitable path to even help? What does it mean to slow down your thoughts? Is it having two thoughts in a minute is slower than having three thoughts a minute? Or is a thought of a lower frequency slower than one of a higher frequency? As in Alpha vs Beta? Is a thought to which one has less attachment slower than one to which one has more attachment? Or what?

A: (Robert answers) "Or what?" is the answer. (students laugh) Or what, or nothing. Breath control is a part of the yoga system and the reason Ramana Maharshi said it was okay to do is because he agreed with everybody and everything. If you came to him and said, "I'm standing on my head and repeating mantra's," he'd say, "good keep it up." Because the thinking is, that is where you are right now and that is what you have to do right now. As long as you are practicing spiritual disciplines, it's okay. You have to do what you have to do by where you are. So it makes no difference what you do. As long as you are doing spiritual practices.

To slow down your thoughts merely means to think less. It's not in how many thoughts you're having. It's trying to get rid of all the thoughts together with everything else. As you practice on yourself your mind becomes quieter. And finally the mind disappears and dissolves entirely. So you are not trying to change having four thoughts or three or three thoughts for two. You're trying to get rid of the whole ball game. By asking yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come? Where do these thoughts come from?" They come from the I-thought. And we work on removing the I-thought. When the I-thought is removed everything else goes with it. All the rest of the thoughts.

So don't worry about your thoughts, work on removing the I-thought. If you have attachment to your thoughts, of course this is going to impede you. The idea is to find out that the thoughts have no value. Let them go and the attachment will go also. Be rid of everything. Don't ask so many questions. (students laugh) That's the answer.

Q: (Robert reads) Ramana spent years in a cave in Arunachala in complete isolation. Why he does not recommend this practice?

A: (Robert answers) Well the understanding is, you are where you are because that is the place you're meant to be. So if a person comes and tells me or Ramana, "Shall I give up my job, my family and go live in a cave and practice?" The answer is always, "If you were meant to be doing it, you would be doing it and there will be no question." If you have to ask a question, that means you're not supposed to do it. As long as there is a question there is nothing you need to do except what you're doing now.

Everything takes care of itself. Your job is just to awaken everyday a little more. To inquire, where you came from? Why you exist? Who you are? and then you will find yourself wherever you're supposed to be. Everything will work by itself. You have absolutely nothing to with it. Your job is just to see your Self as pure absolute reality. And again if you're meant to travel to Arunachala, or you're meant to travel to the jungles, if you're meant to get eaten by a tiger, it will all happen by itself. Don't worry about it.

Q: (Robert reads) Isn't it only the considerations and our beliefs that we have, so-to-speak in any way imprison us? And if we can neutralize or desensitize or so-to-speak remove the charge or intensity for which those beliefs are held in place, illusion will not even be considered anymore as having any reality?

A: (Robert answers) Considerations, neutralizing, all of these terms are unnecessary. It's so simple. You merely have to inquire, "To whom does this come? Who am I? Where do I come from?" Your beliefs imprison you because you are totally involved in all the stuff you write about. Do not get concerned with all these terms. Make it very simple for yourself. Just learn to be still. Not to have too many questions in your mind. Not to have too many methods floating around in your mind. Empty the mind completely and totally. That is the whole purpose of spiritual life. To empty the mind. Not to think intelligently and have all kinds of intellectual conceptions. But to totally empty the mind. And you empty the mind by inquiring, "To whom do the thoughts come?" Following it through. By waking up in the morning and understanding that you are boundless space. As you practice these things you will see fantastic results. Do not get confused by words. Speak less, think less and you will be everything you're supposed to be.

Q: (Robert reads) To Robert, what's new? (students laugh)

A: (Robert answers) New? New is new. Quietness is new, stillness is new.

SM: That's it Robert. (Informing Robert that there are no questions left.)

R: That's it Robert is new. Anyone like to add anything? Say anything? Do anything? Announcements Mary?

SM: Yes I do, we have our latest transcript to hand out. It's called "One Self, One Consciousness." I have one more to hand out.

SK: Robert sometimes you use this image of consciousness being the screen with images on it. And sometimes you said like today when there is no I-thought there is no body. Is there still kind of a body image still running around on the screen?

R: The body image appears to be running around on the screen. But you as the screen know that it's an illusion but that it isn't really us. It appears to be running around on the screen and it appears to be real. But the screen knows it's not real. The screen does not identify with the image at all. The screen identifies with itself. Consciousness identifies with itself. Somehow these images have appeared and they seem to rush in on consciousness as they do on the screen. But this is only our appearance. We see it like that. The screen does not see it like that. Consciousness does not see the image, consciousness sees consciousness. It can only see itself. It is we who see the other because the images have no validity. They do not exist. It's a mirage. (SK: But they could easily be described by consciousness?) They cannot be described by consciousness. They can be described by the images. The images of the body which appears here describes the other images on the screen. But from the other side there is no one left to describe anything. From the sight of the seen, the seer and the seen you can describe images.

SG: What is going on with the description of images that are coming out of - emanating from Robert's mouth, right now?

R: The images that are emanating from Robert's mouth is for your purpose. It is something that you see, that you need, that you have to hear. These things are emanating from Robert's mouth. In reality Robert knows there is no Robert and there is no image and there is no screen.

SH: And there is nothing coming out of his mouth? (R: Exactly.) No mouth. (laughs)

R: Look at it this way. Look at both sides of the screen. On one side there is nothing. Nothing going on. On the other side there are all images. So the screen knows there is absolutely nothing. Sees nothing, hears nothing, is nothing but the side of the images, discusses the images, sees the images, debates the images, talks about the images and believes it is the image. But none of these things exist.

SG: Robert, Taking the analogy one step further, it's like a kind of doubt when you're saying, "I haven't been born that's a good analogy," however how does this tally with your descriptions with sahaja samadhi that according to some Masters at the very beginning when they first were given sahaja samadhi they're still seeing the same things and gradually over time even that they don't notice after a while. Is the jump a gradual jump? And when you make the shift to consciousness, the way you're totally identified with consciousness, are you still observing these things and then gradually they fade? Is that the way it happens?

R: As long as there is an appearance of a body there will appear to be images. But to the Sage, there are no images and there are images. It is like watching shadows. The Sage embodied is able to see the images, so the body may appear to function correctly. But yet to the Sage there are no images. That is again very paradoxical. At the same time there are images and no images also. It is very difficult for the finite mind to understand, how can there be no images and images at the same time. (SG: Actually my finite mind is a little closer to understanding the experience.) (laughs) Does that frighten you? (laughter)

ST: No at all, not at all. (laughter)

R: Get rid of the finite mind all together you don't need it. It's extra luggage you're carrying around. I suppose in the whole game of maya the Sages that appear to come around in order to tell you to give up thinking about yourself and give up thinking about the world and understand that you are boundless space. If there were no Sages there would be no universe, there would no people, nothing. It is because the Sages exist that people exist. But the Sages keep telling them, they do not exist. (laughter) It's all a game, a very funny game. (SV: Incomprehensible.) (laughter) The world appears. The Sages appear and tell them there is no world... (SV: It's kind of like gobbledygook, you start off saying there is no problems but here is the way to solve that.) (students laugh) This is why we should never become too intellectual. We should never get totally involved in all these words and ideologies and anything else we become involved in. The simpler you can become the sooner you will awaken. Because when you try to figure it out you're using your finite mind. What else is figuring it out. In other words you're using something that does not exist. And so you get involved in all these things that do not exist because you're thinking.

SG: So if you just use consciousness and perhaps try to take care of that because we'll be in consciousness.

R: You can't use consciousness. There is no you that can use consciousness. (SG: But you can be the consciousness?) There is no you to be consciousness. Consciousness just is. (SG: So you can just be what you are and act with everything?) Be what you are, but who is the be-er?

SC: And to try to do it with the mind is like trying to wash blood of your hands with blood.

R: Yes that is a good point, sure. (SC: But still, (I won't say we) I persist knowing it, that it can't be done? There is something compelling us, or myself, to do the impossible.) What is the impossible? (SC: Get rid of the mind?) If it were impossible noone would ever do it. That is how you see it for yourself. But yet it has been done and so it must not be impossible.

SC: Alright, I hear what you're saying but it seems that the number of people that have...I personally don't know anyone that is in a position that you are or some of the other enlightened Masters and yet I've visited thousands of people all over the world, going to people like yourself and it's a rare occasion with the person. (R: So what is the point?) As I see it, I have had seen twice, both felt something happening, whether I tried to or didn't try. Now I have, more or less, just accept things the way they are. But by accepting things the way they are, it seems like the effort has to be made in order for something to happen. Yet at the same time you can't make an effort to make it happen because the effort itself keeps the happening from happening. Do you know what I'm trying to say?

R: Yes if you know this why are you making the effort? (SC: Because it seems that without making the effort that nothing is happening.) You're making the effort because nothing is happening? (SC: Knowing that making the effort nothing will happen, still there is something inside of me, like a compulsion to keep doing. Do you know what I'm saying?) That is true there is something that is making you come here, going through all these things. (SC: Not myself, other people or...?) Remember as I tell you so often, your life right now is but a split second in eternity... (SC: It's a what?) Split second in eternity. It appears to be here and in a flash it's gone. So do not think that if you have not become self realized or enlightened or awakened, you're too old or you're going to die soon and you'll never awaken. It's not true. What you have learnt where you are you carry on and continue. So what your life appears to be four score and ten or whatever, it's a split second in eternity. (SC: Yeah that's true.) You're here today and you're gone tomorrow but the spiritual work that you've done you take with you. Wherever you go, whatever happens to you. Nothing is lost. Therefore be grateful for where you are. Never condemn yourself. Be totally grateful for where you are. Even though you may think you're in a sorry place right now. Do not look at it that way. When you have gratitude for being where you are, you will be lifted up and you will make more progress on the path. So never condemn yourself, never look at yourself as believing you don't know anything or feel slighted because you're not making progress but give thanks, be grateful for where you are right now and you'll make fast progress.

SG: Robert your last point of view, wouldn't it be focus and being very clear about what matters to us the most because desire, the integrity involved that we focus on this, what else can we do?

R: You can get rid of yourself. That is what you should do. Forget about integrity and the rest of it. Then it will come by itself. Go deep within yourself, dive deep within yourself. Deeper than you've ever gone before. Where the thoughts stop. When you've touched the substratum of all existence. When you become the ocean of bliss, which is within you, the centre of you is the ocean of bliss. You are That! Think about the things we were talking about today and don't bother about the integrity or whatever and everything else.

SG: So what you're saying in effect is you would be doing it without feeling it and it would be being it without being the be-er. You can do it that way? What do you say? (R: Come again?) (students laugh) If I correctly get what you're saying and understand it correctly then, I will cease to be the be-er, I will cease to be doing anything by this diving into myself and it would effectively obviate this whole conundrum, of being the doer and being the be-er, who doesn't do anything. What you're saying it will obviate all of those other little problems we get into, try again at the same time, there is still a you trying to become enlightened. Which is the problem isn't it? There is somebody trying to become enlightened and the whole joke is there is nobody to become enlightened somehow that somebody has to be convinced that there is nobody to become enlightened.

R: What you should do is drink a glass of beer. (loud laughter) That will take care of everything. (laughter) Glen will be the beer. (laughter)

SH: That's my guru. (loud laughter)

SC: You didn't answer his question? (loud laughter) (R: That's the answer.)

SG: I realized he did. I got the answer I deserved. He answered it perfectly. (laughs)

SC: Can't figure it out with the mind? (R: You want a logical answer.) Yeah. (R: For whom is logic? The ego.) However the world still is caught up I know and what I'm realizing I'm saying and football season is starting, basketball season is almost over, baseball is still going. Everyone wants their team to win and there can only be one winner and yet people keep on identifying with that. Somehow it must do something to their ego or something?

R: Why are you worried about people? (SC: Because we're all part of the human race, that is why?) But know who you are and then you will take care of everybody else. (SC: What?) Understand your real nature, find out who you are and everything else will be taken care of also. Do not worry about others. (SC: Not worrying, I think that...) The baseball game, the football game... (SC: It's separation and that is what causes the riots and hopelessness for...) But you can't change things. You can't bring peace into the world while you're still in illusion. Become peaceful and you'll see peace. Become loving and you'll see love. In this kind of world in which we live, since time immemorial there has been man's inhumanity to man, there have been riots, wars, destruction, chaos, confusion. And there have been people saying we're going to make peace and turn this into a peaceful world. This is the way of the world. And the world is a mirage. So if you identify with all the things you see you will always be confused, you have to because the nature of this world is confusion. Do not identify with what you see. Identify with reality. We're going back to the space again, what I was talking about. All these riots are taking place in the space. Is the space affected? So are you the rioter or are you the space? With what do you identify? If you see the rioters reality then that is the world in which you live and you suffer accordingly. But when you go beyond that and you realize the space or consciousness or pure awareness is the only reality then you leave this world.

SC: I realize for me one of the biggest problems is that, I'm confusing consciousness with maybe awareness, you gave a good analogy, the space is not affected by the riots. Much as I want to remain in consciousness the awareness of consciousness - It seems that when I hear you talking and I want to be one with the consciousness or be aware of the consciousness, somehow the mind misinterprets the consciousness or turns it around, do you know what I'm trying to say?

R: Sure this is the spiritual work you've got to do. You've got to work on that mind and get rid of it, not on the world. Do not try to change the world by going for the right president. You'll never do it. Change yourself. (SC: That's it when you say the self, the self is consciousness there is where the confusion comes in.) I mean your personal self, you can't change consciousness. (SC: No, I understand that.) You have to change your personal self by raising yourself up above the riots, above the world, above the universe.

SC: I want to ask another question, how is one connect with the higher self?

R: By not connecting, by being yourself. Asking, "Who is it that is not connected. Who feels they're not connected." (SC: I think that is the problem all the way through.) Well work on yourself. (SC: I'm not feeling a connection with the consciousness or the higher Self.) You haven't been here for about a month or so. What have you been doing? You've been involved in the world right? (SC: Well, I had things I had to do.) Sure you always have to do something. All these things you have to do you give a lot of importance and a lot of validity too. The idea is not to give it the validity you do. Give the things you have to do less importance. That is how you grow. As long as you believe you want to go higher and you keep on giving importance to all the things in your life, you won't go higher.

THIS IS YOUR DHARMA

21st May, 1992

Robert: It's good to be with you again. It is wonderful to be with you again. I always enjoy coming here, for I feel there's only one, and we are all that one. There's only the one Brahman, the one Self, the one reality, and we are all that. Therefore I will make our confession. The I am confesses to you. Not my confession, or Henry's confession, or Dana's confession, or anybody's confession. Our confession. The confession is not coming from a person, it's coming from the one Self, it is the one Self.

Close your eyes. I am boundless space, infinite like the sky. I am. Not a person, place or thing, but I am. I am choice-less, effortless pure awareness. I am Parabrahman. I am sat-chit-ananda. I am ultimate oneness. I am absolute reality. I am nirvana. I am infinite like the sky. I am absolute consciousness. I am that I am. I am. I am. I am.

There are some of us who want to awaken with all their heart and with all their soul. Yet they always forget that they have to get rid of the stuff that's keeping them from awakening. The concepts, the preconceived ideas, the dogmas, the belief system that we've had for so many years, this has to be given up. We must develop loving kindness, compassion. If you are I am, then you must practice ahimsa, non-violence to any living thing, for if you admit and confess, I am absolute pure awareness, I am Parabrahman, this is all-pervading, this is omnipresence. Therefore the trees, the animals, the mountains, the universe, everything, is I am.

When I use the word I-am, do not believe or think it applies to the human body. There is no human body. The human body does not exist. I am consciousness exists, and that I am consciousness is everything. Everything is holy. Everything is sacred. Do not believe that some things are sacred and some things are not. Everything is sacred, even man's inhumanity to man, the dastardly situations that appear in the world. It is hard for the human mind to understand these things, but everything is very sacred, everything is God.

God is all there is, there's nothing else. So how can there be an evil situation someplace and also be God. This is duality, and we know and understand that duality does not exist. There is only the one, and the one is everything that exists. You consequently have to start feeling this in your heart, that your heart center is omnipresence, all-pervading, it includes the whole universe.

There is nothing to be angry about, nothing to be upset about, nothing to be depressed about, for the whole universe is God and nothing else. You are not your body or your mind. We still make the mistake in believing that when you say, I am Brahman, you're referring to your body. Your body can never be Brahman. The body is an illusion, a mirage. There is only Brahman, only God, nothing else.

We have to be in our own dharma. Dharma means the right path. You are in your dharma now, whatever it may be, for there are no mistakes. The dharma that appears that you're in, is the result of karma. This is why I always say you are in your right place, right now. This is your dharma. Do not fight it. Do not feel sorry for yourself. You have the freedom in this dharma to totally transcend and transmute everything and become free. Where there is no karma, there's no dharma, there's nothing. But while you are searching, you have to be thankful for the dharma that you're in. Do not feel something is wrong, or you're out of place, or you should be something else. I know people tell me many times, Robert, I feel so spiritual I really don't belong here on this earth. If you didn't belong here on this earth, what are you doing here? Why are you here? As long as you are here and you feel that you're here, then you belong where you belong. This is your dharma.

There is an interesting story that illustrates this. There was once a holy man sitting under a tree meditating. He had his hands open and a female mouse fell into his hands. A bird had apparently dropped the mouse. He felt sorry for the little mouse and because he was a great siddhi, a being of great powers from his years of meditation, he turned the mouse into a lovely young girl, and took the girl home to his house. His wife was enthralled with this. She was unable to have children, and she was so happy to have this little girl. They both loved her very much, and brought her up to be a fine young lady.

One day the wife said to the husband, "Husband it's time for our daughter to get married. Where can we find a suitable husband for her?" And the holy man said, I know, I'll ask the sun. So he went outside and he called the sun and he said, "Mr. Sun, our daughter is of the marrying age and we're looking for a suitable husband. Can you help us?" The sun said, "Certainly, I will marry her myself." How would you like to get married to the sun? The husband was thrilled and he said, Oh great joy has come over me that the sun would pick my daughter to be married to. And he ran in and he told his wife and he told his daughter. And the daughter said, "No Dad, I don't want to marry the sun. There's too much light, I'll be burned. Find me a different husband."

So the holy man went outside, he spoke to the sun again, he said, "Mr. Sun, our daughter does not wish to marry you because she will be burned with your light. Can you think of anyone else more powerful than you, that can marry her?" So the sun thought about it, and then he said, "Ask Mr. Cloud. The cloud will give you an answer. The cloud is mightier than I am because many times the clouds hide me, and I do not appear, and I can do nothing about it. So the cloud is mightier than I am. Ask the cloud." The holy man beseeched the cloud and said, "Mr. Cloud, I have a daughter that is of the marrying age and I'm looking for a suitable husband for her. Can you help out? Do you know of anyone who should marry her?" And Mr. cloud said, "I will. I'll marry your daughter." And again the holy man became overjoyed with this. Imagine a cloud marrying my daughter. This was a good thing. He ran in the house, told his wife and then told his daughter. The wife and the husband were so happy, but the daughter said, "Chill out, Dad. I don't want to marry that cloud. For when it rains, I'll get soaked. Get me a better husband."

So again the holy man went out to the cloud and told him the story, what the daughter said. "Can you think of anyone else?" And the cloud said, "Well, how about Mr. Mountain? This is a great mountain here that is mightier than I am, because when I flow around the mountain, I can't go through it. I have to flow around it. And there's nothing I can do about it. So the mountain is very powerful." The holy man beseeched the mountain, "Mr. Mountain, can you think of someone that can marry my daughter?" And the mountain also said, "I will." So again the holy man was very happy about this. A mountain marrying his daughter, what could be better? He ran into the house, told the wife, she was overjoyed. And he told the daughter. Again she didn't want to marry the mountain. She said, "Come on, Dad, I can't marry this mountain. The mountain has cactus growing all over it. When we embrace, I'll be pinched with cactus. Think of someone else."

So the holy man went back to the mountain and told him the story, and said, Can you think of anybody else for my daughter? The mountain said, "Well, the only one I can think of that is more powerful than me is this little mouse that lives in the bottom of me, because he bores holes and has a nest inside of me, and I can do nothing about it. And since he bores holes in me, he must be more powerful than I am. Ask the mouse."

So the holy man went to the mouse and said, Mr. Mouse, I have a daughter of the marrying age, I'm looking for a suitable husband, can you help me?" And the mouse said, "Yes, I will marry her myself." He was overjoyed. Imagine, a mouse marrying his daughter. He ran and told his wife, and they both went and told the daughter. The daughter thought about this and she said, "Yes, I will marry the mouse. The mouse is very cute. I will marry the mouse. But father can you do something for me? Can you please turn me into a little mouse also?"

So the holy man turned her into a little mouse. And they both got married and they lived happily ever after, in the mountain. Now what is the moral of this story? I'll give you three choices.

A: Everyone's daughter should marry a mouse.

B: This was her dharma originally, for she was a mouse, and she had to live out her dharma and become free and liberated.

C: If you marry a mountain, a cloud and a mouse, you will have children that will become freaks and you'll be able to put them in the circus and make $1,000,000.

So which one is the right answer?

B of course. This story tries to bring home the fact that your dharma is what you have to live out. If you try to change it, years will pass, and you will make all kinds of mistakes, and go through all kinds of problems. Whatever your dharma is, has been presented to you by karma. Therefore do not fight it. Bless it.

This is sort of difficult to understand sometimes, for you have the impression that if you live in a condition that is horrible, terrible, you have to stay there and not change the condition. This is the ultimate truth. This is exactly what you must do. And you know why. For you have within you the conditionings that are at the level of your experience. This means if you change your environment, or if you change the condition, the samskaras and the conditioning that you have inside of you will just put you back in that kind of a position with different people, different environment, but you have not risen from that condition. Therefore you have to experience the same things over, and over, and over, and over again.

We find this happening in people who get divorced, get married, get divorced, and get married. They always think they're going to get something better. But they always seem to have the same problem. Just new faces, new people, same problems. So if you have a horrible marriage, or if you're not living with the person you love, do not try to change this, for you have not changed yourself. Merely know the truth. Work on yourself and never react to the condition. This is the freedom you've got from dharma and karma. When you begin to see the truth in yourself, but automatically, you will be picked up by the power which knows the way, and you'll be placed in a position or in a place where you're supposed to be at this time. This is why I tell you so often there are no mistakes. It appears sort of complicated to the finite mind, but you are in your right place, going through those experiences that are right for you at this time. Only if you are thankful and you bless the position you're in, do you become a higher being, do you lift yourself up, and finally you find liberation. But it begins and ends with you.

Never pray to God for release of your problems. Never pray to God to change your life, and to give you something better. This is wrong prayer. If you have to pray to God, pray to God to give you the strength and the wisdom and the courage that you need to be able to handle the situation that you're in. This is correct prayer.

Do not try to change anything. Be yourself. Work on yourself. Begin to see things in a new light. See your situation differently. There are no bad things, there are no good things, but thinking makes it so.

Stop thinking of the extremes, good and bad, right and wrong. Rather look at yourself in the moment. Stay centered. See yourself as a divine being, an infinite being, totally free and liberated. Do not feel sorry for yourself because you are in a position, in a situation, you don't like. This just holds you there more.

And again, as we mentioned before, even if you run away from a situation, you will attract some of the circumstances elsewhere. Running away is never the answer. Changing yourself is the answer. Take a look at your own life and see if it is not true, what I'm saying. The changes you've gone through in your life. I know so many people who have left their homes and family and have gone to India to meditate, to find gurus, teachers. They have come back very depressed, even suicidal, for they've given up everything. Remember there's nothing you have to give up. Only mentally do you give up attachment.

Always look at the world as a reflection of you. You are the world. The world can be nothing without your approval. It sounds strange, but true. You have to stop identifying conditions apart from yourself. I know it seems hard to do. When you see the riots we've just had, the murders, the looting, it's really difficult to realize you are one with this. But think about this. Why should you only think that you are one with the good things? If you are one, you are one with everything. Never the good things that you enjoy, and you like, and you like to bring into your life.

You are all-pervading, omnipresent, and you are one with all there is. The correct way to observe this is to look at everything in this world intelligently, without any comments, without any reactions. Do not be for or against anything. Train yourself to observe, to watch, to look, without any reaction. You may start training yourself with the small things. Work on the small things first.

As an example, if you go outside and you see you have a ticket on your car for over-parking, catch yourself reacting to this, by not reacting at all. Simply see the situation, look at the situation. Have no comment, no reaction. Pay the ticket and forget it. Do not think this is good, this is bad, this is outrageous, this is wrong, I don't deserve it. If you didn't deserve it, it wouldn't happen. Say you stub your toe. Instead of cursing the chair, getting upset, feel the pain, observe it, watch it, and let it go. Everything that takes place in your life, this is the way you should react.

Someone cheats you, and you're thinking of taking them to court, to sue them. Think about this carefully. Is this what I really want to do? And then your ego will tell you, "Of course you do. You were cheated." Your business partner cheated you out of $50,000. So you want to take this person to court to sue them. Say you did go to court and you won the case. You think this is good. But something will happen to even it out again. You'll have to go to court again, and again, and again. Sometimes you will win, sometimes you will lose. There are people like that you know. I'm thinking of a particular woman right now who makes a habit of going to court at least once a month. She is always suing somebody for something. Sometimes she wins and sometimes she loses, and she's a nervous wreck. She's not a happy woman.

If you begin to understand that everything is in its right place, how can somebody do something to you. No one can hurt you. What is rightfully yours, no one can ever take away. So why worry? Why be upset? It makes life so much easier. You start to worry and you become upset because in your finite mind, in your ego mind, you're thinking, Well, I've been cheated out of $50,000. This is all the money I have. I'm going to go to the poor-house. I'll become a homeless person, and your mind keeps playing tricks with you, telling you all the bad things that are going to happen to you. If you can only laugh at yourself, and stop thinking of those things, you will find that you have risen higher in consciousness, and you're in control of the situation, and all is well.

Never allow your mind to play tricks on you, to play games with you, and tell you about all the things that might happen, and then fear comes in and you start running around, crying, trying to correct things, trying to make things good, while you keep thinking about all the bad things that are going to happen to you.

These things we are talking about are very important, for it keeps you back from thinking of truth and reality, it keeps you back from moksha, from liberation, for you're spending all the time involved in the material world. I'm not saying to give up thinking about your business, or thinking about your family, or thinking about things in your life, but make them short and sweet. Think a couple of minutes about these things, and leave it alone, and go back to your spiritual Self, thinking about who am I? What is my real nature? Who was I before I was born? Where did I come from? We're talking about I, not you.

See I caught some of you didn't I, for when I was saying, "Where did I come from? Who am I?" you are going back to your humanhood, to your personal self. Learn whenever you say the word I, you're not thinking about your personal self. When you forget it, you are thinking about your personal self, but when you remember, I is God. I is pure awareness, absolute reality. Even when you forget this and you are involved in conversation, when you use the word I, you are thinking about your personal self.

Remember to catch yourself. Keep catching yourself all the time. This is how you grow. This is how you mature. Never allow a day to go by when you do not work on yourself in this manner. A situation is presented to you, good or bad, do not get excited. Observe the situation. Keep your cool. Realize the situation comes to me. I am experiencing this. The personal I is experiencing this predicament, not me. The real I is not going through this, but the personal I is going through this. To the extent that you do not feel the condition or situation that you are in, to that extent is the personal I not working any longer, and the real I comes along. You begin to feel higher, spiritual, sacred. Comes by itself. All you've got to do is to let go of the personal I by not reacting to the condition, and automatically the real I comes along, for you are really the real I. This is your real nature. This is your swarrupa, God, Brahman, consciousness.

Can you imagine what would happen if you thought about this all day long, without forgetting. Why, you'd be enlightened in no time. Now perhaps you can see the reason, what is keeping you back. Yourself! You are keeping yourself back. Why? Because you are involved in the material world, in your mind. Remember I'm not saying you have to give up your job, or not do things in this world. You've got a body and the body is going to do things. But mentally, you have to not be attached to what you're doing. Your body will know what to do and will do everything that is necessary for it to do. Be your Self!

Again, what I am saying is this. Every position that you find yourself in, every situation that you find yourself in, with whomever you find yourself with, the positions that you have or don't have, wherever you may be in this world, is your right place at this moment. Bless this. Love it.

I know it sounds hard when you think of a horrible condition, and you say, "I must love it." Let me explain again. The reason you love it is because God is all there is. Try to remember this. There is nothing but God. Therefore, if you hate something, you're hating God, which is your self. It's all coming out of you. You are that. You must learn to trust and love your Self, your precious Self.

When you become despondent, depressed, hateful, feeling sorry for yourself, this is what blasphemy really means, for you're feeling this way about your Self. Can't you see? There's only your self. If you think something is horrible, you're speaking about your self. You look at a situation, you watch it, you observe it, you never react, you leave it alone. And then you'll be given the power that you need, to handle it, to go through it, without thinking, without thoughts, without any commotion, without any noise. These are the things you must work on. Be that Self.

Never be frightened again by anything. If I can make this perfectly clear to you. Never allow anything in this world to ever frighten you. Allow things to unfold as they may. Remember you just watch and observe, hold on to the truth. Happiness will come of its own accord. When you hold on to the truth, when you do not react to life's conditions, person, place or thing, when you leave things alone and you stop fighting life, you're not giving up.

In the Western psychology, we're told that you never give up. We are taught to keep on fighting. But I'm telling you there is nothing to fight, and the only thing you're giving up is your ego. Western psychology has never gone beyond this. Therefore they do not know of life beyond this. Western psychology works in the presumption that you are a body and a mind, so naturally they tell you never give up, fight to the end. Stick up for your rights.

But in the highest teachings of the truth we learn that you have no rights. You're giving up your body, your ego, your mind, and when this happens, you go beyond psychology. Something happens that psychiatry, psychology are not aware of whatsoever. And that is you rise to a higher dimension, where there is happiness, and peace, and compassion, and love, joy, that is naturally yours. You begin to feel these things instead of the things you felt before. Prior to this, when you were fighting life, when you were sticking up for your rights, when you were trying to get even, when you were working as an ego, you were never able to feel happiness or joy or peace. Only sometimes, when you won, when you got your point across, when you won an argument, when you won a fight, when you sued someone and won, you felt happy for a while, but it didn't last long, and you have to go through it again and again. But this is as far as the world goes. It doesn't know anything else but this.

What I'm saying to you, let go of everything. Do not hold on. Stand naked before God, without any crutches, without anything to hold on to. When you can do this, from this moment on you will begin to rise. And you will become aware that you are not the body, or the mind, or the world, or the universe, but you are effortless choice-less pure awareness. You are boundless space, infinite like the sky. You have become everything, and everything has become you. Work on yourself.

Let's do this again and we will practice "Who am I." You will say, "Who am I?" to yourself when you inhale. Before you exhale you will say, "I am Brahman." And when you exhale you will say, "I am not the body." With your respiration you inhale and you say, "Who am I?" Before you exhale you say, "I am Brahman." As you exhale you say, "I am not the body." Close your eyes. Relax yourself. Focus your attention on your breath. Listen to your breath. Breathe naturally like you always do. As you inhale you say to yourself, "Who am I?" Before you exhale say, "I am Brahman." Exhale and say, "I am not the body." Let's do this.

Feel free to ask some questions.

SL: Robert how is this one different from what you had us do before that you said. Things that seem the same thing and then before exhaling, saying, "I am that," then exhaling and saying, "I am not the body," or "I am not the mind," (R: It's the same. There is no difference.) Also Robert once before you said that instead of saying, "I am God." You said that our minds cannot accept that. So do you think that is the same thing as "I am Brahman?"

R: Sometimes your mind cannot accept this, sometimes it can. But it's training for the mind. What you're really doing when you say, "I am Brahman," you are convincing the mind that you are not the body and the mind becomes a little weaker and begins to give up. As you keep it up. You grow and you feel better about yourself. Then things begin to happen.

Do not take every word I say literally. That it has to be exactly this way. I always put it a little differently to make you do it in different ways so the mind can get used to things being different and not the same. In other words it's not that we're trying to be brain surgeons and everything has to be exact. In truth there is no exactness. Things are changeable, they're words. The whole idea is to transcend the mind and become totally free.

SV: Robert I'm not clear about, when you said catch yourself when you're going to say, "I." By the time you catch yourself you've already thought of I and you've thought of I in a personal sense. What do you do then at that moment? You just simply recognize, I wants and needs in one personal I?

R: Yes, you've caught yourself doing that. (SV:Um-hm) So you go higher then because you wake up and realize the I is God. Whereas before you would go on without catching yourself. As long as you keep catching yourself all the time then you're growing.

HAPPINESS AND PEACE

24th May, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. Happy Memorial Day.

Memorial Day is not supposed to be happy, is it? I guess we worship dying people on Memorial Day. Why do we do this? Why do we worship the dead? After all who dies? No one ever dies. What appears to be death doesn't even exist. There's only life, everlasting life, one life, and you are that. We, as human beings, have morbid ideas, the funerals we have, the worship of the dead. I guess it gives us something to do.

If there's one thing you should always remember and never, never forget, it is that everlasting happiness and peace are your real nature. You are the embodiment of happiness and peace, and you compose the entire universe. There is nothing that takes place without your permission. The growth of a blade of grass, the formation of a cloud, all of these things happen with your permission. If you are in deep sleep none of these things are happening. Oh you may say they're still going on, but not to you. When you are in deep sleep it is as if you're dead. There's absolutely nothing going on. But when you wake up, you say, I slept. It is the I that slept, not the real you, the I, that appears to sleep.

Happiness and peace are you, without any attachments. Pure essence. This essence is everywhere present. It is all-pervading. It is pure awareness. It is in the trees, the flowers, the sky, and those things are within you. It is you who are all-pervading, everywhere present at the same time.

This appears sort of strange to some of you, because you have believed you are a human being all of these years. You believe you're separate, apart from everything, and because you believe you are apart from everything, you react to outside experiences. If something is nice, you react happy. If something is not too nice, you react with fear, anger. Again, these things would not be there if it weren't for you. They all emanate out of your mind. It is your mind that creates everything in this universe. Not you, but your mind.

If you understood this, you would never have to go anywhere, or run anywhere, or do anything, for there would be pure happiness, by just sitting by yourself, still. There are many beings in this world who can do this. They realize that they are the all-pervading essence of life, the absolute reality, and they feel so happy, so peaceful, so loving, that there's absolutely nothing they have to do to achieve these traits.

Anything you have to do in this world to bring you happiness does not last, for the world is a world of constant change. When you look to the world for your happiness, for your peace, for your harmony, you're making a mistake. Look at this world. Is anything ever the same? Things appear, they stay for a while, and they go. Consequently, if you identify with the things of this world, you'll be totally confused and confounded, for you'll understand why things are like this. You own something, you lose it, it burns, disappears out of your life. You live with a person, they change, they leave. This is the way of this world.

But the question is, "Who are you and where do you belong?" As you go within yourself, as you begin to find the truth within yourself, something begins to flash in your mind, in the beginning, that tells you you are not the body and you are not the mind that you think with. Something begins to take over, something wonderful, something beautiful. You begin to feel feelings you never felt before. You begin to see things as your Self. You're never angry at anything, because if you're angry at anything, you're angry at yourself. If you hate anything, you hate yourself. Therefore you stop hating, you stop being angry, you stop judging, you stop criticizing. You leave everything alone. You no longer differentiate. You no longer say, "This is good and this is bad." You leave it alone, period, without qualification. There's no longer anything that's bad, and there's no longer anything that's good. You see the world differently. It becomes a dream.

When you're dreaming, the dream appears very real to you. Where does the dream come from? It comes out of your mind. Yet while you're dreaming, you'll swear the dream is real, the dream world that you're in is valid, and no one can tell you otherwise. If you are in your dream, whatever you're dreaming about, and I come over and I say, "You're dreaming. This is all nonsense, it's all a dream," you'd laugh at me, you would look at me and say, "You're crazy. Look. Look at everything." You would even pinch me and say, "Can't you feel this? How can it be a dream?" But you don't realize it's a dream pinch. Everything is taking place in a dream, just like here.

Therefore, Sages have told us since the beginning of time, that this world is an illusion, this world is a dream, and the more you react to it, the further you get entangled in it. When you get entangled in it, you keep living for ever and ever in different bodies, different places, different things, and it never stops for you. You may believe you get old and die, then you take a rest and you reincarnate, then go through experiences again, and again, and again, until you start realizing that the whole thing is a dream, it is all a nonsense, I have absolutely nothing to do with this world, and you awaken to your true Self.

When you awaken to your true Self, this is the happiness and peace I was referring to. You will find such unalloyed happiness, and such ineffable peace. And there will be nobody to explain it, nobody within you or without you, for you will be it your Self.

Look at your life since you were born, the things you've gone through, the experiences you've had. You have goals. You want to reach certain goals in your life. Yet these goals won't bring you happiness nor peace. For a time they'll make you happier than you've been, because you've not experienced this before. So you feel good for a time. But then it changes, as all things must, and you become bewildered, disillusioned. Therefore the materialist never understands what life is all about, for they are steeped in the world of change.

To understand what the world is all about you have to understand what you are all about. What do you really know about yourself? You know that you exist, that's for sure. No one can deny their own existence. Yet who is it that exists? Who are you? You say well I'm Jean, I'm Jane, I'm Mary, I'm Tony, and George. That's not what you are. Those are the names that have been given to you at birth, and you're not the same person you were when you were born. When you were born, you were a little boy or a little girl, a baby. Then you grew up into a teenager. Then you became mature. Like the world, you are always changing, changing, changing. You're never the same. So who are you? You can't be the person that you answer to your name when your name is called, for that person is always changing.

The person of wisdom, the thinking person, begins to ponder these truths. "If I am not my body, that changed from a baby, to a teenager, to a mature person, then who am I?" You begin to inquire within yourself. All of the answers are within you. You begin to ask yourself, "Who am I? Where did I come from?"

One day something interesting happens to you. You notice you're asking the question, and every question has the I in it. You inquire, Who am I? Where did I come from?" You begin to see that I is separate from you. I is the personal self. Then you follow this I to the heart center, where it dissolves, and you become consciousness, your real Self.

Whenever you think of yourself from now on, try to realize that you are not the I, the personal self, the I that speaks and says, I am sick, I am healthy, I am poor, I am rich, I am depressed, I am happy. You're always using the first pronoun I. I, I. Think about this I. It's the beginning of all these problems, it's responsible for everything that's happened to you, good or bad. You want to get rid of it. And I, the ego, and the mind are the same thing. When the I disappears, the ego will disappear, and the mind will disappear, at the same time. What will be left? Pure awareness, absolute reality, nirvana, I am that I am. This is totally different than your physical life and your physical appearance.

You begin the practice by sitting quietly, and as thoughts come into your mind, you inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who thinks these thoughts?" No matter what the thoughts are, either they are good thoughts or bad thoughts, you inquire, "To whom do they come?" within yourself, you inquire. And the answer comes, "Why, I think these thoughts. I am the one thinking these thoughts." Then you further inquire, "Then who am I? Who am I?" which means, "What is the source of the I? Where did this I come from?" You remain still. You never answer this question. As you remain still, thoughts will again come into your mind, for the mind is always thinking, thinking, thinking.

Try to remember also that there really is no mind. There is just the thought. We can say that the mind is really a conglomeration of thoughts about the past, worries about the future. This is all the mind is, thoughts. The thoughts are not your friend. The thoughts cause you to worry, to fear, to react. So you want to destroy these thoughts. The only way to destroy the thoughts is by obliterating the I, for it's the I who thinks all these thoughts. And this is the way to do it, by inquiring continuously, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I feel them. I think them. Then who is the I? Who am I? Where is the source of the I?" As you continue to do this, the I will one day vanish completely, disappear, and you will be free.

This is the main purpose for human existence. Your existence as a human being, so-to-speak, is to discover your real nature. You are not in this world to do the things that most of you are doing. The world deludes you. It makes you believe all kinds of things. You appear to be here for one purpose only, and this is to discover your real nature, who you really are, to make you free and happy.

Yet we are brought up in a worldly society that cares very little about these things. If you look at the world, the precarious condition the world is in, it's always been a precarious condition, from the beginning of time. You'll stop and think, "Do I really want to be a part of this world?" The world is a cosmic joke. You get involved in all sorts of things in this world, and you suffer accordingly.

Find out this truth. Only you can uncover it for yourself. Begin to practice within yourself. Do not just go along with life the way it appears, for it will drag you all over the place. You'll go through all kinds of experiences, and you'll believe your job is to change bad things into good things. You have your ideas of what bad things are, and you want to change them into good things. This is all a joke. For bad things to change into good things, and good things to change into bad things, it's like a yo-yo. It goes up and down. There's no solidness. Nothing to hang onto in this world. You're like a leaf blowing in the wind. You think you're free, and your ego is big, and you feel that you can go into this world and do anything you like. But you're always disappointed.

The only real happiness is within yourself. The only real peace is within yourself. You have to find it. I can bring you to the vein of gold, but you have to dig for the gold yourself.

Now let us practice this self-inquiry together. As a group it becomes very easy for you. Just make yourself comfortable. Close your eyes, relax. As the thoughts come into your head, makes no difference what kind of thoughts they are. Ask yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come?" And then feel the answer, "Why these thoughts come to me. I'm thinking about these thoughts." Ask further, "Who am I? Who is this me? Who thinks these thoughts?" and keep still.

Thoughts come again to your mind. Whatever they are makes no difference. You repeat the same thing again. "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I think them. Then who am I?" As you continue to do this the thoughts will come to you less and less and you will feel greater and greater happiness and harmony.

So practice this by yourself now.

Robert: Time to play stump the guru. Somebody bring me my stumps.

SM: It doesn't look like anything is in there Robert.

R: No questions. Emptiness. (laughter) (SH: We've made it.) (laughs) Feel free to ask anything or say something if you like. Make a personal statement.

SR: I'll make a statement, just correct me if I'm not seeing correctly. There is something of the I-thought that is also tempting. To get a glimpse of conveying some kind of understanding of the big guy, but it's still churning through a bunch of prejudices and of feelings. So only a little bit comes out and it's skewed and that doesn't help me much in getting a feeling for the big guy. That is about all I can say. Looking into a peep hole and that is about all I can see.

R: Just be aware of what you see without any reaction. Observe your feelings and your emotions and your thoughts but don't react to them. When I just observe without reacting, the mind becomes weaker, thoughts become weaker, the emotions become weaker and then the feelings will dissipate. So do not react to them and not think that they are meant for you to get rid of. Do not think that they are some power that you have to get rid of. You're working in the illusion remember. It doesn't exist to begin with. You observe them, watch them. Inquire, "To whom do they come? Where do they come from?" And they will go but do not react to that.

Anything you react to becomes more powerful. Therefore when you think your thoughts, your emotions, your feelings are real and there is something that you've got to do to find the big guy, like you say, you become more confused and confounded. There is nothing you have to find, there is no one you have to discover. You simply just have to allow that which is not real to disappear from your life. And again you do that by observing, by watching and by not reacting.

SG: Robert just little bit of confusion when you refer to the I - I? I'm not exactly sure what you mean by that? Why is it a double I, I - I?

R: I - I means "I am." They're the same thing. Just another way of putting it. "I am" period. Not this, not that, just "I am." I - I is the same thing. I - I. There is nothing else. I - I. I - I - I. Ay, yai yai yai! (laughter)

SU: Robert I'd like to ask about meditation. (R: Umm) Is the I-am meditation that we just went through, I guess... (R: This is not the "I am" meditation, it is self-inquiry.) Well okay, the self-inquiry process. What is the difference between this process and meditation with a mantra? (R: Yes.) Which is more effective in terms of being able to annihilate the ego?

R: It depends on you, where you're at. Self-inquiry is the highest ideal, it's an ideal state. You don't have to go within yourself or transcend anything. But some people need a mantra to make their mind one pointed. The mantra makes your mind one pointed when you're having a lot of thoughts. It eventually leads to self-inquiry. (SU: Robert I've been practicing mantra meditation for 15 years and I have found that the self-inquiry process gave more effective experiences than the mantra, this is what I observed.) By all means practice it. This is why it's more effective because you've been working on yourself for 15 years with a mantra. Whereas if a newcomer came in here self-inquiry would be sort of meaningless for him perhaps, would not have a hope in this. That is why it is said that self-inquiry is for mature souls. Because they have been practicing before, previous lives perhaps or their whole life here. Then you're led to self-inquiry. So that's why you like self-inquiry because you've earned it so-to-speak. You've been doing this for a long time. You've been doing mantras. It's like you're going to school and you're graduating. But everything is important.

SU: If you receive like a mantra from a teacher and you feel that you want to practice the self-inquiry process. Which would mean that you wouldn't be emphasizing the meditation mantra or self-inquiry and wondering which course to take, it's just based on how you feel and which is more comfortable for you.

R: In a way but it's like mathematics. You learn the multiplication table, you go into long division, you go into algebra, calculus, it's the same thing. You forget about practicing meditation and then you go higher and higher and higher you come to self-inquiry, and become the witness and then you simply be the self. So your heart will tell you which to do first. Listen to your heart and you will do whatever you have to do personally.

Everyone is totally different. So I never say that you have to do this only or have to do that only. It depends where you're coming from. What your needs are. But you just said yourself that you've been practicing mantra for 15 years, now perhaps you're graduating you've come to self-inquiry. So begin doing that.

SR: Is there a state Robert where you kind of feel the presence of the "I-am" and yet your thoughts are still coming. It's like living in two worlds at the same time.

R: If you actually felt the "I am" for real, the thoughts will not be there. They wouldn't be there. (SR: Who is this phony "I-am" then?) You are just intellectually thinking about "I am." That is why you can feel the thoughts and the "I am" both. When the real "I am" comes through, all thoughts have been transcended. There is no room for both. In reality there is only one I am and you are that. (SR: There is a light and a subtle energy expansion "I-am," that is the kind of feeling I've got.) Those are good experiences, very high experiences. But when you go all the way and you finally transcend everything, there will only be "I am" no thoughts. (SR: I except that? I'm saying when a person is in that in-between state.) Umm. (SR: How do you embrace one and kiss the other one goodbye?) You continue working on the yourself, you dive deeper into yourself. You dive deeper and deeper by inquiring, by observation, by witnessing. You dive deeper. You inquire, "To whom does the other come?" And you'll disappear.

Any announcements?

(Announced)

Any prashad?

R: It's memorial day.

(general talk)

Thank you for coming. Remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself, to worship yourself. For God dwells in you as you. Peace.

YOU ARE THE INFINITE SILENCE

28th May, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon this Thursday evening.

I was watching CNN news before I came. Ross Perot is running as a kind of independent president, made a statement that when he gets into the White House he will not have any homosexuals or adulterers on his team. So looks like he's going to be a lonely guy. He'll be all by himself. Just thought I'd pass this on to you.

People are always trying to change the world. They don't realize the world is what it is, and nature takes care of it. We live in a world of duality, maya. It will always be like this. Some people are dreaming about an Aquarian age. Some people are dreaming about the age of enlightenment, where everybody is at peace with one another. It will never happen. This is not the kind of world we live in. Perhaps there are planets where there is peace, but this is not one of them. Since the beginning of time, there has been man's inhumanity to man.

Our job is to find out who we are, to awaken and become free. That's what this is all about. Not to do things externally, but internally. Not to try to change people, places and things, but to go within the self, and realize that you are not the body. There never was a body. And if you're not the body, you're not the world. There is no world, as it appears. If you're not the world, you're not the universe. None of these things really exist in truth. They exist in maya. But maya does not exist itself. Therefore nothing exists, for there is no maya. There never was and there never will be.

But you're sitting here looking at yourself, and looking at others, and you're asking where did everybody come from? Where did I come from? Find out where I came from. That's a good question. Where did I come from? Find out. Check it out. When you find out where I came from, you'll find out where everything else came from. From nowhere. For I never existed, the personal I.

I have been with many of you for a few years now. I've had lunch with many of you. I've been on personal relationship with many of you. And now the honeymoon is over. What do I mean that the honeymoon is over? You all know what a honeymoon is, I'm sure. When you look in each other's eyes and you see God, love, joy. But then after you're married a while, things begin to change. You get used to the other person, and the love changes to something else. You sort of begin to tolerate one another. So it is with our relationship here. The first time you met me, many of you were in awe. You looked forward to seeing me for the first time. It was quite a thrill I suppose. I don't know why. I always told you I am nobody important. But then when we got used to each other over the years, you see me two, three, four times a week, I become just another guy to you. This is the way you should see me anyway. I'm just another being.

I remember when I was in Ramana Ashram many years ago. I was always a loner. I never used to mix much with people. And I would watch, from the old hall, Ramana on the couch. I would be standing in a corner. Newcomers came in, they were all so full with awe, thrilled. They'd heard so much about Ramana. They would pay obeisance to him, prostrate themselves on the floor in front of him, cry. They would say something like, "You are my mother, Ramana, you are my father, you are my wife, you are my God. I will be with you forever. Six months later, a year later, I heard the same people talking to one another, gossiping, "I wonder if Ramana is really enlightened. He's just a funny old man." Somebody else would say, "If he were really enlightened, he wouldn't have rheumatism, cancer, and whatever else he had. And these people would leave, go somewhere else, looking for new gurus, new teachers. Sad.

I am speaking mostly to the seekers and to some disciples. The devotees couldn't care less about what the Sage says or does. They are just devoted to the Sage, without any motives, without any reason. And of course those are the people who awaken, in most instances.

When you find a Sage, and I'm not speaking of my own self aggrandizement, because I couldn't care less, as you know, where you go or what you do, but wherever you find the Sage, it is an honor for you to be there, for there is something within you that has led you to a Sage, and it is your business to serve the Sage in every way you can. This is a true Sage-disciple relationship. A devotee serves the Sage, for he realizes he's serving himself. There is only the Self, and what you do to the Sage, you're doing to yourself. How you treat the Sage, you're treating yourself. There is no one but the Self. You are that.

Do you feel yourself as one? Can you feel the power, the oneness, the love, the compassion, in the Sage? You're feeling it in yourself. There's no difference. You are the one. That one is pure awareness, absolute reality. When you realize that you are the one, you'll be able to see in the Sage your own reality.

And yet you have to be careful sometimes. There are so many teachers out there. As you know by now, you are always attracted to the teacher that you need at the time. If you are fraudulent, you'll be attracted to a fraudulent teacher. If you are full of mischief, you will be attracted to a teacher that is also full of mischief. You're always seeing yourself, and the Sage is simply a mirror for yourself. Yet there are certain qualities you should look for. I'm speaking of the highest form of sagehood. You have to check out the Sage before you become a disciple, devotee. There are certain qualities to look for.

The first quality is, a Sage owns nothing at all. A true Sage has no possessions whatsoever. A true Sage is taken care of by his devotees, doesn't own anything.

Another quality to look for is, the Sage does not care where he or she is. It's all the same. A true Sage does not have to travel everywhere, trying to pick up devotees, or disciples. Couldn't care less if anybody heard of him or her. Never looking for name or fame.

Not really interested in publishing books, putting out tapes, making him or herself well known all over the world, so people can come. A true Sage just doesn't care about these things, because there's no self left to care about these things. The ego has been totally transcended. There is no ego that needs to do anything. That is why people like Ramana Maharshi never left Tiruvannamalai, Arunachala. There's nowhere to go. It's all the same.

Another quality to look for is compassion. A true Sage has total compassion for everyone. Does not differentiate the ones that talk about him behind his back. And he has more compassion for them than for anybody else. It's like the story of Jesus with the lost sheep. He said the sheep herder will go after the sheep that has been lost, and seek the sheep, and love the sheep, and take care of that sheep. So it is with the Sage. Those that are unkind to the Sage, the Sage has greater compassion for those people.

You see, the whole thing is different than what you think it is. We're not here to become famous, people should know us all over the world. We're not here to compare ourselves with anyone else, or be anyone else. We're simply not here. When you believe you are here, then you have to do all sorts of things to exist. Not to make all kinds of waves, so people will know about you. You make videos, you make tapes, you write many books, they go all over the world. This has been going on since the beginning of time. What has it done for us, for humanity? Absolutely nothing.

The only thing that is true is that you exist, and it's your job to find out who exists? Who are you that exists? You're supposed to dive deep, deep within the self and awaken yourself to this truth, that you are not the body, you are not the mind, you are not the world, you are not God, you are nothing. You are no thing. And then you are free.

But when you get mixed up with the external world, you get externally involved in all kinds of things, in places, books, meetings, then there is total confusion. This is the reason I like to act stupid, so that so many people will not come here.

Remember, I never asked to do this. It just happened. Most of my life I ran away from these things. But here we are. Everything unfolds the way it's supposed to. Nature takes care of everything. We're here together, so accept it. There's nothing you can do. Everything appears to be preordained, and you are where you are supposed to be. Why are you here? Ask yourself. What is the reason you came here tonight? What are you looking for? What do you want? I really have nothing to give you. What are you looking for? If you come here with love in your heart, period, then you're here for the right reason.

The entire teaching, of course, is that you're not the personal I. The personal I doesn't even exist. Yet you feel that it exists because you feel the world, and you feel your body, and you feel others. You consequently have to do certain things to yourself so that the personal I will just transcend self, and disappear. You practice self inquiry. You practice observation, witnessing. You do all these things until the day comes when you do not have to do anything, and you awaken to freedom and happiness, which is your divine birth-right, which is your real nature.

It begins by loving yourself. When you love yourself, which you call the personal self, it expands and becomes the infinite, the I am. And that includes the whole universe. You have become the whole universe. You have become everyone and everything. Your essence is in every flower, in every bird, in every raindrop, in every worm. This essence is pure awareness. Feel this essence. This is your real nature, your true Self. You are boundless space. Feel your spaciousness. Now feel yourself as the observer of all these things, the witness, the witness to your spaciousness. In other words you are beyond boundless space and you are boundless space.

Paradoxically you are both at the same time, the one who observes boundless space, effortless choiceless pure awareness, and the one who is these things. When you are able to observe yourself as such, they call you names like Jnani, Sage. They call you other names also, but we won't go into that. It's beautiful, when you think about these things, when you start to feel a little bit anyway that you are not limited to the body. The body is like a prison that keeps you bound in one place.

This is the reason I never have to go anywhere. People send me tickets to come to Tahiti, to come to Hawaii, to go back to India, to do this and to do that. Why? It's all the same. Everything is happening within me. Everything is taking place within me. I am choiceless pure awareness. Not Robert, but I am. I am is choiceless pure awareness. There is nowhere to go. There's nothing to do. There is just beingness.

I'm speaking about all of you. This is the truth about you. By hearing this truth, you become this truth. You are not your karma. You are not your samskaras. You have never reincarnated. You have no body. You have no mind. Do not think about these things. If you think about these things, you spoil it, for you are beyond thoughts. You are the silence. Try to feel this. You are the infinite silence, where there are no words, no thoughts, no God, no universe, just perfect silence. There is nothing you have to do. There is nowhere you have to go. There is no one you have to see. You are the one.

As your thoughts stop, the so called body experience vanishes. There never was a body. There never was a birth or a death. Feel yourself birthless and deathless. You can feel this. When you begin to feel happy, when you have unalloyed happiness, total happiness and peace, you know you're getting there. You know you have become something else, when happiness arises by itself, when there is nothing in this external world to make you happy any longer, and you have become total happiness. Then you have become.

Let go of everything else, right now. Let go of the fears, the frustrations, the searching, the dogmas, the preconceived ideas, the concepts, everything you came in here with. Drop it. Just drop it. Let go of everything, and feel your freedom.

There are no lectures, there's no lecturer, there's nobody listening, there's nobody talking. Feels good, doesn't it? You begin to spoil it as you allow thoughts to come into your mind, any thoughts. You cannot think yourself to self-realization. It's a question of letting go, or to continue thinking about persons, places and things.

Sometimes it's a little fearful to let go completely, for you believe if you empty completely, you don't know what you will become, what will happen to you. Yet this is exactly what you have to do, to drop everything you have ever believed. The whole belief system, that brought you up in this world as a human being, has to be totally transmuted. Some of you are worrying about your families, your jobs. You're thinking if you become like this you'll not be interested in anything, and you'll wind up in a homeless section of the city.

All this is maya, illusory thoughts that come to you for no reason at all, and tell you nonsense. Your body will always function. The belief that you are a body will do what it has to do. You do not have to concern yourself about anything at all in this world, or in any other world. Empty yourself out totally, right now. Drop those fears, those frustrations. Feel everything dissolving.

YOU ARE THE ONE

31st May, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. I love every one of you, no matter what you've done in the past, no matter what you're doing now. The love is unconditional. I can only love you, that's all I can do, for I love my self, and my self is all-pervading. Therefore to the extent that I really love myself, to that extent I love you. So I can say with all my heart that I love you, and all is well, everything is unfolding as it should, there are no mistakes, everything is in its right place, and so it is.

I was walking in the park this morning, as I usually do with my dog, when I met a lady I've never spoken to before. We started to speak of spiritual things, and she asked me, "Robert, do you admit that God created the universe?" And I answered and I said, "Yes, I do admit that God created the universe, but I am that who created God." When she heard this, her mouth dropped. (laughter)

SH: I can imagine. (laughs)

R: She got up and left. (laughter)

SV: She was scared.

SH: She thought you were an ego-maniac. (laughter)

I was only voicing the truth. Did I tell her that Robert created God? Did I tell her that I, the ego, created God? I told her I am that, who created God. In other words, I am that, tat-tvam-asi, omnipresence, absolute reality, pure awareness. God comes out of that.

I know for most of you it's very difficult to feel that God comes out of us, for we have been brought up in a western tradition where this is called blasphemy. We are to believe that there's an anthropomorphic deity called God, sitting on a big white cloud somewhere up in heaven, throwing thunderbolts on people he doesn't like, and blessing people that he does like. In other words, we have created God in our own image.

But what is God? God is a word that in the western condition, means the absolute reality, Brahman, Shiva, Vishnu, all of the gods, all of the wisdom of the earth, built into one lump word, and it's called God. Yet most of us are so afraid to use that word, because we think the word is blasphemous when we use it, we'll be punished. Who will punish us? God. Then you must believe God is a human being, since he or she has the power to punish, and the power to bless. There is no such God.

There is the Christ consciousness, if you want to believe in Christianity. There's the Buddha nature, if you're interested in Buddhism. There's the Tao, there's Allah, and all the numerous names for God. Yet in Advaita Vedanta we learn, if we have not had the experience ourselves, that God is a creation of the mind. It is we who create this God. But not we as Steve, or Dana, or Robert, or Henry. That's a human name. Those are human concepts. It is the Self, that imperishable Self, which is all-pervading, omnipresence, that creates God.

If you only knew what was inside of you, what you really were, you would laugh hysterically. You would be full of bliss, full of joy, full of happiness, full of harmony. There is that within you which is unspeakable, which cannot be explained. It's such beauty, such joy. When you know who you are, and you call upon that, you'll have ever-lasting happiness. This is the reason I always say to you at the end of the lesson, "Worship your self, bow to your self, pray to your self." After all, to whom shall you pray? To the sky? To the moon? To the stars? Yet they also come out of you. You are the one.

You have to turn within yourself. And I know how many times I say this to you, some of you still go home, and you worry, and you pray to God for help, for assistance. You pray to some anthropomorphic type deity up in the sky, to have mercy on your soul, and so forth. This is okay if you're in kindergarten. But once you get past kindergarten you have to somehow understand who you really are. You are not a body as you appear. This is not you. The appearance is a lie. It's a false appearance. It is maya, the grand illusion. Yet we appear to live in maya. So why not use the best of maya to make yourself happy? Call upon the power within you, the light within you, to relieve you of your distress, to relieve you of your unhappiness, and all the things that seem to trouble you, and annoy you, and bother you. Call upon the God of your own being.

Better still, do not call upon God at all, but rather sit in the truth, sit in the silence, in your own swarrupa, your own reality, your own nature. Sit in that silence, where you are the one, and there are no others. One day you'll have to do this, so why not do it now? Why keep on playing these games you're playing with yourself, hide and seek, believing God came out, and created you, and I have to see God again. You don't want to play hide and seek any longer. You want to realize that God never went anywhere. God never created anything. God is none other than your self, the absolute reality. You are that, beauty, everlasting joy, happiness, peace, bliss. This is your nature. This is the only existence. There is nothing else.

If you understood what I'm talking about, would you have any fear of anything? Would there be anything in this world, or any place else, that could frighten you, or do anything to you, or hurt you in any way? What would you fear? You are the one. There is no thing that can come from outside of you, to hurt you, unless you allow it. You allow it by believing you are a human being, with thoughts, and fears, and frustrations, a human being that was born, goes through experiences, and then seems to die.

When you stop to think about these things, it doesn't make any sense. You're born. No one knows why. You seem to have experiences, and when you get it all together, it's time to leave. Where do you go? What happens to you? You go nowhere. There's nowhere to go, for you have never come from anywhere. You remain as you are, pure and still. This is wonderful news, yet you have to experience this for yourself.

How do you experience this by yourself? By letting go of the other. By dropping the frustrations, the self pity, the belief that somebody is trying to do something to you, so you have to protect yourself, you have to set up guards, so no one can hurt you. Who wants to hurt you? Who can possibly do anything to you. If you do accept the fact that everything is unfolding as it should, and everything is in its right place, how can you be hurt? What power is there to come and hurt you? Where would it come from?

Can't you see, if the truth is omnipresent, if the reality is all-pervading, is there any space for anything else? The all-pervading goodness takes up all space and all form, so there is nowhere where the other can come from. There is only the one, and you are that. Why don't you believe me? It's the truth.

You spoil it when you begin to think, of course, when you allow the mind, which doesn't exist, to think. How can you allow a mind, that doesn't exist, to think? Don't you see you're making a fool of yourself? You're listening to all these thoughts that come into the mind. This is wrong. This is right. This is good. This is bad. This I hate. This I love. I want things to be like this. Now I want things to be like that, and if not, I'm going to cry. I'm going to get very upset. Whom have you been fooling all these years, by doing this? Only yourself, your little self. You've been playing the game of hide and seek by believing you are a little self, a personal self, that has to work out their life.

You cannot understand yet that when you let go completely, another power comes along. This power is called the self, and it takes the place of your mind, so that you seem to function correctly. And you find yourself in your right place. You find right actions coursing through your veins. You find you're doing those things you're supposed to be doing, and all is well. You have to stop thinking and stop believing in a power apart from you.

As long as you believe this will happen, you're creating this power, for a while. There's really no power to create. But for you, you appear to be creating a power called the devil. Then you have to kill the devil, by perhaps 10,000 prostrations, saying Hail Mary 25,000 times, and the other methods that these religions devise to keep you humble. Wake up. Become free. There is no one for you to attach yourself to. There's no one for you to worship. There's no one for you to be afraid of outside of yourself, for you have created all these things yourself, out of your mind.

This is why I emphasize so often, stop thinking, for it is the thoughts that are creative, and create your world for you. Everything you see, all of existence, only is here because you're here, because you exist. Where do these things go when you are in deep sleep? They disappear. They no longer exist. But as soon as you wake up, your world becomes real to you, your world, the way you see it, the way you think of it.

When I am with you many times, when I go to lunch with you, or see you otherwise, I always like to hear you talk, for it tells me what you see, what you're coming from. I see how serious you are about this, and how serious you are about that, and what's bugging you, what's hurting you, what you feel frustrated about. And I cannot tell you, forget this. Laugh.

Be happy. Do not think about these things. This is all foolishness, for if I tell some of you this, you'll be sort of insulted. You will feel funny and you'll think I don't care about you. You'll feel I don't care about your problems. But I'm trying to tell you, you do not have any problems. There are no problems. Read my lips. (laughter) No problems.

But you may say, "Well this is happening in my life, and I'm going through this and I'm going through that." That's not a problem. That's your belief system. You have been brought up to believe certain things are terrible and certain things are wonderful. Consequently you're living in this kind of a world, duality, good and bad, right and wrong, up and down, backwards and forwards. You therefore feel all these things.

Why not let go? Do it. Do not think anymore of these things. Simply stop thinking, by catching yourself every time you think, catching yourself and becoming aware of the thinker. That stops your thoughts.

For instance, there's a thought in your mind regarding sickness, death, lack, limitation. Before the thought becomes stronger, remember to catch yourself, and just look at the thought. That's how you catch yourself, by observing the observer of the thought. This all happens by itself. As you catch yourself more and more, you begin to realize that you are the observer, watching yourself observe the thought, and you begin to laugh.

Life will bother you and annoy you as long as you believe you are a body, a mind, then you'll have to go through all kinds of experiences. This is the reason I tell you so often, become yourself. Understand who you are. Understand that it is the personal I that has been giving you all this trouble.

By changing conditions, they will surely turn into new conditions. If you have a problem, you do not solve the problem by solving the problem. You solve the problem by getting to the source of the problem, for if you only work on the effect of the problem, a new effect will come along. When you work on that effect, a new effect will come along. It will never end. But go to the source, and the source is I, the personal I. Kill the I. Annihilate the I. When the I is destroyed you will be free.

A fast way of destroying the I, is by just staring at it, looking at it, watching it, observing it. When you observe the I, it goes away. Nothing likes to be stared down. True? If you go to your friend, and all of a sudden you start staring at your friend, your friend will go away from you. He'll think you're a nut. He'll be right. But your friend will leave. This is true of the personal I. When the personal I attacks you, by frightening you, by making you believe something is real, stare it down, by just looking at it, watching it, observing it, and I can promise you it will go away. It will not hang around. You do not even have to go through self-inquiry, for some of you think it's a lengthy process. Therefore stare the I down.

Of course you can only realize this, and do this, when you understand who you are, that you've got the power to do this. There is only one power, and you've got it. Omnipotence is the only power. You are the power.

So from now on, you're not going to allow yourself to be betrayed by your mind again. You will not allow the mind to tell you anything to make you unhappy, or to make you believe something is wrong someplace. You will understand that there is nothing wrong anywhere. Things are just different. But everything happens for the ultimate good.

Begin to love your Self. I know that's really hard for some of you to do. To really love your Self, to love the Self which is really you. Try standing in front of the mirror and making love to yourself. Some of you will not be able to do this. I'll bet there are people here who look in the mirror and they don't even want to look at themselves. They can't look at themselves for a whole minute in the mirror. Try it and you'll see what I mean. For when you look in the mirror, see God, not the physical appearance. See light shining from you, see bliss, see pure awareness, see total emptiness, see your Self.

Begin to practice this exercise. Looking in the mirror, begin for maybe a minute, then you go on to two minutes, three minutes, four minutes, five minutes. Look at yourself. Admit the truth to yourself. "I am Brahman. I am the ultimate reality. I am boundless space. I am the atman, the perfect intelligence, the one without the other, all-pervading, perfect self."

What if you told yourself this everyday? What do you think would happen? If you looked in the mirror and did this every day, you would turn into the God that you are. And you will find peace, total peace, total love.

Begin today, knowing this truth about yourself. Hold on deeply to this truth, that you are the power, that God is an invention of your mind. There is no external God outside of yourself. You are the one. Know this, be this, and become forever free.

It's time to play stump the guru. (laughter) So do we have any stumpers?

(Student opens the first question)

SM: Both sides Robert it looks like.

Q: (Robert reads) Can an avatar help in the spiritual journey toward Moksha? What is the cause of transmigration?

A: (Robert answers) Question number 1: Can an avatar help in the spiritual journey toward moksha? An avatar means an incarnated bliss of God incarnating of a human being. An Avatar like a Sage is a catalyst for your unfoldment and your spirituality. An avatar can tell you the truth. Share with you your reality and by your total surrender to the Self can make you the same as the Avatar.

In other words, if you go to a Sage and you let go of everything you've had before in your mind. In your thoughts and in your possessions and everything else, the grace of the Sage which is everywhere present but you've never been able to feel these things before, due to the fact that you were covered with all kinds of delusions, samskaras, you've been lost in samsara, when you go to the Avatar and you surrender at the feet of the Avatar, you are giving the Avatar all of your junk. All the stuff that you've been carrying for so many years. You're emptying yourself out. And the Sage takes this from you and exchanges it for grace. There has to be a lot of sincerity in this. The Sage has to be a person who has experienced the entire truth. With a living embodiment of this truth of the Self. Otherwise he cannot give you anything but where he is himself or herself. So if you find an Avatar or a Sage be sure that that Sage is really the Self.

How can you be sure? By being truthful to your Self.

If you are a fraud or a phony or something inside of you, that is making up all kinds of nonsense and doing all kinds of things. You will be attracted to a Sage of the same caliber. But even that is good to an extent, for it shows that you're searching. And you can straighten yourself out and become a real person of compassion, of love and you will be attracted to a higher Sage. So it always begins with you, as usual. You are the one. You are where you're supposed to be right now. Wherever you think it is. Know yourself, love yourself, pray to yourself, be yourself and you will always be in your right place. You will go higher and higher until you finally awaken totally, completely and you will be free.

The second part of the question; What is the cause of transmigration? The belief that you are a body. What else? As long as you believe you are a body, a mind, a human being, you're going to seem to die and then you'll come back as something else. Whatever you can be. Cockroach.

SH: A mouse. (R: A mouse.)

SV: Fred. (R: Even Fred.) (laughter)

R: You can come back as anything. But that doesn't even exist. Yet if you believe you are the body it'll happen. Because you're making it happen, you believe in these things. So that you have to believe that you are the self and start to work on your self until you become the self. And then forget about transmigration there is no such thing.

Q: (Robert reads) Is it important to put the teaching first in order to become self-realized? What other reason would the mind have to do this. I'll read it again. If it is necessary to put the teaching first but not in order to become self-realized what other reason would the mind have to do this?

A: (Robert answers) I'm always telling you not to think of self-realization but to do the work and everything will take care of itself. When you are working on yourself the mind will become subservient to you. You will find that you are controlling your mind you are telling it what to do, instead of it telling you what to do. Eventually it will disappear altogether.

So the mind doesn't need a reason. You are taking your mind and you're beginning to control your mind, you are taking complete charge of your mind. In other words before the mind tells you something like, "Ah what is the use of this? I'm going to go to a movie. I'm going to go bowling. I don't have time to think of myself or reality." The mind is controlling you. But now you get to the point from practicing where you are in charge.

The mind tries to tell you let's go have a drink in a bar and you laugh. That is all you do is laugh at your mind and the thought disappears, the thought dissipates, it goes away. You are controlling the mind. Then the day comes when the mind disappears completely, totally, absolutely and you become free.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert on the very highest level do Jnanis exist? If reality were a pie what percentage of it would you be? (students laugh)

SH: Don't look at me? (laughs)

A: (Robert answers) The word Jnani, moksha, self-realization are words at a human level. To try to make you realize that there is a place, which is your real home and this place is the silence. Where there are no words, only total silence. This silence is the freedom you're looking for. The names we give it moksha, liberation, self-realization are only to make you understand there is something else. This is why I always say to you do not to go after the self-realization for you are already self realized, you are already that. There is nothing to go after, there is nothing to search for. You are that already, be that!

Now if reality were a pie what percentage of it would you be? To whom are you asking the question? To the Jnani or to the ajnani? If the ajnani answers a question like this there will not be a Jnani. There is no pie. There never was a pie. There will never be a pie. There are no percentages. These things are for the ajnani to discuss, to argue about, to debate. There has to be a mind to accept things like this. Do you see what you are doing? You're getting involved in percentages. (students laugh) Be your Self. Be the whole pie.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert when you say everything is preordained where does free will come in?

A: (Robert answers) For whom is preordination? Again preordination is for the person who believes they are the body. As far as I'm concerned you are totally free of that. You have total freedom. Stop thinking that everything is preordained. It's only preordained when you think you are human, that you are a body. That you exist as a person, as a place or a thing. But if you do not feel this, if you do not do this, where does preordination come in?

There is no preordination. I tell you this sometimes to make you understand why you feel that you exist as a body. Because it was preordained that you come back here. But you do this all yourself. The freedom you have is to realize that nothing is preordained and you do not react to anything. When there is no longer reaction from you then preordination does not work any longer. As long as you walk around as a human being everything appears to be preordained, everything! But when you ask yourself, "To whom does this come? For whom is preordination?" You will become totally free and the word would not exist for you at all. Therefore think who you are.

Clyde do you want to say something?

SL: Is it because we are the one that we are preordained? (R: Of course. There is only one, that one is you.) And then when we get our ego out of the way, if we're not operating from the ego and we're operating from the one (R: Umm) And then we don't have to worry about what we do because we're always doing the right thing? (R: Exactly.)

(break in tape)

R: Will is the same as preordination. (SG: Well I mean either no will or free will, there is no will?) Unless you leave me in your will. (laughter)

SL: There is nothing else to call it though? That which happens?

R: Yes, Jonas is correct. There is no free will. There is no realization. There is no moksha. There is no delusion. (SL: What I meant is we as egos we always want to imagine that we are free to do what we want.) Yes. (SL: So say that when we get our ego out of the way we accept what is happening. That is ... we're doing what we want because we always want to do the right thing.) We have to be real careful when we get into these areas. Because when a new person coming in here who has never heard this before, they will believe they've got the free will to hurt other people. Do all sorts of things to others. You've got to be very careful when you think about these things. The reality is, there is no freewill and there is no preordination. There is only the Self, the one. But when you think about being bound then you also think of freewill. You see they both go together. The bound one thinks of freewill to release him. But the person who is not bound has no freewill.

SG: But Christ said, "Thy will be done." That is all he really ah... Become true to the soul because there really is no God will?

R: Well he was referring to the reality. To be the reality. "Thy will be done." (SG: But there is no "Thy will," there is no such thing?) There is no "Thy will" but he was referring to not thy will, He was referring to reality. Let reality be reality. (SG: Right) The reality is the reality. But to make it known he said, "Thy will be done." (SG: But it is only a partial truth?) Don't take the words literally. (SG: Right.) "Thy will be done" means things are the way they are. Perfect, pure, the Self.

Q: (Robert reads) Robert the personal self looks for liberation. If the small I is a concept how does it start all this process of seeking?

A: The small I does not exist. In reality it never existed. It does not exist now. Everything begins when you wake up in the morning. That is the time to grab a hold of yourself. Do not allow the small I to take over your life, by waking up in the morning and start worrying and thinking about your job and thinking about your family and thinking about your clothes and your breakfast and everything else like that. That is the time to catch yourself. That is the time to realize, "I am Brahman. I am the imperishable self." There is no personal I. There never was and there never will be. There is only the pure awareness and I am that! Admit this confession to yourself in the morning when you get out of bed. Then there will be no concepts and there will be nothing to start. But if you don't do this, then the personal I will begin the day for you. With all its problems, with all its concepts and with all its junk. It's all up to you. (SM: That's it Robert.) Awaken and be free.

SK: Robert in regard to your talk today. When I reflect on it, I believe I am God. But what I don't understand is, seeing I'm God how do I allow myself to get caught up in this trap thinking that I am a limited identity with all these problems etc.

R: This all comes from samskaras. From all kinds of illusions that you were brought up to believe as a baby. Your training in school, in church and in your environment. All this has moulded you into what you are now. As you keep admitting the truth to yourself the other begins to dissolve until it's totally gone and only your Self remains. (SK: Thank you.) (pause) Any comments, questions?

SK: I have a comment about your suggestion about what you said you told me before when I asked that question. And I think the essence of it is that we have to change our belief system? And to do that we've got to operate from where we are? And I think that the only effective technique that has been found for changing a belief system, operating on yourself with no other people involved is to use subliminal perception. So if anybody is interested I suggest we could make a script, and the script would be "I am pure awareness, I am bliss consciousness," and so on. And then we would record that with maybe ocean music just so it's below that so you can't hear it. And then we would play these and see what happens?

R: By all means if that helps you, do it. (SK: Like the level that I'm at I think it would.) Then do it. (SK: Okay. Does anybody have a mixer?)

SG: Robert I've heard the term preceptor used before, what does that mean?

R: What did you hear? (SG: I've heard that term used...) What term? (SG: Preceptor?) The preceptor? Who uses that term? (SG: Just in the reading there the term preceptor was used. I've heard some other teachers say that they... Some teachers operate out of preceptor consciousness and wondering what really means?) Who knows? Who cares? (students laugh)

SE: Who wants to know? (laughter)

R: You see this is the mistake we make we get involved in these words. Why do we look for words? Look for silence. Be still, be quiet, that is your preceptor, quietness. We can look at statements, paragraphs and books and sentences and interpretations of scripture. We can work on these things until we turn blue. And we'll never get anywhere.

SE: Is that what happened to you? (students laugh)

R: I turned blue? (laughter) The whole idea of spiritual life is to just get rid of all of these concepts and ideas and words and dogmas. All these things that you've carried around for years. When we free ourselves from these things and become totally light. Unburden ourselves of all this. Never look for new words and new sentences and new meanings. All you're doing is adding on to the garbage. Empty yourself out totally and completely and you'll be free.

SF: Sir, (R: Fred.) I have an observation that you can comment on. (R: Sure.) You often tell me that in reality there is nothing. There is no thing. And the other day I woke up having had a dream and I was thinking about the dream. And it seemed to me that that dream came out of nothing was witnessed and returned to nothing. And it also occurred to me that whether hallucination, either a real one or drug induced, it arises out of nothing, is witnessed and returns to nothing. I was reminded of the night that I was telling about having witnessed the riots or being in a position where I could see the explosions and the great clouds of smoke and the sirens and the helicopters flying over head and telling you about how frightening it was. And I asked you and you gave me the opportunity to say, had you been there what would your reaction have been and you said, "It is all within me." And my idea is that when you said that it wasn't Robert who was sitting in the chair in whom everything appeared. It was you as the universal consciousness or pure awareness. Can you comment on that idea?

R: You are correct. Only it's not only my pure awareness it's your pure awareness also. (SF: It's all one.) So whatever is happening to me is happening to you. The only difference maybe is that I'm aware of it and you're not. (SF: I'm identified with the body...) ...with the body and the things of the body. Whereas when I see something I realize it's all happening within me as an image. It's all an image going on. A superimposition on the Self. (SF: On the Self with a capital "S.") Yes. Whereas you see it as being identified with the problem yourself. As being a part of the problem. As something external from you. That is the difference. (SF: Thank you.) So be your Self. (SF: I'll try, hope for the best.)

R: Would you like to read the Jnani Mary? (SM: Of course yes, Robert I would like to.)
(Mary reads the Jnani. Refer to the beginning of this book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Remember to love yourself. To worship yourself, to bow to yourself, to pray to yourself. For God dwells where? (Students: Within you) (laughter) In you as you. Peace.

We've got no prashad to eat today?

SH: We've got flowers. (laughs)

R: We've got flowers?

Until we meet again. Oh, we've got some prashad there. Well we can stay a while longer. (students laugh) Some grapefruit.

(general talk as tape ends.) [TOC]

THE SELF OR THE WORLD

4th June, 1992

Robert: Hi Gang. It's good to see you again, as always. I love each one of you just the way you are. Forget about your past. It is only real if you think about it. You are complete freedom, total bliss. Many of you believe you are bound, bound to past experiences, bound to your karma, bound to wealth or poverty, bound to health or sickness, bound to misery or happiness. These external things are all bondage. But the truth is that you are knowingly steeped in consciousness, which is the truth you've been seeking.

When you go through many experiences, you start to seek the teacher or guru who can free you, who can give you liberation, who can do something for you. It may appear to take many incarnations to come to that place, where you begin to seek a teacher of some kind, who can make you totally free of this world, and this universe. But again the ultimate truth is you're already free. You are that consciousness which is the reality; the reality you've been searching for, the reality that you think evades you. You are that right now.

When I say you are pure consciousness, what do I mean? Consciousness is a power that is conscious of itself. Consciousness is conscious of itself as absolute reality, as effortless pure awareness. It is all-pervading, takes up all of space, and that's what you are. You are steeped in it. You are nothing else but that. Everything else is an illusion, everything. Everything you've been searching for, everything you're looking for, all of your hurts, all of your fears, all the things that make you sad, do not exist. Yet somehow they appear to exist because you feel these things.

Yet going through these experiences myself, when I was a little kid, and transcending them, I can assure you they do not exist. The world does not exist, as it appears. The universe does not exist as it appears. God does not exist as you think he does, or she does or it does. Your body does not exist as you think it is, as it appears. Your thoughts and your mind do not exist. You are absolute reality, total freedom, bliss. There is nothing to search for any longer. You have come into your own. You are totally free right now. Doesn't it feel good? Doesn't it feel good? (laughter)

SH: It sure does. (R: Some of you look at me sort of funny.) (laughter) Do you need confirmation? (laughs) (R: Sure. I don't know. You have to tell me.) It's okay. (laughs)

(Robert continues) There is only the one. There are not two, or three, or four or five. There is one. You are that one. You have always been that one. No matter what you do, you will still be that one.

You always have to think. Why do you have to think? You think you have to think, yet there is no thinker. You think you have to know, yet there is no knower. You think you have to be. There is no being. There just is, and you are that is-ness.

When you admit that you are that power, nothing can hurt you any longer. When you accept that you are the one, no harm can ever come to you. When you admit you are that pure consciousness, that is like having an entire army on your side, an army of angels, so-to-speak, protecting you, guiding you, directing you, leading you towards the goal, whatever that may be, if there is any such thing. (laughter)

We all want goals. How can there be a goal if you're already that? But yet you want to say to yourself, "Day by day, in every way, I'm getting better and better." (students laugh) The day never comes because you are putting it off into the future. The fellow who did this, made up that statement I think, was Emile Coue. I remember that from years back. He never told you how many people were cured or healed because of saying this.

SH: My mother used to do it for hours on end. She used to repeat that, repeat it, repeat it.

R: Did anything ever happen?

SG: She had Henry. (laughter)

SH: Not a damn thing. (laughter)

R: She got worse when you came along?

SH: Well perhaps I had my days. (laughs)

(Robert continues) But there is no power that is going to make you better, or give you more happiness, or bring you joy in abundance and love. Where would this come from? There would have to be some type of entity there, making it happen.

Oh it helps, of course, if you want to blame God, or give God credit. It makes you feel less guilty. But when you begin to understand there is no God to turn to, it becomes a little scary to some of you, doesn't it? For all these years you've been turning to some kind of God, and it did bring you more peace. Actually what really happens is you brought the peace to yourself. Peace is your very nature. You are peaceful. So because your belief system believes in a God someplace, naturally you're going to feel much better when you pray to this God, because you empty yourself out of all this stuff that's been inside of you. You pray it all out. So this is good for many people. There's nothing wrong with this.

But as we mature, as we grow up spiritually, we begin to know that there is only that which always was. There is only that, which is. There is only that, period, nothing else. What is That? There is no explanation.

Again, the finite can never understand the infinite. It is virtually impossible for the finite to understand the infinite. What then can be said? Should I go on preaching for two or three hours, and tell you all kind of nice things, to make you feel good? Then when you walk out this door all the misery returns to you, all the stuff you've been thinking and feeling, the fears, frustrations. You have to sort of grow up, and admit to yourself, I am that.

When you realize that you are That, without trying to explain to yourself what That is, you become a powerhouse, for all the energy in the universe functions through you, as you. You become the essence of all things. The whole universe hastens to you, for you are that.

It is sometimes sort of difficult to understand how can you be the essence of everything and yet feel that you are an individual. And some of you really feel your individuality. You really feel it deep inside. You feel deep frustrations, or deep fears, or some kind of bodily signs that make you feel miserable. These things cannot exist when you understand the truth we're talking about. The substratum of your existence is consciousness, and consciousness is like a chalkboard. All the trees, the mountains, the beauty, the ugliness, everything is an image on the chalkboard. The images just keep changing, just as when you erase the images on the chalkboard, and put new images on the chalkboard. Yet the chalkboard always stays the same. The chalkboard never changes.

This is why I can truthfully tell you that you are the universe. For the whole universe, including your body, that's the hard part, sometimes you may admit that the whole universe is within you, but you still think you're a body, but I'm saying to you the whole universe, including your body, is simply a superimposition on the chalkboard, or on the Self. Imagine that. Everything that exists, that appears to exist, is an image on the Self, and you are the Self.

The way people come into this teaching, into this consciousness, the way people awaken to this truth, is by not trying to analyze it. You can ponder this. This is true. You can ponder the fact that you are like a chalkboard, and your body and all the images of this universe are superimposed on the chalkboard, on consciousness. But do not try to figure it out. Do not try to analyze it. Why? You are using your finite mind. Remember you cannot use your finite mind to try to understand the infinite?

So many times the great minds come along, the pundits who try to analyze it, and break it down, and prove it, and come to conclusions, never get anywhere. This is why it is written in most scriptures of the world, you have to become like a new born babe to know the truth. Why? Because a new born babe does not think. There are no thoughts to stupefy it, make it impure.

Most of you are afraid to stop thinking. You believe some evil spirits will come in and get you. You believe that you will become like a log, just become dumb, vegetate. This is far from the truth. There have been so few people who have awakened, who have become pure, who have become self-realized, and these people keep to themselves in most instances. You never hear of many of them. There's no one to confirm this for you, just crazy old me, telling you these things. So you're afraid to let go, for you do not know what will happen if you let go.

I heard people tell me this. "Yes, Robert, I am afraid to let go because when I let go I might lose interest in my job, I might lose interest in my family, I might lose interest in the things I like or the things I love to do, I might become a vegetable." Nothing can be further from the truth. When you let go completely, when you surrender totally to your self, and you stop trying to analyze things, and figure things out for yourself, you stop trying to use your brain, your mind, to come to any conclusions, what we call the self takes its place, for there's only the Self and the images. There's nothing else. There's nothing in between. There is no purgatory. There's no space in between the self and you, what appears to be you. There is only the Self, or consciousness.

But what you're doing is you're thinking that consciousness, or your self, is your body. Just the mistake you're making. When you let go of the body idea, the self shines in all its splendor and glory, all by itself. There are no stages you go through. There are no stages (as) you go from one to the other. You are either one or the other, and the so called stages that you think you go through, are simply part of the other.

This is what it means, again, in the scriptures, "Whom shall I follow this day, God or mammon?" Mammon is the relative world, including your body. God is consciousness, the Self. Yet you have to make up your mind whom to follow. You have that freedom. You have that freedom to accept the truth for yourself, to accept your reality. But if you go around worrying, and hurrying, and fearing, and fretting, and complaining, and thinking something is holding you back, analyzing your dreams, practicing all kinds of occult things, you are creating further illusions for yourself. You are doing this all to yourself.

Try to remember what I'm saying to you. There is only one or the other. There are not three planes of existence, or four planes of existence, or things you have to overcome, or things you have to transcend or transmute. All this is nonsense. There is only God or mammon, the Self or the world. Take your choice. You are free to take your choice.

Again let me assure you that there is absolutely nothing to worry about. You will never become a vegetable. You will never have the urge to go to a cave, and give up your family and your job, or anything else, unless this is what you were meant to do in the beginning. If you were meant to do this in the beginning, you would have already done it.

In other words, what I'm trying to say, when you come into your Self, the real Self, there is no real vast change in your life. This is important to understand. Most people believe when they turn into the Self, they become liberated, then they become a saint of some sort, and they're walking on cloud nine, they can walk through fire, they will not drown in the ocean, they can jump off bridges and fly. This happens when you take LSD, (laughter) not when you become self-realized.

When you awaken, you appear the same as you are right now, only you're totally free. That's all. You're completely, totally free. Your people will still see you the same way you are now. They will not see any difference. If they stay with you twenty-four hours a day, they will notice you do not react to things any longer. They will notice you've become an embodiment of peace, that you're always happy, nothing disturbs you. But you will still have the same body, so-to-speak, until it's time to drop it. There's absolutely nothing to be afraid of. It's a wonderful experience. Why not do it? I've taken away all of the fears from you, all the frustrations, and you know nothing strange is going to happen. So drop it right now. Become free, liberated. Let go.

Are you letting go? (laughter) By the expression of some of you, you're holding on for dear life. (laughter) What are you holding on to? I suppose it's a little difficult to let go completely, if you ever want to. Remember it's taken you so many incarnations to be what you are now. To have the kind of body that you're wearing right now, did not come easily. It didn't happen. You have to have sort of worked for it. It is a body that you have earned, so-to-speak, if that's what you want to believe, and it's taken you many incarnations to get this body. Therefore you are afraid to give it up. That's why you are afraid to give it up.

It's like owning a blouse or a shirt for thirty, forty, fifty years. You've gotten so used to it. Even though it seems to be wearing out, fading away, you still have the desire to hold on to it. Then someone has to grab it away from you, and throw it in the garbage.

SH: That's your job. (laughter)

R: That's what I'm doing.

And then you may cry a little bit, "My favorite shirt, my favorite blouse, is gone," but you got over it. Soon there are new shirts, new blouses, and the old is disregarded and finished. So it is with the body, with the thoughts, with the mind, with your experiences, with all the stuff that you're made out of. You're afraid to let go of all this stuff, for you have carried it around for a long time. And I come along and say, "Drop it." In one way you say, "I want to drop it," and in another way you're afraid to drop it, for as I said before, your mind keeps telling you, "Don't drop it. This will happen. That will happen. You'll become a vegetable. You won't have any interest in work. You'll want to give up all of your pleasures."

Your mind plays these games with you. Your mind tells you all these things.

So this is where sadhana comes in. Now you know the reason we do sadhana. Sadhana simply makes you strong, mentally, physically, to be able to let go. That's all sadhana does. Sadhana never enlightens you. It makes you one-pointed, in your quest for realization. It makes you compassionate. It develops humility, power. It transcends all fear. And when you finally get to that point, the inner guru grabs a hold of your mind, yanks it into the heart, and you become liberated.

But until you become strong enough for this to happen, you will remain as you are. That's why this is like, there are Sunday drivers, there are certain people who come here, just like Sunday drivers. They listen to what I say. Sounds good, good talk. They go home and share the talk, but they keep on living the same old way. They do not drop anything. They just keep adding on. Just like having an overflowing garbage pail. They keep putting more garbage in, more garbage in. It can't hold any more. They keep pressing it down, putting more garbage in. (laughter)

This is what some of us do. We add on to what we already learned, more sadhana, more teachings. We run to teachers all over the world, looking to add on to ourselves, more, and more, and more, when I keep telling you, you don't want to add on, you want to empty. Therefore why do you need more books? Why do you need more teachers? You want to empty what you've learned, become totally empty, free. Then something will happen.

This is the reason I tell you once in a while, you have to be completely and totally honest with yourself. Do not fool yourself. Look at yourself and see the way you are. See what you do all day long, the way you react to things. Do not ignore these things. Do not imagine they do not exist. If you have a bad temper, if you become angry a lot, if you're always trying to change things so they'll go your way, those are the very things that are holding you back. Those are the very things you have to get rid of. You have to get to the place where you have no opinions for or against.

Again, that's a sort of heavy one too, for you're saying to yourself, "How can I go through life if I have no opinion for or against?" And I try to explain to you all the time, there is something within you, that will take over, and lead you toward right action. You will do the right thing. When your mind stops functioning and becomes passive, what we call the consciousness, or the Self, takes over immediately, and all will go well with you. But if you begin to analyze this, saying, "All going well with me means I'll have this, and I'll have that, and I'll be this way, and I'll be that way," that's where you spoil it. Remember the finite can never comprehend the infinite, so if you start outlining in yourself how things will be when things get better for you, you're making a grave mistake. Leave it alone.

Again, this is what it means in the scriptures when it says, "Let go, and let God," as it were. Get yourself out of the way. Allow those divine circuits to start working for you. You are your worst enemy, simply because you're holding on to all kinds of thoughts, and preconceived ideas, and concepts, and all kinds of stuff that has hurt you in the past.

Let go. Give up. Stop feeling sorry for yourself. And that is all I have to say. Feel free to befuddle me with your questions. (students laugh)

SF: I have a question. On Sunday I talked a little bit about...in as much as, reality consists of nothing, of no thing. In the so-called dream state during the deep sleep, a dream arises out of nothing, out of that it is witnessed and it goes back there. The same is true I suspect with a hallucination. And you agreed with that to a large extent. And afterward I asked you something about, we awake from the deep sleep state into the waking state, which is no more real or no less real than the so-called dream we had or the hallucination we might have experienced. When I mentioned that you made a remark of something but I can't remember what it was, do you recall that by chance? (R: No.) Do you have any comment on what I said?

R: What you're are saying is correct. (SF: That's good thank you. That is all I need to know.) The dream state, the waking state, hallucination state are all the same. You're hallucinating right now. You better see a doctor. (students laugh) (SF: Okay.) But you are correct.

SF: One other thing, at the risk of bringing down the wrath of God and his company, I'm going to quote some scripture and I'm going to interpret it. I want to see if my interpretation is right. If it is that will make me feel good. If it's wrong correct me. Anyway St. Paul in one of his letters said, "Though I speak of the tongues of men and of angels and have not love then I become a sounding brass and repeating cymbal. And though I have to give to prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge and though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing."

Now what that seems to mean to me, in the first part where he is talking and he's so eloquent has all these beautiful ideas. If he feels that he is separate from the person or people that he is talking to, he is separating himself from his own creation. In other words the difference between the speaker and the hearer. And in the other part where he has these siddhis and visions and all that stuff, again he is separate from his own creation without love. Love is one with creation. Without love there is separation when in actuality there isn't. It's all one. If we accept the idea intellectually that there is one. I guess in this stage we know what is happening, we deal with words and concepts. So I have to work on it. But if without love is nothing he is setting himself apart from creation. Want to comment on that?

R: The first thing I would ask him is, "St. Paul what do you mean by love?" (SF: Love is no separation. Love is the opposite that is separation.) This is true. Therefore what he means is, if he is infinite consciousness, the Self, which is love. Then he is the Master of all this universe. (SF: Like you've been talking about.) Exactly. But if he doesn't have this feeling, this understanding, this realization then he is nothing. So the word love is synonymous with the Self or absolute reality or pure awareness. (SF: God?) God. That is a good interpretation. (SF: Thank you sir.)

SR: I want to thank you tonight Robert for all the work you did in helping all of us. We particularly appreciate your efforts to help us let go of fears of letting go. I realize that you spoke that, you've said it before but I realize that I needed to hear it again. Nerada taught me to let go of layers of fear but as we get close the old questions come up even though you've already answered them before. And it's like when you review it then the fear subsides again and it's just wonderful to hear those assurances. Like it seems like you know what all of us need or maybe it's a universal condition. I really appreciate your sensitivity and your empathy for us as we grovel on the ground. (students laugh) Is what I'm saying sound way off the mark? (R: No I understand what you're talking about, I appreciate what you're talking about.) I had an experience this morning that may help others in case they haven't noticed the I in their own life. I was involved with a professional this morning that had a lot of power over me and yet he was trying to order me to do something that was wrong in my mind. And I didn't know whether to lie to him and say, "Yea, yea, I'll do it," or fight with him and cause him to be upset in our working relationship for the rest of the few hours. And that would make me scared of the kind of emotions we'd be putting into the work.

Somehow something happened and I just was able to give him an analogy of what he was doing to me by telling about a story of a man doing something to another person. And it helped him to empathize with what I was going through while he was putting me through this rigor of trying to force his will on mine. And somehow he caught it. And his gentleness came out, his aggressiveness subsided and I felt this tremendous relief inside that I had been true to myself and yet gentle with him. Maybe that's a quality that everyone else in this room already has but I don't. And so to be able to be honest and gentle, lovingly gentle and honest or candid at the same time. It had a tremendous release in me and immediately I noticed I was feeling the light and the inner energy much stronger for hours. And I think it's been with me throughout the day so that I've been much more receptive to you. The energy that you carry around today. So your speech tonight just sunk in deeper than usual because of my having been open, more so today.

I am seeing the value of honesty and am looking at all the other lies in my life that I can open up by honest acts, you know the real tough ones. And I guess as I see that as an aid to becoming more receptive to your energy which I guess is the energy of integrity, I guess I feel like saying it in case there is one other person in this room here tonight...

SU: I think you speak well for most of us. (SH: Very well put.)

R: It is very good Jorge. (SK: Robert?) Well let me finish with Jorge. The first part of your question or statement I should say, when I repeat everything and you finally get it, is like the sun and the fruit. When the fruit begins to grow it needs sun. And the more sun it gets the larger it grows. Until it comes to fruition. So the sun has to come up everyday and do the same thing. To shine on that fruit. If the sun stops shining on the fruit the fruit will cease growing and die. So the sun has to repeat itself day after day after day.

So somehow I'm like the sun and you are the fruit. As you keep surrendering and listening and listening, surrendering and listening to the same things I say, sometimes repetitively. The day comes when you become ripe and you fall off the tree. So Jorge any day now you're going to fall off the tree. (laughter)

SR: Robert there were quite a few moments when you were pushing the "I am that" idea, I was actually starting to feel that "I am that" for the first time. But then the I-thought would come back, so I said we better not play a trick on ourselves and think that we really believe that "I am that." Better keep shoveling out the I-thought here. So that is where we were tonight. We were like "I am that," and shoveling out the I-thought, "I am that," then shoveling off the I-thought, "I am that." And if you have any words of wisdom on that, at that state, feel free.

R: "I am That." That's it. You're doing very well Jorge. John were you going to say something?

SJ: I'm sorry for interrupting but... (R: That's okay, speak.) (response tape unclear)

SG: Robert when you were speaking of letting go tonight, from my own personal experience, there was a time when I was very close to passing and if I had listened to the doctors and I had believed my mind and believed the appearance of the body I would have passed. I had to take conscious control of my mind and fill it with every single word of truth that I could muster, that was standing on the word God. It literally was praying without ceasing. And if I would've let go, there was no way, I would have passed. And I would pass in pain and the fear of this body, by taking conscious control of my mind I was able to come out of it. So to say let go, I can't. At that particular instant, to me letting go would've been unthinkable.

R: You don't know that. That is what you imagine. What you did, that was on the mental plane. And that is good enough. It helped because you're still with us, but then if you let go you have no idea what would have happened. (SG: I wouldn't be here.) You don't know. (SG: Well the way that it... I followed my heart it didn't stop, there was no way I could have.) No on the contrary, you have no idea. Perhaps if you let go, something would've come in, the Self and you would've been healed immediately. There is no telling. But you worked on the mental plane and that was necessary because you did it. Remember everything is preordained.

SG: Well I've seen many people who have let go or who have allowed things to be and do this path, with a past of pain, apparent pain or fear or whatever. So when you say whatever occurred it's hard to believe that.

R: Well they're not letting go, the people you are referring to are not letting go...

SD: They're giving up, aren't they?

R: They're giving up, they're reverting to their fears. Once you let go there is no fear. What I'm referring to is love. Total bliss. That is the letting I'm referring to, not fear. Not giving up. There is a difference.

SF: They're under the assumption that it's better to stay in the body?

R: That's true also.

SG: Well that isn't necessarily true but I do believe that if you pass without a consciousness in passing you're in the illusion. I mean you get into a whole process, if you don't awake before you die, you die! And go through with reincarnation. That is my belief. (R: But you're talking as if you have something to do with it. It has nothing to do with you.) But Robert the point is I don't want to get into a philosophical discussion I'm just trying to understand about letting go. (R: Umm.) So letting go, unless you fill your mind say with love or fear, you will be letting go into the world mind...

R: You're right when you say that, but I'm referring to a person who works on themselves and then they let go. Remember at the beginning of the lesson I was talking about the things you have to do before you let go? When you finally let go after you're evolved to the point where you let go, then there is only the Self. There is only bliss. (SG: So in truth there is work to do. You can't just tell anybody to let go?) I'm not speaking to the average person. (SG: So...) The average person doesn't know how to let go. Because you are right they will let go and they will feel fear. They will feel that they're alone. They will fear all kinds of things. So I wouldn't tell the average person to let go. I would never tell them to fill their mind with anything either. I would let nature take care of everything. There is something within you that tells you what to do and knows what to do. And the whole idea is to trust that something. To surrender to that something. Then you will let go and be at peace.

SR: I know the other lie in my life. I feel like just announcing it and then maybe I'll be ready. (R: Okay.) The other lie in my life is... when I turned fifty I said, I told my mother, I think I won't bother explaining my personal life and life with women any more I'll just say my wife died and I'm a widower. It makes life easier having to...you don't have to explain in detail so much. So I think what I'll announce tonight is I've been married twice and divorced twice. And the space in between I've had a lot of failed experiences with women that an adult could handle more capably than a teenager. And that is it, that is something that I don't feel like having every person that questions me go into details about so I just cover it up and say, "I'm a widower," and I think at my age now I can get away with that.

Why bother explaining all the things I did in my forties and thirties, whatever, even though there were some great experiences. It just makes life easy but I realize it's living a lie if I'm saying it out of shame or a lack of fear or fear of rejection. I think it started from the fear of rejection. Oh God this guy's been married twice, he's no good obviously and I think it was a fear of rejection and shame because I didn't grow up in a culture that favored that. So I'm practicing honesty to-night with about twenty people and hope that see if we can get the big bang going again. (laughter)

R: Thank you Jorge. Also to further answer your question Steve if you've read a lot of Ramana Maharshi you will see when he had his experiences when he was 16 years old. He crossed his hands on his chest and was about to die. He let go completely and he watched. He watched his body dying. But it was not time for him to die. So he came back as a witness. And his whole life was available to us because of that incident. So there is further proof that if you let go you will not necessarily die.

SH: But you might die and that will be okay too?

R: That's okay too, right, of course. Just as if you fill up your mind with all kinds of truths and still die.

SI: How old was he then? (R: Sixteen.)

SL: How old was he when he died? (R: About eighty. Eighty, seventy nine or eighty.) So all the teaching came after that time? (R: Yes.) After sixteen? (R: At sixteen.)

SX: Robert many of the Saints and teachers whose lives I've read have experienced enormous pain or suffering in their lives or near death experience. Would you comment on that? Transform it into something I can understand?

R: Sure, this is what we observe. And this is what we see. Yet if you ask Rama Krishna or Ramana Maharshi if they suffered they would say no. Noone suffers because they were not the body. Yet the body appears evident to us as being real. But there is no body. It's all part of the relative world. It appears real but it's not. Therefore when we observe this, we have to ask ourselves, "Who sees this? Who feels this?" And you will realize that it's the ego. It goes through the experience of seeing somebody die. But there is no suffering or death in reality.

SH: Nisargadatta Maharaj when he was dying of cancer or his body was dying of cancer was asked if he was suffering and his answer to that was, "There is great pain." There was nobody suffering but there was great pain. (R: He felt pain, yes.) He didn't... "there was great pain," was his exact answer. (R: But he was not the pain?) No. But pain was there.

R: True. That is something sort of difficult to look at. So it's difficult to understand. That there is pain. There is no identification with the body. (SH: So he had absolutely no pain?) Umm. (SH: He was the witness of the pain?) Yes. (SH: Completely free of it.)

SG: He felt the pain, he just... (SH: He didn't. There was nobody there to feel the pain.)

R: There was noone left to feel the pain. (SG: Pardon me?) There was noone left to feel the pain. There was just pain. (SG: Yeah I understand it but I don't get it.)

SX: But is that experience of a near death or of a loss of a loved one sort of a non-attachment or an experience of loss included into that sense of non-attachment?

R: It's more than non-attachment. They have totally transcended the body experience. There is no body, so there is no suffering for them. Yet the pain appears to be there but it's not their pain, it's impersonal.

SX: Say for example, Sir Francis when he was in his early twenties and before he grasped the world, when he had a very long illness. (R: Umm.) It was very severe... (R: Umm.) That kind of thing changed the rest of his life and with that it was as if his life was going to be taken away but yet was not. And yet he felt the sun and regained his vision and renounced the world. That kind of near loss was that a deepening of a realization that it is not real and it doesn't belong to you and you're free to let go?

R: Exactly. It was similar to what Ramana Maharshi experienced. But he wasn't suffering, he just thought he was dying. And he said to himself, "So this is what happens when you die?" But he never died. He just died to his body. But it's the same for St. Francis and everybody else. There is no difference it's always the same.

SX: What advice would you give to someone who has terrible cancer pain? If you were to have just a few words to try to get through to them? (laughter)

R: It depends. It depends on the person. I would have a lot of compassion, a lot of love, I would just be there. And not give any advice whatsoever. Just being there and holding their hand is sufficient. No words may be exchanged.

(Robert turns to Mary) Would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes.)

R: Thank you Mary we've got some beautiful prashad to eat. Feel free to enjoy yourself. (Opens and gives prashad out) We've got fruit.

Remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself because why?

SV: Your words are always in me. (laughter)

R: God dwells in you as you. Peace.

EVERYTHING IS NOTHING

7th June, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. It is good being with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes, and you're in good hands.

Many people ask me, "Robert, what is really the fastest way to quiet the mind?" for many of you realize now that when the mind is quiet, liberation comes by itself. There is really nothing else you have to do to become liberated. When the thoughts stop, everything takes care of itself. Then you are in your natural state.

Therefore what should you do to quiet the mind? Should you practice self-inquiry? Should you become the witness, the observer? Should you do pranayama, breathing exercises? Should you practice the I-am meditation? All of these things are good, but yet ours is the easy path, the direct path.

Here's the easiest way to do this. If you would realize in your heart, that everything is nothing, your mind would become still. You would become perfectly still. Ponder what I just said. If you would only realize in your heart that everything is nothing, there would be no thoughts. This is very profound. This is really all you have to do. Realize in your heart, not in your mind, but in your heart, that everything you behold, everything you see, is actually nothing. There will be no thoughts. You will become free.

Let me explain. When you see a tree, what is the source of the tree? The seed. What is the source of the seed? What came first, the tree or the seed? Where did the first seed come from? Where did the first tree come from? When you look at a mountain, what is the source of the mountain? When you look at the world, what is the source of the world, the universe, the planets? You may say, "Well, God is the source." What is the source of God? Is God something? You have to ask yourself, you have to inquire within yourself, "What is the source of all these things?" And you will realize nothing is the source of everything. Everything comes out of nothing.

A little story I tell many times will illustrate this. There was once a class with a teacher teaching the students, that everything comes from nothing. But one student couldn't grasp this and kept asking, "Teacher, how can everything come from nothing? That's impossible, nothing produces nothing. Yet you say everything comes from nothing. Please explain this." No matter how the teacher tried to explain, the student couldn't grasp it. The teacher finally said to the student, "You see the fig tree outside of the window? Go out and bring me a fig." The student obeyed. "Now open the fig and tell me what you see." The student opened the fig and saw these tiny little seeds. "I see tiny seeds, Master." "Bring me a seed." The student obeyed and brought a seed. "Now here's a razor blade. Cut open the seed." This was sort of difficult, yet the student tried his best, and finally he cut open the seed. In the fig tree seed there was a hollow, so the Master asked, "What do you see?" And the student said, "Nothing, Master." "Well the same nothing that you see there produced the seed and produced the fig tree. The same way the world was produced, the universe was produced, and all the things you see on this earth were produced, out of absolute zero, nothing."

When you come to this conclusion in your heart, something happens. Immediately all of your karma, all of your samskaras, all of your delusions are totally eradicated and you become free. See how easy it is? All these years you've been looking for methods, teachers, things to hold onto, things to rely on, where in truth, all you have to do is to realize, in your heart, that all existence comes out of nothing. If you take a flower and begin to dissolve the flower, you will get molecules, you will get atoms, you will get energy, and then you will get nothing. Whatever you dissolve to the nth degree, everything, turns into no thing, into nothing. Therefore God is nothing. You are nothing. There is only nothing. Why won't you accept this, and become free?

SH: Isn't nothing just another concept?

R: Nothing is certainly another concept. (SH: Just the opposite of everything.) Of course. (SH: So where do you get by saying everything is nothing?) When you begin to accept that everything is nothing, everything inside begins to dissolve. All of the things you've been holding on to for all of these years, all of the teachings, all of the dogmas, the concepts, they begin to dissolve, dissolve, dissolve into nothing. This is why I say, do not think about this in your mind. For the mind will fool you and it will be another concept, as you so rightly said. But if you think about this in your heart, and of course in your heart you do not think, you just have a realization of this truth in your heart, that everything is nothing, all of a sudden something will happen. The heart will open up. The heart is the I-am, the absolute reality, the pure awareness, and you will find that you have become nothing. By becoming nothing, you've become everything. You're essence is in everything, when you are nothing. You will laugh. You will be happy. Nothing will disturb you. You will have infinite peace. It's so simple, so simple.

Yet many of you want to analyze this. You want to think too much about it. You want to try to understand it. This is what keeps you back from experiencing liberation. When you try to understand what I say, you are simply using your concepts, your dogmas, your training over these years, and from previous years, and from previous incarnations. All this stuff is inside of you. And you try to use this intelligence, so called, to try to understand nothing, and you cannot do this. It will never happen. You, the finite, have no faculty to understand nothing. So can't you understand now how foolish this is, to try to use your human intelligence, your human understanding, to understand nothing? This is what holds you back from realization, this very thing itself. Ponder this.

Your human intelligence has to be gotten out of the way. Your human concepts have to be dissolved. Everything you feel, believe and experience, up to this point, has to be totally transcended. Nothing will never appear to you until you have become nobody. When you are nobody, you'll be nothing. But you want to be somebody. Somebody can never be nothing. You have to be nobody to be a nothing. (laughter) Nothing is hard to come by. (more laughter) Look at some of you, you think you're somebody. You have the pride inside of you that makes you think you're somebody.

Remember the joke I once told you about this. It was the high Jewish holy days and the Rabbi was preparing for Yom Kippur. He was looking at the Torah, the sacred Torah in the synagogue. He became totally inspired. He started to beat his chest saying, "I am nothing, oh I am nothing, I am nothing."

The Cantor was there also, he is the one who reads the scrolls in the synagogue, and he saw the Rabbi doing this. So he walked over to the scrolls, and he also started to beat his chest. "I am nothing, I am nothing, oh I am nothing."

Then there was the janitor sweeping the floor. He looked at these two people doing this. He walked over also to the scrolls and he started beating his chest saying, "I am nothing, I am nothing." The Rabbi looked at him, and he looked at the Cantor, and he said, "Look who thinks he's nothing." (laughter) This is like us.

R: (laughs) We believe we're something. Even when we say we're nothing, we think we're something. Understand yourself. See where you're really coming from. Think of all the books you have to read, the teachers you have to visit, the talking you have to do to explain things. I'll remind you again, and again, and again. As long as you are involved in intelligence, and things that come out of human intelligence, you can never be nothing. And if you can never be nothing, you can never be self-realized. Even though self-realization is your nature, and you are already that, the clouds of ignorance have covered you up, making you believe you're something.

The years spent in studying scriptures, memorizing passages, where has it gotten you? It's only more stuff that you've got to get rid of. I tell you again and again, this teaching is an emptying process, not an adding on process. Do not think you have to know something profound to become liberated. It's actually what you do not know, that makes you liberated. The knowing keeps you human. Knowingness makes you a talking encyclopedia. It's only when you begin to empty yourself, that you find yourself, and you're welcome to use the simple method we're sharing. Just realize right now that everything is nothing. In your heart realize this. Can't you see what's happening? It's so simple. As you realize everything is nothing, there is nothing to think about.

SV: But then there's neither everything nor nothing.

R: Sure, but forget about that. Just follow what I'm saying. Everything is nothing. There's nothing to think about. There's nothing to say. If everything is really nothing in your heart, can you say something? (SV: No.) Of course not. What can you possibly say?

There are no answers to this. There are no questions. There are no remarks you can make, if you're doing this correctly.

If you're doing it in your mind, the mind will come up with all kinds of questions, and all kinds of remarks, all kinds of teachings. The mind is filled with teaching, filled with remarks, filled with questions. But if you become simple, like a small child, and just ponder. Everything is nothing. Everything I behold, all the thoughts I believe, the feelings I've had, everything I see, everything I touch, everything I taste, everything I smell, everything I hear, is nothing. All of a sudden, your mind will become still. I know it's happening to some of you right now. There is nothing to think about any longer. There is no one to know whether you're doing it right or wrong, because everything is nothing. There's no past, there's no future. There's no good, there's no bad. Everything is absolutely nothing.

Again, do not try to think in your intelligent mind what nothing is, because this spoils it. We are so used to using our mind, that everything you hear is analyzed, judged, and then your mind tells you an answer, what you're supposed to do, what you're not supposed to do. This is why the important point is, when you realize this in your heart, your heart is absolute reality, your heart is nirvana, consciousness, sat-chit-ananda. This is your heart! That's where you have to realize this. You will become quiescent, total quietness, total peace. You'll experience a peace which passes all understanding.

Feel it now. Ponder everything with nothing in your heart. It's impossible to have any thoughts when you're doing this correctly. And where there are no thoughts, there's reality. You have one or the other. You're either thinking constantly all day long, about this, about that, about people, about places, about things, your mind keeps babbling all day long, or you do not think at all. And of course if you do not think at all, you are liberated.

Say to yourself, "I realize that everything, everything, excluding nothing, is nothing. I realize this in my heart."

(silence)

Now perhaps can some of you see why I do not give workshops or seminars? What is there to say? Everything is nothing, that's it! What could I possibly do in a three or four day seminar? There's so much that you have in your head, from all the seminars you've attended, all the books you've read, all the classes you've gone to, that it's difficult for you to know that everything is nothing in your heart. You hear these things from many teachers, I suppose. But they keep teaching, and teaching, and teaching, and teaching, and teaching, all kinds of good knowledge, spiritual words, yet they clog up your brain. Simple. Always remember this, everything is absolutely nothing, and you are free.

Are there any questions pertaining to this before we play stump the guru?

SK: Robert, I have a question. That phrase you use, "Everything is nothing." Is it essentially different from there are no objects?

R: You can say whatever you like. There are no objects, if it does anything for you that is good. Does it help you to see that everything is nothing? (SG: I can't say anything about, "Everything is nothing," at least, "there are no objects," has some kind of great meaning.)

For you? (SG: Me.) Then by all means use that. (SG: But are they in the same ball park?) Yes. But don't get entangled in too many words. (SG: How many words are in that, "There are no objects?" (laughter) Can I use four?) You can use four. (SG: I'll let you keep the others.) Thanks.

SK: So Robert this would be the same as saying in the beginning, "Not a single thing is." That is the...

R: You can say that, "Not a single thing is," if it means the same thing to you. Remember we want to make this thing very simple. Don't get into complicated debates or reasoning. The simpler you make this the better it is for you. Just saying, "Everything is nothing is perfect." (SH: Or "all is maya," same thing. Illusion.) You can say that. (SH: I just did.) Say it again. (SH: All is illusion, it's maya.) Good. But actually somehow I feel when you say, "Everything is nothing," that is right in the ball park. (SH: It's another way of saying maya?) It is. If that does you any good use it, do it! (SH: You do it, you have it?) I gave it to you.

SF: You can say it the other way round, "Nothing is everything."

R: You can say, "Nothing is everything," but when you say that, you start thinking about everything.

SH: (laughs) Back in the soup.

R: The word nothing in itself (students laugh at private joke) If you think of the word nothing it's just a simple word. No thing exists nothing, why do you want to change the words for? (SF: Everything is unreal.) Everybody's got their own. Sure what you are saying is true also, everything is unreal, everything is maya. But the word "nothing" in itself has an amazing quality. For when you think about nothing we leave out everything. There is nothing to add on.

SH: It swallows everything. (R: Yes, totally) And then we're naked?

SC: But the mind tries to make it something out of it?

R: if that is what you have to do, stop the mind from doing that. Don't fight the mind leave it alone. But work on that. (pause) Pass the magic box. (question box.)

Q: (Robert reads) Can you describe effective prayer? To whom does one pray? Is the concept in practice of Ishtam involved here? Who is Rama Krishna Paramahansa?

A: Rama Krishna Paramahansa is your Self. You are that. Rama Krishna Paramahansa is the Self of the whole universe. If you're speaking of Rama Krishna the man, Rama Krishna the man never existed. Rama Krishna the universe, the absolute reality, the pure awareness exists now and forever. So Rama Krishna Paramahansa is your Self.

(repeats question) Can you describe effective prayer? Effective prayer is when you realize there is nothing else except the Self. Effective prayer is when you realize the I-thought is the cause of everything I see, hear, taste, touch and feel. So if I inquire, "Who am I?" that is effective prayer. By self-inquiry.

Whom does one pray too? You pray to your Self, who else? To whom can you pray? Rama Krishna Paramahansa is the Self. So when you pray to Ramana Maharshi or when you pray to Rama Krishna Paramahansa or you pray to Jesus, if you feel that is the Self then that is correct prayer. In other words do not pray to an im... (break in tape) ...deity as yourself, that is the prayer. Actually how it works when you start praying to your Self you start to laugh. Because your Self is already illumined. The Self is already awake. So to whom are you praying? Is the concept in practice of Ishtam involved here? I don't know what Ishtam is. Whatever it is, drop it. (laughter)

Q: (Robert reads) If there were ten other Jnanis, would they not have what seems to be personalities and to some extent they would emphasize different teachings. Or approaches to the common free thinker? (Robert repeats question) If there were ten who were not ajnanis. Would they not have what seems to be personalities?

Of course if you're an ajnani you're a personality. Ajnani means ignorance, the opposite of wisdom. So if there were ten who were ajnanis there would be ignorance but if they were not ajnanis they would not have what seems to be personalities. If they were not ajnanis where is there a personality? A personality is only for the ajnani. The personality the I-thought is the same thing. There is no personality in a Jnani. I don't why you chose a figure of ten?

To the same extent do they emphasize different teachings and encroach us to become free?

A Jnani has no personality. Therefore a Jnani teaches non-duality. Even if the Jnanis have different personalities they're going to teach non-duality. Of one type or another. And non-duality is always the same, "That nothing exists but the Self." They may teach in slightly different ways but the teaching will always be the same. That there is no existence, there is only the self, pure awareness, absolute reality. So if there were a thousand Jnanis, they would all teach non-duality. For the word Jnani itself means absolute wisdom. Non-duality. They have no personality. If you were a Jnani the personality is gone, transcended.

That's all? (SM: That's it Robert.) That's everything. What do we do now?

SF: It could be said that the ajnani ascribes personality to the Jnani?

R: Yes of course. (SF: But it's not his?) The ajnani always sees himself wherever he looks. So naturally if they're looking at a Jnani they're going to see their own personalities. That is why you're told not to think. Because everything you say is from your viewpoint.

SC: How can one dwell in the consciousness with a large "C" rather than a little "c." Because most of the time I read a book or hear you talk it is the little consciousness. When you say ajnani and a Jnani, the ajnani has a personality the Jnani doesn't. And my mind takes up and makes something out of it. When you say nothing exists or the consciousness, I know we're not supposed to make a concept out of it, do you know what I'm trying to say? (R: Umm.) There is no answer? (laughs) How can one dwell in consciousness without the mind?

R: The mind is your enemy not your friend. (SC: I understand that, I understand that.) Therefore when the mind is gone the Self takes over. (SC: The minds there all the time even as you're talking now it's answering you.) How do you know? (SC: Because I'm answering from the mind. See that is what I'm saying, maybe what you just said is going beyond the mind but I'm not even aware of it.) As long as you're thinking about it it's wrong. This is why I say do not think about what I say. But open your heart.

SC: What is the heart, how can you use words to explain the heart?

R: The heart is all-pervading. There is nothing else but the Self or God. (SC: That is what I'm talking about, that is what I meant, you just answered it. But the... (laughs) It's hard to say it but whenever I think of course, it's the mind. Is it possibly in the all-pervading heart rather than in the mind?) It is the all-pervading Self that is the reality, your reality.

SC: I understand what you're saying but I have a feeling that my heart...that my mind is taking over and try to making something out of it and at the same time it wants to go beyond itself by being in the consciousness.

R: True. So it's up to you to become still and quiet and not to argue with yourself but simply observe and watch. (SC: The minute something enters my mind, that's not where it's at?) Exactly. So you become the witness to that. (SC: But witnessing is still the mind isn't it?) You're using the higher mind to witness. (SC: What's the higher mind?) The higher mind is the Self. (SC: How can I dwell in the Self without the mind coming in?) The mind will come in as long as you allow it to come in. (SC: How can I stop it?) By observing it, by watching it. By looking at it, by witnessing it.

SC: I'm watching it now. And it's arguing with you. It's trying to... (students laugh) ...on the one hand it wants to be defeated and on the other hand it wants to still...

R: Try to become still. Try to give up the argument. Leave it alone. (SC: Meditation is not where it's at? Just sitting quietly and meditating, isn't the mind still there? With all it's thoughts?) Meditation is good for some people, but in the ultimate reality you don't need meditation. But it's a good thing for some people because it makes their mind quiet. That is the object of meditation to quiet the mind. When you use a mantra it quiets the mind. (SC: As long as you're using it, it's quiet, the minute you stop, mind comes in.) Of course. You've got to let go of this world and stop holding on so strongly. You can do it! (SC: I know, I know. I can sense it. It's like it's two people almost.) Of course. Kill one. (students laugh) (SC: Make sure you kill the right one.) (students laugh)

SV: You can only kill the right one. (SC: Thank you, very good.)

SH: The other one is indestructible.

S: Thank you, that's very good. What Henry just said is what I want to dwell in, the indestructible part, but who is dwelling in the indestructible part? The mind or all-pervading consciousness.

R: Who do you think? (SC: The mind when I'm thinking. And when I'm quiet...) Of course you're right. All these answers are within you. (SC: See I'm aware of this for the first time in my life. As I sense this it gets scary at times you know?) It gets scary because you're giving up all the known. You're giving all the things you've been hanging on to all of these years.

SC: Well something happened to me last night, the night before last. I don't know what it was, I woke up I had some kind of a nightmare and I...unclear...people can't see it but I must've been hitting my head, you see all the marks on my head? (R: Umm.) My room was also in a mess I don't know what, I couldn't believe it, like someone had come in there and tore the place up. I've heard of nightmares but I never had...(laughs)... it was something, geez.

R: You must have been walking in your sleep again. (SC: No, that was the first time. It's the first I ever experienced something like this. It's interesting, it's a whole new way of living you know. I sort of sense that, for the first time. Even if nothing has happened there is a sense of peace that I haven't had before.) Hold on to that. (SC: And boy all the time thoughts come in, doubts come in. Someone wrote a book called, "Wake up and roar," has anybody heard of it...?)

SH: It's a good title. (laughs)

SC: ...it says there is no separation we live in such a way that, it was beautiful, (laughs) but I still feel separate. (pause) You know when you sense that separation then you know there is no separation. Do you know what I'm saying? As long as you can sense it, yet there is no separation yet you sense the separation that means there is no separation. Do you know what I'm saying?

R: If you can feel that, that's good. (SC: I see me and I see all these people as individuals. Do you see us as all connected, all one?) I see all individuals. (SC: So where does the connection come in?) If I saw you all connected I'd be in a weird place. (SC: So where is the sense of separation then?) I wouldn't be able to function in the world. (SC: So where is the sense of separation come in? Do you have a sense of separation from us?) No. (SC: That's what I meant.) But I don't feel that you're all connected. (SC: So where does the separation come in then, books talk about separation when there is no separation in the world.) The separation comes in your own mind. (SC: It's almost automatic isn't it?) Sure. (SC: The more you see it, wow! It's like I said, two...goodness sakes I better shut up here, I'm going into a deep morass here. My gosh.) You're doing well Nate. (SC: Thanks. I don't argue as much as I used to.) You're doing okay.

SV: Robert when you were talking before I was thinking it made no sense because you were talking a canter it really made no sense at all. (R: Sure.) So it's really stopping to try to make sense out of it. (R: It is the sense that keeps us bound.) Because we say everything is nothing, well that is senseless because if everything is nothing there cannot be an everything, there cannot be anything. There is not even nothing because there is nothing to compare it to. (R: Exactly.) It's all senseless. (R: That's why the mind slows down and stops thinking.) Yeah.

SC: But you create something to think about. You know what I'm saying? There is nothing there but you create something there to go back and forth.

SV: Yeah that is why I was saying it was senseless.

SC: Can I tell a story to Ben for everybody? (R: Okay tell a story.) Can you hear me or shall I use a microphone? (laughter) A king (this is in India) says to the minister, tomorrow morning go out and the first person you see bring him back and I'll give him the kingdom. And the next morning the minister goes out and the first person he sees is a beggar. So he brings the beggar in and they wash and they give new clothes and they feed him like a prince. No need for anything.

Comes forth like the beggar say to the king he says, "Where is my begging clothes it's time for me to go on begging?" (students laugh)

SV: Yeah but the minister wasn't smart because the first thing he should've looked at in the mirror. (SC: Did you get the point of the... (laughter) That answer to me was inappropriate.) It's okay, it's right you told it that way, it's alright.

R: Do we have any announcements?

SM: No Robert, not yet.

SK: There is an address sheet and phone number sheet on the table. And if any of you don't have your name and address on there and would like to add it, please do.

R: Do we have any prashad today. No food to eat.

SK: Yeah if you hadn't made Mary use up her reserve we would have had some today.

S: Yeah that's right.

ST: That's what your lecture was about, nothing wrong so that is what we got right?

R: Nothing. (laughter)

SM: We should mention about the transcripts in the folder there. When you take a transcript out please make a couple so that we're not without because the transcripts are going and nothing's been put back in the file. If you make even one or two, take yours and just put them back in the folder. Keep it filled for us.

R: So, remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself, to bow to yourself, why? Because why?

SH: You're it. (SV: God dwells in you as you.) No that gets too simple, more direct.

R: Just because. (laughter)

SH: Can't get it any simpler than that can you. (laughter)

R: Do it! Peace. We're all done.

S: Well cooked. (laughter)

CONSCIOUSNESS

11th June, 1992

Robert: Good evening. It is good to be with you again.

If you came here to hear a lecture, you came for the wrong reason. I do not lecture. If you came here to hear a sermon, the church is down the hill. I do not sermonize. If you came here to hear a philosophical discourse, again you're here for the wrong reason. I do not philosophize. If you came here to hear nothing, you're here for the right reason, for there is only one nothing, and you are that. The most wonderful speeches are given in silence. Silence is eloquence. Words are just words. They fly away, they mean absolutely nothing sometimes. As we sit in the silence, that's where the entire teaching is. Be still and know that I am God.

There was once a lady who died and wanted to get into heaven, and God wouldn't let her in. So she nagged, and she cajoled, and she whined, and she screamed, "Let me in. I've been a good person." And God said, "No, you can't come in." And she kept on nagging and whining, day after day, screaming at God to let her in. And God said, "No, you can't come in." She continued whining, telling God, "You're just like my first husband. He threw me out in the street also and wouldn't let me in. What did I ever do to you? Let me in." And God wouldn't let her in. She continued nagging, and whining, and screaming, and hollering, until God opened the gate and said, "For God's sake, come on in. You're driving me crazy." And she was admitted to heaven.

Now what is the purpose of this story? It has no purpose whatsoever. Yet I was just thinking. Some of you ask me for lunch, and then when I say I don't have any time, you give up. If you really want me to go to lunch with you, you've got to whine and cry, and when I can't take it anymore I'll go to lunch with you.

When you are aware that you are consciousness, then you are everywhere, and you're everything. When you realize you're everything, you become Master of all. When you become Master of all, you can do anything you like. Now what I just said does not give you license to go do anything you like, and make a fool out of yourself or hurt other people. Remember how this goes. When you awaken to the fact that you are absolute reality, that you are pure awareness, that you are consciousness, then you become everything. When you are aware that you are everything, you become Master of all. Then when you are Master of all, you may do anything you please.

First you have to awaken to yourself. You have to understand your true nature, your swarrupa. You have to realize who you are. When you understand that you are consciousness, then you understand that you are everything, for consciousness is not limited to yourself, to your personal self. Consciousness is all-pervading, omnipresence. Therefore you know you're every thing. You are the planets. You are the trees, the leaves, the bedbugs, the cockroaches. You're everything. The whole universe is you. When the whole universe is you, of course you are Master of all. And then you can do anything you like.

But the paradox is, when you become that state, there's nothing you need to do. There's absolutely nothing you want to do, for you are all things. When you realize you're all things, what is there to do? It is only when you are limited to your body, or when you believe you are the body itself, then you want to do things, you want to achieve things, become things. When you realize you're consciousness, all-pervading, you're already those things. You're everything in the universe. You are the universe. The whole universe emanates out of your Self. You then become God, and all the gods and goddesses will come to you with folded hands, for you have become that.

So remember I'm not giving you a license to do things as a human being. As a human being you have to behave yourself, be compassionate, loving, kind, helpful to others. But as consciousness you have become others. You have become the epitome of compassion, of loving kindness, of bliss. Consequently there's nothing to do. Do you follow that train of thought? If you're everything, what is there to do? Everything is already being done and has been done. So you keep still.

Now what is consciousness? We can say that consciousness is a power that knows itself. It is self-contained absolute reality. In other words, there is nothing but consciousness. There is not consciousness and you, or consciousness and the world. There is only consciousness. Consciousness, you may say, is the screen of reality, and all of the images, or the whole universe, are superimpositions on the screen of reality.

When you go to a movie, and you begin to watch the picture show, the screen is covered by images. You forget all about the screen. You do not think of the screen any longer. You're looking at the images. You identify with the images. You're enjoying the movie. The screen is far away from you. Yet if you try to grab the images, what do you grab? You grab the screen, not the images. The images never existed. You will grab the screen.

And so it is with us. We forget that we are superimpositions on the screen of life and we are really the screen, which is consciousness. We believe, through many incarnations that we are the image, we are a person, and there are others, and there are external things to contend with in this world.

But I say to you these things are false. The images are like water in the mirage, like the snake in the rope, like the sky is blue, yet there's no sky, and there's no blue. And when you find out that the snake was really a rope, it will never frighten you again. When you try to chase the water in the mirage, you become disappointed, you grab sand. In other words, they're optical illusions.

This universe, my friends, is an optical illusion. It is a dream, just as when you're dreaming. No one can ever tell you the dream is a dream, as long as you're dreaming.

You'll always stick up for your rights and say, "This is not a dream. Look, there are riots going on in Los Angeles. Fires are burning. People are being killed. How can you tell me this is a dream?" Yet you awaken from your dream, and the dream never existed. It came out of you, and it returned to you.

Ponder this. The dream emanated from you. It externalized itself from you. The dream was not limited at all, was it? You didn't dream that you were just in one space? You dreamt about the whole universe, all kinds of things taking place. You took airplane rides to Africa, you went to the Belgian Congo. You were a little boy and you grew up, or a little girl and grew up. All this is in your dream. And again you will fight for your dream. You will stick up for your rights in the dream. You will even kill in the dream. Yet when you awaken, the dream is gone. The dream never existed.

I can assure you my friends that there will be a day in your life, when you awaken to the truth, when you awaken from this dream. I know some of you believe this is not a dream, this is real. And no matter what I say to you, you will believe this is real, because you keep reacting to life and its vicissitudes. You become happy, you become sad, you become indifferent, depending on what's going on in your external world. And when you have serious problems, I try to speak to you and explain to you this is a dream, do not react to it, you become angry with me. You tell me, "I'm going through this problem Robert, you're not. I'm feeling this." So I have a great compassion for you, great love, and I abide with you until you sort of get over it. Yet it's just like a dream.

Imagine the same thing happening in a dream. A loved one is dying, you're dreaming about this, and I come over to you and I say, "This is not true. This is an appearance. Do not judge by the appearance." But you cry and you say, "This is my grandfather. I love him very much, and now he's dying." And I try to explain to you that everybody is born to die. Sooner or later we must all sort of die, so-to-speak. Yet no matter what I say does not change your feelings. And then again, you awaken. You awaken from the dream and you look. It's all gone. It never really existed.

This world in which we live is the same thing. There's absolutely no difference. You are living the mortal dream. Consequently great Sages have told us we have to identify with consciousness, with the absolute reality, not with what's going on. The only freedom we've got is not to react to anything, but to turn within and know the truth.

Again what is consciousness? Consciousness, we can say, is the substratum of all existence. On the scale of evolution, you take an object, and you dissolve it into the most minutest particles. You will get molecules. This is true of any object on this earth, whether it's a human being, a chair, a tree, a cat, everything will return to molecules. You dissolve the molecules and you'll get atoms. When I speak of atoms you can't imagine how small they are. Seven million atoms can fit on one pinhead. It's incredible when you think of atoms. We know they exist because we can look at them through an electronic microscope. Now you dissolve the atoms. You get sub-atomic particles, which are even smaller than atoms. And we cannot even discuss these things, or talk about these things, because they're just amazing. The whole universe is made up of these things. You go further, you dissolve the sub-atomic particles, and you get energy waves. Scientists tell us the whole universe is composed merely of energy waves. We can't see them, yet great Sages in meditation have gone to that stage.

Now here is the important part. You dissolve the energy waves and you get nothing, the void that Buddhism talks about. No-mind, nirvikalpa samadhi, it's the same as the void. We go beyond the void, and we have consciousness.

So you see where consciousness is on the scale of evolution? Consciousness is the substratum of everything, of all existence. And your true nature is consciousness. This is what you really are. But you see what you have to do to get there? You have to go beyond these levels. You have to become a molecule, an atom, a sub-atom, an energy wave, and then you return to your real Self, absolute reality, pure consciousness, the screen of life.

Now why would you want to do this? Why would you not say, "Leave me alone. Let me have a drink. Who wants to go back to atoms, and sub-atoms and become consciousness?" Well this is why the highest spiritual teaching is not for everyone. Most people are satisfied with life the way it is. But they're going to die. They're going to go through experiences. As long as you live in this world, or any other world, you go through the laws of cause and effect, which is like a pendulum. It swings to one side, which means things are looking up for you, you're doing well, everything is great, in the physical world.

Then the pendulum swings the other way and things begin to reverse themselves, your world starts falling apart, you may get sick, develop cancer, AIDS, you may lose everything on the stock market, your family can be wiped out in an accident, you can become crippled, and if you have nothing to hold onto, what do you do? You curse life. You become suicidal. Then the pendulum swings to the right again, and things get better and better. You become like a yo-yo. You go up and down, up and down, up and down. This is the way of the world. This is the way of the universe.

We live in a world of duality. Therefore this is the reason to become free. For if you go through life the way you are now, and you have not worked on yourself in order to transcend good and bad, up and down, right and wrong, forward and backward, you keep appearing again, and again, and again on these various planets throughout the universe, taking on various bodies, and going through various experiences. It never ends. You may leave your body tomorrow and come back when the planet is again in the dark ages, and they're having another Spanish Inquisition. And you become a prisoner and you're tortured. Your fingers are cut off one by one. You are reduced to nothing. Then you come back again in another life, you become the Vice-president of the United States. You become Dan Quayle. This is the way of the world. This is life. It will never change.

Many people have good intentions. They want to make this a better world in which to live. By a better world they mean they want to make the world go their way, what they think is better, what they think is right. All of these things show you that you are identified with images. Think of the energy you put into this world, your projects that you do, the work you're involved in, the things that you believe in, the energy that you expend, all the clubs you belong to, the societies you belong to. These are the things that pull you back to the earth, and pull you back into bodies, one after the other.

The only way you can become totally free is when you surrender yourself totally, when you give yourself up completely, when you begin to leave the world alone totally and completely, when you stop reacting to person, place, or thing, and you start working on yourself. You begin to do some sort of sadhana, spiritual practice. You become very interested in spirituality. You're not doing it for any reason. You're doing it because you feel that you want to do it.

You may begin by practicing Hatha Yoga, learning all sorts of postures, asanas. Then perhaps after a few years you become tired of bending yourself into a pretzel, and you begin the practice of Raja Yoga, mind control, Ashtanga yoga, the eightfold path, pranayama, breathing exercises. Makes no difference what religion you are, you start to search for the mysticism in your religion. If you're a Jew you start to read the Kabbalah. If you're a Christian you start to read Christian mysticism. If you're Islamic you start to read the Sufi material. It all leads to the same goal.

If you're intense, sincere, you will reach a point, no matter what religion you're in, where you ask yourself, "Who is the one who's been going through all this?" You finally get to the place where you can practice self-inquiry. "Who is the one who has been doing all these things?" You start to introspect yourself. You start to think, "All of these years I have been practicing all these different methods. But who's been practicing? Who's been doing all this?" And one day, something tells you, "I have, I have been practicing. I have been doing all these things." Something tells you to go searching for this I. What is this elusive I, that has been practicing all these things, all these years, trying to perfect my body, myself, my personal self? And you start to be quiet.

You begin to enjoy the silence. You begin to sit for long periods in the quietness, and you search for the I, by inquiring "To whom does this I come? Where did this I come from? Who am I? What is the truth about myself?" You begin to realize, as long as you're involved in doing things, then you are the doer. But if the I is removed, everything will be done by itself. You begin to understand this, and you follow the I to its source, which is the spiritual heart, which is consciousness.

Now do you see what I mean when I've told you all these times, you follow the I to the heart? As you follow the I to the heart, you're going through the molecules, and the atoms, and the sub-atomic particles, going deeper, and deeper, going back, back to your source, back, back to the source, to the energy waves, to the void, and finally your entire body is totally dissolved and consciousness stands alone.

When I say consciousness stands alone, I do not mean that consciousness is something else from yourself. You have not died. You are just the way you were always. You're the same person, except something wonderful has happened to you. You realize with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your being, that you never were the body or the mind. You were never an ego. You have always been consciousness. You are filled with bliss. You now understand what the word sat-chit-ananda means, I am that I am, ultimate oneness, absolute reality, nirvana, they're all synonymous with consciousness. You have overcome.

You are free. Nothing in this world will ever disturb you again. You laugh at death, for you realize that you were never born, you have never prevailed as a body, and you will not disintegrate, or die. You're always the same, pure consciousness. It makes no difference whether you possess a body or you have no body. It's all the same to you. Others may look at you and they see your old self. Your family, your friends, see you, as they did before, but you are not what you were before. You are total happiness. You are the universe. You understand that all of this is the Self, and I am that.

Let us now practice self inquiry. For when we are in a group like this there is much power here, shakti. You may close your eyes to remove obstructions. You may begin by observing your breath, your respiration. As you observe your respiration you become calmer, relaxed and peaceful. Nothing is bothering you or disturbing you. As the thoughts come into your mind you inquire to yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come? The thoughts come to me. I think of these thoughts. What is the source of the I?" or "Who am I?" or "What am I?" And you keep still, you never answer.

As you keep still thoughts come to you again. It makes no difference what kind of thoughts they are. Whether happy thoughts, powerful thoughts, sad thoughts, negative thoughts, thoughts are thoughts they're all the same.

Again you inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I think these thoughts. I-I-I. What is the source of this I? I'm beginning to realize and understand that all my thoughts, all my feelings, all my emotions, are because I believe that I'm a personal I. They're all attached to this I. Therefore if the I disappears and returns to the heart centre, to consciousness there will be no I-thought, there will be only consciousness. So I must go backwards, backwards, backwards by following the I and the thoughts." And the way you do this is by inquiring, "To whom does the I come? What is its source?" And keep still. Remain in the silence.

Thoughts may come to you again. Thoughts such as I'm missing my favorite TV program, I'm hungry I want to eat dinner, I've got to get dressed for work, all kinds of thoughts may come to you. You repeat the same procedure. "To whom do these thoughts come? Where do these thoughts come from? I am not asking to think of these thoughts. There is nothing in me that wants to think of these thoughts yet they keep coming where do they come from? They come from the I-thought. The personal I. Then who am I? Who is this I?" Feel it returning. Feel it going back, back, back toward the molecular stage, back toward the atomic stage, back toward the sub-atomic stage, back toward the energy wave stage, back into the void, into nothingness. I am, pure awareness, absolute reality, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda.

Om shanti, shanti, shanti, peace.

Feel free to ask questions.

ST: Robert would you say something about psychotherapy and the need for that?

R: Psychotherapy is on a mental level. And as long as you think you are a human being you need psychotherapy. As long as you believe you're an individual, a person, this shows that you're crazy. So you're into psychotherapists.

Actually as long as you're living in this world you have to straighten yourself out I guess. So you look for psychotherapists, psychologists. It's all very well, very good in this world. But it depends where you're coming from of course. It's a good modality for problems if you believe you're that kind of a person who has problems. It all depends where you are coming from.

The best psychotherapy in this world is self inquiry. For it causes you to go deep within yourself beyond the problems. As you go through all the different molecular stages, atomic stages, you transcend all the problems. Everything is transmuted. You become totally free. That's all I have to say about psychotherapy.

SG: Robert you mentioned nirvikalpa samadhi? (R: Umm.) That refers to a conditional state, does it not? (R: Yes.) How does that correlate to the void that you spoke about? (R: When you...) That is a conditional state and the void and then beyond that state there is consciousness?

R: Umm. When you sit in meditation for many many years, you bypass the world, the universe and you come into yourself which is nirvikalpa samadhi, you become identified with that which is beyond creativity, which is beyond the world, which is beyond the universe. The only thing is, is when you come out of it you are again identifying with the world and the universe. It's not a permanent state. But it gives you an inkling, it gives you a feeling of what reality really is. But as you go deeper into nirvikalpa samadhi as you practice self inquiry, as you realize your pure awareness you become the Self. Twenty-four hours a day you are the Self. Which is sahaja samadhi, nirvikalpa samadhi is only part time. (laughter) A part time job. You go very deep in nirvikalpa samadhi. Deep within yourself. Very deep. But you only stay there for a while and when you come out you're still involved in the world. Therefore you're still conditioned to an extent. There is still conditioning left in nirvikalpa samadhi.

Most Yogi's believe nirvikalpa samadhi is the ultimate stage, you can't go any further. If that was the ultimate stage they wouldn't come out of it. They would be in it twenty-four hours a day. But they are coming back out of it and becoming normal so-to-speak. It shows you it was not the ultimate stage. Because the ultimate stage is just consciousness there's nothing else. And once you touch consciousness you are consciousness. Your ego disappears, your mind disappears, your thoughts disappear, you disappear, you become pure awareness. So nirvikalpa samadhi is still a conditioned state.

SX: Robert can someone attain liberation by simply being aware? (R: By simply being aware?) I mean like right now there is consciousness awareness. Maybe it's just the ego who feels this awareness.

R: Of course. You can become that right now if you can wake up! I tell you this so often, wake up and be free! You can awaken any time. Why not do it? Stop playing games and wake up. Be your Self. (SX: Is this pure awareness that one feels, is this just another manifestation of the mind and body or is this...) When you experience pure awareness you have transcended the mind and body. As long as there is a mind and body you can't feel pure awareness. (SX: But we all can feel this awareness, consciousness...) Your true nature is awareness, you are that. This is your true nature. And you do get a glimpse of it sometimes. (SX: Or should one say, "Who is aware or...?") You should always inquire, "To whom do these feelings come?" As long as you have a feeling, inquire, "To whom does it come?" When you have arrived there is no longer any feelings and there is no one to ask the question. As long as you can still ask the question, you've not experienced the ultimate reality. For when you have experienced the ultimate reality who is left to ask the question?

SX: But a lot of times when inquiring there seems to be...the mind will always be like answering like this, "This is mind and body," or "this is the ego." And you know what I'm saying? Does one then just question, "Who is aware of the mind? Who is aware of the ego?"

R: You question, "To whom do these things come? Who feels this? I do. Who am I? What is the source of the I?" Everything that comes into your mind, everything, you question it. Makes no difference what it is. When you reach the state there will be no mind no questioner. They will both be gone. But as long as you feel that there is something there you've got to question it. "Where did it come from? To whom did it come?" (SX: Even if it's just awareness?) Yes.

SP: How do you reach that stage, no mind, no body?

R: You reach that stage by following the I-thought into the heart centre which is consciousness. When the I-thought disappears you return to your original state which is consciousness. No mind, no body.

SX: So is it possible that you can enjoy the state of nirvikalpa samadhi while remaining in sahaja samadhi?

R: No. Nirvikalpa samadhi is a different state than sahaja samadhi. Nirvikalpa samadhi is just temporary. You enjoy it while you're there and then you come out of it. When you are in sahaja samadhi, you are in that forever. There is nothing to come out of. You have become something completely different than what you are now.

SI: Robert? (R: Umm.) You talked about these gazes or stages that people go through along the path before inquiry really can begin. And I'm wondering if you're suggesting that there is something that occurs like a preparation or base that forms so that then inquiry is comprehensible.

R: It depends on the seeker. People are very different. To some people it happens immediately, they can awaken totally and completely without practicing any sadhana of any kind. Others have to practice sadhana very intently. But when you achieve, you have always practiced this perhaps in a previous life. In a previous existence you might have practiced. Therefore you awaken in this life very easily. While others have to work harder and harder. But all the sadhanas that you do, the practice that you do, the spiritual disciplines that you do can never go in vain or be lost. You carry this with you wherever you go. In a new life perhaps, but you always have this practice that you've been doing. And then you'll be born into a family that's advanced spiritually where you can continue the practice easily.

So when you hear about people who've achieved realization by doing absolutely nothing and then there are people who have worked hard and hard and hard and never seem to get anywhere, it is because the person who has achieved it right now, immediately, has practiced in previous lifetimes. And they are ready to awaken in this life. While the person who is practicing in this life very intently is chalking up good karma for himself or herself. And they will achieve in great states of consciousness which they will experience some time or another. So everyone who becomes realized deserves it. They've earned it.

SF: I have a question. (R: Sure Fred.) Is it not true that in reality with a capital R, there is nothing apart from me? (R: The what?) Sir? (R: What did you say?) I said in reality with a capital R there is nothing apart from me? (R: Nothing apart from you?) There is nothing apart from the real me? The real nature being pure awareness.

R: Reality is pure awareness. Reality is your real Self that is what you really are. You're not me, you're the real Self, you are pure awareness. This is your real nature. This is what you are. This is what you've always been. This is what you'll always be. No matter what you think, no matter what you do, no matter what you practice. You are pure awareness, you are absolute reality. You are not a me. You are an I am!

SF: Reminded me of what Mr Osborne the editor of the "Mountain Path" said, "It's not a question, is there a God apart from you. It's a question of is there a you apart from God?" Of course these are all words.

R: If you like to say that you can say that. (SF: Sir?) If you enjoy saying that, say that. (SF: I'm sorry you said that, once is enough.) (subtle laughter)

R: Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Confessions of a Jnani)

R: Thank you Mary. Do we have any announcements?

SM: Yes I have some transcripts to give out if I may? We have another new transcript called Consciousness is Silence, it's number 69. I would like to have 5 people make some copies.

R: Tony did you want to say something?

ST: Robert asked me to make available this fifty verses of guru devotion. This is a very famous Buddhist text on this subject and Robert said it would give you a good laugh. (laughter) It is a good one, a very profound text and they're here on the table.

R: We have prashad.

(The giving out of prashad as tape ends) [TOC]

DO NOTHING AND BECOME FREE

14th June, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. It is good to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart.

What is your purpose for coming here this afternoon? Ponder this. You could have gone to a good movie, and your purpose would be to enjoy the movie. You could have gone to Las Vegas. The purpose would be to gamble and win a lot of money. You could have gone to play bingo. Again you would want win money.

We always believe, as human beings, there has to be a purpose to what we do. Yet life has no purpose whatsoever. Life, as it appears, is purposeless. Is there such a word as purposeless? There is now. We come to groups like this, we have some vague idea in our mind we should become liberated, we wish to become totally free, have bliss.

This is very foolish. Bliss, liberation, is already your very nature. You are that. That's what you are. There is absolutely nothing you have to do attain realization, nothing. You do not have to practice any sadhana. You do not have to meditate. You do not have to go to meetings. There is absolutely nothing you have to do. God's grace brings liberation to you at the right time.

You can be the greatest sinner, yet you can be liberated. Another person can be a great sadhana doer, meditating for thirty, forty, fifty years, and nothing ever happens. When you realize these things, you come here without any purpose, without any motivation whatsoever.

We always feel we have to add something to our knowledge. It is our so called material knowledge that keeps us back from liberation. We have to empty ourselves out totally and completely. And then we will be in our true state. There is really nothing else you have to learn. There is really nothing else you have to do. When you do practice sadhana, meditation, it is only to take you out of this world for a while, so you can be at peace, feel a bliss within yourself for a while, feel something that you do not have now. Yet this does not bring you all the way, does not bring you to total liberation. Only being, not being this or being that, just being, will finally liberate you.

You probably heard the story about the lion cub who became lost in the jungle, and was adopted by a herd of sheep. The lion cub grew and became mature, and thought he was a sheep. And he used to say baa, and travel with the other sheep. When some hyenas would come chasing them, he would run with the sheep.

Then one day some other lions saw him and said, "What is this?" They took him to a pond and told him to look into the pond and see who he is. As soon as he saw himself his entire stature changed. Something happened at that time, when he lost the idea he was a sheep, and he came to himself again as a great lion of the jungle.

Most of us believe we are sheep. We believe we are human and go through experiences of lack, limitation, illness, man's inhumanity to man, or we think we are wealthy, and healthy, and strong. We are none of these things at all. If you are only aware of who you were, who you are. You are not the person in between who you were and who you are. You've always been that which always has existed. You have always been Brahman, absolute reality, pure awareness. This is your nature. This is your true Self. You do not have to pray to attain this. You simply have to awaken, awaken from the mortal dream.

Does the rose have to declare its fragrance? By its very nature you know it's a rose. We do not have to go around shouting, "I am divine, I am Brahman, I am absolute reality." We simply have to let go. Stop fighting life. Stop trying to make things happen.

Your body knows what to do, yet you are not your body. It appears you are a body. It appears you have a mind. Yet none of this is true. Who are you? If you have to say, "I am absolute reality," then you are not that at all. For when I ask the question, "Who are you?" there should be total silence in your mind. You are that silence, the silence beyond words, beyond thoughts, beyond being, beyond desire, that perfect silence, the stillness, beyond the void, beyond no mind. You are that. You have always been that.

There is nothing to say. There are no eloquent lectures you have to listen to. There are no profound teachings you have to accept. You have to become like a little child, and just be. There is nothing holding you back. There is no force trying to stop you, or do anything to you. You are like boundless space. Boundless space permeates everything and yet stays itself, never changes. You are consciousness, like boundless space. You are everywhere present. If you knew you were everywhere present, there would be absolutely nothing for you to do. There would be no purpose. What purpose would you have if you were everything right now? What could you possibly want? What could possibly desire?

Think of yourself as all-pervading, all-pervading boundless space, pure consciousness.

Can you feel it?

Let go of this world, right now. This world, this universe, is nothing but a superimposition on the screen of life. Do not identify with the world. Identify with the screen of life. Things come and things go. This has nothing to do with you. Leave the world alone. Do not attempt to change things. There's a mysterious power that takes care of everything. You will always be taken care of. You do not have to worry about your life.

It seems strange that the more you let go, the greater the peace and happiness that comes to you. The more you try to achieve anything like peace and happiness, your problems, your chaos, your confusion, it comes with the so called happiness you try to achieve.

In other words, do not seek happiness. Do not seek anything. Remember that if you realize that you're omnipresent, you are everything. Always remember this. There is nothing that is lacking from you. It is your mind that causes the problems by telling you you're lacking, something is wrong, you have to correct this and fix that.

Inquire, "To whom does this mind come? To whom does the body come? To whom do the thoughts come? Where did I come from? Who am I?" This is what you should be doing most of the day.

Many of you still believe and think that your work is so important, your home life is so important, that you have no time to do these things. It makes no difference what you're doing, where you are. Always stop, catch yourself, and inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? To whom do these feelings come? To whom do these ideas come?" You will find, as you practice this, the thoughts become weaker and weaker, until they totally disappear.

You are never alone. The absolute reality is always with you. Pure awareness is always with you. Everything is okay. There is nothing wrong anywhere. All is well. You are free. Feel your freedom. You are free from the confusions of your mind, free from karma, free from samskaras, free from reincarnation, free from God, free from bondage.

Feel that. What can hurt you now? What can possibly come to you to hurt you, to cause you pain and suffering? If you're really feeling your freedom, there is nothing else.

The freedom is I am. The freedom is pure awareness. This is you.

Do you feel the bliss? Do you feel the joy, the happiness? This is not a lecture you're listening to. This is the one voice of freedom, the one consciousness, the one reality.

It is you!

(long silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru. (Q - Robert reads then A-Robert answers)

Q: May we gather together a group so we can sit together for the sole purpose of saying our love to your physical body? With the desire that this love will manifest as strength, comfort and your highest physical well-being, a group would be stronger than on our own?

A: Somebody wants to sit together to send strength and power and all kinds of stuff. If you feel like doing something like this, do it. That's up to you. But remember all is well. There are no mistakes and nobody is anything but divine consciousness.

Q: When you use the statement, "The body will take care of itself," are you including the mind, the subtle body?

A: When I use the statement, "The body will take care of itself," I mean the body as it appears will do whatever it came here to do on this planet. But you have absolutely nothing to do with it. Your body is motivated by karma which doesn't exist. And it appears to be motivated by karma, you appear to have a body. So you do not have to worry about your body or concern yourself about your body. Something will take care of it. You simply remove your mind from thinking thoughts. Keep your body still. Do not think about it too much. Keep yourself on the Self. Keep yourself always asking the question, "To whom do the thoughts come? To whom does the body come? To whom does the I come?" And don't concern yourself too much about your body. Everything takes care of itself.

Q: Can you detail for us the processes of the "I am" meditation? Is this a practice anyone can use and how does it differ from self inquiry?

A: We have a meditation that we use sometimes called the "I-am" meditation. The "I-am" meditation is something that we use in order to become still, one pointed and quiet. Self inquiry is not meditation. Self inquiry is when you inquire, "Who am I? To whom does the I come?" Then I-am meditation is when you breath with your respiration. You inhale and you say, "I," you exhale and you say, "am." This is a very good tool to use at home. When you feel like meditating. You become still and quiet in your body and mind. And you inhale and you say, "I," and you exhale and you say, "am." This makes you very quiet, makes you very still. In order to go deeper and deeper into the Self. Do all of these things.

Q: If we are already free, from whence coming the thought, "I want to be free?"

A: The thought comes form your mind where else. It is your mind that believes it's bound. It is your mind that believes something is wrong. That you are not free. But when you realize that you do not have a mind there is noone to think these thoughts.

Know the truth about yourself. You are absolute reality. You have absolutely to do with the mind. The thought comes, "I want liberation, I want to be free," this is part of human thinking. But to sit in the silence and try to stop the thoughts, your freedom will arise by itself.

Q: Can one have advanced in a previous existence to a higher state but through fear dropped back to another so called lifetime?

A: If you are self-realized. If you have been liberated. There is no lifetime for you. There is no coming or going for you. There is no dying for you or no being born for you. You just stay the way you've always been. It is only when you are not realized that his happens.

You can advance to a higher state and you can drop back again, this is true. But we're not talking about realization, we're not talking about liberation. We're talking about a higher state of meditation. If you have advanced spiritually and physically on this plane, you leave your body, depending on your karma will determine what happens to you. You may have a lot of karma to work out.

So even if you have advanced to a higher state this is not forgotten, you take this with you. But yet you may have other karma to work out from a previous life. And the higher state is in abeyance for a while. Until you come into another life. Where the higher state will manifest itself. But again if you become totally liberated then there is no such thing as higher states or lower states or death or birth or liberation or anything else. You stay the same in your own swarrupa. In your own reality, your own nature, pure awareness. There is absolutely nothing you have to do any longer. Death cannot hurt you, birth cannot hurt you, you are totally free.

Q: What value does the study of Kundalini yoga have for this work? And how is that energy related to inquiry?

A: Kundalini yoga is of the mind. It is a practice of the mind. Trying to make the kundalini arise in the spine is a process of the mind, it's a mental condition. For whom is kundalini? Who needs kundalini? The one who believes they're human. And are trying to make powers arise in them. They're different from what they are now. In truth you are spirit. In truth you are Brahman.

You want to practice self-inquiry to stop the mind from thinking of kundalini. Who needs kundalini? It's all a mental process. Every yoga, every spiritual practice is a mental process. Why not start from the top? Ask, "To whom do these thoughts come? To whom do these methods come? Who has to do these things?"

There are many people who you realize in this world, who have practiced kundalini yoga, they develop certain siddhis, they have occult powers but who are not self-realized. This is all the mind. With these powers you still have sadness, you still have fears, you have frustrations, you have everything human beings have.

But when you transcend these occult powers you become totally free then there is no longer any question about happiness and joy. This is your very nature, freedom. So I suggest you just don't mess with your kundalini. (laughter) Besides it will get you in trouble. (laughter)

SE: Don't mess with kundalini. (laughs)

Anyone like to say something?

SY: Robert when you're enlightened does your kundalini automatically just open up by itself?

R: Why does it have to open up? (SY: No, no I didn't say it had to, I'm asking you will it do that?) There is no one left for it to do it to. (SY: Your physical body would not...) The physical body doesn't exist. Even though it appears to exist there is no physical body. The liberated person knows they are not a physical body. It is only the ajnani that feels there is a physical body that has kundalini awakened inside of them. But a realized being has no body. There is no body home. (SY: Looking at it another way, is your kundalini opened?) Where is it? (students laugh)

SH: He lost it long ago. (laughter)

R: If there was a kundalini opened there would be no realization. Who needs a kundalini? (SY: Even in the illusion. (laughter) Would the illusion of a body have an illusion of a kundalini that had an illusion of rising?) Of course. (laughter) So why live in the illusion? Remove the illusion once and for all and be free. Be free of all these things. Can you see this? Kundalini, siddhas, all of these things are for the body. But if there is no body to whom are these things at all? They do not exist. Only for the body they exist.

SF: They are all in the mind of the individual?

R: Yes. Kundalini has absolutely nothing to do with enlightenment. Two different classes. (SY: So the energy that you feel surging through your body has nothing to do with Kundalini?) The energy that you feel surging through your body maybe Kundalini? We're speaking of a body's energy. Again when there is liberation there is no one left to have any energy to feel anything. There is no longer energy surging through your body. There is no Kundalini surging through your body. There is nothing surging anywhere. Because there has to be a body for it to surge through. If there is no body how can it surge.

See right now most of you believe you're a body. So you're speaking of the bodily experience. But if you knew you were not a body those questions would never enter your mind. For there is no one left to experience these things. This is why we work on removing the idea of a body. The body is simply an idea. It is not a reality. If the body was a reality wouldn't it stay the same forever. You would never change from a baby to a teenager to a mature person, to an old person. You would stay the same forever. But since the body is nothing at all it always changes its appearance until it disappears completely. But you don't go anywhere. You stay where you are, where you've always been. You are pure awareness, you are parabrahman, nothing to do with kundalini in a body. (dog barks) Toku agrees with me. (laughter)

ST: He knows. (S: Just another dream.) (laughs)

R: Anyone else like to say something?

SP: So is this revelation, if I can call it that, was always being revealed through Sages of different cultures? Is it always the same? Or did they color it?

R: The truth is always the same. Different beings since the beginning of time have simply realized this. There is one reality. There is one pure awareness. And this is our real nature. So we cannot experience two different states of consciousness. There is only the one. Consequently there have been many beings on this earth who for some reason or another have been able to experience their own reality. When you experience your own reality you realize that you are everybody and everything. It's omnipresence. You're aware of all that is. There is not my reality and your reality. There is the one and we're all that. All this is the Self and I am that. (SP: So in different words, in different languages this very revelation has been making itself known.) Of course. (SP: I was just in Arunachala and hearing how they relate.) Right, of course.

R: It's just like gold. You can find gold in various places, in different places in the world. But you have to dig for it and make it come out so you can have it and keep it. So it is with us people hear of this truth they hear of reality. They need to be able to dig within themselves. Awaken to themselves and become free. For it is the same realization. It's the same Self. (SP: But some Sages may not speak as frankly as you do about it to the other people in their culture.) It depends what place they're coming from. It depends on their karma, their training that they've been through. If someone is called a Sage, it means they have transcended their body totally, completely and transcended the world. This is the meaning of a real Sage. When they have transcended the world they have become the real Self. The absolute reality. When they are the Self they're absolute reality.

They know, so does everyone else and everything else. They are not so unique. They are something that which is the substratum of all existence. Or they are like the screen and the universe is like images on the screen. The images change, change, change constantly. The screen remains the same. Yet the images cover the screen. If you try to grab the images you grab the screen there are no images. They never existed.

Again it's like the water in the mirage. You see a mirage with water and when you try to grab water you grab sand. Like the snake in the rope. Like the sky is blue. There is no sky, there is no blue. But it appears that way. So we appear as human beings, we appear as individuals but it's an illusion, it's a dream. The world does not exist. It never existed at all. There is no human race. It's an optical illusion. Therefore when a Sage awakens he speaks through his absolute truth because that all there is. (SP: Or he might maintain silence and just let the images continue to appear...) Yes. (SP: ...and he finds that he is a priest, a politician and...) True this is possible. You can be anything it makes no difference. Be a garbage man but you aware that you are not the body or the garbage. (SP: Thank you.)

Would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Oh yes, Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

Do we have any announcements?

SM: No Robert I don't have anything.

ST: I'd like to remind people that there is a box full of transcripts over there and they're to borrow and make copies of and bring back. They're starting to disappear again. That library is... anybody can help themselves just take them home and make a copy of them...you can make two copies if you like and bring them back so they're available to everybody. If anybody wants to get a few numbers and bring in the copies from their home I appreciate it. (R: Thank you.) Bring the supply back up.

R: We have prashad. Delicious cookies. As I always say, the entire lesson is the prashad. Eat the prashad and you'll be liberated. (students laugh) And we have a bowl of cherries...

(passing around prashad as tape ends) [TOC]

SILENCE IS THE ULTIMATE REALITY

18th June, 1992

Robert: Many of you are becoming restless when you sit in the silence. Many of you have come to hear a lecture, a talk. You're making a grave mistake. You've been listening to words all of your life, and look at you now. Have you become self-realized? Have you awakened to the truth of your being? There are many words in this world that seem so eloquent, so profound. Yet these words are dry, philosophical. It is in the silence where the power lies. The highest teaching in the world is silence. There is nothing higher than this.

Many people wonder, when I begin to talk, many times I leave a big gap between sentences. Some people may think I am looking for words, thinking what I'm going to say next. I do this purposely. For it is in the silence between the words, the gap, that the true message is. The real words, the real power is in the gap between sentences. Ponder this. This is very important. Why go on, and on and on with various stories, teachings? You forget about what I said in the beginning, and go on to other things. The words keep going, going, going, and of course when you leave here, you've forgotten everything that's been said.

Again, the highest teaching in the world is silence. A devotee who sits with a Sage purifies his mind just by being here, or being with the Sage. The mind automatically becomes purified. No words exchanged, no words said. Silence is the ultimate reality. Think how everything exists in this world, through silence.

As an example, you grow from a baby to a mature person. There's no fuss with it, there's no talking about it. It just happens. It happens by itself. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. All the talking in the world, will not keep you a teenager. You may recite mantras and do incantations to stay a teenager and not grow old. Of course you get all kinds of facelifts, body-lifts. You go searching for the fountain of youth. Yet in that very silence you keep growing, maturing, getting older and older, so it appears.

The world in which we live, this earth, is revolving around the Sun, and the entire solar system is being hurled through space, in silence. We have no idea what's going on. We cannot feel the earth being hurled through space, yet that's exactly what's happening right now. Yet everything is so quiet, so peaceful.

Where there is noise, there's death. Where there is silence, there's life. True silence doesn't mean just to keep quiet. True silence really means when you go deep, deep within yourself to that place where nothing is happening, where you transcend time and space, and you go into a brand new dimension of nothingness. That's where all the power is. That's your real home. That's where you really belong, in deep silence, where there's no good and bad, no right and wrong, nobody trying to become enlightened or self-realized, no one trying to achieve anything. Just being. Pure being. Not being this, or that, or something else, just being. Not even being your self, for there is really no self to become. I won't even say that you are the self already, because in reality there is no self at all. Those are more words to try to explain what God is, what pure awareness is, what absolute reality is. We call this the self. But what are these words to you? What do they mean to you? They're even in your way. You have to get to the point where you stop using so many words.

It is true that as long as you use your mind, you can accomplish many things. If you use your mind, you can do many wonderful things in this world, and many horrible things in this world. But is this what you really want to do? The mind is part of the world. The mind is maya, illusion. The mind connects you to the world of maya. Therefore as you use your mind to accomplish great things, you're getting further and further entangled with maya, with illusion. I can appreciate that many of you want to accomplish great things. But again go back in history, look at this world. There have been virtually thousands of people who have tried to accomplish great things. Where are they now? Where are their accomplishments? Down the drain. You may say, "Look at all the scientific accomplishments that have been made. We have automobiles. We have electric can openers. We have elevators. We have fine clothes. What has all this done for us?"

Most animals are better off than we are, because they're free. We're bound to our possessions. We're bound to our employment. We're bound to our relatives. We're bound to our beliefs. If you are truthful with yourself, you will see that you are in total bondage. You're not free at all. You talk about freedom. Freedom means when your mind has stopped thinking. When there are no thoughts, then you are in freedom. As long as there are thoughts you can never be free.

Of course to the average person it appears wonderful to have a sharp mind, a sharp intellect, to create great things in this world, to be a good architect, create beautiful thousand story homes, beautiful buildings. When you first look at this picture it sounds good, sounds great. But let two, three hundred years pass, what have you got? Rubble, a new civilization is upon this earth. All the things you have worked for to achieve, to accomplish, have been wiped out totally and completely, absolutely. In other words you've wasted your time.

I've told you this story before about the anthropologists, that were digging for the remains of a city in Egypt about fifty years ago. There was a great city that was alive, a great city with wonderful buildings and structures and architecture. But after working on the find, the dig as they say, for many months, many years, they came upon the sign. One sign was left and the sign said, This is my beautiful city, named so and so, which will live for ever. And the only thing left was rubble and sand.

No thing lives for ever. Change is the only thing that exists in this world that lives for ever, change. Everything changes. Yet you are here. You didn't ask to come here to this earth. You didn't ask to be male or female. You did not ask to go through the experience that you're going through, good or bad, but yet you're going through certain experiences. Yet you're egotistical enough to believe that you have the power to change these experiences.

You will not admit, or want to believe, that everything is preordained. Everything has been laid out for you before you came into this earth, in a body. Your whole sojourn on this earth was planned before you came here, the day you'll be born in a body, the experiences you'll go through, and the day you'll leave your body. This appears strange to most people because they've never investigated. They've never turned within themselves, where the truth lies, to discover for themselves what they really are, what life is all about.

Most people are born, they're brought up a certain way, a certain religion, certain work, certain jobs, live in certain cities, and they go through life trying to attain a lot of money, trying to become the healthiest person on earth, trying to look as beautiful as they can, and yet life passes them by, they get old and they die.

What does all of this have to do with the silence? Everything. It is when you begin to understand that words and deeds are useless, good deeds, bad deeds. The only freedom you'll ever have is when you go deep into the silence, and you transcend, transmute, the universe, your body and your affairs. Ponder this.

Remember I'm not giving you a talk or a sermon. I'm not philosophizing. I'm not trying to make you understand how eloquent I am. I'm not here to do anything. I'm just here, God only knows why, and you're here also. What does this mean? Absolutely nothing, doesn't mean a thing. If you're looking for the meaning of life you'll always be disappointed, for life has no meaning whatsoever.

I know some of you become insulted when I say this. Your ego tells you, "I've come to this earth to accomplish great works. I've come to this earth to help the poor, to do great deeds." People have been doing these things for time immemorial. Look at the way the world is today. Where is the peace? Where are the great accomplishments? Why do we still have man's inhumanity to man? Why are all these dastardly things still going on in this world, when throughout the history of the world, there have been great souls, great beings, who have tried to make this world a better place in which to live, and it appears to becoming relatively worse? What's the answer? There is no answer.

See, you're always looking for something. You want an answer. You want to know what to do. You want a solution. You want to get involved with a movement. You want to stick up for your rights. All of these things are keeping you back from your realization of the truth. There's absolutely nothing. All your needs, all your wants, all your desires are keeping you back from being nothing. It is only when you become nothing, that you're something. But it isn't easy to become nothing. It means you have to drop everything you stand for, everything. It means you have to let go of all your beliefs, all of your preconceived ideas, all of your concepts, all of your me's, all of your I's. They all have to go.

And do not look for answers. That's the worst thing you can do. There are no answers. Do not think if you get into a teaching like this, your life will improve, you'll become Superman, maybe Batman, whatever you like better, you'll become a super being of some kind, you'll be able to do great things in the world, accomplish miracles. What has happened to all of these people who believed this? They're gone. No matter what you believe, you're not going to be here this long. Your time is ticking away.

It is when you begin to feel in your heart, that you are boundless space, that something begins to happen. As you feel yourself as boundless space, all of your stuff begins to drop away. Yet you do not affirm to yourself that you are boundless space. You merely observe, you watch, you become the witness. You look out at the world and you see the trees, the mountains, the planets, are all hanging in space. All the things that you observe are superimposed in space. And you begin to consider your body. What appears to be your body is like the trees, or the moon, or the sun. It seems to be a thing of itself. And it is also hanging in boundless space.

Because you are able to observe this, and see this, and feel this, the realization will come to you that you must be this boundless space, for your body, and your mind, and the rest of the things of this world, to be attached to. And as you begin to consider this, the mind becomes quieter, and quieter, and quieter, until the day comes when it falls away completely. Then you become boundless space and yet you appear to be a body also.

This is a paradox. This is why it's better to sit in the silence and not talk at all, for when we get to things like this, it becomes totally paradoxical and ridiculous. You are not a body. You are not a mind. You are this pure awareness. But do not accept the words I say. Do not look at these words as a hook, that grabs hold of you. Let go of these words as fast as I speak them. When I tell you, you are boundless space, you're pure awareness, do not hold on to what I tell you. Let go of it immediately, for when you hold on to it, it becomes a thing, some thing, and you add it on to the rest of the things that you believe. Yet when you see it, and you let go of it, you become it, just like that.

There is nothing to think about. Stop thinking. When you think, you spoil it. When you try to be it, you spoil it. The Sun doesn't try to be the Sun. By its very warmth and light you call it the Sun. Do not try to be anything. This is why the silence is where it's at. This is the reason I put gaps between the sentences, so you can rest in silence before more words come to confuse you. There is something about the silence that causes the body-mind to disappear. Even though it's ??? it still appears to be so. You still appear to have a body and mind, but in reality you know, yourself, that you are not a body or a mind, that you are all-pervading bliss, that you are Parabrahman, beyond Brahman. Do not hold onto these words. Drop them as soon as I say them. Become empty. Absolute reality is your real nature, not in words. What is absolute reality then? It is the boundless space, the pure awareness, the sat-chit-ananda, the I am.

You begin to practice this by not getting involved with people who talk too much. I guess it means you have to get rid of your whole family, all of your friends, relatives. If you associate with people who talk too much, it causes an imbalance in your mind, when it becomes really impossible for you to do anything to be rid of the self, the personal self, the I. For when you have conversations with people, you are always talking about me, and mine and I. This is why I'm one of the most boring people around. I hardly ever have anything to say. Yet you come here to listen to me. Why do you do this?

Learn to be silent. You know you can talk and still be silent. When you are aware of your true identity, when you talk you're like an actor, an actress, playing a part. Become aware of this. The actor on the stage plays his or her part very well, but there is something deep inside that makes them understand they are not really that person. They're not the part they're playing. They may play the part of a murderer, or lover, an old person, a young person. They may play various parts on the stage, in the movies, yet the actor is aware, "I am not this person." They do not have to voice it, or talk about it, or say it, do they? They do not have to come running over to you and say, "I'm not the person you saw in the movie. That wasn't really me. Please, it's not me. I'm not really a murderer." Everybody knows they're acting. And you yourself know you're playing the part, that you're an actor.

So it is with this life. You have taken your role too seriously. You have taken your role as a male or a female too seriously. You have taken your role as a wife or a husband too seriously. You have taken your role as an employee or an employer too seriously. In other words you believe in your self, with a small s, and this is what keeps you bound. You want to change all this. I know you want total freedom, total joy, total bliss, total happiness, without any fluctuations. Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could be totally happy all the time, not just when you're getting something good in your life. Not only when you get what you want. Everybody can be happy then, that's nothing. If you won $50,000,000 you're going to be happy, right? If you buy a new car, you'll be happy. If you buy a new house you'll be happy. If you find the man of your dreams or the girl of your dreams, you'll be happy. That's what you think. How long does it last? Mind you, there's nothing wrong with these things if you see them in the right light.

Remember, I never advocated that you shouldn't own anything, or that you should not love anybody, or that you should not be gainfully employed. The teaching is, possess all you want, but never be possessed by your possessions.

Stick with the truth. By all means always take time to sit in the silence. When you're sitting in the silence, I'm not speaking of meditation. I'm speaking of sitting in the pure silence. And you do this by watching yourself, observing yourself, inquiring, "Who am I? Where did I come from?"

When I make a statement like this, many of you are still feeling, "Where did I come from?" means, "Where did my body come from?" I'm saying where did I come from? Where did I come from? You separate your body from the I. You inquire within, asking yourself these questions, "What is this body? What is the mind? What is the truth about myself? Who was I before I was born? Who will I be after I leave the body?"

(Silence)

Remember the mind becomes purified all by itself. It didn't need any help from you.

(silence)

SY: Can one act from the place of boundless space or are our actions in silence untenable?

R: No on the contrary, silence, reality is your real nature. It is what you are. When you acquire self-realization or when you awaken to your true Self, you automatically act the way you do now. Except that you will realize that you are free. You will have a profound joy within you, a boundless peace, a total happiness, that never changes. And you will function the way you do now. But you will know to the nth-degree that you are not the body, you are not the mind, you are not the I, the personal self. That you are all-pervading omnipresence. You will not use words to know this, you will just know this without words. You will be aware of divinity without using words to describe it. Your essence will be in the whole universe.

That is why you can proclaim, "All this is the Self and I am that!" You will be in the trees and the mountains and the sky, in other people, you will be everywhere at the same time. And you will still be able to function like you do now. You will just be pure awareness, you will just be totally aware that you are the whole universe and beyond.

SL: Robert would it be a helpful exercise to eliminate the personal pronouns I, me and mine from my conversations? To remind ourselves or to stay aware...

R: But can you do that? It's one thing to want to do that but it's another thing to actually do it. (SL: Well it has been tried with friends in a type of game. To charge a penny every-time one slips or forgets. (laughter) Most friends consider it frustrating that it hampers all conversation or...) Of course. (SL: It seems really humorous.) It becomes a game is right. (SL: But would the game not be helpful?) No you don't really have to eliminate I, me and mine. You just have to become aware that you're not really that. It makes no difference what you say. It's what you think about what you say.

SL: Well you'd be surprised how much thinking it takes to eliminate those pronouns from ones daily speech.)

R: Of course but you cannot do it. No one can really do this. (SL: Who says nobody can do it?) (laughs) Any Sage, any person that you speak to, always speak when they're speaking in the world, I, myself, mine. See what you have to realize is that you function as your normal self. There is nothing changed about becoming enlightened, about becoming realized. You will still function as yourself. But you will be aware of what self you are. You are not the personal-self you are the Self of the universe. But in everyday conversation you will still speak about I, mine and me. There is absolutely nothing wrong with that. (SL: No, not that there is something wrong but it will be a helpful way of staying in the moment correctly.) You will stay in the moment for a second and then you will revert back to what you are.

(SL: Well for a second is better than nothing.) I suppose. But you really don't have to eliminate anything. There is nothing to eliminate. There is just to be. Just be yourself, and you will become your natural person. You will become your swaruppa, the reality. Your nature will be bliss, pure awareness. It makes no difference what you say at that time.

You can have a conversation with someone. You can speak with everybody in this world. But nothing will phase you. You will not react to anybody or anything. You will be totally grounded in the Self. And what you do is secondary. We are not trying to become something that is different than other people and live in a different world.

As long as you're wearing a body and it appears you have a body, you will function as the body no matter what you become. This is the paradox what I've been talking about. To others you will appear to be a body, you will appear to be like a normal person. Doing normal things so called. But you will know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you are not the body or the mind. That you do not exist. That you're nothing. That you will function as a human being.

SY: Robert just as you said, the mind will be purified by itself when one becomes enlightened, it's I would say, effortless.

R: Not when becomes enlightened, when one sits in the silence. (SX: Excuse me?) When you sit in the silence in the presence of a Sage the mind becomes purified. (SX: Umm-hmm. Just as that happens by itself, enlightenment happens by itself, doesn't it?) Say that sentence again. (SX: Just as the mind is purified by itself, enlightenment happens by itself?) Oh yes, definitely of course. It all happens by itself there is absolutely nothing you have to do.

SH: Anything that you do as a separate you prevents that occurring?

R: When you do something separate from yourself and you believe you are a body of course it prevents it. But you can do something separate from yourself and realize that you are not that. You're not the doer. Then there is no karma. Nothing. Total freedom.

SP: Robert, I've read in Ramana's books about when he says, when the mind dies or vanishes, it falls into the heart and he says that the heart is two inches to the left of the heart... (R: To the right.) To the right. And then he speaks about the omnitanati when it goes up to the head. What is your experience with that or...

R: This is true as far as it goes. In order to explain these things, what self-realization is, Ramana had to use those terms. Yet those terms are not really necessary. Realization comes like a flash of light. And everything is gone and you are a new person. you're not really a person. You become nothing in a flash, in an instant. But when you explain these things to the lay people, to the ajnanis, people say, "How does it happen? What goes on? What really happens when you become enlightened?" So there is a heart, a spiritual heart that is located in the right side of the chest and when you go to sleep at night the mind returns to the heart centre. When you are in deep sleep you are realized but you're unconscious.

When you begin to wake up in the morning you begin to become cognizant of your body. Then the mind comes from the heart back to the brain. It happens instantaneously. And then you say, "I am the body. I am the world." And you're totally cognizant of this world. Yet in truth in the highest reality none of these things exist. There is no such thing as a heart. There is no such thing as a body. So how can there be a heart centre in the body. Again this is to explain to people who want to use their intelligence to try and figure what happens. But in the ultimate truth there never was a body. There never was anybody who had to get enlightened. There is no realized person. There is no non-realized person. There is no universe, there is no world, there is no God. There is absolutely nothing. And you are that.

One interesting thing about Ramana, all he ever wanted to do was sit in the silence and be still and quiet. He never wanted people to ask him questions or to be around him or anything like this. It just happened that way. So of course when he gave a talk, which he never did, he only answered questions he had to speak to the person at their level of understanding. So all these different stories came to be about hearts and knots and the body, all kinds of weird things. Why go through all that, why don't you just wake up? And be free.

These stories are interesting, just like Krishna. Krishna's a blue man and he's ??? in eight places there is a total explanation for all of these things. But what good does it do you? No Krishna ever existed. A blue man never existed. Yet there are voluminous books on Krishna. Talking about his exploits with the milkmaids. (laughter) They're all interesting stories. But people got lost in the story and they forget about the reality.

What we're trying to do here is trying to get rid of the stories in our minds. Especially the story of, we are human beings and we're bound. We want to drop all this and become totally free and liberated. Which we already are.

Would you like to read the Jnani Mary?

SM: Sure.

R: Read the Jnani? (SM: I think my batteries are gone.) Lose your mind at that time. Mary's batteries are gone. (SM: My batteries are gone.) (laughter) She's running out of energy. (SM: No not quite.) (laughter) (SH: Prashad is coming, give her an extra shot of prashad.) (laughter)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book)

R: Thank you Mary. (Mary: Thank you Robert.) Do we have any announcements?

(Mary and Tony tell students about the transcripts and the copying of them.)

R: The ones on the table are free.

Anybody else have anything else to say or forever hold your peace. It is time for satsang and prashad. Pears, fresh crop, rainforest. We have a rainforest. Chocolate junk...(laughter) ...or chunk. (more laughter) Chocolate statues with no egg yolk.

THE THREE WISDOMS

21st June, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you again on this lovely Sunday afternoon in Henry's house. You had nothing better to do, so you came here. You could have gone to see a good movie. You could have gone to play golf, but you came here. Why? What do you really want? What are you looking for? What's going on within you?

You have to be true to yourself. You have to be real with yourself. You have to try to understand where you're coming from, what you really wish to achieve. Remember, if you're looking to increase your material gain, you're here for the wrong reason. That may happen anyway, but you're still here for the wrong reason. If you're looking to improve your health, you're here for the wrong reason. That may happen anyway, that's a matter of circumstance. But this is not the reason we come here.

There is no reason to come here. No reason whatsoever. It's just a happening. It's a karmic spiritual happening. Something has brought you here because there has been something within you for many, many years wanting to unfold, wanting to become free, wanting to become liberated. Yet it has absolutely nothing to do with you. It's that mysterious power that grows apricots on the apricot tree, and grass in the meadow, grows mangoes in the mango trees, makes the sky appear to be blue, makes the sun shine just right on this earth, in order to sustain, maintain life. The power that takes care of all these things is moving you in the right direction, for you have been prepared to be moving in this direction for many, many centuries. It is no accident that you find yourself in a class like this.

The mind is a very powerful instrument. Imagine that I should say that, for in reality, there's no mind at all. The mind does not really exist. There is no mind. Who's mind? What mind? Yet many of you are motivated by your mind. When you have feelings, good or bad, this is the mind that feels, not you. We use the mind to achieve things in this life. The mind tells you, you want to be realized. The mind tells you you're not realized. The mind tells you you're a good person, you're a bad person. The mind tells you something is wrong, something is right. All these things come from the mind. All of your actions and reactions are all mental.

Yet you still believe that if you stopped using your mind, you would be nothing. You want to be nothing. This is your real purpose in life, to be nothing, absolutely nothing. To be no thing. When your mind tells you you're something, you have to watch yourself. You have to observe your mind and see what direction it's going, and come to the conclusion that you have no mind. There's absolutely no mind. You have been hypnotized, you have been brainwashed somehow to accept that you have a mind. And you've been walking around the earth like a peacock, strutting your feathers, as if you're something, and you can accomplish something and do something great.

You do not want to think that in a few short years you'll be gone. What you call you will disappear completely and totally. This body will exist no more and all your work, all your struggles, all your accomplishments were in vain. I know someone is saying, "But at least I did something to try to make this world a better world in which to live." Is this a better world in which we are living? Has anyone done anything to make this world a better world that's happened? The world seems to be becoming progressively worse. Man's inhumanity to man has not stopped. So what are all these do-gooders accomplishing?

Yet in another sense, they have to do good, because this is their karma. We're not against anyone or anything. Nothing is right and nothing is wrong. No one is good and no one is bad. There is just that mysterious power working within, motivating you, leading you, directing you. But where are you going? There's no place to go, so there is absolutely nothing to do, there's no place to go. This does not mean that you will sit around doing nothing, accomplishing nothing. You will always do something, yet you are not the doer.

This teaching is ridiculous, isn't it? You're something, you're nothing. You're doing, you're not doing. You're accomplishing, there's nothing to accomplish. This is what the world does for you. It makes you crazy, like me.

We come back again and again to this earth, until something starts to tell us, "There's no where to go, there's nothing to do, yet I am that." I am that, and yet there's nothing. I am that has no literal meaning. There's no explanation for it. Yet you are that. You are that which has always been, which will always be. And that cannot be explained.

Yet, as you evolve, something happens. The mind becomes less and less powerful. You're no longer taking orders from your mind that has brought fear to you, and disbelief, and disenchantment. This mind appears to be going away, appears to be dissolving. It never was here to begin with, so there is really nothing to dissolve. Yet something is happening to you. Do not try to analyze this. Do not try to find out what is happening to you. Do not think whether you're making spiritual achievement or not. The one who makes the greatest spiritual achievement, does absolutely nothing. Yet they appear to be doing something. They practice sadhana perhaps, they may pray, they may meditate, yet they're not doing a thing, for they have discovered that they are not the doer. There is no one to do anything.

In other words, you are already God. You are already God. What you think of God as being, all-pervading, omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent, there's nothing for God to do. There's nothing for God to want. There's nothing for God to be. There is nothing for God to react to.

Therefore you can tell where you are by the way you respond to these things. If your feelings become ruffled and hurt, you're still feeling yourself to be a human being.

This doesn't mean you are cold and calculating. It means you have a warm heart, filled with love and compassion, filled with loving kindness. This happens by itself.

Some people still believe you're supposed to get rid of all those feelings and feel absolutely nothing. This is true and this is not true. You get rid of all your feelings. But the feelings that have been with you since you were born, feelings from samskaras, the feeling of samsara, the feeling of yoga, karma, conceptual ideas, right and wrong, all these feelings have to go. The real you is beyond all these feelings.

Yet you may say, "Robert, isn't compassion, love, a feeling?" I'm not speaking of human compassion and human love. I'm speaking of the compassion and love that cannot be explained. It's ineffable. It's beyond the senses. Only the senses explain. Only the senses have questions and answers. But if something is beyond the senses, there is no explanation. There is just being. Not becoming but being.

Yet being is also limited, to an extent. You go beyond being to that place where there are no words, that place where there is no question, there's no answer. That place where you are that. It's so beautiful, so grand. If only I can take you there. Yet you are there. But you refuse to acknowledge it. You wish to be involved in worldly games. You wish to be involved in gossip, anger, greed, bewilderment and occult practices. These are the things that hold you back. You have to develop a sense of trust and faith. Trust and faith in what? In the power that knows the way. The power that knows the way. It's within you. It will guide you, it will lead you, it will take care of you. There's nothing to worry about, nothing to concern yourself about. You have with you a joy, a compassion, a love, a peace, if you only knew existed, you would go mad, it's so grand and beautiful. You are that. You are that.

Yesterday I was speaking of the three wisdom's, and I apparently hit a nerve with some people, because I received six phone calls about this. So for the people who weren't here yesterday, I'll go over them again. It's simply the admonishment of the Buddha, in different words.

The first wisdom is to take refuge in the Self. The second wisdom is to take refuge in the teaching. The third wisdom is to take refuge in the satsang. If only you can learn to do this, you will be halfway finished with your problems, with your spiritual quest. Taking refuge in the Self. You should do this all day long. When something goes wrong with your life, you shouldn't think of material ways to handle it. You should be trained enough to take refuge in the Self, first. Then the Self will move you to do the right things, so that you can go forward.

Say for instance, you cut your leg, like Henry did, and have a bruise. Before you get excited and wild, and start thinking you have to go to the hospital to emergency, think about taking refuge in the Self. The Self knows the way. It knows what you should do. It will not let you sit there and bleed. It will make you think of the right thing, so that you can get rid of the problem. The Self is absolute reality, effortless pure awareness. You cannot do any better than by taking refuge in the Self. It's the best thing you can do. You simply turn within.

And if you want to, you can speak to yourself. You can say something like this. You can say, "Self, here I am again in trouble. I have no idea what to do next, but you are really me, even though you're all-pervading, you're expressing as myself. You know what to do. I therefore surrender completely to you. I surrender my body, I surrender my affairs, I surrender the world. I have no need to worry or fret. You will take care of everything." And you let go. If you can only learn to do this first, before you take any other action, you'll be pleasantly surprised what happens. Take refuge in the Self, not in the world, not in other people, but in the Self.

Then take refuge in the teaching. Think about the teaching. What does the teaching tell you? There is but one life. That life is God, the Self, reality, and that life is my life now. You begin to feel that you are not the doer. You begin to see yourself as a dream, your personal self, and your problems. You keep thinking of the teachings. You think of the dream you had last night, when you were being tortured, your eyeballs gauged out, your toes cut off. And you woke up, and you're still here. Therefore what can possibly happen to you? If you were still here after you woke up from the dream, you will still be here after you wake up from this dream. And you'll be fine and well. Very well indeed.

When you begin to think this way, wonderful things happen to you. When I say wonderful things, I do not necessarily mean things that you want to happen yourself. You should have no concepts of wonderful things. For you're saying, "Well, wonderful things will happen. I'll be a multimillionaire. I'll have the happiest and healthiest body on earth. I'll have a lot of girl friends or boy friends. I'll be able to do anything I want in this world." Those are your concepts. Those are your beliefs. I'm saying to you that the Self will take care of you in its own inimitable way. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. But you'll be happy.

So do not outline how this is supposed to happen, simply think of the teaching. The illusory world in which we live, everything must change. Nothing ever remains the same in this world, everything eventually changes. You ponder this. You think of this. You look at the examples I always give you. The snake in the rope, in the twilight, it looks like there's a snake in your house. But upon investigation you find out it is only a rope. And so all the fear leaves you and you become free of this fear. So it is with this world. The world seems to show you all kinds of strange things, that's the snake. But upon investigation you will realize there's no snake at all. There's a rope. So you will see there's no world at all. There is the Self, absolute reality.

You think about the water in the mirage, where you believe there is water in the sand, and you grab the mirage, which is the sand. There's no water. There never was any water. You think about these things. This is how you relieve yourself of your suffering, of your problems, of your nonsense, by thinking of these things.

Now we go into taking refuge in satsang. You think of all the satsangees, all of us here together, knowing the truth, as one power, one reality, one Self, one nirvana, one void, one God. As you think of all of us together like this, a tremendous power emanates from you. You become free.

Those are the tools you can use. So I don't want some of you calling me telling me, "Robert, what am I going to do? I've got this problem." You have no problem. You have solutions. You know what to do. It's within you. It's without you. It's everywhere. You are the truth, the life, and the way. You are totally free now.

It is now time to play stump the guru. So if you bring those stumps over here.

Mary why don't you read them?

SM: You want me to read them? Alright.

(Mary reads question, Robert answers question.)

Q: I don't get this. It says what is correct sila concerning abortion? What is correct sila concerning capital punishment? S.I.L.A. - sila, I don't know what that means? What is correct sila concerning abortion?

R: What can I say about this? If you take your mind off the body and begin to think of the Self. Your reality what you really are then you will personally make the right decision yourself. When you say what is correct concerning abortion this has to do with the world and its manifestations. It is not right and it is not wrong. But something every woman has to think about personally when the time comes. I'm neither for or against. It's like saying to me what is right concerning the body. What is right concerning the world. Try to rise above that. This is some kind of manifestation happening in this world today. We have anti-abortionists, pro-abortionists. This is part of worldly things. What is right concerning murderers? What is right concerning grass, the sky? If the whole world is a dream why do you identify with certain particulars with this world. Imagine in the dream you get an abortion. So you get an abortion. But you have another dream next week that you need an abortion and you don't get an abortion. You have a baby instead. You see what I'm trying to say?

It's all the same, it's all part of the dream. It's part of the maya. I do not take a stand on these things, for or against. These things are part of delusion. Do not give your energy to these things. Use your energy trying to find yourself, trying to unfold, trying to discover your reality, that is where you should use your energies. And then you will know what to do personally when the time comes. (pause) What is the next question?

Q: The other one was, what is the correct sila concerning capital punishment?

R: Same story. Think of it this way. You have a dream, in the dream you have a family. Somebody rapes your daughter and kills her. And you want to see this person punished. So you catch this person and you put him in a gas chamber and you're very happy. You've got your revenge. Then you wake up, it never happened it was all a dream. You go to sleep again, this time you dream something similar. You dream you had a daughter, she got raped and killed. Only this time you feel sympathy for the killer. You feel as if you knew not what to do. His upbringing was wrong, he had troubles at home, he was left alone as a child. So you're not for capital punishment. You have mercy. Then you wake up, again you were dreaming. So both of those incidents was a dream. In reality you have nothing to do with these things. Do not be pulled in by this. Go beyond it. Rise above it. And you will understand yourself what is happening what is going on. You will be free, next.

Q: Okay, Robert should I try to remember insight and realizations? Or should I let them go as soon as they arise?

R: Do not try to remember anything. Do not count on your memory to give you answers. The memory is part of the mind. It may appear to give you right answers and it may appear to give you wrong answers. Rather look to the Self. Surrender totally to the Self. Surrender everything, all of your opinions, all of your doubts, all of your frustrations. And then right action will take place. Next Case.

Q: Alright. Robert can an enlightened Sage like yourself know if someone is right for awakening or if they will awaken in this life time?

R: First of all I never claimed to be an enlightened Sage. If I claimed to be an enlightened Sage then there is a doer within me who claims to be something. I have no idea what I am. When I look at you I see the Self. I see God. I see absolute reality. Just the way you appear now. Therefore there is no difference between an enlightened Sage and a person they're all the same. They're different to you. Because you think there is something to look for. You think there is a difference. If you would look to yourself and see who you are, then you will see everybody is an enlightened Sage. Noone is exempt from this. And then again you can look in the eyes of somebody and see where they're at, to an extent. This all goes back to the occult when you do things like that. In reality we do not wish to judge people, look at people, tell people what they are, what they're not. It's sort of immaterial to me, who is enlightened, who is not enlightened because those words do not exist for me. I use those words for your sake, but those words do not exist. Forget about these things look to yourself. Become free then see who cares who is an enlightened Sage. (pause) Next case.

Q: Please explain, "Taking refuge in the satsang." Does that mean we're supposed to cultivate friendships with your other disciples or what? What is the satsang?

R: The satsang is a group of individuals who come to a teaching of an enlightened Sage. (laughter) Contradiction isn't it? (laughter). The whole teaching is a contradiction. So you wish to come to satsang to be around an enlightened Sage, so you do this. This is your opinion, this is what you do. When you think of your relationship to satsang it should give you a warm glow or a warm feeling that tells you to take refuge in this.

Well look at it this way, it's better to take refuge at satsang than to take refuge at a topless bar. (students laugh) Maybe it's not? (laughter). (SH: I beg to differ) Whatever turns you on! (laughter) (SH: Topless bar hands down.) Just be happy. (SH: Robert you're confused.) (more laughter.) You're telling me? (laughter)

Satsang is whatever you want to make of it. But when you think of all the satsangees, it releases an energy that lifts you up and makes you feel better. So when you take refuge in the satsang, you're taking refuge in God, in the spirit, in reality. Next case.

Q: Robert, I am fed up of inquiry... (students laugh) ...satsang and everything else. Why do I need to do anything to be myself? It's all a joke, a postponement into the future. Why can't I wake up now. Forget purity of mind, practice and boring talk. How can I wake up NOW! (with a big now) (SH: You got some good questions tonight.)

R: I'm with you. (more laughter) Wake up! Why don't you do it? What are you waiting for? There is nothing keeping you back. Nothing exists but the reality. And I'm not too sure of that either? (students laughing). Just wake up and forget about the whole thing. You can do it. (laughter) Next please. (SM: That's it.) Now you have all the answers that you've always wanted.

SX: Can I ask one more question? (R: Sure.) Is there any useful function that the mind has? If there isn't then why was it created?

R: Where did you get the idea it was created? (SX: Because it exists.) For whom does it exist? (SX: For most of us who perceive it.) Of course but you perceive a lie. (SX: I know, how can I get rid of it) This only means to use the mind, (what you call the mind) to destroy the mind. You use the mind to destroy the mind by inquiring, "To whom does the mind come?" As you inquire, "To whom does the mind come?" The mind becomes weaker and weaker. This is the only legitimate use of the mind. Otherwise it just doesn't exist and brings you trouble, problems. (SX: So how does one know if one is doing right action based on what the true Self, will do, as opposed to what the mind would suggest is the Self's will.) As long as you're thinking about it, then the mind is being used and you have to take the action that is appropriate for you.

But if the true Self is at work you would not have a question like this. It would just become a happening all by itself. You wouldn't have the slightest doubt. There wouldn't be any doubt whatsoever left inside of you. There will be nothing left to ask a question like that. But as long as you asked the question then that is why you're using the mind which doesn't exist, to ask the question to take further action. So what I'm saying is, surrender to the Self. Let go of the mind. When the mind is totally surrendered it will take the appropriate action, yet you will realize that you are not the doer or the actor. There will be no one doing anything. Yet to all people you will appear to be doing something.

It's like when Rama Krishna died, who was suffering? Who saw him suffering? The people who believe in suffering, who believe in the world, who believe they are a body or a mind. And he said, "I do not suffer." He laughed at the people, "Why do they look at me like this?" And yet the people were crying because they saw him suffering. Who sees this? Who feels this? The ego. The mind.

So again whenever you feel that you have to do something, you're compelled to do something and you have to think about it, it is your mind that does it. But when the day comes when you no longer have to think about anything and you have gone into the silence and you're totally completely quiet and there is no action taking place in your head, in your mind but your body is still performing certain deeds, you will know that you've arrived. (pause) Anyone else want to make a comment?

SE: Which is better Perot or Brown? (students laugh)

R: That is for you to find out. Know yourself and forget about Perot or Brown.

SZ: I heard that there was a certain relationship between a certain guru and a certain disciple. If two ripe disciples go to one guru, one enlightened guru then can it be possible that one of the disciples can be attracted to this guru and the other is not and how will we know that who is our guru? Our natural guru?

R: That is a good question. As you practice sadhana, spiritual disciplines, as you go within yourself, day after day, week after week, month after month, you become sincere. You become devoted to the Self, to the power, to God within yourself. Your heart will open up and will lead you to the right guru. It will happen by itself. But, if you have to make decisions and say, "Shall I go to this guru? Shall I go to that guru? This one sounds good. I have to go see this guru because he or she sounds like a wonderful person. I've heard good stories about this guru." You're going for the wrong reason. Even though the guru maybe great. Only when you are compelled to be moved by the unmovable do you make the right decision. But when you are moved by the mind and you go to the wrong place when it appears like the right place and you stay there. You get involved with devotees, you get involved in the satsang, get involved with the seekers and yet we're always in the right place. Wherever you are it's the right place. There never was a time when you are not in the right place. But if you surrender yourself to yourself. If you surrender your body, your emotions, your world to your God. To the one Self which is you, then you will wind up where you're supposed to be. And you will be with the right person.

So again if you read about a guru from a book and you have feelings to go, as long as you have the feeling to go there is something wrong right there. But if you just go without the feelings, if something takes the place of the feelings and motivates you to go then you're going for the right reasons.

In other words if you wind up there without thinking, no planning, then you are there for the right reason. But if you have to think about it and there is doubt, it may not be for the right reason. (pause) Do we have announcements?

(audiotapes available of the satsangs for the students who are interested)

R: Do we have any prashad?

SM: Yes, this is my first cake. I don't think we'll have enough for everyone.

GREAT TRUTHS

25th June, 1992

Robert: Greetings and Salutations. It's good to be with you again, this beautiful sunny day. Mary's my sun screen. She keeps the sun out of my eyes.

What would you do if you woke up in the morning and found that you have no body? There is no body there. You've looked under the covers. You're looking for it but you can't find it. And you also realize the thoughts that are thinking these things, are not you? You are somewhere as the witness to the thought that you are no body, and there's nobody there. Yet, you feel your essence in everything, in the furniture, in the bed, in the windows, the whole universe. And when your wife or husband comes in, or children, they see you as a body. Yet you know 100% that you're not a body. You never were a body. There is no body. This is an awakening.

The paradox is that you are sure there is no body, yet the body appears. And when you become adjusted to yourself, you see a body which is supposed to be you, but yet it's not there. You know there is no body, and there are no thoughts. Yet something is thinking, and something appears to be a body. This is a great paradox, what we call maya, the grand illusion.

Right now you believe that you are a body. You are certain of this. But I can tell you truly you're not. You never were, and you will never be. Yet you identify with what you call a body. You go through experiences in life. You're happy, you're sad, you cry, you laugh, you're sick, you're healthy, you're poor, you're rich, and you go through all these vicissitude's of life, making a career out of yourself, putting yourself in various positions, sticking up for your rights, fighting for your survival, and going through all these things that do not exist.

This is the way you are now. This is the truth about you right now. You do not exist. Yet you appear to exist. You appear to have two arms, and two legs, and you move around, you do things, you feel things, you go through things. But do you? I can tell you for sure you don't. You never have and you never will.

When you realize this about yourself, you stop being hurt-able. No thing can ever hurt you again. Your feelings can never be hurt, because you have no feelings. You just exist as pure consciousness, pure awareness. Try to follow me on this. This is your true nature right now, pure awareness. Right now. There never was a body you had to deal with. Yet the impression is so strong with many of you, that not for a moment does the thought leave you, that you're not a body. The thought is always with you that I am the body, I am the mind, I am the experiencer.

All spiritual teachings end with this understanding. Even the priests, and the rabbis and the ministers, and the yogis, and the rest of these people, what they're trying to teach and what they're trying to tell you, is this ultimate truth, that you are not a body, but they don't realize this themselves yet. But all spiritual teaching is for that purpose.

Just as if you're going to become a doctor, and you go to school for the purpose of becoming a doctor. You go through the second grade, the third grade, the fourth grade, junior high school, high school, college. You're doing all of these things to become a doctor. You may not even know that you want to be a doctor yet, but you're taking the prescribed courses, biology, everything that you need to take, and finally it strikes you that you want to be a doctor, and you become a doctor. So it is with all the religions and all of our spiritual practices. We say we want to become this, we want to become that. We want peace of mind. We want riches. We want all of these things. But what we really want is absolute freedom. The ultimate reality is pure awareness, absolute reality.

This is a goal that is someplace within us, and we don't know it. We're carrying it around. The ultimate reality is part of us already. But yet we go through all kind of practices, meditations, sadhanas, trying to awaken the kundalini, doing all kinds of Tantric exercises, learning the Kabbalah, practicing Taoism, doing all these things that are completely unnecessary and ridiculous. They're all a waste of time, but then again they're not a waste of time. They're not a waste of time because if you didn't do them, you wouldn't be here, you wouldn't be in a class that teaches Advaita Vedanta. You wouldn't be seeking complete freedom. Everything you've done has led you to this.

Yet, it is all a bunch of nonsense. How can they both be correct? How can it be necessary and also be a bunch of nonsense? As long as you refuse to awaken, and you refuse to see yourself as no body, you're going to go through all these rituals and all these experiences, and practice all these teachings, and memorize the bible, and the sutras, and everything else. You're going to go through all kinds of teachings again, and again, and again, and again, perhaps for many, many lives, until you awaken to the fact that it is not the teaching that's going to awaken me really. It is no person, place or thing that can ever awaken me, and free me from bondage to myself, from bondage to maya, to the universe, to the world. And this is the beginning of wisdom, when you realize this.

Again, when you realize that all the teachings in the world, all the spiritual practices in the world, all the yoga practices, all the disciplines that you've been doing, is not going to awaken you one iota. You've been wasting your time. There is nothing that can awaken you. You're waiting for me to tell you what will awaken you. There is no thing that can ever awaken you. If a thing awakened you, it would not be awakening. If you relied on something to wake you up, it would not be a real awakening. What happens is you simply begin to see. You become pure being. But nothing made it happen. Do not think that all the hard work you've been doing will make you awaken faster.

I'm telling you these great truths tonight for your own benefit, because most of you have been here for a long time. All of the things in this world will not awaken you.

There is nothing that can awaken you, for you rely on some thing, and all the things simply pull you deeper and deeper into maya.

You and I know many people who have been practicing spiritual disciplines for many years. They can recite the bible backwards and frontwards. They memorize beautiful stanzas and spiritual books. They're good debaters on points of Advaita Vedanta, or other teachings. They've been around the world to many teachers, to many places. They're still the same as they always were. All they've done is add on to their ignorance. They keep adding, and adding, and adding all of the different teachings. They're filling themselves up with teachings. This will never awaken you.

It's when you dispose of the teachings, when you get rid of the teachings, when you empty yourself out totally and completely, when there's nobody left to learn anything, that's when you simply see yourself as no body. You look at yourself and you realize what you are. But no thing can make this happen to you.

Therefore what is the attitude to take? No attitude. What should you do? Nothing. What should you study? What should you learn? Nothing. Where should you go? Nowhere. With whom should you associate? No one.

When you can get to this place, you are already awakened, for there was never anyone who had to be awakened, there was never anyone who had to practice spiritual teachings, there was never anyone who had a body, there was never anyone who existed. I know to some of you this sounds very strange, yet it is the truth. It is the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The only way you're ever going to learn this, is by not learning anything, by keeping silent.

Look how your mind is thinking right now. Some of you are saying to yourself, 'That guy is crazy,' and you're right. Some of you are already thinking about lunch tomorrow, clothes you're going to wear, going to work. Your mind immediately starts to think. The lesson you have to learn is how to stop thinking. And no one can teach you this, really, because there are no teachings that can adequately stop you from thinking. You have to want it yourself.

In other words, instead of looking to me, or any other teacher, and a person who is going to give you a sacred mantra, or a person is going to tell you a certain secret so you can awaken, forget this. Look at me as a mirror for you, that's all. See me as a mirror for yourself. When you look at me you see silence, if you're looking in the mirror correctly. There's no mind, there's no movement, there's no body, there's no one home. Then you see yourself, and you're just that.

Remember, you haven't awakened to it, for there's no one to awaken. Always remember this. Many books, many teachings tell you, you have to awaken. Who has to awaken? There was never anyone asleep. There has to be somebody asleep who is awakening.

Yet, where you're coming from, you believe you are asleep. You believe you need a teaching. You believe someone has to touch you, or give you a mantra, or do something to you. You always want something. You always think you have to get something from the outside. The outside is a total illusion, just as you are. Therefore the only thing you can get from the outside is total nonsense, foolishness, maya. That's all anybody's going to give you. You have to listen to these words and act accordingly. Just be. Do not be this or that. Do not think of just being. Just be.

Forget about your dreams, your goals, your ambitions, your future, your past. These are all illusions. If you want to look to your future, or to your goals, then the ultimate goal you're striving for is death, for that's where everybody appears to end. This is where your goals get you. This is where your future is, in the grave. This is where everybody appears to wind up.

Therefore the wise person begins to know themselves as absolute reality before another day passes. They no longer keep thinking, "What am I going to do when I leave this meeting? I'm going to go and see a movie, I'm going to go out to dinner, I'm going to go home and watch a TV program, I'm going to go home and listen to records." Instead the wise person thinks, "I have nowhere to go, and I have nothing to do." Yet, you will do some things that you have to do. You will still go to a movie. You will still watch TV, perhaps, if you want to. You will eat dinner. But you will realize you're doing nothing.

Again this is a great paradox. How can you do something, yet at the same time be doing nothing? But this is exactly what's happening. Your body will appear to go through the motions and do all sorts of things, but you are doing nothing.

When we speak of things like this, the finite mind cannot comprehend this. The finite mind wants to fight, argue, stick up for its rights. And many people forget about this kind of a teaching, and go about their business, and they say, "Well, let whatever happens, happen." It is only a very few people that can grasp what I'm talking about.

Everybody is ultimately going to come this way. Everybody is going to awaken one day. And yet as long as you're engrossed in the body, the way you are, and in the world of persons, places, and things, you will appear to come back, life, after life after life after life, after life, until you come to the conclusion I've come to.

We're all hell bound for heaven, so-to-speak. Everyone's going to get to this place, whether we like it or not. You may ask, "If this is our true nature, nothing, no one, how did I get here in the first place?" and this is a good question. Who asked that question? I did. So I'll answer it. Nothing is happening. You never got here. There is no here to get.

It's like hypnosis. Many of you have seen people hypnotized. And in the hypnosis they seem to be seeing certain things the hypnotist tells them, yet these things do not exist. So it is with this world and your appearance in it. You appear to be here because you're hypnotized. You have certain thoughts, certain feelings, certain emotions, because you're hypnotized. You feel you want to become self-realized, liberated, because you're hypnotized. Everything you feel, do or act, is hypnosis. You are not the one that's acting, or doing, or being. You are beyond all this.

You are boundless space, nirvana, sat-chit-ananda. You are not what you think you are. You are eternal happiness, unalloyed peace, joy. This is your real nature. You are the substratum of all existence, the underlying current, out of which all things come. Yet you are not those things that appear to be coming from you.

You can tell if you're getting closer to this by the peace that overwhelms you, the happiness that takes you over. It is not a happiness because there's a thing happening in your life that you favor. It is not a happiness of something you own that you didn't own before. It is not a peace because you're in the right environment and you feel peaceful. It is a peace and happiness that is always with you. You are that peace. You are that happiness. It is always there. It never leaves you. As long as you believe you're a body, it is virtually impossible to have this peace and have this happiness. You cannot, for a body is part of the world conditioning.

Therefore you have to search for peace. You have to search for happiness. You believe that if you do this, you'll be happy. If you do this you will become peaceful. And then when you do this and you do that, the happiness and peace, how long will it last? For a short while. Things change. Environments change. Conditions change. Your family changes. Everything changes. Therefore again, it is virtually impossible to have real peace, and real happiness, as long as you believe you are a body.

Consequently, we do not go searching for peace or happiness. This is a mistake. What we do is we become our real Self, by not trying to become our real Self. All this begins by quieting the mind, by not allowing the mind to react to conditions and situations. I'm not only speaking of negative conditions and situations. I'm speaking of everything that arises in the mind. When you wake up in the morning and you see the beautiful trees, the sun up, the mountains, the flowers, birds, this also is a false image. It is not the truth about you. You're not trying to exchange bad for good. For the singing bird that you listen to, will only last a fortnight. How long is a fortnight?

SH: Two weeks.

R: Two weeks. That's enough. All the trees you see will die in the winter time, or change in the winter time. Everything you see changes. The beautiful flowers you pick for your morning breakfast table die within twenty-four hours, or less. They're no longer beautiful flowers.

What I'm trying to show you, you cannot depend on anything in this world for your happiness or your peace. It's a false premise. Things in this world only make you happy temporarily. When you come to the realization that you're not the body, and sometime you will come to the realization that there is no world, there is no universe, there is no God, there is only that, which is indescribable.

You have to be very honest with yourself. Do I really want to become free? Am I really looking to awaken, be liberated? What am I doing about it? Be honest with yourself. Listen to those kids having a birthday party, whatever they're doing. They're so happy. Yet at the end of the party, they have to go home. And they have to go to school tomorrow, or they have chores to do, and then they have to do things they don't like. Soon their mind starts thinking about partying again. They make more parties and they keep this up until they grow up. It never stops. Party after party after party. They become party animals, searching for happiness, searching for peace, searching for everlasting joy, yet, they do not understand that nothing outside can give you this. Nothing.

You have to jump within yourself. You have to learn to sit in the silence, to quiet the mind and it will come by itself. You do not have to pray for it, or practice sadhanas, as I said before, do certain rituals, or read certain books. You simply have to sit, quiet the mind, by observing it, inquire, "To whom do the thoughts come?" be still, and know that I am God.

That's all I have to say. (pause) Feel free to ask some questions.

SR: Robert, what is love?

R: Love, happiness, peace, joy, are all your real nature. It is a feeling beyond the feeling. It is a total ineffable something that you are. It makes you know that you are one with everything. Everyone is your brother and sister. Including the flowers, the trees, the animals, the bedbugs, the cockroaches, the mountains, the sky, the sick people, the healthy people, the poor people, the rich people. When you can look at everyone with one I and not differentiate. Then you're in love.

But when you pick out somebody special and you think that one you're totally in love with because he or she has the right features, the right figure, the right assets that you want, this is infatuation. This only lasts for a day until you get what you want. But true love never changes. It doesn't go away because it never came from anywhere. It's just something that is and you are that.

SR: Robert how can one keep in touch with you when one is faraway?

R: The Self is all-pervading therefore the Self is always wherever you are. It never came from anywhere and never went anywhere. It just is. Therefore wherever you may be, if you think of the Self the Self thinks of you. For the same Self that you see sitting here is within you. It is your essence. You may be in Cambodia or Bali, India, Tibet, anywhere, how can the Self ever leave you? It is always with you for it has nowhere to go. It is pure omnipresence.

SZ: I have a question. (R: Sure.) I heard that the vasana are obstacles to God realization. How do we create the vasana and how do we destroy the vasana? (Dogs barking loudly) (R: How do we create what?) The vasana, the vasana. (students spells the word) V A S A N A. (R: Oh vasana!) Yeah. How do we create it because I heard that the vasana are obstacles to God realization? And what should we do to destroy the vasana?

R: For whom is the vasana? Where did it come from to begin with? It never existed. See here is what you have to understand. If there was a real problem, if samsarra, vasana what you're talking about... (SZ: What is vasana?) Mental impressions, that is what you're talking about right? Vasana, samsarra and the rest of those negative things. If they really existed then we would have to figure out how to destroy them. But the reality is they do not exist. They're only a concept, an idea accepted by the personal-I, by the little self. So do not think of destroying them for if you do you'll have a fight on your hands. Simply become still and realize that you have nothing to fight, nothing to fear, nothing to change. You are pure awareness. There is nothing you have to fight. Do you see what I mean? (SZ: Umm-hmm) You have nothing inside of you that is holding you back. It is all your imagination. It is all your dream. It appears to be real. It's all maya. It doesn't exist. Wake up! You are free. Do you see what I mean?

SZ: Does this mean that I have a lot of mental impressions in my mind and perhaps through my past actions and when I sit for meditation, so this mental impressions arise. And this mean that I should not go after them and if I stay everyday in no seeking then I will realize God? Does it mean so?

R: There is no one who has to realize God. Do not think about the past. Do not believe there are past lives where you have to sit and work and pray and do spiritual sadhana. Forget about that. Be here now! This moment, in this moment, you are awake. In this moment there are no hindrances holding you back. (SZ: But I'm still in my body?) Says who? That's a belief! This is the hypnotism I was talking about. This is the maya. This is your illusion that you're still in your body. If you did not believe right now that you are not in your body, you will never believe that you are not in your body. You will always appear to have a body until the day comes when you sit down and you say, "I have no body." And it's gone. As simple as that.

SZ: Will I need some preparation for that? (R: Who says so?) Because the mental impressions in me for a long time in the past time.

R: And again it's your belief in mental impressions that's keeping you back. There are no mental impressions. That is just a story. That is like when you watch a movie on the screen. And the movie ends and there is no more figures on the screen and there are no more images. Images are gone. And so it is when you sort of awaken to yourself you realize there never were mental impressions. There is no past! No past has ever existed! Forget about the past, now! Now is the appointed time! Right this second! In this second there is no past, there is no future. There is just now! And now is another name for absolute reality or nirvana. This is now!

But your mind wants to think about the past, wants to think about the future. It wants to think about sadhana, about spiritual practices. The mind is fooling you, it's playing its tricks on you. Because you really have no mind so how can these tricks be played on you? Do not think about all this. Just let go and awaken.

SZ: Did the Buddha said that we should renounce all sins, so to say, because if you say I am now myself and pure consciousness but if I use my six sense organs then how can I stay in the self as my pure consciousness?

R: The problem is that you believe in your sense organs. You believe that you're using your senses. What I'm saying is stop thinking all of these things. The pure teaching of Buddha was no mind, no body. No preparation, nothing. Yet he spoke differently to different people. For to have a teaching you have to have different things to say.

Therefore voluminous texts have been written about the Buddha and his teachings. But in reality his teaching was very simple. Noone exists. There is no mind. There is no universe. Yet to explain this to the people he had to tell all kinds of stories and make up all kinds of things. Because the people of that time just like the people of today insist on hearing stories. They want methods to work with. They want things that they can practice and things that they can do but in truth, you are the Buddha. Right now just the way you are. You have the Buddha nature. You are that. There are no samsaras, no samskaras, nothing like that exist. You are totally free. Why not accept your freedom and be happy.

Why do you insist on thinking about all of these practices that you have to do? The practices will never stop. They will continue and continue and continue and continue and life after life after life after life after life, they will never stop. Until you vehemently come to the conclusion that nothing exists and you are free.

See you're thinking about this, that spoils it. Because when you start to think about it you come up with vasanas, about samskaras, about samaras and all kinds of nonsense. Stop thinking and be free!

In other words you do not want to become a scholar in Buddhism, or a scholar in Hinduism or a scholar in Vedanta - Advaita Vedanta. You never want to be a scholar, a pundit and learn all these voluminous texts and be able to recite them and write many books. This is all a waste of time. Those are all human concepts. What you wish to do, what you really want to do is empty yourself completely totally and be free. Empty yourself of everything. Right now this second. When I speak of emptying yourself, I'm not speaking of time. I'm not speaking of little by little, day after day, I'm speaking of right now! This moment! This second become empty, become free! Be yourself! Hallelujah! (laughter)

SZ: I think everybody here wants to be that but it's not possible.

R: Don't concern yourself with everybody here. You become the first one to be free, leave everybody alone. When you become free you will realize that everybody else is also free. There is no bondage. There is no enlightenment. When you realize that you are the Self you will realize that everybody is also the Self. You are the Self of all. You are not limited to your body. You are all-pervading. You are the creator of the universe. (SZ: But why do I not feel that?) Because you want to dream. You want to stay hypnotized. You're holding onto the maya very strongly. You're holding onto your teaching and your past and all the mind stuff that is coming out of you, you're holding onto these things. Let go of everything and you'll be free. Just let go. Drop it. (SZ: Everything impermanent?) Excuse me? (SZ: Should I let go of everything impermanent...) Let go of everything impermanent, everything permanent, let go of everything. Have no concept or reasoning whatsoever. Make no differentiation between impermanent and permanent. When I say let go I mean, Everything! Everything! Hold onto nothing!

SF: I have a question. (R: Fred, where did you come from?) A few months ago a book came out that stated that Krishnamurti for many years had an active sex life and created quite a stir in certain quarters. And I don't see why it should have but it did. And in fact when I came out to Santa Monica to see him in 1972 and somebody asked him about his sex life, and he let the fellow know in no uncertain terms that it was one of his business. (R: Umm.) So in the minds of a lot of people apparently there is a connection between celibacy and realization. And I wondered if you want to comment on that idea which seems to be prevalent in certain circles.

R: If you will spend you time disappearing you wouldn't have time to think about sex life or no sex life. Leave those things alone. It makes no difference. Keep your mind on losing your mind. Keep your mind on reality until your mind disappears. What is the difference if you're celibate or you're not celibate? That is not the point at all. It's the same like saying, "I'm eating or I'm fasting." (SF: Say that again please.) It's like saying, "I'm eating or I'm fasting." (SF: Oh yeah. It's not doing anything.) It doesn't matter whatever you want to do you do. Your job is to disappear. To become invisible. Leave the body alone. (SF: Leave the world alone.) Leave the world alone. Leave the body alone. Leave people alone. Leave Krishnamurti alone. (students laugh)

SF: You advise us when we attempt on trying to sit in the silence but when the thought appears I don't like or seems to be serving no purpose I say, "Drop it!" And that seems to work pretty well. But it doesn't take long for another thought to appear and I have to do it again. And I heard something interesting just the other day, Ram Dass, the American Ram Dass, when he is in this position he tells the thought, "Go back to the kitchen." And I thought that's kind of a key because what it means is that thought doesn't belong in the front of the house. So I thought that was on key.

R: Well if that helps you, do it. By all means... (SF: I use the "Drop it." For most of the time.) You can drop it in the kitchen. (students burst out laughing) Try not to make things complicated. Before you came in I was talking about, we do not have to learn any methods. Do not look for methods. Because when you look for methods you are using your mind and it ties you down deeper to the maya. No matter what the methods are.

Just be yourself now! And yourself now is pure awareness, boundless space, absolute reality. This is you right now, there is nothing else to think about. There is nothing to get rid of. Nothing to add. Nothing to do. Live in that moment and it's pure awareness.

SF: Thank you. (pause) There is something else I was thinking about. Not long after I got sober I was talking to a guy that had experienced a lot of DT's. (delirium tremors) And I asked him, "Are the things that you see and feel in DT's are they real?" And he said, "Oh yes, they're more than real." And I've always wondered if that...he said that because in that experience those things appeared or were felt without going through the filter of the conditioned mind.

R: That is a good point. When alcoholics have DT's they see all kinds of things, elephants on the walls, all kinds of visions, hallucinations and they appear real. Very real. (SF: Really real.) And no matter how much you tell them they're not real they will not believe you. Such is the workings of the mind.

The mind can accomplish anything do anything. This is why I keep telling you do not try to change the condition. Because it will just change to another condition. Get rid of the mind and the condition will never come back. Drop the mind, not the condition. Get right to the cause which is the mind, the ego. The I-thought. When this goes everything else will go with it. But it's a good question because it shows you what the mind can perceive. An illusion. This is how we see the world. We see this world as being real but it's an illusion.

Look at a beautiful sunset. We all think it's so beautiful but it'll be gone soon where did the beauty go? The beauty is gone with it. And then you feel sort of sad and you say, "I wish I could see that sunset all the time." But you can't! In the morning you watch the sunrise, same thing. It's beautiful. You can't wait for the sun to come up you see it over the ocean, it looks so gorgeous and when it gets to the middle of the sky, which doesn't exist, you feel hot and bothered. And you say, "God damn sun, I wish you would go away." So what is the truth what is going on? All the beauty, all the joy, all the things you like turn into something ugly soon. Forget about all these things. They're coming out of you. You are the creator of all the suns, the sunsets, the moons, the planets, the universe, that all comes out of you. You are the instigator, the culprit, the boss.

You may stop playing the game anytime you wish. By pulling everything back inside of you. The whole universe pulled like a rubber band snaps back inside of you. And then you are the Self. So again do not rely on anything in this world to make you happy because everything is temporary it turns into something else. Rather turn into the truth, become the truth, reality, the absolute reality, the pure awareness.

(long silence then Robert continues)

Om shanti, shanti, shanti, peace, peace.

Remember to love yourselves, to bow to yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself. For God dwells in you as you. God bless you, I love you.

We've got prashad. Remember the whole teaching is in the prashad. If you wish to awaken eat some prashad. And Norman brought some fruit.

SV: What does the word prashad mean Robert?

R: It means blessed food.

SV: Blessed food, thank you.

(prashad given out as tape ends.) [TOC]

ANNIHILATING THE MIND

28th June, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. Happy earthquake day. I am glad you can join us today on this auspicious occasion. [There were two earthquakes that day.] It shows you how fragile human beings are. You can be here today and gone tomorrow. From Arnold Schwarzenegger to Woody Allen, when the earthquake comes, whoever you are, it doesn't matter, whatever you've built, doesn't matter, whatever you've saved, does not matter. It makes you humble, doesn't it? It makes you realize you can be here now and gone in a couple of seconds. Something to think about.

Of course if you realize the truth about yourself, that you were never born, you never die, you are consciousness, you are pure awareness, then you don't even think about these things. You just watch, observe, and enjoy.

There was once a great king who heard of a Sage who was traveling through the kingdom, a famous Sage. This Sage was known for his great compassion, his great love, and his great humility. He didn't speak much. The king called his wise man to him and said, "Quick, go and find the Sage and bring him here, so that he can give us a talk on spirituality." The wise man obeyed.

He inquired as to the whereabouts of the Sage and finally located him. He related to the Sage what the king had said. The Sage said, "I'm not interested." He beseeched the Sage again and again to come to the kingdom. The king would give him bags of gold, fine meals, beautiful women. The Sage said, "Sorry, not interested." Finally the wise man left the Sage and returned to the king and reported the story, what happened. The king became furious. He said, "I want you to go back and use whatever means you can to bring the Sage here. Otherwise I'll cut off your head and use it as a hockey puck." The wise man said, "Yes, OK," and again left.

He searched for the Sage. He found him, fell at his feet admonished, "Master, please come and give a talk on spirituality for the king, or he will cut off my head and use it as a hockey puck." The Sage, having a great compassion, a great love, a great humility, said, "OK, I will come. Make all the arrangements. I will give a discourse on silence."

The wise man was so happy, he returned to the king and told what had happened. The king became ecstatic, joyful. He ran to the royal ballroom, had his servants put out 300 chairs in preparation for the Sage, invited the entire council, all of the ministers, their families. Hundreds of people attended.

The Sage appeared at the promised time. He sat down on a chair, turned his head slowly to the right, slowly to the left, looked at everyone, got up, and he left, and left the palace and the kingdom. The king became furious. "This is an insult," he shouted. The wise man came over, and he said, "How can he do this to me? He has insulted me in front of all of my friends. Why was he so disrespectful?" The wise man said, "Sire, don't you get the point? He said he was going to come and give us a discourse on silence. What better way to give a discourse on silence than to be silent?"

This story is the truth about us also. It shows us that in silence there is power, in silence there is the highest truth, in silence there is pure awareness. When we talk too much, when we get involved in too much discourse with people, when we talk too much about philosophical teachings, spirituality, it loses the essence of the teaching. When you hear about your self, you hear me telling you, you are pure awareness, boundless space, sat-chit-ananda, you are the Self, when you've practiced observation, observing, being the witness, when you've practiced vichara, self-inquiry, and you've done this for many years, it is then time to be silent. It is then time to keep quiet, not to allow your thoughts to go any further.

When I say to keep silence, I do not mean just keeping quiet, when your mind keeps thinking, thinking, thinking, I am referring to quieting the mind. When there is no longer any noise in your mind, when the mind becomes quiescent, the reality appears by itself.

Why do you want to experience the reality? Because you have read in books, teachers have told you, the reality is infinite peace and wisdom, the reality is pure knowledge, the reality is immortality, and everyone wants this. So we practice all forms of sadhana, we go and see various teachers, we read many books. Now what all these things should lead to is the silence. After a few years it should not lead to further books, it should not lead to further running around the world, looking for Masters who can give you the secret potion, so that you can become self-realized. It means to be quiet, to cause the mind to become totally still, not to get involved in talking, talking, talking, about nonsense, to talk very little.

Notice as you keep still this way, how thoughts enter your mind, how they begin to tell you things about yourself, about the speaker, about the room. The thoughts tell you everything that keeps you back from achieving your realization. Thoughts can do you no good, no matter what kind of thoughts they are. They can only take you so far, confuse you.

You have to see this about yourself. You have to be totally honest with yourself, see where you are coming from, examine your feelings, your emotions.

Again, what is going through your mind. Most people cannot sit in the silence even for a second. The mind waves begin to move.

As long as your mind keeps feeding you information, you can never really awaken, for what you call the mind is merely a bundle of thoughts about the past, and about the future and about the present. That's all the mind is. The mind keeps you earth-bound. That is its job, to make you part of this earth, to attach you to person, place and thing.

Therefore the wise person, from the very beginning, begins to do things to keep the mind still, to quiet the mind. What is the highest thing you can possibly do to quiet the mind? And the answer is nothing. As long as you're doing something you're using the mind. Therefore the highest teaching is, do nothing. When you learn to do nothing, the mind will stop thinking all by itself, but when you do something, the mind will accumulate more knowledge, of things that you are doing, and become ever stronger, and stronger and stronger.

Remember you are not trying to acquire more knowledge, and add on to the knowledge you already have. You want to empty yourself totally, absolutely and completely, of all so called knowledge. You're afraid to do this, for you think you will become a vegetable. It's hard to imagine a person with no mind. But, when you begin to realize your mind is only an accumulation of thoughts, thoughts from past lives, thoughts from this life, only thoughts, then you begin to see that the mind has to be totally transcended and transmuted. And those of you who have been practicing sadhana for many years, have come to the point where now you can do nothing. You no longer have to meditate. You no longer have to practice atma-vichara. You no longer have to practice being the witness, vipassana meditation. Those things are no longer necessary. They have taken you to a certain point, and here you are. You now have absolutely nothing to do. You are free.

If you think about this aright, you will see that your body, what you call your body, will still function very well without your thoughts. This is sort of a hard one to grasp, for you have been taught you have to use your mind to function. You've been taught that your mind uses the body to function on this earth plane. That's how it appears. But in truth there never was a body, there never was a mind and there was never anyone to function.

When this is understood properly, you become the epitome of compassion, of loving kindness, of peace, of humility, simply by understanding what I just said. You do not have to earn these virtues. Some of these virtues are actually yours already, they've always been yours, compassion, loving kindness, peace, happiness. Since they are already yours and you have them already, you simply have to sit still, quiet the mind, and they'll come up to express themselves.

It's similar to the sun covered by clouds. When the sun is covered by clouds, you think there is no sun, the sun has disappeared. Yet once the clouds dissipate, the sun shines once more with all its glory and splendor. And so it is with the mind. You have believed that the mind causes you to function, to shine, and this is not necessarily true. The mind is here to keep you earthbound. When you stop thinking, the mind becomes the infinite, becomes God, becomes boundless space, nirvana, pure awareness. It doesn't really become that. You've always been that. The mind merely disappears, as a mind, and your true nature is expressed.

Many people try to develop virtues before they try to remove the mind. This is impossible to do. If you have anger, fear, and many of these negative conditions, it is very difficult to make them disappear. It is very difficult to get rid of them, to transcend them. No matter what you do to try to transcend them, to try to give them up, they just become stronger. It is only when you work on the removal of the mind, by quieting the mind, then all of these things we discussed, the fears, the frustrations, the anger, disappears of its own volition.

It's so easy and yet so hard. The reason it appears hard is because you have become attached to your way of thinking, you have been attached to person, place and thing for so many years. You're attached to your memories, to your body. This is the reason it appears difficult. But when you begin to understand and realize there is no body, there is no attachment, there is only total freedom, the mind becomes totally annihilated.

This is something you have to work with yourself. This is something you have to talk to yourself about, something you have to see for yourself. Seeing is being. As you begin to see the great truth, that you are the imperishable Self, the mind will automatically run away and become dissolved.

Why wait any longer? Why not simply awaken now? Why continue to play all these religious games, going through eons of so called incarnations, trying to become free and liberated? Why not smile at yourself and say, "I am that, I have always been that. All is well. There are no mistakes. I am in my right place." Why not accept this?

Do not try to change the world or change other people. Do not even try to change yourself, for it is most difficult to do. All you have to do is to realize you are not the mind.

You're becoming a little more peaceful now. All the thoughts are leaving you. You are no longer bound by your mind. You have become absolute freedom. Your mind and your body are melting away. The true Self alone remains. You're experiencing this, emptiness, no mind. There is nothing that can disturb you any longer. You are free from all outside influences.

(Q - Mary reads the question and A - Robert answers)

Q: Please tell me more about the love that you experience and feel.

A: There is human love and there is spiritual love. Human love is possessive love most of the time. In human love you want something for yourself. So you give out love to somebody else. You want a gift, you want a person, you want something. So you learn to love so you will get it. There are a very few people who just love for love sake.

Spiritual love is your Self. It is consciousness and is what you really are. It is a love that just is. Not something that comes only at a certain time when you see something you want. True love, spiritual love is your very essence. It is all-pervading. It is consciousness.

When you awaken to your true reality, who you are is love. When you love the Self you love everybody else and everything else. The Self is your true nature, it's all-pervading, omnipresent. This love again comes by itself as you awaken. It is not something you have to develop. It is something that has always been with you. And as you keep awakening more and more you feel it for no reason whatsoever. You can be in hell and you will see heaven and you will love it. You can be going through every agonizing experience on this earth yet if you are an instrument of love, you will feel joy and peace. For love, joy, peace, reality, consciousness, are all synonymous. They are one and the same. Therefore awaken and love will come by itself.

Q: What is beauty?

A: What is beauty, it's the same thing. Beauty is what you behold as your Self. It's not something you see and you want it for a time. It is God or consciousness or the Self. Just like love there is no difference. As you see love you see beauty. All of these words are for human beings to differentiate and make separate. Because you think you're separate.

So you have words like beauty and love and truth and joy and happiness but it's only one. Not duality, not three, not four but one and you are that one. To the realized person those words have no meaning any longer. But if you become an embodiment of this there is no one left to do it. For the reality takes up all space. This is what is meant by all-pervading. It takes up all time and all space. There is no room for anything else. It is only when you are asleep and you think you are mortal man that you have to love something or see beauty in something or see joy or happiness in yourself.

But again when you wake up you have become those things, therefore there are no words that you use to describe them. There is nothing you have to say, it just is.

Q: Please give me examples of lying that is okay?

A: An example when lying is okay? Lying is okay when you think you're human. When you're human being you naturally lie. When you want things for yourself. When you want yourself to be better than other people, you compete with others. You want to make yourself look great. If you're not you exaggerate the position you're in. If anybody asks you a question about yourself you do not want to tell them something is wrong with you. You exaggerate yourself so the person can think you're a wonderful person.

When you fall in love you see all the qualities and everything in the present in the other person and you try to make yourself loving. You put on airs, you lie about yourself. To make yourself look important, look good, look big. So every human being is really a liar. So when you are in yourself, your true Self those words do not exist. Words like truth or lie they no longer exist. For there is no one left to experience them. Only in your human self do you experience all these words. Self-realization, liberation, moksha, delusion, ignorance, lying, those are a part of the ego, the mind. This is why it's so important to work on the mind to remove it, to get rid of it. Then you will be your true Self and there will be nobody to do anything. (pause) Anyone like to ask a question or say something?

SV: Robert, this came about...this came back into my memory when you were saying that we should say, "I am that." And there is a time factor involved in it. Something similar, maybe six months ago I was sitting up in bed, I was meditating or something and all of a sudden I knew I'm free and have always been free with total certainty. It lasted maybe twenty-seconds. And I got a feeling if it lasted twenty minutes it really would have been coming. And another thing was on three times the "I" has totally ceased and the first time maybe twenty-two years ago. Now there was no time involved then and there was nobody there who knew at the time. But if it's longer I think would it be strong enough to stay permanently? I don't know where the questioner is...

R: Well you are apparently having certain experiences and you had experiences... (SV: No nobody was there to experience this, there was nobody to remember, there was no memory, there was no witness. There was nobody there. Nobody to experience anything.) How did you come back? (SV: I don't know, at one time, in time so-to-speak I recognized there was nothing.) But you came back. (SV: Yes.)

R: One who realizes the truth that there is absolutely nothing can never come back again. One who has a glimpse of the reality you're referring to can come back. It's like nirvikalpa samadhi. In nirvikalpa samadhi while you're meditating, you lose the body consciousness and you experience the reality. But you experience the reality up to a point. If you experience the entire reality you would never come back again you would have sahaja samadhi. Which means you will be conscious but be realized 24 hours a day.

But when you have to sit in nirvikalpa samadhi, it's temporary but you have a feeling of what is going on. It's sort of like taking LSD. When somebody takes LSD or some other psychedelic they experience some reality perhaps. They're able to go deep inside and see the reality. But not the entire reality they have a glimpse of how it is. Then they come back again.

SH: I thought that was savikalpa samadhi and nirvikalpa was the real thing.

R: Nirvikalpa is close to the real thing but it's not the real thing. (SH: Savikalpa is when they are still doing.) Savikalpa is less. When you are in the dualistic state. But nirvikalpa is when you are one with the infinite but not all together there. (SH: You're one but not all together one.) Yes. There is a piece missing. For if you're all together there you would never come back again. You would be that forever.

See this is something most people do not understand. When you touch the reality, the reality totally you have destroyed the ego and the mind. There is nothing to come back to. But when you come again, doing meditation or whatever you think you're in and you're a human being again, you have not touched the reality 100%. There is something there to come back to.

SH: When you touch 100 percent the ego is burnt out?

R: You are all cooked. Kaput.

SN: Robert isn't nirvikalpa samadhi just an experience of the mind?

R: Everything that is not reality is an experience of the mind. (SN: So if you say it's a glimpse it's almost a kind of a contradiction. Then isn't nirvikalpa samadhi just another facet of the illusion?) Nirvikalpa samadhi takes you closer to reality than anything else. But the mind of course is experiencing nirvikalpa samadhi. (SN: That's what I'm saying so how can it be reality?) But it's close to reality but it's not the whole reality, that is what I am saying.

SH: But in sahaja samadhi the mind is burnt up?

R: Totally gone. You never come back.)

SN: I mean it seems as though many people experience something, if you want to call it nirvikalpa samadhi. They themselves become teachers thinking that they've awakened. But it seems obvious that the experience that they've had is just an experience of the mind. It's like everything else, in a sense the mind will always find another way to fool you. Do you hear what I'm saying? (R: True.) And it seems...I mean I understand what you're saying, it's the closest thing but it seems like a contradiction to even say that because the Self is the Self, the mind is the mind.

R: In order to explain it... (SN: Right.) ...you have to use words. You have to make people understand what you're talking about. (SN: But actually the Self is not any experience at all?) The Self is nothing. (SN: Exactly.) So you experience the self. You know you are the self. (SN: Kind of like what you were getting at. As long as we experience it that is not it.) True. (SN: In a higher sense.) If there is somebody left over to experience it then that is not it at all.

SN: But as I said it seems to be somewhat persuasive that a lot of people have had what they call spiritual experiences, of course that too is just the mind.

R: It is the mind. But we're not really here to judge people, talk about different teachers, who knows... (SN: Well I'm not naming any names.) ...who knows what people are doing or what they are not doing. We have to be interested in ourselves first. And we're interested in our self first when we become free. Then we will know what to do to make this world a better place in which to live. But until then we have to work on ourselves. And become sort of simple and quiet and peaceful. And not judge others and leave everybody alone, leave everything alone. Become happy within yourself.

SD: Robert could these glimpses be a sign of progress or is there such a thing as progress toward enlightenment?

R: If we're speaking about these things there is certainly a sign of progress. Because it shows you that you've gone further than you've gone before. If you are able to experience this feeling and have total joy for a while, total peace, total happiness and you begin to know there is such a place that you can go and stay forever.

SF: What part does the body play in this scenario?

R: The body doesn't really play any part. (SF: Sir?) The body doesn't play any part at all. The body just appears to exist. As long as you believe that you are a human you are a person, place or thing. But once you get beyond that there is no longer a body to experience. The body is only here when you are here as a person. But once you transcend the personality for whom is there a body?

SN: But really we're not after any experience at all though? I think that is the point?

R: True. There is no one to experience stages of development. We want to be the Self that we've always been. This is the meaning of the biblical statement, "Be still and know that I am God." Be still! That is all you have to do. All the teachings in the world are simply to tell you to be still. All the books you've read, the voluminous texts, the bibles of the world, the Vedanta, everything. Just be still is all that means. All those writings. Just to become still. To become quiet.

ST: Robert I read a statement in the transcript the other night and I didn't quite understand it and was wondering if you could say something about it? You said that we come into this world to find out who we are and what we should be doing. And I understand that to find out who we are, is to become free from the illusion, from the dream. But what does that imply to find out what we should be doing?

R: What I mean by that is we should become quiet. We should become still. We should be doing our spiritual quietness. We should be doing what has to be done to realize the Self. They're both the same thing. We come into this world to find ourselves and to be still. That is what we should be doing. To become quiet. Not to get too involved in things.

SZ: Robert please tell us some of the tests which some realizer imposed upon themselves on the way to God realization. (R: Say that again.) Please tell us the tests which some enlightened beings imposed upon themselves on the way to God realization. I heard about that.

R: I don't really understand your question.

SV: I think that the gentleman said that the people who are on the way to enlightenment impose a test on themselves. (R: Oh.)

SH: It shows that you're on the way.

R: What you call a test is an illusion. For whom is there a test? Why look for tests. Today right this moment you are free. You are bright and shiny, you are reality, right now! So why do you want to have tests in your life? There are many people in this world who believe that they have to go through tests. And they go through tests after test after test, suffering after suffering after suffering. All this is unnecessary. You do not have to have any tests whatsoever. If you believe in tests you will be given tests. Because your mind is believing that you have to go through tests. It's all in the mind the mind makes all of these things up. It plays games with you, it fools you. Do not think about this at all. Do not say when something happens I'm going through a test, God is testing me. There is no God to test you whatsoever. You are the God and your mind is creating whatever you feel is true.

Therefore be here now. Awaken this moment. Understand your true nature now. You are the Buddha. You have the Buddha nature now! Not next week or when you go through tests, when you go away to a monastery. Now is the only time there is. And right now you are free.

SZ: But I can see that I am free but sometimes some event or some crisis happens then I feel unhappy. (R: Yes, of course.) Then I should not deceive myself. (R: True.) Because I can practice this in spiritual...and I can think that is alright but when some crisis happens then my mind will not be in balance. (R: That's a good question.) I must know that I do not deceive myself now. Not in the future but now.

R: That's a good question. What you do as you practice spiritual disciplines, self inquiry. And you begin to realize the truth that we're talking about here. Your reactions to things will change. You will find that the things that used to bother or annoy you no longer bother you. What you call a test will no longer disturb you whatsoever. You have become higher than you have ever been before. By practicing your spiritual disciplines, by what you've been doing. And the things that used to hurt you before no longer have the power to hurt you again. You will look at something that used to make you mad, angry and you will laugh.

Therefore what you believe was a test will no longer be anything. Will have no power over you. You have overcome. By not reacting, by not giving it power. Whatever you react to, you give power to. You say, "You have something powerful that can make me feel mad? That can make me angry, that can make me upset?"

But as you work on yourself, as you understand what we're talking about in this class, the time will come when you look at this whole world, this whole universe and there will be nothing in this universe that can upset you or worry you, or bother you. You will be totally free. Then you will not think of tests any longer. That role will not come into your mind. It'll be finished. Thinking of tests, of deluding yourself, of fooling yourself.

Now if I'm talking to the average person on the street, I cannot tell that person this. But when they know nothing about spiritual practices they haven't done anything for themselves therefore they will be deluded and they would have to take right action. I'm not telling you to imagine that something doesn't exist. I'm not telling you to fool yourself and say, "This doesn't exist."

For instance if your house is on fire. You do not say, "It's not really on fire." Or if you break your arm, you don't say, "I didn't break my arm." When you're felling tremendous pain, when you realize that your belongings are burnt in the fire.

But as you grow spiritually, your house is on fire, you may see your house burning. You will not deny it's burning but you will not be affected by it. You've transcended, you've come above that. You've risen above that. When you break your arm you will feel some pain and you will realize your arm is broken but you will not respond to it, you will not give it any power. You will be above that. You become a new person completely.

So there are no tests. It is the mind that gives you tests. Work on the mind and there will be no tests for you to go through. Get away from me and then you will wake up. It's gone, it never happened, it never existed.

And so it is when you awaken to the truth of your being you will understand that this is a dream also. In this dream all kinds of things happen, it will always happen. People will always be tortured, it will never stop. There will always be wars. There will always be man's inhumanity to man on this planet. That is how it appears. There is duality on this planet. You cannot have perfection for the whole world, it will never happen. There is duality, only duality on this planet. For every good there is a bad, for every up there is a down, for every amount of pressure pushing forward there is an equal amount of pressure pushing backward. This is the way of this world. The pendulum has to swing both directions. The pendulum swings in this direction and all kinds of good things are happening to you then it swings backwards again and you're suffering, going through all kinds of negative experiences. Therefore I say to you, "Wake up! Awaken now!" When you awaken these things will not exist for you.

SZ: I had a test but I deceive myself.

R: Work on yourself. Practice sadhana. Inquire "Who am I?" Ask, "Who deceives myself? Who is the one that deceives themselves?" And realize that it's the ego. The ego or the mind is saying all of these things. That you're deceiving yourself that you're doing all kinds of things. If you are not deceiving yourself according to your thinking, then what you see in the world will be reality. Then you're not deceiving yourself, true?

Everything will be real. The whole world will be real to you. Yet a simple test will show you that it's not. Everything must change. The person who is being tortured today can become the President tomorrow. Can become the head of the country tomorrow. Everything changes.

So when you see something that you're trying to change, it will change automatically by itself, sooner or later. If you go through this world you will see there have been times that countries possessed other countries and then the countries that were possessed became the possessors and they became tyrants. And then the country that they possessed after hundreds of years they became the possessors.

The whole world is a joke, a cosmic joke. You can't take anything in this world as being real. So when you deceive yourself as you say, realize, "Who is deceiving myself? Who is doing this?" And you will see it's the ego who thinks this way. Remove the ego, remove the mind and there will be no one to be deceived.

SZ: Did you say that if I do not relate to this world then I will be in myself? Will be the Self?

R: You cannot just not relate to the world even if you say I'm not going to. If you try your best not to relate to the world you're going to relate to the world. What I want you to do is to forget about the world. And go deep within yourself. Dive within yourself. Find out who you are. Discover your true Self. Then see if that question arises.

Would you like to read the Jnani Mary?

SM: Yes Robert.

THE HIGHEST TEACHING IS SILENCE

2nd July, 1992

Robert: Good evening. I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to be with you once again. I love every one of you. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place.

There are certain principles we should always remember, if we wish to be happy all the time. The first one is, the highest teaching in the world is silence, to be still. There is no higher teaching than this. Silence is Brahman. Silence is grace. Silence is absolute reality. I'm speaking of real silence, not just keeping quiet for a while. Real silence is when you go deep within and you become totally oblivious to your surroundings.

There is no disturbance, even though things may still be going on all around you. The telephone may ring, people may knock on your door, the dog may bark, yet if you go deep within, you'll be silent.

True silence has absolutely nothing to do with the world. True silence is omnipresence, is all-pervading. Your real nature is silence. Always remember, it is different than just keeping still. Anyone can keep still for a while, maybe a couple of seconds, before the mind starts attacking you. But true silence is when you go deeper, where you forget about your body, you forget about your affairs, your mind, your world, and you enter that atmosphere where there is bliss-consciousness.

True silence is the nature of creation. The planets turn on their axis, the galaxies spin through space, they hurl through space, galaxies, billions of galaxies. Everything is in a state of flux. Everything moves. Yet, it's all very silent. You do not hear a thing. If you get up at four o'clock in the morning and go outside and look, what do you hear? You hear silence, deep silence, total silence, beautiful silence.

It is not hard to get into that type of silence. You simply begin to sit still and become oblivious to everything. It will happen by itself. You will go deeper, and deeper, and deeper, and deeper, until you're no longer aware of your body or your surroundings. The true silence can be kept up at all times. You do not have to sit to go into the silence any more. In the beginning stages you do, for you're learning how to keep silent. But as time goes by, you can be shopping in the market place, you can be working in the factory, you can be washing dishes, you can be doing all kinds of things, and you will be in the silence.

The silence is another way of saying to keep your mind stayed on God all the time. God is the silence and you are that. Feel the silence right now. You can feel it. It's a thing of beauty. You know when you're getting into the true silence, you begin to become happier, and happier and happier for no reason. It makes no difference what's going on in the world. The world is in one place and you're in another place. In the deep silence you are identifying with the substratum of creation. Always remember to go into the silence. A Sage is always in the silence. A Sage may be talking, listening, partaking of activities, but to the Sage there's only silence.

The second principle you should always be thinking about is when you feel feelings such as, "I wonder if I should leave my family and go to India to search for a guru. I wonder if I should give up my job and go to a monastery. I wonder if I should become a Buddhist monk or a nun, and give up the world." When you think about your anger, your frustrations, pain, lack, limitations, sickness, when these things seem to be falling down on you, grabbing hold of you, this is what you should realize. If these things were external to you, then you'd have a hard job getting rid of them. You'd have to get an Uzi submachine gun, a tank, all kinds of weapons, to get rid of these things that are external to you, to go to a monastery, become a nun, feelings of impoverishment, feelings of lack, limitation. If these things were external to you, you'd have a hard job getting rid of them. Then you'd have a battle on your hands. But these things are you. You are giving birth to these things. These things are your thoughts. They're not external to you. Just like a dream. A dream may appear to be external to you, but upon awakening it all took place within your mind, no matter what you dreamt.

What I'm trying to say, is, there is nothing in this universe that is external to you. You are the universe, and everything in it. For instance, if you try to move to a cave where you think you'll find more peace, you have to take yourself with you, and if you are not at peace before, nothing will change, new conditions, same feelings, same thoughts. You are the universe. You are everything. Think of this. There's no world apart from you. There's no condition apart from you. Why worry? Why be fearful? Why believe something is wrong somewhere? You are giving birth to all these thoughts. You yourself are doing this. You have to think of these things.

Consider the dream world again. When thoughts of depression or insecurity strike you, or you want to move away from LA because of earthquakes, the earthquake is within you. Depression, the anxieties are within you. There's no cause for these things. There's nothing in this world that can cause you any problem. It is your acceptance of these things. It is your belief that something outside of you is hurting you.

Therefore you must turn within, and you inquire, "Who am I? Who am I? To whom do these things come? Who's experiencing this pain and suffering, the fears?" And you say, "I am. Who am I? Where did this I come from? Who gave birth to it? What's the source?"

As you inquire this way, the I will finally dissolve and disappear, and the reality of your being will come forth. The truth about you will be revealed. But if you accept these conditions, the wanting to go on a vacation, to a monastery, the wanting to leave Los Angeles because of earthquakes, the desires, the passions, the lust, all these things are part of you. They're part of the ego, the mind.

You begin to see yourself as omnipresence. Everything is taking place within you. I keep reiterating, because I want to make sure that you get this. There is nothing outside of this universe or this world that is not you.

After all, what happens to the universe when you go to sleep? When you are in deep sleep there's no universe, there's no world, there's no body, there's no mind, there's nothing. It is only when you awaken that the world begins for you. Therefore inquire who you are. "Am I this pain? Am I this desire? Am I the person who's going through this experience? If I'm not, who is?" Always inquire within yourself. Inquire, inquire, inquire.

Something will happen. As you continue to inquire, something will give. You'll become happier and happier. You will become your Self.

The third principle you should remember always, is everything is right, just the way it is. Everything is right, just the way it is. Now what do I mean by that?

This second in which you now live is right, just the way it is. There's absolutely nothing wrong with this second. This second is perfection, pure awareness, ultimate reality. But we do not live in the second. We live in the past or in the future. This is why the problems arise. But in this very moment, this very second, all is well, extremely well. You may be going through the most dastardly experiences in life, yet your mind dwells on these things, they get worse. But if you draw in your mind to the moment, to the second, everything will stop, and you'll be in perfect peace.

Learn to live in the now. There really is no past and there's no future. There's only this moment, and in this moment all is well. I know it appears sort of rough to some of you. You're thinking of what you have to do next week. You have to pay your bills, you have to go to the doctor, you have to get married, you have to get divorced. Your needs, your wants, your passions, all these things go through your mind all the time. But if you would only learn to live in the now, in the moment, nothing is ever happening in the moment. The moment is eternal peace, eternal love, joy, happiness. Feel this. Feel the moment I'm referring to. How beautiful.

When your mind begins to wander, creation begins for you. You lose the moment, and the world begins for you. According to your karma, your consciousness, your samskaras, you start creating this world, as soon as you begin to think. Thoughts are not your friend. They do not really belong to you. Do you feel the perfect silence?

As you breathe and you inhale, feel as if you're sucking in the whole world, the whole universe, and as you exhale, you're letting it out again. This exercise makes you feel that the whole universe comes from you, goes out and comes back. Like when you're sleeping. In deep sleep the universe is not here, the world is not here, your body is not here. As you awaken, everything is here. Do this with your breathing. You inhale, there's absolutely nothing. The universe has gone back into yourself. You exhale, and the universe is out there again, external to you. There is only the one Self, and you are that. You have no body. You have no mind. You are like boundless space.

The old you is beginning to disappear. The old you is thousands of words, millions of thoughts, reacting to everything that comes along. This you no longer exists. You are fresh and new. There is no longer any karma that can hurt you or do anything to you, no longer any samskaras that you have to experience. You have already crossed the ocean of samsara, and you are already the Bodhisattva. There's nothing you have to earn. There's nothing you have to pray for. There's no one you have to see. There's absolutely nothing you have to do. You are already free.

You are beyond freedom, beyond liberation, beyond delusion, beyond ignorance. You are neither wisdom nor ignorance. There are no words for you whatsoever. There's no description of what you are. There's no one to say.

You are that pure awareness that has always been and will always be. There is absolutely nothing you have to do to earn it, for you are awake from the dream.

Feel this freedom you've never felt before. Feel the joy, the happiness, the love that you have become. Feel the reality.

(silence)

Om shanti, shanti, shanti, peace.

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: I have a question. The world comes to an end when I go to sleep. And it comes in again when I wake up. But there seems to be something in relativity that remains in deep sleep otherwise I might go to sleep as Fred Burnel and wake up as somebody else, can you comment on that?

R: Yes, when you got to sleep as Fred Burnel why would you wake up as somebody else? You will wake up as Fred Burnel because that is the same Fred Burnel that went to sleep. (SF: The rest of the world vanishes in deep sleep, but I don't vanish?) As far as you're concerned there is no you, there is no world, there is nothing. But when you wake up again you're Fred Burnel. Because you woke up the same person that went to sleep. If you woke up enlightened you wouldn't be Fred Burnel. But because you wake up, you wake up as Fred Burnel.

When you awaken from this mortal dream called the world you will not be Fred Burnel any longer. But when you awaken from the dream, you awaken as the same person that went to sleep. There is nobody else that went to sleep but you. And because you woke up in the same consciousness you're still Fred Burnel. See what I mean? (SF: Not exactly.) You went to sleep as Fred Burnel. The only change that was made was during deep sleep, you have no idea who... (SF: Everything just disappears except the person...) During deep sleep you have no idea who you are or what you are. There is no world, there is nothing. But if you wake up again you will wake up as Fred Burnel. Because that is the person who is dreaming, that is the person who is sleeping and you have that type of consciousness, a mortal consciousness. So you awaken at the same place that you went to sleep. (SF: It's not clear again, but...) Why should you awaken as someone else?

SF: Because if the world comes to an end and I'm part of the world. When I fall asleep the world comes to end... (R: Yes.) ...including me.

R: Yes, but when you awaken again the same way that you went to sleep, why do you awaken again? Why do you wake up again? (SF: It's not clear in my mind.) If you didn't wake up you wouldn't be Fred Burnel but because you wake up you're still Fred.

SF: I'll have to wait on that one, thank you. (pause) Another thing, a week or two ago you mentioned pranayama as one method a person can use to help still the mind. Could you give us a simple safe method that might appeal to some of us as a means of trying to still the mind?

R: This is what we talk about all of the time. You can use the "I am" meditation. When you inhale you say, "I," when you exhale you say, "am." You may do that or you may inhale the universe and exhale the universe. (SF: Not that one, they were talking about breathing in one nostril and breathing out.) Well those things are not too necessary. Those things are part of the mind. (SF: I just thought of this anyway.) And you go beyond the nostril breathing. Beyond the pranayama you were just talking about, you go to "I am." It's a very high state of meditation. If you have to meditate use the I-am method. Inhale say, "I," exhale say, "am." Or practice the existence...dissolving of the universe as we did before. Inhale the universe and exhale the universe. This makes you feel that you are in control, that you're in charge. You are the universe. (SF: Thank you.)

SK: Robert for someone who has awakened they seem to have, when they got to sleep, when they wake up they're a different consciousness but there is still a remnant of the old self there? Is it the ego, or there is no...?

R: What are you referring to, the Sage? (SK: Yeah.) A Sage does not sleep like an ordinary person does. A Sage is aware of himself or herself during sleep, during dream and during wake. There is the one Self that is dreaming. The one Self that is in deep sleep and the one Self that wakes up. And the Sage is the witness to all three states. Even when the Sage is sleeping he's awake. Even when he is in deep sleep he is awake. Even when he is dreaming he is awake. And even when he's in this world he's awake. The witness to this world.

SK: Well in connection with that I have something else to ask you. Would you say that you have...or someone like you, a Sage has as many preferences or dislikes than an ordinary person? (R: No.) Because all of the teachers that I've been around and I assume yourself included, they prefer to be away from a lot of problems, hustle and bustle, a lot of noise that a lot of ordinary people have to go through. So in that sense they would probably be more bothered by a stressful life than other people. Maybe they would be in a position where they wouldn't have to deal with those things but would you be in as much trouble with that sort of thing as any of us?

R: As I mentioned before, there is an appearance of going through certain things that a Sage does. But a Sage doesn't go through anything, a Sage does nothing. A Sage has no body, there is no world, there is no thing. There is nothing going on. Therefore the Sage is only alive because you see him that way. But the Sage himself knows he is not the body, he is not the world, he is not the universe, he is not the experiences. A Sage is always at peace, whether in the market place or in a cave or anywhere else. It is the ajnani or ignorant that sees a Sage going through certain things. The Sage himself is free of everything. There are no experiences left in the Sage. There is emptiness.

SD: It seems that the description of the Jnani that you sometimes have Mary read goes into that completely. (R: Umm.)

SK: Robert I'd just like to expand on what you just said. It's like one not having any interpretation or perception of what seems to be going on. There is no personal attitude or...

R: There is no personal I left. (SK: ...acceptance or a denial or there is no more interpretation to...) Because there is no mind to interpret. The mind that has interpreted has been totally annihilated. The ego does not exist. So there is no faculty to really interpret anything. Except what the Sage does momentarily, from moment to moment. Besides that there is nothing else.

SP: Living without reflection seems to be a process.

R: Living without reflection? Are you speaking of yourself? (SP: When you are living without thinking...unclear...it feels like a process.) Is that the experience you're having? (SP: On occasions.) That's good. (SP: As you say, mind is ...unclear..) Yes. (SP: Mind is quiet when truth...) In reality there is really no mind. Again we should never really think that the mind is a real entity and has to be destroyed. Those are just words. In reality no mind ever existed. This is why this teaching is a contradiction sometimes. We talk about destroying the mind but there is no mind to destroy.

SK: What about the truth so-called? (R: The truth?) Well, I mean what he said that in silence you could see a truth.

R: In the silence the truth will present itself. (SK: Silence is the truth.) Right, if you can really get into the silence that is all you have to do. (SK: Yeah, I mean but who is there to interpret anything or create anything if there is nothing happening?) Of course, that's right.

SP: I can only speak from where I-am as far as getting into an intellectual discussion which is not the truth.

R: Umm, true, the best bet is to keep silent. You can't go wrong if you do that. You can't make a fool out of yourself. (SP: That's why I said the you're ahead of ??? there really is no mind.) There is also nobody trying to get rid of the mind. It's all a game, an illusory game. We get involved in trying to get rid of the mind, get rid of the body. Get rid of the things that never existed to begin with. (SP: If I'm trying to get rid of something I'm not living in the now.) Exactly (SP: It's much more fun being now, to live now.) Of course.

SZ: (question unclear then student repeats for Robert)

R: I didn't quite understand what you said. Do you want to repeat that again? (SZ: Should I repeat the question again?) Yeah. (SZ: In our lives there are many things arising.) Yes. (SZ: The things of the body or the things of the mind. Or things of the world. And it gives us this tendency to follow such things because these things are impermanent.) Yes. (SZ: And our Self is permanent. And if we give up the permanent things we can abide in our unborn Self.) Yes. (SZ: And therefore I think if something arises through the operation of our senses or of our mind then we should abandon the seeking of these things. But in our daily lives we have to use our senses. Then how should we...) (R: function.) (SZ: Yes, how should we not fit in this thing and give up our senses.)

R: What happens is this. As you keep giving up all the reactions to life. As you begin to surrender everything to the one Self. The one Self which is the absolute reality, the pure awareness takes over. And will do whatever you have to do, even better than you can do it yourself. This power that knows the way will take you over completely. And it will speak for you. Do everything for you that you have to do and yet you will feel that you are not the doer. Yet everything will be done perfectly.

Many people are afraid to give up their senses. For they believe that they will turn into a vegetable. But this is not true. You will always function. You will always do what you came to this earth to do. And you will even do it better than you ever can imagine. So do not concern yourself about these things. Simply go within, surrender everything to the Self. Give up everything.

SZ: But in our daily lives we have to also sometimes pay attention to many things. Life requires us to solve many practical problems.

R: Yes of course. But as I said the Self will take over and do all these practical things for you without you believing that you're the doer. Everything will be done. You will see. (SZ: We have to pay attention to many things therefore we cannot give up the tendency to follow the arising things.) As you follow the arising things as you say all of the senses will become destroyed and the Self will take over. And the Self will do the things that has to be done. Everything will be okay. You don't have to worry. (SZ: Do you mean, when I abandon the tendency to fix the things by my attention, the Self will take over and will automatically fulfill all the functions?) Yes, exactly. (SZ: And when things are arising, I follow them or not by my senses?) No, the idea is to get rid of the senses. You do not want to use your senses to do anything. What you should do in your case, is to inquire, "To whom do these things come?" And as they come you say to yourself, "They come to me. I feel these things. Then who am I? What is the source of the I that feels these things?" And the I will disappear one day and you will be completely free.

SZ: Another question is that, our body must be prepared to receive the grace of the liberation? If the body is not prepared then the shock of the grace will cause great harm to our bodies? And does that mean our growth for liberation will take time?

R: If you inquire correctly. Every time a thought comes to you, just like the thought that you just had. If you ask, "To whom does this thought come? Who is thinking these things? To whom do they come? Who do they come to?" and you say, "They come to me." The me you're referring to is the ego, the mind. So you ask further, "What is the source of this ego or the mind? What is the source of the I that thinks all these things?" And you keep still, then slowly but surely the I will begin to be dissolved and the one Self will take over and there will be no problems. (SZ: But when I think about the practical problems of life I must think to solve the problem. Is that true?) You think what about the problem? You have to solve the problem? Do you think you have to solve the problem? (SZ: Yeah.) As long as you're speaking as you are, you're speaking from the senses. So you will have to solve the problem. But if you go beyond the senses by inquiring, "To whom do the senses come?" You will realize that you have no senses whatsoever. And you will be free of solving problems by yourself. Things will come easy for you. Everything will happen like it's supposed to.

See all the questions you're asking is from the sense of your ego, your mind. Get rid of all this and everything will take care of itself.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Sure Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani. Refer to beginning of the book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. We have some prashad?

Ultimate chocolate chip. Mary would like to pass it around?

(passing around prashad as tape ends) [TOC]

PONDER THESE THINGS

5th July, 1992

Robert: It is good to be with you once again, on this wonderful July weekend. I'm so happy you can come.

If you only knew who you were, if you only realized who you really were, what you were, who you are right now, who you've always been, it would make all the fireworks seem like nothing. If you realized your real nature, all of the gods and goddesses would bow to you, would pay homage to you, would worship you, would come to your aid. Krishna, Vishnu, Shiva, Buddha, Jesus, Mohammed, all the Saints throughout the ages would come to you, would bow to you. When you understand that you are the Self, the imperishable Self, the absolute reality, then you realize that all of these things, the goddesses, the gods, comes from your mind.

You are the one. Everything, everyone, is a part of you. When you do not understand your divine nature, you think you are a frail human being, and you worship many gods and goddesses, you pay homage to Saints, Sages. But when you understand who you are, everything changes. You become all-pervasive, infinite like the sky. You are the universe. You are that which has always been.

Do not believe what the world tells you, what the newspapers tell you, what the TV tells you. Separate yourself from all these things. Become free from attachments. The world in itself is neither good nor bad. It is an appearance. You can play in the universe, you can suffer in the universe. It's all how you see it. Do not react to it, whether you're going through good times or bad times. They're both impostors. Look to your Self. You are the one. Everything the senses behold is of the mind. And there is no mind. The mind never existed. Therefore who are you? There are no words to describe who you are, for if I use words to describe it, it would not be that. You are beyond words and thoughts, beyond gods and goddesses, beyond everything and anything that you can ever think about.

Love yourself. When you love yourself, you love the whole universe. Do not think about the world and all of its manifestations. Think of the Self, the one reality, the pure awareness, the sat-chit-ananda. You are that, free.

Forget about the past. It never existed. It cannot hurt you. Forget about karma, samskaras, samsara. Those things are all of the mind. And remember the mind doesn't exist. You are ever so free, so bright and shining.

Yet, what do you think about yourself? What do you believe about yourself? Ponder this. Look at all the years that have gone by, when you've looked at yourself as a person, going through experiences. You've been taught in spiritual life that you have to suffer, work out your karma, go through several experiences, several lives, hundreds of lives, thousands of lives. Yet, to whom does karma exist? To whom does suffering exist? To whom does the world exist? Only to no mind. For you can come to the conclusion yourself that there is no mind, there never was a mind, there never will be a mind, you will see who suffers? No one. All is well. There are no mistakes. You're in your right place, right now.

When I say you are in your right place, do not think about where you appear to be, whether rich or poor, sick or healthy, sad or happy. This is not your right place. Your right place is devoid of all these things. Your right place is boundless space, choice-less awareness. You are the God that you've always been looking for. You and you alone are the Sage, and the saint, and the awakened being, that you've been striving to attain. You are that right now. This is your right place, and there is no other place.

Yet you say the world appears, conditions appear, situations appear, and I ask you again, "To whom do they appear?" To your so called ego, to your mind. But in truth you have no ego and you have no mind. Therefore nothing appears. It is said that Brahman appears as the world. God appears as the world. Yet why would Brahman, God, want to do this, to appear as the world? The truth is there is only Brahman, the absolute reality. There is no world.

Yet you say, "I experience the world every day. How can you tell me there is no world?" To understand this you have to go back to the dream experience. When you have a dream, good or bad, as far as you are concerned this is reality. The dream is your reality, no matter what it is. And no matter who in the dream tells you that this is not a real world, you will argue with them.

You will say, "Yes, this is real. I'm going through this experience here. I'm getting married. My whole family is here, hundreds of guests. There's a big reception going on. How can you tell me this is a dream? I'll even pinch you and show you this is not a dream." Yet, this is a dream pinch. The whole thing is a dream. And even though you do not believe it you awaken, and it's gone.

The question is, where did it come from to begin with? Where did it go? Was it external from you? It was not external. If it was external you would have a battle on your hands, to overcome the dream world. But the dream came out of your mind. It is your creation, so it appears. But if it were a real creation, it would last. It wouldn't vanish when you awaken.

Now take this world. Most of you here would argue with me and you'd tell me, "The world is real, because I see it, I feel it, I go through certain experiences." Yet you do the same thing in your dream. There's no difference. You would argue with me here just like you would argue with me in the dream. You can walk over right now and pinch me, and I would feel it. But this is all part of the dream.

Therefore you have to inquire within yourself, "If the dream world is a dream, if the real world is a dream, so-to-speak, then who am I? Where did I come from? What am

I?" There is no answer to this question, for the answer is an experience. The answer is an awakening. The answer is liberation. The answer is realization. The finite mind cannot comprehend this, so all the words we use are fruitless. All of my talking is a waste of time. Everything I say is nonsense, for you are merely listening to words. What good do the words do you?

You will leave when I'm finished and go home, and continue your life as it has always been. And you'll either say, "That was a nice talk," or "I don't believe a word he said." But where will you be? In the same old place, in the same old maya. Playing your games. Going through your experiences that you always go through. Saying, "This is good and this is bad. This is right and this is wrong. This I like and this I hate. Of this I'm afraid, of this I'm not afraid." And all of your prejudices, all of your obnoxious living, all of the things of this world will be carried on your shoulders.

Some of you will believe you have to bring peace to this world, and you join peace organizations. This is commendable to an extent, but it's virtually impossible to bring peace to the world. You cannot. Has anyone ever brought peace to the world? The only way you can bring peace to this world is through awakening. As you awaken yourself, you will see you are the Self of the universe. The whole world is your projection. It is you who caused the homeless, and man's inhumanity to man, and the dastardly things that go on in this world. Where else do they come from if not out of you? Otherwise they would just appear. But remember nothing is external. Everything that happens is a part of you. You are the one.

Find your Self. Look to your Self. Dive deeper, deeper within yourself. Try to understand who you are by diving deep within yourself. Do not look to man. Do not look to the universe. Do not look to things. Look to your Self. Only you can know yourself. No one can really help you. In the last analysis you have to give up all reactions to this world. Whether you are enjoying yourself in this world, or you are having problems with the world, you have to look at it as a dream, as something that appears.

Surrender yourself totally. How do you surrender yourself? By letting go, letting go of all the concepts, letting go of all the ideas, letting go of the beliefs, letting go of all your prejudices, all of your emotions. Just drop it. If you can do this, all of your sadhana, all of your meditations, all of your prayers, are no longer necessary.

To whom are you praying? What is the meditation doing for you? If it makes the mind still and quiet, that's good. Yet if you simply awaken to your true nature, to your swarrupa, there's no need for meditation, there is no need for prayer, there's no need for anything, if you live in the moment, spontaneously, and hold on to the truth, the truth being I am Brahman, I am the absolute reality, I am nirvana, I am that.

Ponder these things. You have never been what you appear to be. The sky appears blue, but upon investigation you will find out that there's no sky and there's no blue. The rope appears as a snake. Upon investigation you will realize there's no snake. It is only a rope. The water appears in the mirage. Upon investigation you will find there's no water.

In the same way you appear as a body. You appear as a mortal. But upon investigation you will find that you are not a body, you are not mortal. You are beyond mortality. You are beyond anything that you can think about. You are beyond all concepts, all ideas.

Consequently the best course for you is silence. There's absolutely nothing to debate. There's really nothing to think about. There's nothing to argue about. In the silence everything will be revealed to you. All you really have to do is to keep still. I know that's hard for some of you, for you keep chatting away all your life. Yet if you would learn to keep still, you would make tremendous spiritual progress.

Feel the stillness within you.

(silence)

When your mind begins to think, stop it, catch it, put an end to it.

Many of you are still under the impression that you come to hear lectures, talks. Let me ask you, how many lectures, how many talks have you been to all of your life? And what has it done for you? It simply adds more confusion. Always remember what you are trying to do. You're not trying to add more knowledge to your ignorance. You're trying to empty yourself of all your knowledge, all of your ignorance, everything that you have accumulated. You want to become empty.

Yet most people seem to go to different teachers, read many books, and they add on. They keep adding, adding, adding, adding, adding. Yet the day must come in your life, when you stand naked before God, so-to-speak, when you have no crutches to hold onto. All the books are gone, there are no more teachers for you, there's no one to ask for help, there's no one to ask if you're on the right path. It is then that your sadhana actually begins.

Ponder this very well. Your sadhana, your spiritual practice does not begin when you've gone to many teachers, and you've read many books. It actually begins when you give up everything. That's when real sadhana begins, when you have surrendered everything, when you've emptied yourself of all knowledge, all desires for liberation. When you have become an empty shell, then your spiritual life begins. Until that time you're only playing games with yourself.

You and I know so many people who can recite scriptures backwards and frontwards, quotations from everybody on this earth. They're walking encyclopedias. But do they have moksha? Do they have liberation? How can you, when you're so full up with garbage?

When you have no one to turn to, nothing to read, you will turn within yourself, and you will begin to inquire within yourself, "Who needs to read all these books? Who needs to go to all these teachers? Who needs to ask other people for help? Who am I? What is the source of the I? What am I?" Remember you're asking yourself all of this. "Where did I come from? Where was I before I was born? Where do I go after so called death? What is the purpose of life?" All of these answers are within yourself.

Yet there are very few of us who are sincere enough to completely let go of everything. We're afraid to do this. We think if we let go, we will turn into a vegetable. We will lose our friends, our families. We will become worthless. Nothing can be further from the truth. Your real Self is no thing at all. The real you is nothing. I use the term nothing here to denote it is not something. It is no thing. You come from nothing and you're going back to nothing.

Absolute nothingness is your real nature. Rejoice.

Ponder these things.

(silence)

We will now play stump the guru. We have written questions in the bag, I think?

I forgot to pass the basket around. (students give questions to Robert) Thank you.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Only one question Robert. Okay: Why do you use the word "refuse" as in, "As long as you refuse to awaken," because refuse to me seems a deliberate action and noone is doing this knowingly, deliberately?

A: It's a semantical term. What difference would it make what word I use, refuse, don't want to, it's all the same. What I really mean is you were more eager to play in the world of attachment than you are to let go. This is what I'm talking about when I use the word refuse. You have a choice. As a matter of fact the only choice you really have. Everything else is preordained. You have the choice to either surrender, let go and dive deep within the Self. Or not to do it and play in the world and get involved in things in places and people. The choice is yours.

So once in a while I'll tell you, "Why do you refuse to let go? Why do you refuse to become enlightened?" and you say, "I'm not refusing to become enlightened." But take a look at your life, see what you're involved in. See what you're attached to. See how you're tied down to this world of maya. The things that you really believe about the world and people and places and things. Therefore you refuse to let go.

Again it's only when you give it all up that something will happen to you, not by adding to yourself. You don't need any more experiences. You want to free yourself from experiences. Become totally empty. Totally clear and when you do you will be free.

Is that another question?

Q: This isn't a question Robert. I think someone's just put a number of these in the basket and it says, "I realize that everything, everything, excluding nothing is nothing, I realize this in my heart." (R: Good.)

SM: There are a number of these in the basket. (SV: That is from a transcript, it's a beautiful transcript.) Oh is it. Did you put it in there Fred? (SV: Yeah.) Oh right, Fred put it in.

R: If you would like to ask a question feel free to do so. Feel free to say anything. Make a loud noise.

SY: Robert can you explain the I-am meditation and how does one know if one is ready for that?

R: The I-am meditation is for everybody. You do not really have to be ready for it. It's a very simple thing for you to do. What you do is you relax. Surrender your mind to the Self by just letting go, watching the mind. You begin by practicing vipassana meditation. You observe your mind, your thoughts, your feelings, your emotions, just watch, for a couple of moments.

And then you ask yourself the question, "Who is watching? Who is the witness?" and you say, "I am." With your respiration, you inhale you say, "I," you exhale you say, "am." What this does it quiets the mind. Makes you very peaceful. Makes you go into the next step. Makes you one pointed. It's a very powerful meditation.

It's for those people who wish to meditate. Whenever you meditate there is an object for your meditation. Either a saint or a Sage or a guru or a flower or a mountain or a blade of grass or a candle. Meditation always needs a subject and an object. Yet the highest form of meditation is the I-am meditation because I-am is the first name of God. "I Am That I Am."

Consequently when you practice I-am meditation you become very quiet and peaceful and wonderful things ensue.

THERE IS REALLY NOTHING YOU CAN DO

9th July, 1992

Robert: Good evening. It is good to be with you again. I hope you were meditating instead of thinking. Most people like to think. It is your thoughts that keep you back from reality. There's absolutely nothing to think about. All is well forever.

To attain self-realization, there is really nothing you have to do. It does not require puja, it does not require meditation, it does not require prayer, it does not require yoga. It does not require anything, for self-realization is your natural state to begin with. Therefore there is nothing you have to do to attain it. It's simple. Yet there are three things that you should remember. One is just to be here. Two is to listen to the words with discrimination and intelligence. Three is to listen to the silence between the words, which is the highest and best teaching.

When I say just be here, this is exactly what I mean. Just be here. You are already enlightened, you are already realized. There's nothing to think about, no one to see. Just be here. When you are here, the no thing of the Sage becomes the no thing of you. In other words all things dissolve. All things evaporate. By things I'm referring to thoughts, emotions, fears, doubts, superstitions. They all evaporate when you're here. There's really nothing you have to do.

When you hear me speak the words, try to discriminate correctly. Try to understand what the words really mean. If you are able to discern the words and discriminate correctly, you will be awakened, liberated. And of course, the silence between the words are the most important. For it is in the silence that reality exists. Reality is the silence. There's nothing else.

You believe you have to go through rituals and perform spiritual disciplines, practice yoga, meditate. For whom are these things? These things are not for you. They're for the ego, for the mind. Forget about all that. Simply do not think about the past or the future. Stay centered in the now and be yourself. There is nothing profound in the whole universe that you have to learn. There are no special classes, or special meaning to words, or sacred hymns, anything else you have to remember. All you have to do is be your Self. When you are yourself, fear and doubt leave you. When you are yourself, superstition melts away. When you are your Self you are extremely happy all the time. You have peace. You have joy, forever, unending.

This is what you are really looking for, isn't it? We're really searching for peace and joy and happiness, that does not come to an end. Yet when I tell you this is your real nature, this is what you really are, you do not quite understand this.

The substratum of all existence, the source of all creation, is consciousness. Consciousness is simply another word for eternal happiness, for eternal peace and joy. That is you. You are that. You never were anything else.

Yet, because you think, you continue to express certain emotions, you always want to take some kind of action and do things, this is what keeps you back. Desire for anything covers self-realization, hides liberation, like the clouds hide the sun. A mirror cannot see itself. It can only see its reflection. Therefore you cannot see yourself, but you see yourself in others. When you look at your world, you're seeing yourself. It is simply a reflection of you, nothing more and nothing less. Therefore, if you're feeling love, if you're seeing peace, if you're seeing and feeling harmony, you're seeing yourself. You can only see in the world what you are, nothing else.

So think for a moment. What kind of world do you see? What kind of world are you involved in? It is always you, for you are the only one that exists. No one exists but you. There is only one, and you are that.

Now you ask, "But what about everybody else? How can I be the only one when I see millions of people? I see all kinds of animals, everything. How can I be the only one?" Well, when you go back to the dream state, there's only one person dreaming, isn't there? And in the dream you see thousands of people. You're involved with millions of people perhaps. You are involved with places, persons and things, but you're having the dream, aren't you? When you wake up, they're gone and you are yourself.

Liberation is like that. Right now you believe there are many people, there are others, all kinds of things going on in this world, good and bad, right and wrong, happy and sad, rich or poor, healthy or sick, and what is happening is you become attached to these things. You're identifying with the wrong things. You are identifying with the external dream instead of identifying with the Self.

Identifying with the Self is like waking up from the dream. When you're having a dream, and people are getting killed in your dream, perhaps you're a soldier or a nurse, or doctor, or a maid, they have all kinds of experiences. But when you awaken it was all a dream.

Such is this kind of life that you're living now. You believe this is your life and you're living an external life. You're involved in all sorts of things. You react to these things, as if they were real. The greater you react to things, the greater you're pulled into maya and the illusion of this universe, and you get deeper involved, deeper involved, deeper involved, until the time comes when you become tired of this whole game. You start to search. You start to look. You search within yourself. You begin to inquire, "To whom does this illusion come?" You begin to inquire, "Who's having these experiences? Who's going through all these things?" And you inwardly realize you are, "I am." So you inquire further, "Well, who am I? Who am I? Am I these experiences I am having? Am I my work? Am I my body? Am I my mind? What am I? Where did I come from?" As you inquire deeper and deeper, you will one day feel something deep within you as an ineffable light, where the whole world will be gone, and you will be home free.

When I say you'll be home free, I mean you will appear to be the way you are now today, but your entire reasoning system has changed. You no longer feel yourself as being the person you were, even though people see you as the same person. You have become the mirror instead of the reflection. You are identified with the mirror or with the Self, knowing beyond the shadow of a doubt that everything in this world, everything in this universe, is a superimposition upon the Self.

It is like paper and the print on the paper. When you read a newspaper you look at the print. You do not think of the paper which the print is on. You were concentrating on the print only, the words. Yet without the paper, there would not be any print, don't you see? So it is with the Self, with reality. Reality is like the paper. The print is like the people, places and things on the paper. Only you are the paper and you identify with the paper, you know you're the paper, and the print has nothing to do with you. It cannot influence you or do anything to you, for you know without you there's no universe, there's no ink, there's no words, there's no alphabet, no alphabetical letters. You have become free.

Now why do we want to become free? Again look at the experiences you've had in this world, good and bad, happy and sad. You're growing older all the time. There will come a time in your life when you give up the body, and you have no idea what's going on. But when you know who you are and you realize this truth, you will know, not believe, but you will know you were never born, you've never had any experiences, and you do not dissolve, when you die, so-to-speak.

You'll understand that you are pure awareness, effortless, choice-less, pure awareness. You are consciousness, the absolute reality, the Brahman, the ultimate reality, the I am that I am, bliss. You will feel an ineffable bliss that is beyond description, an unalloyed happiness that you can't even imagine exists. Yet all the words that I'm using will not really come into your mind, because you'll have no mind. There will be no words. You will just be these things that I am talking about, and you will be that forever.

When you drop your body, as far as you're concerned, there never was a body to drop, a body never existed for you. But to others they'll see a body dropping. Others will see all kinds of things, human things, physical things, mental things, but you have overcome. There's no longer anything that you have to experience. You are free, totally, absolutely free, free in beauty, free in love, free in joy, free in happiness, total freedom. Yet you will not use these words. I'm using the words because I have to explain to you what happens, but these words are inadequate. You are God, omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent.

I'm not referring to the you that you feel you are right now, the human being. Never think of yourself as a human being, being God, for a human being can never be God, it's impossible. But the truth about this is you're not human. You're inhuman, and you take the mind off yourself, your body, and its manifestations, and you start to identify with consciousness. And you do this by inquiring, "Who am I? What am I? Where did I come from?"

Yet as I started the meeting today, I said there's really nothing you have to do. There's really absolutely nothing you have to do. All this talking is to make you see that. It is only when you do not understand what I'm saying to you, "There's nothing you have to do," that you have to practice self-inquiry. You have to practice going within. But if you could only listen to my words when I say you're already free, there's absolutely nothing you have to do, it is effortless, choice-less.

Feel this right now. Feel the nothingness which you are. By nothingness I mean there's no thing going on within you. There's nothing happening. There is no you, there's no mind, there's no body, there's no thoughts, there's nobody wanting to become enlightened, there's nobody wanting anything. Feel this. As you let go, let go of all your thoughts, that have been hounding you for years, past experiences, karma, samskaras, doesn't exist any more for you. There is nothing. Feel that nothing.

(silence)

Feel free to ask questions.

SF: I had an observation I'd like to check on. It seems that everything in duality is a creation of the mind, since the mind is unreal, all creation is unreal. And of no great value. And if this is so my observation also is in duality. The creation of the mind, it's unreal has no value and so that puts me right back on square one?

R: On the contrary. As you begin to observe and watch yourself thinking about these things, as you observe yourself and doing what you just said, you will begin to realize that there is something watching you doing what you're doing. There is something beyond that in other words. It allows you to do what you do.

That something is consciousness. It observes you reacting in this way to the things we're talking about. But in reality there is only consciousness. And you do not exist, nor does the object exist. There is only one. Which is beyond words and thoughts. There is only the one who appears to be the witness. So your reaction, it sees the objects of your reaction. So when you get the mind thinking about consciousness by not thinking at all, by just being, everything clears up, everything is transcended and you become totally, absolutely free.

Every experience that comes to you is of the mind. Everything that comes into yourself is the mind. We want to annihilate the mind. We want to destroy the mind. The mind has to be completely annihilated, totally transmuted and destroyed. And you do this by doing nothing, just being yourself, by spiritual discernment, by discrimination. By pondering the things I'm talking about. And if that is too easy for you, then practice self-inquiry.

Inquire, "Who thinks this way? To whom do these thoughts come? Who wants to know these things?" And you will say, "I do." Then inquire, "Who am I?" What you are really saying is, "What is the source of the I? What is the source of I who has these experiences?" As you inquire this way the I will disappear, dissolve and you will be home free.

(silence)

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Sure Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. We have prashad. Who else? The entire teaching is in the prashad. So anything that you didn't get you will get when you eat the prashad.

SH: Here have some, have the entire teaching.

R: We have chocolate orange snaps...

INTRODUCTION - IT'S ALL A COSMIC JOKE

by Edward Muzika.

Ed: Robert was a very unusual spiritual teacher. He did not want to be one at all. He liked being left alone to walk with his little dog Dimitri or sit in his backyard doing nothing. Yet he was forced to teach. His Parkinson's disease progressed to the point he could not do physical work any more. And needed more and more to be taken care of.

Twice a week we'd have satsang. This talk occurred sometime during July of 1990. We were meeting at the house of Henry Denison in hollywood hills at the time. Robert's satsangs had grown from maybe 7 or 8 people in 1989 to approximately 30 at the time of this talk. Satsang never got much bigger than that until the year before he left for Sedona in 1995. The following talk is a mere shadow of the actual satsang. As many as 4 or 5 people would be recording Robert's talk at the same time. He would be covered with microphones and wires. He once joked that he felt that he was an electric chair.

Several places in the tape you will hear several tape recorder popping sounds as tapes are being changed.

Each satsang usually had the same format. A twenty minute period of Hindu style chanting which Robert loved. A reading from the Ashtravakra Gita. The talk itself, usually on a theme. A question and answer session which robert called, "Stump The Guru." Then more chanting and another reading from the Ashtravakra Gita or from Roberts own, "Confessions Of The Jnani." Finally there would be Darshan. Where each attendee would go up to Robert in traditional guru-disciple fashion, as was done around his own teacher, Ramana Maharshi fifty years before. During darshan desert would be served called prashad.

None of this non-talk period was usually recorded. We were recording to make transcripts without thoughts in mind to preserve the ambience of the entire satsang as a whole. However, as words in Robert's mind was the enemy in a sense what is preserved here is only the outer teachings. Not the immediacy of his presence in immersion in the silence and sweet chanting of the satsang. Nor does the tape provide any indication of the power of darshan and looking into Robert's intense gaze.

Robert's talks would vary from being intensely serious to intensely humorous. One never knew what might happen. This is one of his more humorous talks which I entitled, "Cosmic Joke." It is shorter than most of his talks which would only mean that not all of the question and answer section was recorded.

Usually satsang lasted about two hours. The talk that you are about to hear is forty five minutes long and to me in retrospect this is not the most powerful or interesting forty five minutes of that satsang. The transcript of my introduction can be found on:

IT'S ALL A COSMIC JOKE

Robert: Good afternoon. It is good to be with you once again, this lovely rainy afternoon. Isn't it wonderful to live in LA? Earthquakes, rain in July, where else can you get this? It's all free. I welcome you with all my heart.

There is no real purpose for you being alive. Ponder this. There's no special or real purpose for you being alive. What are you here for anyway? What has man actually done for this earth, or for the universe, or for anybody? Who do we think we are? We're nothing. We have no reason to exist. And, as a matter of fact, you do not exist. You have never really existed. But when you take a look at history you will see, what has mankind really achieved, with all its Saints and Sages and everybody else? Nothing has happened. Civilizations have come, civilizations have gone, and where are we now? No where.

We think we're so important. We're born, it seems, we go through experiences, we have a profession, make a lot of money perhaps, then we get old and we die. But go deeper than that. What is the real purpose? There is no purpose. It's all a cosmic joke.

There's no reason for you to be alive, to be here. This may sound strange, it may sound like an insult. It is, it is the truth and the truth hurts. Really, you think you're so important, that you've come to earth to do certain things. You ask somebody, "Why are you here?" and they say, "Well I've come here to accomplish great deeds. I've come here to get enlightened, to find myself." That's not true. The enlightenment is already here. It doesn't need you. You are not wanted by anything or by anybody. You're a complete failure. There's no valid reason for being.

If you think this through you'll see I'm right. In truth you do not really exist anyway. But the illusion of your existence makes you think that you're important, that you're somebody. This is why we talk about being nobody so much, for there is no body. Yet, no matter how I may state this, you appear to be real. You appear to have a body. You appear to go to work. You appear to get up in the morning, you appear to go to sleep, you appear to eat, and you're going through all these rituals and all this nonsense, and this is going to last, and continue. But as you know, soon you'll be six feet under, or you'll be burnt, or whatever you do with yourself.

So what good are you? What do you want? This is why it's important to wake up, because you are never asleep. So who wakes up? Therefore nothing is important, but you think it's important. As long as you think it's important, you give it power, and it increases the intensity of humanhood, making you feel more and more, so called, alive. Making believe that you are living in this world, accomplishing great deeds, doing things.

Therefore, the beginning of wisdom is the understanding that there's no wisdom. There's no body to have any wisdom. Can't you see, the more you try to analyze things, the more you use your brain to function on this plane of existence, the more you put into what we call maya, into nothing, into illusion, all of your dreams, all of your hopes, all of your ambitions, are down in the toilet? There's nothing left for you. There is nothing that you have to become or be. Think of all the people running around looking for liberation, looking for realization. Who wants to be liberated? The ego. There is no ego. There is no one to be liberated, but you continue doing it. You continue carrying on your deeds, you continue believing that you exist.

Remember, never put lion's milk in a clay pot.

So why are you here? You want a teaching. You want a lesson. You want a mantra. You're looking for a way out. All this keeps you back. Your searching, your seeking keeps you back. It doesn't make you fulfilled. It doesn't do anything for you. Awakening is a joke. Liberation is a joke. My sitting here talking to you is a joke, for you think you have to find something, you think you have to achieve something, you think you have to become something. This is what the scriptures mean by attachment. You're attached to your mind, and its false beliefs. The so-called mind tells you that something is this way and something is that way, this is good and this is bad, this is right and this is wrong, and you react to it, bringing more problems into your so called existence.

But, wouldn't it be beautiful if you could just awaken one morning and realize you don't exist, that you never existed, and no one exists, there's no existence whatsoever? Then where would you be? Who knows? But as long as you believe that you exist, you're going to stick up for your rights, you're going to fight for survival, you're going to seek wisdom. It is all very funny to me. Even when I tell you to wake up, there's really no one to wake up, for no one's ever gone to sleep. To wake up you have to be asleep. Who sleeps? You may say, "The body, the mind sleeps," but there is no body, there is no mind. There never was. All the teachings you've been through are a waste of time, the struggling, running all over the world looking for Masters and teachers, reading all these scriptures in detail, to what avail? Why do you think you need these things?

All you really have to do is understand what I am talking about. Ponder what I say. And then forget it. Do not hold on to thoughts, to words, to messages. The reason the bird sings beautifully, and exists so beautifully, is because it doesn't know it's a bird. It doesn't know it's anything. It has no idea what it is. We give it a name, bird. We could have given it the name cow. We call a bird a bird and we call a cow a cow. We give names to all these things, but these things just are. They aren't here, they aren't there. They aren't good, they aren't bad. They just are, and the same with you. You are not this and you are not that, you just are. There is nothing you have to do, absolutely nothing you have to do.

Think of all the years you've spent studying. Where's it all going to lead? What will become of it? You may have altruistic attitudes, believe that you're doing good for the world, for the future of this world, but this world has no future. It never did, it never will.

As I mentioned in the beginning, we have had millions of civilizations on this earth, they've come and they've gone. Civilizations that surpassed where we are now. It's all gone.

What I'm trying to say is you can't do any good for anybody. Everything is right just the way it is. Nothing in this world needs improvement. The improvement idea comes into your own mind. You believe you are a person, you believe you think, then the ideas come to you, what you can do to improve the world, and you try, and you try, and you try, to no avail. You must know yourself as no thing. Do not look at yourself as something.

Always bear in mind, there is absolutely nothing you have to do. This is how you become happy, peaceful, joyous, for when there is nothing in the mind, happiness itself becomes prevalent. Awaken from this mortal dream. When I say this ask yourself, "Who has to awaken? Who is there who has to awaken?" The way you make progress, if there's any progress to be made, is by contradicting everything I say.

Again, when I say, "Wake up," ask yourself, "who is there to wake up?" When I say, "Drop everything," inquire, "who's to drop everything?" In other words, what you're doing is you're saying there never was anybody or anything that has to wake up or to drop. Nothing like that exists. There's no one who exists like that.

Can't you see now why there is nothing to say, really? Can you see all the words are redundant, superfluous? We can play all sorts of games if we want to, do all sorts of mantras, tantric techniques. We can do all of these things, but for what, to what avail? You just have to know that you are nobody, there's absolutely nothing to do, and no one exists. This relieves you of everything, doesn't it? It relieves you of all responsibility to yourself and to the world.

Again, what I'm telling you will not turn you into a vegetable, where you just sit on a log and contemplate your navel. If you're listening to me correctly, you will do whatever you're doing now but you'll be happier than you've ever been in your life, because you'll realize that it doesn't matter. You'll know there's nobody really doing anything. Yet you will be doing the work that you usually do, if you want to do that. You will appear to be living a human existence, but you will know there's nobody left to do anything. The doer is gone. There's no doer. The doer has been completely wiped out.

Some of you still believe that if you become this way you'll become so sarcastic and belligerent, you will not care, you will not be loving and kind, but this is not true. On the contrary, as you drop everything, as you let go of all your preconceived ideas, your dogmas, as you forget all of your rituals and all the things you've been doing all your life, what we call love begins to function as you. What we call compassion begins to function as you. Loving kindness, peace, these attributes will automatically take over, for you have lost all fear. When you have lost all fear for existence, love automatically takes over. But as long as you fear existence and you think something's wrong somewhere, then the mind blows up all kinds of pictures, and you have to go out and defend yourself and do things, for your own self-aggrandizement. (pause) Never put goat's milk in a wooden pot.

(silence)

It's time to play stump the guru. We have many stumpers today.

SD: We're stumped people.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: You have said that we are creating the dream both sleeping and waking. In the past 24 hours I have started to live that. Not just know it intellectually. And really see that everyone in my life is really me. It is totally freeing, thank you. Love Howard.

R: You're welcome. That's not a stumper. (SM: It's a statement.) Next case.

Q: Alright. When you refer to the entire universe as disappearing when one is asleep don't you mean for him or her only? Another person could walk in and see you sleeping or whatever. The same universe that the one who is sleeping witnessed are created, any comments?

A: Yes, how do you know this is happening when you are asleep? When you're asleep you're not aware of anything. There is no universe. You say maybe a cat may come in or someone may observe you sleeping or life is going on while you're sleeping. You don't know this. For there is no one to say when you're sleeping this is happening. When you are in sound asleep, as far as you're concerned you are dead. There is no universe, you're out of it completely.

The cat that may walk in or the person that walks in does not exist as far as you're concerned. You are not alive to this universe, to this world when you are sleeping in deep sleep. This is the way death appears to be. When you decide to leave your body, people are still doing things but it has absolutely nothing to do with you.

(someone makes a sound)

Thank you. (Students laugh) For everything is your dream. And when you're in deep sleep you're in between dreams. So there is nothing happening for you. You see what I mean? When you're dreaming you create a new world. With all kinds of people and all kinds of conditions. And you wake up, you wake up to this world and this world appears real to you. But when you go to sleep again you do not dream you usually wake up to this world. So they're both gone, they don't exist, they never existed.

The difference between the Sage and the average person is the Sage is living the waking dream. The Sage appears to be dreaming just like you do only the Sage is in the sleeping state, so-to-speak. Where there is no dream going on in either world. There is no dreamworld, there is no this world. This is also a dreamworld. The Sage is able to see this clearly. That there is only the one and there is nothing else. There is no dream world and there is no waking world, which is also a dream world. You have that experience too every night when you go into deep sleep. Only you're not awake to deep sleep. Whereas the Sage is awake to the deep sleep state and the fourth state of existence. After waking, sleeping and deep sleep.

Q: Beloved Robert, could you talk about the necessity of the teacher for full self-realization and how the relationship between the teacher and the student works.

A: The teacher is really yourself. You have created the teacher to wake you up. The teacher would not be here if you were not dreaming about the teacher. You have created a teacher out of your mind in order to awaken you to yourself to see that there is no teacher, there is no world, there is no universe, there is no God, there is nothing. You've done this all by yourself, congratulations. So this is your dream. This is what you're dreaming right now. There is a teacher sitting in front of you, explaining all these things to you. That you have to awaken sooner or later. But if you go further than that you'll see that in truth you are already awake. Then all of the rest will disappear. But while this is going on there is a relationship, a sacred relationship between the student and the teacher.

For the game that you're playing, that you've created yourself is again; You have created this teacher to be your teacher to teach you to wake up, but you're already awake but you don't know it. So you have to have a teacher to wake you up. The teacher gives you teachings and gives you grace and lets you understand that you're already awake, that you're at peace and you take care of the teacher, physically, financially and otherwise. It's all a reciprocal game. But it's your game, it's your dream, it's what you're doing. Therefore awaken now and be free. Next case.

SM: That's it Robert. (R: That's it?) Umm-hmm.

R: Nobody has stumped the guru yet. Does anybody have anything they'd like to say or add? (SF: Yeah I've got something to say.) Good, you're a lot of fun Fred. (SF: For a long time after I got myself sober I had dreams where I was drinking. And they're really, they're bad dreams. They can be nightmares. But when I woke up, I'd say, "Thank God this is just a dream." And I wonder when we really wake up it'd be a similar feeling about the waking state?) (R: Exactly.) Oh thank God. (students laugh) Last time I had one I was shaking like this. It took ten minutes to realize that it had been a dream. But I had a feeling it would be a semblance...

R: That is a similar experience you awaken to this. But while you are here do not think the world is good or bad. It's okay to be in this world dreaming like you are, there is absolutely nothing wrong with that. Enjoy it. Take the good out of it. (SF: It's like differentiating between good and bad, it's judging?) But what I mean by "take the good out of it," I mean take the sat-chit-ananda out of it. (SF: Oh yeah.) Discernment, but do not hate the world. All is well.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani.

SM: Sure thing Robert, I'll have this memorized one of these days.

R: Then we'll change it.

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.) We have some delicious prashad.

Prepared by our own chef.

WHO WERE YOU PRIOR TO CONSCIOUSNESS?

16th July, 1992

Robert: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening. It is a pleasure to be with you once again. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. Everyone is in their right place.

The question arises, who were you prior to consciousness? Who were you prior to relative consciousness?

If you search deeply within yourself you will see that you were pure awareness. Pure awareness without a body, without any form whatsoever. And yet like the screen and the images on the screen an image appears on pure awareness which is relative existence.

Where does the image come from? It comes from your karma, from your mind that doesn't exist. Yet somehow you've been mesmerized into believing you're an image rather than the screen or pure awareness. You therefore forget about the screen or pure awareness you appear to take on body after body after body after body. In this realm of relativity everything is preordained. Everything is predetermined.

You therefore appear on earth as a new born babe. You may last one day, a week, a month, a year, ten years, twenty years, fifty years, eighty years, ninety years. You don't know. In other words you don't know when it will be the last day on this earth plane. Therefore the question is, what are you doing with your life while you seem to be breathing? As long as you believe that you are human, that you are the body, the mind, you call this your life. What are you doing with it? What do you do with yourself everyday? If you understood that what you call the material life does not really exist. It's phenomena, superimposition, on the Self, on pure awareness.

If you were able to comprehend this you would immediately drop the body as it appears and become your true Self which is consciousness pure awareness. Yet when I say, "Drop the body," you would drop it. But to others you would appear to others the same as you were before. By dropping the body, in this instance I mean you would realize and know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you never were a body to begin with. You are not the body nor the mind. Yet simultaneously you appear to be a body to others. They refer to a person like this as a Sage or a Jnani. One who has transcended the world, transcended the bodily form, yet still appears in a bodily form. But the average person does not know about these things. The average person only identifies with the bodily form and that is where the trouble begins.

For if you identify with a bodily form you have to go through the sufferings, the longings, the trials and tribulations of the world in which you think you live. Which is the earth plane as far as this is concerned. You have forgotten, you do not realize that what you call the earth plane is only an extension of yourself. If you did not exist as the body there would be no earth plane, no universe. There would be no God, no one longing for realization, no one illusioned, no ignorance, no enlightenment. You would be pure awareness, effortless, choice-less, pure awareness. This is what you really are.

You are not where you appear to be. You never were and you never will be. But I must tell you again that as long as you identify with the body and you identify with the body by reacting to things. You identify with the body when you feel fears. When you feel frustrated. When you feel disillusioned. When you feel there's anything wrong anywhere or anything right anywhere. Then what you feel you create. And they call this a creation of the mind.

You have created a mind for yourself that you believe is real. And this mind appears to be very very powerful. That is why things appear real to you. This is the reason why you feel things and you see things and you react to things. For the mind appears to be very powerful. But all you've got to do is to remember that the mind is creative but you are not the mind. Therefore nothing is creative and creation doesn't exist. If you begin to see this for yourself even just a little bit things begin to happen within yourself. Changes begin to take place. You notice the things that used to disturb you no longer have the power to do this. You begin to see that people, places and things that you reacted to have stopped you begin to slow down. You find that you're becoming happier within yourself for no reason whatsoever.

You find that you're at peace. At peace with the mineral kingdom. With the vegetable kingdom. With the animal kingdom. And with the higher kingdoms. You have no problems with anything. But everything still exists to you. Therefore you go deeper. You turn within. Dive deep within yourself. And the deeper you dive the greater the freedom that ensues. The point I'm trying to make is use your time allotted to you in this body wisely. Use the time that you have here very wisely. You should act like this is the last hour that you have on this earth. What would you do with your time if you knew you only an hour left on this earth?

All of you here have spiritual training of some kind. So you'd make peace with your maker. You would sit down in meditation and spend the last hour going within. Those of you who are in this room. We're not talking about the average person in the street who would buy one more lottery ticket. Because you never know in an hour they can win the lottery even though they are not going to be here anymore. Or one more bottle of beer. But I'm sure most of you, or all of you would sit in meditation for that hour, the last hour on this earth.

What I'm saying to you is this. You must begin to do these things anyway. As if it is the last hour for you on this earth. You must become intensely joyous, happy, passionately god conscious, by turning within with passion, with love. For you realize if you do not have a semblance of God realization karmically you will be drawn again and again and again to bodies. Perhaps in different planets, different dimensions you will take on a body of some kind and you will go through experience after experience after experience.

You have to vehemently make up your mind to remove all the doubts and suspicions and aggravations and nonsensical thinking, trying to understand your divinity. Trying to realize the truth about yourself. Of who you really are, what you really are. In reality none of these things exist. In reality none of these things are really happening. In reality everything that I've been explaining to you doesn't even exist. Yet it exists to you. You believe it strongly. Therefore you've got to do something about it. This is the most important thing you can do with your body on this earth. As long as you believe you are a body and you have a mind that thinks you have to use your mind that thinks to go deeper, deeper within yourself. Where there is no mind. You can use any method that you like to do this.

You can use pranayama if you so desire. There are two types of pranayama. One is controlling the breath and the other is watching the breath. You can do this. You can practice witness consciousness, being the witness to all the happenings and not reacting to it. And if you're so inclined you can practice self-inquiry. You can practice a mantra. You can practice japa, repeating God's name over and over again. What I'm trying to say is it doesn't really matter what you do. What matters is that you do something to get you out of this mess you're in. Believing that you are human and that you have a body and a mind and that you exist. Of course my favorite method is self-inquiry. Self-inquiry goes right to the heart of the matter and frees you totally from the belief that you are a body. It is inquiring, "Who am I? How did I get this body? How did I get this mind? Where do my thoughts really come from? What is my real nature?" As you inquire this way you go deeper and deeper and deeper within yourself. What appears to be a material self begins to dissolve slowly but surely, until only consciousness is left, absolute reality.

As problems arise as questions arise as thoughts arise you simply inquire, "To whom do these come? Who is thinking these thoughts? To whom do they come? Who is going through this experience? Who feels frustrated, unhappy? Angry? To whom does this come?" And of course you say, "It comes to me. I feel this." Then you inquire, "Who am I? What is the source of this I? Where does this I come from? Who gave birth to this I?" What you are really trying to do is find the source of the I-thought. The I-thought is only a thought. As you follow the I-thought to the centre of the heart one day the I-thought will burn up completely in the centre of the heart and you will be totally free. But by all means you should practice some form of sadhana. Sadhana is like going to school. You have to start in kindergarten, go to the first grade, the fifth grade, junior high school, senior high school, college to university. This is true of sadhana. You practice one form of sadhana for years perhaps and then you may grow out of it to other forms, to higher forms. Until you come to the realization that there is no sadhana. All these years I've been spending standing on one foot with my arm in the air, chanting mantras, doing pranayamas has been unnecessary. Now you can only say this when you've arrived a certain place in life. The stronger you're attached to this earth the more sadhanas you have to do. But as you begin to lose attachment to this earth your form of sadhana changes. Your spiritual practices change. They become less and less. Since you're beginning to realize that you are the pure awareness. Does the pure awareness have to do sadhana? Or does God have to do spiritual practices?

You begin to feel your reality. The more you feel the reality of who you are the more the body keeps dropping away. Until again that day comes when you know beyond a shadow of a doubt that you have no body. Yet the body appears. This part becomes a paradox when you try to use words to explain it. You have no body and at the same time you have a body. You appear to be demonstrating a body. Others see you as a body but you realize that this is a cosmic joke. For there is no body, there is no world, there is no universe there is only consciousness, effortless, choice-less, pure awareness, boundless space.

Prior to total enlightenment you feel this about yourself. That you are consciousness that you are not the body, you're absolute reality. As you go deeper into that you become like boundless space. You no longer are confined to a place. There is no longer confinement. Now the body appears like a jail for you. You appear confined to your body. It's like you're in prison. There is no freedom. As you come closer to enlightenment you begin to realize you are not the body but you still feel confined without a body. Then the final stage you become the Self of everything.

You realize that you are in the trees, the ocean, the planets, the stars you are everything. You have become all-pervading, omnipresence. Yet when people look at you, you seem to be a body. So you keep silent. You do not try to explain yourself or prove anything. There is no longer anything you have to do. You are completely out of it. Now why would you want to become like this? What is the purpose of being this way? If you've heard about bliss. The peace beyond understanding you have become that, total happiness. The substratum behind all existence is total joy, total happiness, total peace, bliss consciousness. This is your real nature this is what you are. Just by hearing these words something begins to stir within you to make you understand that you never were a body. Do not think about your body too much. It will take care of itself.

Remember as I mentioned in the beginning, when you came into this plane of existence everything was preordained, everything. Everything is predetermined. Therefore every move you make, everything you do is supposed to happen. If you will just realize this you will stop worrying. This is what I meant when I said in the beginning you are in your right place right now. Going through those experiences that are necessary for you. The worst thing you can do is to condemn yourself and your lot. This just pulls you deeper into maya. Be happy where you are. Never compare yourself with anyone. Be yourself just the way you are. Be thankful for what you are and where you are. It is only by being thankful, by acceptance that you begin to let go of your humanity. Every time you resist you're accruing greater karma to you. Every time you try to stick up for your rights you are accruing greater karma to you. And you will always have rights to stick up for. Only the nature of them will change. But you will be sticking up for your rights all of your life. And then you will take up another body and continue doing the same thing it'll never end.

Finally, try to remember that the powers that be loves you just the way you are. It doesn't love you when you do certain things. It loves you just the way you are, unconditionally. And you are unfolding in your own inimitable way. There is absolutely nothing wrong with anything. Collectively the earth is going through its karma and is doing what it's supposed to do. Your job is to become realized and totally free. You do this by accepting yourself with the way you are, accepting everybody else. Accepting the world the way it is. Accepting conditions the way they are. Realizing that none of these things exist they're only temporary. And what is temporary cannot be reality. Understanding that the true reality is yourself. There is no true reality outside of yourself. There is nothing going on outside of yourself. You are the creator of the world and of the universe. And that all is well.

SG: I met you two weeks ago for the first time. And the past two weeks it seems like my consciousness is just expanding very rapidly. And my sense is that it isn't just the words that you speak it's the life that you live, the expanse that you live is the most powerful transformer.

R: What do you want me to say? You're doing well. It is true the best teaching is the silence. The space between the words is where all the real power is. If your heart is pure it has to affect you positively and things do happen. See the important thing about this is what do you put first in your life? What comes first? This is where the problem arises. If you put your work first, your family first, your house first, your car first, then you will progress accordingly. I'm not saying you have to give up these things. I'm just saying put first things first. If you're truly looking for a spiritual life and you want to become with the Self that you really are, you want to awaken, you want to experience moksha liberation then you have to live this twenty-four hours a day. This is not a part time job. If you make this a part time job then what ever you make a full time job will be your god. If you only remember that you can never take anything with you when it comes time to leave your body so-to-speak. Therefore what do you put first in your life? Those of you who have put spirituality first in their lives know what I'm talking about.

(long silence, then tape starts abruptly) ...om shanti om.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert I would.)

(Mary reads the Jnani as tape ends) [TOC]

I HAVE COME TO KILL YOUR EGO!

19th July, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. Welcome. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you again. There are a few new people here. Let me remind you, I am not a preacher, I do not give lectures, I am not a philosopher, I'm a nobody, a nothing. Yet some people call me Robert, the ego killer. You've heard of Jack, the giant killer? I have come to kill your ego. What do you think of that? You never needed it anyway. It's nothing but a bunch of trouble.

All of these years you've been motivated by your ego. You've had all sorts of problems, confusions, living a haphazard life, for you have looked to your ego as God. You have allowed your ego to lead you astray, to make you believe that you came to this earth to become prosperous and rich and happy.

Who wants to be happy? What is happiness? Happiness is when you achieve something that you want. This makes you happy. Yet when it wears out, when it's taken away from you, when you get used to it, it makes you miserable. Therefore the same quality that made you happy made you miserable. And this is how you've gone on since the beginning of your existence, sometimes happy because you get what you want, sometimes miserable because the happiness never turns into what you desire, what you thought it would be. In other words, you're like a yo-yo. You go up and down looking for happiness, searching for happiness. You think you find it, then it betrays you, and you become miserable.

So the question is, is there a way to have real happiness that is unchanging? Is there a way to have unalloyed happiness, uninterrupted happiness, that has absolutely nothing to do with person, place or thing? The answer is yes. As a matter of fact, the happiness that I'm referring to is your real nature. This is what you really are, happiness, true happiness, that has absolutely nothing to do with the world, or your body, or other planets, or anything else. That happiness may be called bliss, total joy. All you have to do to achieve this happiness is to kill your ego. It sounds like a hard job, but it's not. You destroy your ego by beginning to live in the now. By letting go of the past, not concerning yourself with the future, and living in the eternal now.

Prove this to yourself. Look at the second you're living in. Is there anything happening in that second? Is there something annoying you, something bothering you? There is no time for this to happen, because you're living in the second. In the second in which you live right now, there is absolutely nothing happening to make you miserable, to make you happy, according to human standards. You're living in the immediate second. Now what if you were able to take that second and expand it, expand it, into eternity, into infinity. This would mean that you would be forever happy, forever at peace.

But most of you begin to think about the past. You begin to worry about the future. You think about your past experiences, you bring it into your present, and spoil that second.

Why do you do this? Because you've been brainwashed. You've been hypnotized. You've been led to believe that you are a body, living in a world, having to make things happen for survival, going through the life, working in a job, coming home, watching TV, can't wait for the weekend to come so you can get drunk, or you can go see a movie. This is your life. This is the kind of life most of us live.

What if I told you there was another life? A life of such peace, a life of such bliss, that will always be yours. Yet what do you have to do to achieve this? Again, you have to kill the ego. You kill the ego by stopping the thoughts. You have to stop thinking, stop thinking forever. If you investigate yourself, you will see that your true Self does not have to think. Your real Self, which is consciousness, just is. It is not this or that. It is pure being. There's no interpretation for this. It has nothing to do with you, and your affairs and your life. It is the substratum of all existence. It is the background of all of your ideas, your feelings, your emotions, your beliefs.

It is like a chalkboard. You draw pictures of images on the chalkboard, and you get involved in the images. The images always change. When you get tired of them you erase them from the chalkboard.

You draw new images. Yet the chalkboard never changes. The chalkboard remains the same. And so it is, there is something within you that never changes, that is always the same. This is your true nature, your swarrupa. It is called the ultimate reality. It is called pure awareness. It is called by many names. You may also call this God. This is the substratum of your existence. When you let go, when you begin to forget about your image as a human being, when you stop thinking about your affairs in the world, and its affairs, the true Self, which is the substratum I'm talking about, comes into existence, comes into play. It begins to make itself known, and you begin to disappear. What you believed was important, your meager existence, begins to take a backseat, and the true you, the true Self, prevails. This is what ensues when you begin to drop your thoughts, your belief system, your preconceived ideas, your concepts. All of these things must go if you want to be your Self, the happy Self, the uninterrupted, happy, blissful Self.

What are you willing to do about it? You cannot go on the way you've been going on if you wish to experience this beauty, this unparalleled joy. You cannot continue the life you've been living. There has to be a total and complete change. Everything that you have picked up since you were born has to become transcended and transmuted. You must begin to understand that it is your mind which has created the universe, the world and your body. What you call your mind is only a conglomeration of thoughts, ideas, beliefs. This is what we call the mind. It is this mind that makes us forget our real nature. The mind and the ego are synonymous.

Yet you ask me can you exist without a mind? Can you function without a mind? Where were you before you were born? You had no mind then, and you functioned very well. Now you've picked up the body you have, and you have forgotten that you are not the mind, nor the body, and you live a bodily existence, wanting things, having unnatural desires, thinking you have to become a certain way, in order to be totally happy.

Really there's nothing to do, nothing to become, in order for you to find total happiness. It's not finding something new to add on to yourself. It's letting go of everything you've been holding onto, becoming virtually empty, total emptiness, total emptiness, becoming a no one, a nobody, a nothing. Allowing all of your preconceived ideas, your conceptual thinking, to dissolve. Letting go of everything that you've been holding onto, your desires, your emotions. Becoming a simple person. Not worrying about the future. Being your Self, absolute reality, the Self which is God, allowing that to take place. Forgetting about time and space. Not trying to change the world or anyone else, not even trying to change yourself, but rather going deep within yourself, diving deep within yourself, deeper than you've ever gone before. The deeper you dive, the more the ego disappears.

Remember, the ego, the body, the mind are one. They never existed really. This is the amusing thing of this whole teaching, for when you get to that place, when you get to that space, where the mind seems to be destroyed, you start to laugh at yourself, realizing you never had a mind to begin with. There never was an ego or a mind, yet you've been spending hour after hour, day after day, week after week, trying to quiet the mind that doesn't exist. Why do you do this? Who knows? Why do you do anything that you do?

It is your business to do the right things in order for you to become self-realized. You begin this when you get up in the morning, when you first get out of bed, you first open your eyes. You can ask yourself the question, "Who am I?" What you're really saying is where did the I come from? Where did the I come from? When you're referring to this I, you're referring to the I that says, "I got out of bed, I slept well. Now I'm going to get dressed." That is the I I'm referring to.

Inquire within, "Where did this I come from? Who am I? Am I my body? If I were my body, really my body, it would never change. But yet when I was a little baby, I changed into a little person, then to a big person, here I am now, and I keep changing every day. Therefore how can I be real? For when I look up the word real in the dictionary, it means something that is unchanging, something that never changes, something that stays the same. So I cannot be my body. Am I the mind that thinks? Again I cannot be the mind that thinks. For the mind keeps changing itself every second, bringing me different thoughts, good thoughts, bad thoughts, fear thoughts, happy thoughts. Again this is not real. So I cannot be my mind. Am I part of this world? Well the world is the same way.

Keeps changing, changing, changing constantly, constantly changing, so I cannot be the world. Therefore who am I?"

Do not answer that question, just ask it. As you keep on asking this question, things take care of themselves. As you go through your day, remember to ask the question over and over again. Keep inquiring over and over again, "Who am I?" And when the answer comes to you, say, "No, not this. I am not this." All kinds of answers will come to you. Your mind will tell you, you are a man, you are a woman, you are a working person, you are retired, you are going to school. And always catch yourself and say, "No, I am not this, for it is not permanent. How can I be something which is not permanent?"

As you keep inquiring this way, something profound begins to happen to you. As you keep doing this day, after day, after day, you start to feel joy for no reason at all. You start to feel happiness for no reason whatsoever. You start to feel peace. Where there is conflict in the world, man's inhumanity to man, there may be conflict in your life, but you begin to feel peace, for the inquiry that you are doing is putting an end to the mind, to the ego, little, by little, by little.

You have to keep this up. You have to keep doing this without ever stopping. As the thoughts come to you, as your mind is filled with thoughts, you ask yourself, "To whom do these thoughts come?" You inquire, "Who is thinking these thoughts? I am. Then who am I?" Do not try to analyze this, for you're using your mind to analyze it, and it is your mind we are trying to destroy. Therefore you cannot use your mind to become free. Otherwise it's like a thief becoming a policeman to catch the thief. He will never really catch the thief, because he is the thief himself. So even though he appears as the policeman, he will never catch the thief.

And so your mind, that has been giving you all these problems and making all this trouble for you throughout your existence, should not be used in order to destroy itself. For the mind does not wish to be destroyed. Therefore it will bring up everything to keep itself from being destroyed. It will tell you all sorts of things. Do not react to them. Do not be frightened of them. Merely observe them, smile, ask yourself the question, "To whom do these thoughts come? I am thinking these thoughts, they come to me. Then who am I? Where did the I come from, for the I is responsible for everything?"

This I is only a thought. This I is an idea. It really does not exist. If it really existed, it would not be able to be destroyed. But because it doesn't exist, by inquiring where it came from, it will go away, it will disappear, and only the Self will remain. Do not worry or be concerned how long this takes, whether it happens immediately or it takes time. Just do it. Remember it's taken you many years to be where you are now. Therefore do not question time. Live in the moment. Forget about everything else.

It's like the story I tell once in a while. There was a monk who was meditating beside the road, and he apparently had been there for many, many years, for his hair had grown out into the ground, birds had made nests in his hair. He was sitting there meditating. All of a sudden he felt the presence of a great Sage coming by. He knew immediately this was a great Sage. He opened one eye, and looked, and he said to this Sage, "Holy Father, where are you going?" The Sage said, "I'm going to see God." The monk replied, "Holy Father, when you see God would you please ask him for me how much longer I have to sit here in meditation before I become absolutely free, before I become liberated?" The Sage said, "Yes my son, I will."

He walked down the road and there was another monk about a mile away, also sitting in meditation. He apparently had also been sitting year after year. His hair had grown into the street. He was in total silence. He felt the presence of the Sage also. He opened his eyes and he said, "Holy Father, where are you going?" The Sage said, "I'm going to see God." "Will you please intervene for me and ask God how much longer I have to sit like this before I become liberated?" The Sage replied, "Yes my son, I will."

Six months pass. The first monk was sitting in meditation as usual. He again felt the presence of the Sage. He opened his eyes and he smiled, and he said, "Have you seen God?" "Yes, my son." "Did you ask him for me how much longer I have to meditate this way before I become free and liberated?" "Yes, I did." The monk became excited. "What did he say? How long do I have to sit here?" The Sage pointed to a tree. He said, "You see the leaves on that tree. God told me that you have to reincarnate as many times as there are leaves on this tree, before you become totally liberated." The monk became upset. He became hysterical. He said, "What? I've been meditating like this all these years and now you tell me this? To heck with this. I'm going to town to get drunk." And he brushed himself off and left for town.

The Sage came to the second monk. Again the second monk felt his presence, opened his eyes and asked him, "Holy Sir, did you ask God how much longer I have to sit here?" The Sage told him the same thing. "Yes," he said, "Do you see these leaves on this tree. You have to reincarnate as many times as there are leaves on this tree. But this monk reacted quite differently. He started to dance and to sing. He said, "Thank you God. It's only one tree." And the Sage said to him, "My son, you are already free."

The meaning of this story is, do not look at time. Do not look at space. Do not look at other people. Do not wonder about how many times you will have to come back to this earth, whether you're going to be reborn as a frog, or a tree, or go to a different planet. Forget about all these things. Your job is to dive deeply into yourself, forget about the world. Why do you forget about the world in this teaching? For when you discover your Self, you'll see that you are the world. You are the world. You, your Self, are this world, this universe. The Self is all-pervading, omnipresence, and you are that.

Therefore when you become a peaceful person, a happy person, a real person, a true being, the Self, what will you see? You will see the Self. You will see a mirror. You will become a mirror, and the world is a reflection of you. Consequently wherever you look, you will see your Self. And what is your Self? The happy being I was referring to. The peaceful person I'm talking about. You are that. So wherever you look, you see your Self. And this makes this world a beautiful world in which to live. We are creating a world of peace and harmony, such as your Self. This is why in Advaita Vedanta we do not look at the world, for we realize we are only seeing ourselves, where we are. If you see problems in this world, if you call this a mean world, something wrong with this world, you're just seeing your image. This is you. So change yourself, not other people, not the world, but yourself. Do what is necessary to become totally free and liberated. For I fool you not when I say, "You are the absolute reality. You are sat-chit-ananda. You are ultimate oneness, nirvana. You are the Buddha. You are God. You are free. You are that."

We now play our usual game of "Stump The Guru."

Do you have a stumper Fred? (SF: Sir?) A stumper question? I forgot to ask to you, do you have a question here?

SD: It's not too late. If anyone who writes a question down or has a verbal question you can ask Robert.

R: Do we have any questions? (SM: No, there is not a single one in here. Nobody has any.) (laughs) We have to remind you to do this. So feel free to ask any questions you like. If you stump the guru you get to go to heaven immediately. You pass go. (students laugh)

SD: You don't even have to drive home. (more laughter)

SY: I'd like to know what question I have to ask you in order to stump you? (laughter) (R: Say that again?) (laughter)

SH: You didn't hear, right? He wanted you to give him a question that would stump you.

R: Oh. (laughter) Okay, here is the question.

(silence)

R: Fred is there anything interesting happening in the bible?

SF: How do I know? You accuse me of being a bible student. (SH: Oh come on.) The only Christian scripture I know I got from Swami Paravananda who was head of the southern California Vedanta society, other than that I don't know anything about that, I know some of the things Christ said. But I don't quote them because you don't like me to quote them. I won't say you don't but most of them don't.

R: They don't like you to quote them?

SF: Alright, "Be ye perfect even as thy father in heaven is perfect," which was just what you were talking about. Is it not? (R: If you say so.) Thank you.

R: I love you Fred.

SF: Thank you. When I was a Unitarian we had a wonderful minister. I remember some of the things he said. One of which was, "To the extent that an individual feels apparently superior to another he reveals his own insecurity." (R: Of course.) And another thing he said that I always remember, he said, "Blame is the most cursive word in the English language." (R: True.) Thank you. I've been thinking about myself a little bit. I've always been inclined to maybe feel a little different than people, say who belong to the Jehovah's witnesses or the Southern Baptists or the Disciples of Christ. And that would put me in a position of feeling superior which is no place for me to be.

R: Well why would you feel superior. You used the right words, you feel different. You feel different not superior. (SF: In other words to feel different is in-apprehensible.) Sure to feel different is good. (SF: Thank you for that.) It has nothing to do with being superior. You want to feel different. You have a right to feel different. You are different. (SF: Thanks again.)

SH: You made his day. (laughter)

SL: Robert when you have the two periods of meditation which you encourage us to do with you. Can you talk to us about that?

R: That is a good question. When I sit at those hours, the grace, the harmony, the joy which exists travels to those people who are sitting with me. There is only one Self. When the Jnani is that Self and sits in those periods of time anywhere in this world or this universe, whoever sits at that time and thinks of the Jnani becomes the Jnani themselves. All the power flows at that time and people call it grace. It flows throughout the universe wherever you are. It's just like a radio set. When you turn on the radio, you tune into the station and you get the station you tune into. You do not get a bunch of static, you do not get other stations, you get the station that you tune into. So the power of that particular transmitter comes forth and you pick up that station on your receiver. The same thing happens when you sit with me.

You may look at me as a transformer. Do I look like a transformer? (laughter) I transform souls. And as you tune into me, you pick up I-am. I am That I am. Absolute reality. There is only one. So the people who sit together at that time make a lot of progress on the path when they tune into the divine being, into the Jnani, into reality, which is themselves. The one Self. Does that make any sense?

S: Does it accelerate the evolutionary process? (R: Does it what?) Does it accelerate the spiritual evolution of the soul?

R: Yes it does. When you're tuning into it. A power. Again, another example is like going into the sun. If you sit under the sun you get all of the power of the sun. If you sit in the shade, the sun is still shining but you're not picking up all of the power of the sun, the same thing.

We have a beautiful reading today. We're going to try to have a reading every Sunday, from some form of truth book. So you can get another idea how things are. What Mary is going to read is from the Ashtravakra Gita.

(Mary reads)

R: Any announcements? Announcements?

SM: Oh yes I have. I have some transcripts to hand out...

R: Explain what you want them to do. (SM: Yes.)

(student explains to the newcomers what needs to be done with the transcripts)

SF: I know one thing about the Bible. Sri Ramana says the same thing. (R: Says what?) The Bible is the same as the Gita. (R: Oh, yes.) Somebody asked him, "Should we read the Gita," and he said, "Always." and they said, "How about the Bible?" and he said, "The Bible is the same as the Gita." And the guy said, "Well the Bible teaches that man is born in sin?" And the Master said, "The man sense is sin."

R: The I-thought, the ego. (SF: Separation.) Thank you Fred. (SF: Thank you.)

R: We have no prashad today, so we can't eat.

(someone brings in prashad, it is blessed as students partake in it.)

SU: How can there be a Master or a fool?

R: The appearance to others, others see the person as a Master or a fool. It's what people see. To the one involved there is no such thing. (SU: There is no Master nor fool?) In reality there is no Master, no fool. There is nothing like that. But to most people they see a fool they see a Master. But the truth is that there is no Master, no fool. There is only the Self and you are that. (SU: It seems to me that there is not even a Self?) Then there is nothing. (SU: Is that good Robert?) Whatever it seems to you that is the way it is.

R: Well this is it. The end. Repent.

Thank you for coming I enjoyed being with you. Remember to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself, to love yourself. For God dwells in you as you.

Om shanti, peace.

TURN WITHIN ALWAYS

26th July, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to be with you once again. Many of you are waiting for me to say something, to talk, to give a lecture, to give a speech. Always remember, the highest teaching in the world is silence. We learn to shut up, to keep still, to stop talking. Remember when you talk, you spoil the truth from your heart that wants to express itself. When you come just to hear me talk, the same thing happens to an extent. When you come to satsang, being in satsang is the thing. It has nothing to do with lectures, or speeches, or preaching, or anything else. These things are secondary. Just to be here, to keep still, to keep silent. This is where things happen.

There is no human being, so called, who has ever become liberated, so called, that has said a lot, that had a lot to say. It is when you forget yourself completely, when you let go of all of your preconceived ideas, your concepts, when you forget all about your past life, prior to coming here, then things begin to happen.

Remember, those of you who are struggling along, finding problems, this is because you do not become still enough. When you can become still enough, your problems will vanish, there will be no problem. There will be nobody to feel a problem. There will be nothing. There will be peace and happiness. When most of you speak, you speak about your problems. You speak about other people. You speak about places and things. You just talk, talk, and talk. Talking is the only problem you've got. Of course talking comes from the mind. It is the mind that does the talking. The words seem to come from your lips, and your lungs and your talking apparatus, but it is the mind that keeps the chattering up.

If you can only remember, that I am with you always. When I say I am with you always, I'm not referring to Robert. I'm referring to I am. I am is with you always. Loving you, protecting you, taking care of you, leading you. I am is consciousness. I am is absolute reality. I am is pure awareness. And that is always with you. How can it not be? For after all you only exist because I am exists. Or you may call I am God, if you desire. The only reason you seem to appear is because God appears, as eternity, as omnipresence, which is really yourself. You are that. There is no God or I am apart from you. You are a wonderful being, a pure being, a spiritual being, a God-like being. Yet, what do you think of yourself. You worry, you fear, you think you have problems. What kind of problems can God ever have? The appearance may be there, but to whom does the appearance come?

Many people do not understand this path, saying we have no compassion, no love, no understanding of what's really going on. It's just the opposite. What do you think is really going on? Would the senses tell you that there's man's inhumanity to man, an AIDS epidemic, wars, earthquakes? Is this what you identify with? The only life you're ever going to have, is the life that you identify with. So we are told, since a period of time, by great spiritual Masters, to lift up your eyes to the mountain top, to see that which is real, to behold Brahman, to behold the reality, the truth, that which is. Yet most people on this earth refuse to do this. They identify with person, place and thing, and then wonder why they suffer. You have to learn to let go, to be still, to have faith, to trust.

Do not be concerned about this world. The power that grows the oranges on the orange tree, takes care of this world. The power that knows the way, knows how to maintain and sustain this world. And since you appear to be part of this world, your needs will always be met from within. This is the truth. You will be saying to yourself, "Well, there are many times when my needs have not been met from within. I have suffered. I have gone through that experience and that experience." Yet who is it that has gone through these experiences? Not you, you are the one, you are the life, the love, the joy, the bliss. You have never suffered. Yet you feel something has been suffering, and you call this me. Some of you may think back to the past, to times when you've suffered, you had hard times, when things appeared to be wrong. You have to separate the two. There is the one who suffers, which is an illusion, which doesn't exist, and there's the reality. The question is, whom will you follow this day? With what will you identify? The choice is yours. It's up to you. You have all the power you need. You have everything you need within you.

There is nothing in this outside world that can change things or help you. Never look to the external world for relief. You will find temporary relief in this world, but the problem will come back in another way.

Learn to turn within always. Whenever something happens in your life, do not keep looking at this situation, and telling everybody how bad things are, so they can feel sorry for you. Rather immediately turn within, and inquire, "To whom does this come? Who is going through this experience? Who's feeling this?" It is only the I-thought. The mind is really the I-thought. That's all the mind is. It's a thought, called I, the first pronoun. This I has to be investigated. This I has to be scrutinized. And you will begin to understand that only the I suffers, only the I appears to have problems, only the I goes through experiences. But you must ask yourself, "Is this I me? Am I this I?" Always ask yourself. In the last analysis you cannot find the answers in books or from other people. You are the answer. You are the answer. What is the question? There is no question. Subsequently there is no answer. When you're looking for an answer to the mysteries of life, there has to be a question. If there's no question, you do not need an answer. Therefore look at yourself and ask yourself, "Who asked the question?" Say to yourself, "There is something within me that knows everything." And that is all-pervading Brahman, pure awareness. There's no question. There is no answer. There is only that, and you are that.

It's so beautiful when you understand this. It's so grand, so peaceful, so joyous, to understand, I am God. Not the body is God. I am, is God. I am that, is God, is Brahman, is absolute reality. Why not just identify with this and forget the whole thing. Why go through all these stages. You talk about stages, this stage, and that stage, and every stage. Why think about stages? Why think about grades, and keep identifying with the level of understanding that you're at? Forget all these things. These are the things that keep you back. These are the things that keep you back. Thinking at this level or that level, comparing yourself to any human being, so-to-speak, comparing yourself to people, talking about what stage they're at, whether they're enlightened or whether they're an idiot. What difference does this make to you? You will gravitate to where you are supposed to be.

As you stop reacting to person, place or thing, as you stop judging, as you stop bothering people, as you stop asking questions, everything will unfold at a fast rate of speed. You will find that you're already free. So to be liberated you just have to know that you are already liberated. And you know that you are already liberated when you have an empty mind. When there are no thoughts going on in your mind. When there are no questions going on in your mind. When you're not looking for answers. When you stop looking for anything. You no longer care about looking, searching, seeking. You become the epitome of compassion, of love. Everything happens by itself. This is one thing you should never forget. Everything happens by itself. You begin with the truth, that you are absolute Brahman, the only reality, nirvana. This is where you begin, by knowing the ultimate truth about yourself. And then everything will take care of itself.

But if you begin by trying to resolve your problems, by thinking, "If I win the lotto I will be able to sit in the silence, and nothing will bother me," on the contrary, if you're disturbed in your mind now, if you ever won the lottery, you wouldn't be able to sit still for a moment. The mind would be going a thousand times a second. People always imagine that if they were somewhere else, or they had something else, things would be different. Things will never be different, because your mind is going on the same way it always is going on. Only the conditions change. But the conditions appear to be at the level where you are in your mind. So if you feel fear, if you had ten million dollars, you would be ten times more fearful, a thousand times more fearful, because you would be feeling the fear that somebody is trying to kill you to take your money.

Whatever you feel, as your humanhood increases, those feelings will be magnified a thousand degrees. So forget about all these things, and dive within yourself where the reality subsides. The reality subsides because you keep thinking, and thinking, and thinking about your body, person, place and thing. But if you dive deep inside, the reality will never subside. You will become that yourself. Stop searching. Stop looking. Try to understand to an extent, that you are the one. There is nowhere you have to go. There's nothing you have to do. There's nothing you have to change. There's no one who has to come into your life, and no one to go out of your life. Everything is right just the way it is.

Why is everything right just the way it is? Due to the fact that you are all-pervasive. You are omnipresence, so how can anything be changed? Whom will change whom? What will change what? It's like trying to change a dream. You cannot change a dream. Only when you find out you're dreaming, will you awaken. It's the same thing with your life now. When you finally understand that you are not the body, or the mind, or the phenomena of the world, you are not the doer, you will awaken.

Take a look at your life. Think of the worries, and fears, and things you go on with every day, some of you, how you're trying to straighten things out, how you're trying to make things right. There is no need for you to do this. Things are already right. Things are already straightened out. Things are just the way they are supposed to be. Your job is to completely surrender. Surrender everything. Surrendering is another way to quiet the mind. When you begin mentally to give things up, you'll notice your mind becomes quieter and quieter. The mind stops fighting, stops arguing, stops needing and wanting.

Feel the presence. Feel the presence. Feel the presence.

Feel the bliss. Feel the bliss. Feel the bliss.

Feel the peace. Feel the peace. Feel the peace.

Feel the happiness. Feel the happiness. Feel the happiness.

With your respiration, inhale, slowly, say to yourself, "Who am I?" Before you exhale, say to yourself, "I am consciousness." Exhale with the feeling, "I am not the body." "Who am I?" Inhale. "I am consciousness." Exhale. "I am not the body." Begin to do this.

(long silence)

It is that time again, to play stump the guru.

Will you be so kind as to bring the stumpers?

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: I made a decision to go 100% for awakening. I was ??? when I found that everything is the same and I haven't dropped it all. Please explain what to do.

A: Well, by making a decision like this, that you're going 100% for awakening, it means that you're 100% screwed up. Because after all, you are awake. So when you go to 100% awakening, it means that you're 100% fouled up. There's something wrong, because you have to go for 100% awakening. You don't have to go for 100% awakening. You are already awake. What you have to really do is to know it, and let go of everything and stop complaining.

We always look at time and space as if things have to be done now, and truth is only now. But from where you are coming from, the person who has this question, try to remember, it's taken you so many incarnations to be where you are now. It may have taken you fifty-million incarnations to be where you are now. Therefore do not think, I'm going for 100% awakening and something's keeping me back. What you have to do is to gently let go of those thoughts. Let go of those beliefs. Let go of wanting and needing to be awakened. Forget about percentages. Forget about everything. Just live in the moment. Live in the now. Live in the present.

Do not be concerned about awakening at all. If you just quiet your mind by any method you can, then everything will take care of itself. It's like saying I'm going for 100% to be a brain surgeon. And you have to study, you have to go to school for a long time, you have to practice, you have to do all kinds of things before you become a brain surgeon. And even when you become a brain surgeon, it doesn't mean you're going to be the best brain surgeon or the worst brain surgeon. But when you try to awaken, it's different. Since awakening is your real nature, this is what you really are. There is no one, in other words, who has to be awakened. There is nobody left to be awakened. Stop living the mortal dream. Empty yourself out. Start being happy, joyous, by realizing you are Brahman, you are pure awareness. Have no goals. Have no limits. It's all happening right here, right now, this moment. See it. Feel it. It's already happened. You are already free.

Q: Robert, how can I become more loving?

A: By understanding who you are. By realizing you're not the person who is not loving. That person does not exist. By realizing you are God. Your real nature is God, and God is all love. The one you are referring to who is not loving does not exist. Do not feed that person energy. You are feeding a non-entity energy. Do not do this. Love is your real nature. Love is what you really are. Get rid of the other by not giving it power by thinking about it, by not responding to it, by not looking at it as a real person. Lift up your eyes. Stand up tall. Know who you really are, and you will see that you are already love. Next case.

Q: Robert, how do we know if we are doing spiritual progress?

A: You will know. You will find yourself becoming more peaceful. You will find yourself not reacting to things any longer, to things which used to disturb you, make you angry, upset you, will not be any longer. It will not matter where you are, or what you are doing? You will be peaceful. You will be happy. It will all happen by itself. You will see it. Do not try to remove anything from you. Simply change your mind. Change your mind from a thinking mind to a non-thinking mind. Try to be still, quiet. When your mind gives you thoughts, inquire, "To whom do they come?" and realize you are thought free. You are no-mind. You are nirvana, the ultimate reality. Identify only with the higher things. Next.

Q: Robert, are siddhis a good sign, or is it better to ignore them?

A: Siddhis keep you from becoming enlightened. Siddhis actually keep you back. Some people, because of past lives and past experiences, as they progress on this path, they develop certain siddhis. They can ... read the future, look into the past, be able to do astrology, the I Ching, become a Master of occult powers. In the Upanishads it clearly states, occult powers will keep you back for thousands of incarnations. Do not rest on siddhis. Leave the siddhis alone. Go beyond them. Go beyond everything, until there is no one left to do siddhis. To do siddhis, there has to be an entity. There has to be a person to experience these siddhis. In Advaita Vedanta, the person becomes obliterated. Therefore for whom are there siddhis? So when you see a person with great siddhis, really that person has a mind. His or her mind is still working, and they will not be free. Only when you give it all up, and you destroy the ego, the personality, do you become omnipresence. If you are everything, why do you need siddhis? Forget about siddhis.

Q: Why do spiritual groups always seem to turn into cults, and teachers into cult leaders?

A: Ask yourself, where does this happen? To whom does this happen? Remember every religion in the world began as a cult, what you call a cult. Christianity, Judaism, Islam, everything began as a cult, for there was a teacher, whether the teacher was Jesus, or Mohammed, or Moses, or Abraham. And this teacher had followers. And it went against the modern way of doing things, in those days, against the system. So they were considered a cult. So why does this disturb you? Know yourself. Go within yourself. Be yourself. Find yourself, and then see if you'll be disturbed by cults. What have you got to do with cults? Leave all the cults alone. Leave everything alone. Work on yourself and you will not have time to think about cults. The person who is always practicing sadhana, always thinking of the highest, has no time to think about things like this.

If your mind is always in your heart, and you're always peaceful and happy, always looking at the highest, trying to realize that you are Brahman, that you are the absolute reality, where will this question come from? How will a question like this get into your mind? You have nothing to do with cults. You are freedom.

What are you writing, Mary?

SM: I just thought of a question. (R: So you want to stump the guru, huh?) I want to stump the guru, yes. Are you ready? Yesterday, Robert, you mentioned something about only 80% of the people leave the spiritual path, and only about 20% continue. And there are very few out of that, that go on with it. And I wanted you to maybe elaborate a little bit on that.

R: Well, on this particular plane of existence, approximately 80% of the people who pursue spiritual life, drop out. Why? Because they become disillusioned. They want something to happen today, this week, right now. They have no understanding that while they are on the spiritual path, the real spiritual path, things may appear to become progressively worse, at first, for all the karma's are coming up, and being destroyed, so you feel this, you experience this. But all the great spiritual books tell us not to pay attention to this. Not to respond to this. Just let go, and let whatever happens, happen.

And the example I give, is when you're building a new building, the old has to be destroyed. So there comes this big iron ball, breaking down all the old structures, destroying everything it sees. And if you look, you will say, "Why is this destruction going on?" If they didn't want to build anything new, they would have left it alone. So the destruction is there in the beginning. Then it's all cleared away, it's swept away, and a beautiful new edifice is built. And so it is in your life. When you get on a real spiritual path, everything comes up, at a fast rate of speed. Things may seem very bad, terrible, to some people. It doesn't happen to everybody. It is because you are accelerating your karma. It's all coming out of you. It's all being totally dissolved. And then if you hold on, become still and quiet and do not react to these things, all of a sudden you will start feeling a profound peace, a profound happiness, a profound joy. You will finally feel freedom. But this is not explained in most teachings. This is the reason why 80% of the people usually drop away.

What do you think of that, Mary?

SM: I think that's very good. That answers a lot of questions for me.

R: Anyone have anything else to say?

SY: Robert, what is the purpose of Bhajans?

R: Bhajans, Kirtans, singing, it makes the mind one-pointed. It causes the mind to become still. You know yourself when you chant a lot, you become peaceful, you become still, you become quiet. So this is the purpose. To make you one-pointed. To prepare you for what's going on. Bhajans are good. Kirtan is good.

SY: So when we have an opportunity to do it, we should do it?

R: Of course, yes. This is what we do Saturdays, about two hours of it. Everybody feels so happy, so blissful. These things have been known for thousands of years, chanting, singing. Takes you away from everyday experiences. Lifts you up. It's good for you. Good for the soul.

SC: I have a question. I've asked a number of times, to be made to be aware of the consciousness, rather than of the mind? The mind seems to take over, and I'm not aware of who I am. (R: Yes.) I know there is no techniques, but is there some way that I can be aware I'm not my thoughts?

R: Of course, I've been telling you this for years, Nate. Inquire to whom do these thoughts come? That's all you've got to do, so simple. To whom do these thoughts come? Who is thinking this? Who has this problem? I do? Well, who am I? It's a simple technique and it works. By realizing the I is a thought, it is not you, and by inquiring, "Who am I?" and following the I-thought to the heart, the I-thought dissolves and you become free. But you have to do it.

This is the greatest psychotherapy that's ever been invented. Whenever something disturbs you ask, "To whom does it come? Who's feeling this? I am. What is the source of this I that is feeling this?" In other words you're saying you're not feeling this, the I is feeling this. The I, feels this, not you. Nate is the I. Your thoughts are the I. The I has to go. And by inquiring, "Who am I? What is the source of the I," the I will become weaker, and weaker, and weaker, until it disappears.

SC: It just seems that at times, the I or the thoughts are very powerful. It just seems to take over even when I do inquire.

R: At that time observe, become the witness, watch. Try never to react to those feelings or those emotions. Do whatever you have to do. Ask from where do they come, where the thoughts come from, or become the witness to the thoughts by keeping still and watching the thoughts disturb you. Another is to take a cold shower. Seriously, you take a cold shower. It changes the molecular structure in your mind, in your brain, your neck, and you feel better. Ice cold shower will do it all the time.

It's time for prashad. Oh, we have announcements...

(tape ends) [TOC]

THREE POINTERS TO MOKSHA – LIBERATION

30th July, 1992

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...it's about time you sat in meditation for a while, without moving, without squirming, without thinking. It's wonderful isn't it, to be able to sit still and be with your Self.

Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to be with you again. Always remember all is well. All is well. All is perfectly well. Never forget that. Do not think about it. Do not try to analyze it. Just accept it in your heart. All is well, period, end.

Most of us are here because we want to become self-realized. We want to experience moksha, liberation, awakening. There are three points that you should always remember. If you remember these three points you will be already awakened. You have to remember these three points in your heart. By assimilating these three points, by digesting them, by becoming a living embodiment of these three points you will become consciousness, pure awareness. What you already are.

The first point: Whatever appears to happen to your body or your mind. Whether you have cancer, AIDS, the D.T.'s, bubonic plague. Whether you're the strongest person on earth. Whether your mind feels depressed or disillusioned, or your mind feels happy or reassured. Whatever befalls your body or your mind remember this is not happening to you. You have absolutely nothing to do with that.

It makes no difference what is happening in your life. You can be materially, relatively the happiest person on earth or you could be miserable, sick. It has nothing to do with you. It has absolutely nothing at all to do with you. This is your body and your mind not you. You are Brahman. You are nirvana. You are the absolute reality. The goings on in your body and your mind has nothing to do with you. This is the first point.

The second point that you must always remember is that all of your karma's, your samskara's, your sins of omission and commission, the sinful acts that you're responsible for, none of these things can touch you if you centre yourself in the here and now.

In other words the here and now is omnipresence. The here and now is all-pervading, omniscience. The here and now is consciousness. The here and now is boundless space, effortless choice-less pure awareness. When you hold onto the here and now, when you identify with the here and now the past is no longer valid. There is no past and there is no future in the here and now. There is I am. There is the ultimate reality, ultimate oneness and you are that.

When you are living in the here and now your karma's do not exist any longer. Samskaras stop dead in their tracks. Sins are abated. You are born again so-to-speak. You become a new man, a new woman. You are free.

The third point you must always remember is that you have absolutely nothing to give up. Nothing to surrender. Nothing to let go of. You are already liberated. How can you believe that you have to let go of something that never existed? You believe you have to let go of your attachments. How can the Self have attachments?

You think you have to surrender all of your fears, all of your depressions, all of the things that have been bothering you. Surrender to whom? Those things are not yours. They do not belong to you. You are pure reality. You are the imperishable Self. Never were you born, never did you prevail and never will you leave. You are the one. The all-pervading one.

Consequently you have nothing to give up. For you never had anything to begin with. It's really egotistical to believe that you've got something to give up. There is nothing you have to surrender. It is only the ego that believes that something has to be surrendered, something has to be given up. You have to let go of something. Who is the one that had something to begin with? There is no one. There is only the one reality and you are that.

If only you can remember these three points by assimilating them, by digesting them, by becoming a living embodiment of them that is all you have to do. If you remember these three points you do not have to practice any sadhana. You do not have to do mantras or meditations of any kind for you will already be awakened.

Again it is the ego that has to meditate. It is the ego that has to do sadhana. Are you the ego? Who are you? What are you? Where did you come from? What are you doing here? Where are you going? The answers to all these questions is I am. I am. I am not this and I am not that. I am. I am that which has always been. I am that which will always be. I am that. I am.

Your swarrupa is absolute reality. You are not the person that you identify with. The person who goes to sleep and wakes up. Goes through experiences, worries, thinks, frets, sometimes happy, sometimes sad. That is not you. No longer think of yourself as that person.

When you get up in the morning take a deep breath and realize the truth about yourself. First thing upon awakening, you can say to yourself I am Brahman. I am the imperishable Self. Bullets cannot kill me. Fire cannot burn me. Water cannot drown me. I am that, and rejoice in your true Self. Feel the happiness in your heart, feel your reality in the stillness, in the quietness. Where there is no mind, no thoughts, no words. Who are you then? You just are.

There is no thing you can think of in this universe that can tell you what you are. It is beyond words and thoughts. You can never with your finite mind understand who you are. Do not try to do this. It works in reverse. It is actually when you stop thinking about who you are or want to know who you are, and you stop analyzing and trying to figure it out that the truth about you is revealed. It is beyond all the thoughts and feelings you ever have. It has absolutely nothing to do with you as you are now. It is the substratum of all existence. You may call it God if you will.

Do not think of yourself as an anthropomorphic deity apart from God. Because God is you are. Therefore what God is you are. There is no separation. Awaken to this truth.

If I say anything else it will be redundant. There are so many words, so many stories, so many teachings. Yet if you only remember the three pointers that I shared with you that will suffice. Why talk any further than this. The more words you hear the more confused you become. Actually the first hour that you sat in the silence was the best time for you. There are certain words, very few words that you have to hear and then there is the silence that you should always be in.

It is interesting that the words that I speak to you are really the silence. Those are the words of the silence, truth, infinite truth, reality, consciousness, bliss, pure awareness, ultimate oneness. All this is the Self and you are that.

Feel free to ask questions.

SY: Can I really remember that everyday? (R: Excuse me?) Do I remember what you said all the time?

R: There is something within you that remembers. Something within you knows. If you sit still put a smile on your face these things will come forth. Then we always have the transcripts where you can review everything. That's an interesting question. A sincere student has an open heart and the highest truth that is revealed may sometimes not be remembered by the brain but the heart never forgets. And when you rest in the silence, you sit still and you remain quiet something begins to work within your heart. And you become the living embodiment of the realities of the truth, of the Self.

Always spend time by yourself sitting alone in the silence being quiet. Be still and know that I am God.

ST: Does meditation serve a purpose in the spiritual quest?

R: Meditation serves a purpose in the spiritual quest for the beginner. It quiets the mind to an extent and it makes you one-pointed. It makes the mind one-pointed so you can concentrate on one thing at a time. It does help. But as you advance it actually becomes a hindrance. For whom are you meditating on? To meditate you have to have an object and a subject. You are the subject meditating on an object. But in truth and in reality there is no subject, there is no object. There is only the one Self there is only Brahman. Therefore you have to ask yourself the question, "Does Brahman have to meditate? Does God have to meditate?"

ST: Isn't meditation modeled for us for the mode of our natural thought? Can you show me meditation for us?

R: For the person who believes they are separate from God, yes. If you believe you're separate that Brahman is up in the sky or someplace else. That God is someplace else. That Shiva is someplace else. That Krishna is some place else. And yes you have to meditate on these deities. But when you remember that you are that, tat-tvam-asi, who is to meditate on whom? You have become Krishna yourself. You are Shiva. You are Brahman. You are that. All you have to do is be aware of the truth. Then again when you believe you're separate then by all means you have to meditate.

This is why Jnana Marga teaches there is only the one and I am that. There never was two of you. There never was God and you. But as long as you believe this or perhaps somebody has told you this before then you have to meditate, you have to pray. You have to do all the rituals. You have to perform bhajans, sing kirtans, do puja. All these things are necessary when you believe you are separate from God. So why not start from the top.

SF: The unmanifest and the manifest are one in Christ?

R: Yes, same thing. I and my father are one. If you have seen me you have seen the father, same thing.

SG: Sitting in the silence is different than meditation? (R: Yes.) But sitting in your chair with your eyes open looking at your garden or sitting with your eyes closed without an object, just sitting there... (R: It doesn't make any difference.) ...and ask, "Who am I?" and so on?

R: Of course you can always practice atma-vichara. Inquire, "Who am I?" And as soon as thoughts come to your mind inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come?" Realize the I is not you and you look for the source of the I. Which is in your heart again. (SG: Then the source of the I will gradually start to remember that like there is something lost that comes back to us?) You can say that, yes. The I becomes the real I. (SG: But as you remember it more and more, you're more aware of it and you remember it for longer times and you forget everything else?) Yes.

SS: In the meditation, when you sit down in meditation do you try to stop thoughts or do you try to be distant from them?

R: Never try to stop the thoughts. If you try to stop the thoughts they will become bigger and greater and they will win. Because the mind appears to be very powerful. Yet in reality the mind does not exist. There is no mind. There is no such thing as a mind. So when you sit in the silence you observe, you watch, you become the witness.

You can do many things. You can watch your breath by practicing the Vipassana meditation. Watch the feelings in your body. Observe the breathing. Yet the better way is still to inquire, "Who am I?" You never answer that question. You just ask the question and keep still. When you keep still thoughts will come into your mind. Simply inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? They come to me. I think these thoughts. Then "Who am I?" "Who am I?" simply means what is the source of the I? From whence did the I arise. You follow the I back to the source which is the heart centre. And one day the I will disappear and you will be totally liberated.

It is the I that makes you human. Everything in this universe is attached to the I. Do you not say, "I feel this and I feel that? And I am this and I am that?" All day long you're using your I. All day long you're saying, "I am this. I am happy. I am sad. I am sick. I am well. I am tired. I am everything." But when you practice atma-vichara you become aware of this. Totally aware that you're always saying, "I am this and I am that." And you question this by saying, "Well who am I? Who is this I? Who gave it birth? From whence did it arise?" Just by asking this question you will find peace.

SS: Is the mind exist, really exist? (R: Say that again?) Is the mind exist in the real world? Mind itself?

R: Is what in the real world? (SS: Mind. Our mind.) Does it exist? (SS: Yeah) It appears to exist. It's an appearance. (SS: It's not there?) There really is no mind. (SS: This is just a belief?) The mind is a belief but it is really the thoughts. All of your thoughts are the mind. Your thoughts come from out of the mind. It is really your thoughts that you have to get rid of, to remove from yourself. So the mind is a conglomeration of thoughts. Thoughts about the past and worries about the future. This is all the mind is. When you really understand the nature of the mind the mind will disappear.

The mind is like a rainbow. The rainbow seems to be real. But when you get close to it, it doesn't exist. It's an optical illusion. Such is the mind. The mind is the same thing. The mind makes you believe that you are a body. And that you have to go through experiences with your body. And the mind continues to fool you by making you believe there is karma and reincarnation and samskaras. And the whole mess of things that you have to get rid of. But when you inquire, "To whom does the mind come?" The mind will flee it will run away and you will be free.

SK: Robert when you're referring to the mind in that question what about things like cooking or electronics or driving your car on the freeway, don't those things enter the mind?

R: When the mind is gone then those things are spontaneous. What we call the Self, consciousness motivates you. You will do these things spontaneously. All the things you have to do will be done. But will no longer be the mind doing this. It will be consciousness, the Self. (SK: So those things and the mind are different things.) The mind is really consciousness but appears to be a mind like a dream. When you give up the mind only consciousness exists. And then you'll be motivated guided by consciousness. (SK: Then what would you call these practical things. That they're not mind they're just objects out on their own? Inanimate objects?) What you call practical things... (SK: Yes.) ...is also like your body. As long as you believe you are a body then there will be practical things for you to take care of. But when you realize that you are not the body, you are not the mind then there will be no more practical things for you to take care of. Yet you will appear to be taking care of them. But they will be taken care of better than you could ever do before. At the same time you will know beyond a shadow of a doubt that it's not you that are the doer. You are not the doer. Yet everything will be done.

SG: Your stand on bhakti and puja and things of that sort perpetuate duality but it also feels to me sometimes that self-inquiry itself does the same thing. Sort of presupposes a questioner and that which is being questioned. And sometimes when I try to practice self-inquiry it actually feels annoying like I'm being mental when I prefer just to be silent.

R: Then by all means you should be silent. Self-inquiry is good for many people. And there are many people who cannot do this. So by all means do what you have to do. Keep silent. Keep still. All roads lead to the same goal. All roads lead to the summit. Therefore do whatever you have to do to become free and liberated.

SX: Many years ago when I was working ??? one day I'm just here and I didn't remember anything what I did ??? and everything that would've been a problem dissolved. (R: Umm.) and all the way home and when I got home I ??? and the absolute, the totally of it frightened me and I turned right back off again. (laughs) And I think I'm probably not ready for this yet.

R: You have nothing to do with it and you have nothing to say about it. When it happens to you it will happen totally and completely. You got a glimpse of it. And apparently you got a good glimpse of it. But who are you to say you're not ready for that? (laughs) (SX: Well because I turned around right out of it.) You speak as if you are an authority on God. (laughter) That you have something to do with it. When God is ready for you God will take you over completely and you will have nothing to say about it whatsoever. But that was a good experience. If that happens again surrender to it. And have no fear. It's beautiful. Nothing can ever hurt you. It's all bliss. It's all love. Joy. (SX: That is what I mean by that and I really remembered it.) It will remember you. (SX: It will remember me? I won't have anything to do with it?) No.

SZ: Robert when you die what happens?

R: When you die what happens? What do you want to happen? (laughter) Who dies? The ego dies, the body dies. But you never die. You live forever. So nothing really happens. I know you've heard all kinds of different stories about going into different realms, planes of existence. This is all part of the dream. You created these things yourself. You created all these different planes. The subtle plane, the mental plane, the causal plane, all these things you read about in the yoga texts are of the mind.

They all belong to the mind. So when you believe in these things you go accordingly to what you believe. It's all created by you, you create your world after you die. But the ultimate reality is noone ever dies and there is no where to go. You're already here. This is it. You are eternity. You are fathomless space. You are the essence of the whole universe. You are the sky, the sun, the moon, the flowers, the animals, the insects, human beings you are everything. This is your real nature. Noone ever dies.

SG: Robert when our lady friend said that she had this experience and she turned back or couldn't handle it. Does that mean that the mind can't handle all that? It's kind of a new energy or a new perception so the mind can't handle it so the mind has to be coaxed slowly into accepting reality.

R: No, on the contrary, all these experiences come from the mind. Reality is reality. And this is your very nature right now. So what is there that cannot handle reality? This is your nature. This is what you really are. The things that you're dealing with is the mind. The mind makes all these experiences up. It makes you believe you can't handle it, it's too much for you. This is why work on destroying the mind on inquiring, "To whom does the mind come? Who is this mind? What is this mind? Where did it come from? Who gave it birth?" And you will experience there is no mind. When you see there is no mind there is no longer any experiences you've got to go through. All experiences cease. But be aware that all experiences come from the mind.

In reality there are no experiences. For who is to have them? There is no you. There is no one to have any experiences. The life you're living now is an experience. The false life we all live, this is the experiences I'm talking about. It is all of the mind. And the average person believes in the mind so strongly that when they seem to drop the body. They go forward in the plane of existence that they've created for themselves out of the mind. And then they come back and take on another body. It is all from the mind. So rather than to go all through these things transcend the mind and be free.

SG: How long does it take to get another body? Is that a stupid question? How long does one after they die before they...?

R: Why worry about this? (laughter) Why be concerned about another body. There are no bodies. Try to find out who you really are that you never were a body to begin with and be free.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the confessions of a Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text.)

(tape starts abruptly)

R: ...love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself for god dwells in you as you. Om shanti peace. Until we meet again God bless you. Be happy. Don't worry. All is well. Good luck. (students laugh)

STEPS IN SPIRITUAL LIFE

2nd August, 1992

Robert: Good evening. It is a pleasure to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love you. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should.

While I was sitting in the silence. I sort of reverted to the days when I was in Arunachala. I usually do not discuss this too much with other people but since it just came to me I will sort of briefly touch the subject.

I had been living in Ramana ashram for about a year and a half. This was the end of 1948. I stayed with Arthur Osborne, in his house. In those days when foreigners came they were put up with Arthur Osborne most of the time without him knowing.

And on one particular evening about 4 o'clock Sri Ramana walked into the cottage and he brought me a mango. And he sat down on a stool in the corner of the room. I sat on the bed. We looked at each other and we smiled. He gave me one of his beautiful grins of his. And I knew that we should keep silent we should say anything because there is nothing to say. But all of a sudden he asked me a question. I asked him, "Ramana what is more important to be in the presence of a Sage or to practice atma-vichara by yourself, self-inquiry?" I had already known the answer but it seemed the right thing to do was to ask him the question.

And he knew that I knew the answer. He waited a few seconds ??? and then he said, "The Sage is atma-vichara. The Sage is the Self, your Self." Therefore when one is in the presence of the Sage all of the sadhana is being done at an accelerating rate. Everything that has to be done is being done. When one is in the presence of a true Sage.

So again I asked him, "How come so many people have come to you and only certain people feel it. Some people feel nothing. Some people go away disappointed. And some people get all of their dreams fulfilled?" Again I knew the answer.

So he waited a minute or so and he said, "This depends on the maturity of the seeker. It depends on the sincerity of the seeker. As you can see many people come here to visit me. To make a judgement and then they go look for another teacher. They go somewhere else. They travel all through India. And then they go back to England or to Holland or to the United States and they tell their friends that they have seen 10 Sages. Yet nothing has happened to them. But if one is sincere and surrenders totally to the Sage then the Sage, the grace of the Sage will automatically is felt by this individual and this individual makes tremendous progress. But the person really has to be sincere." By sincere he said, "I mean he has to be a devotee. To forget about him or herself totally, completely and merge in the Sage."

I then asked him another question, "What is the easiest way and most effective way to do atma-vichara, self-inquiry?" Again he smiled and waited a few seconds and then he said, "To always be aware consciously in all situations of the I-am. No matter what you're doing where you are be aware of the I-am in your heart. This is the most effective practice."

His head started shaking and I also asked about this. "Why do you have this weakness?" I found out later his head was shaking for the last forty years. He again explained to me that when he had his experience when he was sixteen years old it was like putting an elephant in a hut. What happens when you put an elephant in a hut? The hut shakes all over. It breaks to pieces. When he had his near death experience he told me his body shook to pieces as-it-were and left him weak. This is interesting to remember.

I asked him, "Why didn't this happen to me at the time?" And he explained to me that I had an experience not of death but of life. Which is a little different. I asked him, "What determines these experiences?" He said, "Karma." I then left it alone. He walked with a cane, with a stick. This was 1949 he was very sick. That is how his body appeared. And his attendant came in took him to his toilet where he was supposed to go about 4 o'clock and he left.

Now these things are very interesting so we'll discuss them. When I say you have to be sincere to make spiritual progress I'm not speaking of sincerity as a longing or a wanting or a needing to become self-realized. In this case sincerity means total honesty, total humility, total love. This is what sincerity means in this case. When you have total honesty, total love you do not think of yourself any longer. You do not think about your problems or your humanhood or your self in anyway whatsoever. This doesn't matter try to understand this.

It doesn't matter what situations you are going through in this life. Whether you're experiencing good or bad, riches or poverty, sickness or health these things are totally irrelevant. The idea is to take your mind off yourself, your little self, off the I-thought and merge you mind with the I-am consciousness. Forget about your pettiness. Forget about your personal life. In truth you have no personal life. You must always remember this. There is nothing personal about you.

You're always so worried about your affairs as if something can hurt you in this world. This world is a world of god. It is a spiritual world. Everything in this world is Brahman. How can Brahman hurt you. How can god cause you misery or pain. These things are the false I. You have for some reason or another become hypnotized into believing you have pain, you have lack, you have imitation, there is something wrong with you. This is an optical illusion.

You do not really exist as a body at all. There is no body that you have to get rid of. Some of you are still meditating on the fact that you have to get rid of your body somehow. Some of you even believe and think that you would like to so-called die to the body. So you can be free of it. This is a false premise. How can you be free of something that you never had? The body is an appearance like the world. Who's appearance? Nobody's appearance. But for some reason you have become attached to the thing called the body and to this manifest world. This is the only reason you suffer. Because of your attachment to the body and to the world. If you were not attached to your body or to the world who would be left to suffer? It is the body that suffers. It is the body that goes through experiences. Not you.

If only you could understand what I'm saying. And go deep within yourself. Beyond the body. Beyond the experiencer. Beyond the witness. Beyond everything. If you can only feel this you would always be in bliss, always. You would always be totally, completely, absolutely happy. For no reason whatsoever.

Do not look to the world to solve your problems. Do not believe and think that if you change conditions that you would be better off. Some people believe that if they didn't work they would be better off. They would be happy and peaceful, blissful. Some people believe that if they had a job that they liked they would be blissful and happy. Everybody believes something else. All of these beliefs are wrong. They're wrong because you are looking to a condition to make you happy. You're looking for an experience to give you peace. You're doing this again because you believe you are a body.

There is no condition, there is no experience in this world that can bring you peace and happiness. For peace and happiness are your rightful nature. This is your natural state. It is only when you allow the mind to think that trouble begins.

So the first step in spiritual life is learning to control your mind.

You learn to control your mind by inquiring, "To whom does the mind come?" This makes you realize that the mind comes to your body. It's part of your body process. But in truth you have no mind. You are mindless. When you are mindless you are Brahman. You are god. Where the mind is limited. You have to always go beyond the mind. You stop paying attention to the thoughts. Let the thoughts do what they will. Allow the thoughts to frighten you if they will. To tell you all kinds of stories. To tell you all kinds of things. Do not pay any attention. When you ignore your mind it will go away.

The second step in spiritual progress is to develop humility. And humility means you do not judge people. You do not feel slighted when someone talks about you or tells you something rude. You do not get angry or upset. You just remain yourself.

This sounds like a wimp. But a wimp is a person who believes in this world and sticks up for their rights. They're always defending themselves. What kind of a being can go through all of that. Go beyond it and see the reality. A wimp cannot do that. A wimp is the same as a coward in this world. But a person who has developed a tremendous humility. Has total love forgiveness and compassion for everything and everybody. Therefore they do not have the slightest hint for retaliation or revenge or anger.

For part of the humility is realizing that there is only one self. You are the self of all, of every person, every animal, every vegetable, every mineral. You are that self, all-pervading. Therefore you become angry with yourself. You take revenge on yourself. You've hurt yourself. Learn to leave everything alone. Especially yourself.

Understand that when one door closes another door opens. The universe is on your side. Life is on your side. Nothing is against you. Always try to be cheerful. Do not tell people your troubles or your problems for they have got their own. Stop feeling sorry for yourself.

If you only became aware of the power within you. The universal essence. Then all the gods that you've been worshipping will come to your aid and worship you. They will all be within you. When all of these years you've been worshipping the Buddha or the Christ or Shiva or Krishna. All of these gods are really you. You are that. When you are happy sure of yourself then the gods become you totally and completely and you become a powerhouse of joy and love. You are already free. You are already liberated. There is nothing you need. There is no thing you have to become. Do not think about this. Just be it.

You think you may be in need of something but who is in need of something? The ego. It is the ego that has fears. That they ay lose something or something my be taken away from them. If you can only understand the deep power you have. It will always take care of you and watch you and look over you and protect you. You have to learn to feel this in your heart. This is what Ramana meant when he said, "Always be aware of the I-am." Under all conditions be aware of I-am. Not I am this or I am that, just I am. The first name of god.

When Moses was freeing the children of Israel from bondage in Egypt and god spoke to him and told him to go to Egypt and set his people free. Moses inquired, "Well who shall I say sent me?" And God said, "Say I am that I am." Meaning the power of god is Moses himself or anyone who utters this statement. This used to be a very sacred word, "I am." But in this age people use it very loosely. And they get so used to it that it has no meaning to them any longer. I am is almighty power. I am is god. I am is pure awareness, absolute reality. I-am is.

If you can only remember this and feel it in your heart. That is all you have to do. Feel the I-am in your heart and you will become totally free. Whatever you're doing during the day whether you're working or washing dishes or driving the car always say, "I am," to yourself. An realize what you're saying. WHEN you utter those syllables I-am the whole universe becomes you. You awaken to the reality of life. You true nature. The self.

Do not believe or think that you will lose interest in life or lose interest in your husband or your wife or your family. Ramana was a typical example of this. He would get up at 3 o'clock in the morning and chop vegetables with the cook. Make breakfast for all the people in the ashram. He kept himself very active when he was able to. This shows you that you can be a Jnani and partake in the world also.

When you think of a holy person do not believe they have to live in a cave or in a jungle retreat. It so happens that Ramana went to Arunachala and stayed there all of his life. But he could have gone to the market place and worked. He could have been an engineer, a book keeper, a scientist, a garbage man. Realization does not make you into a babbling idiot. It makes you into a quiet idiot. It keeps you from talking too much.

Your life is your responsibility. What are you going to do with the days you've got left on this earth. If you're interested in all of these things of the world when you realize they're subject to change continuously you're foolish. All your so-called troubles. All of your affairs, the affairs of the world, everything going on in this world today are all subject to change, everything changes. Nothing is ever the same. Therefore you become disillusioned. Totally disillusioned when you give yourself to this world.

Surrender to the self. Become totally free. Do not fear this world any longer. Do not become bamboozled by the things you watch on TV. When you hear about the wars all over, mans' inhumanity to man. And watch the TV you see people getting killed all over this world. Realize what this is. Maya, a cosmic joke. Illusion, an appearance. Like the water in the mirage. The more you dive within yourself the more you will be able to see the truth about this world and you will laugh.

Therefore spend your time going into the I-am. Into the self. If you want to solve your problems do not think about your problems at all. Think of I-am. I-am is omniscience, all-pervading, omnipotence, omnipresent. I-am is god. Absolute reality peace. Therefore when you really put your faith in the I-am your whole world will change to perfection.

Now let's practice the I-am meditation.

Make yourself comfortable. And really feel this. This is what you should be doing by yourself. Close your eyes to remove obstructions. Focus your attention on your breath. Observe your breath, your respiration. Do not emphasize your breath, breath normally. Observe the feelings of your body. All the feelings that you have in your body. Observe them watch them.

You are now the witness to your thoughts and your bodily feelings. Do not try to stop your thoughts or change your thoughts. Just watch your thoughts. Remember you are the witness. No matter what your thoughts tell you just watch them.

Now ask yourself, "What is the source of the witnessing? I am." With your respiration dive deep within yourself as you say, "I-am," to yourself. As you inhale you say, "I," as you exhale you say, "am." With every breath of I-am feel your self diving deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper within the self. Within the heart.

With every breath. With every "I," with every "am." You are going deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper and deeper. Deeper than you've ever gone before. Transcending your thoughts and your bodily functions. Your mind. Your samskaras. Your karma. It's all being transcended. It's all being transmuted. And it's turning into nothingness. You are becoming absolutely free. As you go deeper and deeper within the I-am. Do it!

(silence)

SK: Robert in the books that I've read about Ramana there is not that much about him saying things about witness stuff. Did you hear him say stuff about witnessing?

R: No witness is usually from buddhism, from zen. It's a zen tradition. But it's also a hindu tradition. In some aspects of Hinduism. He said to some people about witnessing. He mentioned it, yes. He didn't give it too much praise but he talked about it. He used words like to be aware rather than to witness.

SU: What's the difference between being aware and witnessing?

R: It's the same thing. They just use that terminology. In buddhism you use witnessing alot. It's all the same.

No questions no prashad. (students laugh)

SF: I have a question. (laughter) I remember back when I was in therapy. Sometimes we tried to analyze dreams. The doctor would always insist that in the dream there was nothing outside of me. Out of nothing I appeared along with everything created and transpired in the dream. So there was a creator in the dream and a creation in the dream. And they're equal thoughts of one whole. So the creator and the creation are one. And when the dream is over there is no more dream. That's it, nothing. And of course apparently in the dream time it's also together also a creation or is created in the dreamer. And it's a different type of time that we have in the individual experiences in the waking state. It occurred to me that the waking state is really no different than in the dream state. You want to comment on that?

R: Well you know this is true already. (SF: Sir?) You realize this is already true we've discussed this many times. There is no dream state. There is definitely not a waking state. They're both the same. The only difference is that the waking state is longer than the dream state. It appears to be like that. But in the dream state you are asleep and the dream is coming out of you. You are creating the whole universe. Everything comes out of you as a dream. Comes out of your mind. The same thing is happening in the waking state. This whole world, this whole universe comes out of your mind. This is the reason we're told to transcend the mind. To kill the mind. When the mind is killed the whole universe is also killed. With all the gods and the goddesses and the devils and everything else including your body. It's all gone. (SF: Earthquakes and the riots and...?) And you're awake. You are truly awake. Just like in the dream. When you awake from the dream you awake as you are today. But when you wake up from this dream you will be totally aware and you will still be. You will not disappear. The real you will still exist.

SF: To the Jnani there is observation even when there is nothing to be observed. In other words, there is a book called "conscious immortality," and apparently it's the state of the Jnani.

R: The Jnani has nothing, is nothing, wants nothing... (SF: He is no more an individual.) And has nothing to do with anything else. The Jnani is complete nothingness. (SF: Nothingness?) Yes. There is no more states of any kind for the Jnani. (SF: He has transcended the whole silliness?) Exactly.

SG: Robert you were talking about the sleeping state and the waking state. They apparently seem to be almost the same or very similar, correct?

R: No the sleeping state and the waking state are different. (SG: Well in the sleeping state people have dreams and in the waking state they have illusions. So it's almost like, I mean I think in the waking state people walk around in kind of a daze. And in sleep they are just totally asleep.) When you are in the deep sleep state without dreaming you are the self unconscious. When you dream you become the witness to the dream. In this waking state you're also the witness. So there is a witness who is functioning while you are dreaming, while you are awake and while you sleep. Which is the I-am. The I-am exists as the witness. So when you're dreaming, when you're sleeping in deep sleep and when you wake up to this state they're all illusions. The I is the reality. Therefore identify with the I or the real I and the other three states will disappear and you will be free of them.

SG: For me the witness state with me it's I feel it but then regularly the ego comes in and it seems to be more predominant. I go in and out of these states when I'm aware for a while and I'll get a lot of flurry of thoughts will come and I have these problems that I think I have to solve and then I'll come back to the present moment.

R: That's how it is in the beginning. Simply observe it, do not judge yourself. Keep thinking you're going deep within and let whatever happens, happen. But do not judge yourself or feel something is wrong or something is right.

SG: I mean what I wanted to ask you was about sleep. People, they look forward to sleep to having a real deep the more depressed they are - at least in my case - the longer I want to sleep I don't want to get up or I look to sleep as kind of an escape. (R: Yes.) But there is a different kind of sleep that I experience, I sleep less and I don't seem to get so much pleasure after sleeping or it's sort of a function you have to go through to rest your body.

R: And when you wake up you say, "I slept well." (SG: Sometimes, yes.) When you sleep through it when you do not dream. When you sleep continuously without dreaming you get up and you feel refreshed. You feel good. This shows you that in deep sleep you were your original self. That you were not the body you were your self. And it shows you the self always is happy. It is only when you become cognizant of the world that the problems begin. (SG: So in the sleep so the waking state is mixed with the sleep state when you're dreaming?) The waking state? (SG: Yeah.) The waking state as nothing to do with the deep sleep state. In the deep sleep state you are not waking, you are not sleeping. You are in deep sleep. But it's not really a sleep. You are the self unconscious. The self without consciousness. When you awaken to the true self, reality you are the self with consciousness.

But when you are in deep sleep it gives you an idea how real awakening is. For you feel wonderful when you wake up from deep sleep. You say, "I slept well I feel wonderful. When you awaken from this dream you'll be totally free of everything. You'll feel total happiness, total joy, total liberation. But in the meanwhile you are the witness to all three states. Just by thinking of that gives you progress in your sadhana, in your spiritual practice. (SG: The awakened state is beyond the witness state?) Yes of course. When you awaken there is no more witness. There is nothing to witness for you're totally free.

SK: It sounds to me kind of like the metaphor of vishnu the cosmic dreamer dreams the universe and also dreams the self. It's kind of like a metaphor for all of us. All our consciousness is that kind of a...?

R: You can say this. You can say it's a metaphor. But it is you who thinks of a metaphor. It is the mind that thinks of a metaphor. Therefore when you are in the true state there is no longer any metaphor whatsoever. It's all finished. You are beyond metaphors. Beyond waking, beyond sleeping, beyond dreaming. You have become all-pervading consciousness, emptiness, nothing. But while you're practicing it appears to be like a metaphor. When you are awake who is left to have a metaphor. (SK: Can you run that by, again?) When you wake up to reality who is left to have a metaphor of any kind. It is the mind that compares. The mind that metaphorically sees something says, "This is like this and this is like that." But when you awaken to your true self there is nobody left. Nobody home. You're finished, cooked.

SF: No more individuals. (R: Exactly!)

SI: From a separate state how can that be the Self?

R: (laughs) It's beautiful. It's not terrible, it's beautiful because you're totally free, totally liberated. (SI: I'm not an actor in this?) You're not an actor on the contrary. You do whatever your body came here to do. But you are not attached to anything any longer. You're not looking for credit. You're not looking for anything. You're totally free and beyond everything.

SI: A friend of mine speaks several languages. She's Swedish and she says that in Swedish they don't have a word for mind.

R: That is interesting I didn't know that. (SG: What was the question?) In Sweden they do not have a word for mind. (SG: They don't have a word for mind?)

SV: That's hard to believe.

R: That's hard to believe yes. (SI: But she is really good with languages.) Yet every human being in this world if they're not enlightened they have a mind. They have to think of their mind because what thinks? (SI: I'm sure they have thoughts in the brain.) Of course. They may just use a different name for it or all Sweden will be enlightened. (laughter)

SV: And they're not. Been there.

R: So they must have a mind they probably use a different word.

SK: Robert it's hard to follow the belief systems that the mind has accepted. You were talking about just transcending them rather than - you know - it's like feeling in the end you're looking at more illusion that I have. Looking at my false beliefs just going through them all and finding that there is nothing there and they're all false. All false beliefs as if my. It's like living my life under a false pretense.

R: Yes but you do not have to go through all your false beliefs. Simply drop everything and wake up. (laughter) (SK: Yeah. But it's tough.) For whom is it tough? Do not use words like it's tough or it's hard or something is heavy. Your self is pure, your self is absolute and you are that right now. So identify with that. Not with the problems or trying to get rid of problems because it is the mind that tries to get rid of problems. Don't even transcend the problems because you're admitting there is problems that have to be transcended. The reality has no problems. Never had, never will. Therefore there is nothing to transcend reality and you are reality.

SG: Robert in the talk you said about surrendering your life to the guru? Could you elaborate on that?

R: Not to the guru. The guru means teacher. We're talking about a Sage, a Jnani. (SG: Yes.) There's a difference. A Sage to be a Sage has to be omnipresent. A Sage is no longer confined to a body. Even though he or she may appear to look like a body. But the Sage realizes or knows that they are not the body at all. So when one surrenders deeply, reverently to the Sage they're really surrendering to themselves. Because yourself and the Sages self is one. So when you truly surrender and have humility you have grace because grace is the same as the Sage and it's all-pervading. But you can only feel it when you come into conscious contact with the Sages grace by total humility and total surrender. Therefore to the extent you surrender to that extent will you feel the grace and this will lift you upward. (SG: What you're implying like accepting the teaching. Really considering the teaching seriously and not resisting and so on?) You're always surrendering to something. (SG: Um-hm.) Many people are surrendered to buying lotto tickets. Surrender to the house. The house worships you, you worship your house. Your car, the world, to your job. Whatever you feel deeply that is surrender. So what we're saying here if you surrender totally to the self which is within yourself, the real you, the form of yourself as a Sage. So when you surrender to a Sage you are not surrendering to a human being. YOU're surrendering to yourself, to god. Which is you. There is only one. And then all knowledge comes to you. All freedom comes to you. All liberation comes to you.

Mary would you read the Jnani?

Mary: Yes, Robert. (R: You always come prepared.) Always. (laughs)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.) Do we have any announcements? (Mary: Yes) Let me say something first. I've had an unusually heavy amount of calls this month. So some of you have called me and I have not returned your call. Do not feel slighted. The call alone answers your question. Therefore if you call me about a problem the answer is already forthcoming. So keep calling. (students laugh)

SM: We have more transcripts to be handed out to be xeroxed. And this is "Return to the Source." I do really like this one. (SG: What number is it?) It's number 80.

R: It is prashad time. You have been good little boys and girls. So you get your reward...Australian ginger. Boy I always buy this kind of stuff, it's good...

FORGET ABOUT SELF-REALIZATION

6th August, 1992

Robert: I welcome you with all my heart. It's good to be with you once again on this beautiful Sunday afternoon.

Many of us have the erroneous belief that if we get in a path sort of like this, Advaita Vedanta, we will become self-realized overnight. And as the days pass and as the weeks pass, the months pass we become sort of delusioned...disillusioned. We tend to give up thinking, "What's the use? I have to go through another million lives before I become self-realized." This is a wrong concept. Of course most of us understand that we are already liberated. We are already self-realized. And what we're trying to do is simply let go of all of the concepts, the preconceived ideas, the habit patterns, the karmas, the samskaras. We have to let go of these things and so-called self-realization will shine all by itself. In other words there is really nothing we have to do except to quiet the mind. Do not allow your mind to tell you anything good or bad. Yet as we're doing these things wonderful things do ensue on the path. We find that we become more peaceful. Fear leaves us. The world doesn't frighten us any longer. People have no hold on us. We obtain a certain amount of freedom even while we're practicing the non-duality and this is what you should see in yourself.

You should ask yourself, "Do the things that really used to bother me previously still bother me? Do I still get angry as I used to do? Do I lose my temper? Become obnoxious?" If you see that you're making improvement you're doing the right things.

Forget about self-realization. Forget about becoming free, liberated. This is a fairy tale. There never was anybody who had to become liberated.

When we speak of words like liberation, pure awareness, the self. This is really the natural state. This is your swaruppa, your reality. This is what you are and what you've always been and what you'll always be and noone can ever change this. It is the superimpositions the images of the world the universe and your body that you have to deal with. It is up to you to rid yourself of these attachments. To stop being hurtable. To stop crying in your beer or in your milk, whatever you drink. And stop feeling sorry for yourself.

Understand once and for all that you are in your right place, right now. Right this moment. You are where you belong right this second. You are where you're supposed to be and there is absolutely nothing wrong anywhere. This sounds strange to some of you for I know that you can give me an entire litany of problems. Things that disturb you, things that are wrong in your life. But are these things really wrong in your life? Or is it you, your ego who thinks you should be living a certain way, with certain people in a certain country, having certain possessions? It is always you.

It is true when we look at this world and we observe man's inhumanity to man we become sort of disappointed, discouraged. We say, "What is happening to this world? What can I do to change it?" The only thing that you can really do in this world is to understand the truth about yourself.

This again is why people think that this path, Jnana Marga is sort of selfish. I've heard people say, "Those people think only of themselves. They only care about their own self-realization they're not interested in the world. What's going on with people." Of course this is not true. For if you understand the self, the self is the self of all. The whole universe is the self. So certainly you don't want to see things in the universe that are dastardly, horrible. Yet as long as you're working from your ego, from your mind you will see such horrible things. But the secret is to realize who sees this. This is a great secret.

Who observes these things. Who sees these things that are so wrong and so dastardly. It is the ego. The mind that has been trained and brainwashed since you were a little person from previous lives and you are a conglomeration of all your thoughts, beliefs, dogmas, samskaras. That is all you are and nothing else. The idea is to let go of all of these things. To become nonjudgmental. To develop loving kindness. To look at everyone as yourself. Always remember there is one self and you are that self. In other words there is not me and you or you and the world. Peace comes when you realize that you are everything. Everything is you.

When there is no longer any separation you will feel peaceful. You will feel at ease. But as long as you believe you are separate troubles ensue. For when you feel you're separate you believe someone has power over you. Someone can hurt you or do something to you, someone can cheat you. Take away your possessions. Do something to you. But when you realize the truth about yourself. When you realize that whatever your are doing to someone else you're doing to yourself how can you possibly hurt anyone. For you realize you are they. When you help the homeless you're helping yourself. When you help anyone in strife, distress you're helping yourself. Whatever you're giving to anybody else you're only giving to yourself. This is a hard lesson for most of us to learn because we feel separate.

When you see a homeless person on the street most of you think, "Poor guy I'm glad I'm not like that. I'm glad I have this nice car to drive and a home to live in and food to eat. I feel sorry for that person but I'm glad I'm not that person." In truth is you are that person. That person is you all this is going on within you and your beliefs, your thoughts simply are about yourself. Everything that you think about others is about yourself. For there is only the one self and we are all that self. So the beginning of wisdom is when you stop seeing the world as separate from yourself. For you begin seeing yourself as all, as everything. Then you will inquire, "Then to whom do these things come?" In other words then who is seeing these things, who is feeling these things? And one day you will realize it is the I. "I feel these things. I see these things. I feel hurt. I feel confused. I feel upset. But what is this I? And where did it come from?" You will begin to understand that by only getting rid of this I you will become free. It is the I that is giving you all of this trouble over these years. Not the condition that you behold. Not other people. Not other places and persons and things. It is the I that has caused you all of the problems in your life.

You say, "I see this. I do not like this. I hate this. But I like this." Notice it's always the I. It is always the I that is interfering with you. If there were no I would you be able to say these things. There would be no one to say, "I like this or I hate this," would there? The only reason you are able to make these remarks is because you use the pronoun I but if the I disappeared from your life what would you say? It would be ridiculous to say, "Hate this. Like this. No good. Good. Bad," for there would be no I.

Therefore it wouldn't make sense when you say things like this. This means you would automatically stop saying these things and you would automatically turn within. If the I disappeared you would turn within to the self. There would be no I to interfere and then you would be in your right place. You're always in your right place but what I mean is you will be in a realization place, a liberation place, no place, emptiness, nirvana. Nirvana is God. effortless, choiceless, pure awareness is God.

Yet where is this God? What is this God? This God is the substratum of all existence and what we call God is the absolute reality which we call perfection. So how can there be sickness and strife and lack and limitation when the substratum of all existence is what we call God, the absolute reality? In truth those things do not exist. That's right I'm telling you that sickness, lack, limitation, man's inhumanity to man does not even exist. It is the I that believes it exists. Don't you see? It is the I that you have been believing in all of these years. That believes it sees as sick person or has a sick body or a body that is lacking something or a world that's in pain. It is the I that makes you feel this.

I cannot emphasize this often enough. If you had no I you would be free and happy all the time. After all what is happiness? Happiness is when you're free from pain, from distress, from disease, from lack, from limitation, from all these people that make you unhappy. But it only the I that identifies with these things. Try to get this picture. If there were no I there would be no identification with these things so it wouldn't happen to you.

When I say, "it wouldn't happen to you," I do not mean you would be free from all of these things. These things would appear to be happening to the world and to your body just like they are now. Do not think that when you become self-realized that you will see a different world. There is no different world. The world will be just like it is. Your body will be just like it is. But to you the liberated one will not see this or feel this or go through anything. This is something you have to think about. What I am saying, if you are liberated and you see a sick person dying who just got hit by a car, the sick person who is dying, you will see this but you will not see this. You will see it on one instance and you will not see it on another instance. This is sort of difficult to comprehend. How can I see it and yet not see it.

We go back of the illustration of the chalkboard. The chalkboard is covered with all kinds of figures, images, people dying, people laughing, babies being born, traveling in airplanes all of these images are on the chalkboard. But the chalkboard is totally free and undisturbed. Nothing is happening to this chalkboard. Then you erase the figures and put new figures on the chalkboard yet nothing happening to the chalkboard. The images are merely superimpositions on the chalkboard.

And so it is with us. When we become liberated the game of life as it appears to you right now takes place on your consciousness. Yet you are pure consciousness itself. So you know the things are there but at the same time you do not know the things are there, confusing isn't it? We can never understand the infinite with our finite mind for we're programmed to see things a certain way, to believe things are a certain way. And we're going out of our dimension when we try to think this way. But yet this kind of thinking will come to you by itself. Where you can observe a dying person and see only eternal life or you can look at yourself, you maybe dying from a disease but who is the you that is dying? Who is the person dying? That person has disappeared. That person has become the self. The imperishable self.

You will not have to think about this. You will not even think about dying or living or any of the things I'm talking about. I am using words right now to try to convey to you a message which is virtually impossible to comprehend, to convey. That you are eternal life. You were never born you can never die and you never prevail inbetween. There is no you as you appear. You do not exist. You never existed. You are a non-entity. A good for nothing.

Yet something in you is fighting this. There is something in you that is saying this is impossible. I feel hurt. I feel depressed. I feel this way and I feel that way. Sometimes I feel happy, sometimes I feel wonderful. Do you see what you're doing right now you're going back to the I aren't you? Don't you see the problem? Can't you see what you're doing? You're going back to the I. After all that has been said and done you're going back to the I. You're saying, "I don't feel the truth. I'm not feeling what Robert is saying because it sounds impossible." You didn't say that I did. Not I Robert but I, I. Do you see? You are totally free. If you only got rid of the God damn I. The I has been giving you all these troubles you keep saying I, I, I. How long will you go on this way?

The time has to come in your life when you begin to understand that I has never existed and I will never exist. This is the reason we practice atma-vichara, self-inquiry. This is the only reason we practice this because the more you practice this the more you will not get caught up in the I. Now you know that the only thing you have to do is to remove the I from your life and you will be totally liberated.

Try tomorrow not saying "I" for the whole day. See if you can do this. Most of you will not be able to have a conversation. You will have absolutely nothing to say and that will be wonderful. It would be the best thing you've ever done. To shut up. For you have been talking all of your life and where has it gotten you? Since you were born you've been talking, talking, talking, talking, talking and where has it gotten you? This is why you hear about some Sages who are totally silent and never say a word. For the voice has been given to the I. It is the I who talks. It is the I who has a chip on it's shoulder and always has something to say. The voice box is connected to the I. But if you practice not saying I, removing the I you'll have very little to say and everything will take care of itself.

This is why self-inquiry works so wonderfully and why we should all practice it. The best time to practice it is when the I overwhelms you. When you start to say all kinds of things to yourself like, "I feel rotten today. I feel bad. I feel this. I feel that." Catch yourself and inquire, "Who am I?" That is what you must do. What you are really asking is, "Where does this I come from? Who am I? Who am I?" Never answer that question. For it'll be your ego answering. The ego, the I, the mind are synonymous. They're all the same. If there is no I there will be no mind, no ego. So the practice is to remove the I, to eliminate the I. At the same time we're killing the ego and the mind.

So every time the I shows it's head you inquire, "Who am I? Where did you come from I? What gave you birth? From where did you originate?" You have to talk to yourself this way but not loud. Somebody hears you, you'll be sent to the funny farm. Keep this to yourself. But do it! "Who am I?" The mind will start thinking again. Thoughts will come, "What am I doing this for? I must be crazy?" You're back to I again. If you can only catch yourself this will be a great start and it will take you further. Catch yourself when you say, "I." Keep catching yourself always. "Who am I? Who is this I?" That is all you have to do. Is search for the I, the source of the I. And you search for the source by inquiring, "Who am I?" That is how you search for the source of I. When the source reveals itself to you there will be total liberation. For the I will be gone. And so to be liberated you simply have to get rid of the I. But the good news about this thing is as you practice this it has positive results in your life, in your personal life. As I mentioned earlier you will find that you're becoming more peaceful. The things that used to disturb you will stop disturbing you. You will develop power within yourself. You will feel happy and good. This is a side effect of practicing self-inquiry.

The mind is so powerful in some of us it will make us practice for a half hour for ten minutes or for five minutes and it will stop and it will go back to being I again. You have to catch yourself continuously, continuously. Whenever you use that word I, remember to remember I doesn't exist. I is my only problem then, "Who am I? What is it's source?" As you practice this you will be amazed at what happens to you.

But this is your choice. This is your freedom. This is what you have to do for yourself. Most of you have been through the ropes. You've been through life's experiences and you're coming to the end. Why do you waste your time with the world? When I talk like this I am not referring to giving up this world physically what I mean is why do you react this way to this world? Why do you keep reacting with fear and animosity and the rest of these things most of us go on with. Save yourself from coming back again and again in different bodies. Save yourself totally, completely. Inquire, "Who am I? To whom do these thoughts come? Who thinks? What is the source of my I?" If you do this I can assure you you will become absolutely, totally free.

Let's do this together now. Close your eyes and observe your thoughts. Do not try to change your thoughts, observe your thoughts. As thoughts come to you ask yourself, "Who am I?" As you keep thinking about this and about that, something tells you, "I'm hungry. I'm thirsty. I'm this. I'm that. I have to go to work tomorrow," ask yourself, "Who am I?" And remember what you're saying, "What is the source of the I?"

(short silence)

It's that time again to play stump the guru. So if you pass the stumpers. We always have a question box on Sunday.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Do I have a fear of being God?

A: Why do you ask me? Ask yourself. If you have fear you will have fear for everything. Who is God? Is God separate from you? Where does God live? First find out who God is then ask the question if you will be afraid if you call that you are a God. If you were God you would be eternally happy. Have peace and love within you always and you wouldn't ask that question.

Your real nature is God. You are God already but you don't know it. You think you're human you have to ask questions like this. But your real nature is really God. Right now. Right this minute. The reason I think you're asking this question is because of your upbringing. You still believe in an anthropomorphic deity, a God up in the sky who punishes or throws lightening bolts. When you realize there is no such God then you'll be happy and free. God is of your own imagination. It is your imagination that is God. See God as yourself. Feel God as yourself by getting rid of the I. When there is no I only God remains. What you call God will be the self. So do not separate yourself from God. There is only God as you. No matter what you maybe experiencing. No matter what you maybe expressing. You are still God. But not the way you're expressing or feeling. You are the God within without words or thoughts. That transcends your body, your mind, your experiences. You are the God rejoice and be happy. (pause) Next case.

Q: How critical is it to realize your true self this lifetime?

A: It's not critical at all, who cares? (laughter) This is your ball game. If you don't care about it why should I, why should anybody else? It's critical to the extent that if you do not become self realized you will come back again and again and again or go to some other planet or do something as an ego. Your ego, your mind will survive until you realize there is no ego, there is no mind. But until then your ego will be in control so if you realize this or if you understand this you will begin to practice sadhana now. You will practice your spiritual disciplines and work on yourself and put this first in your life. Whatever you put first in your life that is what you become. So if you put first in your life your spiritual practices you will become this. Forget about time. Time doesn't really exist. It appears to exist. You appear to grow older in time but there really is no time. Put all the energy you use into thinking about other things into your spiritual practices and see what happens. (pause) Next.

Q: Robert if you do not experience the I-thought who is experiencing this question?

A: Ask...tell me, tell me who is answering the question. There is no question. There is no answer. There appears to be a question. There appears to be an answer. It's all ego work. It's all mind work for as long as the I persists. There will always be a question. There will always be an answer. But when the I goes there will be no question and no answer but yet words will appear to be spoken. As I explained before it's like living in two worlds. You are the one yet you appear as many. So the person asking the question is your ego and the person answering the question is also your ego. It is only one that asks and answers. It appears as many but there is only one. It's all going on in your dream. This is your dream. But you are the witness the observer of the dream. In that dream you're asking a question and you hear an answer but it's all a part of your dream. Awaken and be free.

Q: If everything is nothing why the hell does it all look, smell and feel so good. Why did the absolute give us this imagination that is so hard to give up?

A: The absolute never gave you anything. The absolute remains absolute. It is you who feels these things. It is you who feels separate again. It is you who feel that you are mortal. The absolute has nothing to do with it whatsoever. Find out who you are. Discover your true identity. Ask yourself, "Who gave me this body?" By inquiring, "Who am I?" all of these things will become clear to you. You are the absolute. You are the self. You have always been the self. Everything else is like images on the screen. Go within, dive deep within, deeper than you've ever dove before by inquiring, "Who am I? Who gave me this mind? Who gave me this body? Who gave me these thoughts? Who gave me these questions?" If you are sincere enough you'll realize nobody. There is nobody home and you are total consciousness, the absolute. In other words there is nothing going on here at all. There is no class like this happening. There is no body that appears to be your body. There is no experiences that you've ever gone through. Nothing exists the way it appears. Again ask yourself, "Then where did it come from? I don't want it, where did it come from?" So again you say, "I don't want it." It is the I that gives it to you. It's better to work on the I, removing the I than to feel sorry for yourself or to feel something is wrong or obscure. Work on getting rid of the I, eliminate the I and then see what you become.

That's it Robert.

(students ask questions)

SB: Robert when you feel a great joy like when listening to music or when things are going well how do you know whether that joy is from the mind or is seeping in from the self?

R: Do not concern yourself with it. As long as you are doing your home work enjoy the joy. Be happy in the joy. Rejoice in the joy. Do not ask yourself where it came from. The only question you ask about where it came from is the ego, the I. But as far as the joy is concerned rejoice in it, enjoy it. Again if you're doing your homework then the joy will be the right joy. The one who wants to analyze this and tear it apart is the ego. The ego wants to question, "I wonder if this joy is real or things are really bad and this is a phony feeling. It is the ego that does all of this. But if you're feeling a semblance of joy bask in it, enjoy it, love it. Never mind where it came from feel this joy is real, feel it's absolute reality, it is God. It is the real true joy. Enjoy it.

SH: How can something that doesn't exist at all exist as though it did?

R: Well look back in your dream. When you're having a dream at night. Everything persists as if it's real. You go through all kinds of experiences in that dream. In that dream you may be working on yourself trying to become enlightened. And you're working and working and all kinds of things stop you and wake you up and make all of these things happen to you... (SH: I don't do all of that in a dream. That's your dream not mine.) (students laugh) Whatever? it makes no difference what you do. You can dream it, I said imagine this. Dream anything you want in the dream but it's all a dream. So this is the same thing. There appears to be a persistence... (SH: It appears?) Of course it appears. But it doesn't really exist. (SH: It has no wit of reality it's all nonsense.) It's all nonsense. (SH: It's all a put on.) Exactly. (SH: A put up. A fake.) It's all false. (SH: Yeah.) The whole thing is false. (SH: Well why doesn't it just disappear then?) It does but you insist on seeing it. (SH: You think I do?) Of course or you wouldn't be here. (students laugh) It wouldn't be here if you weren't looking for it. (SH: I just like to hang out with you.) (laughter) You're doing that. (SH: Yeah. You're a good guy.) You're a good guy too Henry. (SH: Thank you.) Where does this get us? (SH: Nowhere. Gets us where we always were.) (laughter) Exactly. All is well. (SH: Okay.)

R: We always go back to the examples of the sky is blue. When there really is no sky and there is no blue. The water in the mirage. There is no water but appears to be so. The snake in the rope or a rope appears to be a snake. And so it is with this world. It appears to be but nothing is going on there is no world. It never happened. It appears to be so real to some of us. The day will come when you give up this world totally and you will be alive and well. (pause) We have a reading from the Ashtravakra-Gita...(corrects himself) Ashtravakra-Gita, a good Gita, a wonderful Gita.

(tape break for reading)

R: I do not see any prashad. We can't eat today. No food. Why'd we come here? (laughter) Oh well. Remember to love yourself. To worship yourself. To pray to yourself. To bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you. I love you om shanti. Until we meet again...until we meet again.

Wasn't that a song "until we meet again." Isn't there an old song, until we meet again. (SD: It was on that tape I gave you of Jim Reeves.) Oh. (laughs) Okay folks this is it...

(tape ends) [TOC]

THE ONLY SPIRITUAL LIFE YOU NEED IS NOT TO REACT!

9th August, 1992

Robert: Hello. (Students: Hello Robert.) Greetings. It is good to be with you once again. We have a few new people here, welcome.

Some of you have come here to hear me talk or to listen to a good sermon or to some philosophy. I do not do these things. I am not a preacher or a philosopher or a sermonizer or anything like that. I am merely here to tell you that you are insane... (students laugh) ...to believe in this world the way it appears. To believe that you are a body going through these experiences. I'm here to tell you that all of your beliefs are nonsense. Everything that you've believed since you were born that has been brainwashed into your head is all a bunch of nonsense. And unless you free yourself from this you're going to go around and around and around never knowing what's going to be next, like a leaf in the wind. Coming back life after life, fighting for survival. Not knowing what is going to happen tomorrow. Watching the news on television seeing all those dastardly things happening in this world, man's inhumanity to man. Worrying, fretting going through the whole thing as most people do.

The good news though is that you do not have to do all this. The good news is that you do not have to suffer in any way, shape, manner. You can become free if you want to. You can awaken to your true Self which is perfect harmony, peace and joy if you want to. You can become perfectly happy without any change in the happiness. To have total unalloyed happiness forever if you want to but you have to pay the price. The price is giving up your ego, killing the mind. Getting rid of the dogmas and concepts, preconceived ideas that you've had for years and years.

How do you do this? By becoming calm, just by becoming calm. If you can truly become calm you will be able to overcome every handicap you've ever had. You will be able to find the peace which passeth all understanding. If you truly learn to be calm the whole world will be yours.

What do I mean by calm? I'm not referring to supplementing your feelings or your emotions. I'm not referring to holding it in, not liking something but you have to be happy about it and putting on an act of happiness or peace. I'm referring to becoming totally calm in your heart. Totally calm in your heart is when you feel that all is well, that there are no mistakes. To be perfectly calm is to feel something divine within yourself, a joy, a love. No thing can upset you any longer. Your whole body is perfectly calm, every cell, every tissue, every atom is at peace. This calmness you cannot even imagine. With many people who say they're calm until someone rubs them the wrong way. Then what happens to their calmness and their peace it's gone. They become agitated, excited. Perfect calmness is when you do not change. No matter what you see, no matter what is going on around you, you stay relaxed peaceful. You may say this is impossible to do, on the contrary, it's not! You can make yourself this way for this is your true state to begin with. Perfect calmness, perfect happiness, perfect peace.

There is an interesting story about Ramana Maharshi that illustrates this point.

When he was living in askandha ashram which is up on the hill in Arunachala. In those days there were many people or sadhus living in the other caves above him. Before he arrived at askandha ashram the so-called sadhus were visited by devotees, disciples, seekers. People would come to them give them food, give them money. But when Ramana Maharshi occupied the cave he was different. He didn't care if anybody came to see him or to give him food or anything else. So with that attitude he attracted more people. People wanted to see this person who needs nothing, who wants nothing, who is still and calm all day long. Flocks of tourists came to see him.

Now the sadhus lived above him about fifty feet above him in the cave became jealous. They decided to kill him. So they rolled boulders down on him. And he would be sitting on a rock outside of the cave looking at the paper and a boulder would fall by the side of him. He never looked up. He never glanced he continued reading the paper. He didn't care. Another boulder came this side of him, same response. The boulders always missed him. This went on for about a week. At which time he got up and went upstairs to the other cave — upstairs as if it's a two storey house...(students laugh) ...he climbed the hill and he looked at the sadhu right in the face who was throwing these boulders and he said, "What are you doing? Why are you doing this?" Just stared at him and left. Something happened to the sadhu by the look Ramana gave him. He changed his mind and never bothered...

(tape break)

...also there is another incident that Ramana told me personally. In 1948, I was at Arthur Osbornes home near Ramana ashram. And Ramana used to walk in there every once in a while. He came in one day, sat down and he started to talk about not reacting to things. He said, "The only spiritual life you need is not to react." And he smiled and he told me this interesting story, that happened to him again.

Back in the 1930s some pundits who lived in Madras decided that Ramana should not remain at Arunachala that he should come to Madras, where many people can see him and be with him. Twelve of them approached Ramana and said, "Ramana we would like you to come to Madras. We're going to take you to Madras where you can be with more people. You are left in the jungle here where hardly anybody knows where you are. Most people do not know about you. We will take you to Madras in two days time." Ramana didn't say a word. In times like this he always kept silent, totally silent, he never answered. His devotees became very worried, very upset because they knew he would never answer, he never does and yet they were going to come in two days and take him away. These were scholarly people. When they left they asked Ramana, "What have you done. By not answering you've agreed to go to Madras with these people?" He just smiled and said, "Don't worry." Two days passed the devotees were biting their fingernails they wanted to lock the doors of the ashram. Some of them wanted to take physical action against these people. For the people from Madras said a group of twenty of us will come in a bus to take him to Madras.

They were supposed to be there at 4 o'clock but they never showed up. Ramana called the cook and he said, "Prepare a meal for twenty people, they will come soon." And all the devotees said, "What are you talking about? Are you going with them? You can't leave us." They were crying and screaming and doing all kinds of things. Ramana said, "Do not worry, prepare food." And they did. At about 6 o'clock the group from Madras entered the hall. They were disheveled. Some of them were bleeding. They sat down in front of Ramana and just looked at him and didn't say a word and he didn't say a word.

What had happened when they were on the bus two miles from the ashram the bus turned over three times. Nobody was seriously hurt but they were in bad shape. They sat on the ashram floor looking at Ramana. After about an hour he said come let's go to the kitchen and eat. He took them into the kitchen, they ate then they came back into the hall and sat down again. After two hours of sitting they got up and went home and nobody ever heard of them again.

Ramana ended the story by telling me that to be calm is the greatest asset in the world. It's the greatest siddhi, the greatest power you can have. If you can only learn to be calm you will solve every problem. This is something you must remember. When you are perfectly calm, time stops. There is no time, karma stops, samskaras stop. Everything becomes null and void. For when you are calm you are one with the entire energy of the universe and everything will go well with you. To be calm means you are in control. You're not worried about the situation, the outcome. What is going to happen tomorrow.

To be calm means everything is alright. There is nothing to worry about, nothing to fret over. This is also the meaning of the biblical saying, "Be still and know that I am God." To be calm is to be still.

If you have a problem right now, think about this problem for a moment. If there is anything wrong with your life, think about this for a moment. As you become calm, peaceful the problem will dissolve of its own nature. There cannot be a problem with a person who is calm. It makes no difference how strong your problem may be if you remain calm throughout it, you will come out smiling, laughing, at peace. To be perfectly calm is the same as self-inquiry. When you ask the question, "Who is upset? Who feels discouraged? Who feels disillusioned?" (Robert asks student) Did you raise your hand Bob? I thought you felt disillusioned. (Robert continues) When you inquire within, "Who feels this?" the feelings begin to disappear, just from the inquiry, which is really interesting. This is why self-inquiry is the best psychotherapy around. Cheapest, because you can do it yourself. Whatever happens in your life it makes no difference what it is, how serious it may be, merely inquire, "To whom does this come? Who is going through this? Who is feeling this?" It's the same as being calm. But once you inquire and ask this question something happens within yourself. There is a shuffling that goes on within yourself. The nervousness, the stress that has been annoying you most of this time starts to back off and you feel good. So even though some of you are not using self-inquiry for liberation or realization. You can use it in your everyday life to become calm, peaceful and happy. If you're doing it for this reason you do not have to go any further.

In other words if you're doing it to solve problems, to get rid of depression, sadness, unhappiness, all you have to do is ask, "To whom does this come? Who is feeling this?" That's all! And become still. You'll notice you're feeling more peaceful, all of your worries are melting, but of course if you wish to become liberated you go all the way with it. You ask, "To whom does this come?" The answer comes, it's happening to me, "I feel this sadness. I feel this stress. Then who am I? Who am I?" All of the time understanding and realizing that this I we're talking about is not you. This I is the ego, the mind, it's not you.

The ego is a knot in your heart that separates the mind from the Self. When you follow the I-thought back to its source the knot becomes untied. When the knot is untied the ego and the mind rush into the heart. They both drown in the heart centre, which is the Self and you become liberated. When you say, "Who am I?" you're really asking, "Where does the I come from? (pause) Where does the I come from?" If you do this correctly you will soon discover that there never was an I to begin with. That the I does not exist whatsoever, at all! And you will be free.

So take an honest look at yourself. Examine your thoughts. Realize that you've been thinking like this for years and years and years. It is your thoughts that bring you problems and troubles. You have believed all this time that thoughts are necessary, you have to have thoughts or you couldn't exist, you couldn't function. On the contrary, when your thoughts are transcended, transmuted the pure awareness takes over. The absolute reality and you will function much better than you did when you think. (Baby makes a noise.) As an example, that little baby does not have to think, it knows somebody takes care of it. Somebody will always take care of it it's got nothing to think about. It has an inner faith that is unconscious that it will always be taken care of.

An apple tree cannot think, yet beautiful apples grow. Imagine for a moment if you will, an apple tree that can think and it's like us. It'll look around and it would say, "I don't want to be near this tree it's a different color than I am I don't like it. I don't like these flowers around me. I don't like the color of my apples. I don't like this and I don't like that." It would become fussy and irritable. And the tree would die by those very thoughts. But because the tree does not think the powers that be take care of it. And it grows into a beautiful apple tree with luscious apples.

This is true of all of nature and babies.

It is only when we grow up and we become babbling idiots. And we start judging, choosing, coming to conclusions about good and bad, right or wrong, this or that. We start comparing and go through the whole nonsense. This is what keeps us back. This is what prevents us from waking up, our thoughts. If only we were like the tree, like a flower, it grows wherever you plant it, it doesn't say to you, "I'd rather be planted across the street. Somebody else's garden." It accepts whatever is done to it and grows into a beautiful flower.

Take a look at yourself, all of your prejudices, all of your dislikes, all of the things you believe are wrong with the world. Who are you to believe anything is wrong with this world? Did you create this world? You had absolutely nothing to do with it. You find yourself as a guest. We have to co-habit with the trees, with the flowers, with the animals, with the minerals, with the people. We're not here to change anything one iota. It is because of man changing things that he suffers. You have to learn to leave things alone, to leave ourselves alone. Do not be harsh with yourself. Start practicing this, being calm, peaceful, relaxed.

Close your eyes for a few moments feel the peace and calmness everywhere. Understand the whole universe is simply a reflection of you. Your eyes are closed there is no universe. You're making up your mind this instant that nothing in this world will ever disturb you again. You have overcome. You understand who you really are now. You are the imperishable Self, all-pervading joy and bliss. The past is dead the future is not here. In this moment all is well. In this moment you are peaceful. You are one with all there is. Whatever needs to be resolved is resolved.

(Silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru. Do we have any stumppers?

Remember to write questions down when you come in. Feel free to ask questions.

SB: Robert what is the role of spiritual experiences. Most of the spiritual paths, the yoga paths they all seek experience as a goal of realization are a means to a goal and yet there are some paths that say all experiences are not the goal they are just a distraction.

R: In truth and in reality there is no goal. For whom is there a goal? Only for the mind to work itself out. But if you can use the wisdom that you already are and just unfold immediately and spontaneously there would be nothing else you have to do. All you have to do is wake up. Awaken to the truth that you're omnipresence, that you are absolute reality, that you are pure awareness. There is no goal. When you search for a goal it never ends. There is no end to a goal.

It's like when you have a goal to buy a house. You save your money, years pass you finally have the nice house that you wanted all of your life. And then when you're in the house you have to buy furniture, you have to decorate it. You have to pay taxes. You have to all sorts of things with your house. So that was only a short goal. And pretty soon you want a bigger house, so you have another goal. It never ends it goes on forever.

Human beings are never satisfied. No matter what they achieve or what they have. We are taught to go after one goal and then another goal and another goal, this is life. But there is no happiness involved, there is no peace. So I say to you do not look for goals. Know the truth and the truth will make you free. The truth is, you are already that. Everything that you are looking for externally is already within yourself. Like when you're having a dream. In the dream you have goals as you're growing up to buy a new house, to buy a new car, to buy land, to get married, to have children. You have one goal after the other and then you wake up. There were no goals at all. It was all a dream you're awake, you are pure, you are consciousness.

And so it is with us in this life. We strive, we go searching for goals. To meet our goals for what? It doesn't bring us happiness. It doesn't bring us peace. It may bring us temporary happiness, temporary peace. Then we always have to look for more and more goals. Instead of searching for goals awaken. Wake up and be free, by inquiring, "Who needs goals?" (SB: So experience doesn't play a part at all or experiences come along the way but they should be more or just...) Experiences seem to play a part for the human being. You learn from experience. But you go through other experiences they never stop. (SB: What about spiritual experiences?) Spiritual experiences makes you go from one path to another path. It makes you study one thing and another thing. It makes you run here and run there it makes you do all kinds of things.

The only spiritual experience you should have is total freedom. And when you have total freedom you don't need any other experience. Wake up entirely and there would be no more experiences. Wake up now. Do it! (SB: Wake up to what?) To the Self. To nothing. And you will be filled with joy and filled with happiness and peace. (SB: It seems to be a grace that has to come because you say to wake up but I don't know - I can feel I'm consciousness but I still don't really realize the status of consciousness what consciousness really is.) Consciousness is really you when you're quiet and still. When you are calm and there are no thoughts then there is consciousness. When there are thoughts, when there are irritations then this holds consciousness back it appears. So try to quiet your mind. Try to be still for long periods of time and you will be yourself consciousness. (SB: And then whatever has to happen from there on it'd be God's business or consciousnesses business.) When you are consciousness you will forget about whatever has to happen. Because whatever has to happen is gone has been transcended. Whatever has to happen is around when there is no consciousness. When there is consciousness there is nothing to happen. What else is to happen, nothing.

SF: If I have a goal it means I want things to be different than they are and there is no way for something to be different than it is at any one time.

R: True it may appear to be different for a while but it always reverts back to something else. Goals never cease. Goals do not bring you happiness or peace. They usually bring you problems.

SH: In consciousness then there is nothing so whatever occurring or happening. (R: Exactly.) It's a tabula rasa? (R: Yes.) It's very simple isn't it?

R: Of course. We're already that. Why do we seek it? This is our true nature and the way to go about it is to keep quiet. Stop the mind from thinking. Do whatever you have to do to quiet the mind. (SH: Who is it that is supposed to stop the mind?) The ego that doesn't exist. (SH: How can something that doesn't exist be a destroyer.) For it appears to exist. (SH: If it doesn't exist it can't do a damn thing?) Of course not. It can't do anything at all it never has to do anything. (SH: Well then why do you say that you have to stop the mind with the ego's action?) For I'm speaking as a human being to a human being which doesn't exist. (SH: Thank you. (laughter) You look pretty good too.) As long as I'm talking I have to use these terms. They do not exist, I don't have to. You're just here to hear me talk and say something. So I say something. (SH: Silence would be better.) Silence, I get a lot of complaints. (SH: You have a tough job.) (laughter) The last two Thursdays ago when we sat for about an hour I had about seven telephone calls. (laughter) (SH: That's your problem.) It's okay.

SF: I have a question. I've been a devotee of Sri Ramana... (R: Rama Krishna) Sir? (R: Rama Krishna?) No Bhagwan. (R: Oh.) For a long time about twenty-four years. And when I finally got to go there in April of 1989. I was there for three and a half days. It was already hot and sticky, over 100... (R: Should have gone in November.) Sir? (R: You should have gone in November.) Well I was in India for another purpose but I wanted to go anyway. And what my question is, when I got there I didn't have this feeling that so many people write about that the feeling that the Master was there in the body. And a lot of the writings make it sound as though if you don't have this feeling, these real strong vibes that you're lacking in spiritual growth. But I did not. But I didn't feel bad about it because I realized if I were to have those feelings I would have and what happens, happens. And there were two statues of black marble - I think it's called black marble - I found them very moving. And I also walked up to askandha ashram... (break in tape) ...a warm feeling from just being in there. And I should have gone down to was it, Virapacha? The other cave farther down but I didn't. That is the first thing I haven't done in my life that I wished I had. And well my question is I shouldn't feel bad should I that I didn't pick up these strong vibes from the overall experience? I wouldn't take a million dollars for having had it. But I've had lots of warm feelings at other places. When I went waiting at Dr. Ganeshwar and I felt really good. So most things happen because they're supposed to happen. It's not a reward or anything like that. Those things happen when they're supposed to happen and they're not necessarily indicative of spiritual growth or lack of it. Is that a fair way to state it?

R: You are correct. The trouble is we compare ourselves with others or we compare what we read in books. We read about people who go there and become enlightened all of a sudden, they awaken, they have all kinds of good feelings. We shouldn't judge these things. Everyone is divine. Everyone will eventually awaken. Do not look at any body else, at the feelings they have or they don't have. You are unique in your own imitable way. You are you. Even when Ramana was alive people came to see him and they said, "Who is this old man. I don't feel a thing. He's just a silly old man." Many people went away with that notion. Therefore do not judge yourself. Do not condemn yourself. You are good just the way you are. (SF: Everyone is.) Of course, again the main problem is we compare ourselves to others. We had a person going into all kinds of Krias, having all kinds of emotional fits and nothing happens to us and we look at ourselves and say, "I must be doing something wrong I'm not holy enough," on the contrary.

I remember one time I visited Muktananda, Swami Muktananda in Fallsbrook or Falls something in New York State. He had a big ashram there, a tremendous hall. And people were in there having all kinds of Krias. Screaming, crying, going into all kinds of postures and Muktananda would walk over to some of these people and look at them and tell the monitors, "Throw them out." Because they were all faking these things. They were all going on with all kinds of nonsense. Everybody's different, as long as you are true to yourself you'll be okay. That is all that matters. Be true to yourself. (SF: The little self is feeling things) Yes. Everything will happen by its own volition when the time is ready.

SH: The self you're referring to is yourself or it's just both.

R: Both selves. The little self, the big Self, the no Self. (SH: No self?) Pick a self.

SB: Is it a special blessing to go to Ramana ashram if ever you have the opportunity?

R: Not really, it depends on the maturity of the person. It depends on the background of the person. If a person is a Christian it would be better if they went to see Christ some place. They may visit a Catholic church someplace where there was a statue of Christ. (SB: I mean a person who is into Advaita?) Advaita and Ramana are one. It's the same thing. But it's a special blessing for you to be yourself. Just being you is a special blessing. Just being who you are. (SB: So it's not anything that's special to visit Ramana?) Yes and no. (SB: That's a direct answer.) Yes, it's beautiful to be there to see everything. To see the shrines, the samadhi, who is interned, to sit in the hall of meditation. This is good for some people. For some people it's not necessary. Everybody is different. Again do not compare yourself with anybody else. Imagine that you're the only person alive in the whole world. There is nobody to compare yourself with. What would you do then? You would just be you. So be you right now. Be yourself and you'll be free.

SK: There is no I who awakens? (R: There is no what?) There is no I who awakens?

R: There is no I who awakens, no. That I never existed. But there is the I-am which is the Self, the absolute reality and even that is doubtful. (SK: Is what?) Doubtful.

SH: Throw it all away. (R: Do not get caught up in words. Go beyond the words into the silence where true reality exists.) Self awakens itself but there is nobody to see? (R: Exactly. There is no one to awaken.) Uh-uh.

R: We have a reading from the Ashtravakra-Gita.

(Tape restarts after reading as Robert continues)

It is now prashad time. The reason you all came here. We have almonds.

THE IMPONDERABLES

13th August, 1992

Robert: All of your desires, all of your needs, all of your wants are already within you, waiting to be fulfilled and expressed. - Ponder this.

All of the Masters, the teachers, the Saints, the Sages that you have worshipped all of your life, whether it's Buddha, Christ, Muhammad, Moses, whomever, have always been within you, waiting to be expressed. - Ponder this.

The only problem you have, that does not allow these Sages, your desires, your wants to be expressed through you, is your noisy mind. - Ponder this.

Whatever you see in your life right now, good or bad, is a result of your thoughts and your belief. It has no other reality. It is not permanent. - Ponder this.

There is absolutely nothing in this universe that can hurt you, or cause you physical harm, or cause you pain, except when your mind is trained to believe these things. - Ponder this.

You have absolutely nothing to do with this world, this universe, or with others. Yet, at the same time, you are this universe, you are places and things and others. - Ponder this.

No one is responsible for where you are right now, whether you like your position or you do not. This is where you are karmically. This is where you're supposed to be, and all is well. - Ponder this.

You are not what you appear to be. The world is not what it appears to be. The universe is not what it appears to be. Your God is not what it appears to be. - Ponder this.

The substratum of all existence is absolute intelligence, choice-less pure awareness. Therefore how can there be evil, so called, on this earth? How can there be sickness, man's inhumanity to man, lack and limitation on this earth, if the substratum is pure consciousness? - Ponder this.

Everything that you behold with your senses is an optical illusion. - Ponder this.

There is only one intelligence, one consciousness, one awareness, one ultimate reality, one life, and you are that. - Ponder this.

To free yourself from this optical illusion, this maya, the mind has to be controlled, by finding its source. - Ponder this.

You find the source of the mind by following it to its original place of origin. From where did it arise? Who gave it birth? How did you come by a mind? By inquiring into the nature of the Self you attain unconditional freedom. - Ponder this.

When one intelligently investigates the source of I, one then ultimately becomes free from the bondage of I, and becomes all-pervading, omnipresent consciousness. - Ponder this.

Your past only exists because you think about it. Your fears, your frustrations, only exist because you think about them. Where would they come from if you didn't think about them, if you didn't bring them into play in the present? Where would they come from? How would they be there? You are the cause of all of your problems. - Ponder this.

The so-called good things of your life are equal to the bad things of your life. They are both karmic, and you have created these things at one time or another. You are now experiencing them. The only way to remove them from your life is through inquiry. "To whom do they come? What is their source?" - Ponder this.

Who is the one that is pondering all these things? That one must go! - Ponder this.

You have absolutely nothing to do with pondering anything, for the truth is already present, shining in all its glory and splendor, and you are that. - Ponder this.

There is really nothing you have to do to become self-realized, only to get yourself out of the way. - Ponder this.

Since there is no one to ponder, why are you pondering this? You are beyond pondering, beyond trying to change conditions, beyond trying to improve your humanhood, beyond trying to get along in this world. Since you are already the world, there is nothing else to do but to awaken to the truth. - Ponder this.

To be yourself means not to be the body, or the mind, or the conditions in your life. - Ponder this.

To be always happy, to be always contented, always at peace, and not to think at all, are the marks of a realized being. - Ponder this.

What you see in this world is only yourself. You can never see anything else. Wherever you look, you will see yourself. If you have troubles, you will see troubles everywhere. If you are at peace with yourself, you will see peace everywhere. You are the cause and creator of your particular world, and yet you have the power to change it, by turning within and not reacting to the things of this world whatsoever. - Ponder this.

You are born into a certain situation, with certain parents, a certain religion, a certain environment. This is all right, and this is all good, and this is how it should be. Use the opportunity to awaken. Instead of feeling sorry for yourself, and comparing yourself with others, use the opportunity to awaken, to become totally free, by negating all these things and understanding the truth about yourself. - Ponder this.

There are no situations or conditions that come into your life that you cannot handle. You have been given the power to handle everything that comes your way. The wise person does not feel sorry for themselves, but rather transcends and transmutes their environment, their conditions, by turning within, and realizing the truth, "I am Brahman. I am absolutely pure awareness. I am consciousness. I am sat-chit-ananda. I am that" - Ponder this.

It is a rare privilege to be born as a human being, even though it is an illusory birth. But to be born as a human being is the only way you can find yourself. An animal, a tree, a mineral cannot do this. You have been given the rare opportunity of birth so that you may find self-realization, and unfold into your true nature. Do not use your time for anything else. This is the purpose of being in this birth, to become absolutely free and liberated. - Ponder this.

You do not know how much time you have left in this body. You may be called home tomorrow. You may leave your body tonight, this very hour. What have you been doing with your life? For it is this which determines where you go from here. This life is a continuum. It doesn't end. It merely continues from where you left off. This is why people who commit suicide make a grave mistake, for they think they are going to become totally free and liberated. On the contrary, you will take a short rest, on one of the astral planes, and then you will continue where you left off. Your job is to find total realization, to become absolutely free, and not come around the circle again and again. Rebirth, problems, trying to get off the wheel, this is for children. Become free by inquiring, "Who is it that's bound?" - Ponder this.

Do not believe that anything that has happened to you, to your body, to your affairs, has been erroneous. Everything that's happened to you has been necessary. You are in your right place, going through the right conditions. You are with the right people. You are where you're supposed to be. The wise person does not complain about their lot. They rise higher by self-inquiry, by explaining to themselves, inquiring within themselves, "How did I come here? What is my source? Who am I?" and becoming totally free and liberated. - Ponder this.

There never was a time when you were not, and there will never be a time when you disappear. There is no birth for you, there's no prevailing of the body, there's no disappearance. There's only eternal life. - Ponder this.

The mind cannot destroy the mind. Pondering cannot destroy the mind. Thinking cannot destroy the mind. The only way to destroy the mind is to inquire, "To whom is there a mind?" - Ponder this.

You are already free and liberated, and there's really nothing you have to do. Just be yourself. - Ponder this.

To be yourself means that you're nothing else. To be yourself means that you're not the body, nor the mind, nor the world, nor its things. To be the Self means that you are the imperishable Self, which is all-pervading. Water cannot drown it, fire cannot burn it. You are that Self that has always existed. Some people call the Self "God," some people call the Self "Brahman," some people call the Self "choice-less, effortless, pure awareness." It makes no difference what you call the Self. Just to know you are that, will free you immediately. - Ponder that.

There is really no one who can do anything for you. I cannot really do anything for you, because I am really in yourself. There's no difference between myself and yourself. There's one Self. Therefore, when you look at me, you see your Self. What do you see? - Ponder this.

Ponder the one who has been pondering all this time.

Ask yourself, "Who am I? Why is it so hard to become the pure unblemished Self? For whom is it hard?" Ask yourself, "Why do I think I'm human, and have to go through experiences? Who is human? Who has to go through experiences?" Ask yourself. - Ponder this.

That's enough pondering. Feel free to ask questions. You've pondered yourself out.

SL: Robert when you say, "Follow the I-thought to the source, is there a source?"

R: Apple sauce. (laughter) There is a source as long as you are human. When you are human you are a person, you're a lady. Then when you're working on yourself then you have to follow yourself to the source, the I-thought. But when you awaken there never was a source. That is why I always say, "Apple sauce." Because the source only exists like the body exists. Like the world exists. Like the universe exists. For whom is there a source? For the person who has to find it. Therefore as you find the source, as you go towards the source and you do it endlessly, the source and all its manifestations will disappear totally and completely. (SL: So there is a moment when a person is on the verge of enlightenment will say, "Oh there's the source, " and then the source disappears?) No. They will not say, "There's the source." For there will be nobody to say that, left. As long as you say, "There's the source," there is a semblance of the ego left, of the mind that says that. When you really awaken there will be nothing left to say or do or be.

SF: The source itself is a creation of the mind? (R: Yes.) (SL: What?)

R: The source itself is a creation of the mind. But as long as you're using your human faculties to find yourself, we have to talk about a source. (SL: It feels like you're chasing a ghost through an empty house that doesn't exist.) (laughter) That is what you're doing. But who is doing the chasing? The one that is doing the chasing does not exist either. Yet you have to do all these things to awaken. Not really, you don't have to do these things but you want to do these things. Otherwise you would just awaken and be free. Right now!

Think, "what's holding me back from awakening right now?"

SV: (student laughs to himself) (R: Right Fred, that's it.) Thinking.

SF: Thinking I am an individual.

R: Of course, thinking anything. Who gave you permission to think? (laughter) (S: You did.) (laughter) I'm trying to stop you from thinking. To pull your mind away and be free of it. Many of you think it's so important to think. You believe if you didn't think your world will fall apart. On the contrary, if you didn't think you would become one peaceful happy person. You would have total peace and total happiness and you will always do the right things. But because you think you have to think, the problems arise, problems come and go. You exchange one thought for another. And you keep playing these games with yourself. Until you get down to facts and you get down to the place where you want to stop thinking and be liberated, you put this first in your life. You have to be totally honest with yourself by asking yourself, "What is first in my life?" Do not fool yourself.

The first thing in your life is what you think about most of the time. If you believe there is something wrong someplace you are holding yourself back tremendously from being liberated. Just by that thought, that something is wrong, either with me or with the world or with somebody else. That thought alone keeps you back. Bounds you, keeps you bound. Break the bondage by removing the fear of stopping your thoughts. Feel deep in your heart that nothing in this universe can ever hurt you or wants to hurt you. Everything has been necessary in your life. It's all good. As you see yourself this way your consciousness will expand and you will make tremendous progress on this path.

SR: The main thing I've gotten out of tonight Robert, is a feeling of hopelessness. When I see what a gaol that I've created for myself with all these thoughts or perceptions or opinions. It seems like a vice the I gets used to this. It seems so strong. It seems like you can't open the door, like a lock, and every new perception or every new thought is another lock on the door with a million locks on the door. Can you comment on that?

R: Of course. Inquire, "To whom does this come? Who has this problem?" As long as you think yourself as George, then George has this problem. When you begin to see that you're not George or you never were George, George is just a name given to you at birth. You really are all-pervading consciousness. There is no lock, there never was a lock. You're not bound, there never was bondage.

It's like the story of the person who was thrown into a dungeon. And he was in the dungeon for many years. They forgot all about him. They would just sort of put the food under his cell everyday. And he just sat there crying to himself year after year saying, "How did I get into this bondage? How did I get thrown into this dungeon?" Feeling sorry for himself. One day after being in prison for many years he became very aggressive with himself. And he said, "I no longer care about being alive or dead. I no longer care about being here. I no longer care about anything." And he went to hit his head against a wall. He hit his head against the door of the cage, of the dungeon. And low and behold the door was open. The door had always been open, it was never locked.

For twenty odd years that he was in prison the door was never locked. It was only when he had the courage to stand up tall and all fear was gone that he found out the door was open. So he simply walked out of the gaol. Noone recognized him. Noone knew him. Noone had seen him in twenty years and he was completely free. So it is with us, we are in a gaol of our own making. We limit ourselves. We feel limited to a body, circumstances. We think we're a human, real and subject to disease, karma, all kinds of problems. This is your gaol. It is in your belief system.

In truth noone was ever bound. There is noone to become free. You are Brahman. And you've always been pure awareness. This is your reality, this is you. (break in tape)

And the fellow opened the door and walked out. When you realize that you are that you will become omnipresence, all-pervading consciousness.

SK: This may be a good point, I don't know. At the museum of industries, science they had all these galaxies on the wall and they were explaining all the different galaxies in there. One star was twenty-million years old or something and it stated that this star is made out of exact same properties that human beings are made out of. It was kind of...puts you in awe, you know. It makes you feel good, all this stuff.

R: This simply means that human beings are the microcosm in the macrocosm. Within yourself is the whole universe. The difference between two atoms are the equivalent distance between two planets. And if you go within the atom within yourself you will find comparable universes. And they have atoms and go within that atom and there are more universes. There is no end to it. Infinite, mind boggling. But the question remains, "Who are you that experiences this?" That is what you have to find out.

SG: Now Robert are the thoughts that we have linked just inside the brain? Or do these thoughts exist like atoms outside the brain and the brain is an antennae that picks up thoughts?

R: The brain is part of the body. The body itself is a thought. Therefore what you call the brain is a thought. It doesn't really pick up anything. It appears to be a thought that you are able to think about other people, other places, other things. But in reality it's only the result of the mind, or the ego, or the I-thought. All these things are synonymous. We can say something like the ego, the mind is like a knot between the I-thought and the personality. When the knot gets cut everything merges in the Self, in the heart. You become totally free. Therefore, all the thoughts that you think with your brain come from the mind. When the mind goes the brain will just be a simple function of the body that will be keeping you alive like you are now. Only you will know the reality that you are not that at all! Yet you will be able to function beautifully. Everything will be done the way it's supposed to be done. And you will be at peace.

SS: Robert in deep sleep does the mind exist or not? Who remembers I'm in deep sleep?

R: In deep sleep I exist. The mind does not exist. In deep sleep the witness of the sleep exists. This is why when you get up you can say I slept well, I slept good. Think of what you're saying, you're saying, "I slept well. I slept good." If you had any dreams, you will say, "I dreamt." And when you are awake like you seem to be now, you will say, "I am awake." But notice the I was the witness to all three states of consciousness. To the waking state, to the dream state and to the deep sleep state. When you discover who the I is, you will realize the I is really Brahman. Sat-chit-ananda. And there is no one to sleep, no one to dream, and no one to be in this consciousness that seems to be real.

This waking state is just another dream, that's all. So find out who the I is who sees this, who witnesses this and you'll become totally free of the whole ball game.

SR: I just had an insight Robert that might be helpful to someone else. I just saw that every time I stop myself from doing something or saying something because of a fear of being embarrassed, that all I'm doing is strengthening my ego. (R: True.)

SK: Also what you're saying is that the I is really independent of everything that is going on in my life? (R: Yes) But it gets identified with it and it thinks it's really happening to me? (R: Exactly) And it really isn't.

R: It's happening to the I. (SK: Thank you.) But it has nothing to do with you. The I is going through all of these experiences, the I-thought. But if you can really separate yourself from the I, you will see that you never had any... (SK: This is the I that witnesses?) The I is the witness but in reality the I is the I-am. The I is really Brahman. And we think the I... (SK: But we identify with it?) We identify with the I and we think the I is us. I have a body, I have a pain, I feel this and I feel that. So we have lowered Brahman into a material world, so-to-speak. (SK: Yes.) But as we continue searching for the I and following the I, the I will turn into Brahman. The I will become I-am.

SH: Which it always was? (R: Which it always was, yes.) It just took a little vacation? (R: Exactly.) Why does it do that? Such a stupid process.

R: It didn't really do that. You should question yourself, "To whom does it do that to? Who believes this?" (SH: Well the notion of the separate I arises from pure consciousness. Where else can it come from?) No. (SH: Where does it come from?) Where does the water in the mirage come from? (SH: It doesn't.) Exactly. (laughter) It's an optical illusion. We are talking about these things. We have to use words to explain these things and we get into all kinds of nonsense. If you can only understand that nothing exists, there is no-thing that actually exists the way you think it does. Then you'll realize that consciousness cannot do anything to anything. Consciousness is self-contained pure awareness. It only knows itself. It knows nothing but itself. It knows itself as absolute reality. (SH: Does it act as a screen for all these scribbles of the...?) That is a stage we go through too. We use a screen image. (SH: That is just an image?) Yes.

SH: It really has nothing to do with consciousness but we attribute consciousness is the screen that all this is written. (R: Yes) But that isn't true? (R: No, not really.) Why do we say it like it is true?

R: Because we refuse to sit in the silence. If we would sit in the silence we would realize that all this is a lie. When I try to sit in the silence with you people for an hour or so, you complain to me. You call me on the telephone, you say, "Robert why don't you say something?" (laughter) (SH: Why don't you lie to us some more.) That is what I've been doing all this time. (laughter)

ST: But the people who are for that are being silent are you counting their vote also?

R: Well fortunately there are more people who want me to talk than there are more people who want to keep silent.

SH: But you're a big boy you don't have to follow what those people want?

R: Well I'm here to be of service and while I'm here we'll talk a little, keep silent a little. We'll do whatever we have to do.

SG: We can have one night of total silence for those who are interested?

R: I suppose we can.

SU: If silence is within ourselves how do we maintain it if we don't maintain it? (R: If the silence is within yourselves then how will you maintain it if you don't maintain it?) I maybe in the wrong silence?

R: And even the wrong silence will turn into havoc. You will hear scratching and moaning. (laughter)

SH: It'll give a wonderful opportunity to watch your monkey mind, objectify it. (R: Sure) That is what we do anyway, in any case. Watch...the witness of the mind's shenanigans.

R: Of course, we're doing the right things.

SG: If a person is meditating or sitting in the silence he can only know I mean...I think in my mind there is always something going on, there is always this stuff going on. That is what I think the world always is, right?

R: Umm, sure, but you think and believe that is the world. You create the world. Always remember everything is in a state of flux. Nothing is solid in this universe. (SG: Nothing is what?) Solid, everything is in a state of movement. The mind is the energy that causes the change to take place. That moulds the energy into what you believe.

That's why certain metaphysical organizations teach you about mind. They tell you that mind is the most powerful tool you've got and you can become anything by thinking about it. And you can! But what you're doing is you're pulling yourself back into maya by using your mind. It is true you can do all kinds of things by using your mind. But in the highest truth you will be downgraded, you will pull yourself down. The highest teaching is to destroy the mind, to get rid of it completely, absolutely. Then the absolute reality becomes prevalent.

SK: Robert, the pure witness, whatever that maybe is a pretty neat thing in this part of the duality.

R: The pure witness is beyond duality. But it is not realization. (SK: Is there not a witness that is experiencing witnessing objects. Isn't that a dualistic situation?) Yes you can call it dualistic, sure. (SK: This is a two part question.) Sure what's the other part? (SK: Okay maybe the word pure witness is...let's assume there is some kind of a witness that can be an experience of witnessing others in a kind of wonderful, magical detached way as compared with normal human experience. So I guess you already answered the first part of the question. On the way to reality I guess eventually that has to go to?) Yes. (SK: And that dissolves?) The pure witness can be compared to the screen. (SK: The second part of the question is sort of speculative I guess, but on the way to this reality business whatever it may be. Could it be that some people maybe hang out more in that witness space than others?) Well of course, it's all very possible. People hang out in all kinds of places. (SK: Do I have to spend a certain number of days in the witness before you can...?) Is that a question you asked? (SK: It started to be one but I stopped in the middle of it so that I could make sense of it. I'll be quiet now.) (laughter) The screen is the witness of all the images superimposed on it. The screen is also like the paper on which typeset is imposed upon. You type on the paper, but if you were not the paper you couldn't type on it. You have to have the paper in order to be able to type on it. So what we do is we read the words, the images and forget about the paper in which it's imposed. The words are superimposed on the paper. So it is with us. In reality you are like the screen or the paper. And all of the world images are imposed on you, superimposed on you. So in a way you can consider that duality but it's a very high state of duality.

SK: I can be noisy again. (R: Umm.) Can you talk about a few kinds of witnesses experiences. You can surely talk about a witness experience whether it was an experience of being a witness or witnessing objects, be they thoughts or physical things or sensations. You can talk about that kind of experience. But isn't there another kind of witnessing that you frequently refer to that doesn't have that particular division between witnesser and that which is witnessed.

R: As long as you are witnessing there has to be something that you witness. There has to be an object to witness or you couldn't be the witness. (SK: Somehow there is some kind of awareness that happens that includes the same sort of thing even if there are no objects so-to-speak.) You are speaking about the time I talk about the paradox of being the Self and also seeing the images, which is a paradox. Where you realize your Self as the Self, the way that a Jnani that is embodied sees the world. The Jnani sees the world as the Self. Everything is the Self and that is never forgotten. Everything is the screen and all the images, people, places and things are superimposed on the Jnani. The Jnani is aware:

1: That he or she is all-pervading omnipresence.

2: There is nothing else but the Self which is the Jnani in expression.

3: The Jnani is able to see both, the objects like the average human being sees them, but sees them as the Self.

So it becomes a little mind boggling when you get to that stage because you can't explain it. There are no words to explain this. The finite can never comprehend the infinite. But suffice is to say, that only the Self exists and all is well.

Mary why don't you read the Jnani?

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Now let us sit in the silence for a while. We are not meditating, we are simply sitting in the silence, observing our thoughts. Watching what goes on inside. Do not try to change your thoughts or push them away. Just observe, watch and everything will take care of itself.

(long silence)

R: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om peace.

Do we have any messages?

SM: No, we do have some of the new transcripts that came in today on the table.

R: We have prashad to eat. These look good. Pass it that way. We have...

IS THE WORLD REALLY AN ILLUSION?

16th August, 1992

Robert: Good afternoon. It is good being with you again. You're very brave souls to come out in this heat. Many people can't take it but you're here, this means something. I don't know what it means but it means something. It's good to see you. We'll discuss two topics today. One is...one is what let's see. I'm trying to pick up what I should talk about. What you have to hear. So we'll go back to the two topics. One is why do some people practice spiritual practices, sadhana for many many years and nothing happens. And some people do not practice perhaps, never practice become enlightened so-to-speak.

The second topic is: Is the world really an illusion? It's so hard to comprehend the world as being an illusion. It seems ludicrous to say something like this, "The world is an illusion. That this world does not exist. Here it is facing us. So am I crazy?" Yes, we'll see where we go.

The first topic: Why is it that so many people practice sadhana for many many years and nothing really outstanding happens to them? They may feel better about themselves to an extent. Things may improve in their humanhood to an extent but nothing drastic happens like waking up, becoming liberated. And yet all of you have read about people who have been illumined by doing absolutely nothing. They just awoke.

You have to remember that this life in which you are appearing right now is only a split second in eternity. You believe so much in your humanhood that you think you live a long time and you're important and what you do matters. You don't see that your life is but a split second in eternity.

It's like this keyhole example that I always give you. You look through the keyhole and you see a certain situation happening and that is all you see. You therefore react to that situation which you see through the keyhole. But if you saw the whole picture if you were able to open the door you would see really what's going on. That's how it is with this body in this age. Your time allotted to you in this particular body is like looking through the keyhole. You're only seeing partially what is going on. Therefore if you understand this and you know what I'm talking about why would you react?

You look through the keyhole and you see somebody stabbing somebody. And you get excited, "Look what's going on. There is a murder going on." That's all you see. Yet if you open the door widely you would see that in a previous life the person being stabbed, stabbed the person who is stabbing. What goes around comes around. And if you continue looking you would see that both people, the person being stabbed and the person who is stabbing are laughing in the end, so-called. And nobody killed and nobody got killed. It just didn't happen.

Another good example of that is when you see a movie. The same thing happens. There is a beginning a middle and an end. But you see the whole movie, you see the beginning the middle and the end. Yet your life is like the middle of the movie. You don't know the beginning. The beginning is not when you are born. That is not the beginning. The end is not when you leave your body so-to-speak. Life is a continuum. There was never a beginning and there is no middle and there is no end.

Now remember something else as I share these things with you. I'm not speaking about anything I read in a book or what some wise teacher told me. I am speaking of my own experiences. It's not hard to sit with you and tell you something somebody else told me or something I read in a book. I wouldn't be worth anything. I would never be able to help you to unfold and become free. I'm just relating to you what somebody told me or something that I read. Always bare this in mind.

That when I had my illumination which was uncalled for when I was fourteen years old. I went through the whole experience of life in an instant, birth, growth, death, astral planes, causal planes, different planets. It all happened instantaneously to me it was very clear. And it left me in a state of consciousness where I can explain this to you. To share this with you and make you see that this is the truth. Even though perhaps you're not yet feeling anything like this. So to get back to the subject.

Everything that has happens to you in this life has been preordained. As long as you believe you are a body-mind and you do not awaken yet, everything is preordained, everything. Nothing happens by chance, nothing. The best thing to do if you are on the path is not to pay too much attention to these things. Because it will drive you crazy if you think about it too much. You'll be thinking, "How much time do I have left? Will I be awakened in this life? Is there any bad karma coming to me?" You'll be thinking, thinking, thinking all this all the time and you will not be able to function or focus.

This is why the Sage tells you, "Live in the moment. Do not think of the past. Do not worry about the future." If you look properly in the moment you will be taken care of correctly. For in the moment no thing is happening. In a split second nothing is happening. It is only when the mind starts thinking, starts moving. When the energy of the mind starts to move then the universe moves. Things happen when the mind moves. The mind is all karmic. And the mind does things that is supposed to happen to you because of prarabdhic karma... (tape break) ...you will be awakened in the right time. Do not worry about this. Do not concern yourself about this. I hear from so many people who have lived in India, ten years, twenty years and they're sort of disillusioned because nothing is happening. They lived in the great ashrams where great Saints used to live. I hear from christians. I hear from muslims. They all tell me basically the same thing.

A girl called me yesterday she's been a sufi for fifteen years. She told me it was exciting when she first got into it and the teaching is wonderful. But she is becoming discouraged, disillusioned for nothing is happening. When you talk like this it's a big ego trip. For it is your ego that says these things. It is the ego that tells you all of this. That tells you what state of consciousness you're in. That tells you why it is taking so long. Let's change teachers. Let's go to India. Let's go to Tahiti. Let's go here, let's go there, let's read this book, let's read that book. This all has to do with your ego. If you could only comprehend that everything is preordained you would not worry. There would be absolutely nothing for you to worry about. Nothing for you to fear. Nowhere for you to go. You just look at this world and not react. Then you will make progress.

As I was emphasizing in yesterdays class the idea is not to add new techniques to the old techniques. Never practice new yoga's, new Zen movements, new sufi movements. Not to add anything on but to subtract. To remove the karmas, the world. Just like you peel an onion. To get to the juicy onion you have to get to layer after layer after layer. Not add layers after layer after layer. Yet no matter how many times I say this to people they're always reading a new book, find a new method they look for a new teacher, they're adding, adding, adding, adding, adding. This is a grave mistake. You want to remove those things that have been hanging on to you including the teachings. Including what you know about the teachings. Awakening does not come to a person that knows the most teachings. Many of us believe that the more I know about the teachings the sooner I will awaken. This is a fallacy. It has absolutely nothing to do with how many teachings you know. How you've mastered them. It has to do with how many teachings you let go of. You see it's in reverse.

Many people talk to me to show me how intelligent they are, in yoga, in christianity, in all kinds of teachings. They recite the Kabbalah to me; they tell me all kinds of things. They know. I do not have the heart to tell them to let go of it because they have been studying these things for years and years and years. Yet the truth is you have to drop everything. Let go of everything even what I'm sharing with you. Do not hold onto it, empty your mind of it become free of it. There is something there that will take care of itself when the time is ready for you. Everybody is completely and totally different.

Before you came into this body — if you were meant to be liberated in this life — the time has been planned for you. June the second 1994, 3 o'clock. It's all been laid out, all been planned. There is absolutely nothing that you have to do. There's really no action you have to take. The only thing you really have to do is be calm, peaceful, practice loving kindness, forget about the past — that's an important one — never mind how old you are or how many years you've been practicing, how many teachers you've had, how many books you've read. Drop it! You have to act sort of as if you were just born every moment. Everything will unfold by itself. You have to get yourself totally out of the way. It is you who cause the problems in your life whether you know it or not. And some people are so stubborn, so stubborn and they're holding on to stuff. Hurts from twenty years ago. Things people did to them. They went to prison for five years perhaps for something they didn't do and have hate inside of them. We're here on this earth to go through these experiences so we can drop them and let them go and go forward. It's up to you to do this to yourself. To let go of your entire past and stop thinking of the future. Again you may say, "If I don't think of the future how can I plan? How can I make things happen?" It's already been planned for you. The happenings have already been made for you.

Does a tree have to plan when it's going to grow apples? Does the grass have to plan when it's going to grow? Does anything in nature plan anything? The food that we eat has anybody planned this food for us? All this food has already been here on this earth when we came to it. We have been totally provided for. Everything has been provided. But you think you have been estranged from everything. So you have to fight for yourself. You have to stick up for your rights. You have to do this and you have to do that. You step in somebody's shoes, you hurt people because you think you have to survive. All of this causes suffering. A true devotee forgets about all these things. Stays put in the now, in the here and now, in the moment. Realizing all is well.

So look at your life what you're going through. Do not condemn yourself but realize that you're responsible for everything that has happened to you. Who else can be responsible? And remember if you react to it you're just causing new problems for yourself and keeping yourself earthbound again and again and again. And the appearance of that you go through life after life after life after life playing games with yourself. You're doing the whole thing. Therefore trust the power within you. Realize everything you need, your wants are within you. The kingdom of heaven is within you.

That's the first part. As I mentioned there are two parts that we're going to discuss.

The second part: How can this world be an illusion? It seems so real. I'm affected by it. It shows me all kinds of things. But notice what you're doing you're referring to yourself continuously. It's always me it's always I. I'm affected by it, I go through all these experiences, I see this world as it is. And this is a big ego trip again, because what you're really saying is I know. And the world affects me and it must be real. Isn't that what you're really saying? You are saying that you know. You are sure because I feel this way and I feel that way. Who are you? Where do you come from who feels this way and that way? You think you're so important. This is what is called ego of course.

And you tell me, "Robert I broke my arm last night don't tell me the world is an illusion look I'm in a cast. Don't tell me that nonsense." Even science tells us today that the world is an illusion, mighty science. Science agrees with this now. Why? Because everything is subject to the law of change. If nothing is permanent how can you say the world is real? Or this tree may live about three, four hundred years but it will go sooner or later. Elvis Presley may be around for another two hundred years but he'll fade away sooner or later and people will forget all about him. A mighty mountain even Arunachala will only last so long and be gone and disappear.

Remember this earth has been around for billions and billions of years. We have had many civilizations on this earth that have come and gone. Civilizations mightier than ours, more advanced. And there have been high teachings, spiritual teachings, it's all gone.

Everything is gone. So here we are we appear as we appear and we start to act as if we know something. We sort of think that we are smart. "Whatever happens to me is an experience," we say, "therefore I know." In other words we are reacting to person, place and thing.

Again you look at the dream state. This gives you a clue. In the dream everything appears so real. If we were having a dream right now and we were having a class like this. I'm sitting here talking to you and you're telling me, "Robert you're crazy. The world is not an illusion. We're sitting here. I behold you, I behold the trees, I behold the mountains. I come over and pinch you and you say, "Ow!" I try to explain, "This is a dream pinch. It's a dream observation but you don't believe me." You say, "He's crazy." But the time comes when you wake up from the dream doesn't it? And then you laugh and you say, "What a dream I had?" The dream is gone and here you are in another dream, the waking dream so-to-speak. Yet you take everything seriously. You try to fix things. You're always seeing something wrong. You're always believing you have to correct something. You have to straighten somebody out. You have to make somebody know the truth and preach to them and tell them your truth. You debate, you argue hour after hour, week after week, month after month, year after year. And pretty soon your hair turns white and you become seventy, eighty years old you're still arguing, you're still contradicting, you're still fighting.

What has become of you? You have become totally disillusioned, disenchanted. And then the time comes for you to leave your body and you do it all over again. Same thing all over again, different places, different faces, different people maybe a different planet. So how can this world be real? Again, let's get back to science. Everything from science comes from the same source, everything. If I take your body, the chair, the microphone, the cup and I started to break it down I would get molecules, atoms, subatomic particles, pure energy, no human being can go further than that. But from the pure energy you get the void. The void you've heard about in Buddhism, in zen, this is not the end. From the void you get absolute reality and from absolute reality you get yourself, you. This is the way it works. I've been there I've seen it. The end result of everything is you. Nothing else exists.

I don't mean you as your body as you appear now with all your troubles and problems and frustrations. I mean the you, the I-am, the one. Now the I-am, the oneness, the pure awareness is so far out that I shouldn't even talk about it. It is something the finite mind can never comprehend. It is really not an experience, it is nothing. It is something beyond all comprehension. It is something we waste our time by talking about it but you can become it! That's the good news. When you become it, whatever it may be, there is a feeling that is ineffable. There is a knowledge. A knowledge that there is no birth, nothing was born. There is a knowledge that nothing prevails. By nothing prevails I mean we do not go through any experiences after we're born at all. And there is a knowledge that you never disappear. What can you be? Don't ask yourself this question you will never find out in your present state. This only becomes clear to you when you awaken.

But yet the contradiction, the paradox is do not think of awakening. For by thinking of awakening keeps you back. It keeps you back because you have a preconceived idea of what awakening is and you keep saying to ourselves, "Boy I want to be that. I want to be that. I can't wait to awaken I want to be that." I want to be what? There is nothing to be. When you awaken so-to-speak there is noone to be anything. So can't you see by saying, "I want to be that, I want to awaken," you're pulling yourself backwards. You're going backwards. This is why I talk so much about having a peaceful mind. It all begins in your mind. When the mind becomes quiescent, quiet it can go deeper within itself. But when you are making a lot of noise debating, arguing, trying to put people down, trying to discover faults in people, doing all the things you do, you are just being pulled backwards.

So the world is an illusion to the one that is not the world. As long as you are the world and you feel things of this world you shouldn't walk around saying, "The world is an illusion," because that sounds ridiculous. You can't prove it. You shouldn't walk around telling people, "I am not the body or the mind." If somebody tells me that I say, "Show me." This is why the greatest saint keep still. The greatest Sage keeps quiet. People come to the Sage they argue about this they argue about that they complain about everybody. The Sage just keeps quiet. Where are you coming from right now? You have to be totally honest with yourself. What's going on inside of your head? It is you who has kept yourself back all of these years. By arguing, by fighting, by trying to prove points, by doing this and doing that. How should you live? In an atmosphere of loving kindness.

You should have loving kindness for every human being. Never mind who they are, what they've done. Your job is to have loving kindness for them. I'm not saying you have to live with them. Just have loving kindness. Your job is to make your mind peaceful. Do whatever it takes to make the mind quiet, peaceful, relaxed, harmonious. Your job is to do unto others as you have them do unto you. Look at everybody like yourself. Whenever you're going to take an action against anybody ask yourself before you do, "Would I do this to myself?" Because there is only one Self. Whatever I give to someone, whatever I take to someone, whatever I think of someone I'm only thinking about myself. I am the one. This is where you should start.

If you can practice self-inquiry by all means do that. If you cannot do whatever you have to do to become free and liberated, whatever that means, by not reacting. By leaving people alone. By not coming to any conclusion. It's up to you.

You have any questions?

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Robert, how can I get rid of this desire for liberation? The myth that there is something I can attain in the future.

A: We talked about that, stop wanting it, stop desiring it, stop thinking about the future. Work on yourself in the now. Go out and help the poor the homeless. Do something good for someone. Forget about liberation, delusion. Forget about the past, about the future. Live today as if it was your last day on earth. Be happy, love everyone and everything will take care of itself.

Q: I see one thought is telling one thought what to do?

A: So what do you want me to do? (laughter) Punch out the thought, kick it. One thought is telling another thought what to do? Be the observer of the whole thing. Be the witness of that game. Just watch it don't do anything. Watch it. Watch one thought telling another thought what to do. If you are really able to watch this and observe this the thoughts will become weaker and weaker and weaker they have to. Because you're not responding to them. You are not giving them any action. Thoughts like action. They tell you, "Somebody called me a dirty son of a so and so. I'm going to call that guy up and give him a piece of my mind." That's what the thoughts like they like action. They want you to do something. When we observe and you just watch those thoughts they become weak and run away. (pause) Next case.

Q: Do you think that people is decided what will do in their life when they was born? (R: That is nearly as bad English as I speak. What was that question?) (laughter) It says do you think that people is decided - probably they mean - do you think that people are decided what they will do in their life when they were born.)

A: Yes we discussed this. Everything is preordained, everything is decided for you. You have nothing to do but to be yourself, be happy. Everything that you're supposed to do and supposed to go through in this life you're doing right now. Your job is to turn within, seek the kingdom of God by becoming quiet and still and all these things will be added unto you. Which means your life will have whatever it needs to go through this sojourn peacefully, happily but you have to never react to anything. Just turn within. See the one life. See the oneness in everything. Bless everyone, love everyone, condemn nothing, especially not yourself. Forgive yourself of past sins of omission and commission and forgive everybody else of their sins of omission and commission. Leave the world alone and you will be happier than you've ever been in your life.

Q: If I don't read books on spirituality my mind will fill up on other books.

A: If you do not read books on spirituality why should you read other books? If you're going to read, read spiritual books. But if you do not read books on spirituality do not read other books either. You are a book yourself, there are many stories in you. Look at the stories in yourself. If you investigate yourself you will not have time to read too much. Take a good look at your greed, your lust, your hate. All these things that keep you back. Look at these things intelligently. See what's going on within you, that's your book, removing those traits, becoming kind and simple and peaceful. If you're doing this work on yourself you will not have time to read pornographic books or fairy tales or fiction or the best seller in the New York times, you'll be too busy getting rid of the stuff that keeps you back, working on yourself. That's it.

Anybody like to say something? Make a comment? Have a question? Or an answer? (SC: Yeah.) Nate?

SC: When I first came here, a year ago more or less I wasn't into it. Now that I want to be into it...like I came a little late because of circumstances, it was really...what you said really struck home and I know there is nothing I can do yet I feel helpless that I can do nothing. It's frustrating. When you said that you took this mathematical test and you woke up and you were free apparently that's not the only way for it to happen. I'm not saying take a mathematical test but...now that I can see where I'm coming from, the mind's coming from and there is nothing that I can do because whatever I do will be the mind...let's say it could be, it is more peaceful, more satisfying but at the same time it's more frustrating because knowing whatever I'll do will be the mind.

R: See Nate you're doing the same thing I was talking about. You're judging yourself. (SC: I'm sorry?) You're judging yourself. You're saying anything I can do it's all I, I, I, Nate. (SC: I understand that I see, what I'm saying is I see what I'm saying which is frustrating.) Then stop saying it. Stop thinking about it. Inquire, "To whom does the I come?" Who says all these things. Even if you have to say, "Who am I?" forever, why not say it? It's better than saying, "I hate you." (SC: You're right. Very good. Or I want to be free of "who am I?" or "where do these thoughts come from?" just...not that dialogue rather than - I know it's a technique but at least it's...) Exactly. Do it and don't try to figure it out. (SC: Yeah, got you. Okay.)

R: Anyone else like to share anything? Glen.

SN: Robert is the idea that everything is predetermined that isn't really congruent with non-duality right or Advaita?

R: In Advaita Vedanta as you are aware there is no such thing as karma. There is no such thing as predetermined. (SN: But that is just a technique to help us?) Yes. (SN: But it's not the true reality.) Of course not, but what is the true reality? Nobody knows. (SN: Well is it helpful for us to hear the true reality I mean that you can say that the true reality is a mystery wouldn't you think that that is helpful for us?) Well I say that many times. (laughs) (SN: Yeah.) It is a mystery. But what happens to us, to some of us is we get a hold of this especially for new people. They hear that they are Brahman, they are God, they are the ultimate absolute reality and they feel good about it. But as the months go by all their stuff is coming to them they're still experiencing all kinds of things going through all kinds of situations perhaps losing their job, losing their family, losing their money, going through this going through that. Those people become frustrated. They become disillusioned. They're saying, "If I'm absolute reality why are these things happening to me?" Because they don't know that they're absolute reality they're just voicing it. They're talking about it. They know it intellectually. That's also these people who read all the books. About 90 percent of all the people here have read all the books on Advaita Vedanta, Nisargadatta and everybody else.

SN: Well it's like you're spoon-feeding some people though are you assuming that other people know...already know that well this is nonsense so don't even pay attention to what you're saying?

R: What I do is a certain technique that new people can take care of things in their way and old people can take care of things in their way. (SN: Right.) So everybody is different. (SN: Right.) Everyone unfolds differently. This is why if you can come in here and really have an open heart then what you have to do will be revealed to you as we talk and as we go through this. But if you come here with preconceived ideas or dogmas and all kinds of stuff then you have a hard time in life.

SC: I went to a metaphysical church on Santa Monica day and a man was talking about universal love and he was saying, love yourself first before you can love anybody else. And I know I've been having difficulty doing that.

R: Because he is telling you to love yourself as if to love the ego. He is not really explaining that when you love yourself you love God. You love the God Self the higher Self. The I-am. That's what you love. When they say, "Love yourself," they don't go any further. So you love the person that does all the nonsense. The person who gets in trouble. The person who is a jerk. (laughter) They begin to love that self and they have a hard time doing it. For they start thinking, "I'm a jerk and I'm supposed to love myself?" They can't do it. (SC: I thought he was talking about self-esteem he said he was speaking to the audience there he said people with low self esteem to raise their self esteem and they would be easier to love themselves.) When they raise their self-esteem they become CIA agents. (SC: They what?) (laughter) Become CIA agents, they become lawyers, doctors. (laughter) They're a nation of the world. That's what happens when you have high self esteem. What we want to do is go beyond self-esteem. Self-esteem is only to build up your ego. That's what self-esteem is.

SC: Nothing wrong with that it was, it's very interesting and they had a...more than a hundred people there and they formed two circles and they're playing in the garden there or something... (R: Umm.) ...and women and men were going around putting their hands up for about fifteen minutes and then I got so...it never happened to me before I started...then tears started coming down my face, I was so moved and apparently one of the women who was one of the healers and she put her arms around my arms and I started crying and she kissed me and she said it was good that I could let go like that.

R: It was a moving experience? (SC: Yeah.) Good. (SC: This seemed contrary to ???) It's not really contrary, it just makes you see who you really are, what you really are all about. (SC: Well it's a good feeling I tell you when you let go and start crying like that I just feel like a freedom.) Yes it's good. There is nothing wrong with that at all.

Do we have any prashad? We don't eat today. (laughter) You'll have to go home with hungry tummies.

Thank you for coming. Remember to love yourself. To worship yourself. To pray to yourself. To bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you. All is well, peace.

And away we go.

ST: If there are new people there are transcripts on the table that are free...

YOU DON'T EVEN EXIST!

30th August, 1992

Robert: I welcome you with all my heart. If you came here to hear a profound lecture, by an eloquent speaker, you came to the wrong place. If you came here to hear a fool speak a bunch of nonsense, you came to the right place. For after all what can I say to you? What can I possibly tell you? You don't even exist! You're all an optical illusion. Nobody exists. So what should I say to people who do not exist? There's absolutely nothing to say. Yet most of you came here dressed in your finery, wanting to hear the speaker speak something intelligent for you, to speak something eloquent, but you're not going to hear that, so get used to it.

I'll tell you this much. We've all been totally brainwashed since birth. Everything we believe is false, everything. Everything we have faith in, everything we've been told in school, in churches, everywhere, it is all false. You are false. I am false. There is no reality. If there were a reality, you'd not be able to express it, for it would be beyond human conception. If there were a truth, we would not be able to understand it, for it would be beyond the finite mind. The finite mind cannot understand anything, cannot know anything. Yet there's no finite mind, so there's no one to know anything.

When you look at me, what do you see? You see whatever you've been programmed to see. You do not see reality. You see your programming. For instance, if you grew up a Christian, you may say, "Well, Robert is sort of Christ-like." If you were brought up an agnostic, you may say, "Well, I don't know what the heck Robert is at all." If you were brought up Jewish, you would say, "Robert is a great Rabbi." If you were brought up Buddhist, you would say, "Robert is a Bodhisattva." If you were brought up in a family of thieves, you would say, "Robert is a con man." You're seeing yourself. You're seeing your programming. You're seeing the way you've been made to think, all of these years since you were a little boy or a little girl. It's all false.

In reality Robert is neither this nor that, neither up nor down, neither backward nor forward, and you are the same way. In other words, we're all nothing. But what is this nothing. Is it really nothing? No thing? We see the whole world before us, and the whole world is subject to the law of change. Everything changes constantly, constantly. What is real can never be changed. Therefore what is real? Where is the reality? There is no reality. There's really nothing that changes. There is only that what is. What is, is something you can never understand. People call it by names like Brahman, absolute reality, consciousness, the Self, pure effortless, choice-less awareness. These are all names. Most of you have heard these names again, and again and again. You've read many books. You've been to many teachers. You've seen many lectures. And yet, where are you now? Have you come any closer to self-realization? Is there really anybody who has to become self-realized? Is there such a thing as self-realization? You don't really know. You're only speaking from books you've read, from sermons you've listened to, from lectures you have heard, from tapes, teachers. You've heard certain words, certain phraseologies, certain so called truths. Yet what good does it do you?

The only effort you'll ever make is when you keep silent. When you are silent, everything is done through you. The tree outside is totally silent, yet it grows beautiful leaves all by itself. It doesn't have to talk to grow leaves. It doesn't have to become anything to grow leaves. It doesn't have to do a thing. Yet we all believe we have to do certain things to become self-realized. We believe we have to practice certain sadhanas, spiritual practices. We have to meditate, year in, year out. We believe we have to get rid of some things and add some things to our selves. But the ultimate reality is, you have nothing to get rid of, for you have never become anything. It is all your hallucination. It is all an optical illusion.

How can you sit there and say you're an optical illusion, when you can feel yourself, you can see, you can hear, you can smell, you can touch? Think about a time when you're dreaming. In the dream you're doing the same thing, aren't you? You have certain experiences, you go through certain situations, you meet certain people, you travel to certain countries, yet you awaken in the morning, and all that's disappeared. The entire dream world has gone. This is a dream world you're in now. You are dreaming the mortal dream, that you are a man, you are a woman, you are a child, you have a job, you go through certain experiences, things happen to you in your life. Yet this is not true. This is a lie. In reality, you've never been born, you do not prevail, and you do not die. There's no one who ever dies, for there's no one who was ever born.

How can you see yourself this way? By remaining silent, by not reading so much, by not remembering anything. By not trying to be profound and thinking you have to remember this passage from this book, you have to remember what I said. You should never remember anything I say. You should not believe a word I say. Why should you? You should understand yourself, that you are the one. You are the only one. There are no others. There is only that which has always been, and that is you. When you realize you do not have to practice sadhana, or meditate, or go through spiritual practices with yoga, life becomes easy, wonderful. There's no striving for anything. There's no trying to become somebody or something. You are your Self. You have always been your Self, the Self which is bright and shining, the Self which is. You are that Self.

Can you feel this? Can you feel that you're not your body, or your mind, or the world, or words, or books? Can you feel that you have no needs, no desires, no wants? Can you feel that you cannot be hurt, in any way whatsoever, that you are perfect and pure, just the way you are, there's absolutely nothing you have to surrender, for you never had anything except the pure Self that you are? Can you feel your emotions, the anger, the self-destructive emotions you've carried along for so many years, the animosities, the hatred? Can you realize this is not part of you that this never existed? Can you feel this, that right now you are pure intelligence, right this moment, right now? You are the ultimate, right now, just the way you are. When I say just the way you are, I am not referring to your body, the way you appear to be. Just the way you are is absolute Brahman. Just the way you are is the Self. Therefore when I speak words like this, with what do you identify? When I say you are perfect just the way you are, you think of your name, and your body, and your mind, and the person you appear to be.

That's not who you are. That's not just the way you are. Just the way you are is God, what we call God. When I tell you to stay just the way you are, I'm referring to your true Self, your real nature, your reality, swarrupa. Stay just the way you are, never change. But when you start thinking, you spoil it. As soon as you start thinking about it, you spoil it. Yet you can stop the mind from thinking, if you want to. You may practice self-inquiry. You may ask yourself, "Who am I? Who am I who thinks? Who am I who appears to exist? Who am I who appears to have problems? Who sees the world as a threat?" And the answer is right in the question, for you are asking Who am I? This I is not you. This I you are inquiring about is not you at all. It is really your ego.

So when you practice self-inquiry, you begin to understand, basically, that you are not the I, the I that's always in need, the I that feels frustrated, the I that believes something is wrong someplace. "Who am I?" means, "Where does this I come from? Where does this false I originate from? Who created it? Who gave it birth? Who am I?" When you ask the question, "Who am I?" you're never referring to the higher consciousness, the absolute reality, to pure awareness. This is not I. The question is meant for your ego, to try to see, to understand, that the I-thought is the only enemy you've got. The I-thought has always been the culprit, that's caused you eons of misery, karmic affliction, reincarnation, samskaras.

All of these things are attached to the I. Not to you, but to the I. Not to you, but the I. Can't you begin to see now that you are totally free? It is the I that has the problems? By seeking the source of the I, all of your problems, all of the world, your body, everything will disappear. It will all dissolve into the source. What is the source? I'm not speaking about applesauce. The source is your Self. You are the source, and you are nirvana. The I has absolutely nothing to do with you.

Think about this. Those of you who wish to practice atma-vichara, start doing this in the morning when you first wake up. Inquire, "Who am I?" and keep still. Never answer that question. As thoughts come into your mind, you begin to think, inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come? To whom do these thoughts come? Who's thinking these thoughts? To whom do they come? Why, they come to me of course. I think these thoughts. I, I, I. Who am I?" You continue the process. You remain still again. As more thoughts come into your mind, you inquire, "To whom do they come? They come to me. I think these thoughts. Well, who am I?" As you continue to practice this method, you will notice that the space in between "Who am I?" becomes larger and larger, more extensive. There is a vast gap between "Who am I?" whenever you say it. That gap is your reality. The day will come when you say, "Who am I?" you will keep silence for hours. The mind will no longer move. The thoughts will no longer come. The feelings will become transcended, and you will be totally free and liberated. Yet, some of you do not have to do this at all. Some of you may just awaken, by being at satsang, by hearing me talk about nothing. It's up to you. That's right. It's up to you.

I realize some of you are saying, "Robert, if I could only awaken, I would do it. How could it be up to me? I want it. I want to become free and liberated." But do you? What's the most important thing in your life right now? And you'll see why you're not liberated. There's something you're attached to, that you'll not let go. This is what keeps you in bondage. The word liberation simply means to be non-attached to person, place or thing. When you're not attached to person, place or thing, nothing binds you, and you are totally free. Now I don't mean that you have to leave your family, you have to leave your job and go away on a mountaintop. I'm speaking of mentally. It all happens in your mind. And then, in the end, in the last analysis, the mind has to go also. And then you're free.

So those of you who are saying, "Why am I not free now? Why am I still bound?" I say to you, when did you become angry last? When did you become annoyed last? When did something irritate you last? When did you become upset last? When were you worried about your body, about your circumstances last? When did you concern yourself about the world last? These are the things that hold you in bondage. This is why we talk about bondage, for you are in bondage when you believe the world can do something to you, can turn you on this way, and turn you off this way. When you take the world seriously, you are in bondage.

Yet, you're saying to me, "Robert, how can I not worry about this world? I cannot be inhuman. Look at the dastardly things going on in this world? Look at man's inhumanity to man, the wars we have going on." My answer to you is to whom does this come? If you want to change the world, you've got to become enlightened. You've got to awaken, for when you awaken, you will see the world in a new perspective. You will see the world as your Self. Now this becomes paradoxical. You will be able to look at this world, and you will see your Self, just as right this moment, you are seeing the world as yourself. If you're seeing hard times, if you're seeing trouble, affliction, this is because you're seeing yourself. You're seeing what you feel. But a realized person does not see this. A realized person observes this, but sees the reality, perfection.

Just as a screen is covered with images in the movie theatre, when you watch the movie, you identify totally and completely with the movie, with the images that are going on on the screen. You never think of the screen at all, do you? You think of the images. It has a beginning, a middle, and an end. When the picture is finished, it is the screen. The screen has always been there. The images have changed. In the same instance all of the conditions of life are superimposed on consciousness, which is your Self. In other words, all of this is going on within you. All of the world's trials and tribulations are going on within yourself. You are the creator. It's all happening within you. You are the one who gives it power by sending it forth from yourself. Where else would it come from? Again we go back to the dream analysis. Who would ever believe that a dream comes out of yourself? A person who has never dreamt would laugh in your face, for he would say, "How can a different world, that appears to be like the same world, exist? How can I have other experiences besides the experiences I have now? How can the entire world become real to me?" But it does, as you know you've all dreamt. You do not pay any attention to this. When the dream is over you awaken, you forget about your dream.

The world is the same way. The world is a cosmic dream. It is up to you to awaken from this world dream. The idea is to keep the mind quiet and still, and not follow the I-thought out into this world, where it causes havoc and pain, but to keep the I-thought centered in your heart where it belongs, in your spiritual heart, where it can never come out again. There is an exercise we do to make this happen. It is called the I-am meditation, very powerful exercise. If you have to meditate, if you want to meditate this is the most powerful meditation there is. You will find many changes taking place in your life as you practice this meditation. So let's do it all together, shall we?

Make yourself comfortable. Close your eyes to remove obstructions and focus your attention on your breath. Listen to your breathing, to your respiration. Do not try to alter your breath, just listen to it. Observe it, watch it. If your mind wanders gently bring it back again to watching your breath. Feel the sensations in your body. You have become the witness to your respiration. You are witnessing yourself breathing. This alone makes you very quiet and still and peaceful.

Now ask yourself the question, "Who is the witness that is watching the breath? Who is this witness?" Say to yourself, "I am, I am." With your respiration as you inhale you say, "I," as you exhale say, "am." Inhale say, "I," exhale say, "am." As you are doing this realize that as you inhale, you're inhaling the entire universe. As you exhale the universe becomes alive again through you. You inhale the universe everything, all of life is sucked into your consciousness. You say, "am," you exhale the universe again. "I am."

(long silence)

It is now time to play "Stump The Guru."

I forgot to give you the basket to ask questions. Tom is there any questions in the basket? (ST: These are all blank.) (laughter) Like your mind.

R: Well feel free to ask anything, to say something you like.

ST: Sir how can such tenderness come to an optical illusion?

R: Tenderness is part of your seeing. It's how you observe. It's what you see. It's your life, your projection. You feel and see tenderness because you're tender inside. You are not well done yet you're still tender. (laughter) When you become well done you will become free of all of these things. But we always observe ourselves. We always see our self as the world. Always think of yourself as a mirror. The mirror can never see itself but it sees its projection in the world. Therefore whatever you see is yourself. What else can you see but yourself.

SY: The conflicts that you have with people is just your ego stuff? (R: Exactly.) It's yourself. Your ego that you're seeing.

R: You're projecting the whole game. You are creating the whole thing. (SY: So to get rid of the conflict then you just...) Not to join in. No, you draw it in. (SY: Not register it?) You don't run away, you don't try to change things. (SY: Right.) Because wherever you go you've got to take yourself with you. (SY: So what is...?) You draw it in. You ask, "To whom does this come? Who is experiencing this? I am. Who am I?" And you will notice as you keep inquiring, "Who am I?" the I is leaving the brain going into the heart centre where it belongs. Once the I is out of the brain and into the heart everything becomes peaceful and quiet. There is no more conflict. (SY: So this is all it's mimic? You don't need it?) Exactly, it is your I that has the conflicts. Once the I is gone, with whom should you have conflict? But not as the ego, same thing. (SY: So it doesn't matter what you do, I mean, get rid of...) It matters what you do due to the fact, as long as you still believe that you are the body you are under the laws of cause and effect and under the laws of karma. (SY: As long as you're in a body?) Yes, because you feel you are the body. (SY: Oh while you feel you are the body?) Yes, so you have to be careful what you do because it will all come back to you. What goes around, comes around. Because you believe you're human, you're a body. But when you realize that you're inhuman then you will be totally free. Who wants to be human? (laughter) (SH: Not everyone)

SX: Sir it's so wonderful that you can use your freedom, your Self to be here before us and to illumine the situation this way.

R: Well I didn't ask for it voluntarily. (students laugh) It just happened. (SX: Well it's just wonderful the way it just happened.) I don't know whether it's wonderful or not. It just is who we are. Perhaps next time around you'll be sitting here and I'll be sitting there, who knows? Who cares? (laughter) All I can tell you is all is well. Everything is beautiful, everything is God and you are that.

SP: Excuse me sir can I ask a question? (R: Of course.) As you were saying before that since everything is an illusion and you were saying there was no benefit practicing sadhana, is there anything at all in prayer and meditation and visiting holy places?

R: Again as long as you feel you are a body then these things are necessary for you. When you have a glimpse of you not being a body at all there is no need to do these things. When you feel you're separate then prayer is necessary, visiting holy places is necessary, doing sadhana is necessary for you feel you are somebody that has to do these things. But when the somebody disappears and no longer exists who will do these things. When the I is gone, when the I is transcended and transmuted there is no one left to do anything. Then you are totally and completely free. But as long as you feel that you are a body you'll have to do things for the body, to appease the body. Get rid of the notion you are the body. (SP: What do you do when you are totally free?) You do nothing, there is nothing you have to do. Yet again it's a paradox, it'll appear to others as if you're doing something. But this is their outlook this is what they see. But you know darn well that you are not doing anything. For there is noone left to do anything. The body may appear to be doing things, yet you're doing nothing.

SH: Who is the you, you are referring to then that you know darn well that you're doing nothing.

R: I'm referring to your humanhood because I'm talking to you. (SH: No, but from your point of view.) From my point of view I'm not doing anything, not saying anything, nothing is happening. (SH: There is no you there. There is no you doing anything?) Nothing is going on. There is no you... (SH: That's simplified enormously?) (laughs) There is noone doing anything. That is why having a dialogue it appears as if we're doing something. Yet I can assure that nobody is doing a thing.

SX: Okay so this is about everything again being meaningless and that's okay?

R: Don't say it like that. (laughter) (SX: Why not, it doesn't matter, I mean...) It does matter. (SX: Why does it matter?) It matters because you're just saying that with your voice. (SX: No I'm not done though.) But you don't feel totally empty and totally free. (SX: That's right.) So therefore you've got to pay attention to the rules and regulations of the world. (SX: To what?) The worlds rules and regulations. (SX: Right.) And do whatever is right. You have to feed the poor, feed the homeless, help the needy. Develop loving kindness, compassion and all the rest of that stuff. (SX: Because we're being human?) Of course. (SX: I mean you can't really transcend humanness when you're human, you're still human?) Yes, but when the body is no longer yours and you realize that you are not the doer then you have become all-pervasive. (SX: You what?) You become all-pervasive. (SX: When you're unstuck within the limits of a body?) When you're not the body. You become omnipresence. Then you are everything, you're the whole universe. (SX: That's great, meanwhile... (laughter) ...here we are and we have the limits of this stuff here, you know...) Then you've got to do the best you can. (SX: And there is no right way or wrong way to do that. So just don't worry about it so it hasn't decided to do something right?) You don't worry about it, that is right, but you have to practice what you have to practice and do what you have to do to eliminate the idea of a body.

SX: Okay and meanwhile while life is going on and there is these rules and regulations that I will explain - is it okay if we talk like we're not enlightened here and just talk like a person? (R: Sure.) Let's be a person. (laughter) Let's just be a human a regular old human. Not someone who is enlightened or trying to look enlightened. (R: Okay.) I'd rather not. You know like, that I can't get in any scope but there is still the stuff you do while you're being human. (R: Yes.) You care for your children, you do the stuff you do to pay the bills, get along with people in your family or the people that you're married to or lovers or whatever, all of that.

R: You will find that as you practice these things. You practice self-inquiry, practice being the witness, you will find you will become more mellow and things improve in your life. Because you get rid of all the stuff. It all pours out of you, it all goes away. (SX: So I always taking the moment to see that it's you, that it's the mirror stuff, it's you.) As you practice this discipline, spiritual discipline and you become mellow, you become kind, peaceful and all the stuff that has been bothering you goes away. (SX: What spiritual practice? The I-am stuff?) Yeah. (SX: And being in that inquiry "Who am I?") Yeah. (SX: And in the silence.) Yes. (SX: In the no answer?) Yes. Always being the witness. (SX: So meanwhile you could just go ahead and just have a great time being alive if you look at it that way.) Again if you stop saying, "I'm making a mess or I'm doing something," your body will know what to do by itself. It'll appear to do things that will make it beneficial for you. (SX: Could you do that part again please?) You will appear to be as you're working on yourself, you will appear to be doing the thing that you have to do without even thinking about it.

In other words your body karmically came here for a purpose and your purpose will be fulfilled whether you like it or not. You have absolutely nothing to do with it. So your job is not to react to the purpose of whatever is happening to your life. You just go within and dive deep within yourself. Find out who you really are. Discover your true Self and let your body do what it will. (SX: Let your body do what it will. The humanness will?) It knows what to do by itself. (SX: You mean you aren't even in charge of this body you mean?) Yes. (SX: When you just keep getting to empty and meaningless you have to keep getting into humanness at the same time?) Yes there is a power that takes care of everything. The power that knows the way. (SX: So you just get out of the way. You don't have to make a big deal about it.) Exactly. Just keep calm, peaceful, relaxed. And see what happens you'll be surprised. Or you get excited, you worry, you fret, you attract the negative conditions to you and causing the situation to become ultimately worse. Just keep calm, peaceful, relaxed. Trust the power that knows the way, then you'll find peace. Everything will take care of itself.

See we're so egotistical we believe we have to make it happen. We believe if I don't do it nothing will happen. I've got to go out and get a job, I've got to work, I've got to do this, I've got to do that. But in truth there is a power that knows exactly what you have to do, where you have to be and whom you should be with. You have nothing to do with this. Your job is to get yourself out of the way and allow it to happen. Then you'll have total happiness and peace.

SX: I want to talk about the notions of parity and a plan and discipleship and practice with discipleship. (R: Umm.) Not to contradict anything you're saying but in addition to what you're talking about... (R: You can contradict anything I say.) I don't want to, but I wonder why you would say, all of that. You said there was nothing to do, I understand that but the frame of which you would say there is nothing to do but then in another frame you can talk about discipleship...does that match what you're talking about? (R: What do you mean by discipleship?) Well this whole notion that there is such a thing and that there are people here who want to bring in people and head them down to earth that in a previous eon that we think of looking outside and we are meant to bring us in, and there are people who are to do this as models and as teachers or leaders, to lead the way for everyone to transform. I'm not making that up, that is out in this so called world.

R: If you feel that way about it, do it. (SX: Yeah.) If that is the way you feel about it, do it. But try to see and realize the reality, you're not the doer. (SX: Yeah, even in that training for discipleship that is the same thing isn't it? The I-am and the emptying, but with this notion in mind that you're here for service.) Because ultimately you are the one, who are you serving but your Self. There is one Self. And you serve your Self. Always realize that you are the one. Do not be mad at yourself or angry at yourself or upset with yourself. Trust the power that knows the way.

SX: I've actually been doing some work for work lately. Something that I ...unclear... for a process called focussing. (R: Umm.) And what I really like about it is that it sets up a relationship between the big self, the eternal self and these femoral negativities which come by which the fundamental practice or understanding is that the big self has an acceptance for all the rest. That seems to be a key of getting to where it is you're talking about going.

R: It sounds more complicated. (laughter) The whole idea is to make it simple.

SX: But this is very simple. The minute a negative feeling comes you just accept and because you've chosen to do so you have compassion for it. The way you would do with another being you would inherit it. Just do it yourself. I mean you don't even have to do anything beyond that, there is just a fundamental stand. To be in an accepting, compassionate attitude toward yourself. It seems to be very free in my experience.

R: Again you do not wish to sublimate your feelings.

SX: No, no you can still actually be pretty angry or upset or whatever at the same time as you're accepting it compassionately. And you get very high, the self that is accepting it compassionately, gets pretty high on that. (R: That's good.) It really is good. One of the most useful things I have ever learned. (R: Keep it up.) Thank you.

ST: Would you say that compassion has any fundamental function in your view of things?

R: Only when you believe you are a body. (ST: So the Dalai Lama, do you think he forces himself to believe he has a body just enough to have compassion for the world?) The Dalai Lama doesn't even know what he is supposed to be doing. He is in his right place doing the right things. Do not concern yourself with the Dalai Lama. See in your self where you are or where you're going. The Dalai Lama is in the right place doing the right things. (ST: I think we're here in the right place doing the right thing too.) Yes we are. We all are. When we start thinking of others and start comparing ourselves to other people, thinking about the Dalai Lama whether he has compassion, whether he is forcing himself. These things are of no importance to us. The only thing that is of importance for us, what I'm trying to say is, "Who am I?" And you will realize that you are the Dalai Lama. (ST: So you must have unbearable compassion for all beings?) You do. You certainly do. What I'm trying to say is the Dalai Lama is not separate to you or me or anybody else. There is one entity and there is no separateness.

ST: So when we're thinking like you which we do often I'm sure, by thinking about you we're really thinking about ourselves?

R: Exactly. As I explained yesterday what you're doing is always to yourself. Whatever you do to another human being, good or bad you're only doing it to yourself. For there is one energy. And we're all endless and atoms and all energy. If we can keep this in mind, we'll think twice before hurting somebody else. Because there is one Self and what goes around comes around. (ST: I'm so happy to meet my Self.) So am I. (laughter)

SX: You said something else about not to sublimate feelings? Could you say something about that?

R: I said when you have hatred or pain or anguish or depression, do not say to yourself, "I can't keep these feelings, I'm not supposed to have them I have to keep happy, happy, happy. What did I say to bring it up?" If you do this you will blow up one day and hurt a lot of people. (SX: Yes.) What you have to do is to realize what is going on. See yourself where you're at, what is happening to you. And you have to inquire, "To whom do these feelings come? Who has these feelings? I do..." (SX: The ego I?) Yes. "Who am I?" (SX: And then again not make such a big deal about it, it's just that ego stuff?) Yes, and you keep inquiring, "Who am I?" One day you'll come to the realization that I is not you at all. You are not the I.

SX: It doesn't matter how anyone goes, I don't mean to cut each other up and rip each other off, I don't mean like that but what does it matter who you love anything or does it? You know just love anybody because it's all the same thing anyway so...

R: No it's not up to you. It's all been preordained. (SX: Okay so when the conflict stuff is coming out of the I?) The conflict stuff is the I.

SX: Alright when the I is doing its conflict thing, the concept that is I, is there and present, and again not enlightened, in a relationship with a human being you just, again it's just "Who am I?" back to that. Get the I out of the way and then it doesn't matter you can go ahead and not have the conflict with that person, supposed to be, right?

R: As long as you think you're a human being you will always have conflicts and no conflicts. (SX: For all I know we are human beings?) Therefore when you're a human being, you believe you're a human being, take it easy, relax. Just go within yourself and inquire, "Who am I?" and realize that I has the problems not you. (SX: Okay.) And inquire, "Where did the I come from?" Just sit alone and let it happen. Everything will take care of itself. (SX: Quiet down the I and just let it take care of itself instead of trying to do something about it?) Yes. The only way to quiet down the I is you inquire the nature of the I... (SX: Oh I feel like I'm not where it's supposed to.) That is when things begin to happen. But in the meanwhile just understand everything is predetermined. Before you came into your so called body it was already decided what is going to happen to you. Who your friends are going to be, who your people are going to be, experiences are going to happen everything has been decided. The only way to stop that is to inquire, "To whom does it come?" (SX: To whom does it what?) To whom does this come? And realize that you're free from this completely. Then everything will be transcended.

SX: Why do people ever leave each other. Why does there seem to be lot of divorces all of a sudden? Is that all the I ego things bashing each other.

R: This is part of the cosmic joke. (SX: Okay.) Of lovingness. It appears to be going on this way. We appear to be fighting with each other, leaving each other, divorcing each other, loving each other. It's all part of the dream. Do not react to it. See it from a different standpoint. Observe it watch it, but do not react to it. Inquire, "To whom does this come? Who is having these experiences? Where do they come from?" And go right back to I. "I have these experiences. I'm going through this. But who am I?" And keep still. (SX: And just wait and see what happens?) And as soon as more thoughts come to you, inquire, "To whom do these thoughts come?" Keep doing it again and again and again and again. And you will notice that you keep slowing down. Everything slows down. Everything becomes easier and easier and it all slows down. Until one day it will just be empty space and you'll become good for nothing. (SX: You know when you have acceptance and compassion to the self they ???) If you just observe your thoughts, yes. (SX: Acceptance and compassion is the real key?) You can say that. (SX: Yeah.) (laughter)

SG: Robert I've been doing lots of self inquiry and there are beliefs that when faced they dissolve away as if imaginary and they're just thoughts. Why does it seem like...why the potency of the beliefs? And why, is it possible there is a key, belief or something that is believing in the potency of the beliefs that keep them there? If they're all imaginary anyway why does pain and all that stuff even still stay there? It's just like really really real. (R: Of course.) It seems really, really, really real until it fades.

R: When you're having a dream doesn't that seem real? It seems very real doesn't it. Yet when you awaken... (SG: It's wake up out-able?) And so is this. (laughter) (SG: But it's just like that (flicks fingers) wake up out of all of this.) That is how it seems but it is not true. If you're having a dream that you're a baby and you grow up and you go to school and you get married and you have children and you get old and you die. You go through your whole lifetime in the dream. And you wake up. So one day you will awaken from this in an instant, it'll be the same thing. Everything that you have gone through is just like one day. And it appears long to you because you're dreaming. But when the dream is gone it never happened. There is no time or space involved. Time and space is only in the dream.

When you awaken from the dream you didn't get any older, you didn't die. You never had children to take your place in the world, it's all in the dream. So it is now, the same thing. One day you will awaken and you'll laugh.

SG: Does the Self laugh?

R: The Self can do anything it likes. It laughs, it cries, it does all kinds of things. (SG: Okay.) Become your Self and find out.

YOU EXIST AS TOTAL BLISS!

3rd September, 1992

Robert: Good evening. Welcome. It is wonderful to be with you again. I welcome you with all my heart.

Some of you do not like to sit in the silence. You want to hear me talk right away. But I say to you to sit in the silence is a thousand times more powerful than words. The silence at satsang is pregnant with love and grace. All you really have to do is to tune in like a radio. You tune in finally to the channel to the station you receive clear reception. So it is with satsang.

When we are quiet and the mind is still we're tuning into the grace and the love. And what happens? You feel a presence within you. You feel a power. You feel a joy well up within you, a happiness that you've never experienced before. Words are alright but there is nothing like the silence.

There are many of us who have been practicing Advaita Vedanta, non-duality for many years. And yet we seem to be caught between the devil and the deep blue sea. Devil and deep blue sea. I know there is a deep blue sea but is there a devil? Is there really a deep blue sea? What I mean by this is simply that...this.

We learn all the wise spiritual sayings. We learn in books, satsang I am effortless, choice-less, pure awareness, I am the ultimate reality, I am Brahman and then on the other hand we feel the opposite. We say to ourselves, "I feel lonely, I feel depressed, I feel there is something wrong someplace. I feel this, I feel that." So we're caught in the middle. What to do?

If we really tune into satsang and to our inner powers we will find something very interesting happening. There is one word common to both feelings, the high spiritual feelings in the relative world. And that word is I.

When we say, "I feel like Brahman," or "I feel like I am choice-less awareness," or "I am absolute reality," or "I am wonderful," we're making a mistake because we're saying, "I" and we're identifying with the human body. The human body can never be choice-less awareness. The I which is the human body as far as your concerned can never be absolute reality. So when you say I am Brahman or I am choice-less awareness nothing will ever happen because you're referring to yourself being that. It cannot be that way.

Again when you refer to being depressed you say, "I am depressed. I feel terrible. I feel this and I feel that." You're using the same I. To understand this is the beginning of wisdom. You're using the same I for both sides of the same coin. Therefore you'll never get anywhere. So what to do?

You begin by realizing that the I is only a thought and it is the I that feels all of these things and not you. It is the I that expresses all of these things. It is the I that exclaims, "I feel sick. I feel sorry for myself. I feel like I'm God. I feel like I'm Brahman," and yet you don't feel anything really. Life goes on, nothing happens because you're using your I to identify everything. But when you come to the conclusion that I is experiencing all of this. Not you but I.

When you begin to realize that I thinks it's Brahman, I thinks it's absolute reality. I also thinks something is wrong with my life. I also believe I was born and I die. I've got problems. I believe that all is well. I believe everything is going to be beautiful in my life forever. We're always using the I. This is the important part.

We want to separate the I from reality.

And you do this by understanding that you are not I. You have absolutely nothing to do with I. I'm not referring to I as God. I'm referring to the way you use I in everyday life.

Again let me reiterate.

The reason some of us do not make much progress is because we use the I-am like an affirmation. You're saying, "I am choice-less awareness." When you say, "I," you're referring to the material self. To the body and the body is an illusion it can never be anything else but an illusion. Therefore when you say, "I-am Brahman. I-am choice-less awareness." Realize that I-am has the same meaning as Brahman or choice-less awareness. I-am is consciousness, it is God. When you say it this way you have an all new perspective on this thing. Don't you?

You're looking at I-am as reality not as your body or as your experiences. And if you can understand this and hold onto this when you say, "I am sick, I feel terrible." You will catch yourself because you will realize that I-am is God and I-am can never feel sick or terrible. I-am can never be anything else but itself, absolute reality, pure consciousness.

But first you have to see I as the I-thought, as the mind before you can do the other. You have to realize that everything is attached to the I-thought, all of your emotions, all of your feelings, your body, your mind, the world, the universe everything you believe is the I. If there were no I available there would be nobody to believe anything. You'd have hardly anything to say. And it is true it is only when you say, "I," that you can say everything else that comes after it. I am poor, I am healthy, I am sick, I am rich. Everything is attached to the first pronoun I.

All you have to do is catch yourself. Try to understand this completely then you'll become free. And you'll become totally free just by doing this alone. By realizing the I is a thought, the I-thought and is not you and by realizing the I-am is God itself. The I-am is total liberation, total consciousness. Think about this, it's very important. This alone will take care of everything for you. If you can only awaken to this fact. Whenever you say, "I," catch yourself. Do not go any further. Remember to remember to catch yourself. You may also inquire, "To whom does this I come? Who is thinking of this I?" By following through on these things you make tremendous progress.

If you only knew and if you only understood the tremendous power that is within you. You think you are a frail human being going through many experiences, going through karmic experiences yet if you were able to identify with the power within you, the fantastic power within you, you will become completely free.

What is this power within you?

It is the same power that maintains and sustains the whole universe. You have to admit something is taking care of this world. No matter how things look. There is a reason for everything. Something is taking care of this world. I call it the power that knows the way.

Yet you may say to me, "If something is taking care of this world how can we have these terrible cataclysms. Hurricanes in Miami, earthquakes in Los Angeles, catastrophes all over the world, man's inhumanity to man?" Yet if I told you, "All is well," you wouldn't believe me.

There is a reason for everything and it's all wonderful, wonderful, wonderful. As horrible as it seems, as horrible as it looks the earth is being purged. The power that knows the way knows what it's doing. I know this sounds kind of terrible but when there is an over population on this earth cataclysms will come, wars, to lower the population. Let us say that so many souls have been allocated to this planet. Let's say four billion souls. As the earth becomes over populated people have to be wiped out, removed. I tell you this sounds terrible when you hear it. But it's not. For in reality nobody ever dies. How could it be terrible? Nothing really happens to anyone. This is what I'm referring to when I tell you, "Everything is a cosmic joke."

When things seems so horrible when you look in the paper, watch the TV, see what's going on in this world. Yet I say to you in the highest teaching, "All is well. There are no mistakes."

When there is a certain amount of evil on the planet the planet becomes purged. When there is an over population on this planet there are earthquakes, hurricanes everything is happening the way it's supposed to.

Another way to awaken is to trust the power that knows the way. In other words you have to have faith in the goodness of life. You have to have faith in supremacy of goodness. When you have faith in supremacy of goodness you move upward. In other words what I'm saying, when you look at the dastardly things happening in this world and you can look through it and see glory and joy and happiness and peace then you've made tremendous progress.

This is why I can only speak of my own experiences and it's hard for people to understand this. When I give you the illustration of a mirror cannot see itself therefore when I look at the world I'm seeing myself.

Now since the Self is consciousness and pure awareness and absolute reality this is the only Self I can see. I cannot see any other Self. This is the reason why I can say these things and tell you that all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. This is the truth. This is what I see, honestly, truly. I see such joy, such love, such harmony, such peace and I see yourself as myself. In other words I do not see anything else that separates yourself from me. The love that I see is you. The absolute reality I see is yourself.

Now I'm a mirror and I cannot see myself so I see myself as the world. You are a mirror also and you cannot see yourself. But what do you see when you see the world. Your mirror is covered with dust. You see man's inhumanity to man. You see terrible cataclysms, wars and you become upset, you become worried, you become frustrated. Not realizing that when you become like this it clouds your mirror even more.

You see when you are living in the relative world and when you believe you are the body, the mind is a very powerful instrument. The mind appears to be a very powerful instrument. It becomes very creative to you. You can do very many wonderful things on this earth with your mind. They will not last but you can accomplish great things with your mind. So in the same instance when you feel terrible because of the things you see in this world all you are really doing is propagating the situation, the condition. What you're really saying is I want to see more of this. Why? Because your mind is creative. Your mind will create anything that you believe. Anything that you feel, anything that you see with feeling. The mind only knows to return to you in proportion what you feel, what you see and what you believe.

This is what happens to the average human being. That is why there is so much change in your life. Why nothing is really steady all the time because the mind so-called, works on your belief system and creates for you what you think is true. Therefore even though you are a human being you have to be very careful what you think, what you see, what you believe. For you will get whatever you see and believe.

Consequently when you feel hurt because of the world situation you are one of the millions of people who feel hurt and you're causing the situation to be completely worse. You're causing the situation to be totally worse than it's ever been before by thinking this way. First the mind has to think and then the mind becomes creative and makes things happen.

This is what I meant last week when I said, "Maya isn't that bad." For you can take the good things out of maya and use them while you're working on yourself. Of course you have to realize that you're playing around with illusions. None of it is real. It appears to be real. It appears to be happening for a while and like all things of this world it must change sooner or later.

So if you're wise you will not play around with the mind to create things for you. What you will do is try to annihilate the mind, to transcend the mind, to destroy the mind by becoming the witness behind the mind. By going further and further deep within yourself until you become Brahman, the absolute reality.

But again as long as you believe you are a human being you do have a mind so-it appears to work with. So why not use your mind for the supremacy of good. Start to feel and believe that everything happens in this world for a reason. You can say to yourself, "I do not understand right now. I do not appear to understand it. I do not appear to understand what is going on. But yet I know there is a reason for everything and the reason can only be good because the substratum of all existence is God or reality. The cause beyond every phenomena is excellence, peace, wisdom." And start identifying with the peace and wisdom and excellence and the joy and the love.

I know it's hard to do when you go home and you watch TV and you see all the things happening in this world. You want to kill the bad guys and love the good guys. Yet you have to see within yourself that what we call God cannot make any mistakes. There are no mistakes. If you feel something is wrong with this world then you're believing that God makes mistakes and if God made mistakes there would never be the real harmony there is in this world. By real harmony I am referring to the way you do things.

When you plant a carrot seed it's going to turn into a carrot and not an apple or a pear. When you plant a cabbage seed you do not have to think about it you know that it has to become a cabbage and not a strawberry or a tangerine. Everything is in its right place. Everything is unfolding the way it's supposed to.

I admit it's hard to see this sometimes. But the beginning of wisdom again, is having faith in the supremacy of goodness. Even if you do not understand it. You cannot make any further progress unless you do this.

If you try to practice self-inquiry you will find as many of you tell me, "It's so hard because there are many things happening in this world." So many people are getting killed. So much man's inhumanity to man and you cannot hold onto "Who am I?" So go the other way. Begin to reason this out for yourself. Begin to see that there is a power within me that knows the way. I surrender to this power. I surrender my feelings, my thoughts, my emotions, my frustrations. I surrender everything to this power that knows the way.

In other words get yourself out of the way. To the extent you can get yourself out of the way to that extent will you start feeling something else. You will start to feel your divinity. It will just come by itself. You will feel that you were never born. That you've always existed. You can never die, nobody dies. You will feel that this world is an illusion. Yet it appears very real. You will begin to see within yourself all of creation and you will know that it is you who have created this situation that you see.

How have you created it?

We go back to the mirror illustration. Just as a mirror cannot see itself but sees itself as a reflection as the world. So you as a creation as the creator see yourself. This is why two different people can look at the world and see two different things.

As an example, two of us can look out the window over here and if I ask, "What do you see?" I get different answers. One will see the beautiful lake, the reservoir and one will see the pollution in the lake. One will see the birds singing and chirping and singing beautiful songs. Someone else will see the birds as a nuisance making too much noise and so forth and so on.

What we see is ourselves! Nothing else. Try to remember this, you are seeing your own reflection. That is all you can see you can't see anything else. Try to remember this and you'll think twice before you make an opinion or judge anybody or anything. For you're only judging yourself. The opinion you have about this world is about yourself. What you believe about this universe you believe about yourself. You are the self! And the whole universe is not away from yourself you are creating the whole universe everyday by the way you look at things, by the way you see things. You are that! You are the self! And the whole universe is your emanation. But! When you become the true Self, the absolute Self, how can you see anything else but love, joy, peace, nirvana, bliss.

It's not that you will not see the world. You will see the world as a superimposed image on yourself. It has no power, no reality, no substance, no value. You will be able to see right through this to the Self. This becomes a little complicated to some of you I know. This is why we use these illustrations again over and over.

When you look at the screen in the movie theatre. The screen has the opinion of itself as the screen. It only knows of itself as a screen. That is all it knows, it's a screen. It knows nothing else. Then they show the movie on the screen and the screen is colored by various images. All kinds of things are happening on the screen. Yet the screen is still aware of itself. Even while the images are being shown on the screen, the screen doesn't know the images, it only knows itself. The images keep changing and changing and changing, the screen only knows itself. Yet the images are appearing. And so it is with you.

When you get to the place when you become the Self, the whole world, people places and things become a superimposition on yourself. And because you are the Self and you are omnipresence, you are all-pervading there is really no room for anything else. If you are all-pervading how can there be room for something else. There cannot be the images and you for you are all-pervading. Therefore you are the Self, omnipresent and nothing else can exist even though the images appear to be there.

Now you exist as total bliss, total harmony and peace and love, this is your real nature, this is you.

In conclusion, do not use your mind to improve your life or subconsciously to make things happen because you're feeling deep inside certain things about this world and your life. And it will happen by themselves you don't even have to think about it. If you've been brainwashed if you've been thinking for many eons certain things about this world you become subjective. Therefore you don't even have to think about it. Things will happen in your life and ask, "Why do these things happen to me?" because your subjective mind has created these things for yourself since you feel these things deep inside even though you're not feeling them right now. They're subjective, they're deep inside of yourself.

And even the good things in your life come from your subjective mind. All the wonderful relative things in your life all come from your subjective mind, where else would they come from? And since your subjective mind is not real, it is only a phenomena, it will all change continuously. It will keep on changing, changing, changing continuously.

This is why for one year you may have good things happening in your life. The next year you may have terrible things happening in your life. For you're not in control. You are allowing the subjective mind to be in control of you and create its own destiny for you by the way you feel about things.

Number one: Realize that you are not that mind at all and you're sick and tired of making things happen in your life. Playing the game of good and bad, off and on, up and down.

Number two: Realize your real nature is not your mind. You're not really your mind at all. You are the I-am, Brahman, bliss, consciousness and you are all-pervading. Consequently nothing can ever touch you but love, pure love, absolute love, unqualifying love.

Number three: Understand that you have created this whole universe out of yourself like a moving picture and to free yourself from this you must not be attached to the images. In other words you must not have any feeling for the images. For if you have feelings for the images you get pulled into the game, into the cosmic joke. And you believe you are also an image and you have to go through different experiences.

Number four: Learn to trust the power which knows the way. Which will take care of everything for you.

And Number Five: Which is the most important one. Realize that everything that I'm telling you is a lie.

Nothing exists. You are beyond everything that you can imagine. You are beyond any words you can say or utter. You are beyond any thought that you can ever think exists. You are that and all is well.

Feel free to ask questions.

SG: Robert, like this big lie that you told us about the screen and the images comes where we identify where it seems like... (R: Seems like what?) ...pick one little bitty image on the whole big screen and sort of identify with that one. From the point of view of reality does it make any difference whether you manage to identify with more images than that one little bitty one?

R: There is something in the subjective called the mind which will pick the images for you. You think you're doing it yourself but you're not. This is all directed by your karma. What you are going to pick, where you're going to be, what's going to happen to you, it is all karmic. Therefore you think that you're the picker. (SG: I mean the picker of the image usually there is only one body that gets picked.) It has nothing to do with you in both ways. It has nothing to do with you as a person and it has nothing to do with you as a

God. For everything has been preordained. So whatever you pick whatever you're doing is preordained anyway. Therefore surrender completely and do not make things worse by thinking you have to pick something or somebody is picking. You are not doing anything by yourself. There is no personal self that does anything. You are not the doer. Everything, everything is preordained.

SH: So then choice is sheer illusion?

R: Choice is sheer illusion. The only choice you have of course is to not react to what's going on and when you do not react to what is going on you begin to drop everything. Then you find your way back home. But it's a hard thing to say when you say, "Choice is an illusion." It is an illusion and it's not an illusion. It's an illusion when you think of it as yourself as being the doer and you have a choice to make. It is not an illusion when you realize there is no one to realize anything and everything is already that. Everything has already been done. (SH: Then the question of choice just doesn't come up at all?) No, you're right. All these words we're dealing with are totally irrelevant. We have so many words in our vocabulary. Do you see how the world moves us, since we were kids we try to build up a big vocabulary and want to know many words and every word has a meaning to us. It is the words that have pulled us down. It is all the phraseologies, the sentences, the beliefs, they're all in words. And we try to be eloquent and make big speeches and talk so people can appreciate us. We're total fools.

This is why all of your higher Sages never say anything. Hardly ever say anything. When they do say something they sound foolish, for they know! Yet if you're working with people you have to use some words. But always try to realize that the words are meaningless, the thoughts are meaningless, your life is meaningless, everything you do is meaningless, yet you are God. What a contradiction. But it's the truth. You are beyond anything you can ever imagine yet when you think about it you are a nothing. If you have to think about it you're a nincompoop. (laughter) Try to stop thinking and just be yourself.

SV: Robert, ...so-called mind and all the things which were before called good or bad - good or bad because I call them that way - and from tomorrow I'm going to consider is good everything I consider is bad before, from tomorrow I'm going to consider everything that is bad everything I considered as good before. There is nothing good or bad because I call it that you know. No thing to choose, nothing desirable, nothing undesirable.

R: But why do that just get rid of both of them. Don't even think about them. Why call everything good, bad and everything bad, good? You're just continuing playing the game. Rather get rid of both of those impostors. Drop them both. Don't even think about them. Don't play with them. Leave them alone. Go beyond good and bad, where there are no words and no thoughts. (SV: There is nothing good and bad it's only that way because that's the way I think about it.) Yes but don't change good for bad or bad for good like you were going to do, just drop it completely. Do not even consider it. If you consider something that does not exist it grows and becomes bigger and bigger. If you have to consider anything, consider, "Who am I?"

SS: Robert when I observe the silence I try and sometimes a thoughtless mind comes into deep sleep, how can we go to the fourth state?

R: As you continue to practice you do fall asleep sometimes, but that is okay. While you're sleeping the Self is awake. The I is awake while you sleep, while you dream and during this waking state right now. The I is awake. The real I never sleeps. Therefore while you're asleep the work will continue.

If you're practicing spiritual disciplines and you're questioning, "Who am I?" or you're questioning, "To whom do these thoughts come?" and you fall asleep it will continue to go while you're sleeping. The work will be done. And when you wake up again it will continue where you left off.

In other words when you practice Jnana Marga there is no difference between sleeping, dreaming and the waking state. The difference is only in your mind. Therefore do not concern yourself about falling asleep. If you're really sincere about doing the work it will continue while you're asleep, while you're awake or while you dream.

SS: Another far off question. You know I observe the breath at that time I have practiced "Who so-hum?"

R: You observe the what? (SS: So-Hum practice I have.) What do you observe? (SH: The breath.) The breath. (SS: As I observe the breath.) Yes. (SS: But you teach me to observe I-am. What I have to do? I have to observe I-am or so hum is alright? Meaning is the same?) The meaning is the same. For most Westerners I-am is more powerful. So hum is also very good being a Hindu yourself this is very meaningful to you. So you can practice so-hum. That's good, whichever is more meaningful for you.

(silence)

Mary do you have the Jnani handy? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: And now it's time for the real reason that you come here, prashad.

We have some wonderful prashad today.

THE HEART CENTER

6th September, 1992

Robert: It is good to be with you once again. Welcome. Happy Labor Day. Do we have any laborers here? One.

There's a way to tell if you're making progress on the spiritual path. One way is the importance that you give to holidays, Labor Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas. As these holidays become sort of irrelevant to you, for you're feeling within yourself an intense happiness, an intense joy, that a holiday cannot give you. When you begin to feel this way, you know you're making progress. But when you think the holiday itself has any power over you, especially Christmas. Many people become despondent, they commit suicide during Christmas, such a high suicide rate at Christmas. I suppose these people remember their childhood, when they used to receive a lot of toys, goodies. And now perhaps they have no one to spend Christmas with. They become totally depressed.

But those are the people of the world. I'm speaking to you fine folks. You are the power, not the holiday. A holiday should not have control over you. If it does, then you believe that the holiday is important, the relative world is important, the material world is important. And of course, as we learn, the responsibility of the world is yours. You're responsible for the world, the universe. It all comes out of you. You are the creative principle as far as this world and universe is concerned. Therefore how can you give any credence to a holiday? Think about that. All of the power is within you. All the power that exists. You are that. The holiday in itself cannot do anything for you, unless you allow it to, unless you respond to it, react to it. So many people say, "I do not like holidays," but yet they get so involved in the holiday. They start preparing weeks ahead for Christmas, and do all sorts of things, which shows them, that you feel like you're just an infantile person with no power. The power is in the holiday.

I don't mean that you have to do absolutely nothing. You can enjoy yourself. You can exchange presents if you like. You can do all kinds of holiday things. But do not believe the holiday has the power. In other words, do not feel hurt if you do not get a present. Do not feel hurt if no one invites you for dinner. You are the power, not the holiday. So as you examine yourself and you see where you're coming from, you can tell the progress you're making on the spiritual path, by the way holidays affect you. And then we go further. How does the world affect you? What does the world show you? How do you react to this world, to person, place and thing? Ponder this. It's important for your progress. If we've been working on ourselves diligently, practicing self-inquiry or practicing other forms of meditation, we will first become calm and peaceful, and then we will feel the power within us. We will feel a total happiness and peace that we generate. The things of this world will not be able to harm us or hurt us.

No thing of this world will ever be able to hurt us again, whether the appearance is lack or limitations of some kind, poverty or sickness, whatever. Or even the so called happy things of this world, getting promoted on your job, receiving a raise in salary, getting married, getting divorced, having children, going through the various vicissitudes of life. These will just become instances to you. It's not good, it's not bad, it's not right, it's not wrong. It's just something you're watching, just like you're watching a movie.

And so it is you begin to watch life unfold before you. You realize inside of yourself, everything is subject to the law of change. Therefore everything in the world will keep changing, changing, changing, constantly, consistently, yet you'll not react to these things. You'll not react to anything. You will be at peace with yourself. Harmony will prevail. You will begin to see through situations to the source.

We follow the I-thought to the source. We trace the I-thought to the source. You've heard me say this many times, but I never really discuss the source with you too much. When I speak of the source, the source of energy within us, is our spiritual heart, not the physical heart, the spiritual heart. The spiritual heart is not a chakra. It has absolutely nothing to do with chakras. The spiritual heart is on the right side of your chest, two digits from the center. This is the source of universal power. We can compare it to the source of the universe. There is a central source that maintains and sustains the whole universe. I spoke of this previously. The central source makes our sun look like a particle of dust, comparatively speaking. The central sun is so tremendous, that you cannot even describe it. It's mind boggling. If it makes our sun look like a speck of dust, you can imagine how big this source must be.

Now not to go into many details, but just briefly to remind you of what's going on in this apparent universe, all of the galaxies, the entire cosmology, revolves around the central source, all of the solar systems. So when you take our solar system, our sun and all its planets revolve around the central source. It takes approximately 24,000 years for the earth to revolve around the source. 12,000 years are descending, and 12,000 years are ascending. In other words, the closer the earth, in the solar system, comes to the central source, the more enlightenment comes upon this earth. Man is at it's highest peak. It takes 12,000 years to get to this peak, and then the descension ensues. The earth starts moving away from the central source, and the earth declines again to the dark ages. It takes 12,000 years for this to happen. It's a 24,000 year cycle. We are now on the ascending scale. We're approximately 3,000 years into the ascending scale.

Now think of your heart center on the right side of your chest. This is also the central source for you. Remember your body is a microcosm of the macrocosm. You are equivalent to the entire universe.

You're a replica of the universe. The body is another universe. And as you voluntarily focus on the central source in your body, on the right side of your chest, enlightenment ensues. Similar to the whole universe revolving around the central source, it's all cosmology, ascending toward the age of enlightenment. You as an individual ascend towards self-realization, as you focus on the central source which is on the right side of your chest. Now the idea is, for all of your beliefs, all of your thoughts, all of your ideas to go back into the central source in your heart. Everything should return to the heart center. You have to become clear, no thoughts, no ideas, no opinions, no beliefs, no karmic leftovers, no samskaras. All of these have to return to the central source.

How do you do this? For it takes centuries, eons upon eons, for the average person to get rid of all the stuff they've got, that they've accumulated upon thousands and thousands of incarnations. We begin to understand that the I-thought encompasses everything. All of your karma, all of your samskaras, all of your fears, all of the stuff you've been carrying around for years and centuries is attached to this I-thought. It's a thought, the ego. As you trace back the ego to the central source, the ego merges in the central source in the heart center, and you become self-realized, liberated. Now you realize what you have to do. This is what has to be done to become totally free.

So, since the beginning of time it has been most difficult for a person to do this by themselves. Therefore Sages have appeared on this earth plane, to give you the push you need to return to the central source. You can only go so far by yourself. You may practice meditation for centuries and not get any further than you are now. When you become sincere, and as you let go of everything and everybody, you will ultimately be attracted to a teacher, a Sage. Yet there are a few people who do not need a Sage. There are a few people who use the mountain as a teacher, the river, the trees, the sky. There are a few people who look at these things as a Sage and become self-realized. But this is far and in between. The average person needs a Sage.

Why do I use the term Sage? I'm not speaking of a preacher, or a minister, or a philosopher. Those are people who have head knowledge. Those are people who have studied text books, have received a Ph.D. in philosophy, have studied religions, and have been able to recite these things backwards and frontwards, but have never had a spiritual experience. It is therefore written in the textbooks, that only a Sage who has had a spiritual experience himself, can lead you towards the goal, can bring you home all the way. It is up to you to do your part, by being true to yourself, being honest with yourself, looking at your life, and seeing the things that are holding you back, beginning to work on yourself diligently, removing these obstacles, so you may go forward. You begin to learn about atma-vichara, self-realization, self-inquiry. You begin to practice these things.

Now where do you go when you practice atma-vichara, self-inquiry? The goal is to bring the I back to this heart, for the I to go back into the heart, the spiritual center. That is the goal of self-realization. That is the goal of self-inquiry. As long as you believe you are the doer, what has appeared to happen is the I-thought, for some reason or other, has left your heart center, and has entered the brain, through the spine. Thus you become self-aware. You become aware of your real self, that your real self is the small self. You become totally aware that you're a person, and you're living in a world, and you have to overcome problems, and do certain things for yourself to be happy. This is the I-thought at work. This is your mind at work. This is your ego at work.

So instead of trying to get rid of the ego, the mind and the I-thought, you begin to trace the I-thought back to the heart. You follow the I-thought back to the heart center, for remember, all of your problems, everything in this world, is attached to the I. Always remember this. Never forget this. All you have to do is to remove the I-thought from its existence. Remove your I, and you will be realized.

Think how many times you say I during the day. "I am this, and I am that, and I need this, and I need that. I am happy, I am lonely, I am poor, I am rich." You're always referring to this I. If there were no I left, there would be nothing to say. If you cannot use I, you wouldn't talk so much. Yet you're always using I. So the secret is to trace the I-thought back to the source and be free. You do this by inquiring to yourself, "Who am I?" This is the way you trace the thought back. "Who am I?" What you are doing is you're inquiring within yourself, "What is the source of this I?" Every time you inquire, the I begins to move back into the heart, more and more. Every time you make that statement to yourself, "Who am I?" the I begins to leave the brain and returns to the heart, slowly but surely.

Yet the I-thought does this automatically when you are in deep sleep. When you are in deep sleep you are self-realized, only you're unconscious, so you don't know it. The I has left the brain and has returned to the heart center. That's why there are no thoughts. You are free at that time, when you're in deep sleep.

The idea is to do this while you are in the waking state. The reason the I returns to the heart center when you are in deep sleep, is because there's no thinking going on. No one is thinking about anything. When the thoughts are free and clear, they automatically return to the heart center. So, you have to understand this and try to make this happen in the waking state. You're in the waking state right now, but your mind is filled with thoughts. Therefore the I-thought will not return to the center, for you're thinking thoughts. This is why I emphasize so often to stop thinking. Stop the thoughts from coming. Do whatever you have to do to quiet the mind, to make the mind quiescent. Then the I will return to the heart center, and you'll be totally free.

Now you have an idea what's going on in the heart center. When you meditate and you're not practicing self-inquiry, you can meditate on the heart center, you should meditate on the heart center. When you're doing the I-am meditation, meditate on the heart center. Feel the I-am coming and going from the heart center. When you inhale and you say, I to yourself, feel it going into the heart center. When you say, "am," feel it going out of the heart center. When you practice visualization, if you want to visualize Jesus, or Buddha, or Krishna, or somebody that you respect, see that person in your heart center. The heart center is very powerful, for it is absolute reality itself. It is the absolute choiceless pure awareness that we always talk about. This is where the heart center is.

Let everything return to the heart center. Don't hold back. When you think about surrendering, you surrender to the heart center. Surrender everything. Let go of everything. Let it all fall back into the heart center. This will give you freedom. This will give you joy. This will give you unalloyed happiness. The day will come when you understand that you are not the body, you are not the doer, you are not the mind. You are consciousness, all-pervading, omniscient, omnipotent, and you will find total freedom.

(silence)

It is now time to play "stump the guru." Stop the guru, kill the guru. We have a lot of stumpers here. Remember when you come in to write some questions down.

R: The first stumper. (SM: Oh my goodness we have a lot of stumpers here.) Lots of stumpers? It's going to be a long afternoon. (laughter)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: We do not know what anything is. How do we realize what is real or false?

A: Who is the one that wants to know? The one who wants to know already is. The realizer is already there. There is nothing at all you have to do about this. There is no thing you have to do. Your real nature is absolute freedom. What is real and what is false are only in the relative realm. In the relative realm you see real and you see false. But as you work on yourself, as you go deeper within yourself the substratum of all existence will be revealed to you. The reality of life will be revealed to you. You'll be like the screen, where images are shown on the screen. And you will know that you are the screen. Therefore ask yourself, "Who wants to know what is real, what is false?" The ego does. Do not concern yourself with this. As you practice self inquiry, as you practice forms of meditation, as you dive deep within the self the reality will present itself all by itself.

Therefore the one who wants to know the answer to this question is the ego. For the ego is always up to mischief. The mind, it wants all kinds of answers. As the mind begins to be still or to be quiet as you learn to quiet the mind, what is real will be felt by you. You will feel the reality within yourself. Which is unalloyed happiness, infinite peace. You'll begin to feel joy and love, compassion, these traits will come out by themselves. And they will be the real. It'll happen all by itself. The false will not present itself any longer. There will no longer be a false for you. Therefore again work on removing the ego, the mind, the I-thought and the real will present itself to you all by itself. (pause) Next case.

Q: Does being a disciple to a Sage infer a dependency? And is dependency a healthy relationship?

A: On the contrary, there is no dependency between a disciple and a Sage. There is only an understanding. The understanding is that the Sage is somebody that you want to be like. As if you're taking piano lessons. You do not depend on the pianist the teacher. What you do is learn what the teacher has to offer. For you can't play like the teacher. But as you keep practicing piano theory, actual practice the day will come when you're able to play like the teacher. You have become a teacher yourself. You become the pianist. But you don't beg the teacher to make you play the piano or beg the teacher for his knowledge or her knowledge. There is an understanding between you and the teacher.

You are the disciple which means it's up to you to find the truth. It is up to you to understand what the teacher has to offer and go all the way in the teaching. But never be dependent on a teacher. Be dependent on your Self. The true Sage is only yourself no one else. The Satguru, the real guru, the real Sage does not allow you to be dependent on him or her. The real Sage makes you stand up on your own two feet. He always throws the ball back to you. He makes you see that you are the power you've got everything within your Self. There is really no difference between you and me. Who sees the difference? You do. But the Sage does not see the difference. There is no difference in the make up of the Sage. The Sage is all-pervading and so are you. (pause) Next case.

Q: Robert since I find your confessions of what you see and what you experience so helpful may I ask to describe another personal confession of an experience you've had?

A: They are not particular experiences I've had, there has only been one experience. And that is, I was able to perceive the falsity of the universe and the reality of the Self. We go back to the example of the mirror. A mirror cannot see itself. Therefore it sees its reflection of the universe in the world. So this body here has been able to become transcended and has been able to observe the whole universes perfection as non-reality, as God, as Brahman, as nothing, as everything. For the Sage sees himself. And the Sage is part of the whole universe. The essence of the Sage is everywhere. In the trees, in the mountains, in people and bugs and insects, in everything, planets. So there is only one experience you have when you're realized or something happens to you. The universe disappears as it is, as it appears to be and the reality appears as the universe. You're always aware of the reality. Whereas the average person is always aware of the world. The average person looks at the world and believes the world to be real. Whereas I look at the world and see it as a manifestation of maya. The reality is in the Self and I am that.

So again there is only one experience I've had and that is to see the unreality as not being real, not being prevalent. And reality is being everything else. That's it. Try to understand this. Realization does not make you have different experiences. If you have different experiences it means that you were not realized to begin with. For you continue to have experiences. Reality is one infinite experience, the disappearance of the universe and the appearance as the Self. That's it. (pause) Next case.

Q: Dear Robert, I'm learning in the silence that learning humility is my only lesson but I can't seem to learn it. Can you help by describing humility, its various aspects, how to let humility happen and etc? May be I need specifics, thank you.

A: Humility comes by itself when you inquire "Who am I?" For when you inquire "Who am I?" you realize that you're not this, you're not that, you're not anything of this world. And as you realize this, you will also understand that everything has come out of you at the same time. If everything has come out of you, you become humble. You develop a tremendous humility.

For if you are me, what can I possibly do to you? Except love you? And that is humility, love. Reverence for all of life, Ahimsa, loving everything as is, as it appears. This cannot come by itself unless you have realized to an extent the truth about yourself. Humility will then be a part of your realization. There will no longer be a word like humility or love or peace. I use these words to make you understand what I'm talking about. You will just be. Not this, not that, you'll just be being, pure being. You will be oneness. One reality. One life. One Nirvana. One absoluteness. One, and that's humility.

Q: You speak of sitting in silence but within the silence there is still thought. Could you speak about this silence?

A: In the real silence there is no thought. When you sit in the silence you are freeing yourself from thought. You do certain practices, certain things to yourself so thoughts come less and less and less and less and they disappear completely. That is the object of sitting in the silence. Consequently if you sit in the silence for a long enough time, inquiring now and again, "Who am I? What is life? Where did I come from?" You will become more and more silent. Quietness will pervade. It will happen by itself. Then you will be in the true silence. But sitting down is not the true silence, until you quiet the mind. Until the mind has become totally quiescent, totally still, totally free. You consequently have to do the practices, to observe the mind in action as it moves. Observe the mind waves moving inside of you. Observe the sensations of the body. Observe what is going on inside of you all of the time. And this will quiet you. You will begin to become quieter and quieter and quieter. The more you observe the deeper you go within. The deeper you go within, the quieter the mind becomes and then you will be in the true silence. (pause) Next case.

Q: Does the relationship between an enlightened Master and an unenlightened student help the student after his death? Even if the student is not enlightened?

A: Yes. If you've been with a teacher for a while, a Sage, I'm not speaking of a week or two weeks or a month but if you've been with a Sage for about a year or over a year, the Sage has become a part of your essence and the Sage can never leave you again. Perhaps when the Sage seems to die, does he really die? Remember the Sage is not in the body whether he appears in the body or not in the body. The Sage is not the body at all. There is no body called a Sage. The Sage has totally and completely transcended and transmuted the body. It makes no difference to the Sage whether he's alive or not alive.

What you call life, what you call death are totally nonsense to the Sage because there is no life, there is no death, there is no birth, there is no perseverance. Consequently, when a Sage appears to leave the body to you, it's an appearance to you but not to the Sage. You continue thinking of the Sage. Seeing the Sage in your heart centre as we were talking about previously, then the Sage will always be real for you. You will even be able to converse with the Sage. The Sage will always be with you, as you. It also depends on your relationship with the Sage.

If you've been a devotee you will always have the Sage with you wherever you go. If you've been a disciple then you would have to be with a Sage a long time to be able to feel the Sage's presence. And if you've been a seeker then you will find another Sage. So it's up to you. It's what is going on inside yourself. This will determine whether the Sage is with you or not. Or if the Sage appears to leave the body. (pause) Next case.

SD: Robert can I add to that question? (R: Yes.) What if the devotee left his or her body and was not realized at the time, would this, in the next lifetime or reincarnation or whatever would the Sage be with that devotee?

R: The devotee always follows him or her own progress. In other words if you've been a real devotee and you leave your body, you will continue on the path where you were. And if you've been with a Sage, a close relationship with a Sage, you will be again with the Sage. Now even though the Sage has not left the body you will still be with the Sage. You will become the essence of the Sage. You will be in the Sage, with the Sage. Even though you've left the body and the Sage has not. The Sage will never desert you. For you will be able to feel the omnipresence of the Sage, the all-pervadingness of the Sage when you leave the body. The Sage will always be with you. Never to leave you at all.

So whether you're the Sage or the devotee, it's all the same. You are in the Sage and the Sage is in you and it will always be that way. (pause) Mary?

Q: What are the responsibilities of the Master to the disciple and what are the responsibilities of the disciple.

A: The Master to the disciple, is to be an example of truth, an example of the teaching and to be able to transmit grace, love, joy to the disciple. So that the disciple may awaken to discover that he is also the Sage. He's always been the same Sage. The Sage takes the disciple in his heart and holds him there, forever. The disciple takes care of the Sage. It's a reciprocal thing. Looks after the welfare of the Sage. Makes sure the Sage is self-sufficient. For the Sage in the material world in a way becomes sort of dependent on the disciples and devotees. So one is helping one and the other is helping one. It's a reciprocal thing. The Sage gives himself completely to his devotees and his disciples. And again since the disciples are living in the material world the disciples and devotees take care of the Sage materially. This is the true guru-disciple relationship.

For instance, when I was running around India, when I was a young fellow, strong and robust. Whenever I went to see a Sage, the first question that was on my mind was, "How does the Sage live? How does the Sage, sustain and maintain himself or herself whatever the case maybe?" I did not come to the Sage saying, "What can I get out of the Sage? I want the Sage to enlighten me. I want to pull all the information that I can out of the Sage and then go to another Sage." This is selfishness. This is why most disciples and seekers run all over the world looking for Sages and never getting anywhere. Because they are going to the Sage for the wrong reason. They are going to the Sage to get. To pull from the Sage. They want something from the Sage and this is the wrong attitude.

When you go to a Sage you should surrender totally to the Sage or you shouldn't be with that Sage at all. You shouldn't just go there and say, "Now what can I get out from the Sage, what can I pull out from the Sage, what information? I want the Sage to touch me, to enlighten me, to look at me a certain way to enlighten me." This is all selfishness. The attitude should be, "What can I do for the Sage? How can I serve the Sage in love and devotion and peace?" For you understand or you should understand that a Sage is not of this world. And a Sage doesn't really care what happens to him materially or otherwise. A Sage just flows with the punches. Goes along with whatever happens.

The Sage will usually never tell the devotee, "I have no food, I need shelter." The Sage doesn't really care. The Sage is always happy wherever he is, whatever he is going through it doesn't matter. But it is up to the devotee to keep the Sage in his body by maintaining and sustaining the Sage. And then the Sage acknowledges the Sage. And then the power of the Sage is transferred to the devotee. This is the true guru-disciple relationship.

Next case.

Q: What is the meaning of life?

A: Life has no meaning whatsoever. It doesn't mean a thing. Those of you who are running around trying to make things happen are making a terrible mistake. Everything has been preordained. Everything is happening according to a divine plan. Everything that is supposed to happen to your body will happen by itself. Life has no meaning. The real reason it has no meaning is because it doesn't exist the way it appears to exist. There is no life that really exists. The world does not exist, the universe does not exist. You do not exist as you appear to be. So life is meaningless. Any questions about, "What am I doing here?" Who says you're here? First you believe you're here and then you want to know the meaning to life. What you really mean by asking that question is, "How can I get everything I want in this world?" That is what you really mean. How can I obtain and maintain the things I desire? Riches, houses, cars, all the things of this world. Then you think life will be meaningful to you. It will only give you more suffering and more pain. Realize life is meaningless. Only the Self exists and you are that. You're all-pervading, absolute reality. You are pure consciousness, this is your real Self. You have never been anything else but That, and that's it.

SB: Robert could you then say that that is the meaning of life or in other words the real value of life is the Self? That is the meaning of life, the value of life?

R: You can't really say that because the ego is making that statement. (SB: But isn't that what the person is pointing to in that, what's the meaning of life? What is the real value to life that is worthwhile to become is the Self?) It's better to ask yourself the question and be silent. In other words ask yourself the question, "What is the meaning of life?" Do not say it's the Self. Just keep silent and everything will be revealed to you. But try not to have too many answers. For it is the ego answering. (SB: So the meaning of life is in the discovery of our own nature.) In a way you can say that but then who has to discover their real nature? Your real nature was never lost. If your real nature was lost would never have to discover it. Since it was never lost there is nothing to discover. That is why I said be silent. (SB: But if it was never lost how come everybody in the world is trying to discover it?) Ask them yourself, find out. (SB: I really mean that the concealment is such a...the appearance of the concealment is the whole nature of the illusion.) Who's illusion, who's concealment? (SB: Mine.) Right you're speaking of your own experience. Do not concern yourself with others. Do not think what others are doing. Do not think that others are confused or whatever they are. Leave them alone and work on yourself. You are the one.

When you're able to see the truth about your Self, you will be able to see everyone as yourself also. So right now you see everyone as yourself, confused. You're seeing everyone as being this way and that way. They are not being the way you think the way they should be. But you're actually seeing your image. Like the mirror. When you grow spiritually, when you unfold spiritually, you rise to a higher plateau then you'll be able to see everyone as your new Self. When you become self-realized then you will see everyone else as self-realized. (SB: The concealment of the Self must have some function in this divine plan of illusion, concealment and then discovery, it must play some role even in illusion, it must play some kind of a role?) On the contrary, as long as you feel you are the body then you feel there has to be a role for it to play. But there is no role to play at all.

When you're in a darkened room you turn on the light, there is light and darkness is dissipated forever. Nothing happened in between. When you awaken you will realize that you've always been awakened. There are no roles to play, there were never any roles to play. You've always been that. But now you're speaking of playing roles, of the world being this way and that way, of people being this way and that way because you're like that. (SB: Concealment of the Self...?) Nobody's concealing anything there is no place to conceal it. Who is the concealer? And who is the concealee? They do not exist. It is only the I-thought playing tricks on you. (SB: If the I-thought didn't exist how can it play tricks on you?) Because you believe it exists. (SB: I must be insane?) That's the answer. (laughter)

SH: You got it! (R: Now you know!) (laughter) You got to the bottom of it.

R: That is the best answer you can always give, you're insane. (SB: We're all insane, except the realized being?) Never mind the realized one, we're all insane. (SB: It's a madhouse?) Of course it's a madhouse. Just think of the things people believe and see if you're not insane? It's your beliefs. Look at what you do all day long and see if you're not insane?

Any announcements?

SM: Ah, no.

R: Any prashad? (SM: No prashad.) On thursday we have tons of prashad.

And so we come to end of another session. Remember to love yourself, to bow to yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself, for God dwells in you as you. Om shanti peace. Go forth and labor on this labor day. Enjoy yourself, be happy, all is well.

THREE ATTRIBUTES TO SPIRITUAL PROGRESS

10th September, 1992

Robert: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening.

It is a pleasure to be with you once again, welcome. Peace be with you.

Most of us are aware intellectually that we are not the body or the mind. That the world as we see it and know it does not exist. Everything that we believed in to be solid and true are a lie. Yet we only understand this intellectually. This is why we do spiritual practices. For great Masters and great Sages have explained to us that to the extent you... (dogs start barking) ...to the extent you cause the mind to be quiet, the dogs to be quiet, everything to be quiet, to that extent do you start to realize something else. It happens by itself.

In other words if the mind slows down this illusory universe slows down also and you start to pick up a new vibration. You start to feel something else entirely, something different. Yet while you're on this path something happens to you. You begin to feel different. If you've been practicing self-inquiry, if you've been practicing the other method to slow the mind down you will find certain attributes happening to you and this is when you know that you're making progress. This is when you realize that you're making progress.

The first understanding that you receive is that there is absolutely nothing to fear in this entire universe. You start to become fearless. I don't mean you become an idiot and you don't care about anything and you make a fool out of yourself and you say I'm fearless. You stand in front of a bus or you run in front of a car. I'm not referring to being foolish. But the fact is you do become fearless. You're beginning to realize that the whole universe emanates out of your mind. So there is absolutely nothing to fear because you are the one. You are the ultimate oneness, the creative energy. This is you.

Consequently there is absolutely nothing to fear. For what can hurt you? The universe becomes your friend not your enemy. Everything in this world becomes friendly towards you. You find that things begin to work themselves out. People no longer bother you, frighten you. You're beginning to understand your real nature. You were never born you can never die. Something appears to happen to you where you just become fearless.

Everything unfolds the way it's supposed to unfold. There are no mistakes.

You feel someplace in your heart that nothing is trying to hurt you. Even when things do not appear to work out the way you want them to. You never become disappointed again. For you understand and feel that there is a power that knows the way, that takes care of you, watches over you, leads you on a straight and narrow path so you become fearless, not obnoxious or cynical. It's not, "I don't care" attitude. You have love, wisdom this is the reason you become fearless.

There is a story that illustrates this. There was once a student going to class and the teacher was explaining to him that he has nothing to fear. God will take care of him. The universe is his friend. And he became pretty ecstatic about this. When the class was over he was walking down the back road to go to his house. There was a narrow bridge in front of him and some man came running toward him from the opposite direction saying, "There is a herd of wild elephants coming your way! Get out of the way quick!" And he stood his ground and he said, "What are you telling me this for I have absolutely nothing to fear. Nothing can hurt me. Nothing can do anything to me." And he kept walking on the bridge fearless. Well, sure enough the herd of wild elephants came along and the first elephant picked him up and threw him over fifty yards away. He was bleeding, broken bones.

The Master heard about this one of the students came and told the Master, "Master your student is dying down the road. An elephant picked him up by his trunk and threw him against the tree." The Master ran over to the student who was lying there and he said, "What happened?" The student explained to him what happened and he said, "Master you promised us that God will take care of us. The universe will take care of us. What happened. Why did this happen to me?" And the Master said, "You foolish person, why didn't you listen to the person who was telling you to get out of the way? This was God also. Telling you to get out of the way. You should have listened." This is true with us.

When I say that you're fearless do not believe that your ego is going to protect you from harm when you cause problems. Being fearless means that you listen to the trees. You listen to the sky. You listen to the birds. You listen to some people. Everything is God. Everything is the universe helping you. You have to use wisdom to be fearless. So remember the first attribute that happens to you on the spiritual path is fearlessness.

The next attribute that you feel when working on your sadhana, spiritual exercises, spiritual practices is a sense of peacefulness. You begin to be totally peaceful. Things that used to disturb you will cease or if it does not cease you've grown higher and it doesn't disturb you any longer. People that used to disturb you, used to give you trouble they can no longer make you feel angry or upset. You feel an innate peace, the peace that passeth all understanding.

You feel very peaceful in whatever you do. It's a beautiful peace. It's a wonderful feeling. You are at peace with the world and at peace with the universe. You have reconciled yourself with the entire universe. With the mineral kingdom, with the vegetable kingdom, with the animal kingdom, with the human kingdom and you feel good about yourself.

The third attribute that you develop is loving kindness without motive. You become a loving kind person for no reason at all. You do not think about it you just become

it. Selfishness drops away. The ego becomes less and less. You leave people alone. You do not become judgmental. You live spontaneously.

A good example of this is about the two monks who are sent from the monastery to go buy supplies in the city. They were walking along the road it was raining. There was mud all over the floor. They came to a street crossing and they saw a beautiful young lady wanting to cross the street. But she had expensive shoes on and a little dress. So one of the monks picked her up and carried her across. The monks didn't wear any shoes so it didn't matter. And he put her down the other side and he went back to his other monk friend and they continued to the city to buy supplies for the monastery. They came back again and it was time for dinner and they sat down to eat. The other monk said, "You know when we took these vows of celibacy we were told never to look at a woman. When a woman comes by we should lower our eye lids and not look at a woman. And you broke the rule. This morning you picked up the girl and you carried her across the street." The other monk smiled at him and he said, "Well I put her down this morning but apparently you're still carrying her."

This is what I'm referring to. To do what has to be done and forget it. Helping others, do not make a big deal out of it just do it. Be of service to other people and not think about it just do it. As you practice your sadhana these attributes become evident in your life without you even knowing it. If you have to think about these things then you've not arrived there. If you have to think about fearlessness, peace, loving kindness you have not arrived there yet. It is when these things become natural to you, when they become automatic then you know you're making headway you're making spiritual progress.

These three attributes are the first signs of spiritual progress. If you do not have these attributes it's simply because you're putting your ego first in your life. It is because you are in your own way. You're reacting to the world. You're allowing the world to make you despondent, upset, therefore you have to practice a little harder. For you are always practicing something aren't you? You're practicing your anger or your disappointments or your judgements or to be obnoxious. You're always doing something with your life. Therefore why not practice peace, loving kindness, fearlessness. Why not understand the truth about yourself.

There are many paths to self-realization. Atma-vichara is only one of them. Whatever you have to do, do it!

Do not spend your days and your weeks and your months and your years on nonsense. Remember your body is not here for a long time. What you call your body will have to leave you one of these days. Then where will you be without a body. Therefore if you're doing things for your body it's like whipping a dead horse. You should take care of yourself, true but do not spend too much time taking care of yourself. Do what has to be done finish with it and go forward. The more you think of God the more God will think of you.

How do you think of God?

When you become peaceful, when you have loving kindness, when you're fearless.

How do you become fearless, loving kindness, peaceful? By doing spiritual practices. Choose the spiritual practice that you can live with whether it's buddhism, whether it's mystical christianity, whether it's becoming the witness, becoming the observer of the I-thought. Whatever method you have to use by all means use it or do something. You are here in this body for no purpose whatsoever. Yet you believe that you're important and there is a reason for you to be here.

Some people say, "I am here to find myself." I would say, "You're here to lose yourself." Some people say, "I've come here for a purpose, to become self-realized." Yet the truth is there is noone to become self-realized at all. Your body cannot become self-realized. This is why we have such a hard time with this because we're trying to make the body pure. This is the wrong start. We start from the top. We are already pure. We are already bright and shining. We are already choice-less, effortless, pure awareness. What we're trying to do is reveal it and you reveal it by losing yourself, getting rid of yourself. Not by adding new teachings onto yourself or learning new dogma but rather by letting go of everything. Especially words. We talk too much. This is one of the things that keep us back from making a lot of progress on the path. We have a tendency to talk too much we have to work things out. We want to explain things.

Yet in reality there is a power within you that knows what to do without your help. The power that knows the way does not need your help. It needs you to surrender to it. To let go completely and thoroughly, then everything will take care of itself. Again it's hard to understand how everything takes care of itself. For we've been taught that we've got to do it. If we do not do it, it will not happen. We believe we've got to do it and this makes you the doer. Where in reality we want to get rid of the doership that you are not the doer.

Ponder these things. There is noone to do anything. Yet you appear to be doing something. Do not be confused about this. Paradoxically you will always be doing something yet in reality and in truth you will be doing nothing. There is really noone who has to do anything.

You did not ask to be born. So what gave you birth? It goes beyond your father and your mother. The truth is nothing gave you birth. Really you were never born. See these things I'm sharing with you sound ludicrous to some of you. You were never born. You're absolute reality. You're effortless choice-less pure awareness. You're boundless space. You have no body. Nothing that you do matters at all. I know to the average person this sounds ludicrous, totally ridiculous but yet this is the truth.

This is the reason I take you down a couple of notches to show you that as you progress on this path as you're doing your humanhood find yourself becoming happier and happier, more peaceful. Things do not bother you too much. You take control of your life. And then I say, "You have no life. There is nothing to take control of. There is nobody home." What a confusion this is. Yet when your mind does get confused this way thinking about these things, your mind becomes a little weaker. This is an important step. I'll repeat it.

When your mind gets confused thinking, "Am I not the body? Am I the body? Am I empty space?" Just by pondering these questions within yourself the mind begins to slow down and this is exactly what you're trying to do. To slow down the mind. So be confused it's good for you. It's a tremendous help for your unfoldment.

When you're not confused you are simply attached to your beliefs, your preconceived ideas, your concepts and your linear thinking. When you are confused your linear thinking begins to break up, your concepts begin to break up, your values begin to break up, everything that you believe and stood for begins to break up. Which means you're becoming free. And that is the whole idea to become free.

So when I speak to you from both levels. From the absolute level and from the relative point of view you understand why I'm doing this. To confound you and confuse you so the mind can be broken up to pieces, fragments until they disappear. Only when you have your own experience will you know that what I am saying is the truth. This is why I tell you so often, "Do not believe a word I say." Go out and have your own experience.

But yet again here is a contradiction. It is only when you come to satsang, when you find a teacher who has gone that way that you can have your own experience. There are very few people who have had a personal realization without a teacher or without satsang. Yet it's possible. But it is satsang and the Sage that really ruin your mind. Scorch your entire mind. Make you mentally deficient. Which is a blessing in disguise.

When some of you walk out of here you tell me, "You've got me completely confused now." And I say, "Good that is what my job is. To confound you, to confuse you. To break up your mind into fragments." My job is not to tell you the things you like to hear. My job is to hit a nerve someplace within you that makes you think, "That guy is crazy. He's out of his mind. What's he talking about?" That is when you're starting to make spiritual progress. When you totally agree with me this is a hindrance to your spiritual path. I am not asking to agree with me. I am asking to have your own experience and to find the truth for yourself.

Think of the experiences you've been having in your life from the moment you open your eyes in the morning until you go to sleep at night. What goes through your mind? What do you feel? What do you see? What do you believe in? What is happening to you everyday?

The worst thing you can do in the morning is turn on the TV and read the newspaper. That is the worst thing you can do.

The best thing you can do in the morning when you wake up is to ask yourself, "Who am I?" and "What am I doing here?"

The worst thing you can do at night before you go to sleep is to think about your job or your family or your finances or your sicknesses or your...all the other things that has been going on in your life.

The best thing you can do before you go to sleep or when you're sleeping, going to sleep is to inquire, "To whom do these activities come? To whom has the days activities come? Who has experienced these days activities."

So you see it's up to you to do the right thing. Wherever you go in this world you still have to take yourself and noone can transcend your mind but you. Noone can cause self-realization but you. Noone can awaken you but you. You are the one. The world really has nothing to offer you. Your dreams have nothing to offer you. Look to yourself. Look to eternity within yourself. Learn to love yourself. When you're loving your self you're loving the universe for the Self is the whole universe.

When I say to love your self I'm not referring to your small self, your ego self. I'm referring to your real Self. Learn to love your Self.

There is absolutely nothing wrong anywhere in this universe and that includes your life. Do not react to conditions. Be happy, always. Do not look for things to make you happy. Just be happy. Everything you own you're going to have to leave when you leave your body. Look to yourself. Everything begins with you. You are the one and there is no other.

Feel free to ask questions.

Noone gets any prashad until you ask questions. Say something!

ST: That was a very profound talk. (R: What was that?) It was a very profound talk.

R: So ask a profound question. (ST: I must ask a profound question?) Why not? (ST: Good question. I think you ruined my life.) You never needed it anyway.

SY: Robert can I ask a question? (R: Sure.) When I think of going on the path to enlightenment it feels like a very long road of struggle. I think the ...unclear...

R: That's a good question. And you have to inquire, "Who feels like that? Who is the one that feels that it's a long struggle? To whom is a long struggle?" See the truth is that you are already realized. In your heart of hearts you know that you're free already. Therefore it's the ego that thinks it's along struggle. The ego tries to fool you and makes you think about a long struggle and you will never get there, but hold onto the truth that you're already there. There is nowhere to get there is noone to struggle and you'll go beyond the ego. There are many ways to do this. When the thought comes to you, "This is a long struggle. This is a long path." Take a look at the question that came to you that makes you see this, that makes you say this to yourself and have a good hearty laugh. Laugh at...(tape break) ...this. "I'm not afraid of you." And keep still and laugh at yourself again. If you keep on doing this you will unfold at a very fast rate of speed.

So again whenever the question comes to your mind, the thought, "It's a long struggle. I have to do a lot of work." Immediately catch yourself. Do not continue along that line of thinking. Catch yourself very fast. Stop that kind of thinking by immediately inquiring, "To whom do these thoughts come? Who feels it's a long job, a long journey?" And keep still, stop. That is how you overcome that.

SF: Do you want us to share? (R: Yes.) Okay there is something I learned not too long ago. That Lord Krishna at one time or another stated that each of the three main paths, knowledge, devotion and service are the best or is the best. And it's been said that he made this statement out of his magnificent compassion. And he also said something which is especially beautiful. He said, "In whatever way men love me in that same way they find my love. For many are the paths of men but they all in the end come to me." (R: Yes Fred, very true.)

SK: Robert I find that that idea of the observer and the observed are the same. And just to get it clear. Does that mean that everything the observed is observing is his own projection? (R: Exactly.) So it's all coming out of my mind, whatever I see is my own thing? (R: True.) Creating all my own thoughts, creating all the thoughts...the whole is coming from me, is myself.

R: It's all coming from you. Look at yourself again as a mirror. And the mirror cannot see itself. It sees a reflection of itself which is the world. So we're all mirrors and we're all seeing our reflection. Consequently whatever you see is yourself. So if you see hate and malice all kinds of nonsense in this world that is where you're coming from right now you're seeing this because you're seeing yourself. But as you grow and the mirror becomes polished and clean you start to see a new image. You start to see in the imperfection you see perfection. In the chaos and confusion you see love and harmony. Because the dust has been polished off the mirror and you're seeing the true picture.

SL: (students question unclear) (R: Say that again.) Is it always the mind that says ???

R: Yes, yes it is, it's the mind. The mind sort of becomes washed so-to-speak in the beginning. It becomes clear. And the mind causes you to see harmony and joy. But in the end the mind goes also and there is no one to see anything. Now you're in a completely new dimension. When the mind goes there is no clarity, there is no disharmony, there is no good, there is no bad, there is no God, there is no devil. The mind is the one that causes these things to happen. So when you start seeing good things in this world it is the mind that sees the good things. It's a very high step. But in the last analysis the mind has to be totally annihilated. Totally wiped out, totally killed and then there is no one to see anything. Then you become bliss, consciousness, pure awareness by confusing the mind until it breaks up into fragments, into pieces.

SL: Is it confusion what causes people to be liberated and free?

R: It is relative confusion, yes. But as you grow spiritually. The relative confusion goes into a higher realm. Where your mind begins to break up the relative confusion and the disharmony plus the harmony begin to disappear. As the mind sees these things disappearing you go higher and higher in your unfoldment until the mind disappears in its entirety. (SL: So you're making progress in the beginning when there's confusion and harmony.) Yes, when you realize that everything is from the mind, everything emanates from the mind, beauty, harmony, hate, evil, it's all two sides of the same coin. Yet beyond the relative beauty, beyond the relative evil, beyond the relative goodness and joy there lies something more beautiful and more joyous than you can ever imagine. There are no words to express it or explain it. You have to experience it for yourself. There is a joy beyond the joy of relativity that no human being can express. For the finite cannot express the infinite.

We have to go beyond words, beyond mind, beyond thoughts, beyond everything we've ever known and then we become that. Then there are no longer no explanations. There is nothing we have to do. There is nothing we have to explain. We have just become that, sat-chit-ananda, the absolute reality. But the mind has to be totally wiped out for that to happen.

SH: How do you wipe out the mind?

R: By looking at the mind. Watch the mind, observe the mind — what appears to be the mind. Watch what it does, watch how it thinks by not reacting to it, observing it, looking at it, but never reacting to it. Or inquiring, "To whom does the mind come? Who has this mind? Where did it come from? Who gave it birth? I did? Then who am I?" By observing your thoughts and saying it comes to you, as peace comes to you, as all these relative things come to you, just watch without reacting. Then the mind becomes weaker and weaker and weaker and weaker until it finally dissolves and you're home free. But the moment you react to anything you spoil it.

SK: You just explained the terminology of "I and the Father are one," to get to that place where there is no observer observing it. It's just right now "I and the Father are one." ??? I sense that, you know. Once the mind is gone you're just there.

R: The Father refers to God. I refers to the small self. When you say, "I and the Father are one," it means that the small self has merged into the universal Self and you're free.

SY: How about, "Be still and know that I am God." That's when we're that, I mean...I'm confused. (R: Good that's great.) I came here and I'm confused now and... (R: You're making good progress.) The only thing that makes sense to me is when I'm silent by myself or when I'm silent here with you and like I just have to be still and know that I am God.

R: Well that suffices and it's good. (SY: Yeah.) If you can be still and know that you are God that is great. (SY: But I forget it, when I'm walking around I forget it.) You forget it because you're not practicing, are you? (SY: No, I mean I meditate and I pray in the morning and in the night you know...in my own way. I don't have any special practice, I just say what comes in my mind.) See if we were together like in an ashram and you saw me everyday then there would be nothing at all which you have to do but sit there in satsang and that would suffice. But I only have you about four hours or five hours a week. Some of you less than that and the world has you the rest of the time. This is why you have to diligently practice self-inquiry or observation of the mind. You have to be your own teacher. That is why you have the transcripts. It is good to read these transcripts before you go to sleep at night. Also when you get up in the morning. And be with these ideas that we're talking about here. Grab onto those ideas that you read in the transcripts and carry it with you for the day.

For as an example, You read in the transcripts that you have to ask yourself, "Who am I?" continuously. The transcript will remind you and then you put down the transcript and you do it. When you're getting dressed, when you're washing the dishes, when you're going to work, when you come home, you keep repeating to yourself, "Who am I?" Even when you're working. It will not interfere with your work. Keep inquiring continuously, "Who am I? Who is doing this work? Who feels this and who feels that? It is the I not me. Then who am I?" or "Where is the source of the I?" and keep inquiring like this all day long. Then after a while something will break and you will begin to feel peaceful as we discussed in the beginning. You will begin to become fearless, peaceful, you will develop loving kindness then you know you're making progress.

R: Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Do we have any announcements?

SM: Ah yes we do.

R: It is satsang time. It's time to eat.

THE POWER THAT KNOWS THE WAY

13th September, 1992

Robert: Greetings and salutations. It is good to be with you once again. I welcome you with all my heart. I love you. All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should. There are no mistakes. Everything is in its right place. Just the way it is.

Ask your self the question, "What is your purpose for being here today? What is your reason for coming to satsang?" If you have a purpose you shouldn't be here. Who has a purpose? The ego, the mind. The ego and the mind has lots of reasons for being here. The ego and the mind want to become enlightened, wants to become self-realized. What a joke! (students laugh)

The personal self can never know self-realization. The ego, the mind, the personal self can never receive moksha. Why? Because they don't exist. There really is no ego, there is no mind, there is no personal self. So if you have a purpose you're on the wrong track.

Life has no purpose. The universe has no purpose. You have no purpose.

What is the purpose of water in the mirage? Does it have a purpose? You see a pool of water in the desert and you think it's real. And then you go for it and you're picking up sand. And so it is with existence. Existence seems so valid, so real, so true. Yet who exists? Have you ever existed? Will you ever exist, what exists? Nothing.

When I say nothing I mean no thing. There is absolutely no thing that has its own existence. The appearance may seem strong, may seem real. The appearance of existence may seem to be valid and yet in the highest truth there is no existence.

Then you ask me what is my purpose? What am I doing here? I don't know, I'm just here. I have no idea why I'm here. I have no purpose. I really have nothing to share with you. I'm not looking for name or fame or anything at all. For forty years I've been running around the country, the world, hiding and people always find me for some reason. And there goes my peace. (students laugh) So what am I doing here? Who knows, yet there is no difference between me and you. I'm nothing special. Again the analogy is, a mirror cannot see itself. I'm like a mirror, I cannot see myself. I see the reflection of the Self, the reflection of pure awareness. Consequently I see you as absolute reality, as pure awareness. I see you as Brahman. This is my reflection. You are also a mirror and you cannot see yourself yet you see your reflection, what do you see? When you look at your fellow man do you see love, peace, harmony, joy or do you see something else?

When you understand how this works you will realize whatever you're seeing you're seeing your self. You are always seeing yourself. You may see yourself as an enlightened being and you will see the whole universe as enlightened or you may see yourself as a thief, as bank robber, as a gossip. Whatever you see in others you see in yourself. Whatever you see in others is yourself. There is only one Self and you are that. So, what is the reason for you being here? There should be no reason whatsoever. It's just a happening, it happens by itself.

There is a mysterious power in the universe. I like to call it, "The power that knows the way," which maintains the grass and the clouds and the sky, the trees, the food, the oranges, the wheat and also appears to maintain us and sustain us. Therefore you have nothing to concern yourself about. Nothing to worry about, nothing to fear. The whole universe is your friend. Yet the universe does not exist. Your friend does not even exist. As long as you believe you are the doer, that you are the body and the mind you will always be taking some kind of action. You will always be looking out for yourself. Seeking fame, seeking glory, seeking lust. All of these things are a part of the human experience that does not exist. So why am I talking about it? What else can I do?

You came here to hear a lecture a speech. You came here to hear profound words, they're not coming from me. I have absolutely nothing profound to share with you. It's just been my experience that nothing exists. That's it! Yet when I say those words, "Nothing exists," there is something beyond existence and non-existence, something unmutable, something ineffable. Something that words cannot describe or utter. There is a beauty, a bliss, a joy but these words are meaningless by themselves. But there is something grand which is your real nature. Remember when I tell you, "You do not exist, I'm referring to your ego, to your personal self." You are part of a divine plan. As long as you believe you are the body accept this.

If you must believe in the God, Ishvara who grants you boons and gives you karma, controls the whole universe, then put yourself in Ishvaras hands. Meaning surrender completely totally to the power that knows the way. Give it all up. Hold onto nothing. If you do you will also come to the place in life where you will also give Ishvara up. You will begin to feel, to comprehend, to understand that this Ishvara is an emanation of your mind. In other words you have created God in your own image. This is good, there is nothing wrong with this. You should become mad for God. You should become God intoxicated. You can only do this when you give up this world mentally not physically, you do not have to give anything up physically. The physical will follow the mental. When you mentally become nonattached to person, place or thing you will then begin to live a spiritual life. Until then you're not living any spiritual life whatsoever.

Spiritual life means a letting go, a giving up, a release of all the things that have turned you on up till now. All the things that seem important to you, good, bad in-between and mentally letting go. For it doesn't matter whether you live in a palace or a hut, whether you have a million dollars or five cents, whether you're dying of cancer or you're healthy as a horse it shouldn't make any difference. For after all to whom does this happen? Not to you, but to I. It is the I-thought that experiences all these things, you don't. You are totally free. Yes you are. You are totally free, absolute reality. Your nature is satchit-ananda. You are nirvana the ultimate oneness there is absolutely nothing you have to do to attain this state. You don't have to even wake up. Many times I tell you to wake up because I'm using words. But in reality to wake up means that someone was asleep. Who is there that sleeps? Who is there that is disillusioned, ignorant? Is there one really who is ignorant? There is no ignorance. If there is no ignorance there is no enlightenment.

Therefore when you think of words like absolute reality, pure awareness you are saying to yourself, oh I wish I could attain these things. This makes you believe you're something else and you have to attain something else. But in truth you're never anything and you'll never be anything except a good for nothing. You have to stop trying to become something. You have to stop looking. To become self-realized, awakened. Just be. Do not be this or that. Be the pure being which you are without words, without thoughts, without explanations. It has to come from your heart not from your head. Head knowledge comes and goes but heart knowledge stays forever.

I'm speaking of the spiritual heart on the right side of the chest. Not your physical heart, not chakras, not kundalini. There is a spiritual heart on the right side of the chest that is equivalent to the source of the universe which I mentioned the other day. There is a central source to this whole universe and the whole universe spins around the central source. This earth makes a twenty-four thousand year cycle. Twelve thousand years of enlightenment, twelve thousand years of going backwards into the dark ages. But the point is the spiritual heart is equivalent to the source of all creation and this is on the right side of your chest. It is this that is the pure awareness, the absolute reality, the nirvana. It is within you. It is within you all the time. You really have to dive in it. Dive in it deeply. Go deep, deep inside the spiritual heart.

There is a story which clears this up to an extent. There was once a young girl who was a prostitute and she was born into prostitution karmically. Her mother was a prostitute before her, her grandmother was a prostitute before her. She was born into this kind of life she knew nothing else. One day she was looking out of the window she looked across the street in front of the supermarket. There was a preacher who was preaching about God, to repent, to give up sin. Telling everyone they're going to go to hell. And he would point to the house of prostitution and say, "See those people in there they're all sinners. They're all going to burn in hell. Give up your sins, accept God." He did this day after day after day. And the young prostitute used to look at him and say to herself, "How I wish I was like him. Why am I going through this life the way I am? Oh God give me the strength to carry on. Whatever you may do for me I will accept. I accept my lot in life but please help me, free me from this kind of position." And yet she did her work in prostitution which she was supposed to do and in-between jobs she would look out the window and wish she was a holy person like that man.

Now they both got older and older and older and they both finally died and left their body. They both appeared before God for judgement and God looked at the holy man and he said, "You're going to hell," and he looked at the girl and he said, "You're going to heaven." And the holy man was shocked and he said, "God how can this be? I've preached your name for years and years. I've told people to come to you. To surrender to you. While this girl is nothing but a prostitute. How can she go to heaven and I go to hell?" And God smiled and said, "My son, you have been preaching for many many years but where was your heart? In your heart was lust, greed, yet you preached to people to change their ways to become pure but you were never pure, only on the outside you put on a good show. But the so-called prostitute, her karma was to be a prostitute. She really didn't complain she just prayed for realization, to know why. With the power to continue. She prayed from her heart and I in her heart listened. This is the reason why you're going down below and she is going up above.

So it is with us. We read many books. Many of us have travelled to India, to Jerusalem, to Tibet, to Japan. We've been involved in Zen, yoga, islam, judaism, catholicism and everything else. But what are we really doing? What are we really searching for? The one you're searching for is already within you. The one you're searching for has not gone any place. The one that you're looking for is right where you are right now. You are that. Look no further. You are the one. You are the one. Yet many of us because of karma are inclined toward different paths. Everyone can't be on the same path it would be boring if everybody in this whole universe and this whole world took the same path. So God gives us variety. All paths lead to the same goal. But the two paths that are very important to realize and to understand are the paths of Jnana and bhakti, the path of knowledge and the path of devotion. In the path of knowledge you understand I-am-that-I-am. You begin to inquire, "Who am I?" You negate the whole world your body included, your mind. Neti-neti, not this, not this. You deny everything and what is left is your Self. The universal Self, the all-pervading absolute reality. You awaken as your Self.

The path of bhakti is much easier for most people. To become a true bhakta you simply have to become God intoxicated. How do you do this?

You turn to your spiritual heart and you imagine a beautiful sphere of light in your physical heart. Then you think of your favorite deity. Whether it's Krishna, Christ, Mohammed, Moses, whoever it may be and you see this person in your spiritual heart, in the light. You begin to love this person to adore this person. You think of this person night and day, day and night until you lose yourself into this person. You can pray to this being. You may pray to this deity. You can laugh from happiness. You can cry from joy. But you have to develop passion. You have to be passionate in your love. And cry out to this God within you, "Free me, oh Lord, release me. Do with me as you will but free me. Show me I'm not the body. Eat up my ego."

Keep praying this way. Keep seeing the picture of this deity in your heart and keep diving deeper and deeper and deeper. This means that the external world will become totally meaningless to you. It doesn't mean that you will do nothing. Remember the body that appears to be real came to this plane of existence to do something, karmically. So whether you like it or not your body will continue to do something. There will never be a time when you give up doing. You are to understand that you are not the doer, you are not the thinker, you are not the body nor the mind. Yet the body will go where it has to go, do what it has to do but it has absolutely nothing to do with you. You have nothing to do with this body. So you have two paths to follow, one or the other. You can follow them both at the same time. As soon as you wake up in the morning you may say to yourself, "Who am I?" and then see the light in your heart. See the deity in the light and feel the love that you emanate. Feel the love in the heart, the total love, the total peace, the total joy. Then you can go back into asking yourself, "Who am I?" and try to understand that you are the deity. You are the one that you see. It may appear that there are two of you right now. You are the deity of your choice. But you understand in reality there is only one and you are the one.

If you continue this for of practice, a little Jnana, a little bhakti keep doing one or the other all day long something will give, something has to give! You cannot practice these things without something giving and you will become free. Again this doesn't mean that you shouldn't go anywhere or do something else. You can watch TV, you can go to a movie, you can go swimming, you can go play golf, you can go bowling but never forget who you are, that's all. Always remember who you really are. Where you have to go you're going to go anyway. Remember everything is preordained, predetermined. Everything that is going to happen to you is already planned before you came into your body, everything. Even when I move my finger like this. It's all planned, it's all preordained.

With all this knowledge what do you have to worry about? What can you possibly fear? Who can hurt you? Whether you believe that you are a body or whether you believe you're something else, you are very well protected by the divine bliss that is the centre of your heart. So be happy. You are free.

(silence)

It is time to play stump the guru.

We have questions. When you come in please be sure to write down the question you like. We use it as a stumper.

SH: I'm waiting for you when you're really stumping. (laughs) So far it hasn't happened.

(R: There is one answer for everything.) (laughter) One day someone will stump you. (laughs)

SB: What happens when you get stumped? (R: We'll trade places.) (laughter)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers.)

R: Okay Mary. (Prompting Mary to read the first question)

Q: Okay, What is a soul? What happens when a person dies.

A: What is Kafilter fish? (laughter) A soul is the same thing. (laughter) Or could I say this is a soul. (Points to something) Take your choice. (laughter) To whom does the soul exist? Who has a soul? Who made a soul? A soul is a part of the imaginings. A part of the mental concepts of reality which doesn't exist. It's so easy just to be yourself and be omnipresent, all-pervading, consciousness, but you want to be a soul. (laughter) So a soul can be anything that you believe. That's a soul. Whatever you believe it is that is what it is. Only remember it's part of your belief system. It has no reality of its own. So a soul is a word that you made up. Something that somebody taught you when you were a kid that you have a soul and when you die your soul goes to heaven or some place like that. The truth is you can never die you were never born there is no soul, you are totally free. Hallelujah! (laughter)

SH: That's telling you like it is. (laughs)

SM: So is that what happens when a person dies? (R: What's that?) That was like two questions, what happens when a person dies?

R: What happens when a person dies, nothing! What do you want to happen? Whatever you believe that is what happens. But in truth if you practice sadhana, spiritual disciplines you never have to concern yourself with things like that. For there will never be a time when you have to die. You don't die! Who dies? Somebody who doesn't exist. Only the person who never existed dies. What exists can never die because it was never born and you are that. Therefore do not confuse yourself with those kind of questions. Soul, death, birth, they're all illusions, they're all impostors. Accept the fact that you are God and be finished with it. Next case.

Q: Alright. Please give us some divine inspirations for human beings living with HIV, AIDS and cancer.

A: Well those things are a part of the game. As terrible as it may seem it's part of the human so-called existence. Since the beginning of time mankind so-to-speak has had calamities. There used to be the black plague, leprosy. You can go back in time and find all sorts of diseases and now we have AIDS or whatever. When you believe you're a human being the planet has to balance itself out. When there is an over abundance of people on this planet people are worried about being over population. This will never happen. For the more mankind prolongs his life the more there will be diseases to take it away. We can say something like this. There have been approximately three billion souls - that do not exist - that are allocated to this planet. (laughter) And they come and go. There is a time when more come then there is a disease, a famine, an earthquake and part of the population is wiped out.

R: More than 4 billion. (ST: Yes today we have 5 or 6 billion on the planet.) Take or leave a billion. (ST: I like your attitude.) (laughter) So anyway what will happen - and this sounds terrible to an extent - It's like the millions of people who died in the concentration camps. During the inquisition millions of people that were killed. People have come people have gone. Remember this planet is billions of years old. There have been many civilizations on this planet. Some of them have surpassed us where we are now and they were all destroyed and it starts all over again. So disease is only one way of cleaning the planet. Do not worry. Do not be concerned.

Now you can look at me and say, "Well he doesn't care because he doesn't have AIDS." This body has its own disease but it doesn't mean a thing to me. Do not be afraid, that is the thing you must know. Have no fear. You are in good hands, for your sake. (laughter) As long as you have insurance what are you worried about? (laughter) No seriously, all is well. Nothing wants to hurt you. Nothing can hurt you. Take your mind off it. Give your mind to God. Think of God all of the time not of the problem and you will be safe. There is a love that is taking care of you that is much greater than the AIDS or whatever. This love is yourself, find it, look for it, go for it. It's there. For you are that and you'll be okay. Have no fear. I can assure you all is well. Next case.

Q: What is the process that helps us to know we're God in satsang or that the presence of God is in us even though it leaves later?

A: We've been talking about this for two hours. Ask yourself, "Who am I?" Inquire, "To whom do these problems come?" Become passionate for God. See God in the right side of your chest at the source. And dive deep into your chest into your heart centre. Deep within where you've never been before. And you do that by letting go of everything. Diving deep inside the heart centre. Into your deity of choice and be free. Practice those things.

Q: How can the spiritual heart be located in a specific spot in the physical body. Since spiritual means non-physical and since the body is an illusion anyway.

A: In reality this is true. But as long as you believe you are a body there is a spiritual heart, don't you see? As long as you believe you're human then you have to have something to work with. So there is a spiritual heart that is presented to you that you may dive deep within it and become free. But you are saying the truth in reality everything is the spiritual heart. But you don't know that or you would be free already. You would have awakened. Since you have to ask this question then you will have to play with your spiritual heart. When you have reached a sense of maturity, a spiritual maturity, then you are the spiritual heart, the leaves are the spiritual heart, the mountains are the spiritual heart, Henry is the spiritual heart. But until you realize that you are not the body then go for the spiritual heart on the right side of the chest. Next.

Q: I don't know how to let go deep inside myself it's very painful to hold on. Can you speak to me on this? Thank you.

A: Who doesn't know how to let go? The real you has never held on. The perfect you that is absolute reality has nothing to hold onto. So you have nothing to let go of. Think about this. Ponder this. "Who has to let go of something? I? Who am I? Who am I?" You are not the I. It is the I who asks the question. It is the I who cannot let go. Go beyond the I. Trace the I back to the source, to the centre of the heart. Follow the I back. Let it merge in the soul which doesn't exist, in the heart, follow it. Dive inside. This is all done mentally first. Do these things mentally, imagine it within yourself and make it happen. Then you'll become happy and free.

Q: Is satsang an expression of (these are capital letters) AS IS, or is satsang AS IS itself?

A: As is, as is not. You are! You are the satsang yourself. As is, IS! It is not this, it is not that. It is is-ness. "Is you is or is you ain't my baby." Remember that song? (laughter)

So forget about all this is-ness. Go beyond isness. Become free and happy and peaceful. We make up all kinds of words. It's like putting ourselves in a dungeon. And we can't get out when the door has always been open to the dungeon. All we have to do is open the door and get out. We come up with all these parables and statements and words. Try to empty your mind totally. Do not add to the mind, empty it. Forget about words and statements and stories. You'd rather have an empty mind, no mind and see yourself as being empty, free, happy, divine. What you are anyway.

Q: There is two questions on that, what is understanding?

R: Understanding is understanding. Understanding is sitting here listening to me and then asking the question what is understanding? What is understanding? Nothing. Who has to understand? Does a light have to understand its brightness? Does the sun have to understand that it shines all the time? Who are you that thinks it doesn't understand? Realize that you are all pervasive, like the sun. And there is absolutely nothing to understand. There is just beingness, consciousness, that is you. Does God have to understand anything? It'd be a sorry God if it had to understand things. There is nothing for God to understand, there is nothing for you to understand. Just be. Be happy. Be filled with joy and bliss. Be yourself.

Q: Is waking up always sudden and irreversible?

A: True awakening is sudden and irreversible. Partial awakening is under the awakening. For instance in nirvikalpa samadhi. This is a person who goes into states of samadhi, states of clarity for a period of time then comes out again. And is back in the world with all its problems and nonsense. Sahaja samadhi on the other hand is a being who is awakened twenty-four hours a day. There is no longer any sleep for that person. No longer any going or coming. That person acts like a human being and is always in a state of bliss. So true awakening comes in a flash. It's as if you're in a dark room tripping over the furniture then you turn on the light. The light didn't come on gradually. It wasn't at first very dim and you can't see it but you're still tripping over the furniture but you're able to see it and then the light gets brighter and brighter, it doesn't work that way. The light goes on, the darkness has dissipated. Darkness never comes back. If it isn't a full awakening it isn't a real awakening. A real awakening is spontaneously and permanent.

Q: Is it likely that we need to become fairly established in the witness consciousness before going beyond the witness?

A: Yes and no depends who you are. If you want to be a witness be a witness. It's up to you. You're in control you're in charge. You can be anything you like. Just know that you're absolute reality that you're free. If you just can realize that you're free, total freedom, total love, total bliss then there will be no reason to be a witness. But if you want to play around with witnessing by all means do so. You can be the witness. Be the witness of what is going on here today. By being the witness your mind is in abeyance and you're witnessing you're watching without reaction that is being the witness. You're observing you're not reacting to anything you're just looking, watching. Your feelings are on God and the Self, on reality. But you are witnessing creation in its play. So be whatever you want to be. (pause) Bob?

SB: Advaita teaches to transcend the mind and be silent. But the highest buddhist teachings teach to remain in pure presence watching thoughts. Is one more equipped to realization than the other? Transcending all thoughts directly or just remaining as pure presence being aware of thoughts until you arrive but still identifying with pure presence.

R: Realization is a gift of God. It is God's grace that makes you totally and fully realized. Everything else is just a coming close to God's grace. It brings you close to God's grace. All of your sadhana's, all of your practices that you do, everything you've ever done was to bring you close to God's grace. All of your practices are to release the mind, to give up the mind, to make the mind quiescent. Then you're close to God what we call God. God's grace becomes part of your being and you become totally free.

Do not make your life complicated. Do not make the teaching complicated. The teaching is very simple it's for a child. All you have to do is to look at the world with awe and realize that the world is really God in expression. Pray to the God within you say, "God this is your world that I see. This is your illusion. This is your maya. This is all you. Even my body is you. Even my mind is you, my thoughts are you. You are all and I am that." As you passionately learn to love God, as your Self, you become free and grace flows and you become the true Self. That's all you have to do.

SB: If you have trouble keeping the mind quiet is the next best thing to just stay as consciousness and when the mind arises just be aware of the mind arising but yet remain in the pure presence of consciousness?

R: You can ask yourself, "To whom does the mind arise?" Always question yourself. Question yourself. You question yourself, "Who has this mind? Who thinks it has to watch and witness? To whom do these thoughts come? Who has to go through all this trouble? My real nature is already perfect. I am that ultimate reality, so who has to do all of these things? Who has to go through all of this?" Keep talking to yourself like this. Question yourself continuously question yourself, question yourself and then you'll run out of questions and be free.

Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself, for God dwells in you as you.

We have some prashad feel free to enjoy. Om shanti peace.

THERE CANNOT BE A PROBLEM IN YOUR LIFE

20th September, 1992

Robert: Greetings and salutations. I see you're all anxious can't wait for me to speak so you can go to sleep. It is good to be with you again. We have a nice small group of people. This is wonderful, pleasurable. So you all look at me wondering what I'm going to say. Why should I say anything to you? You didn't pay to get in here. (laughter) I don't have to say anything. Anyway I'll say a few words see where we go?

SH: Don't strain yourself.

R: I won't. (laughter) Most of us believe that we have to stop the mind from thinking and when we stop the mind from thinking liberation comes. This is false. This is false because by trying to stop the mind from thinking you're causing conflicts within yourself and we want to avoid conflict. What we want to do is to observe ourselves thinking. To watch intelligently, the mind thinking thoughts, about the past, about the future and remove the barrier between the thoughts and the Self. See the difference?

You never try to stop the mind from thinking. Your mind appears to be stronger than you are and it will always win and you become disgusted and discouraged. Allow the mind to do what it wants. Never try to stop it. Just realize within yourself that there is a barrier like a wall between you and your thoughts, between you and your mind and allow the wall to disappear. Then there will be no conflict. The thoughts will actually merge into the Self and you will become free.

Always try to avoid conflict.

I know some of you are fighting tremendously within yourselves to become free and liberated. Again this is the wrong move. There really is nothing you have to do. This is why I tell you so often, "Just be yourself." By being yourself you have no animosity toward your mind or to anybody else. You have no opinions for or against. You leave the world alone and it will leave you alone. You will become peaceful just by leaving things as they are. You will not vegetate. You will not become a fool.

If you allow things to unfold by themselves the power that knows the way will take care of everything for you. There is absolutely nothing you have to do. Yet your body will perform its duties. It will do the things allotted to it all by itself and you will be in absolute peace. When you stop worrying, you stop fretting, you stop trying to change things, everything will work out. Everything always works out. This is why I always tell you all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. Did I ever tell you the story about that? I'll tell you again. Whether you want to hear or not.

There was once a kingdom in which a prime minister ruled. The prime minister was a servant of the king and he took care of all the duties of the castle. He went to a guru. And his guru always told him, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should." That is all he ever said. He never said anything else. He would ask this particular guru a question, "How's the weather?" he would say, "All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should." "How is your health?" "All is well. Everything is unfolding as it should." "And if I put a hand-grenade in your mouth?" "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should." Nothing disturbed this guru. Well, the prime minister caught on. He became conscious of this truth. He became enlightened through this just by hearing his guru say this over and over again. Now when he went back to his kingdom he started to say the same thing to people who came to him for advice.

One day the chief of security came to him and told him, "I don't know what to do I'm totally upset. My wife ran away with another man. She's gone. I really miss her and I loved her. What am I going to do?" The prime minister smiled and he said, "Don't worry all is well and everything is unfolding as it should." The chief of security scratched his head he said, "What is this guy telling me?" He left cursing and mumbling.

At the same time the head chef came over to the prime minister and he said, "I've just been demoted to a cook and the king hired one of his relatives to take my place. This is terrible. I've been here for fifteen years what should I do?" And again the prime minister said, "Don't worry all is well, everything is unfolding as it should." The head chef was very upset about this. He was walking back to his quarters and he met the chief of security and the both related the story to each other and they were both furious with the prime minister. They said to each other, "How can we get even?"

Now down the hall was the royal barber shop and they happened to look through the window. The king was getting his royal shave. But the barber slipped with the razor and cut the king's neck, deep gash, royal blood was falling all over the floor. The two men saw this and the chief of security had a little gaze and said, "I know how we'll fix the prime minister. We'll fix him good."

He ran to the prime minister and he said, "Mr prime minister guess what happened? The king just cut his royal neck and there is royal blood flowing everywhere. What do you think of this?" And of course the prime minister just smiled and said, "Don't worry all is well, everything is unfolding as it should." That is exactly what they wanted to hear. They ran to the king's quarters. The king was sitting on his throne with a bandage on his neck. They approached him and said, "Your royal highness you know the pain you're going through what's happened to you it's a terrible thing. We advised the prime minister of this and he simply laughed and he said all is well and everything is unfolding as it should." And the king said, "What! Bring him to me!" And the guards picked him up and brought him to the king. He kneeled before the king and the king said, "Do you see my neck it has a bandage on. I'm in terrible pain. This is a terrible thing that has happened to me. What do you think of that?" And the prime minister said, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should." The king said, "Throw him in the dungeon." So the poor prime minister was thrown into the dungeon.

This was a Wednesday and every Wednesday afternoon the king and the prime minister would go horse back riding in the royal woods. Every Wednesday they would go horse back riding. This time the prime minister was in the dungeon so he couldn't go. The king went by himself.

Now there were a tribe of Kali worshippers who lived in the jungle and once a year they would have a sacrifice. They would catch the first person they'd see and sacrifice him to Kali and this was the day to do this. So the head of the tribe said, "God will bring me a pure person so that I can sacrifice him." They went looking and they couldn't find anybody. After a couple of hours they saw the king riding on his horse. They didn't care if he was a king or who he was, they grabbed him kidnapped him, took him to the chief and they said, "Here he is chief we're going to sacrifice him." The chief looked him over and said, "You fool this man is not pure he has a cut on his neck. We can't use him. Throw him back where you got him." And they released the king.

The king thought about this and he said, "My goodness the prime minister was right. If I didn't get this cut on my neck I would have been sacrificed." So he went back to the castle and said, "Release the prime minister. He related the story to the prime minister. The prime minister smiled and said, "Your majesty not only that but if I were with you this afternoon they would have caught me also and I would have been pure and they would've sacrificed me. So you see everything worked out."

Do you know why I tell you this story? To make time go faster. (students laugh) So you can go home and eat dinner. (more laughter)

Anyway this shows you that everything always works out. It does, really.

There is no problem within yourself that does not have a solution that goes with it. But you become so problem orientated that the solution is in abeyance it's asleep. It is only when you see a problem as not a problem, as no problem. When you realize that it comes from false imagination. It is not the truth. There cannot be a problem in your life. Ponder this. There cannot be a problem in your life. No problem, nada. There is just no problem. It makes no difference what you're going through apparently. It makes no difference how things seem. You only believe you've got a problem because things aren't going the way you want them to. Isn't that true? It's not a problem you have.

For instance when you think you want Clinton to win the Presidency and Bush is winning and you become upset and you have a problem, so you think. When you're caught with a flat tyre you become upset and you think you have a problem. But there are no problems. They're just experiences. And if you look in the experience in the right way you will transcend that experience and become free of it totally and completely. But if you react in the wrong way to the problem so-called you may win or find a solution but you will have to go through another problem of a similar state sooner or later. You will have to go through it again and again and again until you transcend it completely by not reacting to it. This is an important point to remember.

Your problem is at a certain level. A certain level of mind. If you believe in your problem, if you're fearful of your problem, if you react to your problem you have not broken out of that level. Even though you may appear to come up with some kind of solution and you are still at that level of consciousness where the problem exists. Therefore you will have to go through it again and again and again. The idea in other words is to rise higher than the problem. To rise higher than the problem. For the problem is below you, beneath you and you are free of it completely.

You can do this by saying to yourself, "All is well and everything is unfolding as it should," when you have a problem and realize in your own mind that you may not see the solution to this problem right now but there is a solution and it's all good. Or you may ask yourself, "Who has the problem? To whom has the problem come? It comes to me. I have this problem." Trace the I back to its source. Trace the I back to its source and become free of it that way. Or you may look at your problem as I mentioned in the beginning by not being in conflict with it. You're in conflict with your problem you try to find a solution. When you're looking for a solution then you've got a problem that needs fixing. So you're in conflict with the problem. Rather you look at the problem, watch it. Do not feel anything from it especially do not feel fear - that's conflict - Look at it intelligently, peacefully, observe it, watch it. When there is no conflict the problem merges into the Self and you feel happy and relieved and you will come up with a solution. You'll know what you have to do.

So remember the way to come up with a solution to your problem is not by looking for the solution but by not being in conflict with the problem. By thinking that it's bigger than you. It has power to hurt you. There is always a way out. There is always a way out. There is no such thing as a problem that is going to be the end of you. It makes no difference what is going on in our life. Whether you're dying of AIDS, whether you're dying of cancer, whether you've been thrown in the jungle and tigers are about to eat you, you must learn to have faith in the powers that be.

As long as you've not awakened to your true Self, trust the powers that be. That is like trusting God to take care of your life, to take care of your affairs. You as a human being can never come up with the right answer no matter how hard you try. You may appear to come up with an answer. As I said before you may appear to win or overcome the so-called problem with your human effort but it will not end there.

Why? Because again you have not risen. And you will simply come up with a human solution. And you will have to go through another problem of equal consequence and another problem, it never ends it goes on eternally. Therefore it's up to you. It's up to you to see yourself. What you are, where you're coming from, the things going on in your life and leave it all alone. Turn from it. Turn to the Self. Turn to the source. Never become upset. Never become angry. There is a reason for everything and the reason is good. No matter what you may think at the present time. Remember what you're doing you're looking through the keyhole. Where you see a partial situation you do not see the entire picture for you have not opened the door. And so it is when you see your situation confronted by a problem. It is only a partial situation. By not reacting to it, you transcend and transmute the whole thing and become totally free of everything. Now what happens when you do not have any problems at all? If you're living a beautiful life free of all problems, free of conflict. Still realize that you're living in a world of change. You're living in a world of constant change. How long will this go on before it changes? Everything must change.

So if you win the lotto, you win fifty-million dollars or the doctor pronounced you're cured of AIDS or if something wonderful happens to you to your liking this is not the end. You're still carrying karma that has to be worked out so-to-speak. So do not live in the level of the situation. You have to raise yourself higher all of the time. Whether good things are happening to you or bad things are happening to you. Always raise yourself higher. Keep inquiring, "Who am I? What am I doing here? Who feels the weight of the world on their shoulders? Who is concerned over the world situation? I am. What is the source of the I that feels all of these things? Where did I come from? Who am I?" Keep inquiring, keep looking, keep watching. Do not get involved. Love everyone, be compassionate. Become free. You are free, totally free right now.

There never was a time when you were in bondage to anyone or anything. There is no such thing as bondage. There is also no such thing as freedom. You are beyond these things. You are the source in which all forms rest and change and take their place. Like the bubbles in the ocean. The waves and the eddies in the ocean, the bubbles come, the bubbles go, the waves come, the waves break, the waves go...go back into the ocean, come out of the ocean and so it is with us. We come and we go. Humans, animals, trees, mountains, everything appears to be born remains for a certain period of time, returns back into the ocean of bliss, do not be concerned. You are the ocean not the bubble that you're involved with. Be still and know that I am God.

(silence)

(tape starts abruptly as Robert continues) ...stump the guru. Bring the stumpers.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: How do you know whether you're doing God's will or the ego's will?

A: By not knowing at all. It's not for you to know anything. If you become still and stop making a lot of noise and asking yourself all of these questions, "Is this my will or is this God's will," automatically what you call God will be in operation. In other words when you get yourself out of the way and stop thinking about these things then you're doing God's will. God's will is when you rest in the Self. When you stop fretting, when you stop fearing. Stop trying to change things, change people. When you stop reacting to things then you know you're doing God's will. But when you're emotional and become angry, upset, fearful then you're doing your will. That's how you know. So again the solution is let go of everything. To the extent that you can let go of everything to that extent are you doing God's will. For God's will is peace, harmony, joy, bliss and you are God's will. Next case.

Q: As long as one identifies with the body-mind is it beneficial to pray to the Self?

A: (Robert repeats questions then answers) As long as you identify with the body and mind is it beneficial to pray to the self? Every time you take an action you're praying, every time you do anything in this world you're praying, this is prayer. For you are using mental power to feel hurt, to feel depressed, to feel this way, to feel that way, that's really prayer that is what prayer is. You're thinking of formal prayer. You're thinking of getting down on your knees and praying to God for freedom, for happiness, for joy, from relief of a situation but the mistake you make is you get up and you start worrying again. When you finish praying you go through the whole thing again you begin to worry about your problem, you begin to see this is wrong, you begin to condemn, you begin to criticize, you begin to curse so you spoil the whole thing.

To pray to God really means to know all is well and everything is unfolding as it should. This is real prayer to know this. To trust it to have faith in it otherwise you're wasting your time. You can't pray to God for something good to happen to you or to get rid of a situation that you have and when you finish praying you say, "Gee I hope God has heard my prayer? I hope God answers my prayer?" You are negating the whole thing. You are one with God. Therefore act as if...as God would act. God is, you are also. Stop being afraid, stop feeling sorry for yourself. Know the truth. You are that which has always been which you will always be. You were never born, you can never die, you're eternal. You are consciousness, pure awareness, total freedom.

Therefore by knowing all is well, this is useful prayer. And turn from your so-called problem focussing your attention on the source by inquiring, "Who am I?" This is useful prayer. When you are praying to an anthropomorphic deity in fear and when after you're finished having further fears is not prayer at all. You're really telling the fears to come upon you. You're bringing these fears upon you by thinking about them, by worrying about them. Be happy and you pray aright. Next case.

Q: Dear Robert how do you use your physical body? How does your body serve you?

A: You have absolutely nothing to do with this. Your physical body will take care of itself without your help. It is not here to serve you. What is the you that has to be served by a body? Are there two of you? A you and a body who serves it? Of course not.

There is only one and that one is the Self, the absolute reality. You are that.

There is no physical body. There never was a physical body. But if you believe there is a physical body realize that the power that knows the way will take care of it. Get yourself out of the way. Move out the way and let the power take care of the body. Again you do this by inquiring, "To whom do these thoughts come to? Who feels these things? Who feels there is two people a body and a self? To whom does this come? It comes to me I feel this. Who am I?" And keep still and then you will know. There is only one. The one needs no service from anything. The one is bright and shining totally free, sat-chit-ananda, para-Brahman, you are that.

Q: Is there anything you cannot do? If yes, what?

A: What do you want to do? What is there to do? Whatever you have to do is already being done. There is nobody that needs to do anything. Again surrender to the Self. Let the Self take care of everything. Not my will but thine. Stop believing you're human and you have things going on in your head that you have to negate or take care of. Go beyond that! Go to the source which is bliss consciousness, your very Self. Leave everything else alone.

Listen to that bird chirping. Does a bird have a problem? Is it concerned when it's going to die? Or if another bird is going to eat it? Or it won't find any food? It cannot think this way it keeps on chirping all the time. When it's hungry it finds food. If it doesn't find food it dies. That's like the bubbles on the ocean again. The bubbles come they last for a time, they go away and merge back into the ocean. But the source of the bird is absolute intelligence which is your source also. Be spontaneous like the bird. Stop thinking ahead. Stop worrying about the past. Be free.

Q: (tape break as the end of the question is recorded) ...if so what do you perceive as its purpose or experience or lesson next time? Thank you.

A: There is no reincarnation. If you keep thinking about it and believing it you're creating it. Remember the mind is very very creative. It is the mind that creates all of these situations for you. So if you keep believing in your body as an entity, separate entity and keep believing in reincarnation and karma this will take place in your particular life because you are creating this. It'll appear to happen but in truth nothing is happening. As you believe it is done unto you. What you call your mind is a very powerful instrument. It can create all kinds of things for you. Whatever you think about all day long is your mind creating for you. If you're in a bad situation right now that you don't like think back in retrospect and see what you've been doing. And you will see you've been thinking about these things. You've been having fears. You fear that something bad is going to happen to you, fear that something is going to attack you. Fear of something or other.

All you have to do is start thinking of, "Who's afraid of the big bad wolf," and you'll be okay. (laughter)

Q: Clarify the I-thought and the I-am varieties.

A: The I-thought is the ego. The ego creates the I-thought and the I-thought creates the ego. I-am is the Self. I-am is pure awareness, Brahman. I-am is consciousness. The I-thought is when you are totally attached to the body function and to the world. You say, "I see this. I feel this. I am this. I feel sick. I feel healthy." This is the I-thought. When you say, "I-am," and you keep silent, this is consciousness. The I-thought doesn't really exist, it appears to exist. Where you appear to be a body it's because of the I-thought. When you chase the I-thought back to the heart centre on the right side of the chest, to the source, you will find total freedom then it will dissipate and you will become your true Self.

Q: Catching the ego thoughts is becoming a habit during the day but how to dive deep in the middle of life's activities? I can dive deep in meditation. Thanks, Lockie.

A: It makes no difference whether you're in the market place or in a cave. If you're in a cave you'll be thinking just like you're thinking if you were in a market place. People have left their families, their relatives, their wives, their husbands, their children to go live in the cave. Yet they went totally berserk in the cave. For the thoughts they had before came with them too. The idea is to get rid of your thoughts wherever you are. Never think it will be better if you got to a monastery or to an ashram, become a monk, become a nun, become a priest. Things will not be any better for you. You will bring into that position everything you are right now. Therefore wherever you are observe the mind, observe the thoughts. Do not react to them just observe them. Remove the barrier between yourself and the thoughts so the thoughts can merge in the Self and you will be free. As easy as that, do not make a big thing out of this. It is simplicity itself. That's everyone.

SF: Sir it occurred to me that if an individual has an out of the body experience what he's done is temporarily quit his identification with the body but he continues with his identification with the mind and it is more than likely that he will go back to the body with the mind attached.

R: You're right. All out of body experiences are mental. Because who is out of the body? (SF: The individual.) Of course. You are still an individual out of the body. Therefore it cannot really do you any good. (SF: Those experiences are still part of maya, is that correct?) Yes they are still part of the mind and of course the mind is maya. It's all illusory created by the vast mind. Seek freedom, not toys.

SH: Is the mind still illusory if a notion of a separate me is continually annihilated?

R: Then there is no mind whatsoever. When the separate you disappears... (SH: Thoughts could arise spontaneously?) Thoughts come from the Self when there is no mind. They appear as thoughts but are not really thoughts. They're just a grand power operating in you. The power takes over totally. The power that grows the grass, that makes the sky appear blue. It is that that functions as you. You no longer function as a mind. So you're totally spontaneous. (SH: That isn't mental any more.) No. (SH: You don't have to think about anything.) No. (SH: Why couldn't the mind function as this ???) Because the mind doesn't exist. (SH: Or there would be a non-ego mind. Ego of the dead.) Due to the fact that no mind really exists. No mind s ever existed. The mind is like the body it appears. Like the world. So there is no mind so why should it function that way? There is only the Self. (SH: Unnecessary baggage.) Of course. (SH: It isn't required?) Throw it away. Throw it in the garbage. (S: I got it.)

R: Do we have any announcements? Anyone have anything to say?

Then it's time to eat prashad.

We have cinnamon and honey biscuits. We have fig newtons. Made with whole wheat honey and we have more of the same thing. Eat drink and be merry.

(general prashad talk as tape ends) [TOC]

PASSION AND DISPASSION

27th September, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good afternoon. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again, on this hot Sunday afternoon.

Most of you have come here for one reason, to find freedom from your everyday experiences, to be liberated, to be self-realized, to attain nirvana, satori, to become enlightened. Yet, does the sun have to be enlightened? Your real nature is moksha, liberation. You have always been that, and nothing else. But some of you do not believe this, do not feel this, have had no experiences of this. For this reason it is my responsibility to see that you awaken. That's why I'm here. I'm responsible for you. If you realize this, if you understand what I'm talking about, you will let go of everything else. All of your attachments, all of your fears, all of your frustrations, all of the things that you have been holding onto for years, will be given up. And when you give up these things, divine grace flows by itself, and you will be where you are now, awakened, but you don't know it.

One of the things you have to work on yourself, is passion. You must give up all passion for this world and the things in it. You must develop dispassion. Now to some of you this sounds terrible, not to have passion for things of this world, never be passionately in love. What I'm referring to is having dispassion for the world of maya, and having total passion for the Self.

As an example, if you're intimate with a boy friend, or a girl friend, or a husband, or a wife, or a camel or a yak, whatever turns you on, you no longer think you're with that kind of a being, whatever it may be. Rather you start to understand that you're loving your Self. The camel becomes your Self. Your partner, your lover, becomes your Self. It is your Self that you're in love with. Not the self called Robert, or Mary, or Jane, or Joe, but the Self as consciousness. You have total passion for your Self. As you love the trees, the sky, the world, you no longer think it's a world of maya, a world of illusion, but an extension of your Self, the absolute reality, the effortless, choice-less pure awareness. It is your Self you're making love to. When you think it's another human being, this spoils it. When you think it's a person, place or thing, this spoils it. It is always the Self. There is only the Self and nothing else.

When you begin to understand this, you begin to move in the right direction. Otherwise, if you're looking at people as a person, place or thing, you're making a terrible mistake. That brings sorrow. It brings unhappiness, brings jealousy, fear, frustration. The way you know you're with the Self, is this freedom, no restrictions, no laws, no rules, no regulations. You're always with the Self. You've always been the Self.

So there are two ways of seeing this world. One is maya, the grand illusion. You want nothing to do with this. This is what creates problems. This appears to create animosity, sorrow. But then there is the real world, the world of the Self, the world of bliss, the world of total joy, unalloyed peace and happiness. This is what you really are. This is your real nature, your swarrupa. You have always been this and you will always be this.

Forget about the past. Do not worry about the future. Have total faith, total joy in yourself. Only when you can understand yourself, as all-pervading consciousness, can you possibly understand that all the universe is an emanation of your mind. Everything that you see comes out of you. You are the creator, you are the God, you are the avatar, the atman. All the God that you've heard of, the Buddha, Krishna, Jehovah, Allah, they're all you. You are that. You are nothing else but that. You've always been that. Tat-tvam-asi. This is you. Why do you look at yourself as a simple mortal being with problems, always thinking about the future, thinking about your pride and your ego? Drop that. Give it up.

So the two things to understand is that self-realization is not your responsibility, it's mine, for you sought me out. I'm here for you, not for me. But you have to give up the rest. It's up to you to diligently work on yourself to remove all these false concepts that you've had for years, for centuries, for many lives. It means you have to be totally honest with yourself, totally honest. Completely honest with yourself, to see the way you've been carrying on, to see how your thoughts have been ruling you. Your mind has been telling you, "This is like this and this is like that. This is good, this is bad. This is right, this is wrong," being judgmental all the time. This is what has to be given up, totally, completely.

Do not concern yourself about this world. For mortal man can never understand this world at all. This world appears very confusing, very chaotic. There seems to be so many wonderful things in this world, and yet, there seems to be so much destruction, man's inhumanity to man, dastardly things going on everywhere, intermingled with the beauty and joy of this world. It becomes very confusing to the mortal man. Then you see yourself getting older and older. All of your material plans have gone by the wayside. And even if you have accomplished great things, you have to leave them when it's time to go. You start to think to yourself, what is life all about? Who am I? What am I really? What is the source of everything? And no one has ever explained these things to you. So you believe life is a chance, a chance you've been born, you've gone through prevailing conditions, you get old and you die. You have no idea what's going on. Therefore I say to you, leave the world alone. Do not believe you have to bring peace to this world.

There is a greater power that knows the way, that takes care of this world, this universe. And it needs no help from you. The only way you can help this world, is by awakening, becoming self-realized. How do you help this world by becoming self-realized? When you become self-realized, you are no longer a body. You are all-pervading consciousness, the absolute reality. You are boundless space. You become the trees, the mountains, the rivers, the animals, the insects, the birds. You have become everything. You are the Self. The imperishable immutable Self.

But when you can't see this, you act as an independent agent, thinking, you're going to make this a better world in which to live, sticking up for your rights, trying to change people's opinions, protesting about this and about that. I admit all these things are necessary in this world, but this is what maya is about. Maya is a wonderful illusion. It makes you believe you've got to do something to change things in this world. But I can assure you, nothing will ever change. It will appear to change for a while.

Things will appear slightly better at times, and they'll be slightly worse at times. There will be cataclysms, destructions. All sorts of things happen to this world. This is the nature of this world. It has absolutely nothing to do with you. Yet at the same time you are the world. I always contradict myself. This is the teaching. It's a total contradiction. But the ultimate reality is, let go of everything. Know your Self as omnipresence, and you will be total happiness and total freedom.

As you try to understand these things, as you begin to ponder what I'm talking about, you look for a way to remove everything from the mind, to empty the mind. You begin to inquire, "To whom do all these thoughts come? To whom does the feeling of humanity come? To whom does this universe come? To whom does the ego come?" And you smile to yourself, you keep still. You will soon realize that everything comes to you. It comes to you. I think these things. I believe this and I believe that. I feel hurt.

I feel this way. I feel that way. A new revelation comes to you. I. You begin to see that the I-thought is the culprit. From the moment you get out of bed in the morning, you begin with the I, and it never ends till you fall asleep. Therefore the only peace you ever get is when you're in deep sleep. When you're in deep sleep, the I returns to the heart, to the source. There is nothing going on, nothing happening. At that time you are unconsciously self-realized.

This is why, when you get up in the morning, you say to yourself, "I slept good." You're talking about I. I slept good. What you really mean to say is the I wasn't interfering with your life. But as soon as you begin to think, you say, "I am late for work. I have to catch the bus. I have a headache. I have to eat breakfast." And you go on, and on, and on with this I. It never stops. All day long it's I, I, I, I. Think about this. Am I not telling you the truth? You're always thinking about "I this" and "I that" till the night time comes again, you go to sleep. Again the I goes back into the source, into the heart, and you're at peace once more. Until you wake up and it starts all over again.

After doing this for a million years, you get to the stage when you'll ask yourself, "Who am I? What is this I? How did it arise? From whence does it come?" And this is the beginning of wisdom, when you inquire for the source of the I. You ultimately begin to trace the I to the source. When you do this finally, when the I is in the source, it is just like when you're in deep sleep, except that you're conscious.

Think about this for a moment. In deep sleep you have no I for it has returned to the source. You're totally happy, but you're unconscious of it. When you attain what we call self-realization, it means that the I has returned to the source while you're awake. There's nobody left to think. There's no one left to worry, or to fret, or to be unhappy.

You have merged with the infinite, with the all-pervading Brahman. If you understand this, and you practice this, you will become the happiest person in the world, for on the way to finding the I-source, you begin to feel happier and happier every day. The old thoughts melt away. The old you dissolves. You become free.

Of course you've got a choice. And this is your choice. Whom shall I follow this day, God or mammon? Which simply means, following mammon is following the world, the world of illusion, which keeps tricking you, making you believe you should do this, and do that, and to go here and to go there. When you follow God, you're following yourself. You're following the dharma, swarrupa. You no longer feel sorry for yourself. You no longer feel guilty about the sins of commission/omission of the past. Your mind becomes clear, peaceful. Your mind becomes like a mirror. And since the mirror is unable to see itself, it sees its reflection in the world, as peace, love, harmony, joy.

As you continue to work on yourself this way, the day comes when all this is gone, and you are gone. You become nothing, a good for nothing. You go beyond nothingness, which is ineffable, something that can't be explained, for there are no words or thoughts to understand this. Yet, you've got it all within you. Everything you need is within you. You are the one.

All the tools that you need are within yourself. But you have to make the move to do something. As I said, leave the realization to me. Work on yourself. Get rid of all the stuff that's kept you bound for so many years. You know what it is, the fears, preconceived ideas, all these things that have kept you in bondage all these years. Let go of them. Give them up. Surrender everything, which means you really have a job on your hands.

Yet I tell you all the time, everything is preordained. Everything is karmic. This is true for the average person, who does nothing to find realization for themselves. Then your entire life appears to be karmic. Yet when you begin to work on yourself, when you begin to see the truth, when you begin to inquire all day long, "Who am I?" wherever you are, whatever you do, and you go deeper and deeper within, all of karma is transcended. Everything is transcended. You become a totally free being.

The question arises, if everyone becomes free in this world, how will the world function? People always ask me this. I have told you, do not concern yourself with this world. There is one that takes care of this world. When you merge with the one, you will understand this. So you do not have to go running around, trying to improve world conditions any longer. Everything is as it should be. This is something you have to comprehend totally. Everything is in its right place. Everyone is where they belong, karmically speaking. There are no mistakes. None have been made, none are being made, none will ever be made. There is no past, there's no future. There's only this moment in which you live. In this moment ask yourself, "Who am I?" and see where you go. Remind yourself everyday, that you are not the doer, you are not the body nor the mind. Keep reminding yourself daily that you, are Parabrahman, beyond Brahman. You are choice-less, effortless pure awareness. You are nirvana, the ultimate reality, the ultimate oneness.

Stand up tall. Do not be afraid any longer. There's nothing that can hurt you. There's nothing in this world that can actually do anything to you. You are free. You are the substratum of all existence. Everything is an image on consciousness. The whole universe, all the planets, all the galaxies, are all images, on consciousness, and you are consciousness. Know yourself and be free.

It is now the time again to play stump the guru. Did we pass the basket around to get all these ridiculous questions?

SY: Robert, when you see someone that you love very much going down a very destructive path, how can you become detached?

R: You realize that that person does not belong to you. Belongs to God. Therefore if you have the right wisdom, you'll do something to try to help that person. But then again, karmically, that person has been given to you for you to go through this experience. So the correct answer for this, of course, is to know yourself. If you know yourself it will take care of the person, for your Self is that person.

The greater you know yourself, the greater help the person will receive, for there's only one, and you are that. But when you separate yourself by saying, "This person is doing this and I'm trying to stop this person," there is duality, and things get progressively worse. But if you know who you are, then anything will happen to this person that's supposed to happen. I know that's hard. Sometimes you want to grab the person and shake them, and you want to interfere and do something for them. Yet if we could always remember that everything is in its right place, and see who we are, that would take care of everything. We've never done things like this before. We've always taken action. And sometimes the action seems to work, for we have halted a certain situation that appears to be terrible, going in terrible directions, and we've put a stop to it. This is only temporary. Whatever the person has to go through, they will go through, one way or the other.

The only relief is to awaken. Consequently when you awaken, you will see things differently. And this is how you help the person. Go ahead Mary. (To read questions)

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Robert, what causes a person to display self-righteous anger to defend another person or a cause? Can you explain?

A: It's all ego. What else? Only the ego is self-righteous. Only the ego goes for causes. But if you understand what I was talking about today, if you understand slightly how this universe works, you will see that going for causes is not the solution. It appears to be a solution, but it's a temporary solution. Go back in retrospect and see how many justifiable causes there have been in this world since the beginning of time. There have always been causes, righteous causes, causes for peace and justice. Has the world become any better? Take a look at this world. And yet, the people who are fighting for these causes are necessary. This is their dharma, to do what they're doing, I suppose. But for the people who have come to meetings like this, you have been in this type of teaching for many incarnations. This is why you are able to comprehend something of what I'm talking to you about. The average person in the street has no interest in anything like this. The average activist has nothing to do with things like this. They would have no interest. But you are here. Therefore there is something in your heart that wants to unfold, and become self-realized, and become free.

Q: If I think it enables me to sit in silence before going to work in the morning, should I actively seek to be transferred closer to home, or should I just work on "Who am I?" and trust that right action will take place and my job will be where it's supposed to be, and I should just meekly go where I'm told.

A: We don't want to be meek, and we don't want to be self righteous. We want to be the self, period. Therefore if you can slow down your mind by allowing it to rest in the Self to an extent, by removing thoughts, feelings, attitudes and going to a higher plateau, by inquiring, "Who am I? To whom do these things come?" then you'll be safe. But, if you see you cannot do this yet, if you're afraid you'll get fired from your job, you won't have any money, or go to the poorhouse, you'll become a homeless person, then by all means you have to do what you have to do. So you have two choices. Either discover who you are, what your true nature is, by understanding that there is a power that takes care of you, the power that knows the way, that will always love you and put you in the right place, or you go where you have to go, and do what you have to do. The choice is always yours. There is not one answer or one choice to this question. It depends on the person, where they are, where you're at. If I took on a person from the street and told her, "Everything will go well with you, don't worry. You don't have to beg, you don't have to steal," that person may starve to death, for that person's karma is to steal and to beg, and we have no right to tell a person how to live. But, if that person was able to see the light, so-to-speak, where the truth is, that they are not the doer, they are not the body, they are not the mind, then they will be lifted up from where they are into a higher state of consciousness, and will be taken care of. So you know where you are by the type of thoughts that come into your head, by the type of feelings, emotions that come to you, by how you feel everyday. Take the right action.

SP: (Question not clear) Robert, earlier you said that when you go to sleep and when you were dreamless... but if you see a dream, and a lot of spiritual conditions and religions say that you learn by your dreams, that they guide you. What about this?

R: There are three states of consciousness, so-to-speak, the waking, the sleeping and the dreaming. The deep sleep is when you are self-realized, there are no thoughts, but you are unconscious of this fact. The dream state is like this. When you are dreaming you are simply in another state of consciousness, that appears very real to you, and is real as long as you are dreaming. And when you awaken from the dream you are in this state of consciousness, which is also a dream. Therefore what you want to do is to remove all of the dreaming completely and totally, and become absolutely free. So when you wake up in the morning and you remember your dream, ask yourself, "Who dreamt?" And you'll say, "I dreamt." Then you'll realize the dream is part of the I again. So inquire, "Then who am I?" or, "Where did this I come from?" And follow the I-thread to the source, by repeating again and again to yourself, "Who am I? Who am I?" which really means what is the source of the I that has these dreams? And one day the I will go back into the heart, into the heart center which is consciousness itself, and you'll be free of all dreams.

But your dreams should not be taken too seriously. It is like this life. You're dreaming right now that you are a mortal being. You go through many experiences. You have fears. You have happiness. You have all sorts of emotions. If I tell you you're dreaming this, you won't believe me. You'll tell me, "Robert, how can I be dreaming? I'm living it." I tell you, "You're dreaming." If you listen to me you will do what you have to do to get out of the dream by inquiring, "Who am I? Where did I come from?" So when you're having a dream at night, it is the same thing. It's merely another dream, but you awaken faster, and then you're in this dream. So stop dreaming completely and awaken and be free.

SX: When you come in contact with homelessness that you mentioned before, perhaps natural disasters or difficulties that people are going through in different parts of the world or in front of you, sometimes because of their own ego centeredness and sometimes because of the natural situation, what arouses in you, in your state? Does compassion arise in you? Or, is it arbitrary to you, meaningless to you, other people suffering? How do you relate to that, to suffering?

R: Both are correct. I have a great compassion even though it's meaningless. So I get in there and help. I will give $10 to a homeless person. I'll help people in the city if I'm there. I will be part of it. But I realize it's meaningless. I am not the doer. But since I appear as a body, I will do what has to be done. But there are no thoughts behind it. I do not consider I'm doing something good, I'm doing something bad, I'm helping someone, I'm not helping someone. In reality, no one is doing anything.

Do we have any announcements?

SM: No Robert.

R: Does anyone have any thing else to say or forever hold your peace?

SE: (Student invites everyone to another satsang location with more chanting)

SF: Actually what you were describing is the action of the Indian concept of nish-karma-karma, is that right? (R: Yes. Do it!) I'll try, I've experienced it.

R: It is now time for prashad. We have a lovely tray. Hocus pocus locus. (laughter)
(general prashad talk then Robert wraps up satsang)

R: Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you.

Om shanti peace.

Thank you for coming. Go forth and multiply or do anything you like.

SOMETHING AND NOTHING

1st October, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, Om, peace. Greetings and salutations. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good being with you again this beautiful Thursday evening.

Many of you come here because you think I know something, and you want a piece of the something that I know. You believe the something will make you become self-realized, perhaps. But in truth I know nothing. Then you come to me because you want a piece of the nothing. And you think if you know nothing you'll become self-realized. But in truth you have to know something to know nothing. It is the something that we'll talk about tonight.

What do you have to be to become nothing? What do you have to know to be nothing? To be nothing is a misnomer, for you make the nothing into something. If you're trying to be nothing, then you're trying to be something, aren't you? Because the nothing is something, that you're trying to become. Consequently, you should never strive to be nothing and you should never strive to be something, for they're both erroneous concepts. None of them really exist.

The question therefore is, "If something doesn't exist, and nothing doesn't exist, well what is?" And the answer is silence. Absolute silence. For the human mind and the human thinking, the human thoughts, can never comprehend what silence is. You try to put it into words, and you spoil it. There are no words that can interpret the silence, for when you go into the true silence, you go beyond nothing and something. Yet everyone has experienced this true silence who has gone beyond nothing and something, and appeared to have to first become something and nothing, in order to be silent.

There's something you have to know:

Number 1: Nothing is as it appears. You have to feel this deep in your heart. Nothing in this whole universe is as it appears. So do not be fooled by appearances. You do not allow the appearance to get to you, to make you feel this way or that way, no matter what the appearance may be. You are to look at the appearance as you would look at a mirage. And this is scientific, for the appearance will change sooner or later anyway. Therefore when you feel something from an experience, it is subject to change. You'll not be the same again. This is why the average person keeps going up and down like a yo-yo. They respond to a condition, then the condition changes and they respond in a different way to the same condition, and this changes and you respond again to the condition. They keep responding again and again to what they see as a condition.

Number 2: Do not say that the world is maya, for if you say the world is maya, that's a concept you have. And this is a non-duality concept, but nevertheless it's a concept, for you're holding on to the fact that the world is maya. In reality maya does not exist. There is no maya. Therefore everything that appears to come from maya, must also not exist. Do you follow this?

Whatever you think does not exist, is a concept. It becomes a thing, something to hold on to. You go around saying, "Everything is maya, everything is maya, the universe does not exist." But then maya exists to you and this is the big mistake you're making, for you think maya exists. What is maya? An illusion. To whom comes the illusion? To the one who believes maya as a concept, maya as a thing, a belief. In other words, everything that you believe up to this point is erroneous, and it should be dropped.

The same is true with the words of absolute reality, pure awareness, Brahman, sat-chit-ananda. These things become a safe haven for you, and they keep you back from your full realization, for you are holding on to these beliefs that there is absolute reality, there is sat-chit-ananda, there is nirvana. Where would these things come from except from your own mind? It is you who gave these things names. We have given names to something we do not understand. We call it reality. What is reality? Something that never changes. And the something that never changes, becomes a concept and you hold on to that.

Is it any wonder such few people are self-realized? Is it any wonder that certain people only are liberated, very few people liberated? For we have simply exchanged terms. We say the world does not exist but maya exists. We say everything comes from consciousness, everything comes from the absolute reality. We merely change words, change terms.

There is no absolute reality. There is no sat-chit-ananda. There is no Brahman. It is we who made these terms up, and we feel safe and secure by holding on to them. At one time we used to say, "God is with me." Now we say, "Consciousness is with me," or, "I am the absolute reality." We've just changed the names. That's all we've done.

Number 3 is: You are not even the silence, for as long as you can express the word silence, that's not it. You have to get to the place where you have absolutely nothing to hold on to, nothing to lean against. Even when Buddha said to take refuge in the Buddha, take refuge in the sangha, take refuge in the eight fold path, this again is a mistake. I'm not saying the Buddha made a mistake. What I'm saying is the reason he said this, is because he was speaking to ignorant people who had to hold on to something. But the Buddha realized there's nothing to hold on to. There never was anything to hold on to. Even when you're told you're total freedom, the word freedom becomes a concept for you. As long as you can lean in to it, as long as you can hold on to it, and you feel good in it, it's a mistake.

Again, this is the reason so few people are self-realized. You're holding on to something. You're attached to something. Whether it's a teaching, or a person, or a satsang, or a sangha, you can never become free while you're attached to something.

So the question is, what shall I do? You do exactly what you're doing now, but you do not think about it. This is the important point. Do not try to find some new profound teaching, that will give you new words, or new methods, or new rules and regulations. You merely do what you're doing now and you do not think about it, you do not attempt to analyze it, you do not think this teaching is higher than any other teaching. You leave yourself alone. When you learn to leave yourself alone, in body and in mind, you have arrived. Do not ask, "Where have I arrived? To what have I arrived?"

This spoils the whole thing. This is what I'm trying to explain to you. Do not look at something that I say, and attempt to analyze it, tear it apart, try to make something out of it, or take refuge in it. Just be. Be neither this nor that.

If you were only able to do what I tell you, you would immediately feel a tremendous happiness, a tremendous bliss inside of you. You would feel a tremendous joy welling up within yourself. This happiness, this bliss and this joy is your very nature. It has nothing to do with words, places or things. It is what you are when you let go of everything that you've been holding on to.

Some of us have formed so many habits of holding on to something, that we do not know we're holding on to it. You may be holding on to a belief that has become totally integrated in your thinking, in your thoughts, in your body, in your mind, and you don't even know you're holding on to it. You may be holding on to some type of concepts that you've had for many years, you're not aware of, because it is integrated within you.

So how can you deal with this? How do you deal with this? You just remain as you are. You remain exactly as you are. This is why when you meet a liberated person they appear to be just like you. For there's nothing to get rid of. There's really nothing to drop. Remember, when you try to get rid of something, when you try to drop something, you believe in yourself there's something that you've got to drop. Do you see what I'm saying? You believe there's something there, that has to be gotten rid of, and this keeps you back. There never was anything that you have to get rid of. There never was anything that has been interfering with your freedom.

I suppose you can only feel this, what I'm saying to you, when you're living in the moment, when you learn to be spontaneous, in the moment. Always remember this truth. When you try to change yourself, when you try practicing sadhanas, or you try to get rid of a feeling or an emotion, you are really saying to yourself, "I've got this something that's interfering in my spiritual life and I have to get rid of it." Where did this something come from, that you have to get rid of it? The truth is you never had it in the first place. There never was anything that overwhelmed you, that caused you pain, that made you think that you're not enlightened, or you're not good enough. These things never existed for you to begin with. Consequently why would you have to get rid of something that doesn't exist? Why would you spend years upon years of working on yourself, trying to get rid of something that doesn't exist, trying to improve yourself when there's nothing to improve. There's only that, and that doesn't exist.

So where are we? Nowhere, we're absolutely nowhere. And that's exactly where we should be, nowhere, knowing nothing. This is total emptiness. Remember all of your beliefs, all of your concepts, all of your ideas, all of your dogmas, all of your religious training, comes from false imagination. You have imagined that karma has put you here, in a relative plane on this earth, and then you have to get rid of your karma, and you spend many years working on yourself to get rid of the karma that you never had to begin with.

Think back in retrospect in your life. See all the things that you've been playing with all these years, the things you've been trying to remove from yourself, trying to attain something, trying to get rid of a bad habit. Both are erroneous.

There's no realization, there's no liberation, there's no bondage. There's no false imagination. So you have nothing. And then I tell you, there's no nothing. So where are you? Where are you? Exactly where you are supposed to be. Here. Doing nothing. Isn't that wonderful? To know that you're in your right place. There never was a time when you were in the wrong place. You are here means that you're nowhere. You're neither here nor there. You're neither up nor down. You're neither forward nor backward.

What I have done is I've pulled away all of your crutches, and everything you've been holding onto or leaning against. Now you're absolutely free. But again there's nobody to become free. So you go back to the same question. What are you? Catch yourself when you want to answer that question. You cannot say you're something. You cannot say you're nothing.

Don't you see what this is leading to? Just by knowing this, it should make you feel peaceful, more peaceful than you've ever felt in years. You should begin to feel happy for no reason at all, total happiness. When you think about this, and you realize that you're not something and you're not nothing, there's nothing else to say after that, nothing else to do after that, nothing to become, nothing to achieve. You're totally free, and there is nothing to think about.

The point is, when you have nothing to hold onto, when you realize you're not something, you're not nothing, there has to be complete silence. You have nothing else to say to yourself. The thoughts stop. You should find that happening right now. The thoughts just stop by themselves, for there is no one left to think anything. The thinker has been totally destroyed. If there's no thinker, how can there be thoughts?

Isn't it beautiful? Do you feel what I'm talking about? You have gone beyond everything. You've gone beyond everything that exists and does not exist. You've gone beyond everything that appears and does not appear. You've gone beyond everything that thinks and does not think. You are now totally, absolutely, whole heartedly free.

(silence)

Shanti, shanti, shanti, peace.

Feel free to ask any questions.

SV: It normally was a question Robert but I'll say it frankly to you. There was a degree of freeness at the point when you said, "There was no false imagination." That's all.

(silence)

R: Isn't it wonderful to know that you have peace and harmony inside of you. That you have bliss inside of you and that the world has absolutely nothing to do with it. The world can become anything it wants, it can change, it cannot change. It can rain, it can snow. It can have an earthquake. This can never affect you. It can never affect the peace that is within you the happiness that you have. You're all feeling this, this is good. You are the one. It is wonderful when you begin to feel that you do not have to go anywhere to find happiness. You do not have to meet certain people or be in a certain place. Happiness, love, peace, bliss is exactly where you are. Right now. You are that. And isn't it wonderful to realize that you have nothing to change in yourself. For there never was anything wrong to begin with. (pause) If you would like to express how you feel, feel free to do so or feel free not to do so. This is why all Sages have tried to explain that reality is the easiest thing in the world to attain. And there is absolutely nothing you have to do to attain it. Just be yourself.

SL: Well Robert that sounds really simple but it really isn't that simple for people like us who are just being ourselves. (R: Who are people like us?) Someone like me. I can say that I'm something that I'm not nothing but I don't really have that experience. And how do I get that experience without chanting for hours and hours, you know it seems that it doesn't come that easy.

R: We're talking about the habits that you've had for many years that you had to chant and chant for hours. This is not so. Who says you have to do this? (SL: Well can't we just chant you know, I mean I was taught that we do chanting ???) It's fun chanting but it has nothing to do with realization. (SL: But we are in form how can you make the transition to no form without doing something?) If you do something you're just changing one situation to another situation. By doing nothing you're changing something to another situation also. But if you're just being and realizing it's not this or that, not up or down, just being yourself then you remain in the silence with nothing to say, with nothing to do, you just are. And you are yourself, the Self you've always been. (SL: You just remind yourself by talking?) No you don't remind yourself at all. Because when you remind yourself there is a reminder and there is a self. What you do is you just take a look at the situation. You just observe the situation. You pull everything back inside to the source where it was. You just remind yourself and remember the silence without words or thoughts. (SL: It's very hard to stay in silence.) This is because you're used to thinking that something exists. (SL: And to break that habit?) And to break that habit you just keep still.

(break in tape)

R: ...You are neither the Self nor the non self. When you can see it clearly then you just become what you've always been. When I speak to you this way perhaps a word that I say to you can cause a tremendous change in you. Perhaps following what I'm telling you to do will cause a tremendous change in you by listening. Something will hit a nerve inside and everything will melt and disappear. But do not make it hard for yourself by believing thoughts, that you have to do certain things or to say certain prayers or to do certain chants, drop all that kind of thinking. And just be! Just be yourself. You're neither this nor that. If you're nothing that you can talk about or imagine then your mind becomes still. And when your mind becomes still you're already home.

So learn to observe the part of you that tells you that there is something you've got to do, that it's hard. Observe that in you. And when you do not respond to it, it will go away and you'll be free. You're already free.

ST: Robert the place of quiet mind, witness, still there is steps huh? (R: There is still what?) There is still a step? If you're coming to the place if you're in a room a quiet room, there is still a waiting, still a sense of peace in the mind being quiet, there is still me?

R: As long as you believe there's still me then there is still me. Why do want to believe there is still me? Believe nothing! Just be yourself. Do not think of steps you have to take or me an I or a you. Forget about all these things. Be without motive. Be without a crutch to hold onto. Be without a teaching. Be totally empty, totally spaceless. Beyond all concepts, beyond all space, beyond all thought, beyond all doing. The source. Whatever the source is you are that. The breeze blows, it's neither good nor bad. To some people it's good, to some people it's bad. But the breeze in itself is neither good nor bad. Just a breeze. This is what we have to become. We just are. We're neither this nor that.

(silence)

R: Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani)

R: Thank you Mary. Do we have any announcements?

SM: No. There are transcripts on the table for the new people and they are free however if you donate it will be all right. And we will be having a box filled with the transcripts that are missing, they will be coming shortly. Tony wants to make an announcement. (R: Sure.)

ST: I wasn't able to get these copied but there is a mahashakti darshna fire ceremony for world peace again tonight and it goes on tomorrow from 10 to 1 p.m., 6 - 10 p.m. and Saturday 10 to 1 p.m. A session consists of a precise performance of prayers invitation, offerings to fire and chanting, and $35 per session. It takes place in the Hindu temple on Las Virgenes Road this weekend. There are a lot of Brahman priests there and according to what they say here, there are great benefits for you there.

R: Thank you Tom. Remember to love yourself, to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself. For God dwells in you as you. God bless you peace Om shanti.

We now have prashad. Feel free to enjoy. We have some wonderful cookies. Par-take of them. Enjoy them. We have some good chocolate, dipper chocolate...

WHAT IF I DON'T AWAKEN BEFORE MY DEATH?

4th October, 1992

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...shanti, shanti, om, peace.

Good afternoon. I welcome you with al my heart. It's good to be with you again. I love you all. All is well.

Happy Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur to our Jewish friends. Most of them are not here. They're probably in the synagogue worshipping. I heard it's expensive to go to the synagogue on Yom Kippur these days. You have to pay, buy a seat for a hundred and twenty-five dollars.

SB: Even God couldn't afford and he's here.

R: For a hundred and twenty-five dollars you should be able to take the seat home. (laughter) For a hundred and twenty-five dollars you can go see a Madonna concert. (laughter) But all is well. It's time for the annual Yom Kippur joke... (laughter) ...about the Rabbi who was preparing the synagogue for the high Holy days and he takes out the Torah, the ancient scriptures, and gets in front of it and starts chanting. He starts beating his chest with his hands saying, "I am nothing, I am nothing, I am nothing." The cantor who sings these chants happens to see the Rabbi doing this and he wonders what he's doing but he says it must be something good. So he looks over at the Torah and starts doing the same thing. He starts beating his chest with his hand saying, "I am nothing, I am nothing, I am nothing."

The janitor happened to be there watching the whole procedure and he wanted to get into the act too. So he went over and started beating his chest saying, "I am nothing, I am nothing, I am nothing." The Rabbi looked at the Cantor and says, "Look who thinks he's nothing." (laughter) You won't hear that again until next Yom Kippur.

I receive interesting phone calls from people all over the world. I got one this morning from Minneapolis, that's all over the world. A lady asked me an interesting question. She asked me, "Robert what happens to a person who is in the presence of a Jnani or a Sage for many many years they do not become enlightened and then they die. What happens to them?" That is a fair question. So we will talk about this because I think many of you wonder the same thing. Where you keep telling me, "I'm not enlightened yet, what will happen?"

Of course in truth you're already enlightened nothing has to happen. Nothing ever happens. It's up to you to see this. To remove the obstacles that make you think you're not enlightened. But in any event one of three things will happen to such a person.

They will either become liberated when they drop the body and never have to return again in a body.

Second choice they will be born to spiritual parents who are really totally evolved in this path and they will be born as a baby into those circumstances.

Third choice they will be born on another planet that's much more advanced than this planet. Where there is total peace and bliss and happiness. And you will find liberation on that particular planet sooner or later.

So you have three choices. We'll talk about them a little bit.

The first one. For a devotee who has been sincere in this particular path, who has really put this path first, put the teaching first for such a one they're already liberated while in the body but they don't know it. So when they drop the body they become totally free. Becoming all pervasive, absolute reality, becoming the entire universe. The essence of the entire universe. Yet you do not lose your knowledge of who you are. This is very paradoxical when you think about it. Every enlightened being is also the whole universe, every plant, every bug, every animal, every mineral, every human being, every planet, every universe, everything. An awakened one is part of the whole system. He is in all things.

Of course the question arises in the ajnani the one without spiritual knowledge will ask, "How can this be? How can all the enlightened beings who have been here since the beginning of time all be in the same place at the same time?" Yet this is exactly what happens. This is why I tell you so often that everything is sacred. The ground upon which you walk is holy ground. Everything is sacred. You should have reverence for all things. All things are God, so-to-speak, the leaf, the cockroach, bedbug, the mass murderer everything is God but most people do not understand this. They judge by appearances and they want solutions immediately with the things that they see. But as you become evolved you begin to intellectually understand this thoroughly. The whole universe is Brahman. The whole universe is effortless, choice-less, pure awareness, sat-chit-ananda. So a realized being is all pervasive and is all of these things.

Number two. If you need more training, more knowledge, more understanding and you were very sincere in this body, in this life, you will go into a family and be reborn. A family that is very spiritually oriented, who are on the brink of realization. You'll become their child. All the preliminary work has been done for you, and in that particular incarnation you'll be self-realized.

Number three. There are many planets in this universe. Billions and drill-ions of suns. Each one has a certain amount of planets revolving around its orbit. Many of these planets contain life. Life forms such as us. So a being who in this body has again been sincere who will be into the self, putting God and reality first in their life, letting go of all the nonsense and foolishness and things that bother most people. Fears, anxieties, needs, desires, wants, giving up all of these things, attachments. Depending on your karma where you go. This particular being will go to an advanced planet, which is far more advanced than this earth. Where there are no wars. No more man's inhumanity to man. And these beings will become free on that particular planet at a specified time. Interesting isn't it?

When I was twelve years old I used to ask my mother, "What am I doing here? I don't belong here. Why am I here?" And my mother used to say, "You're here to be like everybody else, to get a job, to have a profession. To go into this world and make something out of yourself." And she used to retaliate, "Do you know what you want to be when you grow up?" I used to say, "Nothing." (laughter) I don't think that I knew what I was talking about at that time. But anyway after a while she thought that we should go see uncle Louie. (laughter) Uncle Louie was a physician. And she told him what I was saying, what I was doing. So he said, "I'll take care of this." He gave me a physical examination, everything was fine. And again he asked me, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" I told him, "I don't care what I am when I grow up I just want to know what I'm doing here? What am I doing here?" And he asked, "You mean on this earth?" So I said, "No in this body? What am I doing in this body? I feel like I'm in prison. I feel as if I'm confined to something." So he looked at me and said something to my mother about a psychiatrist. (laughter)

And the next day my mother took me to see a lady psychiatrist. She was a German lady from Austria. Her name was Sonya Leichenstein or Leichenstine. My mum told her the story. What I've been doing and she took me into her office. There was a nice couch there I was lying down on. I enjoyed it. She asked me, "So you don't think you are the body? You think you're someone else?" And she giggled, "You know Freud used to think the same thing." So I said, "Who was Freud?" She said, "Never mind." (laughter) Again she asked me, "What do you want to be when you grow up," and I asked her, "why is everybody asking me this question? There is really nothing I care to be when I grow up at all. I just feel confined to my body. I feel as if I'm in prison. I don't belong here." So she said, "Don't worry about that I will get the little man out of here out of your body. There is a little man in your body that has to come out and we will work on this."

So I went to see her every Friday. I loved it due to the fact that my mother gave me some extra money and I would not have to go to school that day or half a day at school. And I was able to ride on the bus. I really enjoyed those times. I went to her for about six months. She finally called my mother and recommended another psychiatrist, a man. These people kept on asking me, "What do I want to be when I grow up?" So I went to see this man. He was a different psychiatrist. I really enjoyed going to him also. Finally I got it. And one day he asked me, "Robert do you know what you want to be when you grow up?" I said, "Yes I want to be a neurotic." (students laugh) And that was the end of my visits with psychiatrists.

S: You were cured.

Robert continues: Now what does all of this have to do with our talk today? Absolutely nothing. (laughter) What is the moral of this story? It has no moral whatsoever. Just something I thought I'd throw in.

The absolute truth is noone dies, noone is born, noone prevails. If you can only accept that for yourself, understand its meaning you will be totally free right now completely free, completely liberated. What I was telling you before about going to different planets and the rest of it is utter nonsense. There is really nowhere to go. Yet it does appear this way to people who don't understand these things. The other planets, other universes are just like this earth. This earth does not really exist. It is not here at all. Neither is your body. But as long as you believe you are the body or you are the world and the world is real for you all the things that we were speaking about will happen. But to whom will they happen? To the one who does not understand.

It is like when you go to see a movie. To whom does the movie happen? To you! You're watching the movie. You may agree with some of the characters in the movie, you may disagree with some of the characters in the movie, you may get excited over some scenes in the movie but you are the one doing all of these things. The movie itself is impersonal. It's just a movie. If you want to get excited about it and cry and laugh that's your choice that is what you want to do. Life is the same way.

We have to understand that life is a movie. Everything that you behold with your senses are images on the screen of life. Images superimposed on the screen of life. None of it is real. Just as the movie is not real. Would you leave the movie when you go home and think the movie was real? And take all the characters with you? And think about them day and night? Of course not. You usually forget the movie as soon as you walk out the theatre. While some people carry it with them a little bit and they let go of it later. But what do you do when you let go of the movie you go back to yourself. What you think you are. You go back to your life, your problems and you forget about the movie. Life is like that.

Different things happen in this world, wars, man's inhumanity to man, wonderful flowers grow, the sky is blue, there are mountains, everything appears real. And you go for it, you identify with it. That's just like your reaction to the movie. Only when you identify with the things of life that appear to be real you become part of that picture. You become part of that scenario. You become part of that happening. So if you believe things are wonderful they become sort of wonderful for you. If you believe things are terrible they become terrible. You make these things happen by the way you allow yourselves to think, by the way you allow yourselves to feel, what you accept, what you deny, what you give up.

All of these attractions, all of these attachments, all of these feelings, forms, what you call your personality. So your personality is nothing but a bunch of feelings, emotions that you picked up by habit and you react this way wherever you go. You react from the emotions, the habits that you picked up along the way since you were a little one and this is what makes your personality. You hear people say, "This person has a wonderful personality," and they picked up these habits, these feelings when they were a child. Other people have a terrible disposition, terrible personality they also picked up all of these feelings, these emotions when they were a child. And all they can do is react to conditioning.

When you begin to pursue spiritual life you begin to understand all these things must go. All these things have to be given up. You begin to see yourself sort of like a light bulb. Your true nature is bright and shining. You are the light. But it's as if someone comes and puts a piece of cloth over the light, another piece of cloth over the light bulb, another piece of cloth over the light bulb so you're no longer able to see the light. You see the cloth. Therefore you don't want to try to put other things over the cloth to be able to see the light. What you want to do is remove the cloth layer by layer until the light shines once again. So it is with your life.

You are Brahman. You are that absolute reality, ultimate oneness, nirvana. You are the I-am that I-am, God, reality. This is you.

But for some strange reason you've covered yourself with layers of ignorance. You have become conditioned. You have a covering called a body which appears to you to be the Real McCoy and you go through life trying to appease the body. Trying to make the body happy. Doing things to the body so you'll be satisfied. Yet with a little investigation you will begin to see that you are not the body. The body belongs to the I-thought. The body belongs to the ego, to the mind.

Consequently you begin to work on yourself by removing the ego, the mind and the I. As you continue to observe this and see this in yourself you begin to realize that the I-thought is the main culprit, for you say I all day long. I love this, I hate this, I feel this, I don't feel that, you're always using the first pronoun I. Therefore everything is attached to this I. Your spiritual sadhana becomes one of removing the I-thought totally and completely. For if you remove the I-thought everything else will go with it and you will be totally free. It's like trying to take off the layers of cloth on the light. If you take them off one by one it will take a long time but if you go directly to the source which is the light the cloth will burn up by itself.

This is what we do here in Advaita Vedanta. We understand I am the light, I am Brahman. I have always been Brahman. I am Shiva, I am Krishna. I am all of the gods and goddesses. I am that. I may appear as the body but I am not the body. There is no mind that controls me at all. For I am the light of the world. I am that. Nothing else exists but that. You turn within to that. You turn within to the Self. By turning within I always refer to negating the body totally and completely trying to realize even intellectually there never was a body to begin with. There is no body, there is only the light, consciousness, self contained absolute reality that's what I-am, I-am, I-am.

As you begin to think this way you will notice that you will become more expansive. You begin to feel yourself in the mountains and in the trees, in the ocean, in the sky. At first you only have a glimpse of these things but as you continue you find that all of your so-called anger subsides. You become a peaceful person, very peaceful. All of your needs and your wants subside. All of your fears subside. You're no longer afraid that anyone is going to do anything to you. For there is no you left that anybody can do anything to. You has been transmuted, transmuted, transcended. You have become total freedom, total love what you always were in the beginning.

How do you begin? You begin by observing everything, observing yourself especially. How you act everyday, what you feel everyday. You observe your emotions, your reactions. Watching what motivates you, what moves you. And then you inquire, "To whom do all these things come? Who is feeling all of these things? Who feels the emotions the thoughts the fears? Who has been feeling all of these things all of these years? I have, I have. Well, where did this I come from? What is the source of this I? The I has to have a source. It couldn't come from nothing. The source is the absolute reality.

The absolute reality never produced an I to begin with. The I-thought has been a delusion all of this time. As you trace it back to the source which is the Brahman, consciousness you find that the I burns up inside the source. What really happens is that it never existed and it just disappears. Just as when you walk out of the movie, the movie is over. What is left is the screen. The screen is the substratum of the movie. So the source of you is the substratum of the image of the body and of all of the images in this world, you are the source yourself. The source has been you all this time. When you know this it makes you feel so good you start laughing hysterically.

All these years you've been searching and looking and trying to change things, trying to add thing onto yourself, trying to acquire things when you have been the source of everything to begin with. Everything you've been looking for has been within yourself you have been that. You then begin to surrender everything to yourself. You surrender all of your thoughts, all of your feelings, you surrender all of your desires, all of your wants to the Self. You pull it in all inwardly.

You become like the sea and its bubbles. The bubbles break, they form, they break, they form, they form back into the sea and then they become bubbles again. You no longer become a bubble it comes and goes every second, every minute. You become the sea. I am the bubble make me the sea.

(silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru. Can you pass the basket around, Fred?

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: How can we see more clearly that there is nobody home? Even with self-inquiry there seems to be a doer.

A: In the beginning stages there is always a doer. You have to do something to see more clearly. This is what self-inquiry is all about. You are doing the self-inquiry in order to awaken. I always tell you there is nothing you have to do because you're already awake just see it, feel it, become it. Yet you will not listen to me. Therefore we have to use methods, sadhanas in order to get deeper inside of us and wake up.

Self-inquiry is one of the methods that work quite well. It can take you a long way. Therefore constantly practice this method. Do not look for the day or the time when you will become enlightened. For I tell you so often there is no time, there is no space. Time and space does not exist. What this means is there is no time that you can become enlightened because the time is now. There is no becoming anything. There is no space which means there is no room for you to become enlightened. There is no room for any change do you see what I'm saying? Illusion is very compact. Like a garbage compactor. (laughter) It makes the garbage so compact there is no room for anything else. This is the nature of this universe. It's compact, full of consciousness, self contained reality. There is no room there is no time there is nothing just the present moment. The present moment is forever. When you're able to see this you will not question when am I going to be enlightened, when is something going to happen, when am I going to feel something. You do the work that has to be done. You do not think about it and analyze and judge it, just do it.

Some people say self-inquiry is for beginners. We're all beginners, we're all losers, we're all ends, we're all leaders, we're all beginners, we're all everything. We're the whole thing. Do not think at all! Stop your thinking it's your thinking gets you into trouble. Just do what you have to do with not thinking about it and then you'll see progress. For in reality there is no future, there is no past, there is no beginning there is no end, everything just is and that isness you are that. You are that. You are Brahman, you are free right now.

Q: Each day you take the dog for a walk. Do you think a few minutes before I must get ready to go for a walk? Or does a light go on and you know it's time? Or does your body just move to go out without thought?

A: Number three. (laughter) I just do what has to be done.

Q: What things exist in your life that you want to retain? Money? Health? Do you ever desire to eat minutes before you do and start thinking about food? Do you ever think about your health? (pause then students laugh)

A: Whether the person who wrote me that question is sincere or whether they're not sincere. What can I say? Everything always gets done. There's no doer. If it has to be done it gets done. You see me as a body therefore you also see this body has to eat, sleep a little, take Dimitri for a walk. Who does all of these things? But there is no doer present yet everything gets done, that has to be done. Nobody is left to say, "I am doing this and I am doing that."

SD: Is it the same as complete spontaneity?

R: You can say that, yes. It has to be done to maintain and sustain this body. To appear as a body to you. It's done. It's done. As far as this is concerned listen to this: Nothing is being done as the doer, nothing is happening but it appears to you as if something is happening.

SH: Doesn't it appear to you that something is happening?

R: No. I see movement taking place but nothing is happening. (SH: There's no movement taking place?) Umm? (SH: You see movement taking place?) Yes. (SH: That's movement taking place.) To you. (SH: There is no movement taking place to you?) I see it but it does nothing. I see it like watching a movie. I watch the movie, see through nothing is happening, just sitting in the seat watching. So this body appears to be part of the movie when you look at it. And it is doing things like in the movie, eating, walking, sleeping, dreaming but I am not doing anything I'm just the observer, the watcher. I'm absolutely nothing. Again it appears to you that I get up and walk and move and do that, do this. The whole thing is very paradoxical, contradictory. Yet this is the absolute truth. Noone does anything there is nothing to do.

Always go back to the compact garbage bin. The whole universe is compact, self-contained absolute reality there is no place to do anything. How can you be a doer of anything? There is no place for anything it is filled with Brahman. Brahman is the whole universe. There is nothing but Brahman called the absolute reality, pure awareness that is the only existence. There's no room for anything to take place. But the mesmerism that most of us are in makes you think you're doing something, makes you think some things are happening someplace. Yet I know for sure that nothing is happening.

SH: There isn't even an illusory appearance of something happening?

R: There is no illusory appearance at all there is just the Self, just consciousness. But at the same time I see everything you see. At the same time you're aware of everything I'm aware of. To me it's like a movie. (SH: But there is that appearance?) The appearance is nothing. The appearance is both. Nothing is happening... (SH: It's nothing but it's nonetheless appearing?) It seems to appear. (SH: As though it would?) It appears to noone. There is noone for it to appear to. (SH: Who perceives it?) There is no perceiver. Noone perceives it. (SH: Is that a perception?) There is no perception. But at the same time there appears to be a perceiver and a perception. (laughter) So you figure it out. (SH: You're separating. It's like a greased tennis ball.) (laughter)

S: Maybe the next question will clarify it?

SB: Robert is it true that consciousness is absolute non-motion nor motion? And you're identified with that? You're in that position ??? so that's your reality and it's observing the appearance as something as a movie but it's not real? It knows it's not real right?

R: Yes you can explain it like that. (SB: It's not that. That's just an explanation but is that an explanation of seeing...) In a way but if you talk about an experience you won't know what to say it's beyond anything you can ever imagine. It's beyond the senses of course. We normally have our senses to deal with, senses to judge with, that we won't get over this question, do you know what I'm saying? (SB: But you rest beyond the mind that should happen by itself. You rest beyond movement. Mind isn't movement per-se?) There is no movement there is just That and you are That. What do you see? You see movement.

SB: It's a habit. (R: No.) An addiction. (R: No.)

R: Everything that you say, touch or think are false. All of your belief system, totally false. All the truth that you know is false. Stop looking and just be. That is all you have to do. Do not be this or that just be. Next case.

Q: After your age fourteen experience did you immediately identify with self and no longer with physical bodies or was it a gradual lessening of identification with the body and more and more identification with self week by week until it was total identification with self.

A: My experience at fourteen was total and absolute. Nothing gradual about it, it just happened and I've been like that ever since. There is no gradual anything. Everything was made perfectly clear to me. Everything is nothing. Nothing is everything. And it's been like that ever since, no progression. You walk into a darkroom and turn on the light the light is lit at once at a time. The brightness is there immediately darkness is gone forever. So it is with total self-realization. When it happens you're totally realized, immediately and you laugh because you've always been this way. Darkness has just been removed. There is total freedom from illusion.

Q: Dear Robert, please describe the self in bits and pieces as best you can? (laughter)

SH: Yeah just try that. I want to hear this. Stop at the pieces and lets have a little concept. To hell with ??? and the prashad.(laughter)

A: The only answer is silence. Look within yourself.

Q: When one awakens does one automatically become a Jnani?

A: A Jnani is a name given to an enlightened Master. An enlightened Master doesn't have a name. If anybody walks around saying, "I'm a Jnani," be careful. When you are the self you are something beyond description. For people who are not the self so-to-speak to figure this out, they have to words, experiences, pictures to describe the experience. All these words for the Jnani, moksha, liberation, self-realization are all for the ajnani. When people believe they're human. For the enlightened beings there is no such word as a Jnani. Only the ego can call them-self a Jnani. A Sage has no name. A Sage just is. Always will be, always was. It's a name that the jivas use in different ways.

An example is Ramana Maharshi he was known as Ramana Swami, Rama Swami, people gave him names that's the reason they named him Ramana Maharshi. He was never concerned with this. "Yes, call me Ramana Maharshi, don't call me this or don't call me that." He just went along with it. We called him Ramana Maharshi, he was always happy with it. I'm starting to say, him, he. Of course as far as he is concerned he didn't have a name. He was the all-pervading universe and he didn't have a name we think of a name. When you're all-pervading you could be called a tree, dog, mouse or anything names do not stay with you especially if they say ????. Next.

Q: If you are one with the Self what physical experience do you have before or after a massage? What does a massage do for you?

A: A massage basically makes the body feel good. (SD: The apparent body.) (laughs) It's just like eating. The only difference between you and me that I know that everything is false and nothing exists and I find that the body goes through the motions of existence. The body that goes through the motions of existence does not really exist at all. This is a hard one for you to understand. It means I can sit here talking like this because the body appears to exist otherwise there will be no talking, there will be no teaching. Noone would ever know that you're something else in this universe. ??? For some reason I found myself sitting here doing what I'm doing, here. You see a body doing things, going through motions. I see nothing. The same thing I see even you see. You figure it out.

S: That's why we're here. (laughter)

Q: Dear Robert if you are permanently aligned consciousness with the self what does sitting in the silence six hours a day do for you? If you stop sitting in silence how would your inner experience be different?

A: It does absolutely nothing for me. I'm doing it for you. It makes no difference if I sit or don't sit or if I lie or stand.

SL: Were you always doing this before you moved house?

R: I didn't sit at those exact times. Sometimes I was sitting at noon. (SL: Robert earlier you said the I-thought is God?) The I-thought is illusory. It doesn't exist at all. The I-am is Brahman. The I-am is consciousness. So the I-am consciousness appears to run the universe. It takes care of the body. The I-thought is the appearance but doesn't even exist at all. But the human appearance it appears that you go through situations, conditions this is the I-thought that does this. The I-am is God, totally different. (SL: That means God doesn't involve with illusion?) God doesn't even exist. When you talk about God... (SL: But then consciousness is involved with God.) Consciousness has never involved anybody. There is nobody to involve with. (SL: What is just observing?) The process of the body appears to be the body. What makes you walk, what makes you go to a movie, what makes you do anything it does? It is the doer that is doing this. The I-thought. The appearance. The I-thought does all of these things.

SL: Going to a movie is not the same as making my heart beat.

R: The same process that makes you go to a movie makes your heart beat. There is only one force that controls everything. The life force, which is called the life force takes care of everything for you. All the involuntary actions of the body that are in the body, digestion, inhalation, everything, constipation. Whatever is happening to you it's the I-thought doing this. But the reality is to transcend the I-thought completely, totally. Therefore when you see a Sage, as far as you're concerned the Sage is being motivated by consciousness because there is no longer an I-thought left. The Sage is being motivated by consciousness. In reality the Sage knows there is no motivation whatsoever. (SL: The ??? in the Sage.) ??? All these things are for you. Something to think about. But nothing is as it appears. Just remember that. Nothing is as it appears. ??? That's it Robert.

SF: When you had your experience and experienced the self, omniscience and all-pervading. My understanding is that you did go to other people. You visited Joel Goldsmith, Yogananda there must have been some individuality left in you?

R: When actually that happened I didn't know what happened to me at all. I had an experience I read about it. I had no idea what happened to me. I only knew I was strange. I was seeing strange things, having strange thoughts I didn't really know what happened? So my first experience was when I attended a Christian church and he told me to go to Joel Goldsmith. I went to Joel Goldsmith to confirm what was happening to me. Tell me what it was all about. So he told me to see Yogananda then I went to Ramana Maharshi. (SF: You're not considering individuality even though it is the question?) Well I didn't know whether I was free or what? (SF: True.) I didn't know what happened at all.

SF: Well Maharshi apparently had no questions? When he went to the temple to ordain him. He commented ...unclear... But when you got to Maharshi there was no more wondering what had happened to you.

R: Well I went to Joel Goldsmith there was no more wondering any more. (SF: And why did you go to India?) ??? I saw him in the crib when I was a baby which I realized was Ramana Maharshi. So I went to him because he was the figure I saw in a book. The same person. So when I went to India I saw different Sages ??? I just did it. I didn't have any reason or goals to push me. It just happened.

SH: Must have been some motivation to make it happen.

R: Different people have some experiences like this in different ways. ??? and had this unusual experience. When Ramana Maharshi had his experience in India, where people have been doing this for years. People knew what was going on. Most American person never heard of anything like this. So they make you feel very strange. ??? and you are working with people who are like me. And here I am.

SY: Thank God.

R: Who cares it's prashad time. (SV: Good!) Today we have some multigrain cookies. All natural fruit sweetened cookies.

SB: Hallelujah!

Remember to Love yourself to worship yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself, for God dwells in you as you. Om shanti peace.

And we're all finished.

UNDERSTANDING HOW TO STOP THOUGHTS

8th October, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening. It is an honor to be with you once again, to see you, talk to you, say my piece and go home. Beautiful evening. Nice breeze blowing. All is well. Everything is in its right place. There are no mistakes. And you are all divine spiritual beings, whether you like it or not.

It has come to my attention that many of you are trying to stop your thoughts, control your thoughts. You cannot really do this. Trying to stop your thoughts, as Ramana Maharshi says, is like a thief becoming a policeman to catch the thief. In other words, the thief that becomes the policeman will not catch the thief, because he's a thief himself. And so it is with our minds. When we use the mind to stop the thoughts, the mind will not stop the thoughts at all, because the mind wants to go on living. Stopping the thoughts is annihilating the mind, and the mind does not wish to be annihilated. The mind wants to live on, to fill you full of nonsense, superstitions. Therefore we do not try to stop thoughts.

What do we really do? We do absolutely nothing. There's really nothing you have to do to make the thoughts cease. Always remember when you do things according to the sadhanas you've learned, the spiritual exercises you've practiced, the meditations, the yoga, this will make you free for a couple of moments, and then the thoughts will come back to you with full force, knocking you over. You cannot stop the mind or control the mind with spiritual practice. Again, you cause the thoughts to cease by doing absolutely nothing, by being your self. In all the scriptures we read, unless the mind stops spinning there will be no realization, no liberation. Only when the mind stops, the thoughts cease to be, is there liberation. Yet we use the words "To stop the mind, to stop the thoughts." This is sort of a misnomer, for again you have to use the mind to stop the thoughts, and the mind does not want to do this. It does not wish to cease thinking. Yet by ceasing to think, you do acquire unalloyed happiness, infinite peace, divine bliss. When the thoughts do stop, these verities come forward, and you become free.

You do not have to watch the thoughts, analyze the thoughts, be the witness to the thoughts, or observe the thoughts in any way whatsoever. All of these symptoms simply make the mind stronger, really. Most of you have tried to stop your thoughts with various methods like these for many years, and if you look back in retrospect you will see, it made the mind stronger. It caused the mind to have more power. Thoughts hit you from all directions. This means we do not wish to use any method whatsoever to stop thoughts. Yet the thoughts have to be stopped. They have to cease. By doing absolutely nothing, the mind will begin to slow down.

When you think you have to watch your thoughts, observe your thoughts, you're saying to yourself, "I'm going to observe my thoughts, I'm going to watch my thoughts." You're using mind energy to do this, aren't you? You're using energy to stop the thoughts and you'll never do it this way. But again if you do absolutely nothing, you just sit there, doing nothing, the thoughts will get weak.

Now really, no Sage on this earth or anywhere else, really stops the thoughts. As long as you see a body, and you call that body the Sage, there will always be some sort of thinking in that body, some sort of thought. For instance, I can be sitting here and I'll say to myself, "When I go home I'm going to eat a dish of ice cream." This is a thought. But what happens when I say it and what happens when you say it? When I say it, when I think it is similar to a burnt rope. A burnt rope may appear to be strong, but when you pick it up it turns to ashes. It's burnt, there's nothing there. When you say it, it is like a real rope, that is not burnt. You give it energy, you give it power.

Again when the Sage thinks of something, it is like a fan that has been pulled out of the socket. It's still turning, but there's no power. The power is dead. The power has been cut off. In other words, the thoughts of a saint are dead. The thoughts of the Sage have no power, no power whatsoever. This is why it is said, a Sage does not think. A Sage has no thoughts. What it really means is that the sage's thoughts are dead. When the thoughts are dead, you live in absolute reality. You live in pure awareness. When the thoughts are dead you live in sat-chit-ananda, in nirvana.

So what are you to do to also cease the thinking, so the thoughts can become dead? You simply do not attach yourself to the thoughts. By not attaching yourself to the thoughts, by not reacting to the thoughts, by not responding to the thoughts, they lose their power and begin to fade away. You do not give it any energy. You do not give it any power. Do not say to yourself, "I have to stop my thoughts." Do nothing like this. Just slow down, slow down, let the thoughts do what they may. Allow the thoughts to go their own way. Do nothing with your thoughts. Do not think about them. Do not fight them. And above all, do not try to stop them. You may think this is sort of difficult, but it's not. It's like when you first wake up, before the thoughts come. You're still drowsy from sleep. And when the first thoughts come to you, you hardly pay any attention to them. That's the attitude to have. Do not pay any attention to your thoughts whatsoever. But when you say, "I'm not paying attention to my thoughts," you spoil it. You're not to utter this. You're not to say this. You're just to become this.

As you begin to let your thoughts alone, not to pay any attention to them, not to be attached to them, you'll notice something very interesting happening to you. You'll begin to notice that you're becoming very peaceful, very calm. You become happy for no reason whatsoever. All of these dastardly things are still going on in this world, man's inhumanity to man, you have your own so called problems. Yet you become happy, you become peaceful, you become blissful. This comes all by itself, because your thoughts have slowed down. And you have had absolutely nothing to do with this. You, have not slowed your thoughts down. This is an important point to remember. You have not slowed your thoughts down. Not you, whatsoever. For you are the mind, and you have not used your mind to slow down your thoughts. You have done absolutely nothing, except to ignore your thoughts. Ignore the thoughts completely, totally, absolutely. Again, do not fight your thoughts. Ignoring your thoughts is not fighting your thoughts. Do not try to change your thoughts. Above all do not try to stop your thoughts. Just do not be attached to them, and ignore them.

The example here is, what happens to your friend whom you ignore? If you have a friend and your friend is talking to you, telling you things, and you ignore your friend, what happens? The friend will walk away. The friend will go away and that will be the end of the friend. He or she will no longer be your friend, for you have ignored them totally, completely. You have not scolded them. You have not lectured your friend. You have not been evil to your friend. You have just ignored your friend. Your friend will back away and go away, because your friend gets no response from you whatsoever.

This is how you want to treat your thoughts. Same way. It makes no difference if the thoughts are good or bad, they're both impostors. In reality there are no good thoughts, there are no bad thoughts. We're not trying to replace bad thoughts for good thoughts or good thought for bad thoughts. We're trying to leave the thoughts alone. Not to do a thing about them. I want to make this perfectly clear. This is the highest way to handle your thoughts.

There are so many practices. You have Vipassana meditation. You have pranayama. You have so many different methods to stop your thoughts. All of these methods are good to an extent. They make you sort of one pointed, but they will not stop your thoughts. This is why people who have been practicing pranayamas, breathing exercises, Vipassana meditation, even Zen meditation, and other forms of yoga meditation, have been practicing for years, and years, and years and years. Perhaps they have achieved a semblance of peace, but they have not become liberated, due to the fact that they are using methods, whether it is a koan, or it's watching your breath or your feelings, or whether it's changing your thoughts to something positive, whatever you've been doing, you're using your mind to do it. And your mind will always fool you. It will make you believe you're getting somewhere, you're becoming something great. But it's really the ego. It is the ego that is controlling the mind, and you are the ego, the ego trying to control the mind. So again, what do you do to stop the thoughts? Absolutely nothing. Now why is the word nothing so important? You do absolutely nothing because in truth, everything is nothing. This is the reason you do nothing, to stop your thoughts. In reality there are no thoughts. There's no one trying to stop them. There's no liberation, there's no bondage. There's nothing. You're using the same nothing to stop your thoughts. Doing nothing, because you are nothing. Nothing plus nothing makes nothing. Can you see why I tell you to do nothing now? Because you're using your real nature when you do nothing. You are your Self. You are the absolute reality when you are nothing. Consequently when you are doing something, to stop your thoughts, you're fooling yourself. Nothing will ever happen. But, like I say, you'll acquire a little peace. That's it. But by slowing yourself down, seeing nothing, hearing nothing, doing nothing, being nothing, your thoughts will stop completely, totally, absolutely, and as I mentioned before, you will feel beautiful happiness, peace of mind, bliss. You'll be free.

Practice this right now. Allow the thoughts to come, whatever they are. Do absolutely nothing. It makes no difference what the thoughts are. Let them come, no matter how much they seem to frighten you, no matter how powerful they appear to be, let them come. Where do the thoughts come from to begin with? They come from nowhere. They do not come from consciousness. They do not come from pure awareness. They do not come from the Self. Where do the thoughts come from? From nowhere. They're an optical illusion. They do not exist. They're like the appearance of the sky on top of the mountain. The sky appears to be resting on top of the mountain, but it's an optical illusion. Thoughts do not exist, whatsoever. Therefore you ask yourself, "Who's thinking?" and you will find out, the ego is thinking. So here's another point. When the thoughts slow down, so does the ego.

The thoughts and the ego are synonymous. As the thoughts slow down, the ego slows down, and begins to also disappear with the thoughts. When there are no thoughts, there's no ego. When there's no ego, there's nobody left to think. Then the question you will ask is, "How do I function without thinking?" As I mentioned in the beginning, the sage's thoughts are like a burnt rope. They appear to be real, but they're not. In other words, your thoughts are not real. They are false. How do you function without thoughts? Very well, thank you. Many of you still believe you have to have thoughts to function. You think you'll become a vegetable, but you will be spontaneous without thoughts. You'll be motivated by the Self. You will know what to do, where to go, whom to speak to, whom not to speak to, much better than you do now, much, much better. Things will happen to you spontaneously.

Everything we always talk about is very paradoxical, and the paradox here is, even though you have no thoughts, you will still think about certain things. It has to be done. But there's absolutely no thinker alive. There's no thinker. There is no one left to think, yet you still appear to be thinking about certain things, so you can function. It's similar to what we were discussing on Sunday. People always ask me, "What do you see? Do you see the world?" Of course I see the world. If I didn't see the world, I wouldn't be able to function. But I see the world as the Self. In other words, I see the world as images on reality, like in the movies, the images on the screen. I'm able to see the screen and the images at the same time. I see reality and I see the images. So it is with the thoughts, the same thing with the thoughts. You appear to be thinking, but you're not thinking. This is a very important point to remember. You will think whatever you have to think about, but the thoughts will be dead, like the burnt rope, like the fan with the plug pulled out, but the blades are still spinning, until they stop. Why do you want to do all this? For life passes. Pretty soon you become old, and you appear to die. Do you want to believe this lie, that you die, that you get old, that there are problems in this world? This is all a lie. It's the mortal dream. Do not identify with the mortal dream. Know who you are once and for all. You are that which was never born, which does not prevail, and can never die. You are that which is beyond all concepts, all reasoning, all thoughts. You are that which has always existed as pure awareness. You are that which is neither female or male, which is neither good nor bad, which is neither right or wrong, which just is. Beauty, joy, love, harmony, peace, bliss, this is your real nature, this is who you are. Why not accept this and become free, right now?

It all begins by removing your thoughts. Now you have an idea how to remove your thoughts, get rid of your thinking process. You have to do it. You now know you have absolutely nothing to fight in this world, nothing to fear. It makes no difference what's happening to the economy. It makes no difference if there are earthquakes, cataclysms, hurricanes. What do you have to do with these things? What do these things have to do with you? You are the source of all creation. In this gap that I give you between sentences, at that time you are in samadhi. Every time I stop talking, you are in samadhi. Feel your divinity. Feel your bliss. Feel your love. Feel the truth, the reality. Clean yourself out. Feel all the karmas, the samskaras, all the things you've carried around with you for so many centuries, flowing away from you, completely and totally. You are absolutely free right now. Absolutely free. Absolutely free.

SR: I can see tonight that when we see a thought and when I want to understand thought better I turn it into something real and I guess I make it stronger or more like bars being in gaol. But I don't understand where does the thought come from in the first place?

R: In reality there are no thoughts as I mentioned before. The thoughts are an appearance of the ego. (SR: Some kind of an impression, some kind of a small understanding that is just very weak in the beginning. Some kind of an impression understanding.) Yes that is how it begins. The thoughts are like the body, it's an appearance. The appearance seems very valid, very real but if you investigate thoroughly you will see it's impossible for a body to appear. Just as it's impossible for thoughts to appear. Therefore when you get rid of the thoughts, you get rid of the body. When you get rid of the body you get rid of the thoughts. (SR: I didn't understand that.) They both come together. Thoughts are a part of the body. The reality of the body are the thoughts. (SR: They are like an emanation of the body?) Yes. (SR: Some kind of a vibration?) If you had no body would you have any thoughts? In order to have thoughts there has to be a body. (SR: Like the body is throwing out some kind of vibration that becomes a thought?) You can say that. (SR: So there must be a tension in the body?) Not a tension in the body but just a body and there are thoughts that have to do with the body. Whenever a body appears there are thoughts that go with it. No thoughts no body, no body no thoughts.

SF: During the out of the body experience there are thoughts going on in the body?

R: Out of body experiences there are thoughts for the out of the body experimenter with the soul. When a person has an out of body experience the soul leaves the body so-to-speak. That is all the body, it's all mental. It's all part of maya. It's all part of mind. (SF: They're not understanding of the body?) The out of body experience is simply another phase of mind. That is all it is. (SF: Sir, please say that again?) An out of body experience is a phase of mind. (SF: Phase of?) Phase of the mind. Remember that the absolute reality has no attachments whatsoever. The absolute reality has no mind, no body, no thoughts, no ego. The absolute reality is beyond comprehension. It is pure consciousness. It is beyond words and thoughts. So anything that you can imagine, think or express, it's not that. An out of body experience seems very remarkable to some people but it's still kindergarten, it's nothing.

SR: Even though I have a little thought and think all this, this is a good thought I want to understand it better, it'd be wiser for me just to ignore it and to hell with receiving any aid from it?

R: Exactly. Or if you give it any power it will become stronger. You give it power by reacting to it, by believing in it, by trying to change it or stop it. (SR: And I get seduced into thinking that oh if I could...if I could understand this thought this will help me do what I have to do better.) On the contrary. (SR: And you're saying if I would just ignore the thought the doing would happen without knowing why the hell I'm doing it, I guess.) You've got it. (laughter) That's it Jorge. (SR: Jesus Christ.) (laughter) We think we're so important. (laughter) That unless we think, unless we do, nothing will take place, nothing will happen.

ST: Aren't most of the out-of-the-body experiences acts of ego identification? (R: Exactly yes.) Because of what I've read about them, they always talk about meeting somebody, my family, my mother, my father, my grandfather down the tunnel, at the end of the tunnel, "I am doing this and that," (R: Exactly!) "I am watching the doctors try to bring me back to life." So it's all ego identification, though...I mean to a great extent?

R: The physical plane, the astral plane, the causal plane, the mental plane are all out of the mind. They are not you. They're a part of maya. A part of the illusion of life. You are beyond that! (SH: No matter how exquisite or how subtle it may be?) Exactly. (SH: It's the causal plane, it's still maya.) It's still maya. It's all part of the mortal dream.

SR: Well part of my maya is I have a job and I'm doing some things and I'm dealing with people and I'm dealing with paperwork. So in order to deal with this maya called a job, don't I need to listen to those thoughts?

R: Who says you will not be able to do your job without the thoughts? (SR: But that job is maya I suppose?) That is all maya and you will have the maya that you need to take care of that maya. (SR: But if I push away these maya thoughts how will I be able to do the maya job?) Who is saying this? Who is talking about these things? The maya is talking about maya. The maya is talking about itself.

SR: You're saying that I could do this maya paperwork and people, job and just ignore the thoughts? (R: Of course.) Look at these papers and when I see a thought coming analyzing what I'm reading just put off it?

R: Do not think about that at all. (SR: Am I required to be looking at the paperwork?) If you want to keep your job. (laughter) (SR: Will I understand what is on the paper?) You'll understand better than you can ever understand now. You will do what you have to do and you will do it quite well and you will be happy with yourself. Do not have the opinion that you are the doer and telling you, you have to do something. Just be yourself and everything will get done. (pause) An apple tree does not have to worry whether it's going to grow apples or not. By its very nature it grows apples. If an apple tree were able to think like us, it'd die! (laughter) It'll start thinking, "I wonder if I'm going to grow apples this year? I wonder if my apples will be green or they'll be ripe?" Just by the very thought it would destroy itself.

SH: Or I might grow oranges or it might grow a pear? (laughter)

R: So an apple tree just is and has luscious apples. The mysterious power that takes care of this universe and this world, that makes the grass grow, the sun shine just right to preserve life and maintain life. This mysterious power, the current that knows the way is always in operation and will take care of you and your life and in a much better way than you can ever do it by yourself. You have to trust it, have faith in the power that knows the way. Surrender to it completely and stop thinking. Another way to bypass all the things we've been talking about tonight, the thoughts, is through surrender. Surrender to the Self. Total surrender. Total humility. For when you surrender you stop thinking. True surrender is, you give up all thoughts. Then you'll get the same result. When you begin to see and realize, you don't have to make anything happen whatsoever. There is absolutely nothing you have to make happen. The happening will take care of itself. And you'll either stop the thoughts, by not reacting to them or by surrendering.

Mary would you read the Jnani? (SM: Yes Robert.)

(Mary reads the Jnani refer to the beginning of this book for text)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.) Do we have any announcements?

SM: Yes I do. (R: Take your time.) This is a newsletter for new people who want information about satsang and everything else that pertains to satsang. The newsletter is free and is on the table over here. Bear in mind I might add, it also has directions to Henry's place and Lotta's place where we go on Saturdays. Which is very helpful for us. Also one other announcement that Howard would like to make.

ST: Robert asked me to make that second announcement. Robert feels it's a good idea if devotees get together and foot with each other so if any of you have an interest in that see me after the show.

R: Anyone else like to say anything?

Well it's time for prashad then. We have a bag of pears it looks like, peaches. Dry fruit. (SD: Nectarines?) Nectarines! Pass it around. It looks like we have about twenty thousand grapes. (laughter)

(general prashad talk as tape ends) [TOC]

EVERYTHING IS SACRED

11th October, 1992

Robert: Greetings and salutations. Happy Sunday. All is well. Everyone feels wonderful, don't they? Some of you don't look too good. You're probably worried about the presidential debates. It's good to be with you once again.

People often ask me, "Can a person become self-realized while living as a householder? Or living with people or a family who are not inclined this way? By having relatives, children, whatever that give you a hard time, think you're crazy because you come here and follow this kind of a teaching and they're right."

Of course this to me is a very humorous question. Due to the fact that it has nothing to do with self-realization, nothing whatsoever. It doesn't matter what you're going through or what's going on in this world this is something we have to understand. Self-realization, moksha, liberation transcends this plane of existence totally and completely. It has absolutely nothing to do with what is going on in your life. Which may sound strange but true. Some people may have a horrible life going through all kinds of physical experiences. Perhaps poverty or lack or limitation or abuse from a spouse, whatever, this has nothing to do with self-realization. Due to the fact that self-realization is your real Self. It is your true nature this is what you are. So why do you have to go find it? Why do you have to make it happen? There is nothing that has to happen.

In other words you do not have to be with a group of enlightened beings to become self-realized. You do not have to be in a monastery, on a mountain top in a cave or anywhere else to become self-realized. Due to the fact that you're already self-realized. You are already free. You are already bright and shining. What you do have to do is leave everything alone. You have to stop being concerned about person, place or thing, about who is right or wrong and what is going on in your life. As far as your life is concerned these things have absolutely nothing to do with it. In other words you may be a thief and be self-realized. It's a very strange understanding but it's true. To be self-realized all you have to do is to wake up no matter what position you're in.

The reason why so many people are in negative experiences and not become self-realized is due to the fact that they accept their negative experiences. They accept what the senses show them and tell them. They accept the world as it appears as real. They accept their body, whatever it's going through to be real. How can you become self-realized if you're doing this? It is up to each one of you to drop the world from your mind, mentally. Not to make any changes. Some people still believe that if they make positive changes they will be happier. They'll have more of an opportunity to study, to meditate, to think.

Again remember self-realization has absolutely nothing to do with all of these things. It has nothing to do with meditation, nothing to do with thinking, nothing to do with changing to a positive atmosphere.

Why is this? Because the ground upon which I stand is Holy ground, that's why.

Everything is sacred. Everything is holy. Because everything is God or consciousness or absolute reality. If anything were not God it wouldn't exist. Everything that exists is God. Most of us when we think of God we think of only the good things. We think of harmony, peace, love, etc. But in truth God is everything.

God is in the serial rapist. God is in the mass murderer. God is in the person dying of AIDS. It is all God. The only problem which appears is that you see it differently, that's all. It is your identification, it is your perception. It is what you see. This is what matters. This is what counts. So, if you're able to see through appearances and see the reality how can the appearance hurt you?

You were not born to cry. You were not born to have bad experiences in your life. You were not born to have negative conditions in your life, so-to-speak. You were born to be happy. Yet you allow the conditionings of the world to affect you. You allow you're bodily condition to affect you. What the newspapers tell you, what the TV tells you. You respond to these things. This is the only reason that you're not enlightened, so-to-speak. For you have allowed exterior conditions, external conditions to make up your mind how things are.

Things are things and that's it. They're not good, they're not bad.

We have been trained from childhood to judge and say, "This is good. This is bad. This is this and this is that." If we learn to keep quiet. If we learn to shut up. To be still. To stop judging, everything will take care of itself. Everything will take care of itself! All of your needs will be met. Your destiny will be fulfilled. Everything is sacred. Everything is pure awareness. Everything has the Buddha nature. Everything is. But yet you give everything a name and you label it good or bad, right and wrong. This is what keeps you back. You have to begin to understand that this whole universe is imagination. It comes from false imagination. It's an optical illusion. Everything, the good things the bad things and stop reacting to this world.

I didn't say to stop being a part of this world I just said stop reacting. You can work. You can have a family. You can watch a movie. You can go bowling. You can do whatever you like. But it is your response to these things that determine where you're coming from. It's your reactions to what's going on that determines where you are. When you become angry, when you become upset because something isn't going your way. This is the only problem you have. This is your problem.

You should ask yourself, "Why do I become angry? Why do I become upset? Why do I think the world has to turn a certain way for me to be happy? Why do I believe people have to say certain things so I can be feel good, be happy, be joyous? Why do certain words affect me? Why do certain conditions affect me? Why do certain people affect me?"

This is the problem that you've been carrying through incarnation after incarnation. This is why the time has to come when you inquire, "Who am I? Who am I really? Who is this person that is going through incarnation after incarnation and finds themselves in a mess? Who is this person? Is it me? Am I a person who is like a leaf being blown around by the breeze of time? Finding myself in one time or another time? Being born again over and over again? Going through experiences that people call karmic? Is this what I'm here for? Is this me?" Of course not.

You are a divine being, a spiritual being. You are a God. They have so many Gods you are one of them, why not? The Hindu mythology has hundreds and thousands of Gods. Christianity has many Gods. Judaism has many Gods. Every religion in the world has many Gods, so why can't you be a God? Make up your mind that you are going to be a God. If you don't then you're something else aren't you? What are you? What do you believe deep inside about yourself? That you're not worthy? That you're a sinner because you made some mistakes in the past? What do you believe about other people? The only thing you can believe about other people is what's in yourself. That is all you can see in other people. You can only see yourself wherever you look. For there is only one Self and you are that! You are the one Self, nothing else and nothing more. Consequently wherever you look you see yourself.

Why not make up your mind to drop the past totally and completely, to forget about the future and live in the eternal now, in the eternal moment, fresh, with spontaneity, peace and love. Why not make up your mind to do this? When you make up your mind to do this something happens to you. Your mind begins to fade away. The past impressions that have been with you for so long begin to fade away. All of your fears, emotions, anger, sorrows begin to fade away into the nothingness from whence they came. You have only to be aware. To be aware of what? That you are a God.

As you think of yourself as a God that notion begins to expand within you. So you begin to laugh at yourself because you're able to see and perceive that all of the Gods that ever existed are you, your Self. They are not within you, they are you, you are those Gods. You are Krishna, you are Vishnu, you are Shiva, you are the Christ, you are everybody that has ever lived. It is you. But if you think this way you have to think also that you are Hitler, you are Mussolini, you are Genghis Khan, you are Napoleon. You can't just think about the good guys. The bad guys existed also. Therefore you are all of these things and you are! If it weren't for you these people would not exist at all. They came out of your mind. You created all of these people all of these conditions or where else would they come from. You are the one that has given life and substance to every condition in this universe.

And now personally you are giving life and substance to every condition that you're going through. Whatever it is you're going through good or bad. You are giving substance and life to this condition. Take a look at your life honestly, truly. See what you believe all day long. What you feel all day long. What you think about all day long. What goes through your mind all day long. Think!

Can't you see now that you are the one holding back your self-realization. The self-realization in which you are wants to come forth and let itself be known. Yet you refuse to acknowledge this by believing so strongly in this world and its manifestation. Without recognizing that you have created this world, yourself, and your mind and you're partaking of your creation right now. You refuse to let this go. All you have to do is let it go. The truth will shine all by itself.

Why don't you let it go? Because you wish to play games. You wish to play hide and seek with yourself. By hide and seek I mean that you wish to forget who you really are and take on a new identity life after life and go through all kinds of experiences. And you begin to seek for reality, what you are already anyway. You begin to search for it everywhere. This is the game you're playing. You believe you can find reality in a book, in a teacher, in a church or a mosque or on a mountain top or being secluded in a cave. You believe your reality is found this way.

So you've covered yourself up with all of these beliefs, all of these thoughts, with all these ideas of who your reality is. Somewhere far away from you and you have to go seek it to find it. Yet in truth every...everything has been right here all of the time. Just where you are right now. Everything has been with you all of this time. It's never left you. But you've been seeking and searching and looking and arguing and fighting, sticking up for your rights and here you are. What are you going to do about it? It's up to you.

You can vehemently make up your mind that you've had enough of this nonsense and drop it all. You can do this you have this freedom. Yes, you can consciously make up your mind that you no longer wish to play the game of hide and seek. You're finished playing games.

You know who you are. You are the Buddha, the Christ, the absolute reality, nirvana, the pure awareness, this is you, right now this minute, this second. There is nothing else to do. Freedom is yours. Take it. Assimilate it. Digest it. Chew it up. Freedom is yours. Total freedom, not partial freedom. Not freedom only in certain areas, total freedom.

Oh I know you may tell me, "If you only looked in my home and see what is going on in my house. See what is going on in my job, my work then you will see why I can't be free." That's utter nonsense, foolishness. You are reacting to conditions that is why you feel this way. Leave everything alone. Whatever is going on has absolutely nothing to do with you unless you identify with it.

Your family, your friends, your relatives are all with you because of karmic influences. They have to go through their experiences. See this. Know this. Therefore have a great compassion but leave it alone. People appear to drop dead every minute of the day and we're concerned about death as if it's not going to happen to us.

As long as you feel that you're human you have to die and you have to be born and you have to continue this process. So why worry about it why be concerned about these things. As soon as you begin to lose your humanhood things change drastically. For to the extent that you lose your humanhood to that extent do you find yourself becoming freer and freer and freer. Things may not change too much in your world perhaps but you will see the whole thing totally differently.

You will see everything unfolding as it should. You will find that everything is in its right place. Going through those experiences that are necessary for its unfoldment. You will stop arguing with people. Stop judging people. You will speak very little. And you will inquire, "Who am I? What am I? What am I going through here? Who is going through anything? Who needs everything? Who needs all this?" and you will keep still, you will be still, you will be quiet.

(pause)

Isn't it wonderful when everything is quiet? Especially when I shut up and don't talk anymore. Things become much better. So let's really sit in the silence. When I say, "Sit in the silence," I'm not speaking of human quietness. I mean the silence beyond human quietness, the silence beyond understanding. The silence which is God, Infinite intelligence. Let's just sit in that silence.

Close our eyes, be still, put a smile on your face.

I am not my affairs. I am not my experiences. I am not this life I appear to be going through. I have absolutely nothing to do with this world even though I may appear to others to be doing things in this world, working, whatever. I am free from fears. Free from past karma. Free from other peoples thoughts. I-am-that-I-am.

I go deep, deep, deep within the Self and then become the Self. Realizing that there is only one Self. I am touching that place where I've never been before. The ultimate reality. I am touching that place where there are no thoughts, no emotions, no feelings. I am touching that place where there is bliss, eternal love. I now go deeper beyond all that where even love, ultimate oneness, self-realization are mere words. I go beyond all words and thoughts to that place where there is absolutely nothing and yet I exist.

(long silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru, so pass the stumpers.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert how does your sitting in silence help us?

A: When I sit in the silence at the prescribed times and when someone focusses their attention on me there is a direct connection. What we call grace is always here and always available. But the thoughts of the silence cause that grace to become manifested in the person who is thinking of the guru or the teacher of God or the Self. Since there is only one Self and that Self is you by thinking of me in the silence you are thinking of your Self. And since that Self is perfect automatically you have all of your emotions resolved, you have all your problems resolved so-to-speak. Things begin to happen. It is up to you to be sincere when you do this and try to keep your mind quiet. You don't necessarily have to think of me personally, you may think of your favorite deity if you've got one. You may think of God in the abstract as white light. The whole idea is to become still in the silence.

And then you tune into my Self, you tune into me. Like a radio set. You turn the dial on the radio until it's finely tuned and you pick up the station that you want.

In the same way when you're sitting in the quietness in the silence when you're thinking of a deity of some kind, it's all your Self, it's all my self they're all one. It's all one person, one being. This brings happiness and joy and bliss. For those of you who have not tried this yet, try it, do it, see what happens. Next case.

Q: How is the act of suicide regarded on this path? Since it takes place in maya would there be spiritual consequences?

A: Suicide of course is a waste of time. Unless you want to commit suicide and carry on again, and bring back the body again. Now this is not altogether true. It depends on the individual. It depends on many factors. It is true it is all maya. Who commits suicide, who dies, who doesn't die but unless you believe that first and you have a consciousness of that committing suicide will mean you just take birth again, faster. And you begin where you left off. But if you have a high consciousness then committing suicide doesn't affect you whatsoever. But then again if you had a high consciousness why would you commit suicide? There would be nobody to commit suicide because you already don't exist to begin with. So it's an individual proposition. A person who feels that they're in extreme pain and suicide is the only way out, this is okay. There really is nothing wrong with this. It's neither good nor bad. It may give you a rest but you'll have to come back again only because of the fact that you haven't been enlightened in this life. But then again there is some people who only come here for a short period of time to work out certain karmic qualities. Sometimes they get hit by a bus or they get shot or they commit suicide or something happens which ends their karma forever. Their karma is finished.

What I'm trying to say is every case is different. Every person is different. There isn't one standard law that says, "This is right and this is wrong." Every being is different. The only points to remember is if you're not enlightened you have to continue the process. If you were enlightened you wouldn't care at all about suicide or no suicide it doesn't exist for you. You would be beyond that. Therefore ponder these things. Ask yourself, "Can suicide really help me? Is this the answer? Will this free me?" Perhaps it will, perhaps it wouldn't. It's all an individual case an individual proposition. Everyone came to this earth for their own karma so-to-speak. So what's advisable for one person is not advisable for another person. That's why if you all want to commit suicide I'll get out the Kool Aid. (laughter) I have the fresh batch in the refrigerator. It's all an individual proposition.

If anybody is thinking of something like this see me personally and we'll discuss it. Next case.

Q: Some people say buddhism has become too cerebral and lost its soul. Comment please.

A: Buddhism like christianity, like judaism have become very commercial. But yet there are real mystical christians around. There are mystical buddhists around. There are mystical teachings, mystical teachers. The commercial buddhism has lost its soul, this is true. For many people go to buddhist churches, buddhist temples in order to acquire wealth, to acquire health acquire all kinds of material objects. Yet real buddhism is not like this. Real buddhism is sacred. You should question yourself and ask yourself, "Why do I think it's become so secular? It's unrealistic, perhaps I have become that way? So I am attracted to those buddhists that are not sincere, who are false themselves. Where do I belong," you say. "What teaching should I follow. Whom shall I follow?" Ask yourself. All the answers are within you. Next.

Q: Robert if we are one why does the universe appear with so many forms, entities, etc.

A: To whom does the universe appear this way? To the ego, to the mind. We are one beyond the ego, beyond the mind, beyond the appearance. Since you believe that you are a human being you cannot see the total freedom, you see the diversity. You see the many, you see duality because you are a human being. You have not been developed yet. You have not been completely cooked yet. Therefore there is diversity. But take a dream. In the dream, there is diversity, many things happen in your dream but then you wake up and you realize the whole dream of diversity was in the one, you. You were the one dreaming the dream. The whole dream was filled with people, places and things that seem so real to you until you woke up and it all came out of you. You're the one. So it is with this life.

This life is exactly the same way. You see the many. You see diversity everywhere you look. But yet most of you refuse to accept the fact that this is a dream. That is why I see this way. When you accept the fact it's a dream you dive deep within yourself then you will become free of this dream also. So dive deep within yourself, make it happen. Know the truth and the truth will make you free.

Q: Can a self-realized person still have negative thoughts and do negative actions?

A: A self-realized person will appear to many people to be different things. It depends on the mission of the teacher. Sometimes the teacher has to do certain things in this world as in the form of a teaching that may appear to be evil and wrong to many people. This is the reason it is written, "Judge not that ye not be judged." It is not for us to judge all of these teachers and all of these people. ??? to do something like this. We have to learn to leave everybody alone. First know who you are then see if a self-realized being does negative things or causes problems in this world. If you do not understand a person, a teacher or anybody else why you do things in this world, how you do things do not come to any conclusions. Say to yourself, "When I become self-realized I will know the truth." Work on yourself diligently to awaken then you'll understand what is going on.

Therefore there is no real answer to a question like this at this time. For there are teachers who do many negative things in this world. So-called high teachers, high places of thousands of followers yet they appear to be doing negative things. So again this is not our business. We have not come here to judge anybody. We have come here to be totally and completely free. When we become free we will see everybody else is also free and realize it's all a dream. Again work on yourself, dive deep within yourself until you get such thoughts out of your mind. Who is good and who is bad, who is right and who is wrong. Those questions do not belong in a person practicing sadhana. Drop it all, leave it all alone. Live your life to the fullest. See what you are and change your ways but judge nobody else.

Q: You have suggested that we adore the Self. How can we adore something we can't even comprehend? Assuming that you are not referring to the personal self or I-thought.

A: When people first start practicing Advaita Vedanta they begin to understand that they are the Self just the way they are. It's paradoxical but you have no body, you are not the body. You are the pure unblemished Self. Pure consciousness absolute reality. This is you just the way you are right now. In this moment. That's the catch. You are like that in the moment. Like right now this is you because you're not thinking. Sitting here quietly, peaceful, without thoughts then you are the unblemished Self. The ultimate reality, this is you right now. As soon as you start thinking about it, it goes away, it changes, it's not you any longer, it's your humanhood. So when I say to adore your Self I am referring to adoring yourself as God, as the ultimate reality which is really you. But if you think of yourself as a human being with problems who makes mistakes you cannot adore yourself at all. You condemn yourself you put yourself down.

When you go home this evening practice this in front of a mirror. Put your arms around yourself and say, "I adore you, I adore you, I adore you." You will notice if you think your self as a human being you will not be able to do this at all. Something in you will prevent you from doing this because you're seeing yourself as a human being with mistakes with all kinds of nonsense you've gone through in this life. But if you're able to drop it for a few moments when you say to your Self, "I adore you, I adore you, I adore you," you will see in the mirror light coming out of yourself, bright light and then you'll love yourself all over. That is who you love, the light. You are the light of the world. That is your Self. Adore that Self.

Q: Please explain specific differences between love and attachment. Thank you.

A: Attachment is something you hold onto for your own sake. Because you believe if you don't have the thing you're attached to you'll have problems. You can't live without a certain person, a certain thing. Therefore you're totally attached to person, place or thing yet in your sick mind you call this love. You think this is love. Love is absolute freedom without any attachment whatsoever. Love gives it never takes. Love is letting everything alone, not judging anybody or anything. Allowing it to unfold in its own inimitable way, this is love. Attachment is when you're thinking of your ego. So you make all kinds of rules and regulations in your life with people, how they must behave to you with objects, things. How they must be possessed by you and you call this love. In other words you love somebody or something because he or she or the something is doing whatever you want them to do. It's pleasing you the way you want to be pleased. So you love that person or place or thing. It's giving you happiness.

For instance when you buy a new car. You love that car with all your heart. You show everybody your car. You talk about your car how beautiful it drives, nice seats, the wooden panel you've got inside. But as soon as the car crashes you've changed your mind. You have a broken car now, the car has been mashed, to pieces. Therefore you no longer love the car the same way as you did before. As a matter of fact you're thinking of trading in the car for a new one. For the car has become old. It's no longer beautiful as it was.

You do the same with people. When we love someone we say that we love them terribly when we first meet them. Then as time passes and we get older we wish to trade them in for a new model. This was never love it was attachment. Therefore love is letting go and loving for its own sake. Attachment is never letting go and loving because it satisfies you, gives you something. If the something stops the love stops. That's the difference.

Q: We seek the Self, at your stage of development what is the next unfolding direction? What is the next step in evolution for you? What is the next step after self-realization?

A: For whom is there a step? For the ajnani. For the Jnani there is no step. There is nothing. There is no place to go. There is nothing to unfold into anymore it's all gone. It's all finished. It's only when there is an ego or a mind left inside that there is the next step. If everything has been cleaned out completely, totally, the garbage pail has been emptied totally, completely where are the steps? There are no steps. There is nothing left. There are those who believe many different things about this teaching. This is if you follow Sri Arbinda who says the human body can be perfected into a God and its unfoldment is continuous, it never ends. Its unfoldment goes onward and onward and onward. The body becomes the atman. The body becomes spiritualized but there is always a body involved.

But it has been my experience personally that there is no body to involve. There is nothing to achieve. There is no place to go. There is only ultimate oneness. Effortless choice-less pure awareness this is beyond description, beyond finite understanding, beyond thoughts and words. So it is only the ajnani who unfolds in the different stages of consciousness. For the Jnani there are no stages of consciousness left, all is done, all is finished there is total freedom.

Q: Isn't it true that for grace to come and give self-realization that we have to deserve it?

A: Well the first one is, no you don't have to deserve it. Perhaps you earned it in a different life. Some where along the line you have done something to deserve grace and then it hits you in this life. In my own experience when I was fourteen years old, I never was studying spiritual literature I was a wild kid running around the place causing mischief as kids do. Yet this experience came upon me. I can't say I was picked out specifically for this. And this is the same experience Ramana Maharshi had, Nisargadatta Maharaj, Shankara and many others. So in this life you do not have to deserve grace it will just happen to you if it's meant to happen. Being at satsang is a special grace. You would not be attracted to a satsang if you didn't have any grace within you. Some sort of grace. Because you come here this is grace already being bestowed upon you. And then you just have to let the grace unfold, to a deeper level and become totally and absolutely free.

Q: As long as I have some occasional anger or impatience or arrogance or lack, unconditional love toward others here and there doesn't that stop my deserving of the grace of self-realization?

A: Well I hate to say this but the answer is no. This doesn't mean that you have license to go out and be mean or have the qualities that Mary just read. Because if you do all you're doing is accruing more karma to yourself. This is a mistake many people make. When they read in high spiritual books so they accept an answer that I say that it doesn't matter what you do that the grace will come anyway if it's supposed to come. Right away their evil mind starts to think. Oh I can go rob a bank, I can go beat on people, I can do all kinds of things it doesn't matter? But it does matter. For again you will accrue negative karma to you which you will have to overcome sooner or later. This is why the whole teaching is very paradoxical. In the same instance the grace will come if it's supposed to come. It has nothing to do with what you do in this world. Yet at the same time this world is a karmic world and what you do to others will come back to you. The saying, "What goes around, comes around is true." There are a very few who achieve grace and have these qualities but it does happen.

So again I tell you do not use this as license to be mean to people, to be arrogant saying, "It doesn't matter," because it does matter. It matters a great deal. You do these to develop loving kindness, peace, compassion, joy and let everything unfold the way it's supposed to.

Q: Don't I have to be a near saint in my thoughts, words and actions before the Self will manifest itself?

A: We just answered that again. No, you don't but in most cases you do. So you figure it out. (laughter)

Q: You talk about a dark room having a light switch turned on and light eliminating the darkness. But for self-realization can the person be really dark (and it's underlined) or shouldn't he or she be practically pure in that word...thought, word and action. Thank you for your reply.

A: Again, your duty is to rid yourself of dark habits. Develop loving kindness, compassion toward people, place and thing. Act as if grace doesn't exist. You should act to people like you would want people to act toward you, there is no question about this. What you give out has to return to you ten fold.

But then again what I mentioned to you before, illumination has nothing to do with this world whatsoever. Illumination is something that has to do with itself not to this world. So you can't be illumined if you are an evil person but this is very few and in between this happens to. So the answer is, do unto others as you would have them do unto you. Act as if what you are going to do to someone else is going to come right back to you and if you live this way you will know what to do and everything will take care of itself. We're all finished.

JUST BE

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om. Peace.

Good evening. Welcome. I welcome you with all my heart. Most people are home watching the presidential debates. We ought to have Jnani debates. We have all the Jnanis in the world show up. Whoever shows up loses of course.

If only people understood the first principle of self-realization, which is simply this: Whatever is destined to happen, is going to happen, no matter how you try to stop it. And whatever is destined not to happen, will never happen, no matter how much you try to make it happen. Wouldn't it be wonderful if the politicians understood this truth. There would be absolutely nothing to worry about, nothing to fear, nothing to conquer, nothing to win, nothing to lose. Everything is unfolding the way it should. Everything is in its right place. There are no mistakes. Everything is lovely and beautiful, just the way it is.

If you can only understand this in your own personal life. What you're supposed to go through, in this experience, in this incarnation, has been already planned for you before you came into this body. Yet you have absolutely nothing to do with it, because you are not the body. But as long as you think you are a body, you think you're somebody, somebody important, or you think you are a failure, whatever you think about yourself, if you would only turn within, and see the one self, then you would never worry about what is going to happen to you at all, for you would realize, there's no you for anything to happen to.

You are total freedom right now, total liberation, complete awareness. Yet, you do not believe me. You still feel inclined to be a body, a doer. Think of the experiences you went through today, and see if you do not believe that you're a doer. How many times did you become angry today? How many times did you feel slighted today? How many times did you feel fear, or something is wrong somewhere, or you're not in your right place? This shows you that you believe that you are a body. And as long as you believe that you are a body, why not just let go and stop fretting and worrying about your body.

The power that knows the way will take care of you. The one who makes the sun shine, the grass grow, the apples grow perfectly on apple trees, the food that sustains us, nourishes us. Everything has been lovingly provided for us. Have faith, trust the power that knows the way.

This is the first step, to have total faith and total trust in the infinite, the one. You may call this God, if you want to. Makes no difference what you call it. It is within you. It is without you. It is everywhere. All you have to do is to surrender to it. Surrender all of your doubts, your frustrations, your fears, everything that has besieged you for so long. Give it all up. It doesn't belong to you. Be free of it.

When you're able to do this, you can go further, and understand that there never was a body to begin with. The world, as it appears, does not exist. The universe, as it appears does not exist. Yet you are, and you will always be. What are you and what will you always be? Silence. There is no answer for that, for the mind can never comprehend the unknown, the transcendental, the Self. The mind can never know these things. The mind only knows itself as a body, as a doer. Therefore you have to transcend the mind, transcend the thoughts, transcend the world, transcend the universe, and enter the silence, where there is total bliss, and peace and harmony.

Actually the only freedom you have is not to react to conditions and to turn within, to see the truth. Everything else is preordained. Whatever appears in your life is destined to be. It is your reaction to what appears that matters to you, what's going to happen to you next. It's your reaction to life's experiences that comes to you, which determines what is going to happen to you next, by the way you respond to it, by the way you react to it.

Do not be in conflict with your thoughts and the self. When there is no conflict there are no thoughts. Thoughts only appear because there's conflict. By conflict I mean, you're worrying about getting rid of your thoughts, you're doing sadhana, meditation, pranayamas, japa. All of these things cause conflict. For aren't you saying, "I'm doing these things to become liberated. I'm doing these things to become free." The reason there's a the conflict is because you're already free and liberated. Therefore when you give yourself the information that you have to do something to become liberated, there is immediately conflict.

This is the only problem you have. It is your conflict. And this conflict comes from programming when you were a child, from samskaras, from previous existence, things that you took with you, the habits that are inside of you, that you believe you are. This is where the conflict comes from. For it tells you, "I'm just a human being, I'm just a frail body. I have to suffer sometimes, sometimes I have to be happy." This is all a lie. There never was a you that has to suffer. There never was a you that has to be happy.

There is no one in you who needs to be happy. There is no one in you who needs to be miserable. They are both impostors. So every time you try to exchange negative conditioning to positive conditioning, you're causing conflict. This is the reason psychology and psychiatry does not work. For they're trying to make you normal. Who wants to be normal? How boring.

The truth is do not wish to be anything. There is nothing you wish to be. There is nothing you have to become. There is no future, for you to become anything. Right this moment you are the one, and there never was another. Right this moment you are totally free, without thinking a thought, without trying to make anything happen.

Why not awaken to this truth? Why not awaken to the fact that there is nothing that you have to become, there are no goals to accomplish. You want to believe everything is preordained, and it's been mapped out for you. Or you believe that you're just a victim of circumstance, going through many experiences, to learn a lesson. It's really funny to me when people tell me, "Something happened in my life, but I guess that's the lesson that I have to learn," or, "That's my karma." Forget about karma.

Forget about lessons you have to learn. No one has to learn any lessons. No one has to go through their karmic experiences. Put an end to it all. Drop it all. After all, for whom is there karma? For whom are there experiences? Only for the I-thought, for the mind, not for you. You are bright and shining. You are the absolute reality, Brahman.

Yet even those words are superfluous, redundant. For what do these words actually mean to you, absolute reality, Brahman? They're just names that are given to the absolute reality, to the Self. Yet everything has to go. The absolute reality has to go. The Self has to go. The reason it has to go is because you're thinking about this with your finite mind, and every answer you come up with is erroneous. Always remember the finite mind can never know the infinite. It's impossible. And there's absolutely nothing you can do about it. Consequently the wise person becomes silent, quiescent. You're not even trying to change your thoughts or stop your thoughts. For how can you try to stop something or change something that never existed to begin with.

Can you see now why you're in conflict? You're trying to correct something, you're trying to become something, you're trying to do something, and something does not exist. Also what you're trying to correct does not exist. What you're trying to change does not exist. You get nowhere. This is why I tell you so often: leave everything alone. Have no opinions for or against. Do not be judgmental. Be nothing and you'll be everything.

Why do most of you come to satsang? As long as you have a reason it's the wrong reason. There should be no reason. There shouldn't be any valid reason why you come to satsang. For if you think back on what I've been referring to, you will see every reason is erroneous. For the reason that you're trying to come to satsang doesn't exist at all. You say you come to satsang to become enlightened, to know the truth. Who has to know the truth? Who has to become enlightened?

You come to sit with me. You can always sit with me, wherever you are. What I'm trying to tell you, do not look for reasons why you do something. When you start giving up all reasoning, all ambition, when you start surrendering all of your so called power, your human power that you think you have, this is when the mind begins to slow down. The mind will never slow down by trying to make it slow down. I don't care what method you use. When you are using Vipassana meditation, when you're using breathing, whatever method you're using... Whatever method you're using, you're using your mind. It is your mind that you're still using. That's why you can never get anywhere.

You must use your mind, no matter what you do. Therefore stop doing anything. I know many of you have been practicing sadhana for 25 years, 40 years, practicing many forms of meditation, going to teachers, reading many books. And what becomes of you? You may get a good feeling, then it goes away, and you're back where you started from.

The only thing that you should do, or must do, is not to be in conflict with anything. Do not be in conflict with anyone or anything. When you're not in conflict with anything, the mind begins to surrender itself, and goes back into the heart, and you become your Self. This is the easiest thing that you ever had to do. It's simplicity itself. It's simplicity itself because there's nothing you have to do. There's nothing you have to become. There's no one you have to change. You are that.

Do not analyze what I am saying. Do not even agree with what I'm saying. Just be open. Open your heart by remaining still, silent. Allow the thoughts to come, do try not to stop them. Do not judge your thoughts, analyze your thoughts, or try to change your thoughts, or try to remove your thoughts. This will put you back in conflict with your thoughts. Do not even observe your thoughts. Do not even be the witness to your thoughts. Why? Because in reality there are no thoughts. The thoughts that you think you're thinking, are an optical illusion. It is false imagination. Don't you see? Everything that you're thinking about is false. There is no thinker and there are no thoughts. So why have you been practicing all these exercises all of your life? It's like a person in the ocean going in search for water. Awaken. Be free. Be yourself.

You are the joy of the world, the light that shines in darkness. You are a blessing to the universe. Love yourself always. When you love yourself, you love God. Forget about the past. Never dwell on the past. Remember, time and space does not exist. If time and space does not exist, then there cannot be a past or a future, for the past and the future is about space and time. If there is no time and space, there cannot possibly be a past or a future. So who thinks about the past? Who thinks about the future? Even to say the I does, the I-thought does, this again is mostly for beginners. Self-inquiry is very important, don't get me wrong. But the day has to come when you go beyond self-inquiry, when you just realize and understand that there is no I-thought at all. It never existed. Therefore you do not have to get rid of it. There is nothing to get rid of, because nothing exists. You are total freedom, right this instant, right this minute.

Whenever your thoughts dwell on the past, do not become angry with yourself. Leave them alone. Do not observe them. Do not watch them. Do not be the witness to them. Just leave them alone. They will disappear of their own volition, due to the fact that they never existed. This is an important point. This is the reason why you leave everything alone. Now if things existed, if there was such a thing as negative thinking, karma to get rid of, then you'd have a job on your hands. You'd have to do all sorts of things to get rid of your karma, your past sins. You'd be working continuously, practicing all kinds of japa, mantras, everything, to remove all of these thoughts of the past. But I say to you since these things never existed to begin with, why do any work at all? Oh, it's okay, if you like to work, but I'm very lazy myself, and the less work I have to do, the better.

I know it's difficult for some of you to think that you have to do absolutely nothing to become free, because you're already free. For you've been brought up that you have to work, work, work to get ahead. Why do you want to get ahead? Ahead to what? To whom? Everything must change sooner or later. Everything must dissolve and return to the elements from whence they came. And new forms are always being born, so-to-speak. So what kind of goals are you trying to achieve? Your goals will vanish, like everything else vanishes, sooner or later.

Think how many civilizations we've had on this planet. Many civilizations and they've also passed us where we are today. But where are they now? They're gone. Dissolved into the nothingness from whence they came. So it is folly to try to improve yourself, or to try to achieve anything. It is folly to try to change something or to become something. Just be. You may ask, "How do I just be?" By asking, you're not being. To just be is to just be. Not to be this or to be that, or to try to discover how to just be. Just be, without trying to understand what that means, without analyzing, without pondering. Just be. Just be. Just be. Just be.

(silence as Robert continues)

Om shanti shanti shanti shanti. Feel free to ask questions or to make statements.

SL: You say, "Why don't we just wake up, just wake up" Why don't you ??? By trying to get the others to think that they are enlightened beings and wonder why they don't wake up...

R: Do not concern yourself with others. (SL: I know but sometimes it's easier to see ourselves because we're all doing that right?) You always see yourself. That is all you can see. (SL: Pardon me?) You will always see yourself...

SL: Yes, in others, that's right. So when we look at others we see ourselves? (R: Yes.) But when I look at the others and wonder, as I'm wondering about myself, if I can see why they don't wake up perhaps then I can see why I don't wake up.

R: No. (SL: No?) Don't worry about them. (SL: I'm not worried about them.) They are an extension of you. (SL: I know that that's why I'm...) So what don't you know? (SL: ...does anyone else understand what I mean?) I know what you mean, you're trying to look at others to see how you are. (SL: Yeah.) But that is the wrong way of thinking, the wrong way of doing things. Leave everything alone and leave yourself alone. When you think about waking up or waking somebody else up that is the worst conclusion you come to. For nobody needs to really wake up. What you have to do is just be yourself and you will wake up, you will awaken to yourself by doing absolutely nothing. By not judging yourself or judging others or looking at others and seeing how others are so you will see how you are. Forget all about that. (SL: Well, it's easy to understand when you say that we are already awakened we just don't realize it. What is it that keeps us from realizing it?) Nothing, why do you think there is something that is keeping you from realizing? That thought is keeping you from realizing, that belief, that something is keeping you from realizing, that's keeping you from realizing. Just remove that thought and you're realized.

SL: Every time I think about that there is something that is missing is when I come here. Everything seems fine (R: Yes.) and then I come here and I think when you say, "Just wake up." And I think, "Something to do, just to wake up." I must be missing something?

R: Why do you think that at all? Don't believe me. (laughter) Don't believe a word I say. Just be yourself, you're already awake. Leave yourself alone. Do absolutely nothing with yourself. And you will be who you are.

ST: Robert, if you gave me a copy of this tape. I play it everyday after I go home... (R: Say that again Howard.) If we get a copy of this tape. And we play it everyday, listen to it everyday, will that be helpful?

R: If you listen to the tape everyday it will put you in a higher state of consciousness. But to really awaken to yourself, you have to forget about tapes, forget about lessons, forget about everything and forget yourself. Then you will be free. So the tapes and transcripts help you do that, to an extent. They help you to realize that you do not have to do that at all. (ST: tape unclear plane noise in background) Excuse me? (ST: This kind of message is profound.) Why do you want to be profound? (ST: No I said, this path, what you say...) What did I say? Forget about all of that.

S: Robert, there are teachers who will acknowledge that we're already enlightened and feel that what happens is that from their criticism is that people develop a conceit that since they feel that they are already enlightened and they don't have to do anything. But they are actually enlightened and therefore it's necessary for people to go through this great ordeal of sadhana, immense amount of discipline for many years with great intensity in order to make that actually so. It's simple fact that they already are enlightened, actually so. I just think this is a point of view of some teachers that this is something that doesn't come easy.

R: Why are you concerned with the point of view of others? Why are you concerned with what teachers think or what teachers do. Turn to yourself. What do you think? What do you believe? What do you do? That is all that counts. There are many teachers who teach all kinds of things in this world. Forget about all the teachers. You are the one. Turn to yourself. The truth is within you, you are the truth. You are the whole truth but nothing but the truth. Leave the teachers alone. Let them teach what they will, let them say what they will. Turn to yourself. And you will be free. Because you're already free.

SR: Robert I'm going to back up John again on that. (R: Come on.) And what I'm going to ask you is, I'm going to give you credit since being a Jnani I'm going to give you a credit. (laughter) What the hell you know something I don't know.

R: Thanks Jorge, thanks. (laughter) (SR: I'm going to assume that you know all about your prior lives - which don't exist - but you know about them. And I'm going to ask you to help John out here, how many prior lives did you spend in sadhana.) Why do you want me to tell you about prior lives? (SR: I want you to come into my dimension and answer that question.) (laughter) How can I come into that dimension? (SR: Well stick one foot in and get in there and...) (laughter) That dimension that you are referring to does not even exist. (Students laugh again) So how can I come into it? (SR: I'm trying to be polite but really I feel like you're telling a fib.) True, I am telling a fib. The fib that you're a body in this dimension, your other lives, that is a fib. In truth there is no lives, there is no dimensions, there is nothing. And you are that nothing. (SR: How many prior lives did you have on sadhana.) Why do you want to know about prior lives? (SR: To help to understand what John is asking.) But I would be telling him a lie if I told him about prior lives. That is the fib.

SL: But you told us not to believe in anything you say anyway so come on tell us what we want to hear... (SR: Yeah, yeah make it up...) (laughter)

R: What can I possibly say? (SR: Just be creative.) (laughs) I know you like your stories but I have no stories to tell you. I have always existed and I will always exist, just like you. There is only one of us and the one appears as many. (SR: How many times were you incarnated somehow in connection with some physical body and doing sadhana?) It's as if you're in a darkroom and everything appears very dark and you trip over the furniture and then you find the light switch and the light comes on and you're in the light. When you're in the light you forget about the darkness. The darkness never existed.

And so it is with past lives. When you believe you're a human being then you believe in past lives and karma, reincarnation and all that stuff. But if you know that you are not a human being and that you never were a human being and you will never be a human being then for whom is there past lives? (SR: Is it like your memory faded?) There is no memory. (SR: Yeah it faded right?) There never was a memory to fade.

SL: But you remember what you did last week.

R: I remember what I did last week but that goes too, everything goes. (SL: If that was an illusion, so if this is an illusion can't you remember that illusion.) Everything that happens, happens simultaneously, happens now. So what I remember last week is like what I'm remembering now. It's the same thing. There is no past there is no future. Everything is happening in the moment. When I remember something from last year or last week, for me it's in this moment, this moment. (SR: Thank you.)

SK: *Robert I really got a lot out of what you said tonight, it was really good. Being the ego at a real gut level. Although what I'm sensing is, what you said already I'm sort of saying it to hear myself say it, I guess. That there's really nothing, there is nothing. There is nothing but silence. There is no past, there is no future, there is only now and there is only silence. And nothing really exists, there is no matter, there is really, there is nothing, what you say, letting go of everything. I mean that is really a mind blowing idea which is letting go of everything I know, my complete past, which there is no past, I just feel it is really coming down to the present and I feel like I see something or a no-thing? It seems so obvious. (R: That's good.) It's freeing and it's scary and it's freeing at the same time. Nothing that I can do about it but I see a ??? (R: You're becoming a good for nothing, congratulations!) But it feels good. It's like a great relief. There is nothing I have to do. There is really nothing I have to do. And that is a relief. There is nothing I have to look for or to find or become. It's not affected.)*

SG: Robert not that I'm exactly reiterate the same point but to come at it from a slightly different angle. I think for me at least what it is, is this subtle concern that, it's like the tortoise and the hare, that here I am as the hare thinking okay, I don't have to go through all these disciplines and I am already enlightened. And yet there is this other fellow back there that's doing all these practices and working very diligently, never stopping doing all these incredible things through sadhana. And I'm just kicking back and I'm already enlightened. Yet when it's all said and done, maybe he is the one that is going to come in...??? when you're lagging back there when the bottom line it's all written here. That the ultimate conceit of the professional seeker is this, that they've already got it, but they don't have to do anything to consider. And yet also understanding your point, I have to agree with the others, you surpassed yourself tonight, this was an incredible talk. But I'm just trying to get beyond this one little point of concern, why let it all go like you're saying but it really won't happen for me.

R: You are not to think that you're already enlightened. This very thought keeps you from being enlightened. Do not believe that you have to be enlightened or that you're already enlightened, let go of all of those things, those qualities. Of being enlightened or trying to be enlightened. They're both erroneous. You see there is no one to try to be enlightened. And there is no one who is enlightened. Both are impostors. That is what I mean when I say, "Just be." You're trying to become enlightened or you think you're enlightened.

When a person is awake, when a person is aware, when a person is liberated, they really cannot say, "I've been liberated." Because the I has disappeared. The I that says, "I am liberated does not exist." There is no longer such a thing at all, doesn't exist at all never did exist. Who is to say, "I am liberated?" Only the ego can say that. So there's silence. Therefore do not look at anybody else, what they're doing. And don't look at your thoughts that tells you you're liberated or not liberated, that you have to work for it or you don't have to work for it. Leave everything alone. Drop everything. Leave your thoughts alone. Do not try to make your thoughts believe anything. Stop thinking and be yourself. When someone tells me, "Robert you're enlightened so it's easy for you." I look at them real funny. I don't know what they're talking about. What's enlightened? Who is enlightened? What does that mean? There is no such thing. Those are just printed words in books. Forget all that. Do not attempt to become anything.

Mary would you like to read the Jnani? (SM: Yes sure.)

R: Thank you Mary. (SM: Thank you Robert.)

R: Do we have any announcements? (SM: No.) No announcements hey? (SM: No.) We have some interesting prashad.

(general prashad talk)

R: Remember to love yourself, to pray to yourself, to bow to yourself, to worship yourself. For God dwells in you as you. Om shanti peace.

Enjoy your prashad, be happy...

IS THE WORLD FALSE?

18th October, 1992

Robert: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace.

Good afternoon. (S: Good afternoon, Robert.) I welcome you with all my heart. All of my heart not a piece of it. It is good to see you once again.

As most of you know I receive many phone calls. One of the questions I'm frequently asked is about the world. People can't understand when I say the world is false. We'll discuss this for a little bit.

The world as it appears is false but the world as Brahman, as the absolute reality is real. What does this mean? It means that if you just look at the world as a world it has no substance, no validity. It changes continuously, it's never the same. It has no substratum, no foundation. How can anything that keeps changing, changing, changing, be real? But when one understands Brahman, which means absolute reality, Brahman is the substratum, the foundation. And the images of the world appear on Brahman. So we say Brahman is the world. If you look at it that way then the world is real.

As an example. If you go to a movie and there is no screen and there is no screen. The projectionist shows the movie with no screen. What would you get? Total distorted images, chaos, confusion. You will not be able to understand anything you see. But when somebody puts the screen up and the images go on the screen you forget all about the screen where the images are now filling up the screen and clarity and you believe the images are real. Yet if you get up and try to grab the image you'll grab the screen. Brahman is the screen. All-pervading Brahman the absolute reality is the screen. It is invisible to most of us we can't see it.

All of the images that you do see are only here because the screen is here. But like the images that have taken over the screen totally and completely the average person is enmeshed in the materiality, the relative world and can only believe and see the relative world. The Jnani, the Sage, the person who has tasted a bit of enlightenment knows and understands that everything is Brahman. Everything is the absolute reality.

And when they say, "Well if I grab someone or if I grab you I'm actually holding onto someone whereas in the movie if you grab the screen you know that the images are on the screen. But yet when I grab someone I still grab them I do not grab the screen or Brahman?" This is what you say. This is what you see. This is because in the delusion you think you're grabbing something or somebody, you're doing some work or you're the doer or you believe you are the body and you believe that this is real for you. It's like a dream.

In the dream you grab somebody also. But you can't say the dream is real because you wake up and you see the dream is not real.

Therefore all is Brahman. This is why it is written in scripture that the ground upon which I stand is holy ground. Because everything is Brahman, everything is God. Everything is the absolute reality.

Now scientifically how do we prove this?

We know that if we take anything on this earth, anything in this world, take the radio for instance. And we put it under an electronic microscope we will see molecules. Molecules floating in space. Space is the glue that holds the world together. It holds all the whole universe together or you can say the space is absolute reality, Brahman, pure awareness.

Again if we take an atomic microscope and we put molecules in an atomic microscope we will see atoms. It takes millions of atoms to make a molecule. So you can imagine how small an atom is. Yet the atoms will be floating in space also. There will be space between the atoms which is equivalent of the space between the planets. When you look at the world you see the images. You don't look at the space you forget about the space. The space is the screen. The space is Brahman. The space is the absolute reality. But we've been bound by our body to look at the image. We're interested in the image. The tree, the mountain, the person. We do not understand that it's been held in space. Like the planet it's floating in space like the atom.

Nothing is as it appears to be. Nothing is as it appears to be. Everything is totally different from what you can believe or see or imagine, it's all different. If you think of yourself as composed of trillions and trillions of atoms you will see that you are in a state of flux. Nothing is solid. Nothing appears as it appears to be.

And here is another illustration of this. I'll tell you a story about it: A lady is praying to God for quite a while and she says, "Oh God, you are so huge and I am so little do you see things like I do? I bet you see things differently from the way I do." And God says, "Yes my daughter I see everything different from what you see." So the lady asks God, "How does a hundred thousand years seem to you?" And God says, "My daughter a hundred thousand years seem like a second to me." The girl says, "Wow, far out! How does ten million dollars my appear to you God?" And God says, "Ten million dollars my daughter appears to me like ten cents." The lady thinks about this and she says, "God can you loan me a dime?" And God says, "Yes my daughter in a second." (students laugh)

When you believe that the world is real, when you believe that things are real, your body is real you have to have problems and you have to suffer. You have to. Simply because everything changes continuously. So you suffer because you're not holding on to what you want. Things come and go. Change is the only reality of this world. So the person who has been kicked around by life a while will see this world as a threat begins to consider there must be something else and starts to search for the truth. Unfortunately most people who have things going good for them, who have things going their way because of karmic experiences do not care to pursue spiritual life. Not everyone but most people. It appears when you have troubles that you start to search for spiritual life. This has always been true. Yet everyone will go through problems as long as they believe that they're a body, they have to. You may be enjoying life when a catastrophe hits you. You may get hit by a car, hit by a train, hit by a flying saucer, anything may happen to you. Then you'll become totally disillusioned you will not know what to think.

This is the reason why the smart person, the wise person begins to pursue spiritual life even when things are going well. They do not wait until something goes wrong. They start to feel that life is more meaningful than they can ever imagine and when they start to search within themselves. All the answers are within themselves. Not without, not in the world for remember the world is not real as it appears. So when you search for something in the world it'll fool you. You want to search for reality. How do we do this? How to search for reality?

We begin to search for reality by keeping quiet. By becoming still. By quieting the mind. By making our life simple. By not getting involved in too many things in this world. We begin to slow down our activities. So we have more time to be with ourselves. We look for moments of solitude. When the TV isn't playing, when the radio isn't playing, when the phone is not ringing, we're not talking to friends or neighbors you enjoy those moments more and more and more and you find happiness in those moments. Real happiness. Happiness that comes from within, from reality. Not the happiness that is fleeting that is here today and gone tomorrow. But true happiness, it is everlasting. Unalloyed happiness which never changes.

Because we can begin to search for these things something in us, you can call it God's grace may lead you to the right book or to the right teacher or to the right environment where we will be able to go further. Where we get to the point where nothing can disturb us any longer. Whether there is conflict in the family, problems at work, cataclysms in the world, we no longer react to these things. We just watch and we leave them alone.

You acquire a feeling of invincibility you're invincible. A feeling of being alive forever and ever and nothing can ever hurt you or destroy you. You've always been, you'll always be. You sort of feel this. And from then on you're always happy and peaceful and nothing can ever bother you again. You have done this to yourself. Nobody can do it for you.

I have summarized the whole thing for you but actually you go through many experiences before you get to that state. You go through many doubts apprehensions, suspicions. Many times in spiritual life you want to chuck the whole thing out, you want to throw it away. You feel it's not working for you. You think it's a lie it doesn't exist there is no spiritual life, everyone's gone through this stage. It's called the dark night of the soul. When you feel like committing suicide. You feel so terrible. All the dark forces attack you from all directions. And you want to chuck it all out, throw it all away, forget about it. But as you hold on to something within in reality, a spark of light the darkness will ultimately leave you and again you will find peace. Again you will find harmony. And again something may happen to you. You may develop cancer, AIDS. You may have to go into bankruptcy. So again you say to yourself, "If this is what spiritual life is all about I don't want it at all. I don't need this." You say this because you do not know what is happening.

In order for you to grow and become your real self all of the stuff that has been inside of you has to be totally transcended. All the stuff that is in us and we have a lot of stuff in us. There is stuff completely to the top. There is stuff of images, beliefs, concepts, dogma, fears, doubts, suspicions this is our stuffing. In order to empty yourself it may appear that you're getting worse. The fears multiply themselves. The doubts become more terrible than they've ever been before. This is the change that is coming into your life.

In other words if you want self-realization you've got to get rid of everything. Everything that you've been holding onto. Everything that you've been holding onto, everything. I mean give it up mentally. If things happen physically you just don't react to it. But mentally you give up all the stuff that has been bothering you for all these years. You surrender everything to God. Empty yourself out completely, totally. Again you do this by not reacting to anything. Not allowing the world to get to you, show you anything. You keep holding on and holding on. Holding on to nothing. BEcoming nothing more and more. No longer worrying.

Then all of a sudden you see a light inside of you. The light brings you untold happiness and peace. The light grows steadily. The lights in your heart. The light of a thousand suns. To give everything up to this light. You're no longer afraid. You are free.

Many of you can feel this freedom now. How wonderful it feels. Another name for this freedom is stillness, quietness, silence. As long as the mind is active and you're thinking and thinking you can never understand the deep silence of freedom. But you learn not to think. Not to analyze anything or to figure anything out. You are perfect just the way you are. You are no longer alone. You begin to feel the whole universe emanating out of you. Creation emanates out of your mind. All the creation that you see comes out of your self. You have discovered that you are the creator. You are the self, the absolute reality, nirvana, the absolute oneness. Nothing else can exist for you.

All is well. There are no mistakes. The world is Brahman and has always been your self. You are that!

There never was a world and you. The universe the world is inside of you. You are all-pervading, absolute reality, everywhere present. You are I-am. I-am-that-I-am.

Let us practice the I-am meditation. Close your eyes and focus your attention on your breath. Become aware of your respiration. Become the witness to your breath. Breathe naturally and normally. Ask yourself, "Who is this witness? Who observes the breath?" And the answer comes, "I am." With your respiration inhale and say, "I," exhale say, "am." Inhale and say, "I," exhale and say, "am."

With every breath, with every I-am feel yourself going deeper and deeper within. Allow your body to dissolve completely where only I-am exists and nothing else.

(long silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru. We have a box where you write a question down and then we see what happens.

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Dear Robert what kind of things can a person do to be of service to you?

A: Be yourself and become enlightened. Wake up! Awaken! You've been asleep long enough. Awaken and be free. That is the service you can do for me. Do it now! Next case.

Q: Do you think it is important for your devotees to maintain a social life or group meditations with other devotees or is being completely a loner and a devotee who sits in silence alone only in addition to working in ones career excellent?

A: Both are necessary. You can do both. There is a time to sit in silence by yourself and there is a time to mix with others. There is a time to work, there is a time to play, there is a time for everything. But if you work on yourself and begin to understand the truth about yourself then you will know what to do. Everything will be done that is supposed to be done. We do not become fanatics and think we have to sit by ourselves continuously and not talk to anybody, on the contrary. Mix with people, enjoy life, do wonderful things. Find time to be by yourself also. Share with others. Help the homeless. Give of yourself and forget about yourself at the same time.

If you're living in the moment, like you're supposed to be living spontaneously everything will take care of itself. You will know what to do. You will do the right thing. But if you have to think about it that means you have to go within more and get to the place where you're sure of yourself and there is nothing to think about. And you become a very positive person you just do things that are necessary to do without thinking about them and you are just living your life rightly, fully, completely. (pause) Go ahead Mary.

Q: Dear Robert I think I do the things you suggest my mind gets cleaner and cleaner. I get closer and closer to being with the Self but never make it with awareness. How many incarnations did you have just like this before it just happened?

A: Isn't that a question left over from last week? Never mind how many incarnations I've had. (SR: Are you embarrassed to let us know?) To whom are incarnations? You always forget that. For whom is karma? For whom is incarnations? Who has the incarnations? The body. Therefore if you're not the body how can you have incarnations? Think about that. So when a person becomes awakened the first realization they have is they were never a body. There never was a time they were a body so there is nobody to incarnate. Only the body incarnates. So to answer this correctly. I always was there never was a time when I was not and I will always be pure awareness, absolute reality, perfect freedom, total joy and bliss. This is the all-pervading Brahman and this is your real nature and my real nature. We're all one. So do not think about being incarnated. Thinking of reincarnation is like thinking of being in jail. You can say, "When am I going to go back to jail?" or "How many times were you in jail before?" Incarnation is bondage. Why aren't you this body which you believe is real. So remember that you have no body to be reincarnated. Reincarnation is for the ajnani. For the ignorant one who believes in that stuff. Your belief is in the self in absolute reality. In perfect freedom. This is who you are. Remember this.

Q: In thursdays talk it came to me that we must allow everything and everyone to evolve as it appears best on doing. Including our own body. Hence we may try to stop someones behavior if we are consciously aware of our body's efforts in that direction hence we can be aware of another's tendency and our own which may agree or disagree and confront. Do I understand you right? It sounds okay to me.

A: It sounds okay to me too.(laughter)

Q: Dear Robert sometimes after a very high experience in sitting in silence I go out into the world and watch myself get very angry over something. If we go very high must we also go very low and balance out during this process of evolving?

A: There is nothing to balance. Balancing is a word for a human being who goes up and down all the time. If you do not react to person, place or thing there will be nothing you would have to balance. It is only because you react to life's environment, life's situations, life's experiences that you think you have to balance yourself out. There is no one to be balanced. Be free be yourself. Do not think about being balanced or unbalanced. It's better to be unbalanced than balanced because when you're unbalanced you're living in a different world. When you're balanced you're sort of normal, status quo, e-pluri-bus-unum. Next question.

Q: Is consciousness neutral or is it only loving and nurturing? Or can it be either positive or negative with no long term goal?

A: When we're speaking of the ultimate reality which is consciousness it has no qualities. If it had qualities it wouldn't be consciousness. We have qualities. We appear to have qualities. But consciousness is perfect awareness. Consciousness is that which is beyond qualities. There is no description for it. It is the absolute reality the self. It is self contained and is beyond qualities. So when you're experiencing consciousness you're experiencing oneness. Total oneness. Not two but one. And that is total freedom and peace.

Q: In a fight between two people is consciousness affected or involved in any way?

A: In a fight between two people your ignorance is involved. What has consciousness have to do with a fight? Consciousness is beyond all of these things. That's it Robert.

There are two hungry people on the couch.

Remember that all is well that everything is unfolding as it should there are no mistakes. Don't worry about the future or the past. Be yourself be happy, rejoice and that is all I have to say. Until we meet again peace. Until we meet again peace, om shanti. Feel free to go forward.

INFINITE INTELLIGENCE

22nd October, 1992

Robert: (tape starts abruptly) ...shanti, shanti, om, peace. Hello. (Students: Hello Robert.) Greetings. Salutations. I welcome you with all my heart. It is good to be with you once again. (Robert turns to the dog) It's good to be with you Toku.

For those of you who believe that this world is real that this universe is real and most of us believe this because we react to it. So you cannot say that the world is not real or the universe is not real if you're still reacting to person, place and thing. In other words as long as you feel your senses, the pressure of this world. As long as something is bothering you in this world you believe the world to be real. So, as long as you believe this you should also believe that the world is governed by divine intelligence, by infinite intelligence. This is true.

The infinite intelligence is also maya but it's a part of this world. Now as far as you're concerned if you would allow yourself to believe this that infinite intelligence governs my life, infinite intelligence governs every iota of my being then you will be safe. You will not be a part of the world that suffers, so-to-speak. For when you accept infinite intelligence as your guide, as you're being in this world you are then led in the straight and narrow path to ultimate victory in your life. This is true.

The world can only give you what you believe, nothing more, nothing less.

If you feel the world is full of thieves, cut throats, frauds. If you're suspicious of everyone and everything then the world is going to show you exactly what you believe. What will return to you will be your belief system, what's in your belief system, will come back to you.

I'm not saying if you want something you have to believe that you will get it and you'll get it or if you want to get rid of something you have to believe that you will get rid of it and you will. It doesn't necessarily work this way because you're dealing with it yourself as a human being. What comes to you are your deep inner feelings. What you attract into your life are your deep inner feelings. Your subjective feelings that some of you don't even know that you have.

Your programming from this life and previous existences. All the programming that you've been through that perhaps you've forgotten at this stage of your life but the subconscious mind never forgets. It always remembers. What this means is that each one of you is drawing into his or her life that which you believe and feel in your subconscious. You may have forgotten some things and you say, "I feel positive. I feel good about life. I love people. I trust people. I love the world. The world is beautiful," and then some horrible condition comes upon you.

This is because inside of you deep in your subconscious mind you have the opposite trait. You have a bunch of negativity inside of yourself, someplace inside. If you didn't everything will be okay in your life. You would have no problems whatsoever.

What is a problem? A problem is simply that something that is not going your way, that's all.

If you have a disease, if you're dying of a disease this is no problem. What is this a problem? It doesn't mean anything. For when you die what happens to you? Nothing. But yet you don't understand this some of you. You feel death to be a threat. You feel death to be something horrible. Some horrendous enemy that sneaks up on you, like a vampire and grabs you and pulls you in some dark hole. Of course most of us here know this is not death at all.

Death is simply a change from where you are now, that's all. There is nothing bad about it, there is nothing good about it. Just like your life right now. It isn't good, it isn't bad. But it is your thinking that makes it good or bad. It is the thoughts that you have allowed yourself to think all of these years. The programming that you've had all of these years that makes your life what it is today.

So look at your life, are you happy? Are you at peace with yourself. This will tell you where you are by the way you feel about things. But of course this is only true if you believe the world to be real and the universe to be real.

Now many of you may say, "I know the world is a dream. I know the world is maya, an illusion," and yet you react to it. You have feelings for it. You judge it! You condemn it! You love it! You have all these various emotions. Consequently you're lying to yourself when you say the world is not real. Again if you believed the world is not real you would be at peace with yourself, total peace. You would not be concerned with person, place or thing whatsoever. By, "Not being concerned," I don't mean that you would just ignore everything you would do what you have to do have a great compassion, loving kindness, understanding and you'll leave everything alone. For you would realize that whatever you're doing you're supposed to be doing. Wherever you are that is where you're supposed to be. With whomever you're living with that is who you're supposed to be living with. Things are right just the way they are and you would also be radiantly happy.

But most of us are not like this are we? Again we feel the pressures of this world. We get insulted by what people say to us. We get our feelings hurt, we judge. This shows us the world is real. You have to be totally honest with yourself. You can't imagine you're something that you're not. But the good thing is that you can do something about it. But before you do something about it you have to see yourself as you really are.

You can't cynically withhold yourself from the world and be obnoxious and arrogant towards people and not have anything to do with people and then say, "I don't have anything to do with people because the world is not real." As you know by now even if you don't want to have anything to do with people you're going to be confronted by people everyday and you'll have to react to them. The way you react to them determines where you're coming from.

Therefore you have to realize that there is a divine intelligence of infinite goodness, the power that knows the way. If you would but surrender to this power. If you would let go and let God so-to-speak by totally surrendering to this power that knows the way you will be carried forth in a stream of blessedness to your highest good. This is true.

But if you're always condemning, judging, reacting and you keep finding things wrong everyday of your life and what you're really doing in your brain and your mind and your subconscious is you're saying, "This is what I want. I want more of this." If you didn't want more of something you wouldn't think about it. You wouldn't feel hurt by it. You wouldn't allow yourself to fall into the trap of cynicism, depression, animosity or any kind of negativity. You'll be above this, beyond this.

But if you're allowing yourself to fall into the trap you have to give up total mind, body and soul to the infinite intelligence that takes care of this universe. You can call this intelligence God, absolute reality, divine wisdom. It makes no difference what you call it. You must surrender to it, totally, completely.

Of course in the ultimate truth none of this exists. In the ultimate truth I've been speaking nonsense to you. For the ultimate truth is silence. Total silence and total annihilation of your thoughts and mind and body. But as I said before we have to be true to ourselves and see where we are on the path. We may say, "We're on the path of Jnana Marga," if you like and it's up to each one of us to remove all of these thoughts, emotions, feelings, negativity, depressions that haunt us once in a while. It's up to each one of us to get rid of ourselves, to annihilate yourself. To get rid of your little self totally, completely. To get yourself out of the way and to allow the divine circus to function.

You have heard it said that you are your own worst enemy and this is true, you are your own worst enemy. Why? Because you live in a universe of light and bliss and yet you're not seeing or feeling this light or bliss. You're feeling something else. You're seeing something else. And in your erroneous thinking you believe and feel if only things were going this way I would be so happy. This is an illusion.

It really makes no difference which way things are going the only thing that matters is how you react to things that are moving along in your life. That is the only thing that matters. How you react to every situation that comes into your life.

You begin by learning to leave the world alone. Have no feelings for or against. What do I mean by this, "Have no feelings for or against?" How would you be able to function? Yet there is truth in this statement.

As an example, you know the elections are coming up. Some of you like Clinton. Some of you like Bush. Some of you like Perot.

Now there is absolutely nothing wrong with this as long as you do not become emotional over it. As long as you do not become wild and feel it in your heart and begin to stick up for your rights. Telling everybody how good your man is and how bad the other party is, see what I'm saying?

You're not supposed to do nothing really, if you're working with this world. You can get involved in the world but not mentally. That is the secret.

Physically you will do something, go out and vote if you like. Join the peace corp, protest, do whatever you like but mentally realize that it's all a bunch of hogwash. In your mind be completely free. This is the way to live in this world.

Say you have to sue somebody in court. It doesn't necessarily mean if you're on a spiritual path you shouldn't sue somebody in court and let the fellow step all over you. But even though you sue him in court have no hard feelings. Don't build up any hate against the person you're suing. Don't feel as if you're winning the case or losing the case. You are just doing what has to be done. In your mind you feel love, you feel peace, you feel joy. You're doing what has to be done.

If you operate this way you will become very happy in this world.

But if you become emotional about things by really feeling them deep in your heart then you will be off and on like a light switch. When things are going your way you'll feel great, when things are going against you, so-to-speak you'll feel terrible. But if your thinking has been separated from your body you will not react whatsoever. You'll just do what has to be done and you will be free.

In your mind you can ask the question, "Who am I?" In your mind when you're suing somebody, when you're voting for president, you can inquire, "To whom does this come? Who is taking this action? Who is doing all of this?" By working this way you will come to the realization that it's the ego that is doing everything on this earth. The ego is working. You have to come to this conclusion yourself. By inquiring, "Who am I? Who feels this? Who is voting? Who is suing? Who is doing all of these things? I am." The personal I.

As you keep practicing this way you will find you're being released from your so-called obligations. Somehow your life is becoming simpler and simpler and simpler. Where you will not have to sue. Where you will not have to go to court. You will not have to pass judgement. All these things will slow up.

A good example of this is what happened to the person I rent my apartment from. I rent a condominium and the owner of the condominium is a young fellow who works for Macdonald Douglas. We were talking about a month ago. He told me a friend of his and himself own an apartment building with 39 apartments and they're having so much trouble with it because of the recession. People are not paying their rent, he's got twenty empty apartments, he's got to be real careful who he rents it to.

I explained this to him, I said, "Stop worrying about this let God take care of it, that's God's problem not yours." These are the words he understood. I had to speak to him from where he's coming from. I realized he was Catholic. I told him to trust God and the way you trust God is by letting go of all your worries, all your fears of what might happen, that you may go bankrupt or something like this. Develop a positive attitude. Feel good about yourself. Turn your mind around and focus on God.

And he asked me, "How do I do that? I've been going to church all of my life and nobody has ever told me this before, to focus on God." I explained to him, "You focus on God by inquiring who am I?" He didn't know what I was talking about but he wanted to do something so he started practicing the entire self-inquiry.

It's interesting to note when new people come into self-inquiry or a spiritual teaching like this they become very enthusiastic about it and see many good results. But it begins to taper off after a while as some of you know. You get tired of it. You make up all kinds of reasons why you can't do it any longer. And some people give it up entirely.

But anyway getting back to my landlord he would do anything to make things change or whatever he did he called me yesterday and he told me a Japanese man wants to buy his apartment building just the way it is and gave him a fantastic price for it. And he was able to pay off the bank loan and make a good profit. So he is in the process of signing it. This is just an example of what happens to your humanhood when you turn away from the problem and look towards the infinite.

From the moment you were conceived, infinite intelligence has been with you. In every atom of your being there is infinite intelligence. It is your mind that keeps the infinite intelligence from doing its thing. Somehow the mind has become totally deluded. It believes strange things. Yet this is all an optical illusion but you don't know it. So you have to work with what you've got.

You have to let go of everything. Do not concern yourself with your problems or your life and look to your mind. Observe your mind. Watch your thoughts. Observe yourself thinking. Observe the fears, frustrations that come into your mind but do absolutely nothing about them. Just watch. Leave it alone.

No matter how horrible the picture may be leave it alone, watch, observe, be still, rest in the silence. Your body will continue to do what it has to do. This has nothing to do with your body. Try to remember this I am not saying that you have to make your body do what you want. Leave your body alone. Your body will follow your mind. When the mind becomes still and quiet, the body will become still and quiet. When the mind disappears your body will disappear.

All of us sitting in this room are at a different stage of consciousness. Some of us are more advanced than others but that doesn't matter. What matters is what you're doing with your life. No one in this room should believe that the world has any power over you whatsoever. You are the power. If you feel the world or some situation has power over you is because you have given it the power. Where else would it come from. The world the universe by itself is passive, neither good nor bad. It is you that makes it what it is.

This is the reason why every one of us here look at the world differently. We live in the same world but we see it differently. We're seeing ourselves of course. We are seeing what we are. What else can you see. There are no sinners. There is no evil. Everyone is a child of God, so-to-speak. When you realize you are God's child in God's infinite goodness and love, as you work on that you will find soon that you are God. You are the infinite goodness and love. It is you. But you have to work from where you're coming from. If you have to pray, pray. If you have to meditate, meditate. If you have to do a mantra, do a mantra. Do whatever you have to do to raise your consciousness.

Never say, "I can't do anything else. I've done all I can. I'm stuck." That's a lie. Noone is ever stuck. For we live in a universe of flux, change, nothing is solid. So how can you be stuck. Everything is continuously moving, moving, moving, moving. You cannot be stuck anywhere or anytime. Do you see how you train your mind? You train your mind to stuck some place. You can't go any further and you believe it. So to you you appear stuck. There is no such thing. All is well.

You are a very unique being. You are unique because you have within you fantastic power. After all you created this illusion. You created this maya. It came out of you. Your shakti is doing this. The power that you have has created all of these things. If you wish to uncreate everything you have to put yourself in reverse. Just like a car and go back to the source. When you return to the source you will find that you were never a human being, there never was a world, there never was bondage or liberation, there never was a God separate from your Self and you are free. Peace.

ST: Robert do we really have any choice as to whether or not we ???

R: In reality we have no choice everything is preordained but you should act as if it's not. Imagine that there is no karma, there is no predestination and act accordingly and even when you do that it's all preordained. (ST: In other words the ability to do that?) Yes. (ST: So surrendering, you talked about surrendering ??? all that is something we should try to do...) Very much so. (ST: Whatever the results of it or whatever our thoughts are it's not our concern?) Exactly if you can do that, that's wonderful, that's the proper attitude. Surrender totally and completely and leave the results up to God.

Robert: It is time for prashad...

STOP WHAT YOU'RE DOING

25th October, 1992

Robert: Om, shanti, shanti, shanti, om. Good afternoon. Here we are again in Henry's house. Here comes Eric. We're just beginning Eric. So we're in Henry's house once again, beautiful view. All is well.

It makes no difference what happens at satsang. Satsang is a very interesting phenomena. People want certain things to happen at satsang. Some of you want to keep quiet all the time, some of you want to make noise all the time. People want to do different things, and they believe what they do is right. Nothing is right and nothing is wrong. Just to be at satsang is the thing, whether you are sitting in the silence, whether you are talking, or whether there's something going on, or I am talking, or music is playing.

Do not be opinionated. Do not believe that things have to be a certain way. Why? If you look at the world, the world is orderly to an extent, but at the same time it's also chaotic. Both are happening. There is law and order in this universe. For instance if you plant a potato seed, you're going to grow a potato, not a cabbage. And you always get a potato when you plant a potato seed. But at the same time a hurricane can come and rip up the potato seed, rip up the ground. Earthquakes come. So you have chaos and beauty, and beauty and chaos. It is really all the same.

The whole idea of being here is to awaken to the truth that you are not the body, nor the mind, nor the doer, that you are the absolute reality. This is really the only thing you should be concerned with. Everything else will take care of itself. In other words, do not worry about being sick or healthy, rich or poor, depraved or sane. Makes no difference. You are here to awaken to your true nature, to the reality of your life, of what you really are, and you are not what appears to be.

Many people inquire, "Well, do I have to go through many sadhanas, spiritual practices, in order to be self-realized?" When I was with Ramana Maharshi, the last three years of his life, many people came from all over the world and asked him this question. "Do I have to practice sadhana?" They asked him this question because they realized that he never did. He never meditated, never practiced mantras, never did anything. So they asked him this question because they wanted to be the same way, and awaken by doing nothing.

He gave everyone a different answer. One person asked him, "Do I have to practice sadhana?" He said, "Yes, by all means, get into it deeply. Do what you've always been doing." So another asked him the same question. He said, "No you don't have to practice at all. Just be yourself and awaken." Another person asked him the same question, and he kept silent, didn't answer at all.

Now what is the truth? There is no truth. Some people told him, "You probably practiced in a previous existence." He agreed and said, "Yes." But what did he really mean? There is no previous existence to begin with. There's no one to practice anything. You are living in time that doesn't exist. The time that you're living in right now, the second that you're in, you're already awake totally and completely, to divine nature. In this moment, where you are right now, you are self-realized and you are free.

But when you begin to think about it, you bring up the deluded world, you begin to believe other things. So then you begin to think. You bring your belief system to the place and it spoils everything for you. For the thinking is concerned with time and space. The thoughts are concerned with the world, with the universe, the past and the present. Yet there is no past and present at all. And there is no one to awaken from anything. For you were never really asleep.

Therefore there is a different answer for each person, depending on where you are coming from. Just the idea of wanting to awaken is a mistake. Just the feeling that I want to become awake, I want to become self-realized, I want to be liberated, is a mistake, for it's part of the thinking process, and the thinking process can never liberate you. There are no thoughts that can liberate you. There are no emotions or feelings that can liberate you, awaken you, make you free.

It is only when you keep still, when you stop trying, sort of when you give up. For when you give up, are you not surrendering? When you give up all hope of ever getting anywhere, you're really surrendering. And that's a good sign. You're surrendering your ego, your thoughts, your feelings, and then you become still. It is in the stillness that things begin to happen, in quietness, when things begin to happen. Not when you're making noise, but when you're quiet.

For many years we've been struggling in spirituality, looking for answers, looking for solutions, looking for gurus, for teachers, reading books, and yet some of us never seem to get anywhere. We must stop trying to get anywhere. The seeker has to be contented in the now, to be totally satisfied right this minute, right now. Totally satisfied. Do not wait until tomorrow. When you practice sadhana, and you're meditating and using mantras, you're practicing Vipassana meditation, doing deep breathing, what this does is put it off into the future, for you're saying to yourself, if I practice sincerely, I will awaken. This is not true. You and I know so many people who have been practicing spiritual practices for years, and years, and years, and nothing has happened to them, simply because of their practice, it's really a practitioner who's practicing. The practitioner has to go. The person who practices has to be depleted, has to be eradicated. When there is no one left to practice, there's nobody there, aren't you? As long as there is somebody who practices, you'll always have a hard time, a problem. But when there's nobody left to practice, then you have arrived. Think about this.

There is nowhere you have to go, there's nothing you have to do. There is no one you have to see, there's nothing you have to read. You just have to be your Self, the immutable Self, this wonderful, wonderful Self, that is the whole universe, all-pervading. You are that Self right now, just the way you are. But when you think about what I just said, you spoil it. There's nothing to think about, there's nothing to accept. Just hear my words, and they'll go where they have to go and do what they have to do.

You are the universe. The whole universe rests inside of you, like bubbles in the ocean. The bubbles keep changing, popping, new bubble's come, but the ocean remains the same. And so it is with you. The world, your body, everything, rests in consciousness. You are that consciousness, that space, that boundless space, the space that you call the glue that holds the universe together, the space in between objects, in between bodies. You can call the space consciousness, pure awareness. You are that space.

When you think of yourself this way, you will find you have to keep thinking of other things. So you keep thinking, and thinking, and thinking. Do not think of yourself any way. When I speak these words to you, do not think about them, simply absorb them. For you are the words yourself. The words are you. You are these words. Every single letter is your Self. You are that.

There is not a speaker and a receiver, or a speaker and a listener. There is only the speaker. The speaker is speaking to himself, and you are that Self. If you are the Self as the speaker, why do you have to practice sadhana, or do anything at all? If you were separate you would have to do all kinds of things, to try to become enlightened, self-realized. But you are not separate. You are the immutable Self, that is all-pervading, forever present, that is beauty, bliss and joy, that is sat-chit-ananda, the absolute reality. This is you, now and forever. When I say this is you, I do not refer to your body. The body is an illusion. It doesn't really exist. When I say this is you, I mean the whole pervading Brahman, the one ultimate reality. This is you. And there's no separation. The you is not separate from me. The body may appear separate, but you are looking through deluded eyes. You're looking through the senses, so you see separation. But as you let go of all of those thoughts, and feelings, and emotions, and become still, you'll never again feel separation.

What's going on within yourself right now? What is happening to you? Most of you here are very still now, very peaceful, and this is all you need. You need nothing else. Some of you here are still struggling, trying to quiet your mind, trying to become still, trying to stop the thoughts from coming. That's just the point, do not try to stop anything. Do not try to do anything to make yourself feel better. There is no doer to do anything. Stop what you're doing and be still. Watch the mind, observe the mind. Let the mind do what it will. Let it bring up all kinds of thoughts and pictures. You simply take a step backward and observe, watch.

Peace is your real heritage. Happiness is your real life. Joy is your real nature. When you feel troubled, it's only because you believe you are the body. Only the body feels troubled. But you've never had any troubles yourself. The Self is God. Be your Self.

Do not try to change the world. Do not try to change anybody. Do not try to change yourself. See, the power within you knows exactly what to do, when it's left alone. This is the secret. You have a power within you that knows how to bring you home, that knows how to lead you and guide you to your ultimate good. It is only when you interfere, by trying to change things, that troubles ensue.

Have no concern about what's going on in this world, what's going on in your life. The answer is already there. You will always know what to do. You will always be led to your highest good. Trust the power that knows the way. You are that power. You have always been that power. Rejoice. You are totally free right now.

(silence)

It is now time to play stump the guru. Any good stumpers in here?

(Q - Mary reads, A - Robert answers)

Q: Robert, I'm beginning to feel a space in my head, Identifying with space. But in the rest of my body, I feel body, any comments?

A: You have a problem. (laughter) You better go see somebody about that. Actually you are all space to begin with. When you feel space you're feeling yourself that is what you really are. You're not the body. As I told you so many times the body is in a state of flux, like everything else in this universe. It is in constant movement. And the atoms of the body, the space between the atoms of the body are equal to the space between the planets. It's all relative. You are that space. Dive into that space. Become the space. And you will be happier than you've ever been in your life. For space is consciousness. Space is God. The space is yourself.

Q: By your body having an illness is there any learning or further letting go or purification involved? Or is your body's illness absolutely unrelated to you?

A: Who has a body? Who has an illness? What do you see? You are the seer. It is you who sees these things, not me. There is only that which is perfection, infinite joy, infinite life. Nothing else exists. When you see somebody dying you're seeing an illusion. When you see somebody ill you're seeing an illusion. When you see a person becoming old you see an illusion. It's all an optical illusion.

You have to get to that place where everything is just quiet and peaceful. And you stop looking and seeing so many things. You become what you see on this relative plane. Whenever you see something wrong, you're seeing yourself. Do not look for things that are wrong or right. See God everywhere you look. Then you're seeing yourself. See love wherever you look. See joy, see wholeness wherever you look. If you feel something else you have to dive deep within yourself and ask yourself, "Who sees these things? To whom do these thoughts come? Who is the seer? Who observes these things? Who worries about these things?" The ego, I, the I-thought. And then realize that you are not the I-thought. You are not the ego. You are total freedom, total love.

See only the good, see only the real, the truth. Which is nothing, nothing is the truth. No-thing. Anything that you see is false. The space between the things that you see is no-thing. That is reality and you are that. The reality is perfect, complete, whole. And that is you. Accept it and be free.

Q: Does our body do each moment what it's supposed to do regardless of whether we are identified with the Self? Or identified with the body? Or does what we are identified with affect the body to some degree?

A: What you call your body has already been programmed to do what it is doing. What you believe is your body is not really your body. It's just a body that appears to be real. And this body has no life of its own. It is motivated by your mind or by God's mind or by the absolute reality, wherever you're at, that's how it is motivated. You live the stage you're at, your body is motivated by that stage. So you do not have to concern about your body. It's been taken care of the way it's supposed to. It will always be taken care of without any help from you. The more you lose your body, the more you awaken, you become free and you're happy. The more you identify with the body the more miserable you become. Because the body is part of maya. The body is part of the problems of this world. Stop thinking you are the body and you have to do something to correct it. Realize that you are absolute intelligence and the absolute intelligence knows what to do every step of the way. Get your self out of the way and let it happen.

Q: Dear Robert you always say, "Don't let people walk all over you." But how do we learn humility if we're looking out for our interests, defending them and asserting them. How can we surrender our ego, our world if we're going to be trying to defend and protect ourselves? Don't we have to forget world and completely trust Self or God? Thank you.

A: Of course, the body will always take care of itself without any help from you. It knows what to do. Can you imagine yourself just being without thinking you're a body, without thinking you're anything? That you don't have to defend yourself but yet the body will appear to defend itself when it has to. This is paradoxical but true.

Say an example somebody comes in here with a gun and tries to shoot me. I don't know what I'll do? I might get up, grab the gun, shoot the person. I might do nothing at all. But I am not the doer and I will do what has to be done without knowing about it, without thinking about it, without asking about it. Whatever will be done, will be done. Try to understand this. You are programmed to do what you will do. But you are not the doer, you are not doing anything. So whoever appears to be doing something is an illusion because nobody does anything. But yet in the same instance you will appear to be doing something. You will appear to be the doer. You will be doing nothing. So whatever has to be done will be done. It's not up to you. Your job is simply to surrender, to be still, to stop fighting life, stop trying to think you have to make things happen, yet something within you will make things happen in the appearance world. You will always be doing something, something will always happen but yet you're doing nothing in reality. You appear to be doing something. I know it sounds a little confusing to some people but it's true. There is no one doing a thing yet you're doing things. Do not worry about it. It will all work out.

Q: What is the difference between the self-realization that all we in this room seek and the self-realization of someone like Satya Muni Buddha or even Jesus, the Christ?

A: There is no difference whatsoever. The difference is in your own mind. You see the difference. You see Jesus being somebody special, Satya Muni Buddha as being somebody special. You see all these things but a Sage never says they're special. A Sage is a part of yourself. There is nothing special about a Sage whatsoever. It is you who give the qualities to the Sage. I see a Sage as this and a Sage as that. You are every Sage that ever lived. Every Sage that ever lived is within you. You are the one. You are that yourself. You are the Christ, you are the Buddha, you are everything. It's all within you. You are the one there is nobody else but you. Stop seeing separation. Be yourself.

That's all Robert. Anyone like to say anything, make a statement? You want to curse at me or something?

SM: Got some transcripts, is it that time? (R: No not time.) Okay.

SY: Robert what are some of the things that close your heart?

R: Why do you think your heart closes? Your heart never closes. There is no such thing as closing your heart. It's your belief system that thinks that. (SY: Why is it that sometimes your heart feels like it's really open? And other times it feels like it's really closed?) Because you're identifying with the relative world. The more you identify with the relative world, the more you will think something is wrong and something is right. Something is good and something is bad. But when you stop identifying with the relative world you will find that you're okay, you're peaceful. There is nothing good and nothing bad. So when you identify with the relative world you can say that things like selfishness, fear, hatred, animosity, jealousy close your heart so-to-speak. These things don't really exist and your heart is always open. Identify with an open heart. So you've got to identify with an open heart and it will never close. (SY: Are there actions, I mean if you catch yourself doing an action that would be detrimental, doership?) Watch yourself, observe yourself, see what you're doing, be aware of yourself, do not react. If you're aware of yourself, the action will stop by itself. But if you're aware you're the body and you're involved in the emotions then of course you're acting out a part. It seems very real to you. You are not the actor. You are alright, just the way you are.

Do we have any announcements?

SM: (Student hands out transcripts for photocopying)

R: Any prashad today? I don't see any. No food. Why do I come here? (laughter) (SH: Yeah big time!) Thank you for coming, God bless you. Remember to love yourself, to bow to yourself, to pray to yourself, to worship yourself. For God dwells in you as you. Om shanti peace. Until we meet again. Good luck. (laughter) (SH: Thanks pal. We're sure going to need it.)

THE POWER OF THE SILENCE IS AT WORK!

Robert: Om shanti, shanti, shanti, om, peace. Good evening. (Students: Good evening Robert.) I welcome you from the bottom of my heart.

When you sit in the silence the power of the Self is at work. Even though your mind is still thinking thoughts. As long as you're sitting in your quiet and you don't talk, no noise is going on, even though the mind maybe busy, the power of the silence is at work. When you talk a lot, have too many conversations maya is at work. Maya rules over you. I'm not speaking of in satsang in particular. I'm speaking of in your home, at work always have very little to say and you'll be safe. If you have too much to say it causes conflict, misunderstanding and chaos.

As an example the politicians of today, they talk and talk and talk and talk and talk and talk and talk and talk. Yet people are gullible enough to believe everything they say. This is why the world is always in chaotic conditions because they're all talking. If we had a politician who said nothing he would raise everybody's consciousness, or she and we would have a heaven on this earth. But it's not bound to be. It's not meant to be. Everything on this earth is unfolding as it should. Everything is happening the way it's supposed to.

Remember the idea of Jnana is not to make this world a better place in which to live. For the world is maya. It is an illusion. This is the reason why a Jnani never advocates world peace or bringing good into this world for the realization of this world does not exist. Even though it appears to exist. Only the absolute reality exists, as this world, as the appearance.

We have to remember that the world is an appearance. If we can only remember this if the world is an appearance because it keeps changing all the time, it is never the same. If we just remember this we would be careful what we say, what we do, how we act. For the appearance is an appearance of duality. What goes around comes around. Cause and effect, karma. This is the appearance of the world.

When you remain in the silence and you do not talk much then the appearance of this world begins to dissolve. The appearance of the body begins to dissolve. You begin to feel differently. You begin to see things differently. You are no longer surviving, trying to make ends meet, trying to improve your condition. You begin to understand there is no condition to improve. You are beyond conditioning. Good or bad. Sickness or health. Lack or limitation or riches. It's all the same. It's neither good nor bad. It's an appearance. And whatever you're experiencing you have to experience the other.

It's like a pendulum swinging back and forth. The pendulum goes to one side then has to go back to the other side. And so it is with human life. So called human life is the same thing. We experience one side of it then we experience the other side of it sooner or later. But no human being so-to-speak ever experiences oneness, it's impossible. For the whole universe is duality.

So, many people when they first get involved with Advaita Vedanta or Jnana believe that it's a very selfish teaching, believe that it's a very conceited teaching. Why? For the idea is to become self-realized. Jnani's are always expressing themselves, "I am Brahman. I am pure awareness, I am the absolute reality," and people who do not understand this say, "why don't you think about this world? Why don't you help the poor? Why don't you help alleviate man's inhumanity to man? Why do you not help the homeless? Why don't you try to make this world a better world in which to live?" They say this because they do not understand what we're talking about.

When a being becomes so-called self-realized the self-realization is not for him or her alone. The self-realization is a universal feeling. I am the universe is a realization. I am the Brahman, the all-pervading one this is a realization. The realization is not about yourself. This is something we always have to remember. It is not selfishness. This teaching is not conceit. For when you become self-realized there is no longer a you. What you have called a you has disappeared. What you call you has become the whole universe.

Therefore just by being self-realized you are helping the world without thinking about it. Again why? Because you have become the world, you see? You're no longer Jack or Jane or Mary or Bob or anybody else. A person who touches their self-realization becomes the entire universe. And therefore you see only the goodness. You do not separate goodness from badness, there is no longer any badness in your psyche, in your consciousness you have transcended badness so-called. Everything is good even the so-called evil, the things we call evil on this earthly plane.

You begin to understand that everything that happens to you is for your own good, for your own benefit. Nothing is here to ever hurt you, as strange as it may seem. Everything is here for your advancement, everything. Every situation, every predicament is there for your advancement.

Consequently this teaching is the most unselfish teaching there is. For when a Jnani says, "I am Brahman," He's not referring to his humanhood.

The attack dogs are at it. (Dogs barking loudly)

SH: He got it alive nonetheless. (laughs)

(Robert continues) So. When the Jnani says, "I am Brahman, I am consciousness, I am the absolute reality," the Jnani is not referring to himself. That is something you always have to remember. The Jnani is referring to I-am. I-am encompasses the whole world, the whole universe. And of course Brahman is the same thing. Brahman encompasses the whole universe, everything. Therefore you are everything. But to the average person who doesn't understand this, they think you're talking about yourself when you say, "I am Brahman." And they go home and they say, "All those Jnanis are all for themselves. They only think about themselves. They only interested in themselves because they're always saying, "I am Brahman, I am consciousness, I am absolute reality." Try to understand this thoroughly. I-am is eternity. Consciousness is the absolute reality.

Now you can perhaps understand why a Jnani never takes revenge on people. Never is concerned about getting hurt. Never cares about the body too much. Because the realization again is, "I am not the body!" Again when we're speaking of I-am we are not speaking of Henry or Sue or anybody else we're speaking about I-am. I-am is not the body. Consciousness is not the body. Therefore when you're in your highest state of thought and you affirm I-am consciousness you understand what this means. Everything is consciousness. Everything is I-am. Everything is Brahman. And of course in that state you automatically have reverence for all of life. What else can you do? You have no choice because you are all of life. So how can you hurt yourself? It's impossible. But you have to understand the thinking of a Jnani thoughts like this do not appear. That I'm hurting or not hurting myself, that I'm all-pervading. Those thoughts are gone. A Jnani just is. Not this nor that, just is. Is-ness. And there is really nothing to say about that. So this teaching is not selfishness, not conceit. It is the truth, it is reality.

But of course it does happen when some people become involved in a teaching like this. They may become completely insane and believe they alone are God. They may believe their body is consciousness. That their body is the absolute reality. This is a grave mistake that some people make. You have no body to be reality. There is no body to be consciousness. There is no body to be pure awareness. This has absolutely nothing to do with your body whatsoever. The body idea falls away. Always remember this. We are not trying to elevate our body, to make the body perfect and make it live forever. The whole concept of a body is erroneous thinking, false imagination. The body idea is a dream. The body does not exist the way it appears.

So again by sitting in the silence all of these truths become evident to you. Everything happens by itself. Everything happens all by itself. There is nothing you have to do and now you know why? Because when you are the doer, you are the body and the doer and the body can never be anything else but itself. You cannot be a body, you cannot be a doer and you cannot be self-realized at the same time. The body idea has to go. The doer idea has to be transcended. You cannot be self-realized and be a body. But then you're saying, "But I see many Jnanis who are a body. So how can you say that?" You answered your own question, "You see this. Who are you? Are you self-realized that you can say that you see a Jnani's body?" The Jnani knows he has no body. He never had a body and never will have a body. But the ajnani sees the body.

Don't ask me why things are like they are, I don't know? That some things appear. The whole universe is a grave mistake. Why does it appear as it is? That's an important question people ask. Why is this universe here if it doesn't exist? And the answer may be a little lucid for some of you but you will understand. The answer is there is no universe. It doesn't exist. Very few people can comprehend this. Noone made it appear.

There are people who believe God created the universe. This is the story that is told to children to have an explanation for the universe. We have to have some explanation we don't want to appear dumb, do we? Human beings don't want to appear as if they don't know. Therefore when you ask somebody, "Where does this universe comes from?" They tell you, "God created it." And when you ask them, "Where did God come from?" They have nothing to say. They will say, "That's not for you to know." As many churches tell you, "That's blasphemy." They say, "Never ask where God came from, that's blasphemy. You'll go to hell and burn. (laughter) If you ask questions like that." But we have to think about these things some time.

Remember I'm sharing with you my own experiences. It's so wonderful to know these things, to be so sure of these things, to understand these things, that there is no universe and nothing is going on. Nothing is happening. As long as you appear to be happening and you think you are a body, even though you know this intellectually what I'm saying, this helps, to know it intellectually. For you will be careful what you do.

What I'm saying is, when you come to satsang and your own state of affairs you hear what I'm saying intellectually, and you want to believe it somewhere inside your psyche. Just by knowing this you will be careful what you do. For you have an idea that you are the Self of the entire universe. So you will never hurt anybody. You will never think of anybody being evil. You will never think anything about anyone but in the same instance you will never think about anyone being good. That's the same mistake, no good and no evil. They're two sides of the same coin. And when your mind starts to accept that everything is nothing, the mind begins to ease off, to let you go. But there has to be no conflict with the mind. You are never to have conflict with your mind. By conflict with the mind I mean never to try to change the mind or tell the mind what to do or practice affirmations as if you're trying to convince yourself of something. The mind is too smart for that. It will never let you loose by being in conflict with it. But by smiling at it, by laughing at it, by ignoring it, by observing it, by watching it and not reacting the mind becomes weaker and weaker and weaker until it disappears altogether. This is how you stop the mind.

You do not have conflict with anybody. Whatever happens, happens. You leave it alone. This is sort of a contradiction again because sometimes I tell you to take action and do whatever you have to do but it's not really a contradiction they're both correct. When you leave your mind alone and you do not think of having any kind of vengeance or suing people or getting involved with people in a negative way automatically the power that knows the way will make you do the right things whatever you're supposed to do. But you will always remember that you are not the doer. These things are very paradoxical, very subtle, very contradictory. For you're doing something yet you are not the doer. To me it's very clear. Yes it's possible to be doing things and not be the doer. For the appearance of a body has to be in a world of action or the appearance of a body will not be here. In other words it's virtually impossible for a human being to sit still all of his life or her life and do nothing it'll never happen. You may say there is great Saints and Sages who live in caves. Who've been living in caves all of their lives, who live by themselves, well who says they're doing nothing? They have to go out and search for food. They cook their food. They take a bath in the river. They go to the bathroom. They do all kinds of things. You cannot be a human being and do absolutely nothing, it's impossible. But you don't have to think about this. You merely have to know the truth.

And again the truth is that you were never born, you do not prevail and you never die. The same truth that is for you is for the universe. For you are a replica of the universe. You're the microcosm in the macrocosm. What you think about yourself you have to think about the universe also. So you understand that the universe never existed, never came into being. There was no beginning to the universe just as there was no beginning to you. The universe does not prevail and the universe does not go into disillusion some place, it ends. Just like your body. Everything you attribute to you body you attribute to the universe.

This is why when a person becomes self-realized they then realize that there is no separation between them and this universe. There is only one. The realization comes that this whole universe has always been you. You are that! You are able to understand and exclaim, "All this is the Self and I am that." It's really very simple it's not complicated. It's all right to know it intellectually.

Many people come to me and tell me, "I know what you're saying intellectually. I hear what you're saying intellectually but when is it going to happen to me actually?" It will never happen to me actually because there is nothing to happen. What do you want to happen to you?

People still want to see blazing light and see stars and geometrical figures and hear beautiful music. These things are all of the mind. All you're doing when these things ensue you're going into subtle areas of the mind. Where there are things happening just like they're happening in this plane of existence. So in the subtle planes of existence there are also things happening. They may be a little different. You may hear sacred voices talking to you. You may hear the voice of your deity. Maybe it's the Christ or Buddha or somebody else. You're making headway but remember this is to...also of the mind. It is the mind that causes all of this. You want to go beyond that. You want to go beyond everything. Never stop and say I have arrived. For when you make that statement, "I've arrived," it shows you you have not arrived because there was somebody to arrive. When you have arrived there is nothing to say and there is no one to say it. It's all been transcended.

So as long as you can ask the question, "Am I enlightened? I think I am." That's a joke. Laugh at yourself. For if you were truly enlightened there would be nobody to ask a question like this. You will have nothing to think about. For the thinker has been transcended there is no thinker. Therefore remember that the story of creation is a myth. You body is a myth. The universe is a myth. Nothing appears as it seems. Again just knowing this intellectually does a lot for you. Again why? Because it will teach you to react differently towards person, place or thing. You will begin to react with love and compassion. You will have reverence for all of life. Why? Because all of life is you. You are That.

All selfishness will leave you. You will stop thinking, "What's in it for me. I come first. Survival of the fittest," and all that crap. (students laugh) That kind of thinking must go and it will go. When you just accept, "All this is the Self and I am that." You are the Self of every so-called human being, every animal, every creature that flies, every tree, every mineral. You are the Self of that. It is you. It exists because you exist. When you cease to exist that will cease to exist.

As an example is sleep. When you are asleep there is no universe. As far as you're concerned you do not exist, the universe does not exist. It's only when you wake up you say, "Here is the universe, here's my body." This is the reason sleep is given to you. Sleep is not given to you psychologically.

Many psychologists and psychiatrists think human beings sleep because they have to rest for a certain amount of time in order to renew and refresh their bodies. This is true in a bodily sense but sleep has a deeper meaning. Sleep is to make you see that you disappear during sleep. You do not exist. As far as you're concerned you're dead.

Therefore the wise person like the Sages of old, the Rishis used to think about these things. I do not exist in sleep but I awaken and I seem to exist. Therefore what is the truth, "Who am I?" They used to ask themselves the question, "Who am I? Where did the I come from? The I that thinks it is sleeping and the I that wakes up? Where did the I come from?" The great Rishis of old used to think this way and they used to sit in the silence for hours just thinking about this, "Where did I come from?" When I say, "Where did I come from," I'm not referring to the body I'm referring to I, the idea of I, the I-thought. "Where does this I-thought come from? How did it arise? Who gave it birth?" And by asking this question over and over again and keeping still the ancient Rishis were able to perceive the I disappearing into nothingness and they experienced illumination.

Now most of us are too busy to sit under a tree for six or seven hours a day and contemplate the I. But we can inquire, "Who am I?" We can inquire, "To whom does this world come? To whom do the problems I have come? To whom does my anxieties, my depressions come? To whom does everything come?" You can inquire this way and this will make you go deeper and deeper.

Remember the purpose of self-inquiry is to make you go deeper and deeper and deeper into the Self. That is the only purpose. The more you inquire the more you go into the Self. Yet ninety percent of the people who practice self-inquiry drop out. They become tired of it, they become sick of the whole thing. Yet you have to realize that this method is very valid. It has been valid for thousands of years and is valid today. It is up to you to practice it and find out for yourself what happens. Practice it again and again and again and again without thinking about it. "Who am I? Where did the I come from? Where is its source? Where do my thoughts come from? What is the source of my thoughts? What is the source of my body? What is the source of my universe? Where did it all come from?" The answer is within you. And if you are sincere, if you truly practice, forget about time, just do it. You will have to see something happening to you sooner or later. You will awaken and be forever happy and in peace. So be it.

SR: Robert I had an experience today I'd like to share and ask you what you would suggest that I should have said?

R: I hear a voice in back of me. (laughter) (SH: It's Jorge.)

SR: An eighteen year old man was...came to me this morning with his mother and because he was being kicked out of many schools, one after another and they wanted to know where he could go to school. Of course he wanted to talk to me about his life. And he told me that he had a strange power that comes over him sometimes. And sometimes it tells him to go to his gang members and go out and do some rumbling with them and shooting at people and beating up people and stealing from them. And other times, he says, the power seemed to direct him to go to church and pray to God and speak in tongues, at a charismatic methodist church. And he enjoys reading the bible. And if you listen to him you get the impression that he really wants to be one with God and close to God but he's also very attracted to the things that he hears, coming to him from what he calls the devil which tells him to have sex with many girls and steal from people and shoot at people and he enjoys that. He gets a high from it he says.

Now when he was asking me what he should do, I immediately thought of Robert Adams and I said, I suppose, should I give him a Robert Adams answer and tell him that everything is un- everything is happening as it should and let the power lead you it knows the way. If it tells you to go out and shoot people and steal from them, you do that, and when the power leads you to church to pray to God and read your bible, then you do that. And you just keep going back and forth shooting one day and going to church the next. And everything will evolve and you'll be balanced out in years to come. I could have told him all that but I said, I have a hunch I should give a more of societally acceptable answer. So I talked in terms of the power of being a neutral force and his own motivation was his decision. So I broke another Robert Adams cardinal rule and let him know that there was no predestination and that he had a choice on how he used this power either for enjoyment of power and being power hungry or use it for his selfishness or his glory versus humanitarian type of pursuits. And he admitted to me he loved the power, he loved the high the power the intimidating other people, he admitted that.

So I then got into the subject of karma and reincarnation without using those words about...how if we go in that direction of listening to the...what he calls the devil then what that would lead to us in our lives and in future lifetimes and vice-versa. But I kind of felt a little guilty that I wasn't giving him a Robert Adams answer because I'm a student of Robert Adams. But another part of me thinks that Robert would have said, "No George for this person if you would have told him all is well and everything is unfolding as it should, don't worry son just follow the power whatever it tells you to do you just keep doing. Everything will work out." I kind of feel that

Robert would've not told me to say it that way. But I'll ask anyway because maybe I'll learn something here.

R: You are right Jorge. Render unto to Caesar that which is Caesars and render unto God that which is Gods. Which actually means, people who come to a meeting like this, satsang are not forced to come. They are not the average person... (break in tape) ...you have been working on yourself a great deal spiritually to be attracted to something like this. This is not a teaching for the average person in the street. You are correct by telling him not to do the things they're doing to try to work themselves into an understanding, they are an important individual, that they count, that they matter and trying to elevate their consciousness. That is all you can do with a person like this. You cannot give them these teachings for they are not ready for teachings like this.

These teachings we teach here are not for everyone. The average person cannot understand these things at all. And if you give teachings like this to the wrong person they will take it for license to do what they want, what they please. Of course you cannot tell them nothing matters for they will go out and do worse things, if nothing matters. You cannot tell a person like this the world does not exist. Your body does not exist. They will take it all the wrong way. You have to give them practical advice because that is your job. Do not confuse both.

Your job as a psychologist is to try to elevate their psyche. To make them so-called normal. To be able to function in society. For it is completely different from what we're doing here. For here there is no society. We do not wish to function in society. It's all together different. But you cannot tell this to your patients because they're coming from a different level than where we're coming from. You therefore did the right thing George. Always remember do not confuse both places. This place is for you. The streets are for the students for you to help them in a materialistic way. But! What you should do for yourself which will help them tremendously is to know the truth yourself without voicing it.

In other words, as you're working with this young man. Know that this young man is a child of the universe, child of God and he is perfect in God's eyes. There are no mistakes. You are dealing with a perfect being who lives in a perfect universe and all is well. This is knowing the truth for yourself but do not voice this to the person. If you know the truth yourself about the person this will help the person subconsciously. And the person may even tell you, "I don't know what you did to me but I feel better." Just by knowing this truth about the person without voicing it to the person. For again if you voice it to the person they will take it the wrong way. So you work on two levels. On one level you're telling them what to do materially how to function on this earth. You explain to him whatever you do comes around back to you. On the other hand you're knowing the truth about this person in your mind. You're seeing this person as God. This person has come to you as God himself. This person is God. And everything is already perfect, everything is already clear. All is well. Just by you knowing this truth will help the person tremendously. So that is the way you should function, on two levels. (SR: Thank you.)

R: Is everybody happy? (laughter) (SR: They will be soon if they eat the prashad.) (laughter) Thinking of prashad again Jorge. (SR: Umm?) Always thinking of food.

SH: Why not? (R: Anyone have anything to say?)

SS: Robert everybody the same? You and me same? You know everything. Why I cannot know everything? (students laugh) You and I am same you know. You are it, I am also it.
